Delbert Dennis of Kelloggsville has excellent reasons for believing that dairying pays. During the past season Mr. Dennis kept seven cows and carried the milk to the Slone cheese factory at Sayles Corners. From April 4th until December 9th. the seven cows produced 37,870 pounds of milk, which sold for $363 .-27, averaging $51.89 per cow.

A man in Binghamton had his eye injured by a firecracker in the street on the Fourth of July. He has sued the city for $10,000 damages, alleging that the municipality was negligent in permitting the explosion of firecrackers. This probably is the first case of just this kind on record, and if it should be decided in favor of the plaintiff would establish a new standard for caution in cities.

Director of the Census Merriam suggests to the agriculturalists of the country that they use some of their spare time between now and June next in thoroughly preparing themselves to answer promptly and accurately the questions relative to the acreage, quantity and value of crops; the quantity and value of all farm products, animal and vegetable; the cost of fertilizers and farm labor and in fact all the items of farm operations for the calendar year, 1899, which the census enumerators are by law compelled to ascertain. This, he says, will result in a full and accurate census.

We understand that A. D. Payne of the South New Berlin-Bee, who was awarded the contract for printing the Chenango county Supervisors' Journal for 1899, has thrown up the job, and in all probability a new contract will have to be made with some other printer, which will greatly delay the appearance of the book. Mr. Payne found the work more of a job than he anticipated, and meeting with unexpected annoyances became discouraged and abandoned the work after completing some 126 pages. Mr Payne's action is hardly to be wondered at considering the exceedingly low figure at which he undertook the work, $1.93 per page. -Oxford Times.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employee of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cared by this remedy and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. #### Sponge Sugar or Honeycomb.

Beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth, and add a teaspoonful of fine sugar. Boil to the "soft crack," without cream of tartar, two pounds of granulated sugar with balf a pint of water. Have ready a bottomless frame, say five inches square, or a tin hoop. Place this on a wet marble or plate; it is well to cover the frame, if of wood, with paraffin paper. When the sugar is cooked remove it from the fire and add the sweetened egg and whatever flavor or color is desired. Stir it altogether for a minute until the sugar rises in the saucepan. After it rises let it fall. Stir, and it will rise the second time. As it does so, pour it into the frame and let it remain until cold. Remove by passing a string or palette knife under it. Break in pieces. Success depends upon not pouring it out the first time it rises, but doing so while it is rising the second time before it begins to fall.-Cosmopolitan.

A LESSON IN HISTORY.

BY WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

**W HAT are you going to tell us a story about to-night?" asked Tom, as he about to-night?" asked Tom, as he settled down beside his grandfather's knee after the evening meal had been finished. "I'll let you and Nellie guess what it is going to be about," said grandpa.

"It is going to be about China, I know," said Nellie, "for you told us China was a veritable story land."

"It is a story about Africa, where they are having a war now," said Tom. "My teacher asked me the other day if grandpa had ever told us a story about that, and I know he has been there.

"I am airaid you are both wrong," said grandpa. "Neilie is right in saying that (Thena abounds in stories, and you are right in saying that I was in the country once where there is a war going on at the present time, and I may tell you a story about what I saw there, or some of the people who live there, at another time, but this evening I am going to tell about something else.

"You know I crossed the Pacific ocean when I came here to live with you-"And be our real grandpa?" broke in Nelhe, who considered her grandfather of more importance since he had taken up his residence with them.

"And I crossed the great mountains and piains in the western portion of our own country. I had come from the east, and there I had visited a historic church in the islands which we recently got from Spain, and am going to tell you a story of that some day. But to go on with this story. As I rode across the country between here and the Pacific ocean I thought of the man who had built the long line of railway that had made such a pleasant journey possible, and of all the good he had done in the world before he died. I did not think of him again so very much until to-day, when I was reading in a magazine of a university he had founded, and what a great institution it is to be, all because of the money he had given

"I knew that same man when he was but a hoy; and both of us were living in New York state together. He was only a poor boy then, and had no prospect of becoming the rich man that he was when he died. He used to do all sorts of odd jobs for the people in the part of the country in which we both lived, and, was much liked.

"I was only a boy, too, and a poor boy at that, just like he was, but I am afraid I did not improve my opportunities as he did, and so I am still poor, while when he died he had so much money he hardly knew how to count all of it.

"I was about 20 years old, and this boy was two years older than that, when we first heard in the east of the discovery of gold in California. By that time he had studied law and had become a lawyer, but as soon as I heard the news that set all the people of the eastern states wild I went to him and wanted him to go to California with me. He told me that he did not want to sacrifice the small practice he had already built up Dairy thermometers. All glass dairy thermometers 15 cts. Guaranteed and finally when I could not get him to and finally when I could not get him to an and finally when I could not get him to go with me I started out alone and went by ship around Cape Horn to California. Like hundreds of others who went to Caldid find my friend from home. His law office had been burned down and all his law books destroyed, and as he did not have money enough to buy new ones he concluded he would follow me to the west.

