NEIGHBORHOOD VILLAGES

The Happenings of the Week in Our Sister Villages.—Newsy Correspondence.

Venice.

FEB. 7.—Miss Colling of Scipio visited her sister, Mrs. Frank Hoagland, Sunday.

John Fish has accepted a position at Ithaca. Many friends regret his departure.

Horace Dresser is in very poor health.

Rev. Wells called on Rev. Marvin Monday.

Miss Crippon's sister from Venice Center visited her last week.

We regret very much to lose so many of our good neighbors. Among them, Charles Coffin and family who will move to Scipioville. They will be missed in the church and community.

Mr. Hale will work the Baldwin farm and Frank Hoagland the Northway farm the coming summer.

J. L. Manchester was in Moravia Monday.

One of Mr. Armstrong's girls had the misfortune to break a leg last week.

Mrs. A. Crippin and Anna Ladd visited in Locke one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Streeter were in Auburn the first of the week.

Chas. Pearsall of Auburn was in town Sunday.

David Smith and family have moved onto the farm recently purchased by Charles Putnam, and will work the farm the coming season.

Mrs. S. Streeter who has been sick at the home of her son, J. F., is on the gain.

Wm. Mack and family will soon move to New Hope.

Charles York who has been on the sick list is again around.

Forks of the Creek.

FEB. 6.—The party at Reaves and Boyer's was well attended. No pains were spared to make it pleasant for all.

We are happy to announce that Herman Hand, Mrs. Amasa Tift's only surviving brother, is recovering from a severe complication of diseases. It was feared for several days that he could not live. Although Mr. Hand has been with us only a short time, by his genial disposition he has won the friendship of the community and all were anxious for his recovery. He was making preparations to join his wife and son in Iowa when he was taken sick.

James Lane and family are visiting relatives at this place.

George Boyer has accepted a position as conductor on the Auburn street railway. We understand that James Luce will occupy Mr. Boyer's part of the house until the time for which Mr. B. has leased the place shall expire.

Dr. Rose and wife visited Mr. and Mrs. L. Swartwood last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sill visited at Geo. Boyer's last Sunday.

Five Corners.

FEB. 6.—No school this week on account of the illness of the teacher, Miss Minnie Snushall.

Aunt Jane Ferris suffered a shock of paralysis Sunday morning and is unconscious at this writing.

R. E. Ferris and Mrs. G. L. Ferris are reported among the sick.

Geo. Lanterman and family were in town today.

Miss Edillian Stephenson is visiting friends in Utica.

Mrs. Chas. Stephenson was called to Ithaca Saturday by the illness of her mother, Mrs. Huson.

E. L. Colby of Auburn spent Sunday with friends here.

E. C. Corwin and wife went to Newfield on Friday last to attend the funeral of his uncle.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark of Groton City spent part of last week with their daughter, Mrs. F. E. Corwin.

O. H. Hunt and family recently visited his father at Summerhill for a few days.

C. H. Miller of Cortland who has been visiting his parents here, has returned home accompanied by his mother.

D. G. Ellison and wife entertained a number of friends to a dinner party last Friday.

King Ferry.

FEB. 6.—Mrs. George Brown was called to New York on Friday last, by the illness of her sister.

Eli Woolley died at his home at Lake Ridge Wednesday, Jan. 31, in the 80th year of his age. The funeral was held at his late residence on Friday, Rev. W. C. Brass officiating. Interment in Ludlowville cemetery.

Miss Sophia Atwater has returned from Ohio.

Mrs. S. Weaver and Miss Jane Kratzer of Genoa were guests of the Misses Drake Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ryan of Aurelius were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Murray last week.

Little Salmon Creek.

FEB. 6.—We have had some pretty cold weather the past week. Some had vegetables frozen in their cellars.

Those who have ice houses to fill have had a good chance.

On the 29th of last month a young man came to John Boyces and wanted care and protection, so Mr. and Mrs. Boyce concluded they would do the best they could for him.

Suicide by Hanging.

Cornelius Whiting, aged about 50 years, a well-to-do farmer living a few miles south of Fair Haven, near Red Creek, was found hanging with a rope about his neck from an apple tree in his father's orchard, on the farm occupied by Charles Nichols, three miles northeast of Savannah, at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

Coroner York of Newark was called who, after summoning a jury, viewed the remains and adjourned the inquest until Friday. Besides a widow the deceased leaves a father, Horace Whitting, one sister, Mrs. Carrie V. Cuyler, and two brothers, George L. and Bert Whiting, all of Red Creek. The remains were removed to the late residence near Red Creek.

The Grip.

The late Eugene Field, on recovering from the grip, wrote:

The gods let slip that fiendish grip
Upon me last week Sunday—
No fiercer storm than raked my form
E'er swept the Bay of Fundy;
But now, good-by
To drugs say I—
Good-by to gnawing sorrow:
I am up to-day,
And, whoop hooray!
I'm going out tomorrow!

What aches and pain in bones and brain
I had I need not mention;
It seems to me such pangs must be
Old Satan's own invention;
Albeit I
Was sure I'd die.
The doctor reassured me—
And true enough,
With his vile stuff,
He ultimately cured me.

As there I lay in bed all day,
How fair outside looked to me!
A smile so mild old Nature smiled
It seemed to warm clear through me.
In chafened mood
The scene I viewed,
Inventing, sadly robus,
Fantastic rhymes
Between the times
I had to take a bolus.

Of quinine slugs and other drugs
I guess I took a million—
Such drugs as serve to set each nerve
To dancing a cotillion;
The doctors say
The only way
To route the grip instant
Is to pour in
All kinds of sin—
Sinillibus curantur.

'Twas hard, and yet I'll soon forget
Those ills and cures distressing;
One's future lies 'neath gorgeous skies
When one is convalescing!
So now, good by
To drugs, say I—
Good-by, thou phantom Sorrow!
I am up to-day,
And whoop, hooray!
I'm going out to-morrow.

NEWS ABOUT THE STATE

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

Three cases of small pox are reported at Unadilla.

The Methodist church at Beaver Meadow was dedicated Feb. 1.

The Oneonta Cloak company has been closed out by its creditors.

Oswego will hold a big fair to raise funds to build a Masonic temple.

Syracuse ice dealers have organized a trust with a capital of $6,000,000.

A movement is in progress to foreclose the mortgage of $200,000 on the Little Falls and Dolgeville railroad.

A new post office has been established in the town of Smithfield, Chenango county. It is known as Landers.

Spencer has secured a glove manufactory which starts with 25 hands and expects to employ a hundred inside of a year.

A Union Springs artist and veteran soldier has painted a picture 14 feet in length, of the battle of Gettysburg, which has been the work of years.

The appointment of John J. Hodge to be postmaster at Oneida and of W. Scott Siver, to be postmaster at Chittenango, have both been confirmed by the senate.

An editor in West Virginia was held up the other night and robbed of $1.97. This is considered by his northern brethren of the quill as a sure sign of returning prosperity in the south.

The women members of the Park Presbyterian church of Syracuse have established the reform of removing their hats during service. Men are not so particular about church service; it is in the theatre that the hats of the women bother.

Mark Hargin of Genoa was in town today and swore out a warrant for the arrest of "Al" Walker, of the Ithaca. Hargin claims that on Jan. 6 Walker stole from him a team of black and grey horses, three horse blankets, a black bodied cutter and a double harness.—Saturday's Ithaca Journal.

An item is going the rounds of the county papers to the effect that if people would sleep in a room with the window part way up, so as to keep the air in the apartment pure, the mortality from consumption would be reduced fully one half. There is every reason to believe that the item is correct, for if the advice were literally followed in this latitude, all of the consumptives and half the well people would die of pneumonia before spring.

According to the Manlius Eagle, Manlius merchants are complaining of a dropping off in their trade, which they ascribe to the keener and easier competition of the city of Syracuse, due to the trolley road. This is a discouraging argument to the other villages in this section which have showed an inclination to encourage trolley extension. This is the obvious consequence of a railroad through any small town. However, if the shipping facilities of the small town are improved by the railroad, the gain in that direction should reimburse the loss in another.

Benham's Case.

