He held his revolver in his right hand, and the officer was therefore strictly and if ever there was a Confederate officer in the very excess of sublime be in no danger. But, with Oakman in rage, it was the captain, who, discovering the plight of the lieutenant, had nor the resistance of the captain would rushed out of the house and into the highway to his defense.

The officer had suspected something was amiss, and, issuing from the dwelling just as Miss Eldridge was returning, he demanded to know what was afoot. She told him, without reserve. Knowing of the presence of some members of Wilkins' cavalry in the neighborhood, the chivalric nature of the Confederate was aroused, and he comprehended for the first time the imminent peril of Oakman which had caused him to rescrt to secret flight.

The return of Pete with word that undertone: the fugitive refused to use Miss Eldridge's horse appealed still more strongly to the chivalry of the captain, who saw, without understanding the true, underlying motive of the refusal, that it was because of his objection that the fugitive had thus been deprived of the probable means of securing his safety. While still debating what he could do if indeed he could do anything, the sound of the pistol firing brought the captain into the road.

"Out of that saddle quicker than lightning!" he commanded, as Oakman came face to face with him.

The Union officer was on the ground in a twinkling at the side of his friend. "You are a brave man, captain! I'll stand by you to the death!"

"No, you won't! Into the house with you!'

"And desert you? Never!"

"You infernal fool! I don't want reference to the defenders as "we." your help! I'm in no danger. It is you "If bravery alone were sufficient they're after, and, if you stay here, you'll be a dead man inside of three minutes!"

"But what of you, captain?" asked the bewildered fugitive.

This time the captain swore, and, seizing his companion by the shoulder, he swung him about and precipitated

"Off with you! Into the house! I'H hold these people back till you're safe. Then I'll join you, and we'll stand them off together! What in thunder is a better." are you waiting for?"

CHAPTER XV. A SECOND FRIEND IN NEED.

Lieutenant Oakman had let his tired horse go free, and, leaping the fence, he ran swiftly toward the grove of trees that inclosed the mansion of General Eldridge. At the moment of darting among the shadows he glanced toward the highway, where he saw Captain to find him. Let him conduct you round Trenholm surrounded by the enraged

The fugitive felt some qualms at deserting the man who had given such angry voices were plainly audible in minent need of haste. proof of his chivalry, but the captain's own words left no doubt that the apparent desertion would in reality contribute to the safety of his gallant fee and friend. But for that, Oakman tests were at a crisis. would have stood at his side to the last extremity. There are crises in men's lives when the brain works with marvelous swiftness. It was while Lieutenant Oakman was running with his utmost speed for the shelter of the house that it flashed upon him there was a way by which he could not only increase his own prospect of escape, but at the same time save that good family an infinite amount of annoyance.

He would not enter the dwelling at all, but pass into the woods at the rear.

The other reeled and slipped out of his

The opportunity to do so was his while Captain Trenholm was holding his vigorous debate with the raiders in the highway. If the captain could not keep off the angered guerrillas, the latter in their desperation were likely to force an entrance into the dwelling, in order to take vengeance on the man that had shot their leader. They would offer no violence to the captain himself while the debate was under way, since

He was passing the farther end of the mansion, with the intention of reaching the forest, from which he had taken his first survey of the place, when some one called to him in a guarded

"One moment, lieutenant!"

He stopped short and looked around. "Good heavens, Miss Eldridge! What brings you here at this time?'

She paused a couple of paces away, where she could be seen only indistinctly in the gloom. That her voice was tremulous and that she betrayed much excitement was no reflection on her bravery.

Ignoring his question, she said reprovingly:

"The captain told you to come into the house.

"He did, and he is a brave, honorable soldier!" replied Oakman, eager to render this tribute to the gallant officer. "But I shall be safer in not obeying

"Where is he?"

"When Pete brought me word that you refused to use him, I told him to return him to his hiding place in the woods. Hunt up Pete. You know where to the road, and then don't spare Jack.'

The seconds were of measureless valne. In the stillness of the night the the highway, Captain Trenholm's above all the others, and it must be admitted that his profanity was impressive in its way. Evidently the arguments and pro-

He extended his hand, and she met it. In the excess of his feelings he was and was prolonged a few seconds longer of General Eldridge and the forking of than was necessary; but, offering no objection, neither did she respond. Her dainty hand lay limp in his warm palm, and she did not speak. He let it gently fall and slipped away like a shadow among the trees.