It was the merest chance that we found each other, and for a long time we worked together, but neither of us were very successful, and finally I concluded I would go somewhere else, and asked him to go with me, but he wouldn't do that. He said that it did not pay to keep jumping from one thing to another, and that as he had come to California to find gold he was going to stay there until he found it, if there was any to find

That was just the secret of his success all through life. He kept everlastingly at a thing until he accomplished it. When I found that I could not induce him to go with me I started out alone to see some of the world. and went from one place to another all over the Pacific ocean, always in search of the wealth which I never found. Then I went to Asia and Africa and Europe, and then back again to the Pacific, never staying very long in any one place, but never finding the gold which I was so sure would come to me at each new place that I tried. I never had to go hungry, and I was never at a loss to find money enough to take me to the next place I wanted to go, but I never found the fortune I was always looking for. "While I was doing all this running around my boy friend was still at work in California. Like many others, he found gold, but not in the immense quantities that he had expected, and when he had secured enough to go into something else he did so, but still stayed in California. He and his brothers, who had gone to California before him, started a store and sold goods to the men who were looking for gold. The people saw that he was a man who could be relied upon and they began to trust him more than they would the men who jumped about from one thing to another. "The men who had gone to California in wagons across the plains or by ship around Cape Horn realized the need of a railroad to carry people straight across the country in a few days, and when they organized the company that was to build one of these roads they elected him the president of the company. A little later the people of his state found him a good man to trust and they elected him their governor, and so it went on. The people always found him just the man they had expected he would be, because he had kept at the one thing. After he had been governor the people sent him to the senate of the United States.

"This man had a little boy who came to him after he had made his great wealth, and he wanted his boy to see the great countries of the world, and he made him travel everywhere. But a few years ago when the boy was in Italy with his mother he died, and his father felt very badly about it, so he determined that all the money he had made, which he had intended his boy should have, should be used to educate other boys and girls. He felt that that was what his boy would have liked to have done with it him-Merritt's Wagon Shop self, and so he estiblished a great university in California, and he called it the Leland Stanford, Jr., university, for that was the

"When I was reading about that school to-day, and I realized who had built it and given to it such vast sums of money, it seemed to me that it was not only a monument to Senator Stanford's son, but to the senator as well, and that it would be an inspiration to other boys to stick to one purpose in life, instead of continually changing. Do you not think so?"

"I think that was a good story," said Tom.
But I am glad you traveled all around, so that you can tell us the good stories you do."
"It is bedtime now," said mamma, as she started up the stairs with the baby, and Tom and Nellie followed her, but grandpa's esson had not been lost upon them.

MOVING ROYAL SEPULCHER.

The Coffined Ashes of British Monarchs Carted Off Like Common Ciny.

The year 1899 will become a notable one in the annals of British royalty as marking a phenomenal rattling among the dry bones of past monarchs. The coffins with the remains of George III., George IV., William IV., the duke of Kent, the duke of York, Princes Octavius and Alfred (children of George III.) have been removed from Westminster Abbey; the duchess of Brunswick, Princesses Charlotte and Elizabeth (children of William IV.), Queen Charlotte, Princess Charlotte, Princess Amelia, Queen Adelaide, Princess Augusta, King George IV. of Hanover, and, last of all, the present duchess of York's mother, the duchess of Teck, are being moved from where they lay to make room for those who must inevitably follow in the years that are to

The royal sepulcher, which is situated directly beneath St. George's chapel, and the royal memorial chapel at Windsor castle, is one of the places to which no member of the public is ever admitted. Some one of the royal family may pay an occasional visit; some few, very few, privileged persons have at times been known to have had their curiosity satisfied, but from the public eye the place is kept secret. Even by those who have been permitted to descend the stairs and pass through the gates into the presence of the royal dead the visit could not be called inspiring. First of all, there was the getting down-no easy matter even with the required permission; and there is no wonder the visitors were few, except when the sepulcher had to be opened to receive a new inmate.

The bottom gained, nothing more was visible for a time but the heavy gloom, all the more weird by the dim light given by the two sickly candles and the lantern carried by the watchman. Gradually, as the eyes accustomed themselves to the light, or, ifornia in those days, I did not find much rather, the darkness, one began to disgold, but before I had been there a year tinguish massive octagonal pillars, supporting what seemed to be a vaulted roof. Down the center ran a long stout table and round the sides some shelves, upon which rested strange dark things that did not in the gloom look what they really were-the coffins containing the dust and ashes of long since departed royalties.-Chicago Chronicle.

CHILD AS AN INDIVIDUAL.

The Schools Cannot Give the Poise of Selfbood to Developing Characters.

The personal side of life is as important as the social side. When suppressed it breaks out in a riot which lays waste the moral and intellectual forces. Too many instances will occur to everyone to make it necessary to emphasize this fact. The world echoes to the complaints of men and women of genius whose individuality has been in some way throttled by false claims. upon them. Few have attained a sane and sweet possession of selfhood while fulfilling their duty to humanity. And these few were either strengthened early by beneficent influences within the home, or they gained in maturity through severe struggles the poise that ought to have been established for them in childhood. Only through the home, only through the assistance of parents adding to natural gifts of insight and sympathy a disciplined understanding, can the child properly develop his individual nature. A complete education must combine the community teaching of the school with the individual teaching of the home. Let parents cease to think that their duty is done when they commit the care of their child to trained. instructors. Putting aside, as far as they can be put aside, physical and moral education, even intellectual education itself depends for its best interests largely upon parents. For mental activity starts from feeling, and all the higher thoughts which may come to us as the result of knowledge and experience have their springs deep down in our emotional life. What we learn to admire in childhood becomes unconsciously the object of our ambition in maturity; and as will is merely a wish turned luto an act, and our ultimate character is the result of willing, it is evident that the most powerful agenta of our destiny are those which arouse within the infant mind those desires which are to pass into the motive powers of our later life.-Florence Hull

DRAINAGE FOR FARMS.