The following dispatch from Batavia shows that the new attorneys for the prosecution in the Benham case mean to hustle things along: "District Attorney Randall said yesterday that if the defendant's lawyers in the Benham case did not present their brief to him so that he could prepare his in time to present it at the opening of the next term of the Court of Appeals he would make a motion for the dismissal of the appeal. The next motion day is April 17, 1899."

Buildings Moved.

As usual I am prepared to move buildings for anyone at reasonable rates. B. RILEY, Genoa.

True Greatness In Medicine

Is proved by the health of the people who have taken it. More people have been made well, more cases of disease and sickness have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla than by any other medicine in the world.

"Sine Died."

Not long since the notice "Court adjourned sine die" was posted on the door of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn. Some gentleman with an artistic and highly trained sense of humor added a "d" to the word "die," and went on his way rejoicing.

"See here," he said, "when did Sine pass in his checks?"

"What's that?" demanded the astonished clerk.

"When did Sine die? I see the courts are closed on account of it."

"Oh," said the clerk, pulling him- self together, "he died yesterday, did you know him?"

"Know him? I should say I did. Knew his father before him. Too bad, ain't it?"

STORIES OF RELIEF.

Two Letters to Mrs. Pinkham

Mrs. JOHN WILLIAMS, Englishtown, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot begin to tell you how I suffered before taking your remedies. I was so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without falling. I had womb trouble and such a bearing-down feeling; also suffered with my back and limbs, pain in womb, inflammation of the bladder, piles and indigestion.

Mrs. JOSEPH PETERSON, 513 East St., Warren, Pa., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered with womb trouble over fifteen years. I had inflammation, enlargement and displacement of the womb. I had the backache constantly, also headache, and was so dizzy. I had heart trouble, it seemed as though my heart was in my throat at times choking me. I could not walk around and I could not lie down, for then my heart would beat so fast I would feel as though I was smothering.

"I have now taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and used three packages of Sanative Wash, and can say I am perfectly cured. I do not think I could have lived long if Mrs. Pinkham's medicine had not helped me."

THE FLOWER OF GALA WATER.

A LOVE STORY.

BY AMELIA E. BARR.

(Copyright, by BONNIE BROWN'S SONS.)

CHAPTER I.

CONTINUED.

"He will rage round and make everyone miserable."

"Jamie will not let him. Good-night, mamma!" and she shook her mother's cheeks between her hands and kissed her face many times, saying between the kisses: "You are such a darling mamma—such a lovely mamma—I cannot tell how you ever stooped to pick up my disagreeable stepfather—young as I am I could find a better and nicer man—I am sure I could. Good-night, and good-night; and, mamma, do make up your mind to 'do your will and fear not.'"

Then she turned the key and stood still to listen to her mother's retreating footsteps. She feared the laird would come blustering to her door, and she stood ready to "do her will," every nerve at high tension, her head lifted, her eyes gleaming, her lips parted—a little woman all on fire with sudden and just rebellion.

There was no challenge, however, and gradually the expression of her face softened into smiles and tender recollections. She slowly unfastened her green and primrose gown, and let it fall to her feet. Then with infinite neatness she folded it and laid it away in a wardrobe smelling of violets and lavender. This common act of daily life soothed and calmed her unusual feelings. She sat down in her snowy skirts, lifted her small right foot, and began very slowly to unbutton her boots. At every little button she paused, for she was full to the lips of sweet thoughts and sweet hopes and dreams of happiness.

"He called me Katherine! Katherine!" she whispered. "Indeed, I think he calls me now!" But it was only the strong vibration of her heart that struck upon her ear.

She rose and she sat down. She rubbed her pink palms with pleasure; she sighed; she smiled; and all aflutter for very joy. All that Mowbray had looked and spoken she recalled, and then musing she thought of what she would say when he returned. And she was troubled because with every change of words "something" seemed to be lost.

Mowbray also was at this hour as little fit for human companionship. With many excuses he declined Doctor Telfair's further hospitality at that time. He said "the man who drove him to Kirtle-hope from Galashiels expected to return that night, that his own valet was waiting in Edinburgh for him, and that he had urgent business in that city on the following day."

In reality he felt the same need for solitude as Katherine felt. He wished to rid himself of all necessity to consider any mortal but the beloved one. He was glad when all necessity for courtesies was over, glad to obtain the solitude of his own dreams.

"God be thanked!" he said, as he recalled his visit, but especially those few rare minutes in the conservatory. "God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures Boasts two soul-sides; one to face the world with; One to show a woman that he loves her."

And his whole countenance brightened and flushed to the last line. "Drive quicker, Wat Forster," he said. "Drive quicker. 'The wind begins to whistle. It is really 'getting up.' Let us hear the music of the horse's hoofs."

And Watty sent them beating to an old border gathering song in a voice that woke the echoes far and near: "Doughty Dan of the Houlet Harst, Dan that was always good at a burst, Good with a bow, and better with a spear, Come thou here! Fie, lads! shout A' a' a' a' My gear is a' gane!"

The rattling syllables seemed to be struck out by the iron of the horse-shoes and the flint of the road, and they stirred Mowbray's blood like a trumpet. But there was a far different melody in his heart, and beneath all the marching, the sense of shaking brides and clashing spears, he was singing softly to himself this far more sweet prophecy of love: "By earth and heaven! she shall be mine—The bonnie lass of Gala Water!"

CHAPTER II.

BETWEEN THE PRIMEBOSS AND THE ROSE.

Beauty formed Her face; her heart, Fidelity.—Q.

We shape ourselves the joy or fear Of which the coming life is made, And fill our future's atmosphere With sunshine or with shade.—Raphael.

The first dawn of love is to any fine character a mystic polarization; and no woman whose face has reflected for one instant the luminous, ardent gaze of such a lover as Richard Mowbray could escape this result. Katherine, indeed, was not one of these foolish souls who are forever questioning their own consciousness, yet she was aware of some distinct change—though only as a butterfly might realize had it suddenly arrived at wings; or a bud that it had become a rose.

No one else perceived that Katherine had crossed that line "where the brook and river meet." The laird was going to a magisterial meeting, and was, therefore, in a judicial and authoritative temper; and Mrs. Brathons was far too much occupied with his wants and orders to detect a difference in her daughter, which was rather to be felt than seen. The girl kissed her mother, bowed slightly to her stepfather, and silently took her place at the breakfast table. She expected a reproof for her disobedience, but the laird said nothing until he was just ready to take the road. Then he called her to him. She answered the summons promptly. He was standing on the broad flag at the open door and Mrs. Brathons was at his side.

"Katherine," he said, "when I sent for you last night you refused to come. I shall look over the fault this time, but I warn you never to attempt such rudeness in my house again. Good morning, my dear Helen. Tell Robert to go to Stowe for the new gardener. I shall be home this afternoon," and he whipped the team into a gallop before Katherine had an opportunity to say a word.

But she looked at her mother and the look needed no interpretation. Mrs. Brathons answered it at once.

"He is very angry with you, Katherine; and you must remember he is your guardian, and can send you back to school if he wishes. He was saying that this morning."

"Why was I wanted so particularly last night? Surely, I may go to sleep when I am sleepy. He has meddled with everything else."

"He says you totally neglected Jamie—and that is true; also, that you paid unnecessary attention to Mr. Mowbray."

"Jamie is not interesting—he tries to be—but I am so tired of his efforts."

"He is to be your husband, Katherine."

"So my guardian says. But the will of Alexander Brathons is not Fate. I have a will also."

"You! You can only obey the decision of those who have your affairs in their hands. Your own father wished you to marry Wintoun in order to bring back the land to the Janfaries. It is the will of your dead father, and it is not to be set aside for a fancy."

"If my father were alive I am sure he would now will differently. The dead do not know how men and things change. When you were my age, mamma, would you have given up Captain Janfarie for the Wintoun lands?"

"There is no Captain Janfarie in your case, Katherine, and therefore no question of 'give up,' and your marriage with Jamie has been part of your education. Yes, indeed, I may say part of your very life."

"Mamma, dear, I warn you that about my marriage I shall follow the Janfarie rule and 'do my will and fear not.'"

