Waverly was the scene of a horrible murder last Saturday afternoon. Fred Kirst, of Waverly, became infatuated with a twenty year old girl named Tobin, and. being a married man who did not live with his wife, the girl's parents refused to allow him to enter their house. Saturday afternoon he engaged a room at the Warford house where he could watch the girl's home. Seeing her and her sister coming down the street he met them where the Erie tracks cross the street and without a word grabbed her with one hand and shot her in the head, killing her instantly. At least 20 saw the murder. He was promptly arrested and said he had premeditated the crime. He formerrecent city election by one of the ly lived at Ithaca. Auburn To North Lansing.

M. W. Conklin, of New York, president of the New York, Auburn & Lansing railroad, is in the city for a few days, in consultation with Supervisor M. W. Murdock, of Venice, and many other people who are interested in the construction of the President Conklin, conversation with a reporter, spoke in a confident manner of the prospects held at the Baptist church Sunday. of success for the road.

"We propose to build our line from a point connecting with the New York Central tracks West of this have purchased a Babcock milk tester city to North Lansing, a distance of about 25 miles in all. All arrangements have been completed for the construction of the road, except the of milk, but cows that give rich milk, obtaining of the consent of the State railroad commissioners. We will make the effort to obtain that consent in a few days.

"On Tuesday we signed a contract with the Western Engineering & Construction company, of New York, to farm which was occupied by Mr. build and equip the road, the contract being, of course, contingent upon the favorable action of the State railroad commissioners upon our application. The contract calls for the begining of the work of construction 15 days after the consent of the State commissioners is obtained.

"Aid promised by or solicited from anyone in this section is not to be given until the road is completed. In other words, we ask nothing until we deliver the goods. It is up to the people of Auburn and this vicinity to do their share to gain the consent of the State railroad commissioners. We shall try to have the meeting of three main branches are each about the commissioners held in this city and we are confident that we can prove by a preponderance of evidence that the road is a public convenience and a public necessity.

"We expect, in event of favorable action by the commissioners, to have the road completed and in operation by the first of September. "There has been an impression that the New York Central was back of this road. Such an impression is entirely erroneous. The Central has consented to our connecting with its home at a double quick, and over bad tracts and to our using its depots. That is all there is to the matter. We have secured the necessary rights of way from North Lansing, with the exception of a very few pieces of property which it may be necessary to condemn, and everything is in readiness for the people of Auburn to show their interest by aiding us in obtaining the consent which alone stands between us and the construction of the road."

Mr. Conklin is a man of smooth appearance and good address and his side quite severely, but we are with enthusiasm for the project he is glad to hear he is some better. fairly bubbling over. -Auburn Democrat, April 13.

It now seems to be almost an assured fact that in spite of all the apposing forces and seemingly insurmountable barriers that some of the faithless ones have been constantly presenting, we are soon to have that which so many of us have been so anxiously hoping for, a railroad. The survey was begun on Tuesday and then with the consent of the R. R. commission obtained, they are ready for business. If ever a community needed a road it is this one, it being as it is, one of the most fertile sections the sun ever shone upon, and with railroad facilities restored to us, there is no reason why the large fields of golden grain which used to meet the eye on every hand might not be a familiar sight once

Watch Found That Is Thought to Have Belonged to First Governor of the State.

Jonathan Jennings, the first governor of the state of Indiana, came west soon after Indiana territory was organized, and settled in Clark county. He brought with him from Pennsylvania one law book and a buil's-eye silver watch. In course of his canvass for delegate to congress in 1809, his house was entered, and among other things his silver watch was stolen. He always believed that the watch was stolen by a man who kept a drinking house in Charlestown, but he had no proof, and the liquor vendor was not prosecuted, says an Indianapolis exchange.

The house passed to other owners, and one day lately the owner began the work of tearing it away to make room for another. Between the first log and the stone foundation Hoffman found an old bull's-eye silver watch, which is believed to be the one Gov. Jennings lost in 1809. The timepiece has every appearance of being very old, outside of the fact that it is of an ancient pattern, but it was in so admirable a state of preservation that when a key was fitted to it and it was wound up it started off as though it had just been stopped.

The house in which the watch was found was occupied as a barroom until about 20 years ago, when some members of a temperance society battered down the doors and broke out the windows and the saloon keeper was driven away. Since then it has not been occupied. An effort will be made to secure the watch and place it in the Geological museum..

Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it sochighly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market" For sale by J. S. Banker.

THE HORSE STABLE.

How to Avoid Mistakes Calculated to Cause Annoyance and Loss of Money.

