

Pan-American Outlook.

The Big Exposition Promises to Exceed All Expectations.

Exhibits From All the States and Countries of the Western Hemisphere—More Than a Score of Great Buildings to Shelter the Displays.

The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo during the summer of 1901 will be not only big, but beautiful. In many ways it will excel every similar enterprise in the history of the world, and chief among its merits will be the fact that everything can be easily seen and comprehended. System and originality are conspicuous in every detail. The revised plan shows a plot comprising 350 acres. From north to south of accommodating 250,000 people. North of this, corresponding with the perpendicular of the T, are the Court of Fountains and the Plaza, which reach almost to the northern limits of the grounds. On either side of the Court of Fountains are the subordinate courts known as the Court of Cypresses and Court of Lillies. These several courts have a combined area of 33 acres, which is far more extensive than the grounds are about a mile and a quarter and from east to west half a mile. The grounds are situated in the northern part of Buffalo and are easily reached either direct or by transfer ticket by all the electric car lines constituting the city's perfect street railway system. On the northern side are the tracks of the New York Central Belt Line, to which the 26 steam railways entering Buffalo will have access during the Exposition. The southern portion of the grounds is a part of Delaware Park and contains a lake of irregular shape more than half a mile long, indicated by letter B on the ground plan. This part of the Exposition plot is already very beautiful, the city of Buffalo having spent many thousands of dollars in planting shrubs and trees of many rare species and in producing landscape effects that give to the eye a beautiful vista from every point of view.

The main southern entrance of the Exposition is on Lincoln Parkway, indicated by the letter A. At the left as you enter will be the beautiful Albright Art Gallery, built of white marble and costing upward of $350,000. This is the gift of a citizen of Buffalo, Mr. J. J. Albright, and will be a permanent fireproof building for public uses devoted to art. On the right is the beautiful new boathouse and shelthe courts of any former exposition, and, on account of the unusual area, greater opportunity is given for elaborate and beautiful decoration.

In all the courts are to be large pools into which beautiful cascades and wonderful fountains will throw their crystal streams. To the water features will be added the garden effects. These will comprise large sunken gardens, with formal beds of rare and beautiful flowers, and many plants of a highly decorative character will be displayed throughout the courts. The grounds outside the main group of buildings are also to be richly adorned with horticultural and floral features. The horticultural exhibits, to which about seven acres are devoted in the southern part of the grounds, will contribute much to the decorative effect. In this exhibit will be over 500 beds, many of them containing hundreds of plants of a single variety of flowers.

The exterior walls of all the buildings of the Exposition are to be of staff. All cornices, corners, window openings and entrances are receiving very elaborate adornment in modeled plastic work. This ornamentation is of a far more elaborate and intricate character than heretofore used on any exposition. The roofs of all the buildings are to be of red tile, and the outer walls are to be painted in harmonious er erected by the city of Buffalo. Crossing the bridge between the lake and the North Bay, the New York State building may be seen on the north bank of the bay. This also is of white marble, fireproof and a permanent structure. It will be devoted, after the Exposition, to the uses of the Buffalo Historical Society.

Continuing up the slight grade across the bridge, we now come to the "Approach" (D), where we get the first broad view of the wonderful group of buildings devoted to the various exhibit divisions of the Exposition.

It will be noted by reference to the ground plan that the buildings are grouped around a system of courts which have been aptly described as in the form of an inverted letter T. The transverse court, corresponding to the colors, giving a most pleasing effect to the eye.

This Exposition will stand pre-eminent in point of original sculpture. There will be more than 125 groups of magnificent original works by some 30 or more American sculptors of note. This grand scheme is under the personal direction of Karl Bitter, who was in charge of a similar work at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago.

Owing to the nearness of Niagara Falls, with its unlimited power, the large area of the courts and the arrangement of the buildings about these courts, it has been made possible to present an electrical display far more elaborate and grand than any before conceived. Some 5,000 horsepower and more than 200,000 incandescent electric ful illumination. The centerpiece of this display will be the Electric Tower, a structure of superlative beauty standing between the Plaza and the Court of Fountains. This glorious work, designed by John Galea Howard, is 875 feet high. In its southern face is a beautiful cascade, 30 feet wide and 70 feet high, falling upon a terraced base. This cascade and all the fountains of all the courts will be richly illuminated at night in a great variety of colors, giving an effect of fantastic and enchanting beauty.

Standing in the Fore Court (E) and looking north, immediately in front, is the Triumphal Bridge (G). This bridge will be one of the most beautiful works of the Exposition, having four great piers surrounded and surmounted by sculptured groups modeled by Mr. Bitter and others. Crossing the bridge, we may see on the extreme right the three great buildings erected by the national government for the shelter of its extensive exhibits gathered from all departments. On the extreme left are the Forestry and Mines, Horticulture and Graphic Arts buildings. At the northeast corner of the Esplanade and Court of Fountains is the Ethnology building, and on the opposite corner is the Temple of Music. Next north, on the right, is the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building and on the left the Machinery and Transportation building. North of the Mall, on the right, is the Agriculture building and on the left the Electricity building. In the center is the Electric Tower. In the northeast corner of the grounds is the Stadium, with its large entrance building (Z). Opposite, on the west side of the Plaza, is the large entrance to the Midway. On the north is the Propy-