Mrs. Brathons did not answer. She knew that most people have to submit to the force of circumstances. She said to herself:

"The days and weeks will go by, and the wedding will be announced, and the invitations sent out, and the presents and dresses will arrive, and every congratulation will be a fresh rivet; and at the last Katherine will take the good fortune provided for her and be thankful. For Jamie Wintoun is a kind, good lad, and she might go further and fare worse."

So she went about her household duties and did not worry herself concerning Katherine's "will." She heard her playing marches and mazurkas with a vehement rapidity, and she smiled a little and then sighed. She was thinking how futile were the petulant rebellions of youth, and how soon the emotional girl would learn to accept calmly the inevitables of life, and make the best of them. But she did not leave her domestic duties to moralize, and at dinner there was a new soup and a new servant to discuss, and the subject of matrimony seemed to be alien and very far off.

After dinner Katherine put on her habit and rode over the hills to the manse. It had been a fine morning, but before noon the clouds heaped themselves in very folds over the high-lands and everything was swathed in mist and vapor. Then came the rain as it only can come down among the mountains, and the wind drove the sheet of water on her back, but the air was so invigorating that she tingled all over with life and rode up to the manse door with her wet face all alight with smiles.

Jessy was there to meet her, and then the damp clothing was changed and the parlor fire stirred to a blaze, and the girls kissed each other again and sat down before it.

"Father has gone to Galashiels," said Jessy. "He does not like to ride fast because it is not ministerial to gallop, but I think this wind and rain will whip his horse to his best trot."

"The laird is out too. I hope he will get wet through. Then he will stay in bed to-morrow for fear of rheumatism."

"Has he been scolding again? If I were you I would get married. Jamie will never say a cross word to you."

"When did your visitor leave, Jessy?"

"He went to Galashiels last night. He is in Edinburgh ere this, no doubt."

"Have you seen the token, Jessy?"

"Father gave it to me. Look here!"

"A sapphire ring! How lovely! I wonder whom it was bought for."

"A woman whom my father loved."

"Was the minister troubled much?"

"No. He said that his life had been long enough for the forgetting of sorrow. But he looked sadly at the ring. He told me he had bought it with many months of self-denial of all kinds, and that I might wear it for the sake of a good woman now with God. That was all."

"What had Mr. Mowbray's father do to do with it?"

"He said nothing of him."

"Do you think Mr. Mowbray will ever come back here?"

"Why should he?"

"People do come for the fishing and the scenery."

"There are far more fashionable places. He did not seem anxious to prolong his visit. Father asked him to stay all night, but he would not."

"Nevertheless, I am sure he will return. Have you ever seen a more interesting man?"

"Many a time."

"Now we have something to quarrel about."

"Oh, no, Katherine! Why should we quarrel about Mr. Mowbray? Besides, he will never come here again."

"Never come here again?"

The words struck her on the heart. The turned stork and faint with the blow, but instead of crying out to Jessy, as she usually did when anything hurt her, she summoned all the strength of her own nature for help. In a few minutes she said:

"He may possibly find more fashionable places, but where will he find a country so interesting as Tweedside? Our hills and dales and trout streams are not mere earth and water; they have a kind of humanity—they have so many heroes and events linked with them, that they are like story books. A good angler likes a living land to fish in."

"A good angler thinks of nothing at all but fish. Father would catch trout in a canal; and father said Mr. Mowbray had no proper respect for fishing. If Mr. Mowbray ever does come back to Gala Water it will not be for fish of any kind; he will come seeking the Flower of-Gala Water; and I for one do not want any Englishman to carry her over the border. Are you going to read to me to-day Katherine?"

Then Katherine lifted a book and Jessy took up the long, heavy fishing stocking she was knitting, and while her nimble fingers flew in and out between the bright steel and the gray wool, Katherine read aloud the sweet poetic rhapsodies of "Lalla Rookh."

The rain beat upon the windows, and the wind shrieked around the house, but these two maidens sat smiling in that

"Bower of roses by Bendemeer's stream," listening with soft sighs and sympathy to the poet's praise of love, and quite sure that they, too, could:

"Love on through all ills, and love on till they died;"

contented to believe that if there was

"An Elysium on earth, It was this, it was this!"

About four o'clock the minister came back from Galashiels and the scene of Araby the Blest and the love dreams behind Persian lattices vanished before his homely wants and complainings.

"Reading 'Lalla Rookh'! Roses and water! Love and water! Perfect nonsense!" he cried with that touch of dialect he fell into when events troubled him. "A cup of hot tea and a bit of mountain mutton will be more welllike at this hour of the day, Jessy. What do you say, Mr. Bull?"

and he stooped and stroked the dog which had been his companion through the storm, and which was now stretched on the rug before the blazing fire. "We are both wet and hungry, Bull, and these girls are reading about Love and Roses. What do you think of such foolishness?"

Then Katherine broke into hearty laughter, as all must do who take the trouble to notice the irony in the lifted eyelids of a dog when it hears any person reproved.

"Look at the creature," she said,

"He could only talk, minister, what a lecture poets and young women who read poetry would get. But he is like you, sir, and prefers mutton."

"Bull is not an exacting dog, but he does expect his little personal comforts to be attended to. Have a drink of tea, dearie—and then gallop home as quickly as you can. It is an east-windy, west-windy storm; the east wind has about done its worst, and when the sun sets the west wind will show us what it can do."

"As long as it is light I like the storm," she answered. "The rain is full of life, and the wind is full of life, and the spirit of the firmament thrills my spirit, and there is nothing better than a gallop through wind and rain, except it be a plunge into the summer sea."

"But the laird will be home before you, and then he will fret himself and your mother, and hurry and worry the whole household."

"The laird will go straight to his bed. He will call for blankets and herb teas, and watch for twinges of rheumatism, and send for mamma every ten minutes. Minister, what of your guest?"

"He went away last night, Katherine. Here is your pony; now finish your tea, and loiter no longer."

Good Blood!

Your heart beats over one hundred thousand times each day. One hundred thousand supplies of good or bad blood to your brain.

Which is it?

If bad, impure blood, then your brain aches. You are troubled with drowsiness yet cannot sleep. You are as tired in the morning as at night. You have no nerve power. Your food does you but little good.

Simulants, tonics, headache powders, cannot cure you; but will. It makes the liver, kidneys, skin and bowels perform their proper work. It removes all impurities from the blood. And it makes the blood rich in its life-giving properties.

To Hasten Recovery. You will be more rapidly cured if you will take a laxative dose of Ayer's pills each night. They arouse the sluggish liver and thus cure biliousness.

LOOKING OVER
 The entire field of science, nowhere has there been such progress as in the science of optics and the fitting of glasses. Our success in this line is due, in a measure, to the fact that we embrace every new, MERITORIOUS idea, employ all the latest instruments, as well as constantly seek to originate new methods of excellence that will in any way aid us in the practice of our profession.

TURKISH PEASANT WISDOM

Curious Proverbs That Embody Mohammedan Philosophy.
 The Turkish peasants in their own country have plenty of homely wit. Thus they say:

"For the team ox there is no knife," meaning that the poor, hard-working peasant is too poor to be persecuted.

The profound and submissive piety of the Turk shows in such sayings as "It may be six or it may be seven, but it will be what number Allah ordains," and again, "When Allah gives he doth not ask whose son thou art." Of a like character is the saying, "The head that bends is never cut off."

Of course the poor, beaten donkey is the hero of a whole list of proverbs. "The donkey is little," it is said, "yet he leads camels." "They invited the donkey to a wedding," says another maxim, "and he said, 'Is it wood or water than is wanted.'"
 Of religious proverbs Koranic literature is as full as Christian. "Do what is kind and good," says one, "and cast it into the sea; if the fish do not recognize it the Creator will."

Worldly prudence, however, inspires such maxims as these: "The wound by the hand heals; the wound by the tongue is incurable;" "Out of the tripe seller's caldron cometh no silk brocade;" "Don't always expect the peppery part of the stew;" "They who handle money will lick their fingers"—which is more true of Turkey than of other places, probably. "The father gave a vineyard to the son, but the son never gave a bunch of grapes to the father," is a sermon of ingratitude. Short, pithy proverbs are: "A man should only listen with one of his ears," and "there is no friend to a man like his mother."

