A LOVE STORY.

CHAPTER V.

CONTINUED, In San Antonio he found his first difficulty. No one knew a Mr. Thomas Mowbray, and people smiled when they were asked to remember some one whose latest record there dated back seventeen years.

"Our population drifts a good deal," said the hotel keeper, "but I would trust to the Guadalupe Valley, for if he once lived there, I reckon you couldn't get him to live long any. where else."

So Mowbray rode into the rich upper valley of the sparkling Guadalupe. He could not avoid the feeling that he was again in Greece. The sky was the same, the climate was the same, and when he passed Kerrville he was sure it ought to have been called Athens. At four different farms he called and asked after his brother. But the name of Mowbray seemed quite unfamiliar, One owner was a Spanish gentleman, and he could not well say the word "Mowbray;" another was a German, who gave it an unpronounceable accent. A Scotchman at the third farm said he "didna ken the man." An American at the fourth, "reckoned Senor Tomaso at the next farm might remember, as he was the oldest settler in the valley." So Mowbray rode forward to the house pointed out to him. In the clear atmosphere it looked close at hand, but it was really a distance of

"I'd ask you to stay till morning, stranger," said his director, "but you'll get better quarters at the senor's. He is always ready for company, and set up beyond everything with a stranger.

Just before sunset Mowbray reached the senor's house. It was a very handsome place, with deep latticed galleries and a tangle of sweet herbs and shrubs all around it. A negro boy took his horse and showed him s little path that led to the principal entrance. As he followed it he heard the tinkle of a guitar and the feet and voices of children playing on the piazza. He did not need to announce his approach; a stout, pleasant-faced lady, evidently Spanish, met him with a welcome. She gave him a seat and brought him a cup of chocolate, and told him the senor would be at home at sunset. She asked him no questions, for she was sure he had come from San Antonio to buy wool. But she talked of the fashions and the city, and said:

"I have a desire for the great city, for, to be sure, my good father lives there yet; a man of most noble and illustrious family; and my good mother, also, whom I forget not, though, as you know, it is the man and the woman, and the woman is nobody."

"San Antonio is, indeed, a most romantic city," said Mowbray.

"Ah, yes! He is loved of God who lives there. The senor he loves not the city; but as for me, I am always happy to be there. I say so because it is the truth. Here then comes the senor, and in a good hour, I hope."

Mowbray rose and looked at the advancing man. Nothing in this home indicated any certainty of information, and yet he felt as if he was on the verge of the information he wanted. The senor was coming through the shrubbery, and it was nearly dark, but he could see a tall, stout figure that walked leisurely and lifted his head expectantly as he began to mount the piazza steps. Then two little children rushed forward to meet him, and he seemed satisfied. He delayed a moment to kiss them, and came into the house holding a hand of each.

The candles were lit as he entered the parlor and his hat had been left in the hall. Richard looked at him, and without a moment's hesitation put out his hand and said: "Brother! Brother Thomas."

"Why, God bless my soul, this is little Dick! Dick! Dick! If an angel from heaven had called, I could not be more surprised and delighted. Dolores! Dolores, come here! This is my brother. 'You never heard of him?' I know you did not. But it is Dick. I am sure it is. Why, you are the very picture of your father,

Nature had instantly spoken for each. Bichard felt a strong drawing toward this brother, who looked at him in such a fatherly way; and Thomas was not ashamed to take the handsome youth to his breast and kisa "I am old enough to be your father, Dick, and I have never been able to think of you except as the pretty boy

"She is dead long ago. Father died last Christmas.'

"God give them peace forever. And you have thought of me, and come all this way to see your prodigal brother? Why, Dick, it is the best news I could ever have."

Then he called together all his family, and with marked pride introduced his eldest daughter, Jesuita. It was her guitar Mowbray had heard, but the sight of a stranger had sent her away until she understood herself to be the niece of the splendid youth who dared to kiss her cheek with such very English presumption. No lovelier type of a mixed race could have been found in all the South than Jesuita Mowbray. Her uncle watched her with a delighted curiosity. She was so indolently graceful that her movements had a rhythm like music. Never before had he seen a complexion so like a lily-leaf blushing to dazzling carmine-such large, slumbrons eyes-such purple black hairsuch full red lips-such small, dimpled hands-such languors and such coquetries! A woman more completely the antipodes of the bright, fresh, alert Katherine it would be impossible to imagine. The one was like a tropica; jasmine, heavy with scent, white with shade, loving the moonlight and the passionate songs of the mocking birds. The other was like the blue-bells of the Northern mountains; elegant, mobile, responsive to every breath of the fresh winds; swinging gently to the song of the lark and linnet in the morning

"Jesuita is a beauty," said her father, proudly. "Her mother was a beauty-she is still one to me. I took a wife from a strange race. My mother was an alien also." "Yes, but our father loved her, He called to her on his death-bed." "I am glad to hear that. Dick, why did you come here? To see me only? Was it brotherly love that brought "No."

The little word came painfully, and Thomas Mowbray looked troubled for a moment. But it was only a moment's shadow.

"Never mind, my boy," he said. "I have a way of expecting too much. After we have eaten supper we will empty our hearts to each other. Are you in trouble, Dick?" he asked, suddenly. "Have you done something? Do you want to keep out of the way?"

"No, no, Thomas. It is only a matter of money-and a dear girl whom I love."

"Then it is all right;" yet Thomas Mowbray fell frequently into silences which he suddenly broke with a forced laugh or joke; and as soon as supper was over and the ladies and children had gone to their apartments, he took his brother to an upper gailery apart from the other galleries, and only approached through a room which he locked behind them.

There was a glorious full moon, and the lovely land lay bathed in its light. Far off the mocking birds were singing in the woody belt that followed the river and from the cabins there came the echoes of a banjo or a mandolin.

"Sit down, Dick," he said, pointing to a rude but comfortable chair; and then he brought another from a shady corner and placed himself close to his brother. "Smoke, Dick?" he asked, and Dick nodded and took out his cigar case. Thomas lit a pipe and put his feet into a comfortable position. "Now, my boy, we can talk. What brought you to see me? Show me Truth, and I don't mind how ugly she is. I will give her a fair hearing.

"I have told you that our father is dead. I am supposed now to be the Squire Mowbray. I am not. You are the squire."

Thomas puffed his pipe a little quicker, and said: "Well? Go on, . Who told you so?"

"Lawyer Hewett."

"If any stranger knows anything about it, he does."

"Yes, but I did not know until last month, Thomas. Indeed, I did not know of your existence until then. So I am not to blame if I usurped your right,"

"I sold my right. Father bought my birthright. I was a son of Ishmael; he could not make an English gentleman of me."