This will be the center for musical interests at the great All-American Exposition. Music lovers will naturally wend their way to this building very soon after arrival upon the grounds, and both here and from the band stands in the great Esplanade and in the Plaza they will always find some entertainment in progress which will appeal to their love of musical art. The Music Temple is well along toward completion. Its architecture is a free treatment of the Spanish Renaissance, it being octagonal in form, with pavilions at the corners. The grand entrance is at the corner of the Esplanade and Court of Fountains, the spacious courts upon which most of the principal buildings of the Exposition have their frontage. The cornice and balustrade are of elaborate composition, the latter bearing names familiar to the musical world. The interior of the temple will be particularly fine in its sculptural and color decorations. The exterior of the building will be ornate in architectural features and groups of sculpture designed to illustrate the purpose and character of the building. A dome whose crown is 136 feet above grade and whose interior is brilliant with golden tints and other rich hues gives an imposing finish to the structure. Star shaped windows in the drum of the dome admit abundant light to the large auditorium. This will seat 1,200 persons, and with the additional seating capacity afforded in the balconies fully 2,000 persons can be accommodated. The decorations of the interior will illustrate such subjects as the grand divisions of Music, Oratorio Grand Opera, Symphonic Music, etc. The sculptor will typify such subjects lea, or monumental entrance, and beyond this the great building but recently found to be necessary for transportation exhibits and, forming a part of this, the splendid railway station. Two new buildings, one devoted to dairy products and the other to agricultural machinery, are being erected, but not shown in the plan. The live stock display is east of the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building. In the southeastern part of the grounds are the State and Foreign buildings, the Six Nations Indian exhibit, the Philippines, Ordinance and Forestry exhibits.

The exhibits to be made at the Pan-American Exposition embrace every line of human effort. They have been classified as follows: Electrical Machinery and Appliances; Fine Arts; Painting, Sculpture and Decoration; Graphic Arts; Typography, Lithography, Drawing, Engraving and Bookbinding; Liberal Arts; Education, Engineering, Public Works, Hygiene and Sanitation, Constructive Architecture, Music and the Drama; Ethnology, Archaeology; Agriculture, Foods and Accessories, Agricultural Machinery and Implements, Dairy Products and Appliances; Horticulture, Viticulture, Floriculture; Live Stock; Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Poultry and Pet Stock; Forestry and Forest Products; Fisheries, Fish Products and Apparatus; Mines and Metallurgy; Machinery, Manufacture, Railways, Vessels, Vehicles, Ordinance; exhibits from states and countries in hemisphere. One of architectural feaas religious music, lyric music, gay music, heroic music, etc.

The great organ for the Temple of Music, which is to cost $10,000, is under construction by Emmons Howard & Son, and already there is much eagerness among the leading organizers of the United States to have the privilege of playing upon it during the Exposition. Two recitals by prominent exponents of this branch of musical art will be given each day. Concerts by the leading instrumental organizations of America and Europe will be given every day during the progress of the Exposition in the Music Temple and from the band stands in the Plaza Esplanade and other parts of the grounds. In connection with the subject of music at the Pan-American Exposition mention should be made of the notable attractions to music lovers to be provided at the great Saengerfest of the North American Saengerbund which will open in Buffalo on Monday evening, June 24, 1901.

No feature of the Pan-American Exposition will be of more importance than the exhibit of mines and metallurgy. The building to be devoted to these exhibits is one of a group of three magnificent structures, arranged in the form of a horseshoe, at the western boundary of the Esplanade. The Mines building is the southernmost of the group and is connected with the Horticultural building by one of the conservatories which flank the Horticultural building on the north and south. It is 150 feet square, and

The New York World,

THREE-A-WEEK EDITION—AS GOOD TO YOU AS A DAILY AND YOU GET IT AT THE PRICE OF A WEEKLY.

It furnishes more at the price than any other newspaper published in America. Its news service covers all the globe and is equaled by that of few dailies. Its reports from the Boer war have not been excelled in thoroughness and promptness, and with the presidential campaign now in progress it will be invaluable. Its political news is absolutely impartial. This fact makes it of especial value at this time.

If you want to watch every move of the great political campaign take the Thrice-a-Week World. If you want to keep your eye on the Trusts—and they need watching—take the Thrice-a-Week World. If you want to know all the foreign developments, take the Thrice-a-Week World.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the GENOA TRIBUNE to

ONE ON THE COLONEL.

He Was Convicted by Overwhelming Circumstantial Evidence of Foraging.

After the seven days' fighting in front of Richmond, Va., we were allowed a short rest under the protection of our gunboats at Harrison's Landing, on the James river. From there we were ordered to Yorktown, on the York river. Before leaving camp, however, the usual orders were read prohibiting any foraging on the way, which order was received by the "rank and file" like a "cold bath on a frosty morning," inasmuch as we had lived on short rations of salt bacon and hard-tack for many days, and fresh meats of any kind usually found on our way would have come very acceptable, writes a veteran, in the National Tribune.

We broke camp and moved over the Chickahominy on pontoon bridges, and late in the day halted for a night's rest on a fine plantation apparently deserted, yet showing signs of life in the numerous ducks and geese in sight. Now, ducks and geese are a main attraction to the average soldier, and while the soldiers were cooking their bacon and coffee a few of us, under pretense of going for water and regardless of orders against "foraging," took a stroll towards the buildings in sight.

The first to attract our attention was a fine patch of sweet potatoes, which we found in fine condition for harvesting. We soon had our haversacks well filled with the toothsome tubers. Next we explored the outbuildings for stray members of the feathered tribes, but without success, and we were about to return when we came upon a comparatively new pig pen about four by six and three planks high, with a floor in it, and underneath a large quantity of new straw two fine porkers about six to eight weeks old. It took us but a few moments to slip under the pen two poles, and manning each end we commenced our homeward march with high anticipations of a grand treat when all the officers should be sleeping the sleep of innocence and ignorance.