The Coy Coyote.
 "Speaking about smart animals," said the real estate man, "I want to go on record as saying that there is no animal that can hold a candle to the coyote for smoothness. When I first went out to western Kansas I had an ambition to kill enough coyotes to make a lap robe to send back to my friends in the east. I pramped all over that country with a gun, but I never could get nearer than within a mile of a coyote. I used to drive out in my buggy and hide the gun under the seat, but it didn't make any difference. Not a coyote ever got near enough so that he could have been reached with anything short of a long-range cannon.

"One day I started out in a hurry and forgot my gun. I hadn't gone a mile from town before I ran onto a group of four coyotes. The critters didn't even take the trouble to lope off out of sight. They just walked off two or three rods from the road and sat down, and looked at me and yawned. It made me hot to see their infernal impudence, and I made a dive as if I were going to get the gun out from under the seat. I thought sure I would scare them away. Well, maybe they wouldn't believe it, but those cussed coyotes never moved. They just sat up there and actually grinned. They said just as plain as if they had used the words: 'Oh, you needn't try to run any bluff on us! We are strictly onto our job.' How they knew I hadn't the gun I don't know, but I have had great respect for the sense of a coyote ever since."

Settled an Old Grudge.
 An old man-of-war's man took a seat in a passenger car one day, attracting considerable attention by his dress and manner. An indiscreet neighbor ventured the question, "In the navy, eh?"
 The sailor nodded affirmatively.
 "Well," went on the other man, "I am not exactly in the navy myself; I am a contractor—that is, I furnish cheese to the navy."
 "Oh, you are, are ye?" said the sailor. "You are just the chap I've been looking for," and accordingly he knocked the aspirant for naval honors over the car seat, and added as he looked around, "now show me the son-of-a-gun that furnishes the butter."

Flesh Food and Vegetarianism.
 Some one has estimated that twenty-two acres of land is needed to sustain a man on flesh, while that amount of land sown with wheat will feed forty-two persons; sowed to oats, eighty-eight; to potatoes, Indian corn or rice, 176 persons, and planted with the bread-fruit tree over 6,000 people would be fed.

Might Mention the Fact.
 "Suppose I should call you any hard names," asked the literary chap from the East, who was down in Mexico, studying human nature, "what would you do?"
 "Oh, kinder mention the fact to the coroner the first time I met him," carelessly replied the gringo.

Bury the Dead in the House.
 In certain parts of Africa it is considered a mark of disrespect to bury out-of-doors at all. Only slaves are treated in such unceremonious fashion. The honored dead are buried under the floor of the house.

Age Rewarded.
 A law of New Zealand awards a pension of $100 annually to every respectable person who has attained the age of sixty-five, and has resided twenty years in the colony.

Handy Device.
 A handy device for hanging clothes is formed of a ring to be screwed to the top of a post to support a number of arms, which are dropped into a hole in the end of the post when not in use.

Philippine Cigars.
 The yearly output of cigars from the Philippines is 440,000,000.

DISEASE IN COSTLY STONES.
 Opals, Turquoises and Pearls Are Susceptible to a Sort of Consumption.

"When I bought this stone a few months ago," said a young woman drawing from her tapering finger a large opal ring and handing it to a fashionable jeweller, "it was remarkably brilliant and translucent and glittered with a dozen beautiful lights, but now its fires are gone and it is nearly opaque."

The jeweller scrutinized the stone through a powerful glass. He found it lifeless, cloudy and void of refulgence. "The stone is sick," he replied. "Sick!" repeated the young woman, dismayed and astonished.

"Yes, madama," continued the jeweller. "Your opal is afflicted by a disease common to its kind, as well as to various precious stones. Unfortunately no one understands the nature of the disease, so your stone is incurable. It will never regain its iridescence."
 "Opals, turquoises and pearls are extremely susceptible to a sort of mineral consumption, which impairs their vitality and value," explained the jeweller, as the young woman sadly departed. "The development of this disease is independent of external influences or neglect. The germs of destruction are born within the stones. Topazes, garnets and amethysts are frequent sufferers from the attacks of the mysterious sickness, and even the magnificent pigeon blood ruby, the fiery sapphire and the costly emerald are occasional victims. The diamond is the only known immune."

"It is easy to detect sickness in stones. In some the lustre begins to wane slowly, and imperfect scintillation is noted. In others there is a distinct alteration in color, many stones becoming dark and hazy, a few gaining in transparency, yet plainly revealing loss of sparkle and those prismatic qualities which add so much to the value of many gems."

"We do not know positively that this disease is contagious. Nevertheless it is a substantiated fact that apparently healthy stones placed in constant juxtaposition to diseased gems often 'fall sick' without any explainable cause unless it is that of contagion."

"I think I would go crazy with pain were it not for Chamberlain's Pain Balm," writes W. H. Stapleton, Herminie, Pa. "I have been afflicted with rheumatism for several years and have tried remedies without number, but Pain Balm is the best remedy I have got hold of." One application relieves the pain. The long expected clash of the U. S. soldiers and the followers of Aguinaldo, at Manila, occurred last Sunday morning. The result was most disastrous to the natives, and the latest advices indicate that Aguinaldo has had enough and desires a settlement with General Otis. If Aguinaldo's "honor" has been fully satisfied, he will agree to any terms proposed by this government.

A CORRESPONDENT proposes a new excise law. He would have all who want to drink take out a license and their names published in a newspaper; the license money to pay for the publication and the balance applied to highway improvements. Also impose a fine of $2 or two days on the man who treats another.

IT IS SAID that Dewey told an admiring friend who desired to present him with a new hat, that he wore the same size as he did before the war. In the same metaphor Secretary Alger and General Eagan probably wear several sizes smaller.

THE PRESIDENT has commuted the sentence imposed upon General Eagan from dismissal to suspension for six years. The action of the President is not generally approved by the public.

The question of handling the wires and gas, water and drainage pipes in great cities and even in towns, is becoming with each year one of greater importance. A prize was offered to the engineers of the United States by the Cosmopolitan magazine for the ablest article suggesting a scientific, economical solution of this problem. The paper of Henry F. Bryant has been selected by the committee as the one most ably meeting the conditions and it appears in the February Cosmopolitan.

Little Salmon Creek.

FEB. 9.—There are a few who still suffer from the effects of the grip, but the most of those who have been sick are improving.

Peter Keenan was at Aurora one day last week, visiting his children and grandchildren.

Frank Brill was calling on friends hereabout the other day.

Our feed mill up the creek is giving good satisfaction. Mr. Haley, the jolly miller, says business is booming.

John Owens of Venice Center and Patrick McIntyre of Scipioville were visiting at James Owens' Sunday.

Caucus is over, and those who had the most friends received the nominations for the different town offices. There seems to be something wrong with the present excise law; there seem to be more places where one can purchase tanglefoot under no-license than there are under license.

FEB. 8.—Rev Yates of Auburn gave a lecture Wednesday evening at the M. E. church on "Prison Life."

William Tate and wife returned Friday from visiting friends in Ledyard.

Laura White is spending a few weeks with friends in Locke.

Mrs. Ada Baker of North Lansing is calling on friends in this place.

Miss Hattie Smith of Groton is home for a few days.

Little Leslie Townsend is suffering an attack of sore eyes.

The little son of Frank Minturn is very sick.

David Tuthill remains about the same.

Ledyard.

FEB. 6.—The services at the M. E. church which have been in progress for three weeks continue this week. The pastor has been unassisted and an excellent interest has characterized each service.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will speak on "The Liquor Problem" with special reference to "Temperance and Town Meeting."

H. C. Willis has erected an addition to his store which makes an admirable change in the looks of its interior. We understand he intends to extend the improvements to the front of the store, placing a new glass front and other needed improvements.

Quarterly meeting services at the M. E. church Sunday morning, Feb. 29. Rev. R. D. Munger, D. D., is expected to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Veley are entertaining friends from Wayne county.