A Very Satisfactory System May Be Introduced at a Comparatively Small Expense.

Quite often tile drains do not come up to expectations. The term of their usefulness is much shorter than the durable nature out of which the tile are made would indicate. In soft or quicksandy ground they are apt to get out of line. At places the line of the drain may come near the surface. At such places and at the outlet, tile are apt to be crumbled by freezing, unless they are vitrified, which adds much to their cost. In common with all kinds of drains they are, more or less, liable to become shoked with roots or silt or injured by the presence of vermin. There is scarcely a farm but needs drainage and were it more generally known that wood or stones form a very respectable substitute for tile, perhaps there would be more improvement along this line. Doubtless many are deterred by the cost of tile, especially in more remote sections where freight rates are high, but it is in just such localities that the farmer has an abundance of the other materials for constructing drains.

Large stones, if they have to be removed from the fields, may be advantageously used. In this case the ditches have to be dug wider at the bottom and require the removal of more earth. A row of stones should be laid on each side of the ditch bottom, leaving an open space through the middle which is covered with flat stones and then plenty of smaller ones thrown in. If smaller stones for filling are not to be had, straw or some waste material should be placed in before the dirt is thrown back.

A board drain is quickly made and when carefully laid with durable wood is very lasting. Oak and chestnut are the most durable of our northern woods. Chestnut is easily rived, and rived boards last longer than sawed. Cypress rives easily and when placed higher average of merit, it will be under the ground where it is wet all the time, almost indestructible. The earth becomes packed around the that not every cow with a perfect boards which being where they receive no blows or jars retain an open passage for water long after the material begins to decay. A board six inches in width should be nailed to one of the same dimensions, and of any desirable length, and laid along the bottom of the drain like an inverted trough as at a. If the material is rived and there are some narrow boards, the narrow ones may be nailed over two others as shown in b.

The ditch need not be over a spade's width on the bottom. Its depth is altogether a matter of circumstances. In draining out low places you have to cut the surrounding land deep enough to get the minimum of fall. This minimum of fall for a board drain is greater than for round tile, and may be set down as about three inches per 100 feet of drain. The deeper the drain the farther it will drain, but it is not thought to be of advantage to make very deep drains in stiff clay soils. In these kinds of soils the drain will not do its best at first, but will improve with years-the ground gradually becoming more porous. Two feet of stiff clays and three feet for lighter soils the boards, have them fit closely and cover any holes with small pieces of boards, so the dirt cannot get in. Be sure to stop up the outlet with coarse wire screening, so as to keep out rats, rabbits, etc.

In laying drains with boards it pays to have the bottom even and straight as possible and the grade uniform, otherwise the dirt bottom may wash out or fill up in places. In getting the grade the assistance of an engineer is sometimes advisable, but I will describe below an instrument which a farmer of ordinary ingenuity can make at home and with it do his own grading. Many practical ditchers make use of water in the bottom to dig by, and where there is plenty of fall for short distances this does very well. But sometimes there is no water and experience has taught that in digging by the water the ditcher will get a large fall, and oftentimes it is of the greatest importauce to get the minimum of fall.

Take a straight pine board six feet three inches long, as shown at c, and fix it in the center and at right angles another board one-half as long. At ends of long arm fix sights and from the center suspend a plumb bob with string thread. The apparatus can be fastened to a Jacob's staff with a thumb screw and clamped in any position. When the instrument is clamped so that the thread coincides with zero on the scale, then the sights on the long arm will be level. The scale is divided by lines one-sixteenth of an iach apart. When the instrument is moved so that the thread covers one space, the line of sight will correspond to a grade of two inches to 100 feet. When moved two spaces from zero the line of sights will correspond to a grade of four inches to 100 feet, etc .- American Agriculturist.

Sorghum bagasse is one of the very best materials with which to mulch strawberries and raspberries,

THE DAIRY STABLE.

To Keep It Clean and Free from Bad Odors Should Be the Proprietor's First Duty.

Keeping the cow stable clean and sweet is one of the necessary requisites of good dairying. It is impossible to draw milk in a stable that is nauseating in its atmosphere and have the milk pure. The atmosphere furnishes the cause of bad odors that become worse when developed in the milk. It is not infrequent that a man takes great pains to have his hands washed and clean clothes on when he milks, and yet allows the odors of the manure to so permeate the whole stable that it is impossible to get good results as to a clean product. Every few months the stable should be given a thorough cleaning, using not only lye washes but disinfectants as well. Then the daily task should be to keep it clean. Of course it is not possible to do as a great New Jersey dairyman does-keep a man to do nothing but to remove the droppings as fast as they are made, but the barn should be cleaned out often enough to prevent the odors from permeating everything. Whitewashing is valuable because it not only covers up germs that may have escaped the disinfectant washes, but acts as a reminder to the dairyman that his stable is to be kept clean. Dirt cannot accumulate on whitewash without being recognized, and thus the cleanings are likely to be nearer together. Some have adopted the practice of painting the boards near the cows with coal tar. This would appear to be a good thing, as it prevents the boards taking in filth and holding it. They should also be easier cleaned for this painting.-Farmers' Review.

TYPICAL DAIRY FORM.

Some of the Principal Points Which Distinguish the Milk Cow from the Beef Animal.