Miss Eldridge stood for a full minute, listening after the sound of his guarded footsteps had become inaudible. If she had any misgiving that he would return, it quickly vanished. Then she gave a faint sigh and walked in the opposite direction.

That which attracted her was the sound of the angry voices in the high-Captain Trenholm was never noted for his angelic temper, and all the signs indicated that an explosion was impending. Her fear lest this should occur hastened the steps of the young wo-

At this juncture Miss Eldridge, who had passed down the short lane in front of her home leading to the highway, was recognized as she ran forward. Her appearance hushed the turmoil for the moment, though it was apparent that it could not placate the wrath of the raid-

"Boys," he said, "if you can find that Union officer, you're welcome to him. I invited him to go into the house and wait for me, but he was too smart for that. He's gone, and you're a set of infernal fools, every mother's son of you! And, if you don't believe it, I'll fight every scoundrel, one after the other!"

CHAPTER XVI. WITH JACK.

One of the curious features of that night's stirring incidents was that, from their opening to the close, the good Mrs. Eldridge slept uninterruptedly. Not until the following day did she fearn of the alarming experiences of her friends. The same can be said of Aunt Marcie and her lively son Rastus, though in their case the fact perhaps was not so remarkable, since they were further removed from the armoil.

As Lieutenant Oakman drew near the humble home of Pete, the faithful servant of General Eldridge, a burning point of light and pungent smell of tobacco brooding in the air apprised him that, despite the lateness of the hour, the slave was seated on the bench in front shot their leader, and they are deter- of his cabin, smoking his pipe. It may and he was seeking to soothe his nerves before lying down for rest.

Naturally he was astonished when he recognized the Union officer approaching him. It required several minutes for Oakman to make clear that he had returned to avail himself of the offer of Miss Eldridge. Pete knocked the ashes from his pipe and gave a grunt of dis-

"Kin yo' oxplain," he asked with surprising frankness, "why yo' was borned sich a debblish fool?'

That parting with Miss Eldridge had put Lieutenant Oakman in a frame of mind that made it impossible for him to be offended with anything in which she was interested. Still there was im-

"I admit, Pete, that I have acted foolishly, but it is not good manners for you to refer to it. Besides, a number of Captain Wilkins' cavilry are near the house looking for me, and if I don't get away in short order I shall be killed."

"De Lawd bress nie! Yo' doan' say!" gasped the scared Pete. "If dat am so. yo've got to scratch grabbel!"

In his affright he moved as if he were a young man again. With the officer at his heels he led the way across the old cotton field, or rather along its margin, for he fully comprehended the peril that threatened the young man for whom he had formed a strong attachment. Then they penetrated into the woods until they came upon a tumble down structure that had been converted into a rude stable, where the beautiful thoroughbred Jack had long been kept ger, the lieutenant placed himself in the hat and wished his friend well.

As Oakman leaned over the side of his horse to shake the hard, honest hand he left in the palm every greenback with a single exception that he owned. Then, twitching the rein, he went down the highway like a thunder-

It was a brief gallop to the fork, where he reined up his superb steed. Hesitating but a minute, he turned to the right, and, pausing briefly in the highway at the opening of the lane that led to the home of Mrs. Benware and her sister, he drew near the house with his animal on a walk.

It would be supposed that he had had a sufficiently alarming experience to make him shy of that place, but he appeared to be satisfied that everything was right, for, tying his horse, he walked up the steps and again sounded the knocker. Several minutes passed before the summons was answered, and he knew from certain sounds that the ladies were taking cautious observations. If so, it did not require long to identify him. Shortly after he was seated in the identical chair which he occupied when made prisoner earlier in the evening, with the sisters trembling with pleasure and misgiving and the fire burning on the broad hearth.

His first inquiry was: "What became of that fellow that I partly choked. Is he gone?"

"He is gone. Oh, my, my! I thought you had killed him," said the good Mrs. Benware, with a shiver at the recollec-

"If I could have been sure of two or three more minutes. I might have brought about that happy consumms. tion. Did he make any remarks?"

"Remarks!" exclaimed the horrified Miss Davis. "You have no idea of the shocking things he said."

"I can very well imagine. I can't find it in my heart to criticise him. Then he' didn't linger long after his friends left?"