A great many mistakes are made in the construction of farm stables. Of course, no plan can be devised that will suit everyone, because tastes, opinion and ideas of beauty, utility and convenience differ materially. I believe the time is not distant when all our stable and threshing floors will be made of cement, yet a great many people do not like them. Next to cement I would use elin plank. There is no other timber so good for this purpose. It is easily procured, and cheap. There are few farm forests that do not have elm. When sawed into planks it is tough and pliable, and when properly taken care of is very durable. I find it better than oak or other hard wood lumber. It is easier on horses' feet. and they will not slip on it so easily as on oak and other hard wood. Elm should not be allowed to season before it is laid. Put it in green, when it comes from the mill. If perfectly dried and seasoned the floor will be so close that moisture, will swell the planks until they warp. Use the green plank and all this will be avoided.

A drop floor in the rear of the stable, to aid in clearing out manure, is a great convenience. It saves much tiresome prodding with the fork against ill-fitting, uneven edges of plank. In a 14foot stable, which is amply large, this drop should be 4 feet wide. This leaves 10 feet for stall and manger. With a scoop-shovel and the drop arrangement, one seldom needs to use a fork in cleaning out. One mistake that is often made in planking a stable floor is to incline the plank from the manger back. A slight incline is possibly proper, but much of a fall backward compels the animals to stand continually with stretched tendons and is an injury to them. I like a low, wide manger, just the hight that a horse cannot step into it; I feed a great deal of fodder during winter, and in my barn, just completed last season, I have the mangers 2 feet wide in, bottom and 31/2 feet at top. They are 30 inches deep next to feeding floor, and several inches higher next to the animal, as is shown in illustration. These mangers flare out both ways, as shown, and I think are the ideal in which to feed fodder. The objectionable feature in feeding whole fodder in the barn is that the horses usually work the coarse material under their feet and make the cleaning out of manure very laborious, but I find with the wide manger, low and flared in front, the coarse material is worked out into the Larn floor, and can easily be carried into the barnyard, where the cattle pick over the small waste.

In planning our stable we investigated a great many stall partitions and all seemed to have their objectionable features: but after a fair trial we fail to find any fault whatever with the one we have in use and shown in the illustration. It is boarded as high as the mangers, and slatted the remainder of the way, making the stable light and airy in the heated season, when the work-horse needs plenty of fresh air. This partition makes a neat appearnce in the stable and does not stand in the way to catch the harness in dressing the animal, nor does it extend back so far as to hamper in leading a horse in or out.-George W. Brown, in Ohio Farmer.

FEEDING FOR PROFIT.

The Greatest Care and Judgment Are Necessary in Starting Cattle on a Corn Diet.

In handling cattle be gentle with them. Don't frighten them. Remember that you are in partnership with your steers in the beef business, and partners should be on good terms with each other. The greatest care should be taken in starting on corn. Give plenty of hay and stover (corn stalks) and a few ears of corn at each feeding twice a day. Increase the corn slowly, and see to it that each steer gets his share. It is best to take about three weeks to get them on full feed. Corn fodder (with ears on) is good to give them at first. Scatter it over the ground. But this is not practical except for a small bunch. Feed regularly twice a day and always go an hour before feeding time and clean out the mangers. If the corn is not too large ears should be shelled. Crushing cob and grain is some advantage, but may not pay for the expense. If you feed cob meal, always feed some ear corn also. Give steers their choice. I find that it pays to feed clover hay to beef cattle. Nice corn fodder is splendid also. Water regularly and abundantly. Remember that about onehalf of the gain you put on consists of water and it is about the cheapest food you can give. If you have plenty of hogs to take up the waste you can feed to better advantage. During the last 30 days of the feeding period, give oilcake or cottonseed meal five pounds a day to each steer. It will give a nice bloom to their coats. Don't start in to feed a thin lot of steers on full grain ration. Corn is a poor muscle maker. It is better to produce muscle on grass, fodder, and other cheaper feeds and do the finishing with corn. Ninety days ought to be long enough on full corn feed.-Orange Judd Farmer.

THE GAD FLY GRUB.

It Is Now Making Its Appearance and Should Be Exterminated as Quickly as Possible.

Many of our readers are doubtless at a loss to know what the "bunches" are that they find upon the backs of their cattle at this time of year, and which contains a large, disgusting grub. The grub in question is the larva of the gad fly of the ox (hypodermis bovis) and is deposited under the skin in the shape of an egg at the time in summer when the cattle are seen to dash about the pasture in affright. The grubs are the cause of an immense amount of irritation to the cattle and also cause a serious damage to the hide for the purposes of the tanner. The "warbles" as the tumors are called may be prevented with a fair amount of success by smearing the backs of the cattle with some bad-smelling substance, as crude carbolic acid one part, fish oil eight parts. The backs of the cattle should be washed occasionally, during fly time with strong salt water, as this has been found to prove efficacious in destroying at least a portion of the eggs deposited by the fly. The mature grub may be squeezed out by applying a nut-key over the tumor, then press and pop goes the warble. The grub should be destroyed as soon as it has been removed else it will live to fight another day in the shape of a full-grown, egg-depositing gad fly. Where the grubs are not sufficiently developed to allow of their being squeezed out they may be destroyed by applying a little mercurial ointment over the tumor; but where this is done care must be taken to keep the cattle so treated separate, as the ointment would prove poisonous if licked off .- Farmers' Review.