An outline is herewith given-taken from an illustration of a noted Guernsey cow-that shows almost the ideal shape for a dairy cow. In breeding to raise the herd year by year to a well to keep such an outline as this constantly in one's mind. It is true dairy form shows herself to be of exceptional dairy merit, but the best tion" and twisting it between thumb dairy cows so uniformly correspond to and finger leave it in lieu of a cardsuch external characteristics that one will make no mistake in making the dairy form his ideal in breeding. Not all cows with "dairy form" show excellence at the pail and churn; but few, on the other hand, show such ex-cellence that do not show these external characteristics. It is the only wise course, then, to breed for them, and to regard the exceptions that occur as "proving the rule."

The distinguishing external marks that characterize a good dairy cowwhich are so excellently shown in this them t rody, large in the "barrel" and rear quarters, and light and thin in the fore-quarters; a large udder with large, well-placed teats, looseness and vellowness of skin; severe leanness of body as opposed to the rounded and waxiness of horns, a "dishing" face, and full, mild eye. Experience has shown that the great body of the best dairy cows possess such points as have been mentioned. It is safe, then, for the breeder to photograph such an cutline as is here given firmly upon his mind.-Webb Donnell, in Orange Judd Farmer.

HINTS FOR DAIRYMEN.

The cow loveth a generous feeder. Better let that calf be a little fat than a little starved.

No man can have a clean conscience and a dirty cow-stable.

Be sure you are feeding the good cow enough; be more sure you are not feeding a poor one too much. The good cow will make milk either from her food or from her system-feed is cheaper than cow. - Let the cow's bed be warm and clean and comfortable these nights-Jack

Frost is an insatiable consumer of milk. Not the least valuable merit of good rich silage is its palatability; to make the cow's "mouth water" is a wise part of feeding.

Cows don't always know enough when turned out in the cold to skip around to keep warm and make themselves "healthy." They are more likely to find the most protected spot and stand still while they ruminate upon the proposition that their owner is a fool .- W. F. McSparran, in National Stockman.

The Consumption of Butter,

The statement that the consumption of butter per capita is increasing is true and is likely to have an important bearing on the dairy interests of the whole country. Butter has become a necessary article of food for the great mass of people, and is being more generally used every year, especially when wage earners are well employed. People need not be very old to remember when butter was a fuxury to the working man and during the winter was

"By the way," said Carter, "you were in trouble over a love affair the last time I saw you. Some girl had declined to be your wife, I believe."

"I have a faint recollection of saying something like that."

"Well, you were right. It happened just as you said it would. She changed her mind, and we got married after all."-Chicago Times-Herald.

Astronomical Necessities.

In recent years American readers have become so much accustomed to reports of large telescopes that the impression seems to prevail widely that such instruments are the only conditions necessary for great discoveries. Need I point out to any thoughtful person that this strange impression is not justified? Is it not equally important that the telescope should be located in an atmosphere which is quiescent and steady as well as free from clouds and fog? In addition to good instruments and favorable climate, there must be an astronomer at the little end of the telescope capable of obtaining the best results which his instruments and conditions afford .- T. J. J. Lee, in Atlantic.

Many of the handsomest wraps are made of broadtail, trimmed either with

This season it has reached a notable degree of favor by having the capes, collars, hoods and boleros made of it, bordered or combined with some very dark fur, like otter or sealskin, which renders it strikingly becoming, where once its opaque whiteness rendered it one of the most trying of all the expensive furs worn.

Some of the new glace crepes de chine have more of the effect of a silk brocade than crepe de chine as we know it, and most of the designs are in gay colorings and effects. These fabrics are almost transparent and are designed to take the place when desired of the heavier Marie Antoinette silks, taffetas, fancy satin fabrics, peau de soie, and brocade

Black cloth skirts worn with black and white striped silk blouses, with tucked yoke and jetted collar and belt, laid over white satin, look particularly neat in "half"-mourning, especially when the costume is completed by a short, tight-fitting coat of very dark otter or Persian lamb, reaching only an inch or two below the waist-line, and finished with revers of ermine and a very high Kaiser collar lined inside with the same soft fur as that which covers the

Among the less elaborate styles used for opera and theater wraps, a city importer shows some smart and dainty little capes formed wholly of swansdown, laid over a silk or satin foundation. They are made in snow white, pale yellow, and light brown. Long loops of the down without ends form a sort of graceful scarf drapery down the front, and the collar and cape are lined with various delicate colors in silk or satin. They are offered as novel holiday gifts.

Fine "kid-finished" cloths in ivory white, opal gray, turquoise blue, and a revived shade of old rose are in marked favor for elegant "dress" gowns, and a decoration of real lace is the required adjunct. Point applique looks exceptionally well on these beautiful fabrics, and a fouch of black velvet is added by many Parisian modistes, be the gown for matron or maiden.

All red makes a telling color note in a large assembly, especially now that so many black gowns of velvet, satin or net are worn. Very effective was a dress of Roman-red accordion-plaited chiffon made over satin duchess of the same color. It suited the bright brunette wearer, but anyone copying this style must be sure she can wear the color advantageously, and also that she

If quite tall enough, these straight effects can easily be broken by curving flounces, plaitings, kiltings, overdresses, and the new yoke and peplum effects about the hips .- N. Y. Post.

WHAT ONE DOG DID.

BY J. M. MERRILL.

H IS name was Bingo, and he was big and shaggy, the friend of young and and shaggy, the friend of young and old in the village of Warhawk.

Tom West was Bingo's master, and Tom was the son of a wealthy mill owner, whose great mill gave employment to many people in the Warhawk valley.

A dam extended across the valley, holding back the waters of Sand creek, the weight of which, properly confined and utilized, turned the great water wheel that sent hun-dreds of minor wheels buzzing.

