NEWS ABOUT THE STATE

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

Loren Duley and stepson of Sherburne, were held up in a dark alley in the edge of the village the other night, severely pounded and robbed of $20, by eight toughs with whom they had been drinking in one of the saloons.

Lewis E. Carpenter and Charles Williams have been granted an increase of pension of $25 to $30 and $6 to $10, respectively.—Auburn Ex.

The Moravia Valley Register came out last week in a brand new dress. The Register is just entering upon the 29th year of its existence and the enterprise displayed by the publisher will be appreciated by its readers.

The total cost of the new Catholic church at Ithaca including furnishings, is stated at $65,400.

James H. Wescott of Nelson was adjudged insane and taken to the Binghamton asylum last week. It is said opium caused the disease.

Hiram L. Bauder of Canastota, is one of the first Madison county men to take advantage of the new bankruptcy law. His liabilities are about $5,200, with nominal of $3,300. His failure is largely due to endorsing notes for friends.

It is said that a beet sugar plant will be built at Baldwinsville this year.

The late Nancy L. Beers left $1,000 to the City Hospital, $1,000 to Old Ladies' Home, $1,000 to the Children's Home, and the residue of her estate to the poor of the Presbyterian church.—Ithaca Journal.

Miss Florence LaFave, dining room girl at the Lincklaen House, Cazenovia, attempted suicide Wednesday night by taking a big dose of laudanum. She was determined to die and refused to take an emetic, but Dr. Joy forced one down her and she recovered. Thursday she returned to her home in Hastings.

A new trial has been asked for in the case of Frank Elliott of Greene, convicted of rape and sentenced to five years in Auburn state prison. His victim was his own little daughter.

The $10,000 breach of promise suit of Laura Dickson of Cortland against Millard Crane of this village, which was to be tried at the term of Supreme Court now in session at Auburn, was dismissed Monday by Justice Dunwell, with costs against the plaintiff. Hull Greenfield represented the defendant.—Moravia Republican.

The Illustrated Buffalo Express is regularly read in many public schools. Teachers recommend it for its carefully prepared articles on travel, exploration, progress in science, work of famous men, etc. This is recognition worth having.

The Black Diamond Express while running through Van Etten, Monday afternoon, at a speed which was said to be 90 miles an hour, struck a carriage in which Joseph Bishop, formerly of Ithaca, and a piano tuner, by the name of Williams were seated and killed Williams and the horse and cut Bishop up so badly that he may never recover. Mr Bishop is in the Sayre Hospital.

A cutlery manufactory is to be erected at Hector Falls. A valuable water-power will be utilized, in giving employment to a large number of people.

Hamilton woodchoppers found nine coons in one hollow tree the other day and killed them all.

Mathew Howe of Waterville, aged 35 years, was found frozen to death in the road between that place and Manlius Tuesday morning. He was intoxicated when he left Manlius for home late the night before.

The second term of the Training

Class will begin January 30th, at the High School. All who wish to join should report to principal Bigelow at their earliest convenience.—Moravia Register.

Viewed from this village Wednesday morning, Cayuga lake presented a grand spectacle. Perfectly quiet, air at zero, and water so much warmer that the lake seemed like a great factory, looking like the breath from a thousand engines as it rolled away in the sunlight.—Farmer Review.

Hester Cuykendall, wife of Frank S. Wright, died at her home in Auburn, Sunday, January 8, in the 37th year of her age. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were married in 1891, and have since resided in Auburn. The deceased was a victim of the grip followed by pneumonia, which resulted in her death.

The doctors of the town of Oneida have formed a combination and agreed not to put in bids for doctoring the poor of the town. The town board has asked for bids for doing this work as in years past. The doctors have agreed to refuse to do the work longer under the contract system. This suggestion is that when a physician is needed the overseer of the poor shall call the physician desired by the family and the town pay the bill. It is intimated that this may result in the location of a new physician in town and the job be given to him.—Oneida Post.

Sig. Sautelle has purchased the H. S. Walker lot, just north of Hotel DeRuyter, to give more room for his big show. The price was $700, which is certainly reasonable. The advent of Mr. Sautelle and his large force of helpers to town means a great deal to the business men; our people appreciate this and will welcome him heartily.—Gleaner.