"But the sale was not legal. Hewett told me it was made while you were a minor. It amounts to noth-"God in heaven! It amounts to all

I signed it for," "Do not be angry, Thomas. The question is to come before a man who knows othing of you, and who hates about Katherine Janfarie, and her guardian, and Thomas grasped the situation at once.

"I understand," he answered. "Dick, I was at Mowbray last May. You were in Scotland at the time. Some one-I suppose it was Hewett-sent me the newspaper which contained a notice of my father's death, and I just took a run over to see the old place. When I got there I did not feel as if I belonged to it at all. The only spot of land that claimed me was my father's grave. I stayed at the Inn in Mowbray village for three days and no one knew menot even old Hewett."

"Yet the place is legally yours, Thomas."

"I have sworn it is not. I may have a right to a place in the Mowbray vault. I have no other right. The place is yours, Dick; and I will go with you to San Antonio and make it yours so sure and fast that even that old Laird of Levens-hope shall not be able to pick a flaw in your right or in your children's succession.'

"Are there lawyers in San Antonio clever enough for this business?"

"Where land is concerned, a San Antonio lawyer will fix matters so certainly that it will take an English Parliament to unfix them. Does this promise make you easy, Dick?"

"Quite, Thomas; and now that I have seen you face to face I could trust your word as well as an act of parliament; but you have shildren, and I may have, and what man can tell the things that may be done when he is in his grave?"

"Dick, I have known for many years just how the succession stood. If poverty had followed me I would have gone to my mother's people and been quite content with a donkey and a brazier and as much solder as tinker needs. But I would never have claimed a crust from Mowbray. 1 am, on the contrary, a rich man. Look north and south, east and west, and the land is mine farther than you can see. This divine sky, this heavenly climate, this life of individual freedom and national liberty are mine! I built this fair, wide spreading house, and no one but myself and my wife and children have lived in it. Its rooms have no sad memories-no writings on the wall against us. Death is not forespoken for us. nor avil fata my wraiths lingering for their revenge. I was oppressed by the spiritual influence of the Mowbrays in their ancient home, I could not live in it, I do not belong to the family. Neither does England please me now. The rains and fogs and wailing winds made me wretched. I was hungry for sunshine that had life and glory in it. My boy, I am sorry for you. I wish you had an inheritance in Texasvirgin fields and an unhaunted house. But every man must dree his desti-

"I can be happy anywhere with Katherine."

"That is the right spirit. To-morrow we will go into San Antonio, and I will quit myself and my children forever of the Mowbray place. It is not ours. We have no natural right in it. Come closer, brother, for I must not lose you again. We had the same good father. Are you happy now. Dick?"

"Very happy. To-morrow I will begin to go back to Katherine. But, Thomas, I will bring her here to see you. We will turn our faces to the Guadalupe as soon as we are married. I think Alexander Brathous will not follow us to Texas."

"Three men kept this secret, Dick, for thirty years. I wonder how long three women could have kept it." "Three women, I think, know it now. 1 told Katherine, and asked her to tell her mother, and I am sure she would also tell her friend, Jessy Tel-fair. There is no reason why our relationship should not be acknowl-edged. For my part, I wish your honor and unselfishness to be widely made public. I am proud of such an elder brother,"

"These are fine words, and I like to hear them from you, Dick. And to have found you just such as you are is better than to find a fortune. I am proud of you. Not every young fel-low would have traveled nearly five thousand miles to be sure he was right."

"To-morrow, then, I may begin to go home. You know 'why' without apologies."

"To-morrow, by sun-up, we will turn to the east. We may be delayed some days in San Antonio. The man I want may not be there, or he may be sick or busy, or not in the mood for business. But we must do the thing right, and then it will not be to do again. Do you fear what three women may do or say in your absence?"

"No. None of the three will say a word more than truth. I do not fear the truth."

But it was not necessary for any of the three women to speak a word to set trouble brewing. The telegram from a dying lawyer and Mowbray's hurried response to it inflamed the small, suspicious mind of Brathous, He told himself all night that "something was wrong." Infinitely curious and inquisitive after everything which pass himney-corner on his 9 0 esta not endure such a opounded in his very

The next morning he went to see his own lawyer, Simon Langton, about it. Langton was a cunning, unscrupulous man, held by all between contempt and fear; but he was well acquainted with the laird's plans and projects, and with the amount of ready money forthcoming to carry them out. For Brathous as Laird of Levens-hope, he had that respect all Scotchmen feel for landowners; for Brathous as a man he had an infinite and indefinite disdain; his want of reticence, his petty complaining, his puny wrath, his mean subterfuges, were all impotent and transparent to this man who moved with a pitiless, silent directness to his own ends.

Yet he heard the story of the telegram with some interest.

"If the lawyer was dying, he didna send for the lad without good and sufficient reason," he said. "But the reason isna bound to be a bad one because it is the outcome of a lawyer's mind. However, laird, I will go to Mowbray if you wish, and find it out, if so there be anything to find out. Of course, there will be expenses-my time and fares and hotel bills, and so forth."

"If you find out anything to build a wall between Miss Janfarie and that young ne'er-do-weel, I will not count a few pounds here or there, Langton."

DOCTOR TOO LATE.

The Mosquito Had Saved the Snake Litten Man-An Ague Cure.

New York Press: "Talkin' about rattlesnakes," said an Erle railroad brakeman, "did you ever hear how the mosquitoes saved a man's life up near Gulf Summit last.summer? Well, while getting out railroad ties in a slashin' over back of the Summit, Abe Morehouse was bitten in the leg by a rattlesnake. A Susquehanna doctor was at once sent for and the leg was bandaged tightly above the wound. It was expected that Morehouse would die before the doctor could come up the pike on his bike. Just as soon as the leg was bared to put on the bandage it was attacked by a swarm of mosquitoes, and when the doctor arrived he found the man as lively as a cricket and in no need of a doctor, but the ground was covered with dead and dying mosquitoes. They had sucked the poison from the wound and saved Morehouse's life. The mosquitoes presented their bills and died. The doctor presented his bill and got his money. This was hard on the mosquitoes, but I presume Morehouse's life was worth savin'. There was Sol Timson, another brakeman. Sol used to brake on the Delaware division, from Susquehanna to Port Jervis. He had the ague awfully. Had it so bad that some of his teeth shook out, and he shook the buttons off his coat. A lot of his friends had sure cures for the ague, and each gave him the prescription. At last when he had 13 prescriptions, he took them all to a Port Jervis drug store and had them put up. He took them home and put them all into one jug. Then he shook the jug, mixed the 13 prescriptions thoroughly, and took three doses. He never shook again until the hearse struck a stone."