How to Protect Culverts and Small Bridges Against Being Clogged a: Flood Times.

The clogging of waterways under bridges and culverts at floodtime is the greatest danger that they are exposed to, and the greatest menace to nearby fields, that may become flooded. All such trouble may be avoided by the plan illustrated.

As will be seen, protection consists in the placing of a well-braced post about six feet upstream from the opening under the bridge, or, if the stream be wide, two or more. This will catch any driftwood, which if abundant will make a dam at a harmless place, the water flowing over, under and through the obstruction to the unobstructed mouth of the culvert. When the flood has subsided the rubbish may be more readily cleared away than if choked into the narrow waterway under the bridge. -M. G. Kains, in Farm and Fireside.

Now that the League of American Wheelmen has abolished its racing department, every attention will be given the other branches of the work. The most important of these is the highway improvement department, in which is intrusted the work in behalf of the good roads movement, which was started by the L. A. W., and which has been constantly agitated by it for almost 20 years. The league has made rapid strides in this movement, particularly during the past year, but the racing question has reflected upon this as upon all other deparements, the belief being disseminated that none of the branches of league work could be made effective until the racing question was settled.

The most important work accomplished last year was the holding of many good roads conventions in various states, the introduction of highway improvement measures in many of the state legislatures and the evolution of the movement to national proportions, as was evidenced by the bill introduced in congress calling for an appropriation of $5,000,000. Constitutional amendments were carried in Michigan and Minnesota, and a large-amount of education on the subject was circulated by the league. All of this work will be continued during the present year, but upon a much larger scale than heretofore. In fact, this will be one of the most important agitations of the year, aside from the presidential elections. The delegates of the L. A. W. were never more enthusiastic upon the subject, and they will enter into the work with increased vigor. They expect the cooperation of all wheelmen in the great work they are doing.

LIVELY AGITATION.

Congressional Appropriation Bill to Be Boomed by the League of American Wheelmen.

The national assembly of the League of American Wheelmen strongly indorsed the bill presented to congress, ealling for an appropriation of $5,000,-000 for highway improvements in the various states. The bill is framed in the interests of farmers, wheelmen and the public generally, and the league requested in its resolations that all classes support the bill by communication with their representatives in congress, asking them to vote for the measure. In the debate which followed the introduction of the resolution many strong reasons for its passage were brought out. Among them was the fact that congress annually appropriates millions of dollars for river and harbor improvement; that subsidies have been given for railroad building and for steamships. All of these, it was stated, are forms of highways, yet the national government has done nothing for a half century for better road highways, which would directly benefit the farmera and indirectly be of untold value to calls for united action by all the divi-sions of the L, A. W. and the farmers' associations in all sections will be called upon to assist in getting the measure through. The L. A. W. expects that if this bill is favorably acted upon. the building of roads under the appropriation will prove such an object lesson there will be no resisting future requests for congressional appropriations. This bill will be supplemented by the usual state bills, and altogether the L. A. W. will have a very active season in its good roads work.

ADHESIVE STAMPS.

May Be Cut from Unused Envelopes and Saved for Further Use.

"Wait until I have washed off the postage stamp on this envelope, spoiled in the addressing," said a man to a

Washington Star representative. "It is not necessary to do that, as is commonly supposed," said a lawyer. You may take your scissors and cut out the adhesive (not the impressed) stamp and stick it fast to your new envelope with mucilage, not withstanding the adhering piece of the old en-

"It does not look nice, and may become detached in the mail, but if the stamp is a genuine, wnused, adhesive stamp it is not questioned. The government, when it sells an adhesive twocent stamp, undertakes for such consideration to transport and deliver to destination the letter to which it is affixed. The fact that it has a piece of an envelope to which it was formely attached, but not used or deposited for mailing, does not relieve the government to execute its part of the contract when the letter is deposited for mailing, the stamp being otherwise

"An impressed stamp, however, cut from an envelope, is defective and invalid for postage purposes. It is astonishing how many of these are used, some people, apparently, being unable, or too ignorant, to discriminate between adhesive and impressed stamps. "It is better to soak off the good, unused adhesive stamp, but it is a valid stamp, nevertheless, when used as de-

ENGLISH OFFICERS KILLED.