Surrogate's Court.

The will of John Booker, of Venice, was admitted to probate and letters testamentary were issued to E. Byron Whitten, of Genoa, the sole executor named in the will. D. L. Mead and J. S. Banker were appointed appraisers. The deceased gives to his only son, John William Booker, his farm of about 140 acres in Venice; to his grandson, John Booker Mastin, is devised his farm of about 42 acres in Genoa, subject to a life lease now held by his only daughter, Helen A. Mastin; to his widow, Caroline B. Booker, is bequeathed in lieu of her dower, one-half interest in all live stock and farming implements and the life use of the residence farm of about 118 acres in the towns of Venice and Genoa. At her death the 118-acre farm goes to Frank Booker, a nephew who lives in Sussex county England, provided that such nephew complies with certain specified requirements as to a personal residence on the farm. Should he not so comply then the farm goes jointly to the son and daughter of the testator. The personal property goes share and share a like to the son and daughter, excepting several small bequests to other relatives. The personal property is valued at $12,000 and the real estate at $8,750.

The World's Population Increasing. Even in uncivilized parts of the world there is conclusive evidence that population is increasing. The black races of Africa are the most prolific of human beings. A district may be wasted and most of its inhabitants killed, but in ten or fifteen years the devastated region is as thickly populated as ever. Some of the most destructive native wars in this century have been waged in the region behind Lagos, on the Upper Guinea coast, but this district, as large as New York State, is now more densely peopled than any other part of Africa except the lower Nile Valley. The Chinese have demonstrated how vast a population, mainly agricultural, may be supported in a comparatively small area; and in China, as in some other densely peopled regions, the population has increased with perhaps peculiar rapidity, because of its enjoyment of comparative immunity from epidemics of disease.—New York Sun.

A LIVING WITNESS.

Mrs. Hoffman Describes How She Wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for Advice, and Is Now Well.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Before using your Vegetable Compound I was a great sufferer. I have been sick for months, was troubled with severe pain in both sides of abdomen, sore feeling in lower part of bowels, also suffered with dizziness, headache, and could not sleep. I wrote you a letter describing my case and asking your advice. You replied telling me just what to do. I followed your directions, and cannot praise your medicine enough for what it has done for me. Many thanks to you for your advice. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me, and I will recommend it to my friends.—Mrs. FLORENCE R. HOFFMAN, 513 Roland St., Canton, O.

The condition described by Mrs. Hoffman will appeal to many women, yet lots of sick women struggle on with their daily tasks disregarding the urgent warnings until overtaken by actual collapse. The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled, for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometimes past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women during a single year.