"No. After he had sat up awhile and his head had cleared, I suppose, he made a plunge through the door. He was so angry that he kept remarking those dreadful remarks and he was in such a hurry that he bumped all the way to the bottom, and then"-

"He indulged in more remarks." The sisters raised their hands, with the palms spread outward, and shook their heads in mute horror. Really they couldn't do justice to the subject.

"And when he found I had appropriated his horse, it was necessary for him to venture upon more language."

"Very likely he did," said Mrs. Benware, "but sister and I did not dare listen. We closed and bolted the door, and staid inside. We didn't know whether to expect you back or not and were about to retire when you rode into the lane. You must have had quite a trying time yourself, lieutenant.

His buoyancy of spirits was perhaps natural after his safe deliverance from his many dangers, but the occasion was too serious for levity. He sat near the open window with his horse in sight, ready to fly upon the first appearance of "The closest call, as it seems to me, he added, "was just after I had shoved that paper into my pocket, the order was given to search me. If the paper had been found, I shouldn't have been the only one who would have paid the penalty."

"I was ready to sink," said Mrs. Benware, "for I saw no hope."

"Wasn't it managed brilliantly?" asked the lieutenant with a chuckle. "Signor Blitz himself couldn't have beaten such sleight of hand."

"Have you come for it?" asked Mrs. Benware, lowering her voice and glancing around, as if fearful of eavesdroppers. The visitor nodded and then passed into the hall, opened the front door and stood for a minute or two in the attitude of close attention. Neither ear nor eye revealed cause for alarm. Whatever had become of that squad of Wilkins' cavalry, it was certain they were nowhere in the neighborhood.

Once more Lieutenant Oakman unfolded the remarkable document and by the light of the candle examined the drawings and explanatory writing.

"I never saw anything to equal it," he remarked, as if speaking to himself. "The information is enormously valuable, but"-

With that he flung the document into the fire. It had smoldered somewhat since his previous call, but the paper caught instantly and was quickly consumed.

"My, my! What is the meaning of that?" asked the shocked Mrs. Ben-

"That's where it belongs," said the lieutenant, compressing his lips. "Hitherto I have been in reality a spy, though in uniform. An honorable soldier, Captain Trenholm, risked his life for me tonight. I carry a letter of protection from him, which will be all sufficient except with scoundrels like these irregular cavalrymen, and henceforth, whatever befalls me, I shall meet my fate with clean hands and with honor untarnished. And now I must be off."

CHAPTER' XVII. BRIDGING THE CHASM.

Jack, the superb thoroughbred, carried Lieutenant Oakman over the moonlit road with a swiftness and easy that I will pay the highest market price filled his rider with admiration. The steed as black as the eyes of his misseries of the Creek.

since he had had an opportunity for saddle. Pets helping to fix his boots in stretching his peerless limbs that he the stirrups. Then the slave doffed his reveled in the enjoyment of sweeping mile after mile behind him.

Twice during the night the lieutenant met other horsemen, but, although they exchanged salutations, the uniform of the officer awoke no suspicion, if indeed it was noticed. Some time later, however, he found himself suddenly pursued by a squad of cavalry, who shouted to him to calt and give an account of himself. Figuratively speaking, Jack laughed at the party and with little effort threw them hopelessly to the rear. But Oakman knew how to treat such a noble animal. Just as it was growing light he turned off from the main road and approached a negro's cabin, that belonged to one of the plantations that were the rule in that state. It was little risk for a Union fugitive to trust any member of the African race, and when the horseman had made known who he was the negro and his wife showed him genuine southern hospitality. While the man was looking after the horse, the "mammy" prepared a nourishing meal of pone, bacon and po-

Upon coming to himself, Oakman was surprised to hear men conversing in the front room. Listening for a moment, he recognized the voices as those of white persons who had made him the subject of their conversation. It was easy to tell from their words that they had come down upon the dwelling so warn his guest. As the only thing. that he had no guest at all.

"I tole yo'," he insisted, "dere ain't nobody hyah. Dar warn't nobody in blue clothes like Marse Linkum's sojers day an had breakfas'. Dar ain't no such pusson, am dar, Dine?"

Thus appealed to, the wife came to the rescue of her embarrassed husband

"Co'se dey ain't!" she indignantly protested. "An his black hoss, dat's ing. de finest critter in Jawgy, ain't out in de bawn eatin like blazes. Co'se he ain't."

"All that being so," said one of the men with a laugh, "there won't be any ping short and looking inquiringly at

"Dat's my room. Ain't yo' 'nough ob a gemman not to introod?"