Frank Maine lost a valuable cow last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Misner of Venice visited at her home recently, and were treated to a genuine serenade and an illumination during the eve. C. T. Lisk is ill.

"Some Plays and Their Actors—Without Prejudice," is a new department in the Cosmopolitan. The names of the contributors are not given, but in the staff are embraced the majority of the leading critics of the country, including David Balasco. It is interesting to note that in these days of competition in the magazine field the editions of the Cosmopolitan have gone from three hundred thousand for February 1898, to three hundred and fifty thousand in February of the present year.

An Ice Boat Runaway.

Some years ago there was a runaway down at Shelter Island, in which a young girl was left in the boat with a gale blowing. She tried to throw the sheet loose, but it was frozen and her fingers were too cold, added to which the sheet had fouled the tiller, and she could not bring the boat up into the wind to stop its way, the sail being so set that the boat continued running right along at a terrific rate of speed. Occupants of the other boats soon realized the position and made chase, gaining but slowly, one boat finally being far in the lead of the others by the time the end of the island was left behind. Right in front lay the edge of the ice, broken short by the action of the tide water, and there the breakers rolled in, throwing up the anchor ice, dashing it down, and then retreating, sucking it under the floe and packing it up for another break. For a time it was a question as to whether the chasing boat would catch up with the girl before she was carried over the edge to certain death. But at last the boats came together for a brief second, the girl was snatched by strong arms to the pursuer's yacht the sheet was eased off in a flash, and, spinning round in its own length, it was set right before the wind instead of reaching into it, just as the runaway dashed over into the anchor ice. A short, sharp crack gave notice of the parting of the ice beneath the very runners of the now homeward bound savior, and with a long stagger, which only her speed enabled her to withstand, she dashed across the fast opening crack, safe, to be brought up in the wind at a distance, while the late runaway danced, a wreck, among the broken ice. It was one of the close calls of ice yachting which, thank goodness! very seldom occur.—Wilf. P. Pond, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for February.

FEB. 7.—Beautiful winter weather. Miss Lena Thurston of this place was married Saturday to Charles Boddy of Mapleton at the parsonage of Rev. A. E. Holmes.

Charles Snyder recently took a load of flour to Auburn for Sheriff Wood.

Our band met for practice last evening.

Republican and Democrat caucuses were held in Snyder's hall Saturday. They were very tame affairs but undoubtedly things will not be so tame on town meeting day as there is lots of feeling on both sides.

The L. A. S. will hold a Valentine social in Snyder's hall on the evening of Feb. 14.

There is talk of a Masonic dance in Snyder's hall in the near future.

The remains of Charles Phillips were buried in the Rural cemetery Sunday, after services in the Baptist church.

W. F. Whitten with one team of horses, drew two and a half tons of flour to J. Snyder. The wagon was a load of itself.

THE VILLAGE MIRROR

What Has Happened in Genoa During the Past Seven Days—An Interesting Page.

He hired a neat little sleigh
And rode about feeling quite gaily,
But when the bill came,
He called it a shame,
And very near fainted away.

—Good sleighing.
—Social party at King Ferry this evening.

—Mrs. J. H. Cruthers is visiting her sister at Owasco.

—Miss Bertha Lewis has returned from a visit to Auburn.

—Rothschild Bros.' announcement is on the first page this week.
—Read what the Venice Center merchant says on the 8th page in this issue.

—Mrs. Sabra Miller of Groton is visiting relatives and friends in this village.

—The knowledge that a man doesn't possess always crops out when a child questions him.

—M. J. Beardsley is prepared to renovate feather beds, etc., in first class manner at reasonable rates.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Hagin visited relatives and friends at the county seat a few days this week.

—The L. A. S. of East Genoa will meet with Mrs. Frank Bothwell Wednesday, Feb. 15, for dinner. All are invited.

—It is said that powdered sulphur worn in your shoes immunizes the wearer from grip. It is also said to give relief in rheumatism.

—See the wonderful and talking pictures at Academy hall Monday evening. Life motion depicted with startling realism. See the big bills.

—Mrs. Jane Ferris died at her home at Five Corners on Wednesday. The funeral will be held at the church at Five Corners this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

—The Boston Ladies symphony orchestra, consisting of twenty-three young ladies, will give a concert in Moravia opera house Saturday evening, Feb. 18.

—The local promoters of base ball should meet in the near future and prepare for a good season of the sport next summer. Now is the time to do business.

—"The sign over your door is intended as an advertisement. An advertisement in a reliable newspaper is only so many thousand signs spread over a great many square miles," says an advertising expert.

—The TRIBUNE and N. Y. Tribune at $1.25 per year is finding many takers. At this rate there is no good reason why you should not be on the list. Thrice-a-week World and the TRIBUNE at $1.65 if you say so. Also remember the World Almanac at 25 cents.

—Five Corners W. C. T. U. will hold a temperance rally in the interests of no-license at the King Ferry church next Sunday evening. There will be good singing and speaking by Rev. Geo. Laughton and Rev. W. C. Brass. All are cordially invited.

Oh! let the aims be lofty
Which animate your soul;
High as the star of evening—
High as the price of coal.

—This is more like winter.

—J. M. Denson has moved his shoe shop to his residence.

—Joe McBride, the jeweler, is confined to the house by illness.

—Rev. Wells has been engaged by the Presbyterian society for the coming year.

—Peter Hurley was found dead in bed at his home in Locke on Tuesday morning.

—E. C. Starner has finished his work at The Avery, Auburn, and is home for the present.

—No entertainment that has been advertised in Genoa for a long time has created greater interest than the illustrated entertainment that is to be given at the hall on Monday evening. The advance sale of tickets has been large, and the warograph will doubtless have a crowded house.

—A Bee Keepers' Institute will be held in the Business Men's Association rooms at Auburn, Thursday, Feb. 16. The morning session at 9.30 and the afternoon session at 1.30. Harry S. Howe, W. F. Marks and other good speakers will be in attendance. All bee invited to attend.

—It is well known that J. H. Cruthers produces the best of every thing in his line, but his hens seem to be bred to break records instead of eggs. One of his fowls recently laid two eggs at one time, one within another and both perfectly formed and encased shells. We don't remember of a similar circumstance any where.

—Says a Genoa correspondent, —Our townspeople are bestirring themselves in anticipation of the coming election. No-license meetings will be held in both the east and west end this week. Meanwhile the office seeker goes about with his blandest smile, seeking "whom he may" secure to help boost him into the place he covets and "hail fellow well met" with those whom he would scarcely notice at other times.

—Four packed audiences have so far greeted the Edison Warograph exhibition at Music hall, over two thousand people being present at the two entertainments given Saturday and many were unable to gain admission. This great success will continue four days more. Every afternoon at 3:45; evenings at 8 o'clock.—Auburn Bulletin. See this wonderful invention at Academy hall, Genoa, next Monday evening.

—An exchange puts the matter of reciprocity between the farmer and the town in the following sensible light: "Dear farmer, If you want your town to help you, help your town. 'Oh' but you say, 'I don't care whether the town helps me or not, I can get along without the town.' No you can't. How much would your farm be worth if the town was taken away? How much was your farm worth before the town was built? The fact is we depend on each other. The farmer helps the town and the town helps the farmer; they help others, and loss comes to both if either even partially violates the unwritten contract of reciprocity."

For Sale—Six grade Durham cows. EDWIN GOLDEN, Ledyard.

To Rent—A farm of over 70 acres, a mile east and a mile north of King Ferry; possession given at once. Call on or address Mrs. Wm. Messer, Moravia, N. Y.

For Sale—A fine heifer with a calf by her side. WM DATES, Heddens, N. Y.

Prairie State Incubator for sale. If you want an incubator that you don't have to sit up nights with, get a Prairie State. GEO. L. FERRIS, Agt., Atwaters, N. Y.

David Kinney has Buff Leghorn eggs for sale at reasonable rates per sitting. These fowls are the best for laying known.

Bring your old rubber to Mastin & Hagin's store, where you will receive 2 cents per pound for it. 5 cents per pound for old copper.

Town Nominations.