Savory Italian Dish. It was in Milan that I became acquainted with the Italian delicacy known as "little birds with polenta." Polenta is a musical name for Indian meal, and I suspect that the "little birds" are the same as our English sparrows, although they seem even smaller. Compared to one of these Italian birds, an American quail is a Thanksgiving turkey. When you order "birds and polenta" you get five or six of these tiny creatures spitted on a stick and alternated with slices of bacon. The polenta is well seasoned, and the dish, as a whole, is most satisfying. At first I tried carving the birds, but my companion showed me the Italian way. He took the bird between his fingers and ate it, bones and all. When he finished there was nothing on the place except the sharp stick

NEW YORK STATE NEWS

Cashier Peek Found Guilty,

In the United States Court in Uties Lo. renzo V. Peek, of Fultonville, charged with appropriating $5000 while cashler of the Fultonville National Bank, of which John H. Starin is President, was found guilty on the fourth of the six counts in the indict. ment. The jury made no recommendations. Judge Coxe sentenced the prisoner to five years in the Anburn penitentiary.

Mr. Peek is seventy-nine years of age, and previous to his arrest for embezzlement was looked upon as one of the respected residents of his town. After the discovery of the loss of the money the bank officials began a search for the cashier, and he was located in Taunton, Mass, where he was arrested. The defence at-tempted to show at the trial that some one else connected with the bank took the funds instead of the aged 'cashler. The prisoner was an attentive listener to Judge Coxe's charge to the jury. The jury was out for nearly five hours. Mr. Peek has a wife, who was present throughout the trial.

A New Crop For Our Farmers.

Frank Timmerman, a farmer living near the headwaters of Lake Labrador, in the town of Fabius, has begun the cultivation of ginseng root, which brings high prices in China. The Chinese fast three months in the year, the period being very similar. to that of our Lent. During that time their principal food is ginseng. Owing to its slow growth ginseng is hard to obtain. When dried it brings $6 and $7 a pound in the Chinese market.

Mr. Timmerman has planted 50,000 ginseng seeds on lifty acres of land. It requires eighteen months to germinate the eed; then it is the size of a barley seed, After three years the plants are reset, and by that time they are worth three cents each. At the end of seven years the plants will weigh about an ounce each and will be worth $6000. So far as known Mr. Timmerman is the only farmer in New York State to embark in this enterprise, Mortality in the State.

There were 10,763 deaths in this State during February, according to the bulletin of the State Board of Health just issued. Compared with the corresponding month of last year there were 1500 more deaths than then reported, which is due to the continuance of the epidemic of grip, which reached its acme in January and is now declining; 1800 deaths were estimated to have been caused by it in December, 3000 in canuary, and it probably caused, directly or indirectly, about 2000 deaths this month. From pneumonia and other acute diseases of the lungs there were eighty-three deaths daily, against ninety-six in January and sixty-two last February. There were 700 deaths from old age, which is 200 more than a year ago. In the city of New York acute respiratory diseases caused the same mortality as in January, nearly one-fourth of all deaths. One death is reported from smallpox in New York City.

Burned Herself Alive.

Mrs. George Gates, of Watertown, said to be slightly unbalanced, committed sulcide in a horrible manner. About ten o'clock a few days ago her neighbors were aroused by shricks from her home, and on rushing in they found her in the cellar, her clothes saturated with kerosene and literally roasted alive. She was taken to a hospital, where she died within a short time. A short time ago she attempted to around her neck and tying her to a bedpost. She also attempted her own destruction at that time, but was prevented by her husband's sudden arrival home. She had been twice confined as a lunatic, but lately, owing to her acting in an apparently sane manner, she had not been under surveillance.

Fifteen-Year-Old Girl's Suicide.

Grace Roselle, the pretty fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Roselle, of Portage, committed suicide by taking paris green and oil of hemlock at her Miss Roselle was very much in love with a neighboring young farmer, but her affections were not returned, and in a despondent moment she took polson. At first she refused to tell what she had done, but finally admitted she had taken paris green. As she was not subject to the pains usually coming to a person who has taken paris green her story was not believed. Medical aid was summoned, and she in-formed the doctor that she had taken oil of hemlock to deaden the pain. She soon became drowsy and died.

To Care For the Wampum Belta.

Governor Roosevelt has signed Senator Brackett's bill making the University of the State of New York the keeper and custodian of the wampum belts of the Onondagasor any other tribe of the Five Nations. The act ratifies the action taken by the Onondaga Indians on February 26, 1898, in electing the university as the wampum keeper of that nation, and provides that beits intrusted to its care shall be kept in a fireproof building as public records, and that the university may acquire by purchare other wampums. The act does not affectithe litigation in progress with John Boyd Thacher over the possession of three belts of this character.

Horseman Inherits a Fortune.

William Fox, of Glens Falls, has gone to England to take possession of a one-tenth interest in an estate valued at $250,000. He already has received $1000 on account. Fox, who is an expert horseman, came to this country twenty years ago and has worked for the last fifteen for Amos M. Rathbun, the hotel keeper and horseman. Fox had confided to intimate friends that he came of a wealthy family and some day would come into money, so the sudden accession to wealth is no surprise. He will return to this country.

ST. REGIS INDIANS REVOLT.

Riot on the Canadian Reservation in Which the Police Were Besten.

OTTAWA, Ont. (Special) .- For the past five years the Indians of St. Regis Reserve have been agitating the re-establishment of old customs, among them being that of electing their own chiefs. They are de-termined to revive their old system of electing a council of twelve chiefs for life. A few days ago a third attempt was made by Dominion officials to elect five chiefs for three years under the provisions of the Indian acts.

Two Dominion policemen were sent from Ottawa to assist Indian Agent Long with the election. When they reached the village school, where the poll was to be taken, they found it surrounded by over 200 angry Indians, who refused to admit the authorities, and a general fight ensued. The police were kicked and clubbed by the young bucks and forced to run for their lives. The agent was selzed and locked up in the schoolhouse.

The officers state that one-third of the Indians were from the American reserve at Hogansburg, N. Y. A sufficient force has been sent to insure the carrying out of the day night in the jungle, about a mile and a quarter from Malolos. The day's advance began at 2 o'clock and covered a distance of about two and a half miles beyond the Guiguinto River, along the railroad. The brunt of the battle was on the right of the track, where the enemy was apparently concentrated.

The First Nebraska, First South Dakota and Tenth Pennsylvania regiments encountered them intrenched on the border of the woods, and the Americans, advancing across the open, suffered a terrific fire for half an hour.

Four of the Nebraska regiment were killed and thirty were wounded. Ten men of the Dakota regiment were wounded and one of the Pennsylvanians was killed.

The Americans finally drove the Filipinos back. Although there were three lines of strong entrenchments along the track, the enemy made scarcely any defence there. General MacArthur and his staff were walking on the track, abreast of the line, with everything quiet, when suddenly they re-ceived a shower of bullets from sharp-shooters in trees and on housetops, but these were speedily dislodged.