We had nearly reached our picket line, where we had no doubt a few sweet potatoes would pass us through, when who, above all others, should come galloping up but our own colonel. Halting at our side, he inquired what we were carrying into camp. We very humbly informed the colonel that it was merely a box pen that would make a very convenient bedroom, and hoped we had done nothing against the rules. The colonel, not being quite satisfied with our answer, inquired what was in the pen. Of course, we told him, "nothing but straw for our bedding." He thereupon rode closer, and, leaning over, looked into the pen, exclaiming: "Humph! Two of as fine porkers as I've seen in a long time. But, boys, you must turn them loose, for it is strictly against the orders to forage." He then wheeled and rode away, and we, setting down the pig pen, then and there held a council of war whereby we could not only have roast pig ourselves, but also fresh meat for the whole command.

After ways and means were properly settled we took up "the poor man's burden," and proceeded to camp without further trouble. About nine o'clock or after "taps," a company of about 100 silently formed a circle at a respectful distance around the colonel's tent, having with much force (?) disarmed and taken prisoner the guard on duty before the tent, and then, procuring a long cord, one of the pigs was tied by its hind leg and slipped under the colonel's tent. As soon as the snout of the porker was released he began skirmishing around the enemy's headquarters, and on finding himself fast by the cord set up a squeal that equaled a "call to arms," and the circle outside was augmented by hundreds.

The colonel made a leap for the open air minus all outer garments, even to his epaulets, and found himself surprisingly demanded what was meant by the uproar. He was very meekly informed that "hearing a squealing in this direction, we were anxious to know who were violating the rules against foraging." The colonel, seeing the point, ordered all to their quarters, promising them that the next day rations of fresh beef would be issued to the whole command, and he kept his promise.

The two pigs were nicely dressed and roasted, and next morning one found its way to the colonel's table with the compliments of company H.

Going South.

In going South for the winter, many Northern people are selecting a half way ground before going to Florida, and this stream of winter visitors have flown toward the high sand hills of North Carolina, until they have built up a real city amid the long leaf pines, and as the trains pass Southern Pines, (the Yankee town) as it is called on account of the enterprise of its citizens, passengers crowd to the doors to see the wonderful growth of this beautiful place.

A large number of those going out from this section travel via the Old Dominion line of steamers, which give them a delightful and healthful voyage. Those who have gone that route, say they prefer it to an all rail route, as there is no dust and dirt to contend with.

At Southern Pines, there is one fruit orchard, started by Northern people, that contains over one hundred thousand fruit trees, plants and vines.

Be sure to go via Southern Pines on your way to Florida, as it is the shortest route. For information write J. T. Patrick, Pinebluff, N. C.

Ex-President Cleveland is writing for the Saturday Evening Post a series of strong articles which will appear in the magazine during the winter months. Some of these papers will deal with political affairs, and others with the personal problems of young men. They will be Mr. Cleveland's first utterances in any magazine on the questions of the day since he left the White House. Mr. Cleveland's opening paper, which is to appear in The Saturday Evening Post of Dec. 22, discusses in a masterly manner a most important phase of our national politics.

Mortimore King was home from Ithaca Christmas, also Chester King from Auburn.

The funeral of Claudius and Netus Jump was largely attended at the Presbyterian church on Sunday, Rev. W. C. Brass officiating. Interment in King Ferry cemetery. George B. Shank, who lived at the Jump home, died at 12 o'clock Tuesday night. His age was 37 years and 9 months.

The condition of Miss Susan Jump is also considered serious and she is not expected to recover. She rallied for a few days and, it is reported that on being told of the state of affairs, she stated that the members of the family were not feeling well last Wednesday night and she made some ginger tea (as she supposed) of which all of them drank, but possibly she made a mistake and used some white hellebore which was kept on the same shelf. This seems to be a very reasonable solution of the mystery.

North Lansing.

Dec. 26—A very happy New Year to the editor and family is the wish of your correspondent.

The church fair passed off very pleasantly and the music on Wednesday evening was grand. Skinner's orchestra was highly appreciated, as also was the Male Quartet from Genoa. We hope they may be called here again. The net proceeds were $100.

Miss Edith Brooks is spending her vacation with her sister Josephine in Ithaca.

Mrs. A. A. Miller and mother of Genoa were the guests of Mrs. M. Linderman last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Spangler attended the funeral of his father in Fleming last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fox Holden still remain here for their vacation. Mr. Holden is in quite poor health. Geo. Cobb from Olean is their guest for a couple of weeks.

Rev. C. E. Burr of Groton will preach in the Baptist church here next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Leach of Locke occupied the pulpit last Sunday.

The children and grandchildren of Mrs. Sarah Decamp met with her at her home on Christmas day. They had not all met together in three years. They had a very enjoyable visit and a sumptuous dinner was served.

One hundred and three tickets were sold at the Grangers dance on Tuesday evening.

Will Decamp and wife gave a Christmas dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Sharpsteen of Groton were among the guests.

Delmer Singer and family spent Christmas with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Singer.

Ledyard.

Dec. 26.—The improvements at the M. E. church are about completed. They cost over $280.

Watch Night will be observed at the Ledyard church this year in an end-of-the-century service, beginning at 8:30 p. m. Dec. 31. An interesting program is being prepared. All are cordially invited. The pastor will be assisted by Rev. H. R. Shoemaker of North Lansing, who will also be present at the meetings which are to be held during the rest of the week.

"TRIBUNE Job Printing is all right."