Not as Special Marks of the Boers as Has Been Commonly Supposed.

The men carried nothing but their arms, their water bottles and a waterproof rug and blanket for each. The officers were similarly equipped, says Scribner's, actually carrying rifles, so that they can be in no way distinguished from the men. Something must be done to reduce the terrible mortality of officers experienced in the first two fights in Natal. In reality the high percentage of officers killed is due to the fact that they must of necessity expose themselves more than the men under their command, and with the enormous amount of lead poured into an advancing force by the modern magazine rifle the officers, who are standing up to direct their men, run a tremendous risk of being hit. In small skirmishes, however, it is possible that the good rifle shots on either side can pick their men carefully, so that the absence of a distinctive mark may prove to be of value to officers. In any case, there can be no harm in making the experiment of arming them with rifles, though in the long run their losses are not likely to decrease to any

PIPING SUGAR JUICES.

Piping Sirup Is Transported by Pipe Line the Same as Oil and Gas Are.

Pipe lines for gas, water, steam and oil long ago demonstrated some of the attractive possibilities of the pipe-line method of fluid transportation and made it familiar to all, with evidences of it abounding in everyday life. And yet, says Cassier's Magazine, one is impressed with a tinge of novelty in a recently-circulated newspaper waif which tells of a 25mile pipe line for conveying sugarhouse sirup. At Springfield, Utah, U. S. A., it appears, there is a plant for slicing sugar beets and extracting the sugar-laden juice by diffusion, and this, with its impurities, is then "piped" to a beet sugar factory at Lehi, there to be treated and refined by the usual processes. Inquiring further, however, it is learned that the same system of piping sugar juices has been in vogue in Germany for a number of years, and in the latter country, too, pipe lines have been used in potteries to carry much-thinned clay paste from one department to an-

A Ban Upon Chinese.

The true purpose of a bill now before the British Columbia parliament "for the regulation of the length of hair to be worn by employes in the metalliferous and other mines of British Columbia" is said to be to save the white miners from Chinese cheap labor. The bill provides that the hair shall be worn short in the hope that the Chinamen will not be able to overcome the oriental superstition in favor of the long queue. A former measure, which simply excluded the Chinese, was previously passed by the parliament, but nullified by the home government because it would tend to irritate a friend-

How Moody Beat A Rival.

"One Sunday afternoon young Moody was dispatched to make a collection from an establishment whose credit was under suspicion. While on the train he discovered that the representative of another firm, to whom the same store was deeply indebted, was hastening to the same place on the same mission," says William R. Moody, writing of his father, Dwight L. Woody, in a series of articles in The Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post. "A continuous ride to the town would break into Sunday, and it was one of Moody's principles not to travel on the Sabbath, It was necessary for him, therefore, to spend Sunday at some point and resume his journey early Monday morning. The other collector did not have such scruples, but planned to proceed, arrive on Sunday morning, and thus secure his claim the first thing on Monday morning, which would probably have shut out Mr. Moody's firm. However, where principle was involved Mr voody never hesitated, and yet his business pride was at stake and it was rather hard for him to see the other man win. Consequently he determined to do what he could, legitimately, to get even chances. It was in the early days of railway travel and changes were frequent; so at one of those changes Mr. Moody and his rival took a walk, and Mr. Moody engrossed him so in conversation that he missed his train, and thus both men got to the town at the same time on Monday."

Tad and His Panther

1 D ID you hear the panther last night, sergeant?" asked Tad, the captain's son.

"No," said the sergeant, as he cut at the top of a sage brush with the loose end of the lariat hanging at his saddle. "I didn't hear it, but it yelled, guess. Billy Murphy was on guard down at Post No. 2, and he didn't dare walk the length of his beat."

"Let's go there to-night and fetch it in," said the boy.

"No-no!"

The soldier rarely spoke in so positive a manner to his younger companion. They had grown to be quite good friends. So Sergt. Gore looked at the trim figure by his side and admired-as a cavalryman would-Tad's posture in the saddle. And then he gazed down the long road to the bluff on the shingly ledges of which the panther they had been speaking of was said to prowl at night and call to the echoes in that fearsoms voice.

Gore was a well-born, well-trained young fellow who had enlisted in the ranks of the regular army at a time when penniless and discouraged, as has many another son of a good family. He seemed peculiarly attractive to this boy. Tad admired Gore because he was cleverer than the others. Gore was a better shot and a better horseman, and he was the best wrestler in the fort. And there is nothing that so appeals to the soul of the boy as ability in that close struggle of athletes, that embrace of gladiators, out of which comes the triumph of the unarmed hands, the victory of the unaided muscle and

And Tad's father, the captain, had not discouraged an association which gave his son pleasure and seemed to make the lad more manly.