The enemy's loss was apparently small, the jungle affording them such protection that the Americans were unable to see them, and in firing were guided only by the sound of the Filipino shot. The American artillery was handicapped for the same reason.

The provision train was delayed by broken bridges, but the stores of grain and flocks of ducks in the locality furnished ample forage. The hospital work is remarkably efficient, as it has been throughout the whole campaign. The telegraphers keep abreast of the line and maintain constant connection with the city.

New Horseshoing Shop.

I have spent 15 years of my life in the study of the horse and the anatomy of the horse's foot. It is something every man should khow to shoe a horse as it should be shod. The art of shoing a horse is in trimming the foot with perfect correctness, therefore it takes a man with a great deal of experience to trim a horse's foot and set him squarely on his feet. There is the secret of stopping horses from interfering. I can stop a horse from interfering. I pay special attention to lameness of the foot and interfering horses. I have been on a stock farm for 6 years and have had a great deal of experience with all kinds of horses feet. I have read several veterinary books, but a veterinarian is not a horseshoer. It takes a man who is born a mechanic to be a good horseshoer. Horseshoing is an art of itself, a man can't learn it in a month. I do my own trimming and fitting and guarantee my work to give satisfaction.

It is Likely to Have a Far Reaching Commercial Result.

CARACAS, Venezuela (By Cable): -Francis B. Loomis, United States Minister to Venezuels, recently returned from an interesting trip up the Orinoco on the United States gunboat Wilmington. The voyage along the north coast of Venezuela and up the river, where a period of nearly two weeks was passed, is likely to have some far reaching commercial result.

Mr. Loomis said regarding his experiences that he would endeavor to give American exporters the benefit of his observations in such a way that they could profit by them immediately. There are several important American enterprises in the valley of the Orinoco, and all were visited by the United States Minister. The effect of his presence in those remote parts of the country on board a modern gunboat has increased American prestige and given a new sense of security to Americans en-gaged in business in Eastern Venezuela.

NO SOUTH JERSEY PEACH CROP. Report of Professor John B. Smith o: the State Experiment Station.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. (Special) .- Professor John B. Smith, entomologist of Rutgers College and of the New Jersey State Experiment Station, reports that the South Jersey peach crop is practically destroyed.

"The fruits in all parts of the State at the present time," he says, "are in good condition, except peaches. Plums are first rate. In South Jersey the peaches, especially in young orchards, are all gone. Only in sheltered localities are any left at all. All the early professes are completely all. All the early varieties are completely gone, Of the varieties that flower late, there can be found some buds; and in the old orchards, where there is pleaty of wood, there will probably be found a fair share of blossoms. "The frost has wiped out all the early vegetation, and will put back vegetables, like peas and other garden truck, fully two and perhaps three weeks in this State."

Maine's two great lumber rivers-the Penobscot and the Kennebec-will have about 250,090,000 feet of logs this year, of which about 50,000,000 feet will be for the supply of pulp mills. This cut does not in-clude certain small brook drives or the logs held up last season. A general advance of from $2 to $8 over last year's prices is ex-pected on sprace lumber this year, and the feeling is one of chastfulness all ayanud. HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS.

Mend Your China-

The abnormal price one has to pay for a miserable bottle of china cement which contains hardly enough material to mend a single piece of ware, if it is at all entensive, often makes such work as home repairing prohibitive, but an excellent cement of this class can be made by besting the whites of eggs to a froth, and adding grated cheese and quick lime after it has settled. A further whipping, and it may be applied to the fractured china, with the result that the damaged article will endure considerable heat and often moisture. Another exceedingly strong cement is made by mixing plaster of paris with strong gum arabic, and apply the paste with a brush. Invariably before endeavoring to join the fragments it is well to cleanse the broken edges by dipping them in very hot water and proceeding immediately with the work in

When Making a New Home.

Calculate in advance not only the cost of building the house but the added cost of furnishing it when finished, and keep within your means. But if the error is made, don't double it by furnishing temporarily in the hope of some day doing it over again. It is much the better policy to start with everything good, even if that means to be short a few pieces, for a good start demands a good continu-ance; to fill a house with things one doesn't like, on the plea of "temporary," is to invite years—perhaps a lifetime—of living without that keenest and most constant of all pleasures -beautiful home surroundings. A suggestion worth following is to concentrate the family birthday and holiday gifts on the furnishing of a room; in a remarkably short time the seem-ingly unattainable is attained, and the doing of it gives a living interest not only to the room itself but to the entire home life. - Woman's Home Companion.

A Music Rack.

In these days, when economy of space is of primary importance in furnishing a room, especially in a flat, the question frequently arises how one piece of furniture can best be made to serve the purposes of two.
A bint as to how a useful and ornamental music-rack can be put at the back of a piano will not come amiss. The first thing needed to make the music rack are three thicknesses of bamboo, which can be purchased for fifty cents. By having the frame-work of bamboo there is nothing to affect the sound or spoil the tone of the instrument. The largest bamboo makes the uprights, which have to carry the crossbars; the next in size form these bars, while the smallest serves for the bottoms and sides of the various divisions. The framework should be arranged to take the music lengthwise.

The best way to put bamboo together is to make holes in the larger pieces and let in the smaller ones, gluing them in position. For the sides only a few pieces will be required, some three inches apart, and these may be let in, or they may be tacked on from the inside with fine French nails. For the bottoms of the divisions it will be enough to let in a few cross pieces or tack them on like the side pieces, or one can tack over a thin piece of wood.-Now York Herald.

dollars a year, more or less, to live at the Renwood. But it was worth it.

The Renwood was the most aristocratic apartment house in the city.

There may have been other buildings whose stairways were made of finer marble, whose plate glass was a trifle heavier and whose telephone wires got crossed less frequently, but they were not occupied by people with such large incomes and such irreproachable records as was the Renwood, It was a great feather in one's cap to have the name of living there.

There was nothing like it for gaining social distinction. .

Families that had recently found the way to wealth and were still on the lookout for the road that led into society's exalted sphere, had been known to resort to every plan that could be devised by inventive minds for reaching the desired haven without avail; but as soon as they took rooms at the Renwood all prejudice was swept away and they sailed triumphantly on to their goal.

If a woman gave a tea and the society columns of the newspapers contained paragraphs descriptive of the "assemblage of wit and beauty at the home of Mrs. Mark, who is residing at the Renwood this winter," that good woman's reputation as a social leader was straightway established.

When somebody else went shopping and said, "Send it to the Renwood," the clerks knew at once that they were dealing with a person who scintillated as one of the most sparkling lights in that upper world of which they caught faint glimpses over the counter now and then, and they humbled themselves accordingly.