The whole thing

Ithaca is it, and it is going to be more and more the center of things, along mercantile as well as educational lines. Not a blessed need but can be met in our beautiful city. Traveling men say our merchants are more progressive, stocks more complete, stores handsomer and prices lower than in any city up to twice its size, in the state. Mercy! how good it did make us feel, that whispered remark made in our store by an attorney to his partner: "These folks sell goods lower than New York houses; I looked them through thoroughly when down last week." Our out-of-town trade has been most satisfactory. People who come here from a distance appreciate our system of having absolutely one price to all. They also appreciate having goods properly crated, burlapped, shipped and freight prepaid to their depots; also having a full assortment of every kind of Housefurnishings from which to make their selections.

THE VILLAGE NOTES

NEWS PICKED UP BY THE TRIBUNE REPORTERS.

What Has Happened in Genoa During the Past Seven Days—An Interesting Page.

—Bert Banker of Buffalo was home for the holidays.

—C. F. Waldo of Cortland spent several days this week at home.

—J. B. Young of Poplar Ridge was in town on business Saturday.

—Miss Hettie Close is home from Philadelphia for the Holiday vacation.

—S. T. Kimbark was in Jamesville on business one day last week.

—D. G. Ellison of Five Corners made this office a pleasant call on Monday.

—Miss Grace Whitcomb of Lake Ridge was calling on Genoa friends Saturday.

—W. W. Potter and wife of Auburn were among those who came home for Christmas.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. M. White of Syracuse spent Sunday and Monday at O. M. Avery's.

—Byron Hunt, W. D. Norman and A. A. Miller spent the Christmas time with their families here.

—The Pan American Exposition article on the second page this week will be continued in our next issue.

—Mrs. W. C. Rogers of Annapolis Junction, Md., has arrived at the home of her father, A. A. Mastin, for a visit.

—Wm. Smith and family have moved into D. Mitchell's tenant house at Goodyears, where he has a good job until spring.

—The best wishes of the season to the friends and readers of the TRIBUNE. May the new century and the new year bring you health, wealth and happiness.

—Cards announce a social dance at the King Ferry hotel hall on Friday evening, January 4, to which a cordial invitation has been extended to one and all.

—Are your January bills all made out? Then prepare for the exchange with others who have been making the same preparation for the balancing of the accounts of 1900.

—Mr. and Mrs. John McAllister of DeRuyter were guests of their daughter, Mrs. R. H. Ames, a few days this week. This was Mr.

—Read the "specials."

—Mrs. Skinner of Leroy has been quite sick at the home of her son, Dr. Skinner, in this village.

—Fred Armstrong who has been visiting relatives at East Genoa, has returned to his home in Rochester.

—We have had several subscriptions to the TRIBUNE for Christmas presents. The supply is unlimited and we should be pleased to enter many more orders for the same purpose.

—Dorr C. Smith, proprietor of the Cortland house, and well known in this vicinity, died suddenly from pleuro pneumonia at Cortland last Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hewitt of this place attended the funeral on Monday.

—Farmers have plenty of time in winter to discuss matters of benefit to themselves and their fellow men. Therefore, would it not be a good plan for them to organize a good roads club in every town?—Livingston Republican. A timely hint, and the sooner farmers act upon it, the better.

—Tungabai Devdher of India, a student at North Chili, N. Y., and the guest of Miss Ada Bower, will speak about her native country at the Presbyterian church Sunday night. Tungabai is conversant with seven languages. After graduating next summer she will return to teach among her own people.

—We notice that the maps given away by Foster, Ross & Baucus contain among other things a dotted line extending from the county line north to Auburn. This is marked "proposed railroad." If the people residing along the line could be brought to see the matter in the same light, there would be a chance of the road materializing into something more than a proposition.

—The fair held at the rink last week was well attended and was a success in every way. Supper was served to a large number and the articles for sale were nearly all disposed of. Good music was furnished by the Male Quartet and several piano selections were interspersed with the reading of the fair "newspaper" which was quite funny. The receipts of the evening were about $65.

—The Christmas tree and entertainment at the Presbyterian church Monday evening was attended by a large crowd and all must have been well pleased with the songs, recitations and exercises which were given by the children in such a praiseworthy manner. The music by the choir was very fine and is seldom, if ever, equalled in this vicinity. The appearance of Santa Claus at just the right time caused no little excitement among the younger ones. He and his assistants were kept quite busy distributing the gifts which had been placed on the tree.

—Editor Stanton of Locke was in town Monday.

—M. C. Cranson of Groton was in town on business yesterday.

—Miss Lulu King of Binghamton was home for the Christmas time.

—School commissioner Manchester of Moravia was in town on business Saturday.

—Dr. M. J. Foran of Baltimore is spending a few days with friends in this vicinity.

—Miss Florence Loomis of McGraw is renewing acquaintances in this village.

—We understand that several Genoa young ladies are anxious to hold watch meetings next Monday night.

—Miss Nellie O'Brien of Heddens has been visiting her little friends, the Warren girls, the past week.

—Mrs. Mary Thayer, who has been suffering from heart trouble has somewhat improved.

—Miss Nellie Young of East Genoa sang at the firemen's fair at Locke last Thursday evening.

—Lester Fenner reports having sold $2000 worth of Osborne binders in one day at an agricultural show in west Australia.

—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fenner of Lake Ridge celebrated their crystal wedding on Christmas by inviting a number of friends to spend the day at their home.

—Some twenty or more of the neighbors and friends dropped in on Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Mead Wednesday evening, unannounced. They were made welcome, however, and passed a most enjoyable evening.

—Vance Avery has returned to the Rochester business college, after several days' vacation. He is considered by the faculty as one of the most promising students attending that institution. Excellent work is also being accomplished by Herman Taylor, another Genoa student at Rochestes.