CHAPTER I. THE FLOWER OF GALA WATER. "Wan water from the Border hills Dear voice from the old years, The distant music lulls and stills, And moves to quiet tears. "A mist of memory broods and floats; The Border Waters flow; The air is full of ballad notes, Born out of long ago. "I have a friend. Her name is Katherine Janfarie." In these words Jessy Telfair usually answered any remark about the solitude of her home. It was only an apparent solitude, for Jessy knew the laird's fine house was just over the nearest hill, and that there the sweetest maid of Tweedside dwelt—her friend, Katherine Janfarie. She was talking this morning to a stranger who was waiting to see her father. But many strangers called upon the minister of Kirtle-hope, for he was a famous angler, and the lonely manse among the hills by Gala Water was well known to the brothers of the rod and reel. Such visitors, however, had usually been of middle age, dressed for their intentions in rough-gray tweed and well-greased boots, with a long, light waterproof and creel slung across their shoulders. But this caller was fashionably clad in the latest of traveling suits; moreover he was young, and had the air of a high-bred and thoroughly assured gentleman. Standing by the window of the manse parlor, he looked up the winding valley that led to the sources of the river in the heart of the hills. The slopes were covered with sheep and lambs—hundreds of hidden hollows were full of them—and their bleating, and the murmur of Gala Water, hurrying down through archipelagoes of bowlders, and flashing over tiny waterfalls, were all the sounds that broke the stillness of the lonely place. So he turned to Jessy then, and made some remark about the solitude, and she answered him: "I have a friend. Her name is Katherine Janfarie." There was a childlike abruptness and confidence, a sense of sufficiency in this assertion, which was very attractive. It was evident also that she wished to be entertaining, and that she could think of no subject more delightful than her friend. Yet far as the eyes could see in every direction, the hills and valleys were set to song and story. Names that tilt through the noblest ballads in the world—that sanctify the most desperate struggles for religious liberty—that are foremost in the chronicles of valor and science are its familiar names. But Jessy thought of none of them; she said only, when the stranger spoke of the loneliness of the famous lake: "I have a friend. Her name is Katherine Janfarie." Then he looked into the pleasant face of the speaker. He had been expecting to hear of the Douglass and Buccleugh—of the Elliots and Armstrongs—"Crackspear" and "Out-with-the-Sword;" or, at least, of the Covenanters and Erskine and Chalmers, preaching on the heathery heights to vast unbonded reverent congregations; but Miss Telfair did not mention any of these heroes. Her heart was with her friend, and she smiled as her lips made the music of her name. Perhaps if she had considered the matter she could not have been more entertaining, for the young man waiting for the minister knew all about the romance of the past; it was the romance of the present he desired; and "Katherine Janfarie" fell upon his ears like the prelude of music. "Is your friend pretty enough to deserve her pretty name?" he asked. "Pretty? Katherine is beautiful! Katherine is the 'Flower of Gala Water!' On all Tweedside there is none like her." "Then I hope she lives near to you." "She lives just over the hill. I can sit here and watch her come into sight. If she does not see me, when she gets to the little burn by the garden gate she begins to sing and then I run to meet her." "Some one is coming over the hill now—but it is not Miss Janfarie." Jessy looked up and smiled. "That is the minister; Rab Hays is with him. Rab is one of the duke's men, and is worth the knowing. Rab went 'out' with the Froe-kirkers, and when father asked him 'what the duke would say to that,' he answered: 'Indeed, mister, I dinna ken; but I must think o' the Day o' Judgment. The duke willna answer for me on that day.' If Rab sees the minister going to the hills, he is sure to 'Jaander up the water' to meet him. Now I must go and welcome father home. He would think it strange if I did not." The minister entered the front door as Jessy stepped into the hall. He called to her cheerfully, and patting his creel, said: "The burns are a perfect Piccadilly with anglers, Jessy, but I have got a few fine fellows." Then Jessy peeped into his creel and answered: "There are a dozen fine fellows, at least, father." "Maybe so; but oh, lassie, for the days when a man could fish down stream, and yet fill his creel, and his cap, and his pouches with speckled trout!" "There is a gentleman in the parlor. He is waiting to see you. Here is the card with his name printed on it. I never heard of the man before." The minister wanted his dinner and he did not want to see strangers at that hour. He took the card reluctantly, read and then reread it. "There is a land of familiarity," he muttered. "Richard Mowbray, Mowbray Hall, Westmoreland?" His brows went together. Then his face brightened. "To be sure, Jessy," he said, "Mowbray! I know the man! We were at Edinburgh College together." "This Mr. Mowbray is not very much older than I am." "Then it is Richard Mowbray's son. Dear me! How the days go by! Look to the dinner, Jessy; the young man will eat it with us. I will give you half an hour, my dear." Jessy was glad of the interval. She carried the trout to the kitchen to be broiled, and then ran to her room to change the gray winsey she wore for something pretty in silk and plush. She made her black hair a trifle more fluffy and pinned her gold brooch in her lace at her throat. And