It was considered a great honor to correspond with any one who was domiciled at the Renwood, and Ren- her confidential talks upon him, wood women frequently received notes which they were compelled to answer through common courtesy. The recipients of these replies, however brief and formal they may be, always took particular pains to show them and to remark casually:-

"I received a letter from my friend, Mrs. Blank, who lives at the Renwood," and everybody, even in the fourth and fifth circles of our great complex social system, seemed to take on an air of exclusiveness from the little transaction and felt themselves raised several degrees in the estimation of the world.

But it required a great deal of wire pulling to secure accommodations at the Renwood, People who wished to reside there had to put in their applications months beforehand, just as would-be incumbents of appointive government offices and lucrative positions in corporations file their positions and await their turn.

The Renwood contained but twenty-five apartments, and as people seldom moved and the list of applications was lengthy, it seemed a foregone conclusion that there were a good many anxious aspirants who would pass through time and eternity without finding shelter beneath the Renwood's roof. Another thing which made admission difficult to any except recognized social lights was the rigid examination through which each new tenant was required to pass. Men who had come through civil service examinations with an average of 99 per cent., and still others who had taken their degrees at West Point, Annapolis and Yale fell down on the questions put to them by the proprietor of the Renwood. Age, pedigree, occupation and amount of wealth possessed were sworn to before a notary public, and those interesting family histories were pasted in a folio-sized, moroccobound book, which has kept on a special table in the reception room, where other residents of the Renwood might refer to it at any time and see just whom they were associating with.

It would be difficult to determine who was responsible for the ultra exclusiveness of the Renwood, It certainly was not the proprietor.

He was a plain unassuming man, whose tastes were inclined decidedly toward simplicity rather than ostentation, and when he bought the site of the Renwood and put up his fine building he had no intention of making it other than a first-class apartment house which should rank with others of its kind.

He proposed to conduct his busi-

> Moore. After that the Renwood seemed to grow into favor without any special effort from any one.

> Mrs. Moore unconsciously served as a briliant orb which attracted numerous satellites to circle round her, and before Mr. Merrick was aware of what was taking place his fortune was made.

> The unexpected social maelstrom in which he found himself helplessly floating around was very Lewildering. The Renwood-like many another thing whose popularity can never be explained-had acquired unparalleled celebrity without any adequate cause, so far as he could see, and it took him some time to learn to accept the situation philosophically.

There were a good many times when he longed for a brief period during which he could assume once more the careless habits of former days, but his business acumen bade him cater to Fashion, who had taken him firmly within her grasp, and he stood valiantly at his post, managing his property and collecting his wonderful rentals.

Up to last November there had been no changes made in the place for a good many months. Then the family that had occupied apartment No. 19 for the past two years went to Denver and gave somebody else a chance. The lucky one who was first on the list was a woman. She passed through the examination with one mark to her discredit; she was a widow.

discriminated against widows. The other women in the house, especially Mrs. Hannibal Wade, who had gradually grown to be regarded as a leader, and who had helped to revise the latest catechism, objected to them.

Somehow the Renwood had always

"If you can help it, Mr. Merrick." Mrs. Wade said to the proprietor one day, when the was inflicting one of "never take widows in the house."

"The most of them have worried one man into the grave or the divorce court, and their sole object in living is to entrap other victims. I am afraid I shall have to give you a warning now, Mr. Merrick, that if you ever take a widow into the Renwood I shall be forced to leave you."

The friendly advice and admonition ought to have been sufficient cause for the instant dismissal of the case of the widow, Mrs. Raynor, but she averaged such an extraordinary percentage on other points that the genial landlord could not summon the hardihood to refuse her admission.

Mrs. Wade chanced to be away at the time and Mrs. Raynor had been occupying apartment No. 19 for more than a week when she came home.

One of Mrs. Hannibal Wade's strong points was a display of fine indignation whenever occasion demanded it, and she came out with unusual brilliancy in her chosen role when she examined the records in the moroccobound book and learned what had been done in her absence.

She went to the proprietor about it

"I see," she said, "that you have broken the rule which was tacitly agreed upon some time ago between you and your patrons and have let No. 19 to a widow. It is needless to state that I am greatly surprised at such a breach of faith on your part. Can you give me an explanation, Mr. Merrick, that will justify such a course?"

"Well, Mrs. Wade," returned the proprietor, phlegmatically," I am sorry if I have offended you, but I fail to see how I have violated any agreement.

"This Mrs. Raynor came to see me several months ago about taking a suite of rooms here and I promised to let her know as soon as there was a vacancy. I assure you, Mrs. Wade, that even you can take no exception to her. She is good-looking—but not so handsome as yourself,"—he added, diplomatically,

"She is forty-five years old, and unincumbered. She belongs to an excellent family and is rich enough to start a national bank of her own if she cared to do so. I wish you would call on her, Mrs. Wade, I am sure acqueintance would banish prejudice."

But Mrs. Hannibal Wade's righteous wrath was not to be appeased by any excuses which the unlucky landlord could produce in his own defense.

"No." she returned, "I do not care to know her. She may be all right, but—she is not to be trusted and ought not to have been permitted to come here.

"However it is not too late to remness in a modest, quiet way, and edy the evil. Surely, Mr. Merrick, scorn when he found that his house was be- | you can eject her from the house on | a clin some pretext or other at the end of the month. If you don't I am afraid you will have trouble."

Ass general thing the latest arrivals at the Renwood were accorded a royal welcome. Teas, dinners and receptions were given in their honor, and they were installed in their new quarters with great eciat.

But no such hospitality marked the coming of Mrs. Raynor. To be sure, the great events of the Renwood's society calendar came and went as usual, but the handsome widow was religiously excluded from them all.

"She means mischief," said Mrs. Hannibal Wade. "She will bring discredit upon our house. It is our duty to issue a bull of social excommunication. Perhaps that will bring Mr. Merrick to his senses."

The general animosity manifested clans to come to him was Mrs. Clyde toward Mrs. Raynor became more active as the end of the month drew near.

> This intense bitterness was greatly aggravated by the outspoken admiration of the men, who were strongly disposed to champion the cause of the woman who had apparently done nothing to merit such severe condemnation, and it was undoubtedly an indiscreet remonstrance which Mr. Hannibal Wade urged against the injustice of the case which prompted his wife to seek another interview with Mr. Merrick.

> "That Mrs. Raynor has now been here a month," she said, "and I trust you have hit upon some plan whereby we may get rid of her." "No," said Merrick, slowly; "I can't say that I have."

"I hope you understand the case, Mr. Merrick," she said, severely. "There is mutiny at Renwood. You have rented an apartment to a woman who has no natural protector and who smiles at and flirts with our husbands, sons and brothers, who, I am sorry to say, seem to be highly gratified by such proceedings.

"Mr. Merrick, I, with the other influential families now here, have made Renwood what it is. I am proud of it-I am proud of living at Renwood. I should hate to go elsewhere. But I shall leave at once if Mrs. Raynor does not."