—No subscriptions will hereafter be received at this office for the Syracuse Semi-Weekly Post Standard. The price has been raised to one dollar a year, with no commission, and we are informed by the publishers that as soon as current subscriptions have expired, the publication of the paper will be discontinued.

—The county legislature will probably finish their work today or tomorrow, and adjourn. It has been a harmonious session and the people of the towns of Venice, Scipio and Genoa have cause for great satisfaction in the work accomplished by their respective representatives. The assessed valuation in this town was decreased about $83,000; Venice was decreased about $67,119, and Scipio likewise some $7,378. Moravia is raised about $65,754 and Auburn is also increased about $585,230. This with the reduced tax rate will make the "white man's burden" a little easier next year. However, because of the increased town expenses, bond suit, etc., the benefits of the above reductions will scarcely be noticed. It is a foregone conclusion that Dr. F. A. Dudley will be re-elected supervisor of this town.

Annual Meeting

Of the Genoa Cemetery Association will be held at the store of O. M. Avery in Genoa village on the second day of January, 1901, at 7 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing officers and the transaction of other business. S. Howe, Secretary.

THE CIGARETTE PLAGUE.

Why the Little Roll of Paper and Tobacco Is So Demoralizing and Deadly.

Cigarette smoking was almost unknown in this country before the centennial exposition, in 1876, when it was made familiar to American eyes by exhibitors and visitors to the exposition from France, Italy and countries farther east. With the spontaneous and pernicious activity of most vicious habits, the practice of cigarette smoking took root, and developed in this country with marvelous rapidity, and within the last 12 or 15 years, especially, has reached the proportions of a veritable plague, which is rapidly burning out the constitutions of the American people.

The idea has been widely propagated that the cigarette contains so little tobacco and such pure tobacco that its effects cannot be extremely harmful, and that it may be used with impunity when the pipe, the cigar, or the quid would almost certainly induce disease. A recent defender of the cigarette maintains that it is harmless because the tobacco of which cigarettes are generally made contains only one and one-half per cent. of nicotine, while the tobacco used in the strongest cigars shows a proportion of nicotine amounting to eight per cent., or five times as much.

This argument is wholly delusive. The cigarette is the most injurious form of tobacco not because of the amount of nicotine it contains, but because of the enormous quantity which it introduces into the body. Nicotine does no one any harm so long as it remains in the cigar or the pipe or the cigarette; but when it is introduced into the blood and circulated through the system its mischievous work begins. The user of the pipe and the cigar smoker receive into the system but a small proportion of the nicotine contained in the original tobacco. In the use of the cigarette the conditions are such that probably almost the entire amount of nicotine contained in the wrapper is absorbed.—Good Health.

EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL.

The Ascribing of Food Properties to It Considered a Grave Scientific Error.

The well-known Viennese clinician, Prof. Max Kassowitz, asserts that the dogma concerning the nourishing and strengthening character of alcohol is one of the fatal errors of science. He holds the view that the majority of physicians take up an inconsistent position with regard to the use of alcohol, for the reason that while they are well aware of its dangerous and poisonous qualities, they nevertheless contribute to making permanent the false ideas concerning the value and effects of alcohol which are so generally disseminated. Kassowitz explains these inconsistencies on the ground that the teaching which considers alcohol a food, because it is burned in the organism, has held its ground in spite of many disregarded newer investigations which have shown its indefensibility. He is, therefore, of the opinion that the assumption ascribing food properties to alcohol based on simple theoretical consideration is a grave scientific error, the removal of which is the most important preliminary condition to an effectual battle against alcoholism.

Dr. Hermann Blocher, of Basle, Switzerland, comments upon Prof. Kassowitz' utterances, and discusses the matter from the standpoint of physiological experiment. He refers to the investigations of Miura, which indicate that alcohol belongs to the same group of substances as glycerin, lactic acid, butyric acid, and so forth, which are, indeed, burned in the animal body, but which, nevertheless, are not fit, even to the smallest extent, to take the place of necessary food in the preservation of the body. Miura found that the addition of alcohol to the food before its being taken not only causes no diminution of the nitrogen output, but does not prevent the loss of body material.—Medical Record.

It Sounded Awful.

A temperance lecturer was preaching on his favorite theme. "Now, boys, when I ask you a question you must not be afraid to speak up and answer me. When you look around and see all those fine houses, farms and cattle, do you ever think who owns them all now? Your fathers own them, do they not?"

"Yes, sir," shouted a hundred voices.

"Where will your fathers be in 20 years?"

"Dead," shouted the boys.

"That's right. And who will own this property then?"

"Us boys," shouted the archaic.

in going along the street notice the drunkards lounging around the public house door waiting for some one to treat them?"

"Yes, sir; lots of them."

"Well, where will they be in 20 years from now?"

"Dead," exclaimed the boys.

"And who will be the drunkards then?"

"Us boys."

Everybody was thunderstruck. It sounded awfully! It was awful, but it was true.—National Advocate.

SHOT AT FOR A BURGLAR.

Experience of the Reformed Inebriate That Sobered Him for Life.

"If I should ever appear on the platform as a temperance lecturer," said the man with the red mustache, "I could preach my most effective sermon on a text derived from my own experience. You wouldn't think, to look at me now, that I had ever been a tippler, but I have been, and it was the incident that turned my appetite away from the seductive bowl that I should work up as the strong point of my lecture.

"I was quite a young fellow then, and I was living in a boarding house, and four of the boarders I have special cause for remembering. These four were a man named Donley, who occupied a room on the fourth floor; a Miss Chapman and her maid, Elsie, who had a suite on the third floor, and a young dentist named Maverick, who had the rooms directly beneath Miss Chapman's. Although she lived in the house six months, the only thing any of us knew about Miss Chapman was that she had magnificent diamonds.