At the Republican caucus Saturday afternoon in this village, the following nominations were made: Supervisor, F. A. Dudley; town clerk, F. C. Hagin; justices, Francis Hollister, J. M. Tarbell; assessors, A. Q. Stillwell, J. A. Mead, D. L. Mead; collector, W. P. Shaw; highway commissioner, Delos Niles; inspectors, D. W. Smith, Fred Younglove, G. W. Atwater, Edwin Fessenden; overseers of poor, C. D. Strong, S. S. Goodyear; constables, James Riley, Fred Stillwell, James H. Smith, Frank Gillespie, H. Stickle.

The Democrats made these nominations, in the same order as above: F. A. Dudley, P. Sullivan. Geo. D. Sterns Byron Hunt; Glen W. King, T. Sill, Jay Lamey; H. A. Bradley; Chas. E. Slocum; Con Leonard, L. B. Norman, Geo. Shank. John W. Palmer; Fred Fulmer, Dan Fallon; Geo. Shank. T. O'Neil, Wm. Oliver, L. B. Norman, P. Fulmer; game constable, M. J. Foran. COCOANUTS IN CUBA.

THEY GROW RAPIDLY AND ENTIRELY WITHOUT CULTIVATION.

Delicious Flavor of the Milk Drunk Where the Nut Grows—Altogether Different From Those That Come North—Excellent For Invalids.

Next to bananas the most important product of eastern Cuba is cocoanuts. The trees grow rapidly, without cultivation, and every man's field is fringed with them.

The Cuban process of extracting oil from the cocoanut resembles that by which Texans make oil from cottonseed. The cake of solid residue is fed to the pigs—about the only live stock ever successfully raised in eastern Cuba—and the shells are used for fuel in the sugar factories. So far the oil has been locally employed only as a lubricant for sugar-making machinery—a wicked waste of valuable material, it seems to those who are familiar with the splendid possibilities of the product.

The saying goes that a cocoanut tree bears a nut for every day in the year. In time of peace one might buy a dozen nuts for a 20-cent coin anywhere in the rural districts of Cuba, and he who has never tasted the milk from one freshly gathered can have no idea what is meant by "a draught fit for the gods." In their proper state, however, the nuts are not brown and hard, as you see them in northern markets; they look like enormous pale-green apples, slightly elongated, for each still wears its Robin Hood jacket, which is removed before shipment. Being still "alive," as they say on the island, its shell is soft and easily cut with the machete, or long-bladed knife, which every countryman carries, or your own pocket knife may answer the purpose. Make a hole in one end of the nut about the size of a half dollar, and out gushes the milk like a living spring, not by any means such sour stuff as you have seen come out of the cocoanuts at home white as chalk and thick as butter-milk.

The trouble is that the cocoanuts of commerce are gathered before they are ripe and entirely spoiled in transit. The fluid shut up within it should have no suggestion of milk, but be colorless as water, with a slight sparkle like that from some clear mountain spring, except for a slightly sweet and most delicious flavor; and if freshly picked in the early morning, after the nut has been swinging all night in the cool breeze, the liquid is almost ice cold. Where cocoanuts grow you never see inside of their shells any of that hard, white layer which northerners grate and dehydrate (one might as well say de-ecrate), for in its best estate the nut has up such substances, only a creamy white film inside of it, hardly thicker than your thumb nail, which is scraped off with a spoon when eaten. Before drinking the juice the tenderest generally pours it out into another vessel than that which Nature intended; but the sophisticated epicure tilts the cocoanut at just the right angle to let the milk trickle gently down his throat—and, like the elder toper we have heard of, he wishes his throat were a mile long.

There is nothing in the wide world more nourishing or fattening, more health-restoring and youth-preserving. Emaciated invalids are recommended to begin on the juice of half a dozen nuts a day, the dose to be increased according to the patient's inclination. And the invalid is yet to be discovered who does not develop a taste for it so rapidly that in a week's time half a dozen nuts at a single sitting will hardly satisfy him. Each full-grown nut contains nearly a pint of this true "fountain of youth"—the same, perhaps, which the old Conquistadores sought vainly far and wide, expecting to find it gushing out of the earth in some sequestered spot, instead of hanging green and beautiful, everywhere around.

Largest Map in the World.
This is the ordinance survey map of England, containing more than 108,000 sheets and costing in preparation $200,000 a year for twenty years. The scale varies from ten feet to one-tenth of an inch to the mile. The details are so minute that maps having a scale of twenty-five inches "show every hedge, fence, wall, building, and even every isolated tree in the country." The plans show not only the exact shape of every building, but every porch, area, doorstep, lamp-post, railing and fire plug.

It Would Seem So.
"You will observe," said the professor, "the higher the altitude attained the colder the temperature becomes."
"But isn't it warmer up in the mountains?" asked the youth at the foot of the class.
"Certainly not," said the professor. "Why do you think it would be warmer there?"
"I thought the atmosphere was heated by the mountain ranges," answered the youngster.

Source of the Gulf Stream.
Recent investigations have shown that the principal source of the Gulf Stream is not the Florida Channel, but the region between and beside the islands of the West Indies. At Bimini the volume of this warm water is sixty times as great as the combined volume of all the rivers in the world at their mouths.

Man a Ruminant.
There is no doubt some degree of pleasure in eating a good meal, but the chief delight comes in talking about it afterwards. In a way, man as well as the bovine, is a ruminating animal.

The World's Breweries.
Of the 51,000 breweries estimated to be in the world 26,000 are in Germany.

STRANGE SLEEPING PLACES.

Novel Position Assumed by Some People For a Nap.

Probably the strangest sleeping-place recorded was that of a gentleman whom a policeman found sleeping on the top of the sharp spikes of an area railing. Before the magistrate on the following morning he stated that he was never more surprised in his life when he awoke to find himself where he was. One of the spikes had entered the sleeper's clothing without, however, disturbing his slumbers.

There are several authentic cases of bicyclists sleeping while riding their machines, and police constables on duty have been known to fall asleep while standing on the pavement without support of any kind. Recently a man engaged to pick apples was caught indulging in a surreptitious nap astride a branch, and it is quite a common practice of the men who bring garden produce into London for the early morning markets to fall asleep while seated on the shafts of the cart, trusting to their horses in order to arrive safely at their destination.

A hotel servant once dozed off while sitting outside cleaning the top row of windows in a seven-story building. But this feat was eclipsed by a stepladder, who found the distance between the top of the church steeple on which he was at work and the ground below too far to go for his dinner, so he partook of the meal up aloft, and then lay down on the solitary plank, face downward, with his arms hanging in the air, and fell asleep.

At Hackney a man slept nightly for ten years inside a four-wheeled cab. A fire in winter was, of course, out of the question, but his comforts were few, and a few sacks did duty for bedclothes, while for a pillow he used a piece of board.

Struck by Lightning 200 Times.

A very singular record is attached to a deserted and ruined house at Dartmoor, England. It was built by a wealthy landowner, with the intention of making it his country residence; but before the building operations were completed a heavy thunderstorm broke over Dartmoor, and the house was struck by lightning, the roof being dismantled. The damage was repaired and the house quickly finished. No sooner did the owner take up his residence in it than another violent storm struck the house and destroyed the chimney-stack, doing, besides, considerable damage. This made the owner nervous, and he left the house. It was soon shown that his fears were not groundless, for in nearly every thunderstorm that passed over the district the house has been struck, and a fresh portion of it destroyed. Altogether it has been struck over 200 times.

Sound Advice to Sermon Makers.

Rousseau's advice for the composition of a love letter no preacher should follow in the composition of his sermon: "Begin without knowing what you are going to say, and ending without knowing what you have said." The sermon which is made after the Rousseau pattern will merit nothing better than Cleopatra's sneer, "He words me, girls, he words me."

No one is more certain to be impressed with the limitations of language than is the preacher. "A hindrance to thought, though the necessary instrument of it," as Herbert Spencer says.

The Salt Habit.

A medical journal advises against the excessive use of salt. It is first of all a perversion of taste, the condiment destroying the flavor of delicate dishes if too pronounced. Furthermore, it is asserted that an excessive use of salt seriously overtaxes the kidneys to remove it, and that many cases of derangement and disease are due to this excessive use. The salt habit, it is added, is easily acquired, and persons indulging themselves, soon reach a point where nothing is palatable that is not strongly impregnated with salt.