Tom West was 17 at the time of our story, and Bingo had been his companion for many years almost the limit of a dog's lifetime. "Bingo's old and useless now-not worth his feed," said Pete Brown, the mill foreman, one day to Tom. "Why don't you shoot him and get a younger dog?"

"Surely you don't mean that, Mr.
Brown?" cried Tom, regarding his father's foreman in evident surprise.
"Of course I do! Why not? Bingo's old and worthless, and I've noticed lately that he is inclined to be cross.

"Poor old Bingo!" And Tom bent and patted the head of his shaggy favorite. "Old and useless! Well, it may be so, Mr. Brown, but I would as soon think of committing any other wickedness as killing Bingo. When I was a child of six, my father brought a little puppy to our house, and said he was to be mine. I was ill then, but the sight of the pretty dog brought joy to my heart, and acted better than medicine. Bingo has been my friend and companion nearly a dozen years."

"And that is why you hate to part with him?"

"I suppose so." Pete Brown was not the only person who advised Tom West to part with Bingo. Even Mrs. West had called the old dog troublesome, and she thought Tom was too much of a man now to care for pets.

'Lazy, and brings mud in on the carpet! What have you to say to that, old fellow?" Bingo looked up into his young master's face, wagged his shaggy tail, and gave vent

"You shall die of old age if I am to decide your case," assured Tom, turning and caressing his dumb friend.

In times of a freshet there was a tremendous body of water in Sand creek. The dam across the narrow valley was strong, however, and no apprehension was felt. There was really little danger if the gates at the waste-weir were properly tended.

One night, during the absence of Mr. West, a tremendous storm came up and swept the upper end of Warhawk valley. Only a small portion of the storm reached the village about the West mill, and so, without the least thought of danger, the inhabitants of the village and lower valley retired for the

He did dream of Bingo, however, and of a cruel decree that had gone forth, dooming the faithful old dog to death; and this dream tended to make the boy's slumber somewhat

Again the bark, louder than before. Tom rubbed his eyes. A dark face peered in at the window.

"It's Bingo," articulated Tom. "I wonder what troubles him? Why can't he let a fellow sleep?"

Tom felt just a little irritated at the dog's persistence, and facing the window once more, he cried:

"Bingo, go away!"

Renewed whining and scratching resulted, however, and as Tom, in his sleepy state, refused to heed this, the huge paws were struck against the glass until it was shat-

Then Bingo bounded through and seized Tom by the bare foot, closing his teeth by no means gently.

This served to rouse the boy thoroughly, and he sprang from his bed in an angry mood. "You bad dog! See the ruin you have Tom proceeded no further, for at that moment a weird and awful sound filled his ears—the roar of water, and crash and hum of machinery! Drawing on his clothes, the boy rushed outside to see the angry water just ready to break over the dam. The great water-wheel had been started by the overflow, and an awful danger menaced the dwellers of the lower valley. Should the dam give way, the torrent would sweep scores of human beings to destruction.

Quickly the voice of Tom West roused the nearest dwellers, and the great gates at the waste-weir were raised, and the flood poured down its natural channel. The gate at the mill was also raised, the gearing thrown out so that only the water-wheel turned, and the startled men awaited the result with the

It was Tom West who uttered the last words, with his hand on the old foreman's

"True. But for you, Tom, we should have been doomed. I shudder to think of it." "Not for me, Mr. Brown," declared the boy, in a low voice, "but Bingo."
"The dog?"

And then Tom West told the story of Bingo's part in the work of the night. Tears stood in the eyes of the man and boy

Partly Correct.

Most of the stores in the remote business sections of the city are constantly annoyed by children of the neighborhoud coming to the door and asking for cards, empty boxes and similar articles. The clerks are, of course, down on the youngsters, and the warfare never ends. The other day a small boy poked his head in the door of a West side store and called out:

"Say, mister, got any empty boxes?" "No," said the clerk, not very politely.

"Got any cards?"

"No." "Got any almanaes?"

"No."

"Got any empty bottles?" "No."

"Got any sense?"

River Is Forever Singing.

"There is something peculiar about the Yukon river that I have never heard of in connection with any other stream," said Capt. Gray, who has recently been running boats on the big Alaska artery. "From the mouth of the Yukon up as far as there is any navigable water the stream is constantly singing. No matter where you are, there is a sound like that made by escaping steam. At first I used to think that maybe it came from the boiler or engines. But when we were tied up at night, with everything cold, the sound was the same. I have puzzled my brain to find an explanation of the phenomenon, but without avail. The singing goes on day and night. When you get upstream some distance you car hear the rocks rolling over the bed of the river, and this produces a most peculiar sound."-Portland (Ore.) Tele-

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employee of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. The paper was set entirely by natives who can neither read or write English, their copy being translated into Spanish or Tagalog before being put in type. The insert contains various typical war scenes, a good photo of General Wheeler and his daughter, and several views of the soldiers on the firing line, which positions Genoa's soldier says he has been in more than once. General Wheeler had immediate command of the 9th infantry for a time, and to use Denny's words, "he is about as big as a pint of cider but h-l cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes on the niggers." ### A LESSON IN HISTORY.

BY WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

NELL wanted Grandpa to tell her a fairy story. She thought he certainly must have heard some fairy stories in all the raveling around he had done, but Grandpa msisted that he had not, although he had been in China and Japan, where both drazons and fairies are supposed to be numerous. But Tom was delighted with the prospect, for he just hated fairy stories, and wved to hear about real lands and the real and interesting people which Grandpa had

"Do you know any more stories about Africa?" he asked, as soon as Nell would give him a chance to say a word.