"One night in those days I got in about two a. m., more befuddled than usual. I stood on the steps while fumbling with the door key, which I was unable to fit into the lock, and while thus engaged a man hurried up the steps and addressed me.

"'Hello!' he said. 'How fortunate I am to find somebody else coming in at this time—and somebody with a key, too. I went out without mine, and I feared I should have to awaken everybody by ringing the bell.'

"Stupefied as I was, I didn't notice the man's appearance. Understanding him to say something about the key, I unquestionably took him for a boarder, and when the door finally yielded to my great endeavors I made no protest against his entering the house. He pushed in close behind me and went directly up the stairs. As for me, the effort of unlocking the door had been too much for me, and I sat down on a chair in the hall to regain my equilibrium. In the few minutes I rested there I must have dozed, for the next thing of which I was conscious was a succession of blood-curdling feminine screams from somewhere in the upper regions. Then I realized that something terrible was taking place, but, lacking both wit and strength to mount the stairs and offer assistance, I left the chair in the hall and stepped into the parlor and stood there wondering vaguely what would happen next. I had been standing there only a few seconds when a man's figure stole softly down the stairway and out at the front door. I understood, in a dull way, that I ought to try to stop the man, but my limbs and tongue were paralyzed, and I remained an inert, lifeless lump, thinking and hearing nothing but the wild shrieks of the woman above.

"In the meantime other inmates of the house were out. Donley, on the fourth floor, happened to have in his trunk a weapon that he had brought down from the country only a few weeks before. It was an old army revolver of .48 caliber and a foot and a half long. He was about to fire when he remembered that as a man and a Christian he ought to give even a burglar a chance for his life, and he leaned over the balustrade and asked: 'Who are you?'

"I heard his words distinctly and realized that he was speaking to me, but for the life of me I couldn't reply. Presently he said again: 'Who are you?' I really tried to speak then, but no sound escaped my lips.

"'I'll give you one more chance,' said Donley. 'If you don't answer me this time I'll blow you into the middle of Kingdom Come as quick as wink. Who are you?'

"What I suffered in those few moments no mortal can tell. I understood my name, but I was so thoroughly drunk that the enunciation of even one syllable was an utter impossibility. My legs were more pliable than my tongue, however, and as Donley fired they gave way beneath me and I sank to the floor just in time to escape the budget of ammunition stored away in the capacious revolver. I heard the bullet crash into the big mirror behind me, and then I found my voice.

"'Don't shoot again!' I cried. 'It is I, Donald Webster!'

"I was sick for two weeks after that. When I recovered they threatened to arrest me as an accomplice of the mysterious burglar; but as Miss Chapman and Elsie and the diamonds had disappeared there was nobody to push the suit, except the landlady, and she considerably agreed to let me off if I would pay for the mirror which Donley had shot into smithereens. I gladly paid with the determination never to pay for another under like circumstances. And that resolution I have religiously adhered to, for I had enough of a jamboree that night to last me a lifetime."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

LIVING IN THE PRESENT.

The Best Way of Being Prepared for the Life That Is to Come.

Living so as to get the most out of the present life is living so as to be best prepared for the life that is to come. This is not what is ordinarily understood to be our duty by those who claim that we must give up hope of joy or profit on earth if we would have joy and profit in Heaven. Yet the Bible, both the Old Testament and the New, plainly points out and declares that to make the most of the present and the fleeting is to make the best preparation for the future and eternal. The Lord says, by His ancient inspired messenger: "I am the Lord thy God, which teacheth thee to profit (not to lose now in order to gain by and by, but to profit now and ever), which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go." In one of Paul's inspired letters he affirms specifically: "Godliness (God-likeness) is profitable for all things (not merely for the future life, but as), having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come." Again, it is declared in the New Testament, as in explanation and renewed emphasis of the day of that salvation which is the brightest hope for sinners held out in both Old Testament and New, that it is not postponed until another life than this, but that "Behold, now is the day of salvation." He who chooses that which is best and most joyous for this life is sure of that which is best and most joyous in the life that is to come. He who is not already living as prepared for the eternal future has no real good or joy in the present, even if there were no future to be thought of or prepared for.—S. S. Times.

LADY BARBARA OF THE MANTELPIECE

By Albert Lee.

(Copyright, 1908, the Authors' Syndicate.)

LATE one afternoon toward the close of September Mr. William Minton Tappan alighted in front of Hadley Hall, the old Virginia mansion which he had leased for a year with the intention of settling down to the life of a country gentleman, if the estate proved to his liking. He was met by Uncle Pete, a friendly old house servant, who conducted him into the house, where Tappan was delighted at the old-fashioned and comfortable appearance of his surroundings. He ate the simple evening meal that had been prepared for him and then returned to the spacious library to smoke and rest after his ten-mile drive from the nearest railroad station.

This library pleased Tappan greatly. The tall bookcases, the broad table, the deep armchairs—everything seemed so complete—and upon the walls still hung the family portraits. One especially attracted Tappan's attention. It stood above the fireplace, in a large frame, and presented a beautiful young woman. As he sat there alone in the perfect stillness of the night he could hardly rouse himself from the fascination which this portrait seemed to cast upon him. He gazed upon it for an hour or more, and the young woman of the canvas appeared to return a look as fixed and as frank as his own. She stood with her hands gracefully clasped in front of her, and a faint smile seemed to play about her lips. The costume was old-fashioned, with short sleeves, and cut low in the neck. The face was that of a girl of 20, with regular features and large, dark eyes that stared straight out from the canvas.