"Couldn't we kill the panther, ser-

"We might and we might not. The last man in this troop who went out to kill a panther came back in a sling between two pack mules; and he didn't get off sick report for three months. Now, see here, Tad. Get that wrinkle out of your brain. How would it look for me to risk the captain's son out there on the bluff at night? How would I go to the captain's wife and explain it if-"

"Wouldn't need any explanation if we brought the panther."

"Or how would I square matters little boy was lying in bed-and surgeon plaster all over him?"

"Pretty nice thing to kill a panther."

"Yes; and then-"

"Sergeant, are you afraid of her?" "I'm not afraid of anything alive." said the sergeant, calmly.

"If you are not afraid why don't you go?"

"We don't do all the things we dare to do. "What, for instance?"

"Well, I dare tell Higgins, when we get to camp, that I won't mount gnard to-morrow.

Then why don't you?" "Because it is my duty to mount guard whenever he details me. He's the orderly sergeant."

"I saw you throw him one time," said Tad, irrelevantly; and then he stopped to laugh at the recollection.

Higgins was a very strong man; and one day in spring before mounted drill was begun the soldiers got up a tournament on the parade ground, where the orderly sergeant challenged anyone to wrestle. Tad remembered Gore's acceptance and how the bigger man had strutted to the encounter; how the two had gripped to the work and how presently Gore had caught the huge weight on his hip, and had flung the other heels over head in one great sweep.

But that was months ago. Tad looked up at the distant bluff while the buglers were blowing retreat, but he stood in "the attitude of a soldier' when the flag came down to the booming of the evening gun. That night he made his bed on the floor of the upper porch, and lay there wondering at the stars till long after taps. Time and again he caught himself almost across the border land of dreams and it seemed to him the lagging midnight must have passed when the sound for which he waited reached his ears. And then the suddenness of it, the savage strength of that panther's cry, startled the courageous little fellow till his heart was still. The half human quality of the tone added to the terror of it.

Then his breath came back, and with it his daring. And the next time the cry was raised he knew the shingly shelves of the bluff were then a promenade for the panther.

Next night Sergt. Gore was on guard, but the next after he was free; and time and again he wondered where Tad was in hiding, for he had not seen the boy since dinner call.

Lang and Warner were up the gulch with an eight-mule team and they came in at sundown with a load had unharnessed of wood. the mul und Sergt. Gore ik trying to read stretche

"Oh, Gore, here's a note from the captain's kid," said the teamster, Lang, carelessly.

Gore peered at the penciled lines: Dear Sergeant: I am up on the bluff. If you don't come and get me, maybe the panther will. A cayuse pony was picketed back of the quartermaster's store, and Sergt. Gore took a turn of the rope around the animal's jaw, leaped to the bare back and galloped to the hills. He carried his carbine, and a belt of cartridges was buckled about him. And every muscle of his splendid frame quivered; for he loved the captain's son. Tad had calculated the note might not be delivered until after dark, and he crept along the slaty shelves until he found a little recess where the loose earth had been worn away by the wind and the rain and he climbed down there and backed in. About six feet below was a broad ledge which reached far around to the right. By lying flat his face just came to the edge of his narrow shelf, while his feet were pressed to the farthest spaces in his little refuge. He pulled his rifle within easy reaching distance and then looked out and dared the panther to come. Straight before him down the valley was the fort. He watched the twinkling lights go out in the mess hall, and knew the belated teamsters had arrived in camp. And his faith was so firm in Sergt. Gore that he never doubted the soldier was coming. Presently he heard the dull beat of hoofs on the long road. But it was from unshod feet, and not a cavalry horse. That chilled his courage a little. And just as he tried to convince himself that he was wrong and searched for hope that an army horse and not a pony was galloping toward him, a shriek not 50 feet away rent the wonderful silence of the hills.

His little body was positively lifted and shaken with the shock of it. And then, because he was a captain's son, Tad hammered his bare knuckles against the stone and forced his courage to come back.

He peered over the edge of his shelf at the broad ledge below; he looked straight down there a hundred feet to the foot of the bluff, and he could not tell for the life of him from what direction that thrilling ery had come.

Then a pebble was loosened and fell down the bluff, around somewhere to the right of Ted's refuge, and he called

'Sergeant!"

He heard something rub gently against the rocks on that ledge below, and then another pebble bounded away. but no strong word of theer came in

In another moment, though his wide eyes had been watching ali the time, the panther lay below him. She kept well to the farther edge. She saw him, and seemed gathering for a spring. It was seconds before he thought of the rifle. Then he fired, and she

He felt her claws strike at him, and catch again and again. But he withdrew far into the little nook, and there was no foothold for her.