"But you're not in there," was the superfluous remark of the man, who was getting a good deal of fun out of the situation.

"But I'll be dar when bedtime comes."

"And we'll be somewhere else. So long as the lady of the house is not in her retiring apartment, there is nothing improper.'-

There is no saying how the situation would have ended had it not been unexpectedly solved by Lieutenant Oakman himself. After a moment's attention he recognized the voices of the quiet amusement with the simple minded couple. Without hesitation, therefore, he strode from the darkened chamber at the rear and, advancing into the front room, extended his hand toward the visitor who stood in front of the en-

"Hello, Jim, I'm glad to see you! And there's Tim too. How are you, boys?" The callers at the negro's cabin were his old acquaintances, Tim Masters and Jim Ackers, the same who had made him prisoner on the plantation of General Eldridge weeks before.

The meeting was not a surprise to the two Confederates that Oakman anticipated. They had heard of his departure for the Union lines. They knew the circumstances and, understanding his danger, set out to find him, that they might offer their services. This was at the urgent request of Captain Trenholm, who censured himself intensely because a suitable escort had not been furnished his "exchange."

Masters and Ackers were finely mounted, but it took the greater part of the day before they could overtake Oakman, because of the speed of the matchless Jack that had borne him to the friendly negro's cabin. The shrewd Confederates knew that when he halted it would, be at such a place, and, by keeping track of him, through inquiries from those whom they occasionally met, they finally ran down the fugitive.

When the delighted Oakman began to explain matters, Ackers interrupted with a wave of his hand.

"We know all that, leftenant, so you can cut it short. We don't want to see that letter of Captain Trenholm, either, for he told us about it. He feels mighty mean that you should be left alone to grope your way back to your lines, while it was all plain sailing with

"The captain is one of the bravest and most honorable of men. He would have been glad enough to provide me with an escort, but there was none at his command." "Yes, there was," remarked Tim

RAILROAD BONDS.

A Possibility That the State May Refund Taxes Which Have Been Gollected Since

The county of Ulster is about to be gin an action against the state which is of deep interest to many of the counties and which will probably effect this county as well as many others. Ulster county is only one of the many in the State bonded for the construction of railroads. Cayuga county is in the same class and has a bonded indebtedness of quite a large amount, resulting from bonding to aid in the construction of the old Southern Central railroad. The city itself has bonded indebtedness, and the towns South of here, including Genoa, Locke, Venice, Moravia and many others, beside towns to the North are also on the list. A law enacted during the present year and entitled Chapter 336, of the law of 1899, has among its provisions a clause allowing counties, bonded for railroad building, to bring an action against the State to recover from it the amount of State taxes paid to the State since 1869. Ulster county is the first to avail itself of this right. and notice has been served on the attorney general, by F. Arthur Westbrook, formerly district attorney of Ulster county, and Abraham S. Denton, a member of the Board of Supervisors of Ulster county, that the case will be moved for trial at the September term.

Formerly the laws of the State permitted towns, upon consent of n majority of the taxpayers to be bonded to aid in the construction of railroads which are built through towns. Under the bonding acts the counties of the town so bonded were directed to set aside the taxes, including State taxes collected from the railroads for which the towns were bonded, in a sinking fund, which should be invested and devoted to paying the principal and interest of the bonds. when due.

This has never been done, but, instead the tax collected from railroads has been paid into the State treasury. and the county treasurer has been reimbursed by tax on the county to make up the deficiency. It is to rectify this injustice that chapter 336 of the laws of 1899 was enacted. which gave the counties in which there were bonded towns a right of action to recover the amount of such State taxes paid in the State since 1869. This act authorizes a recovery regardless of the statute of limcounty presented claims to the Board of Supervisors as the result of their railroad bond indebtedness, and many of them were allowed. The towns asked for reimbursement for only six years preceding their action and the requests were allowed. In case the county should be successful in an action in recovering from the State, these towns which are reimed the balance, extending back over the preceding years to 1869.—Auburn

Princess Kalulani's Nature.