"As I understand it," said Mr. Merrick, cautiously. "You object to Mrs. Raynor simply because she is a "Centainly. As I have said before, she has no natural protector. She has nothing to do but make trouble for other people. I consider her dangerous."

"Well," said Mr. Merrick, dejectedly, "I'll see what can be done about it."

A few minutes after Mrs. Hannibal came in. The widow's handsome blend face was flushed, her eyes were swollen and the bit of handkerchief she carried in her hand was limp and damp as if with tears.

"Mr. Merrick," she said, "I have come to complain to you about the way I am treated here. What have I done that I should be ostracised? never heard of anything like it. I have long wanted to live at Renwood, Mr. Merrick, because of the unusual advantages your patrons enjoy, but if this thing is to continue I must go away. It is breaking my heart."

She raised the web of a handkerchief to her eyes, Mr. Merrick fumed for a moment in silence.

"Madam," said he, at length, "I'll stand by you, if every family moves out to-day and I have to put 'for rent' signs in every window. I won't see a woman imposed upon in this way. They object to you, Mrs. Raynor, because you are a widow.'

"Because I am a widow!" repeated Mrs. Raynor, applying the white web to her eyes again. can't help that." "Good gracious, I

"Of course you can't," returned the proprietor sympathetically. "That is, you haven't helped it, although I wouldn't be afraid to wager you could have done so a score of times." The pretty hand that held the tearbedewed handkerchief trembled vio-

"Oh, Mr. Merrick," she said, and there was a pitiful little quaver in her soft voice that made honest Mr. Merrick sink back in his chair in a tremor of sympathy.

"You don't know what we poor widows have to bear. We are always under suspicion and the awfulest things are imputed to us, whereas we are really the kindest, most sensible, most honorable women in the world."
"I'm sure of that," replied Mr.

Merrick. "And they have trampled upon my feelings and my reputation solely be-cause I am a widow," she went on mournfully. "Oh, Mr. Merrick, it is an awful thing to be a widow." "I haven't a doubt of it," said Mr. Merrick, promptly, "and I can't keep one in my house. "Then I'll have to leave the Renwood, after all the trouble I've taken to get in here."

"I didn't say that," returned Mr.

Merrick, slyly. "I said I wouldn't keep a widow." Mrs. Hannibal Wade came down an hour later to consult Mr. Merrick

CONSUMPTION BROUGHT TO BAY, Germany's Pleasant Manner of Treating

Phthisis Microbes. The account given by James A., Gibson of his experience of the open-air cure of consumption at Nordrach, in the Black Forest, must create migiv-ings in the minds of most people as to their preconceived notions as to the care of their health. Mr. Gibson was reduced in weight and greatly weakened by consumption in an advanced stage. He went to Nordrach, and in three months gained thirty-eight pounds, and left the place "quite cured." That is three years ago, and Mr. Gibson now has the windows of his house open winter and summer, and never wears an overcoat or carries an umbrella. He is proof against both cold and wet, and never catches cold. The three features of the treatment which makes strong, hardy and healthy men out of weakly, dying consump-tives are overfeeding, regulation of the amount of exertion and rest and pure air. The patient is literally stuffed to his utmost capacity, swallowing two or three times as much as one would feel inclined to eat. The food consists of plenty of milk, fats of all kinds, meats, potatoes, vegetables, butter, bread, cheese, fruits, sweets, etc. The gain in weight would often be enormous; a patient has been known to put on eight pounds in a week. Overexertion in any form, mental or bodily, was carefully guarded against. Walking was generally uphill, and always at a snail's pace, so that the lungs were exercised without being exerted, and thus strengthened and healed. These walks were increased in length as the patient grew stronger, until by the time he was quite cured he was allowed to walk long distances, say, ten miles, and was so thoroughly hardened and confirmed in health that he was able to resume work on his return home.

The American Horse Trade. The trade in American horses with South America can be said only to have begun, amounting last year to only twenty-one horses, while five times as many were sent to Africa and more than ten times as many to Asiatio countries. For American horses there would appear to be an assured market in the West Indies since the restoration of peace in Cuba, for during the Wade had left the room Mrs. Raynor fiscal year ending July 1, 1897, nearly 5000 American horses were shipped to these islands, and the decline in the year succeeding is ascribed generally to the unsettled condition of affairs in Cuba and to the practically enforced abandonment of agricultural operations on many parts of the island. Temporarily, too, a number of horses were withdrawn from agricultural pursuits for the requirements of the Cuban cavalry, and some, too, were purchased for the needs of the Spanish cavalry, and since the restoration of peace in Cuba this demand will have to be made up by importations from the United States. But to Mexico as a permanent and enlarging market for American horses dealers in this country look chiefly, and by the agricultural census of last year it was shown that there are now more horses in Texas than in any other American State, the total number being 1,200,-000. Illinois and Iows follow Texas in the order named .- New York Sun-

> The Fighting Spanlards. "After the surrender on August 13," says Corporal E. V. Montalvo, of the Utah battery, now in the Philippines, "the Colorado men in port advanced on a company of Spaniards which still held out. General Hale summoned to his command what Spanish he knew and demanded a surrender. Great was his surprise when the reply came in a broad Irish brogue, 'Divil a bit I'll surrender!' The Spanish captain was an Irishman. I met him afterward, subsequent to the sur-render, which occurred, despite his protestations. He had married a Spanish woman, and so found his way into the Spanish army. There are many Irish in Spain. Any number of Irishmen have married the fair daughters of the proud Castilian race. Because of this incident the officers around General Otis came to regard as a proverb that 'the only Spaniards who can fight are Irishmen,""-New York Tribune.

Training Nursemalds in Boston.

Boston has a school for the training of nursemaids. Applicants must be between eighteen and thirty years of age and must agree to wear a uniform after graduation and to be content with $3 a week during their first year. Spain and America.

The United States present a striking example of a free, independent and culightened people. This country is not dependent upon those who may happen to be in office. On the contrary, it advances in spite of weak or corrupt officials. Some of the most prosperous periods of our country came when we had the weakest rulers. With the United States, it is the people, not the Government; with Spain, it is the Government, not the people. If Spain has progressive rulers, the country is progressive; if they are weak, or corrupt—and they are generally both—the country declines. Such a dependent people are unworthy of liberty. - The Arena.

One Woman's Added Burden.

I was taking my dinner one day at a mountain farmhouse on the headwaters of the Cumberland River, and the lady of the house, who had four children playing around the front of the establishment, was inclined to repine at her hard luck in having so much work to do.

"I run this here whole farm," she said in a tone which indicated that she was ready to resign.

"How many acres have you?" I inquired.

"A hundred and forty; twenty in wheat, sixty in corn, ten in medder an' paster, an' the balance scatterin' an' woods."