He toppled back and he could hear her breathing plainly. Then she tried again. As she stood on her hind feet, her claws caught in his clothing, but he fought free; and time and again she scratched him, but he did not cry

Once or twice she withdrew her paw, stretched very high, and pushed her black muzzle up till be could see the two red eyes; and he knew the two red eyes could very well see him. But when she struck she must withdraw her head to give the paw a greater reach, and by shifting a little he could dodge her. But all the time, as she tried for him, first with one forepaw and then with the other, her hind feet were clawing at the bluff for a foothold. If she had found it, she would have lifted and have reached him instantly. She could not find it, but she was loosening soil and stone with every effort and these were forming a growing platform which brought her nearer.

When he knew the next fling of a paw would reach him, he saw the bare, blond head of Sergt. Gore on the bosom of Tad's blue coat. "Cling tight!" said Gore.

And the wonderful thing happened. The sergeant stepped close to the panther's side, facing outward. His left arm flashed about the extended body. He made that splendid fulcrum of his hip. He swung just once, and swiftly; and the panther went-as liiggins had once gone-head over heels, and helpless. She flung both paws wildly, but she made no sound as her dark body shot over the edge and was swallowed up in the darkness. They listened what seemed a very long time, and heard her strike at the foot of the bluff,

"Great throw!" cried Tad, and he crept exultant from his nook, and clambered out where Sergt. Gore could lift him down. But he had to be carried. When it was all over his sturdy legs refused to bear him, and he staggered very helplessly. Gore laid him on the pine needles at the summit, for a few minutes. And presently they went down the long road to the warm spring, where he washed the dust from Tad's face and hands and arms.

Later, they dragged to the captain's porch a monster panther, whose velvet skin not a single bullet had marred.

But even at that, when Tad saw his father's white face, and caught the wordless welcome of his mother's embrace, he knew he had paid for the panther far more than it was worth .--Le Roy Armstrong, in St. Nicholas.

Why He Was Afraid to Bid.

At an auction saie of miscellaneous goods at a country store the auctioneer put up a buggy robe of fairly good quality. An old farmer inspected it closely, seemed to think there was a bargain in it, and yet he hesitated to bid.

"Think it cheap?" asked the auctioneer, crying a ten-cent bid.

"Yes, kinder," was the reply. "Then why don't you bid and get it?" "Wall, I've bought heaps of things in dry goods and so on," slowly rejoined the old man, "and I never yet took home anything the old woman thought was worth the price. If I got that 'ere robe for even 15 cents she'd grab it up and pull at one end, chaw on a corner, and call out: 'Chated again-moren't half cotton! That's the reason I dasn't

THE ALASKA FEVER.

It Is Taking Hold of Congressmen and Government Clerks.

Carried Away by Tales of the Gold Discoveries at Cape Nome, They Think of Emigrating to the Frozen North.

[Special Washington Letter.] OLD, gold, gold! Its quest pervades the minds of individuals, corporations and nations. All men are striving to lay up treasures on earth, rather than in heaven; and gold is the condensation and syncopation of earthly treasure.

Mythology has perpetuated the story of the golden fleece; and the history of that voyage embodies the first great organized expedition in search of the yellow metal. The full story discloses the fact that there were vast placer minings, and that the argonauts found the precious stones in river beds, just as the modern gold seekers find it in the beds of the creeks and along the coasts of Alaska.

The Bible tells us that "Jehoshaphat made ships of Tarshish to go to Ophir for gold;" also that "the navy of Hiram that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of algum trees and precious stones;" also that "they came from Ophir and fetched from thence gold, four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to King Solomon;" also it records that King David set apart for the palace and house of God, for his son Solomon, "three thousand talents of gold, of the gold of Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses;" also, "the weight of the gold that came to King Solomon in one year was six hundred and threescore talents of gold, besides that which the chapmen and merchants brought; and all of the governors of the country, and the kings of Arabia, brought gold and silver to Solomon, and Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold, six hundred shekels of gold went into one target. Moreover, the king made a great throne of ivory and overlaid it with pure gold, and all of the drinking vessels of King Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the nouse of the fcrest of Lebanon were of pure gold; none were of silver; it was not anything accounted of in the days of Solomon.'

But where was Ophir, whence came all of this supply of gold? Novody can tell. The fact that it was brought by "the navy" indicates that it came from afar, over the seas. People have conjectured that it came from California, although there is no record of the circumnavigation of the globe prior to that of the adventurers of the sixteenth century. It has been conjectured that it came from the rich mines of South Africa, where thousands of lives have recently been sacrificed on account of gold. But, no matter where it came from, the Bible story shows that in the ancient times gold was regarded as the basis of wealth, the condensation of work and wages, and that adventurous spirits sought and delved for it, to please their kings, their lords and masters, and to enrich themselves.