"The Princess Kaiulani of Hawaii, was certainly one of the most pathetic figures of history," remarked a visitor from the Pacific coast. "I met her several times and she always excited my sympathy. She was a gentle, sweetmannered girl, with absolutely nothing about her to lift her above the level of the commonplace, except the accident of birth. She had a sympathetic little voice, she could play a few set pieces on the piano, her drawings were not so bad, she could converse intelligently about lighter literature-in short, she possessed all the small accomplishments common to quiet, everyday girls of a domestic turn of mind, and had she been plain Miss Cleghorn (which was really her name) she would have made some honest fellow a capital wife. Now, imagine this gentle, modest, amiable young woman thrust by circumstances into the leadership of a clique of scheming, opera bouffe royalists and forced to enter all sorts of shady conspiracies and to sign all manner of ridiculous pronunciamentos! It was a role that was wholly antipathetic to her nature, and she writhed under it, She asked for nothing better than to be allowed to drop into obscurity, get married and look after her home; but fate ordained it otherwise, and to almost the end of her short young life she was dragged from pillar to post as a preposterous lay figure and 'claimant' to the purple. Uneasy fies the head that wears a crown—or aspires to wear one, even though it be nothing more than the gingerbread crown of a cannibal island."

attitudes. Suddenly the structure was enveloped in a blinding glare, there was a crashing of splintering wood followed by a fearful roll of thunder. Every man in the building had been more or less affected by the shock, but Mr. Putnam was rendered unconscious, and it was at first thought he could not live. A horse which was tied in the doorway of the barn was killed outright. The bolt which struck the building must have been of the forked variety as the barn was hit in two places and set on fire, but the blaze was extinguished. Dr. F. D. Putnam of Auburn, who is a brother of the injured man, was summoned to attend

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 12 .- A crowded car of the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad swung off the track at High and Adam streets, and the car slewed around until, when it stopped, it lay across the tracks and four feet of the rear end of it hung suspended over the street. At that point the elevated structure is very high, and if the car had not stopped just when it did much loss of live might have resulted. As it were there was a panic among the passengers. Women shrieked and men rushed pell-mell to the front of the end of the car, which was directly over the board walk down the centre of the tracks. The passengers were reassured by the trainmen and bundled out of the car in haste. All trains on both tracks were stalled for over an hour and all brooklypites that do business in New York via the elevated road were compelled to walk long distances and were greatly delayed in reaching their places of business. No one was injured.

The Tolna had been visiting the larger of the Solomon Islands, the Count taking many chances to secure photographs of head bunting battles and Cannibal feasts, when the savage models developed sudden and flerce hostility. The Count and his party became suspicious of them just in time and, returning to the yacht, were fortunate in getting a favorable wind. As it was, the canoes of the cannibals pursued them for many miles.

Binghamton, Aug. 14.-In the prescace of twelve hundred people at Owego, N. Y., David McCabe plunged from a blazing balloon, half a mile in the air, and, clinging to a partly un-folded parachute, landed in the river, slightly burned and badly scared. The mouth of the hot-air balloon was noticed to be smouldering as McCabe cast off. He struggled to free the parachute, but before he succeeded the bag was a mass of flames and had begun to fall. He took a chance jumping into space, and his weight broke the cord holding the parachute.

Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The weather was cold and rainy here yesterday, and the President and Mrs. McKinley and the rest of the Presidential party remained in their apartments all day. The President reviewed the Twenty-sixth Regiment at Plattsburg Barracks to-day.

San Francisco, Aug. 15 .- William L. Strong, ex-mayor of New York and president of the Protective Tariff League, has arrived here from the east. He has come to meet his son, Major Putnam Bradlee Strong, who was a volunteer officer on the staff of Gen. ## Nearly 58 Years Old!

It's a long life, but devotion to the true nterests and prosperity of the American People has won for it new friends as the the years rolled by and the original members of their family passed to their reward, and these admirers are loyal and steadfast to-day, with their faith in its teachings, and confidence in the information which it brings to their homes and firesides.

As a natural consequence it enjoys in its old age all the vitality and vigor of its youth, strengthened and ripened by the experiences of over half a century. It has lived on its merits, and on the cordial sup-port of progressive Americans.

It is the New York Weekly Tribune, acknowledged the country over as the leading. National Family Newspaper.

Recognizing its value to those who desiae all the news of the State and Nation, the publishers of THE GENOA TRIBUNE (your own favorite home paper) have entered into an alliance with the New York Weekly Tribune which enables them to furnish both papers at the trifling cost of $1.25 per year.