The Difference.

This is a baby. It is a girl baby. How sloppy its chin is! How red its eyes. What horrid contortions it makes with its face. See how savagely it kicks. How like a demon it yells! Yet in a few short years some man will be half crazed with wild suspense, worshipping the very air this being breathes, devoutly kneeling at her feet and frantically begging for one word, one pressure of the hand, even a look, which will give him hope.

THE NEWS IN WASHINGTON.

Admiral Dewey and General Otis Send Reports of the Engagement.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Special).—Admiral Dewey cabled the Navy Department that hostilities had begun between the American Army and Naval forces in and about Manila and the Philippine insurgents. The insurgents, he said, had been the aggressors and had been repulsed. Following is the text of his dispatch:

MANILA, February 5.

To the Secretary of the Navy, Washington: Insurgents here inaugurated general engagement last night, which was continued to-day. The American Army and Navy were generally successful. Insurgents have been driven back and our line advanced. No casualties to navy. Dewey.

Next came the following cablegrams from General Otis to the War Department:

MANILA, February 5.

To Adjutant General:

Insurgents in large forces opened attack on our outer lines at 8.45 last evening; renewed attack several times during night; at 4 o'clock this morning entire line en-until firing was in progress on all the outposts around the city. The American troops responded vigorously, the insurgent fire being heavy and the attack evidently hurriedly planned.

A TRENCH OF THE PHILIPPINE INSURGENTS AT MANILA.

Firing continued throughout the night with an occasional cessation of from half an hour to an hour at a time. At daybreak the warships Charleston and Oatoo began shelling the north side of the city. Their fire was followed later by that of the Monitor on the southern side, the insurgent positions having been previously accurately located.

The Filipino loss is reported to be heavy. The wounded on the American side is nearly 300. Few Americans were killed. The Americans began a vigorous advance all along the line Sunday morning, and soon pressed back the insurgents in every direction, maintained steadily their advanced positions, and captured the villages of San Juan del Monte, Santa Ana, San Pedro, Macati, Santa Mesa and Loma.

The splendid police system prevented a general outbreak in the city, though several soldiers were attacked by natives in the streets.

Lieutenant Charles Hogan and Sergeant Wall were shot by three natives the former being seriously wounded and the latter slightly.

Lieutenant-Colonel Colton was attacked by a native with a sword while riding in a carriage to the front. He killed his assailant with his revolver.

A sharpshooter within the American lines shot and killed a Sergeant while he was sitting at a window of the Second Reserve Hospital.

Colonel William O. Smith died of apoplexy. Many of the insurgents were driven into the Pasig River and were drowned. Several hundred were taken prisoners.

It was evident that the natives have been preparing for some time for just such an attack as this one. In furtherance of their scheme they had cut the telegraph wires, which for a time caused no little bother to the Americans. Most of the damage of this kind was in the city or in the immediate vicinity. The Signal corps were compelled to work hard to repair the out lines.

The American forces could scarcely have been better disposed. It is now known that the attack was fully expected and that every preparation had been made to meet the contingency.

Firing slackened at noon on Sunday, the enemy being apparently demoralized. The American troops, however, are fully equipped to meet any possible attack.

Aguinaldo's private secretary has been arrested as a spy in Manila.

More than a hundred wounded Filipinos, taken from the trenches, are being cared for in the American hospitals.

gaged; all attacks repulsed; at daybreak advanced against insurgents, and have driven them beyond the lines they formerly occupied, capturing several villages and their defense works; insurgent loss in dead and wounded large; our own casualties thus far estimated at 175, very few fatal. Troops enthusiastic and acting fearlessly. Navy did splendid execution on flanks of enemy; city held in check and absolute quiet prevailed; insurgents have secured good many Mauser rifles, a few field pieces, and quick-firing guns, with ammunition, during last month.

MANILA, February 5.

Adjutant General, Washington:

Have established our permanent lines well out, and have driven off the insurgents. The troops have conducted themselves with great heroism. The country about Manila is peaceful and the city perfectly quiet. List of casualties to-morrow.

FAST TIME BY ST. BERNARDS.

W. H. Welsh's Record Trip From Dawson City to Skagway by Dog Team.

The speediest winter trip by dog team from Dawson City to Skagway, Alaska, has been accomplished by W. H. Welsh, who made it in seventeen days with three St. Bernards.

Some dashes made by this trio of snow-shoes were as follows: From Five Finger Rapids to Little Salmon, a distance of fifty miles, ten hours; from Little Salmon to Lake Lyburne to Canyon Hotel, White Horse, sixty-nine miles, twelve hours; from the foot of Marsh Lake to Caribou Crossing, forty-six miles, one day, although they had to break trail all the way; and over the thirty long miles of Thirty-Mile River, ten hours. A speed test was made on the ten miles from Lake Bennett to Log Cabin and over the roughest part of the trail. The distance was covered in one hour and fifty-five minutes.

THE CREAMERY.

Butter must be sweet and clean. That is the first requisite. It can not be perfectly sweet unless the place in which it is made and all the utensils used in its manufacture are perfectly clean.

The old rule was: "Do not use soap to clean the churn"—this referred to sticky rosin soaps.

Ivory Soap can be used freely; it is the best for creameries or dairies, because it rinses easily and leaves neither odor nor taste.

The vegetable oils of which Ivory Soap is made, and its purity, fit it for many special uses for which other soaps are unsafe and unsatisfactory.

LIVER ILLS.

DR. RADWAY & CO., New York:

Dear Sir:—I have been sick for nearly two years, and have been doctoring with some of the most expert doctors of the United States. I have been bathing in and drinking hot water at the Hot Springs, Ark., but it seemed everything failed to do me good. After I saw your advertisement I thought I would try your pills, and have nearly used two boxes; been taking two at bedtime and one after breakfast, and they have done me more good than anything else I have used. My trouble has been with the liver. My skin and eyes were all yellow; I had sleepy, drowsy feelings; felt like a drunken man; pain right above the navel, like as if it was bile on top of the stomach. My bowels were very constive. My mouth and tongue sore most of the time. Appetite fair, but food would not digest, but settle heavy on my stomach, and some few mouthfuls of food come up again. I could only eat light food that digests easily. Please send "Book of Advice." Respectfully, BEN ZAUGG, Hot Springs, Ark.

MAKING CANDIED CITRON.

It Goes Through a Complicated Process Before Ready for Use.

The making of what we call citron is a complicated process.

The fruit from which the finished product is made is very like a large lemon eight or 10 pounds in weight. It grows in groves in Corsica and Calabria upon trees about 6 feet in height.

The first process is to cut the fruit in halves and take out the cores, which are discarded. The peel is then sealed in barrels of salt water for two or three weeks. It is then withdrawn and soaked for 21 days in a succession of syrups, beginning with eight parts of sugar to 20 of water until the final one contains 20 parts of sugar to one part water.

The fruit thus treated is then cooked in a number of large cauldrons, where it simmers for 24 hours. When cool it is skimmed, cooked again with fresh syrup, cooled and cooked a third time. While still hot it is packed in wooden boxes, in which it is sold by wholesale.

The peel thus treated will keep for 10 years, although the fresher it is the better. The slightly bitter flavor of preserved citron is caused by the soaking in salt water. Two hundred people are employed in the factory. The women receive 18 cents a day.

New to Hotel Ways.

Someone had told her that you always have to register, but she wasn't used to hotels; that was apparent from the way she lingered behind the old-time traveling man who stood by the clerk's desk. She wanted to see how it was done. The old fellow had had the same room in the house for nine years. It was always kept for him; No. 63 on the second floor. He had wired three days before that he was coming, so it was all ready for him. He dipped the pen in the inkwell and with an extra flourish or two, scratched down the names, "James Edward Clifford."

"The same old thing?" he asked of the clerk.

"Yup," was the answer.

Whereupon Mr. Clifford wrote down opposite his name "63."

Then the bellboy grabbed his traveling case and conducted him to the elevator.