For several weeks past the room of the house committee on public lands has been thronged with gold seekers from Alaska. They seek amendments to the mining laws which will enable them to lawfully carry on their search for gold. They are particularly anxious to have certain rights granted them along the coast line, where it is claimed that unlimited quantities of gold are to be found in the sands. One of their number, J. H. Osgood, says:

"For ages and ages the rain, show, heat and cold have assailed the mountains and hills, rending them and washing the heavy metal downwards. Gold seeks the lowest levels when it is released from the grip of the quartz. For probably 50 miles along the coast of Cape Nome the sands are enriched with pure gold. We want the right to stake off mines, not only slong the coast, but for a mile or more out into the ocean." In reply to a question from the chairman of the committee why they desire protected rights out into the ocean, Mr. Osgood said: "Whoever finds a the ocean along that coust will be able to scoop up gold by the buckets full. It is there, as sure as you live. It has sunken down into the sands along the coast, and it has sunken down into the sands far out into the ocean. There is no doubt of it in the minds of those of us who have been there and investigated the conditions. The mountain fissures have been contracted by the extreme cold, and they have been expanded by the summer heat. The rain, snow and winds have liberated the gold, and it has been ages and ages seeping down to its lowest attainable level. That level is along the coast and beyond the water line. We want laws to protect us from each other, in order that the rights of each man may be safely defined. We all know that the gold is there, but we do not want to be so far from civilization without perfect understanding of what we may do and what we may not do. There is a highway 60 feet wide, and we want the privilege of mining across or under that highway, for it is full of gold. The metal is there, in fabulous quantities. We must have it, and we want all of our individual and collective rights well defined by law."

Another one of these gold seekers. Albert Dalzell, said: "The annular theory of the earth's development is surely right. As the molten world whirled Ribbons in space it bulged at the center; what we now call the equator. The molten mass, gradually cooling, permitted the heavier parts of the circumference to sink towards the poles. That is the reason such immense quantities of gold found lodgment in Alaska. In my opinion, it can be found also in Iceland, in

AT WORK AT CAPE NOME. (Separating Gold from Sand by Rockers

Greenland, in Norway, Sweden, Siberia and all about the arctic circle. The same theory leads me to believe that gold in vast quantities will also be found about the antarctic circle. That condition of the earth caused the great deposits in South Africa, and also produced the deposits of Peru which caused the greedy and bloodthirsty Spaniards to slaughter the Incas and devastate Peru. But the natives there still guard their secret, and the world has never yet secured possession of the real wealth of that country. Vast quantities of gold must have been held in solution along the line of the equator and suddenly become imbedded in the quartz before it could escape to the poles. But the real home of pure gold is in the frozen regions of the far north and the far south.'

This is an interesting theory, and apparently a new one. It has attracted the attention of those who heard the statement so earnestly made. Several scientific men in the National museum and Smithsonian institution seem inclined to give the annular theory sufficient credence to warrant scientific investigation.

From these remarks the reader will at once observe that these Alaskan gold-seekers are not ignorant. haphazard searchers of gold. They are intelligent, educated, skilled in geology as well as mineralogy, and are going about their work systematically, as well as earnestly and enthusiastically.

Reverting to the fact that as yet very little is definitely known concerning Alaska, one of the gentlemen produced a manual published in 1849, concerning the situation in California. At that time the publisher of this manual wrote: "I must confess that I have no confidence either in the profitableness of the mines in California, or in their permanency. If California slacks a little in its gold productions, or the iron market improves a little, the balance will turn in favor of iron, as to the value of yearly production."

Think of that. A well-educated carried by writer and publisher, in 1849, assumed that the production of iron in California would be more valuable than the output of gold. The miner who produced this publication said: "Very little is known of Alaska to-day, and there are many intelligent people who think that the gold supply has been

The latter is likely to be by far the most important settlement."

The gold hunters from Alaska spent several weeks here, and their statements concerning the gold fields, particularly about Cape Nome, where thousands of miles of coast sand seem to be enfolding untold millions of gold, have aroused the gold-seeking desire in the minds of many. Baptist Church Notes. BY THE PASTOR.

Topics Sunday morning, Geth-Evening "The Devil's semane. Dupes."

Bible study Wednesday evening ster, Moravia. 7:30. Lesson Luke 7: 18-28. Bring your bible.

The pastors bible class have secured the Rev. Dr. Smith of Groton, to deliver his famous lecture, "Robert Burns" on Saturday evening April 28th inst. Tickets 10 cents.

The maiden ushers at the evening service were pleasing to all.