"My geography lessons are about Africa now," said Neil, "and it says Africa is a rountry full of wild people, and wild an mais, and I don't like them."

"I know of one lot of people in Africa," began Grandpa, "who, while they may be savages in a way, are not black, and who have a civilization, such as it is, far older than that which we know."

"That's what I want to hear about," said

"Weil, these people that I am going to tell about, or rather I am going to ten about me of them, live in a country called Abyssinia. If you look in your geographies you will find that it is a country in the northern and eastern portion of that great continent,

7.15 P. M. SUNDAYSONLY. For Anburn, and that it is covered with mountains. "Once upon a time, a great many! Have connects at Auburn with New York Central." "Once upon a time, a great manyl years ago, I traveled clear through that country, from the Red sea to the Nie river in Egypt, and that is how I came to meet the man I told you about some time ago, who had given England so much trouble. When I went through that country the boy whom I am going to tell you about was the king of the country, and I was with an army which England had sent into his land to capture him because he had imprisoned some Englishmen when he thought England

"This boy, who afterwards became king of a great country, was the son of a poor woman, but the nephew of one of the na-7.46 P. M. For Ithaca and intermediate tive princes. His father died when he was a stations, Savre, Towanda, Wilkesbarre, Allentown, Philadelphia and New very little fellow, even smaller than Tom very little fellow, even smaller than Tom is, and he hardly knew anything about him.

"In that country they have a peculiar way or giving a boy a name and then never telling anyone what his name is until he becomes a man, but always calling him by his last name all that time.

'The people of the country believed that some day there would rise up a king whose same would be Theodore, and who would be a great warrior who would lead a great army to Jerusalem and capture it from the Turks, and restore it to the Christian religion. These people are all Christians, much as the people of our own land are. At one time they did not believe in Christ but believed only in the teachings of the Old Testament, and in fact they claim to be one of the tribes of Israel. You have heard at Sunday school of the lost tribe of Judah, The most elegantly fitted boats, finest and that is what these people claim to be, and probably they are, for they follow the ractites, and they claim that their king

"But of this boy that I was telling you, If you want to go South beyond Norfolk and whose name the people did not know. that he would lead them against the Turks and capture Jerusalem. But he never did that, for he was never successful in becomland. There was one prince who would land, and without him and his warriors Theodore did not feel strong enough to attempt to capture Jerusalem. "He built a city on a high mountain for his capital, and he lived there for a great many years. For a time he was a good king to the people, but after awhile he became cross and ugly, just as all kings do sometimes, and then he abused his people, and whipped them and punished them in other

"England was to blame for much of this change in his character, for the officials of that country would not humor his queer ways, for they did not understand them. So when he got cross and ugly he imprisoned not only some of his own people, but all the Englishmen he could get hold of as well, and when he would not let them go

'It was in 1868 that this English army marched into his country, and I went with them. We had to travel 400 miles from the place on the Red sea where we started South St., Genoa the place on the Red sea where we started from to where the king's capital was. It was a very hard march for the English soldiers, for there were nothing but big mountains to walk over. As fast as we could get across one we would find another ight in front of us. Had it not been that he king's army had nearly all deserted him bey could have prevented us from going very far among those mountains, for they could have killed every one of us from the mountains before we could have got at them, but he had been so cross and ugly with his people that they would not fight for him, but a great many of them did join the English army and fight against him. "After a long time we finally reached a point from which we could see the king's capital, and I tell you it looked as though we had come all that long way for nothing, for it did not seem as though we ever could get up those steep walls and capture the city. But English soldiers are something like our American soldiers, for when they start to do anything it takes a good many hardships to prevent them from accomplishing their object, and after a time they got to the top of those high walls and captured the city. They never could have done it, however, had the king had much of an army left, but he did not.

"When we found the prisoners for whom we had traveled such a long distance we found that the king had not been as bad as we supposed he had, for they had been well treated. The king himself I did not get to see alive, for he had killed himself when he found that the English soldiers would capture his capital, and all that we could do for him was to bury his body. But he left a wife and a little boy, and the English general tried to do everything he could for them. He tried to take the wife back to the seacoast with him, but the poor woman died before we got there. The little boy, who, if he had lived, would have some day been a king, was taken to another country to be sent to school, but in a little time he died also, and then another man became king.

"The man who is king of this country now is threatening to begin war upon England to get some of the land which he claims has been taken from him and given to Egypt, and if he does I imagine England will find it a harder job to whip him than it was to whip King Theodore in 1868."

PAYING INVESTMENT.

Steel Roadway in Spain Paid for Itself in Two Years by Saving in Road Repairs,

The American consul at Valencia, Spain, reports these facts to the state department at Washington: The road between Valencia and Grao is two miles in length, and an average of 3,200 vehicles pass over it daily. Until 1892 it was constructed of flint stone. The annual cost of keeping it in repair was about 35,000 pesetas. At the rate of exchange at that date this amounted to $5,470. The construction of a steel roadway was determined on, and the annual cost of keeping in repair the central zone of road thus relieved from heavy traffic-which proceeds over the steel rails-is now only 2,500 pesetas, or about $390 at the present rate of ex-

The total cost of the road laid was 60,950 pesetas ($9,506). The expense in detail was: Steel construction, 44,100 pesetas ($6,890); transportation and laying steel construction, 3,250 pesetas ($507); binding stone construction between rails and lateral zones, 13,600 pesetas ($2,109); total, 60,950 pesetas

The rails, during the seven years they have been in position, exhibit a wear of 1-250th of an inch yearly, and have not required repairing.