Every farmer and every villager owes to himself, to his family and to the community in which he lives a cordial support of his local newspaper, as it works constantly and untiringly for his interests in every wa, brings to his home all the news and happening of his neighborhood, the doings of his friends, the condition and prospects for different crops, the prices in home markets, and, in fact, a weekly visitor which should be found in every wide-awake, progressive family.

Just think of it! Both of these papers for only $1.25 a year. Send all subscriptions to THE TRIBUNE, Genoa, N. Y.

Many Head of Stock Killed and Great Damage Done to Property.

LIGHTNING KILLS THREE.

Thinois, Indiana, Michigan Iowa and Wisconsin Suffer Severely From Wind and Rain

Twenty-Five Dwellings Moved From Their Foundations at Bessemer, Mich.-Five Ships Wrecked Off the Australian Coast-Relief Seut to Sufferers in Porto Rico.

Chicago, Aug. 15.-In a storm which swept this city Thomas A. Edwards was drowned. Stanley E. McGraw, his companion, was rescued from their overturned sailboat a mile out in Lake Michigan.

According to dispatches received from points in Illinois, Indiana, Michgan, Iowa and Wisconsin, a great deal of damage was done. In some places there was loss of life due to lightning and the loss in crops and destroyed buildings reaches a heavy figure. Those killed are Collins, a farm hand, near Harvard, Ill., struck by lightning, and Frank Stickmey, aged seventeen, struck by lightsing, near Janesville.

In many places stock was killed. A large party gathered in a new barn preparatory to dedicating it with a dance. Lightning demolished the structure and injured several of those inside. An icehouse belonging to the Knickerbocker Company, of Chicago, was burned by lightning at Elgin.

At Janesville, Wis., the house of L. C O'Brien was demolished by lightning. All members of the family were absent at a picnic, and thus their lives were saved.

At Bessemer, Mich., 25 dwellings were moved from their foundations by the wind and flood. Corn and small grain in stack was flattened out everywhere, and the loss to farmers will foot up thousands of dollars.

Wind, rain and lightning caused an aggregate loss of many thousands of dollars in various parts of the State of Michigan, but no serious damage is reported from any one section.

Five Ships Wrecked at Sea.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 14.—Terrible the Australian coast, according to advices recieved here.

Tive ships foundered at sea or were wrecked and more than 100 lives were lost. The City of York, an iron ship of 1,170 tons, went ashore at Rottnest Isl-

The wreck of the Carlisle Castle was the most frightful that occurred on the coast for two years. Thirty-three persons from among the passengers are missing, and while many were drowned many more were eaten by sharks.

The Augsburg was carrying a cargo of herses along the coast. The stalls were torn down by the great masses of water that came in over the deck and a large number of the animals were drowned.

Two other unknown ships were wrecked in the storm and a large numher of passengers were lost.

Ships Sail with Relief.

Washington, Aug. 14.-The response to Secretary Root's appeal for assistance for the hurricane sufferers in Porto Rico has been of a more generous nature than the War Department had an-ticipated, and so many articles of food, clothing, etc., have been given that two transports will be required to take the donations to Ponce from New York. These transports left New York to-day and will proceed with all haste possible to the stricken country.

Money contributions have also been forwarded and more will be sent from time to time during the week. It is now believed that at least half a million dollars will be sent from this country to the unfortunate people in the West In-dies before next Monday. The suffer-sing there is reported to be of an indescribable nature, and the conditions are such that they appeal to the generosity of every one to give what they can to and in relieving the distress of those fortunate enough to be spared from death by the terrible storm.

Steamer Sailing Toward the Storm.

Key West, Fia., Aug. 14.—A heavy wind prevailed here. The steamer Oli-wette, of the Plant line, did not leave on her regular trip for Havana and is still in port. The steamer Lampasas arrived from Galveston and sailed for New York. Fears are expressed that she wil catch the West Indian hurricane which

Barge Sinks At Her Dock.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 14.—The barge Lizzie Crandall, loaded with coal, sank at the Wethersfield dock, several miles from this city, and Capt. F. M. Tuttle and his family barely escaped drowning. The boat was all right when the captain inspected her at midnight. He was awoke early and found water tricksing into the cabin. He woke his wife and child and they reached the dock fast as the barge sank. There is a susicion the barge was scuttled.

Silver Safely Stored in New Mint.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—The last consument of silver dollars from the old mint to the vault of the new building. Sixteenth and Spring Garden streets, was made this morning, so that now all of the 68,000,000 silver dollars that secure the silver certificates are asfely stored in the receptacles from which it is probable they will not be taken for is probable they will not be taken for

Weman Cheated by Shell Workers.