The next day he asked Uncle Pete about the picture, but the only information he got was that it was a portrait of "Lady Barbara," a great-great-aunt of Mrs. Hadley, "who done gone live a hundred years ago." And so, every evening, Tappan sat in the library and communed with this beauty of a bygone century.

As the weeks slipped by Tappan became convinced that he must be the owner of Hadley Hall. He was thoroughly satisfied with the property, and with everything connected with it. He therefore wrote to his agent that he had concluded to make the purchase. He also wrote to that effect to Mrs. Hadley, and in his letter he stated that he hoped the portrait of "Lady Barbara" might not be included among the heirlooms she would wish to remove. When she replied that she valued that portrait above all her other possessions, Tappan was startled at the pang of regret, almost of resentment, which this statement caused.

The arrangements for the sale were rapidly made by the agent, and it was agreed that Mrs. Hadley should come on from Richmond and remain at Hadley Hall for such time as she should require to pack what she desired to retain. Tappan decided to make a flying trip to New York during that period, and to bring back with him half a dozen friends to help inaugurate his ownership of the Virginia estate.

He remained a week in the city, but found little charm in its attractions, so constantly did his thoughts wander back to the library in Hadley Hall.

At last his impatience grew to such proportions that he suddenly determined to hasten back to Virginia (although he had not expected to return much before Thanksgiving) to make one last appeal to Mrs. Hadley. The idea had occurred to him that she might permit him to have a copy of the portrait. He was not expected at Hadley Hall for a week, but he announced his return by telegraph.

On reaching his house at about six o'clock in the evening he was met at the door by Uncle Pete, who offered Mrs. Hadley's apologies for not being on hand to receive him, but she had over-exerted herself in packing and had retired early with a severe headache. She would see him in the morning.

Tappan repaired to the library at once, but, to his great disappointment the portrait of Lady Barbara had been removed and a blank wall stared at him from the empty frame. He turned to Uncle Pete, who stood nearby, and said: "You may serve me a light supper in my room," and went up the broad staircase to his apartments.

He scarcely touched what the old servant brought him, so great a depression had fallen upon him. He paced the floor for half an hour, smoking vigorously, and at last determined to return to the library, where he took down a book at random and, settling back in the great chair he had adopted for his own, tried to become interested in his reading.

Tappan never knew exactly how long he had been sitting in the library, when he thought he heard a slight noise as of some one entering the room, and the sound of the rustling of silk skirts. He looked up from his book and glanced mechanically over the back of the chair toward the door. Then he sat bolt upright, clutching the leather arms, and the stood Lady Barbara. Her hands were clasped before her, as in the picture; she wore the same old-fashioned gown; her hair reflected the soft light of the reading-lamp, but her eyes were opened wide with surprise. Tappan rose slowly to his feet, without removing his gaze from the face of the beautiful girl who stood before him, and cried:

"Barbara!"

The girl took a step backward and stammered: "I did not know you were here."

"No," exclaimed Tappan, "how could you?" And as the girl stood silent, he added:

"Come, Barbara, and speak to me!" "I really beg your pardon, Mr. Tappan," she replied, quite calmly, but with a look of great astonishment upon her face, "but I had no idea you were in the library."

"You know, Barbara, that I have been in the library every evening with you since I first came to Hadley Hall," interrupted Tappan, rapidly.

"Really, you must not call me Barbara."

"But you are Barbara," insisted Tappan.

"Yes; but I think it would be better, under the circumstances, for you to address me as Miss Hadley."

Tappan leaned forward on the table.

"Miss Hadley!" he exclaimed.

"You appear surprised," she said, "and I don't altogether blame you. Perhaps I woke you by coming in?"

"You did," cried Tappan, "but not from sleep. You have drawn me from a waking nightmare!" And as he spoke he moved toward the girl.

"Now, wait a moment!" she objected. "If you will sit down again, I will tell you all about it."

Tappan dropped obediently into his chair and the girl took a seat by the table.

"You are not at all the kind of a man I expected to see," she began, calmly resting her face on her hands and looking straight into his eyes.

"I did not think you would be so easily frightened, or excited, or alarmed, or whatever you wish to call it."

Tappan opened his mouth to reply, but she raised a pretty little hand and enjoined silence.

"You talk as if you thought it was Lady Barbara of the Mantelpiece come to life. But I am not. I am just plain Barbara Hadley, my mother's daughter, and I have been here a week helping her to pack. She retired early this evening, and as I had nothing to do, I rummaged in some old trunks and found this gown and promptly put it on. I wore it at the last reception we gave in this house, two years ago; and the gown was made like old Lady Barbara's, because mother thinks I resemble her. Uncle Pete told me of your arrival, but he also said you were in your room. When I came downstairs I saw a light burning in the library, and came in to investigate. When I woke you up you seemed startled!"

Here Miss Hadley paused and tossed her head back and laughed. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" she asked.

Tappan, now somewhat recovered, smiled back upon her and replied:

"Not a bit. I have nothing to be ashamed of. If you will ask your mother, she will tell you that I have fallen in love with the portrait of Lady Barbara, and that I made her all sorts of offers to part with it. When I saw Lady Barbara, apparently alive and in the flesh, standing before me this evening, I could not refrain from speaking as I did."

"Very well, I forgive you," Miss Hadley returned. "To fall in love with a portrait and then have a flesh and blood girl appear disguised as one's innamorata must, after all, be a trifle shocking. I suppose I ought to apologize for the disappointment I have caused you."

"I have not said I was disappointed," said Tappan.