The fragrance of the flowers, the music by the choir, the invoration of maiden ushers, and the new rochester lamp made all feel that we are not standing still, but going on to success. There were 60 at the morning service, 48 at the Sabbath school and 125 at the evening service, which was very encouraging to all considering the condition of the roads. Special union next Sunday. Everybody welcome.

The pastor will be in his study Monday evening from 7:30 to 9 to meet those who desire to unite with the church by baptism or letter,

The Manlius Eagle has again changed hands, having been purchased of Mrs. F. L. Maine by Stillwell & Ross, proprietors of the Dryden Herald. Mr. Stillwell will assume the management of the Eagle, having been connected with the same in former years.

Merton Webb, eldest son of Supervisor N. F. Webb of Virgil, had a leg amputed Saturday because of a diseased bone. It is attributed to a severe bruise received last winter.

In March, 1899, Undertaker Genung of Waterloo, embalmed the remains of a man who had been dead twelve hours, and has kept them ever since. The corps shows signs of becoming mummified. In life the man was six feet two inches tall and weighed caused death, and the embalming was said to have been for the purpose Mouldings and of testing a certain fluid for that purpose and the knowledge of its correct use by this undertaker. It is said the corpse presents an almost life-like appearance, and is frequently exposed to the gaze of the curious. It now rests in the undertaker's cellar.

After a long illness Mrs. D. S. Anderson wife of the former pastor of the M. E. church at Locke died at her home at Freetown last Saturday afternoon. The funeral was held on Tuesday. She was a vey esteemable woman and left many friends at that place who unite with the family in mourning the loss.

Assemblyman Conger carried his own township by a majority of only seventy-seven last fall, although his party associates on the county ticket all received majorities of over two hundred. Citizens of Groton explain that this peculiar vote was due to the fact of Mr. Conger's being so well known in that township. The Democrat can assure Mr. Conger, that in view of the manner in which he has looked after the interests of the City of Ithaca, the people of this city are becoming quite well acquainted with him, and that the results of that acquaintanceship will be shown in this city next fall in the same manner in which they are shown in the town of Groton last fall. -Ithaca Democrat. The only person who has said a good word for Assemblyman Conger's work, as far as we have abserved, is the editor of the Groton Journal, and possibly he was paid for it.

SPORTS AMONG THE AFRICANS

Many of the Games Played by the Natives and Boers Are Taken from the English.

Long years ago it was noted that wherever Englishmen went they took their national pastimes with them; and on a recent "off day" at Mafeking, when the Boers had for a few hours ceased bombarding, a cricket match was organized by the beleaguered garrison. There are other parts of the dark continent, says the Birmingham Post, in which civilization is accompanied and stimulated by athletics, and an interesting testimony is to hand upon that head from St. Andrew's college, Kiungani, which owes existence to the universities' mission to central Africa. Of all the games played there by the boys, some of whom are freedslaves, football has the first place in popularity, though a few boys have shown a desire to learn a little more about cricket, and the smaller ones have a partiality for rounders. They had last season four "first-class" matches of football, two of which they won and two they lost. In the first her majesty's ship Fox scored four goals to their one; in the second, the same ship scored one goal to their nil; in the third against a combined team of En ropeans from town, they scored four goals to nil, and in the fourth, against her majesty's ship Philomel, they scored five goals to nil. They would like very much to have thin jerseys, with a badge of the college, to present to boys who win their "colors" by playing in three "first-class" matches, and it will be no wonder if English friends provide these, as well as the footballs, which are wanted for 20 villages in Nyasa, and the tennis balls for boys at Magila.

IDLE SOLDIERS.

Only a Small Portion of an Army Ever Comes Into Action in m Battle.

Modern war is such a complex business, and so many things besides fighting have to be done, that a very large part of an army never fires a shot. Even of the soldiers actually opposed to the enemy, only a portion come into conflict in any battle.

For instance, Gen. Buller must have had some 24,000 men at the battle of the Tugela river, yet we are told that dings, etc. Terms to suit the times. only 10,000 troops went into action.

The explanation of this apparently curious fact is that armies don't fight now in dense masses like long ago. The terrible hail of bullets from magazine rifles and maxims, as well as the destructive power of shells charged with "high explosives," would annihilate an army in dense forma-tion. Hence the fighting troops have to scatter themselves over a line 15, 20 and even 30 miles long.

Of course, the chances of battle bring it about that, while the fighting becomes very hot and fierce in certain spots, the troops in other parts of the line don't come into contact with the enemy at all. This is why certain battalions lose an appalling number of men, while others come off with a few casualties. In the great battle of Koeniggratz - the biggest battle of this century-it is said that 92,000 Prussians and 80,000 Austrians did not fire a single shot.