Ample room is allowed between the rails for two horses to walk abreast. Horses do not appear to slip on rails of this construction. At each side of the rail are layers of binding stones, the paved road being higher than the face of the rails. The municipality of Valencia is of opinion that the saving in cost of repairs through a road of this description pays for its construction in a short time, and other and similar roadways are in contemplation.

From various parts of Spain inquiries have been made concerning this road. I learn that a similar construction was decided on at Alicante in 1898, but was temporarily abandoned when events caused exchange to increase. A toll of (about) eight-tenths of a cent is charged each vehicle passing over this roadway.

roads is good drainage. "Take the water out and keep the water out" is a rule which must be followed in the making of every road. It is not enough to dig trenches at the side of the road and call them drains. These trenches must be real drains; that is, they must have a good fall to a clear outlet, and be in every respect capable of carrying the water away. The road must be roundter quickly to the side drains. There must be a track in the center of the at one price to all. road along which travel can pass. This track must be hard and smooth so as to afford the least friction to travel, prevent ruts and at the same time permit water to run off the sides quickly. Ruts and holes must not be permitted to form, but be filled up as soon as they appear. The drainage must not be abandoned with the taking care of the surface water, but in many instances must extend below the surface in the a firm foundation and lessen the destructive action of the frost-injurious only to wet and water soaked roads. In addition to the simple work on roads, better methods with regard to culvert and bridge construction are greatly needed. The principles above enumerated with respect to roads require an infinity of special methods and treatments in arriving at the best results according as the land is high lying or low; is clay, sand, vegetable-mold, etc.; is difficult of drainage; according to the extent of travel, the quality of road metal obtainable-these and many other varying conditions. That road making and highway work of all kinds is considered a matter in which every man is proficient is probably one of the evils underlying the bad conditions of our roads to-day-Rural World.

CORPORAL QUINN.

When He Was Promoted He Put Himself Through the Manual of Arms.

"Most of the boys," said Capt. Ludwig. "when they entered the service in 1861 were indifferent to positions as noncommissioned officers. But men who had seen service abroad were very tenacious as to the smallest honors. While we were at Bird's Point, Mo., Michael Quinn, an Irishman who had served in the British army, was appointed corporal. From the minute the promotion was announced Mike was a new man. He brushed up his clothes, cleaned his gun and became, as the boys said, 'a superior person.'

"Later in the day he put on his cartridge box and belt, took his gun and marched in an impressive manner to a grove near the camp, used as practice ground by the regimental band. Some of the buys seeing Mike approaching. hid themselves to take observations. Mike marched in good order to the center of the grove, then took himself in hand. He said: 'Now, Mike, ye have bin 'pinted corporal; ye want to drop all yer foolishness; ye're an officer now, and ye want to act like an officer.' Then, changing his tone, he said: 'Corporal Quinn, ye're an officer now, and I'm going to put you through the manual of arms, so that ye can make a proper impression when ye drill the men.'

"The conduct of Corporal Quinn was satisfactory from order arms up to right shoulder shift, then Mike said, severely: 'Now, Corporal Quinn, I will try ye on loading. I suspect that ye're a little wake on loading. Now, Corporal Quinn, load by numbers! Load in nine times! Load! One fand Mike threw his gun into position for loading, and his hand went to his cartridge box). Two! (the hand took the cartridge and carried it to Mike's mouth). Three! (Mike bit off the end of the cartridge and the hand carried it to the muzzle of the gup.) Four!' (the hand made no further movement, and there came over Mike's face an expression of bewilderment and disgust).

"He burst out with: 'What in the devil is the matter with ye, Corporal Quinn? Why don't ye go on? If ye're not more careful I'll have ye rejuced to the ranks! Now, Corporal Quinn, I will try you again. Load in nine times, load!' And he called the numbers again, with the same outcome. Mike stuck at No. 4. Then he burst out with "To hill with the numbers! Load at will, Mike, load at will!' This time it was not Corporal Quinn. Mike returned to camp with the air of a man taking another to the guardhouse. Through all the service, or until he was killed in battle, Mike never heard the last of 'Load in nine times! Load!" "-Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Historic Cannon. Lady Slocomb is a large eight-inch columbiad cannon which helped 2,000 confederate soldiers to bold 30,000 federal soldiers at bay for 15 days at Spanish fort, Mobile bay, when they were besieged by land and by sea. The Lady Slocomb was made at Selma out of Alabama iron, under the supervision of our popular citizen and present commander of Camp Jones, Confederate Veterans, Simon Clay and the late George Peacock. The gun was mounted in Spanish fort and was gallantly served by Capt. Slocomb's company, of the Battalion Washington artillery, of New Orleans, and until it was disabled, on the tenth day of the siege, by the concentrated fire of more than 25 guns. Thirteen of the company fell dead or wounded around it, and their blood still clings to the sides of the old gun. It lay where it fell, covered with the debris of the old redoubt, for 26 years, when it was discovered, and last week it was placed in position on a granite base at the entrance to Memorial hall in New Orleans by the Washington artillery has a monument to Capt. Cuth-bert of Slocomb.—Selma News.

PET OF THE BATTERY.

He Was Only a "Yaller Dorg" But He Won the Hearts of Rough Campaigners.