"I trust you will never be so rude as to say so. But, now, good night, and forgive me for my intrusion!"

She arose and held out a soft white hand toward Tappan. He took it and begged her not to leave so soon, but she shook her head, smiling roguishly, turned quickly and ran out of the room.

The next morning Tappan breakfasted with Mrs. Hadley and her daughter, and Barbara told of the previous evening's adventure, and seemed to derive much amusement from chaffing Tappan. But Tappan had never felt so happy in his life, and when he went out for his usual ride that morning he was accompanied by "Lady Barbara of the Mantelpiece," as he now persisted in calling her.

It is perhaps regrettable to have to chronicle that from this time on the young woman was of very little service as an assistant to her mother. She rode with Tappan every day and took him to many nooks and corners of the neighborhood which he had not yet discovered. In the evenings they sat in the library, and Tappan soon grew to feel that he had known Mrs. Hadley and Lady Barbara for years.

One afternoon he drew the good old lady aside and informed her that the following week he expected his guests from New York. He begged her not to think of leaving Hadley Hall, al-while his guests were there to act as chaperon for the party. And then he told her something else that did not surprise Mrs. Hadley nearly as much as he had feared it might.

And thus it was that when the New Yorkers gathered for their first dinner in Hadley Hall they found that preparations had been made for a very elaborate affair—all of which they did not quite understand until Tappan arose and made a little speech in which he explained that the portrait of the Lady Barbara was to be replaced within the frame upon the mantelpiece in the library, because the living Lady Barbara had decided to remain as mistress of Hadley Hall—and poor Mrs. Hadley had had all the trouble of packing the heirlooms, only to have to unpack them again.

Record of Fires in Theaters.

Curious statistics have just been compiled showing the extent to which theaters have been destroyed by fires. According to them, 523 places of amusement were destroyed between 1777 and 1882 (the year of the famous catastrophe of the Ring theater in Vienna), and of these 37 were burned twice, three times and four times. Between 1751 and 1845 732 theaters were destroyed by fire, and the total of such disasters, since the beginning of the century is 536. The loss of life in several instances was very great. Between 1876 and 1899 no less than 1,600 persons lost their lives in four such fires. "These startling facts," says M. E. Gley, commenting on the statistics, "show that all possible preventive measures should be adopted in order to prevent a recurrence of such fires."—N. Y. Herald.

There is scarcely a record of any siege in which the press has capitulated so long as there was a square yard of brown paper or canvas to feed it with. During the famous siege of Vicksburg in the civil war the Daily Citizen came up smiling to the very last day, when it was reduced to a diet of wall paper.

It is a mistake to suppose that cold drinks are necessary to relieve thirst. Very cold drinks as a rule increase the feverish condition of the mouth and stomach, and so create thirst. Experience shows it to be a fact that hot drinks relieve thirst and "cool off the body when it is in an abnormally heated condition better than ice cold drinks."

The building at Guthrie, O. T., in which most of the territorial offices are located seems to be infested with scorpions. The Canning Factory's Loss.
The following item has appeared in the Newark Valley Herald, the Locke Times and other papers:

"We are informed that the Moravia Canning Co., which made such a big pack this year, has met with great misfortune. Over 1,200 cans of tomatoes have already spoiled and been carted away. Over 2,000 gallon cans of apples on hand have also spoiled. Besides this they have shipped four carloads of apples, which have now been refused, as much of the goods had spoiled."

To ascertain the truth of the above statements, a Register representative called upon Mr. H. A. Wheat, secretary of the Canning company, and that gentleman said the above was a misstatement from beginning to end, and undoubtedly had its foundation in the fact that the cold snap early in the fall caught the factory people unprepared and a portion of the last run of apples swelled. A few tomatoes were also damaged. Not a loss has been reported on corn or beans. The loss in tomatoes will probably not reach 500 cans, while the apples may possibly reach 1,000. Making a liberal allowance, Mr. Wheat said the loss would not go much over 2 per

As to four carloads being refused, there was no truth in the statement whatever. Not a car had been refused and no complaints come in, except in the case of the last two cars, which unfortunately contained a few cases of the apples which swelled, the shipment having been made before the swelling was discovered. So the Herald informant didn't know what he was talking about.—Moravia Register.

Death Follows Loss of Foot.

As the result, it is believed, of complications arising from the loss of his right foot which was cut off by a buzz saw a month ago, John Miner, about 48 years of age, died early Tuesday morning at his home in Locke. In brushing sawdust with his foot away from the platform near the saw, his foot was caught and cleanly severed at the ankle. Dr. Wakeman was called and assisted by Dr. Ryan of Moravia, the injured member was dressed. From that time the victim gradually sank until death relieved his sufferings. He leaves a wife and a son 22 years old.

Habeas Corpus Action.

Habeas corpus proceedings have been instituted by Frank S. Curtis, attorney of this village, in the case of George Terwilliger of this town who was sent to jail Dec. 6, for sixty days after conviction in Justice of Peace Wright's court of petit larceny. The ground upon which the application is based is that the commitment is defective in that it imposes a fine of $60 or 60 days in jail, whereas the limit of penalty that may be imposed as a fine is $50. One of the peculiar features of the case is that a second commitment was executed by the magistrate, the first one merely imposing a jail sentence of sixty days, which is held to be within the authority of the court. Then the second commitment was sent to Sheriff Wood after the defendant's term in jail had been commenced. The case will come up for argument today.—Moravia Register. Terwilliger has been released. The laws are all made by lawyers and generally contain holes through which any criminal may escape. Then judges are bound to sentence a convicted criminal in such a way that technicalities may be found giving him a new trial or his release.