"Got any stock?" "Ten head uv cattle, two cows, six hogs and work critters fer the place." "And you run the whole business?

"Indeed I do; every hide an' hair uv " she sighed.

"Don't you hire some help?"

"In course, but 'tain't hired help that takes the load of'en a body. There was philosophy in that statement, and I paused a minute.

Cromwell's Mother.

The sympathy existing between this mother and son is one of the most beautiful traits in Oliver's personal history. They loved each other with a passionate affection that no time or change lessened, and when he arrived at the summit of his power, though she was then upwards of ninety years of age, he appointed her royal apart-ments in Whitehall, and visited her every day. Noble quaintly says, "She occasionally yet offered the Protector advice, which he always heard with great attention, but acted as he judged proper." It is pleasant to think that this fine old lady died happily before her son's power began to wane. It is pleasant to think of the Great Protector kneeling to receive her dying blessing, and of her last smiling words to him and his children-"A good night, dears!" There is yet a portrait of her at Hinchinbrooke, which shows us a handsome woman, with a face full of character, and a rather melancholy expression. Her dress is that of a gentlewoman of the time—a white satin hood, a pearl necklace, and a neckerchief edged with rich lace. The mantle is of green satin edged with gold

HERR ROSE IS ACCUSED.

Admiral Kautz Declares His Proclamation Caused the Samoan Fight.

A PACIFIC SETTLEMENT ASSURED.

German Consul Publicly Stated That Our Admiral's Manifesto Was Untrue-Germany, Great Britain and the United States Appoint a Joint High Commission With Power to Settle the Question.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Special) .- Official information from Samca shows that the German Consul-General was at the bottom of the recent trouble in the islands, resulting in the killing of an American marine and British sailors, and culminating in a bombardment of the followers of Mataafa by the American and British warships.

Secretary Hay has made public an of2cial dispatch from Rear-Admiral Kautz, received by the Navy Department, and communicated to the State Department. It was dated Newcastle, N. S. W., March 30, "Matanta people obeyed orders to leave government reservation. Since then have become aggressive, killing Private Hollo-way and three British sailors. Our man killed guarding American Consulate. German Consul-General issued incendiary pro-clamation saying that my proclamation was untrue and he should uphold provisional government. The British forces act in concert with the United States shelling rebels where they can be reached."

From this dispatch it is believed that the action of Mataafa's followers in attacking the American and British guards was the direct result of the incendiary proclamation by the German Consul-General, and that, to this extent the German government, through its representative, is responsible for the attack and for the subsequent bombardment.

A Joint High Commission to settle the entire Samoan trouble has been agreed upon by the Governments of the United States, England and Germany. The new plan has been fully gone over by Secretary Hay and the British and German Ambassadors here, and its essential details worked out. Each nation is to be represented by one member on the Commission. It is to have practically unlimited authority, without the necessity of referring its lecisions back to the several Governments for approval. It is felt that by conferring such complete and final authority on the Commission the danger of any further deadlocks and delays will be obviated.

The peaceful sqlution of this delicat question, which is full of possibilities of serious trouble, is regarded as a triumph of diplomacy and as furnishing the strong-est kind of evidence of a desire on the part of Germany, as well as of the other two powers, to maintain the most amicable rela-tions one with the other.

KILLED HIS INDIAN FIANCEE. dilted Young French-Canadian Followed the Murder With Suicide

Toledo, Ohio (Special),-James La Blance, a young French-Canadian, stabbed and killed his Indian sweetheart, Olga Possamie, at Pelee Point Ontario, early in the week, and then stabbed himself to the heart. The point is on Pelee Island, and during the winter months the inhabitants are isolated. The steamer American Eagle has just arrived from the island, bringing the story of the tragedy, which is pathetic and ro-

La Blance and the Indian girl were lovers, and last summer they plighted their troth, but when the young Frenchman went to call on his sweetheart he learned that another, an American from Sandusky, had filled his place in the maiden's heart. He was distracted. He induced the girl to take a walk with him, and when near "Lovers' Rock" he stabbed her, killing her instantly. He then threw the maiden's body into the lake, and after stabbing himself fell into the water after her. "Lover's Rock" is a promontory famous throughout this section of the country.

CONVICTED BY ONE WORD.

Chicago Man Spolis His Defense by His Answer to the Prosecutor.

CRICAGO, Ill. (Special) .- "Did you mean to kill the man?" asked Assistant State's Attorney Crowe of Iche Oronati, who was on trial before Judge Waterman, accused of assault with intent to kill John Care-

"Sure," promptly replied the prisoner.
"That is all," said the Prosecutor.
"Oh, he did not understand the question," remarked Attorney Sullivan.
"Did you understand what Mr. Crowe asked you?" continued Mr. Sullivan, addressing his client. "Sure," answered Oronati. "And you intended to kill Carevello?"

"Sure. The jury felt so "sure" of the prisoner's guilt that it promptly returned a verdlet fixing the punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary. Oronati stabbed Carevello while the latter was writing at a table in his own house. The men quarreled about money.

VIENNA, Austria (By Cable) .- A serious collision has taken place between Bulgarian and Turkish frontier guards at Kozyl-Agob, between Jamboll, Eastern Roumelia and Adrianoples on the banks of the Toon-in, fifty-six miles south of Jamboli.

The Turks attacked a weak Bulgarian outpost; but the Bulgarians, aided by armed inhabitants, repulsed their assailants after a four hours' fight. Both sides suffered losses of billed and wounded. The Turks were seeking to secure a position hitherto held by the Bulgarians.

SHOT DEAD FOR PRESIDENT LOUBET. Paris Assassin Mistook M. Tourret For the President of France.

Paris, France (By Cable) .- A wealthy gentleman named Tourret was shot dead on the Bois de Bonlogne by a man who mistook his victim for President Loubet, to whom M. Tourret bore a striking resem-blance.

The murderer, whose name is Ozouf, and who is thirty-eight years old, is thought to be insane. The assassin fired two bullets into M. Tourret, who expired immediately

The Author of "By Jingo."

It is rather amusing to those who know the facts to hear people talk of the "Great Macdermott," as if he was really the inventor of the word "jingo." That he made it popular is true enough, but the famous song came to him one fateful morning in 1876, with the milk, by penny post. So it was by no means what is called a "put-up job." Every well-known comique has a biggish delivery of ditties. "We don't want to fight" arrived in such a batch. It was sent by a certain Mr. Hunt, who thought it stiffish for the public. The great one was of another opinion. Being an old naval man himself, he was thrilled at once, and saw its possibilities in a moment. Moreover, he agreed with its sentiments, which enabled him to give it with gusto, "by jingo."-London News.

Ages of French Brides.