with her brighter garments she put on a brighter spirit, a more hospitable manner and intent. Yet through all her toilet she was thinking of Katherine—wishing she would come—wondering what Mr. Mowbray would think of her—speculating as to what Katherine would think of him—inventing a little romance in which a certain Jamie Wintoun interfered considerably—and feeling, to a large extent, all the excitement of her imaginations. Then she hastened downstairs and found the dinner on the table, and her father and Mr. Mowbray just entering the dining-room. They were talking politics, and the elder man was quite excited. "You are just a deaf and blind Tory, Mr. Mowbray," he said, "and your father was one before you. You cannot discern the signs of the times any better than the Tories of two thousand years ago could. Go to Galashiels and bide among the weavers a wee. They will give you something to think about." "It is matter enough for thought, sir, to see the men who 'marched' the Border for centuries take to a loom and shuttle. But I cannot understand how it was possible to make Radicals and Socialists out of them." "Man, they were aye that and nothing else. Generations ago their forefathers anticipated the pleasant theories of Mr. George and Mr. Hyndman, and had a persuasion that all property was common by law of nature, and was therefore liable to be appropriated by them." In fact, the Border men have always favored the good old plan that— "They should take who have the power. And they should keep who can." And the minister, smiling, helped himself to another goodly portion of broiled trout. The sentiment called for an example, and he gave it. So the wordy warfare went on throughout dinner until the quiet, dreamful old manse had the aura of a town hall at election time. All the political and social struggles of the day and hour filled the little room, and Jessy heard, as afar off, such stimulating, irritating names as Gladstone, Salisbury, Parnell, Labouchere, until this restless atmosphere of the present was suddenly invaded by a voice from the restless atmosphere of the past—a clear, sweet voice singing an old Border lilt: "For a' that, and a' that, And twice as much as a' that, We'll herry the cattle and mair and grain, And over the Border hame again!" At the first line there was a sudden silence, and a smile flashed over the minister's disputatious face. Jessy looked at him, and she, too, was smiling. Mowbray glanced from father to daughter, interested and curious, and the merry voice came nearer and nearer. In a few moments the door of the room opened, and Katherine Janfarie stood in its place, like a picture in a frame. The song was yet upon her lips and the music of it on her face. Mowbray felt his heart leap, and he rose to his feet. It was an unconscious and involuntary homage, for the girl was marvelously beautiful, an exquisite little creature, with a face fresh and radiant as a new-blown flower, eyes like two stars, and lips that were made to kiss. Some fine instinct had taught her to robe herself this spring day in the very colors of the spring. A dark-greenish dress of softish cashmere fell straight to her feet, but the plaited vest was of pale-primrose silk. She had in her hands a little basket of rushes filled with fresh primroses, and she looked like an angel of the flowers. But the loveliness words describe so tediously was an instant revelation to eyes and hearts, and Katherine had not crossed the room ere Richard Mowbray was conscious of some new element in his existence. Through all his being the full tide of love swept like a fateful fire with irresistible surge and flow, and he was carried off his feet—far beyond his reason—by its unforeseen impetuosity. Even when the minister spoke her name to him, and he was conscious that she was at his side and looking into his face, he was not able to collect or control his outward manhood. The fire she had kindled in his heart radiated from his eyes, and she dropped her eyes beneath their gaze, and was vaguely troubled and yet pleased by the mysterious shock they gave her. A moment or two of embarrassment followed the meeting, but the minister quickly relieved it with a very commonplace remark. "I thought you had a new pony, Katherine," he said, "and I was sure you would be just distracted to ride him over here." "I had also a new hat, sir, and the hat carried the day." Then she took it from her head and turned it about on her hands, and smiled at Jessy, and was quite unconscious that the revelation of her fair, bright hair waving and curling around her brow was a fresh enchantment. "You see, it is a sailor hat," she said, "and one could not be so impossibly absurd as to wear a sailor hat on horseback. I wanted to wear the sailor hat; so I walked." "Well, my dear, we will all walk back with you. I want to see the laird, and I know well the laird wants to see me. So, my bonnie lassie, go away for half an hour and talk your hats well over—straw and ribbons and a'—and let Mr. Mowbray and me get through our argument. He has the last word now, and that, you know, is far wrong." "The last word belongs to women, does it not, father?" "To women by courtesy, Jessy; to ministers by right. Now, Mr. Mowbray, you were saying—" The parlor door closed the argument as far as Jessy and Katherine were concerned. They went slowly up the stairs hand in hand, not speaking until they were in Jessy's room. Then Katherine said: "Who is your guest, Jessie Telfair? And where did he come from?" "His father was at Edinburgh University with my father. They were friends—or enemies. I am not sure which. The elder Mowbray died last Christmas and left father a token. The young man brought it to him." "A token of what, Jessy?" "It might be