Chleago, Aug. 14.-Anna Nelson has sworn out a warrant in which she al-leges she was defrauded out of $27 on an excursion steamer Gordon by "shell

Money to patent good ideas may be secured by our aid. THE PATENT ERCORD, Baltimore, M.I.

FIRE CAUSED A STAMPEDE

25,000 Persons were at Elks' Fair When Booths Burned.

Rochester, Aug. 15.-The Elks' carnival and street fair at East Main and Goodman streets, was the scene of the wildest excitement when fire broke out in one of the booths. In a few minutes the main thoroughfare was a mass of fiames. The booths, which lined the streets on either side, were lightly constructed of rough hemlock lumber, and, being profusely decorated with bunting, were of the most inflammable character.

The fire originated in the stall occur.

The fire originated in the stall occu-pled by the Post-Express. Flames spread with the greatest rapidity, and it was feared at first that the entire eastern section of the city was doomed. Fully 25,000 persons were on the grounds at the time the fire started. Those near the fire seemed crazed with fright, and their stampede to other parts of the grounds created a tempo-rary panic. Had it not been for the police much loss of life would have resulted. As it was many persons were injured, but all were able to go to their homes with the exception of Patrolman Kelly, who was burned about the arms and face in his heroic attempt to extinguish the flames.

Sixty-two booths were destroyed in all. The loss is said to be about $50,000. In the exhibit of Ward's Natural Science Museum many valuable specimens

PEOPLE MUCH EXCITED.

Believed That a Plot For the Overthrow of the Government Was Discovered by Officials

Police Are Everywhere and Coleflicts Are Frequent-The Bellef Expressed That General Mercier's Testimony as Good as Acquitted Captain Dreyfus.

Rennes, Aug. 15. - Just as the dramatic session of the Dreyfus court martial was ended news was received that Paul Deroulede, Marcel-Habert, Jules to Close ont soon and Guerin and fifteen other Nationalist leaders had been arrested in Paris and its suburbs, and will be arraigned before the High Court, accused of plotting against the state.

Hearing this, excited people filled the streets, shouting, "Vive l'Armee!" or uttering counter cries, "Vive la Republique! Police are everywhere, conflicts are frequent, and more collisions between the partisans are expected. The news is regarded as so important that many prominent men are hurrying to Paris. Telephone and telegraph 52 East State St. offices are besleged.

These arrests follow the attempted overthrow of the Republican Government, to accomplish which Deroulede's coup on the day of President Faure's funeral was unsuccessful. Despite the verdict acquitting Deroulede and Mar-cel-Habert of that attempted coup. Waldeck-Rosseau has conducted a secret investigation since he came into power. It has been rumored several times that a Bonapartist plot was discovered, but until now no action by the government showed it had proof of a revolutionary plot.

The Nationalists here regard Deroulede's sensational arrest as the final effort of the Dreyfusards to dictate the decision of the court martial. Men of other parties think the Ministers must have obtained evidence that a second coup was in preparation, aimed to stop the trial of Dreyfus, and so to escape revelations otherwise inevitable.

It is generally conceded here that the Captain was as good as acquitted at the trial, and the day's events only bore out predictions. Gen. Mercier, the prisoner's most bitter enemy, took the witness stand to give in detail his alleged proofs of the Captain's guilt. Dreyfus listened calmly until the witness was through, and then turned on him with such a roar of pent-up anger that it moved those present to cheers. It was an ex-

PILLOWS UNWHOLESOME.

You Should Train Yourself to Sleep With ent a Pillow if You Wish Health.

It is hardly likely that the pillow was invented by any one in particular. It was in the first instance, there is every reason to believe, a very rational insti-tution, and consisted of a small pad upon which to rest the head, when beds were by no means such luxurious affairs as they are to-day.

The pillows in use to-day are responsible for many evils, which you may be willing to admit when they are pointed out to you, and if you would but test the efficacy of their disuse, you would become as ardent an advocate of the custom as the writer. There is no greater fallacy than the belief that a great downy pillow conduces to restfulness and health in sleeping. You sink into its embraces and delude yourself that you are comfortable, with your head resting upon the dear, soft, cosy mass of feathers. Yet, if the pillow slips away from you in your sleep, do you miss its seeming-ly soothing influence? And if you can sleep thus comfortably and not know it, why should you not have the courage to put it away altogether?