The Hachette Almanac for the current year gives some very interesting statistics as to the ages of brides in France. Only thirteen out of 100 young women marry between the ages of 15 and 20. From 20 to 25 years the average is sixty out of 100. The further from her twenty-fifth year the maid travels the slimmer are her chances for marriage; still up to 30 years the nuptial chimes ring out for twenty-two out of 100.

Maids from 30 to 35 years old have twelve chances in 100; from 35 to 40 years six, and from 40 to 45 years only five in 100. There is only one lucky female in 100 who marries when between 45 and 50 years old.

It must not be supposed, however, that after 50 oblivion covers the hearts of "belated maids." Even between the years of 60 and 65 there is a chance for one maid among 365.

The strongest competitors maids have to encounter are the widows, for they marry with equal if not better chances than their single sisters.

BIG STEAMER FOUNDERS.

The Stella Hits the Rocks in the English Channel in a Fog.

SEVENTY GO DOWN TO DEATH.

The Vessel Was Proceeding at Full Speed in a Dense Fog-Bollers Explode, Hastening the End-Tragte Fate of Passengers and Crew-Captain Herolcally Sinks at His Post With the Ship.

Southampton, England (By Cable) .- The passenger steamer Stella, plying between this port and the Channel Islands, crashed upon the dreaded Casquet Rocks, near the Island of Alderney, in a dense fog, and foundered in ten minutes, her boilers exploding with a tremendous report as she went down.

It is estimated that about seventy persons were drowned by the sinking of the Stella. The Stella had on board more than 200 passengers who were going to spend Easter in the Channel Islands.

The captain, all the other officers, except the second officer, and most of the crew and many of the passengers sank with the Stella. A boat in charge of the chief offi-cer capsized, and almost all its occupants were drowned. A few of them were picked up by other vessels.

Many most pathetic incidents are reported. In several cases men lifted their wives and children into the boats and then per-ished themselves in their presence. One ished themselves in their presence. One wife who was thus bereaved lost her rea-but he thinks she struck on the rocks. The Stella, which belongs to the London and Southwestern Railway Company, left Southampton at noon, conveying the first daylight excursion of the season to the Channel Islands. There were more than two hundred passengers on board, and the crew numbered thirty-five men. The weather was foggy, but all went well until the afternoon, when the fog became most dense.

At 4 o'clock the Casquet Rocks suddenly loomed up through the fog bank, and the steamer almost immediately afterward struck amidships. The Captain, seeing that the Stella was fast sinking, ordered the life boats to be launched. His instructions were carried out with the utmost celerity, and the women and children were embarked in the boats. Then the Captain ordered the men to look after themselves.

A survivor states that he and twenty-five others put off from the Stella in a small boat. The sea was calm, but there was a big swirl around the rocks. When this boat was a short distance away from the wreck the boilers from the Stella burst with a terrific explosion, and the vessel disappeared, stern foremost, in the sea.

The last thing the survivor saw was the figure of the Captain of the Stella, standing calmly on the bridge and giving his last orders. The Captain perished with his vessel, owing to the suction caused by the sinking steamer being very great in-

The disaster is generally attributed to the high speed at which the steamer was traveling in the fog.

THREE MEN HANGED.

Two Whites and a Negro Explate a Murder on the Same Scaffold.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (Special) .- Thomas Johnson and Richard Hale, white men, and Sam Rivers, a negro, were hanged at Troy a few days ago from the same scaffold. On the night of December 18 last three men entered home of Mrs. Ira Myers, a weathy widow, near Josie, killed her and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. Myers, with an ax, and robbed the place of $3000. Sam Cook, a farm overseer, who slept in a back room, was aroused by the cries of the women and ran to their rescue, He was knocked down and left for dead and the house set afire.

Cook recovered in time to drag out the bodies of the two women, but the house was destroyed. Many arrests were made and lynching was threatened several times. Finally Sam Rivers, under arrest on suspicion, declared that Johnson and Hale, well-to-do farmers and neighbors of the Myers women, planned and executed the murders. He said they came to his house by night and hired him to go with them and watch while they committed the crime. All three were convicted.

All of the condemned professed religion on the gallows. The hanging was in private. Both white men leave families.

Secretary Hay and the delegates had a long conversation, at the close of which the Secretary plainly and emphatically told them that the United States Government would not consider any proposition look-ing to the increase of the amount of money agreed upon, nor would any action of the Cuban Assembly toward issuing bonds be indorsed. The delegates were received by Secretary Hay as private citizens, and no official recognition will be given them. After the interview the Secretary informed the President of what had taken place, and Mr. McKinley gave his approval

These are fitted together. so that water cannot pass between them, and make the pavement look like an enlarged checker board. It is claimed for it that it offers greater resistance than stone, that it is a poor conductor of cold, that dirt will not accumulate on it as easily as on stone, that it will not retain microbes and that it is more durable than stone and not more costly. The paving material is obtained from broken glass heated to 1250 degrees Fahrenheit and compressed by hydraulic force. Nothing is said about its slippery qualities in wet weather.

The Chinese Woman's Dress. It seems that there are changes of fashion in the dress of Chinese women, but they are confined chiefly to the change of length of the tunic and the wearing or leaving off of a skirt. The usual garments are trousers, a skirt and two or three little coats. The Chinese woman making an afternoon visit takes off her skirt, when an American woman would remove her wrap. If it is very warm, she may take off one or possibly two of the little coats. The trousers are really the most gorgeous part of the costume, being sometimes of rose-colored satin worked with gold. You never saw such soldiers. Very few of them were in uniform. They wore big slouch hats, with the number of their regiment often written on a bit of paper and pinned on. It was a sight to see them come on board. They went along the deck, speaking to everybody, and when we saw them go up to the officers without saluting we felt as if they must drop on the spot. But they didn't. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF GOOD WHISKEY .:::

In the preparation of whiskey for medicinal use the infusion of rye or other grain is first made to undergo fermentation by which the saccharine matter and indirectly the starch are converted into alcohol. In this state the liquid is called the wash. This is submitted to distillation and the product is denominated low wines. By a second distillation it becomes purer and stronger and now takes the name of raw spirits or whiskey. It is now submitted to a third distillation in order to further purify it. This is where our whiskey is superior. Few whiskies are ever submitted to a third distillation.— By time, certain chemical changes take place by which the natural impurities contained in the liquor are destroyed and the whiskey becomes mellow, losing the disagreeable odor and taste which it is apt to have when first distilled. We guarantee Centennial Whiskey to be six years old. Quart Bottles (bottled at the factory) $1. By the Gallon $3.50. As the season of year when pneumonia, grip, sore throet, cougps. colds, catarrh, bronchitis and lung troubles are to be guarded against, nothing "is a fine substitute," will "answer the purpose," or is "just as good" as One Minute Cohgh Cure. That is the one infallible remedy for all lung, throat or bronchial troubles. Insist vigorously upon having it if "something else" is offered you. J. S. Banker.