a love-token. Father put it in his vest pocket and never said a word." "Only think of Minister Telfair having a romance! Such a nice, comfortable, middle-aged gentleman with a love-token in his vest pocket!" "I did not say that it was certainly a love-token, Katherine." "But let us think it was. I have an idea there is a great deal of hidden romance in life. And please, Jessy, where does 'the young man' come from?" "Over the Border—somewhere in Westmoreland." Jessy was trying on the new hat, tilting it this way and that way, and she was not as interested in the question as Katherine thought she might have been. "Never mind the hat, Jessy. You can get another just like it in Galashiels to-morrow. But 'the young man' could not be matched at all, I should say—unless we went over the Border somewhere in Westmoreland, to find his marrow." "Do you think him so handsome?" "Do you not think him so handsome?" "He is not to be compared with Jamie Wintoun." "Perhaps not, if the comparison be made by inches. But then Mr. Mowbray is all alive. His hand was hot; its clasp went straight to my heart; his very finger-tips tingled. I know, for I touched them. Jamie Wintoun is made of clay—you never doubt it." "Mr. Mowbray is also made of clay." "Informed with spirit." "Jamie has some spirit. He is a bit of a laggard truly, but, generally speaking, he does what he wants to do. Mr. Mowbray is only a bird of passage; he is here to-day and to-morrow he will be gone." Katherine did not contradict this prophecy. She walked to the window and looked out over the green desert and up to the gray firmament above it. "It will rain at sunset, Jessy," she said. "Let us hasten the minister's argument. This bird of passage will want somewhere to sleep. Are you going to ask him to stay at the manse?" "Father has said nothing to me. I will speak to him as we walk over the hill." Perhaps it was the supposed need for obtaining this information which led Jessy to range herself at her father's side and with a smiling movement indicate to Mr. Mowbray that his duty was to be Katherine's escort. It seemed, however, the most natural of positions; neither of them felt a moment's surprise at their sudden companionship. They sauntered through the garden, which was full of early flowers, and Katherine pointed out the sweet freedom and democratic friendships that were permitted there. "Pansies are everywhere you see," she said, "and the rose-trees have no upper beds to grow in, and the lilies are not too saintly to mingle with the gadabout honeysuckle-vine and the very worldly poppies." "Yet the place is pretty now, and it will doubtless grow more lovely with the summer. My gardener has but one idea, and that is to make geometrical shapes and fill them with colored leaves or blossoms." [TO BE CONTINUED.] HYPNOTISM AS A DRINK CURE. It is Now Employed to Abate the Stings of Intemperance. Many and varied are the so-called cures for that curse to humanity—habitual drunkenness. The latest treatment, and possibly one of the most effective and successful methods employed, is hypnotism. Naturally the habitual drunkard is considered harder to cure because he is in a state of perpetual intoxication, while the dipsomaniac is only periodically drunk, but men versed in the knowledge of suggestive therapeutics say with the former drunkenness is a habit and with the latter a form of insanity. A habit can be cured by suggestion, while the patient is under a hypnotic influence; as is every day being manifested, while insanity is rarely cured by a like treatment. Therefore the average cures effected by hypnotic suggestion number 80 per cent, the remaining 20 usually being cases of long standing dipsomania and people who really do not care to be cured. The patient must work with the hypnotist, who is usually a registered physician. He must want to be cured and do his best to relax entirely the mind and body and to go to sleep as he is told when the magic hypnotizer of silver is held before his eyes. When he is asleep he is told that he will not care for liquor when he leaves the place, the physician speaking in a soothing monotone. The desire to be cured, the confidence in the healer, the perfect rest for the nerves, together with the physical exercise practiced and the nutritious food provided, stimulate the heart and stomach until the patient forms the habit of going without liquor. Then he goes away cured, the treatment having lasted from ten to twenty days. The stronger the patient's mind the sooner he will be cured, for the greater will be his determination. This method of curing the liquor habit by hypnotism and suggestion is now being practiced by eminent physicians all over the country, and is being taught in one of the leading medical colleges of Chicago. It is strictly "professional," for not one of the instructors will teach the art outside the medical profession. Vast Wealth in Jewels. The glorious pearl necklace which the emperor of Austria presented to the late empress on the christening of the miserable Crown Prince Rudolph has been left to the young Archduchess Elizabeth, together with many other jewels, by her grandmother's will. The empress' own jewels, independent of those belonging to the crown, were not long since valued at $7,000,000. Doubly Graceful Speech. It is not every man who knows how to compliment a woman gracefully. The following dialogue took place between a very pretty lady singer and a celebrated composer, who is by no means addicted to fattery: "Tell me, my dear maestro, which would you like better, to be blind or deaf?" "Deaf, madam, when I am looking at you, and blind when I hear you sing." The Chinese have a flower which is white at night or in the shade and red in the sunlight. A ROUGH RIDER.