Major was only a dog-in the "cracker" language only a "yaller dorg." The southern chivalry greet each other as captain or major, and to the uninitiated one would suppose that every person met with in the south had been or was either a captain or a major. Major had evidently belonged at some time to some of the first families of Virginia, as "after the war" I interviewed a native who had represented the "Johnny" side of the army, and from his description and name he had been with the rebel army in the battles of the Wilder-

He came to the old Fourth New Jersey battery soon after the battle at Cold Harbor, and the boys nearly exhausted the vocabulary of dog names until they thought of the name of Major, when he answered to the name in great glee. The keynote had been struck, and Major at once became very friendly to the boys of the Fourth, who in return took kindly to him and divided up their sodas and roast turkey until he became quite a different dog in appearance. He had been evidently a lean dog for a long race before he deserted from the rebels. His good qualities soon developed, and he was soon recognized by all of the boys as a part of the battery.

It was after a brisk action during the latter part of October, 1864, that Major was missing as usual. During his absence the battery was ordered to accompany Gen. Butler to New York city to look after the expected election riots. Returning to the front about the middle of November, we took our quarters for the night on the ground in the midst much good intention we could not help it, and if we could have been home for that night no one would have objected to have shaken paws with the cat.

This landing was several miles away from where he left us on the former occasion. When we got in winter quarters, log corncribs, with shelter tents, near Fort Harrison, on the lands formerly owned and occupied by President William H. Harrison, Major became very strongly attached, forgot his cowardly actions and was seldom found outside of the limits of the camp.

On the memorable morning of April 3, 1865, a shell from the rebel gunboats in the James river above Dutch Gap burst a few yards in the rear of our camp, and must have been in very close quarters to Major at the time, by the way he came bounding through the camp, as if the johnnies were after him. A few minutes later the gunboats were blown up and the earth trembled. Everybody jumped from snug quarters and prepared for the jubilee that was

In about half an hour we were on our way to Richmond. Two companies of cavalry were in our advance, but, with Major and the battery, we were the first to enter the city of Richmond, then about one-third burning, halting at Libby prison and Castle Thunder to see if any of our boys were left in those cattle pens.

We toek our position at Camp Lee and the army followed the retreating army to its capture, or, rather, unconditional surrender. In a few days after Major had shown symptoms of inexpressible delight and friendliness to the boys, who partook of his characteristics, in token of good fellowship. Between eight and nine o'clock in the evening strange sounds were wafted on the air in the direction of Fort Drury. Nearer and nearer they came. Distant bands, White, A. McIntos rode before, and our time had come to be called up in line to hear what all the racket was about.

The dispatches were read. Lee had surrendered and the war was over. Major was here, there and everywhere at the same time, catching the caps of the boys as they came down and returning them to the original owners.

We pass many memorable events that happened to Major and the boys until we came homeward bound. Transported to Baltimore, Capt. Doane chartered the only decent car on the train for the accommodation of "we officers." The remainder of the train was made up of box and cattle cars-good enough for the "coffee coolers." On boarding said train the conductor objected to Major and gave him a kick. The boys in turn kicked the conductor, and i. would have gone hard with him but Lieut. James B. Morris came and quieted the insult and explained that Major was a part of the battery .- J. P. Gray, in National Tribune.

A Convincing Answer.

"I hobbled into Mr. Blackmon's drug store one evening," says Wesley Nelson, of Hamilton, Ga., "and he asked me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism with which I had suffered for a long time. I told him I had no faith in any medicine as they all failed. He said: 'Well, if Chamberlain's Pain Balm does not help you, you need not pay for it.' I took a bottle of it home and used it according to the directions and in one week I was cured, and have not since been troubled with rheumatism.' Sold by J. S. Banker.

Rich New Englander Builds a 38 Gity in the Woods.

Much has been said about Vanderbilt's great place down South, but it is left for a New Englander to go Vanderbilt "several better." Mr. James W. Tufts of Boston, Mass., the well-known soda water apparatus manufacturer, went down to see what attracted so many Yankees to the Southern Pines, N. C., region. He saw there a town of fine hotels, handsome homes, beautiful farms and profitable vineyards, and inside of ten days after his arrival he had purchased six thousand acres of land near the town. He employed the best landscape engineers, laid the grounds out and then commenced a great work. Hundreds of carpenters and laborers were employed, building roads, parks, electric car lines, lakes, hotels, houses, deer parks, and in fact everything that money could build. This work has been kept up, until today this man has one of the most unique and handsome places in the world; with its opera houses, restaurants, and everything to amuse and interest.

The best part of this work, is that this oig hearted man is not doing this solely for his own pleasure, but he is entertaining at about actual cost, hundreds of doctors, lawyers, ministers and teachers, who could not afford to pay high rates for rent of cottages and hotel charges. Mr. Tufts is in no way working this enterprise to make money; he sells no lands or lots. His great pleasure is to draw around him hundreds of Northern people from his native section during the winter months, and see them enjoy themselves and gain health at the same time.

What a happy world this would be, if there were more men like Mr. Tufts, who is constantly planning how he can add pleasure to some one's else life, besides himself and family. Pullman built his city for his own financial benefit, Vanderbilt bought his thousands of acres of Southern lands, and built his place for his own pleasure; but Mr. Tufts built his Southern city with its handsome hotels, comfortable boarding houses and scores of cottages for the pleasure of the people. In the final day of reaching James W. Tufts, the wealthy New Englander, will loom up as a