The pillow may seem to breathe out beautiful dreams to you; but, while it is beguiling your attention with is seeming restfulness, it may be pushing your ears out of shape, and it is certainly making wrinkles in your neck and deepening the hollows over the chest by forcing the head foreward. It may seem a little thing in itself, but happening every night it will rob you of the beauty your neck would naturally have, and nullify the good of any exercise you may take. Aside from the benefits to be derived in a shapely neck and chin, to sleep without a pillow, it will conduce to health and greater restfulness. It may seem strange at first, even a bit painful; but if persevered in you will soon overcome this, and the good to be derived will soon repay you.

John's Family Extinct_

One of the best known religious communities for women in the Episcopal Church in this country and the Church. of England are the Sisters of St. John the Baptist, or the "Clewer Sisters," as they call them in England. The mother house is in the northwest corner of Stuyvesant Square, New York.

They have a summer house in the Catskills, and the ritualist clergy of New York are all passing on a story which came down from there and circulated as rapidly as good jokes do among the religious. Two sisters were passing along the road in their quaint habits. A stranger was driving along, and looked on them with amazement. He had never seen anybody dressed so outside of the family pictorial Bible. The next man he met he asked; 'What kind o' wimmen folks is them I seen down the road a piece, all in black, with a white thing round their face and neck, dressed kind o' Scriptu-

An Aurograph Tablecloth. At a famous restaurant in Vienna is a remarkable autograph table cloth, destined to be in the future a priceless possession, and already greatly coveted by curio collectors. It was the clever idea of the wife of the proprietor to thus perpetuate the names of royal, titled or otherwise notable pa-trons of the establishment. With this end in view a square . satin to a (plain, without figure) was hemstitched and heavily edged with rich lace and only used in entertaining patrons known to fame. It seemed a trifling favor, after the excellent menu and perfect service enjoyed to write (as politely requested), one's name on the snowy surface of the dinner cloth. Today it is inscribed with the signatures. of almost all the reigning sovereigns of Europe, the members of the House of Hapsburg, and many of the most famous celebrities in the world of art, music and letters.—Table Talk.

We find the following account of a singular freak in nature in the Trumansburg Free Press: "A gentleman in the fruit tree business gives us an account of a singular freak of nature. According to him, Mr. David Lane, of Hayt's Corners, has a seedling peach tree that in the years '97 and '98 bore peaches, not a large amount, but of good size. This year the tree is fairly loaded with plums, not tied on with a string, but growing as naturally as if they belonged there. By what right or authority these plums have usurped the peaches on the parent stem, we leave to scientists to figure

WHY WE ALTER AND REBUILD THIS STORE! A SMALL BUSINESS
Selling goods at all you can get for them, grumbling all the while at high rent, business and living expenses. The Old Method

A LARGE BUSINESS Selling goods cheap at a small reasonable profit because the large business enables buying in larger quantities, and consequently buying cheaper. The New Meth'd

The larger business costs so little more than the small, that the entire expense is reduced many percentages, the living expenses are important items to everyone and cost no more when a large business is being done than small, to everyone and cost no more when a large business is being done than small, consequently merchants can sell a large lot of goods at a smaller advance more profitably than a small lot at a large profit. We tried the old method 14 years, the new one year, and before the first year is over we are obliged either to go back to the old method or to find a larger store. Our neighbor "E. J. Burritt" wanted to get out; we grasped the chance and rented his store in addition to the old quarters and thus obtained enough room to do the business of the "new method." We ascribe the past year's large business because people advertised us who wear our goods which at the time of purchase they may think only worth what they paid for them, but as time rolls on and the clothes don't change, but keep looking good, don't rip, don't muss, they gradually begin to believe they bought a bargain. They try it again, they recommend their family and friends, and by always furnishing good clothing at our small prices, each of them in turn recommends others—that's what makes a large business. That's what compelled us to get a large store. We are now at it, and will be all fixed up in our new quarters by August 20. And when we get this big store finished we want you to drop in to see us, look around in the new place, wish us success if you like, but always be assured that you are welcome here, whether you dome to look; to see what a certain thing when you need it will cost you, or whether you come to shop or visit.

MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME-YOU ARE WELCOME. We want your good will, and if honorable business methods will do it, we'll have your trade and shall hold it.