Half the settlement was at the cabin when the doctor came for his daily visit and crowded around when he approached the bed, where a white sheet set itself stiffly over all that had required his ministrations. Bud Wilson, cantering down from the Hill range, caught sight of the unusual throng and flung his horse's head up sharply by the side of the house.

"What's the racket?" he asked of one of the men standing by. "Some one hurt?"

"Jim McMillan's baby's dead."
 Bud Wilson was a handsome fellow. He sat a horse superbly and rolled cigarettes to perfection, bending them in the Mexican way. In the surprise of the announcement he rolled one now, placing the wisp of paper on the pommel of his saddle while he poured the tobacco into it. After a meditated whiff or two that burned the paper half down to his fingers he threw his cigarette away, and swinging down from his saddle tossed his bridle over the nearest fence post and walked back to the door as softly as his high-heeled boots and swaddling goatskin "chaps" permitted.

Bud Wilson at one time had been very attentive to Lizzie McMillan before she was Lizzie McMillan. Certain of the range people had said "It would sure be a match," but Billy Howe, Bud's most intimate friend in the round-up gang, had prophesied that "ye wouldn't rope Bud fer no such halter yet," and they had not.

The door was pulled open at the newcomer's knock. He paused a moment on the threshold, then walked in with bowed head and stood looking down at the figure in the little white coffin, holding his broad sombrero in both hands, with its heavy row of buckles glinting around the crown.

While he stood there the mother, whose silence had at last found voice, sat in the adjoining room looking over the empty field. She was crooning to herself softly:

"Yes. My pore child's gone. But it's better off—Ah know it. Ah'd never brought it up right. Ah'm sinful an' worldly, an Ah'd 'a' brought it up to laynce an' all such things. Ah know Ah would. Ah'm not fit to have a child, so weak an' sinful, an' God has taken it back now, an' he maght not if it hed stayed with me an' growed up like me."

She sat by the kitchen window, her look on as though she were about to go out, and swayed softly back and forth, her fine head and figure making a superb silhouette against the square of light behind her.

"But Ah cayn't bear to think of yer lyn' oat there in th' rain an' snow," she went on. "Ef it was only Summer an' it was green an' there was flowers—but to be oat there—Ah cayn't bear to think about it. Oh, Ah cayn't!"

Wilson stood looking down at the child while she spoke, not once raising his head. Then he turned and went out as quietly as he had come in.

"What's she sayin' bout flowers, Bill?" he asked of one of the men on the outside, indicating the direction of the mother with a twist of his brows. "Liz? Oh, nothin'. She's picked out the place for the grave out there on the knoll by the river, where she can see it from the window, and she wants to have some flowers there some time."

"So she's cryin' for flowers," Wilson nused. "Let's see. No up train till 5 to-morrow, and that's too late. I'll lo it. D—n me if I don't!"

The funeral service was not elaborate. The one minister at Table Rock, who was also the carpenter, came over for the occasion. There was a hymn by jarring voices, a chapter from the Bible, read while the men, for the most part, crowded bareheaded around the open door or tramped heavily over the faded flower beds that lined the red wall with a starved stubble of greenery—portulaca, sweet-william and bachelor's-button—the Springtime teaching out of some soul toward the beautiful, now become, as everything must, but the setting for the common raggedy. Once, while the service was under way, an ore train went pounding by with a sudden roar and clatter of wheels.

After the service four of the men carried the coffin to the place where he grave had been hollowed out on the bluff above the river. The sagebrush grew thickly on the sides of the slope, with an occasional yucca lifting its varied blades. There was quite a steep ascent for a dozen yards or more, and he men who were carrying the coffin had to watch their steps. As they reached the top of the rise the leader started, then went on amid a low murmur of surprise.

The yellow mound of newly turned earth had disappeared under the dazzling bank of flowers—roses, carnations, lilies—a little browned at the edges in the chill air, but white and glorious still in the morning light, and hiding its one came up the slope, even the jagged edge of the grave itself.