The clerk dipped the pen in the ink and handed it to the demure maiden who had stood behind the old traveler. She glanced at the last name on the page, then turned for a parting look at the form just passing into the elevator car. She laid her handkerchief and pocket-book on the desk and wrote, "Faith Merrewether."

Then she shot the clerk a modest li-glance and finished out the line by placing "24" after the signature. She looked up blushing.

The clerk smiled, and when he had whispered a room number to the porter and the girl had passed behind the screen he said to himself, "By Jove, she doesn't look it."

Brain Weight of Men and Women.

Sir William Turner shows that among civilized races men have the advantage over women in internal capacity of the cranium and in weight of brain itself. While the average brain weight of the European male is from forty-nine ounces to fifty ounces, in the female it is only forty-four ounces to forty-five ounces. The difference in size and weight begins at birth. Nor is the inequality confined to European races. It is observable among savages, though in a lesser degree. Man is not only the larger and stronger animal, but is fitted with a larger and more powerful supply of brains.

Insects Guided by Smell.

Some experiments recently made in Belgium tend to throw doubt on the truth of the assumption that insects are guided to flowers by the brightness of their colors. Brilliantly colored dahlias were covered so as to show only the disks, the butterflies and bees sought these flowers with the same eagerness and frequency as those which were fully exposed. The conclusion reached that the insects were guided by the sense of smell rather than by their sight seems conclusive.

American Women.

A prominent Spaniard, a long resident in Havana and a man of unusual observation and intelligence, attributes the strength of the United States to the strength in mind and body of the American women. He says: "Give a million American women as wives to the young men of Spain and the nation in a quarter of a century will take its place again among the greatest nations of Europe."

A Curious Fight.

One development of the fight between the English tea firms has been their taking up the sale of wines and liquors as part of the business. Now one of the chief contestants announces that newspapers, books, and magazines will be sold in all its tea stores.

FAMOUS SOUVENIRS.

RELICS OF CELEBRITIES WHICH ARE NOW WIDELY DISTRIBUTED.

The Cradle and Sleigh of Napoleon—Prince Charlie's Walking Stick—Empress Josephine's Piano and the Wedding Dress of Marie Antoinette.

An interesting relic is the cradle in which the Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte slumbered in his infancy. It is put to a pleasing use by its present owner, Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger. Standing in a corner of her drawing-room, it is heaped full of flowers at most times of the year. Mrs. Cruger picked up the cradle in Paris at an auction. It is of dark wood and without any particular ornamentation.

America possesses another relic of Napoleon Bonaparte—the sleigh in which he escaped from Russia in 1812. It belongs to a Chicago woman, and has been in her husband's family for fifty years or more. A parchment—certificate, dated April 7, 1816, and signed by a Bonaparte of Silesia—testifies that this is the sleigh in which the Emperor of the French made his escape from Russia. The harness is a wonderful piece of workmanship.

Queen Victoria treasures among her relics Prince Charlie's walking stick, the one which was mislaid by him on the morning of Culloden and afterward found in his bedroom. The handle of the stick has carved upon it two heads, one representing Wisdom, the other Folly. The Queen got it at auction for £160.

The Empress Josephine's piano is in a London showroom. It was made in 1808 by order of Napoleon and presented to the Empress. It was stolen during the sacking of the Tuileries and afterwards sold at public auction. The case is of the finest rosewood, ornamented with ormolu, while the keys are made of mother-of-pearl and tortoise shell. Napoleon's taste is shown by the fact that one of the five pedals works a drum and triangle attachment.

The wedding dress of the unfortunate Queen Marie Antoinette has been discovered in the ancient church of Kenuweg, near Vienna. It has for many generations been the custom for Austrian brides to present their wedding dresses to a church for the adornment of an image of the Holy Virgin, or to be made into vestments.

The mirror before which Gen. Washington made his daily toilet has for the last thirty-five years been hanging in a house in Warrenton, Va. It was purchased at the sale of the personal effects of Lawrence Washington, a great-nephew of the first President. The glass is framed in gilt, and at the top, in a background of white and black enamel, is Washington's coat of arms engraved in gold, with his motto, Eritus acta probat.

Another Washington relic is a sage palm belonging to the White House. The present head gardener has looked up his history, and verifies the fact that it was presented to Gen. Washington by a Baltimore merchant, who got it in Cuba when it had already obtained a respectable age. The plant was for a long time at Mount Vernon, but one day Washington presented it to a fair visitor who admired it. The plant was an heirloom until about fifty years ago, when with other things it was sold at auction and secured by the head gardener of the White House. It is thought to be 200 years old—older than the Government.

The Mole's Eyes.

The mole has been supposed to be almost destitute of eyes, either through disuse or because it has little need of such things in its underground habitation. The new idea is that it burrows in the ground to get out of the light. Its eyes are so constructed as to receive only the impression of light, and that impression is painful or annoying to the animal, which dives underground to get rid of the disagreeable sensation.

Ice From Glaciers.

Glaciers are now "exploited" to furnish ice for the market. Perhaps the first was that of Du Casset, on Mount Pelvoux, from which the ice is brought down by an aerial line and sent to Paris. At Grindelwald, above Interlaken, the glacier from which the river Lutschine issues, has now been turned to account in this way.

Genius Rewarded.

To the son of a Yorkshire carpenter is due one of the most useful inventions of the last century, and for the first accurate chronometer—his fourth attempt—he received the reward of $100,000 offered by the Board of Longitude.

Citation.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.—To George Edwards, Charles H. Edwards, Joshua Edwards, Allen Edwards, Mary J. Perrigo. SEND GREETING: Whereas, E. Byron Whitton of Genoa, N. Y., has lately applied to our Surrogate's Court of the County of Cayuga for the probate and grant of a certain instrument in writing, dated the 9th day of January, 1899, purporting to be the last will and testament of Eber Edwards, late of Venice, in said county, deceased, which relates to both real and personal estate. Therefore, you and each of you are cited to appear in our said Surrogate's Court, before the Surrogate of the County of Cayuga, at his office in the court house, in the city of Auburn, on the 28th day of February 1899, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, and attend the probate of said last will and testament. And those of you who are under the age of twenty-one years, are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, you will appear and apply for the appointment of a guardian, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the surrogate to represent and act for you in this proceeding. In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the seal of our said Surrogate's Court to be hereunto affixed. Witness, Hon. George B. Turner, Surrogate of the County of Cayuga, at the Surrogate's office in the city of Auburn, this 11th day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine. WALTER E. WOODEN, Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

Foreclosure Sale.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated February 28, 1896, executed by Michael Bruton, of Genoa, N. Y., to Levi Starner, of the same place, recorded in Cayuga County Clerk's office, on March 2, 1896, at 9 o'clock, A. M., in Liber 128 of Mortgages, page 583, and no suit or proceeding at law having been instituted to recover said money, or any part thereof, and the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the first publication of this notice being $575.73, which is the whole amount unpaid thereon; now, therefore, notice is hereby given, according to the statute in such case made and provided, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and therewith recorded, the said mortgage will be foreclosed, and the premises therein described, by a sale of the same at public auction, on the 18th day of March, 1899, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the front door of the First National Bank in Moravia village, N. Y. Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that tract or parcel of land situated in the town of Genoa, N. Y., and being a part of lot No. 21, in said town, bounded and described as follows: Beginning in the southwest corner of lands now (1895) owned by James Lowe and in the center of said highway; thence west along the center of said highway and being a part of lot No. 21, in said town, bounded and described as follows: Beginning in the southwest corner of lands now (1895) owned by James Lowe and in the center of said highway; thence north along the center of the highway running north from the first three corners west of the place of beginning, and to lands owned (1895) by Lucie and John Mead; thence east along the south line of said highway, and about twenty rods; thence north along the east line of said Mead's land to land of John C. Lechner; thence east along the south line of said Lechner's land owned by said James Lowe; thence south along the west line of said James Lowe's land to the place of beginning, containing fifty-six acres of land more or less, and being the same premises conveyed to said party of the first part by Cornelius Foot and wife by deed dated in Liber 8, 1875, and recorded in Cayuga County in Liber 128 of Mortgages, page 56. Dated December 15, 1898. LEVI STARNER, Mortgagee.