No one knew whence they came, and he minister, taking advantage of the wonder, wove into his final words a reference to that promise of Him who said, "I will give you beauty for ashes."

Bud Wilson rode home with his cousin Medie after the funeral. "You've comin' long over to stay to-night, ain't you?" she had asked. "Yes, I'll go over and sleep, he had answered, and then felt her eyes upon him as he had tramped along ahead of her horse so where he had left his own animal at some distance from the station.

"You must've been ridin' that horse pretty hard, Bud," she began.

"Yes, I have rid her a little," he answered.

"You brought them flowers, too," she went on after a moment.

He did not answer. Another pause, broken only by the irregular clump of the horse's feet.

"Say, Bud," she broke in suddenly, "why didn't you marry that girl?"

"I dunno. I s'pose it was because I wanted to tear round with the boys. She's the only girl I ever loved, an'—"

is paused—"I guess I've been going to the devil ever since."

They went on in silence in the growing dusk, each thinking of the things that did not shape themselves to the tongue. As they paused to dismount before the gate Bud drew up to his cousin.

"Say, Medie, don't say anything about them flowers, will you?"

Get Together Somehow.

I know enough of history and God's dealings with nations to be sure that the rulers and inhabitants of a nation can not do wrong all the time and go unpunished. There comes a time when it is said to every nation, Repent and do right or suffer the consequences. A few months ago that was the language of America to Spain. Spain heeded not the admonition; but she cried, "Enough" after her navies had been sunk and her generals compelled to surrender to their victorious opponents.

I wish I could stand upon a mountain and have a voice that would be heard all over the land, so that I could be heard saying, "Come, and let us reason together." For there are hundreds of good reasons why men should be Prohibitionists, and not one good reason why they should be otherwise.

Men who hate the saloon, please get together somehow! If you can not think of any other way, tumble together. Suppose you try voting together for a few years, and see what the Lord will do for you.

In this country, salvation from the liquor curse can come only through the ballot-boxes containing more protests against the saloons than petitions for them. Since the day I was born all other methods have been tried, but have proved to be total failures. Adopt God's common-sense way, and future generations will call you blessed.—Geo. R. Scott.

A Mistake.

Some very well-intentioned people insist that enough is already known of the horrors, and of the sins and miseries arising from the drink curse. But this is a mistake. Of even the temperance men who call themselves, and who are called by others, advanced temperance reformers, only a very small proportion have realized what a baleful curse intemperance is to the nation. Indeed, there are important aspects of the question to which but little real attention and study have hitherto been devoted by anybody.

Liquor on Ocean Liners.

It concerns the land not only, but the sea as well; for every stately "ocean liner" that clears our ports and sails down over the edge of the world with the "union" at her flagstaff, carries on board a "bar" of uncharted shoals and sunken reefs for some of the voyagers; and many a gallant life goes down at sea inside the ship and while she watch is calling at every bell, "All's well! All's well!"

"Strong drink will shrink
 And fade away,
 When men vote right
 As well as pray."—W. K. F.

A Primitive Race.

The Papuans of the Malay coast of New Guinea are still in the most primitive state. They are wholly unacquainted with metals, and make their weapons of stone, bones, and wood.

To Prevent Squeaking.

Boring a hole half way through the sole of a shoe is said to prevent its squeaking. The reason assigned is that the air between the layers of leather is released by the boring.

"How Boys Grow Bigger."

Mr. William Livesey, a famous temperance worker in England, recently celebrated his eighty-first birthday by giving one of his "Chats with Children" on "How Big Boys Grow Bigger." He got the young people to adopt the volley firing style in the repetition of some mottoes, written by himself, displayed in large characters. The last motto, he said, contained his "Chat" in a nutshell. It was as follows:

"Digestion is complete in three stages: First, in the mouth with the saliva; Second, in the stomach with the gastric juice; Third, in the bowels with two juices.

Alcohol injures the mouth digestion; Alcohol injures the stomach digestion; Alcohol injures the bowel digestion.

Alcohol injures the purification of the blood; Alcohol injures the blood when it is purified; Alcohol injures every organ of the body.

Youths' Temperance Banner.

The Best Way to Drown Troubles.

"No," said Stagers to the minister, "it's of no use for you to talk to me. I must drink whiskey to drown my troubles."

"Why not drown them in water?" suggested the minister, "and then you would not have to drown yourself as well."

JAN. 17.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brockway of Moravia spent the Sabbath at her parents', E. E. Greenfield.

As far as we are able to learn we have no new cases of grip and all who have seen its victims are recovering.

Rev. W. E. Wells returned Friday evening from a visit to his home in Patten, Yates county.

Mrs. Geo. Crowfoot and daughter, Miss Alice, were in Auburn two or three days last week.

There will be a dime social on Wednesday evening of next week, Jan. 24, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clark.

J. E. Fell and wife visited friends in Union Springs a couple of days last week.

J. E. Rogers and daughter, Miss Edith, have returned to Homer after a few days sojourn in this place.

King Ferry.

Mrs. Samuel Dudley is seriously ill.

Mrs. Ella Mead visited at Tyrone last week.

Bert Rapp and wife are spending some time at Varna.

Mrs. Wm. Coon died Monday Jan. 9th, aged 82 years. The funeral was held on Wednesday.

H. Jump and family of Levanna visited N. Jump and sister last week.

Mr. McAllister of Newfield, was in town on Friday last.

Fred Jacobs is assisting L. Polhamus in blacksmithing.

Warren Counsell will move to Sage April 1st. His brother Ben will accompany him.

Mrs. Chas. Chase has returned from New York.

John L. King is confined to the house by sickness.

Five Corners.

JAN. 16.—Quite changeable weather. A heavy wind visited this place last Saturday night.

Extra meetings are to continue during this week. Rev. Mr. Lawton will assist in the work.

A number of the pupils of our school are sick with the grip.

E. L. Colby of Auburn visited his friend C. D. Palmer, last Sunday.

Geo. Curtis of Groton was in town one day last week.

Mrs. Clarence Streeter of Venice, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Morey.

Andrew Algard is quite poorly.

Albert Ferris is improving slowly.

C. D. Palmer had the misfortune of injuring one of his toes quite badly, last week.

Oliver Snyder is doing quite a business of buying and pressing hay.

Clarence Hollister purchased a span of horses last week.

Forks of the Creek.

JAN. 16.—Mrs. Geo. Boyer is visiting friends at E. Lansing this week.

Thomas Seehorn and wife visited in this vicinity, a short time since.

E. Boyer and Bert Breed were in Groton Monday.

James Luce and family will leave us next week. The family will be greatly missed at this place.

B. B. Labarr and family called on friends at the Forks, last Sunday.

The party at Mrs. Hall's proved to be a far more brilliant affair than we had expected. A large number from home and abroad were present. They were entertained in almost royal style. A large number of presents were received. It was at a late hour when the participants of this, the brightest event of the season, took their departure, all agreeing that they had been highly entertained. We are highly glorified that there is at least one among us that knows how to conduct a fashionable affair in a way that is becoming to the occasion.

Scipio.

JAN. 15.—Will Hoskins had five teams drawing hay to Ensenore, two loads a day for each team and nearly two tons to the load. Several others were drawing also and the roads were lined with teams. J. Snyder finished drawing barley to Union Springs and it was fine sleighing the most of the way.

D. D. Hunter was breaking colts last week.

J. Snyder goes to Ithaca Tuesday to attend the Several Counties Insurance Co.'s annual meeting.

Mrs. John VanLiew is very sick with the grip. Mrs. Mary Hartnett is some better, but still unable to sit up.

There is talk of starting an Odd Fellows lodge here. Some 15 names have been obtained. A new orchestra has sprung up which bids fair to become a first class band. The I O G T is flourishing; four were initiated Friday evening and several new names were handed in. The Maccabee supper passed off very pleasantly (so said) and it took 3 hours to go through all the courses.

Mrs. Fox is in Cortland caring for her daughter, Miss Angie Fox.

Ed Powers' leg was broken in two places, one near the ankle and one about 6 inches above. Dr. Kenyon reduced the fracture.

To the Public.

I wish to announce to the public that I have opened the Avery shop and am prepared to do all kinds of blacksmithing satisfactory and at reasonable prices. Horseshoeing a specialty. I respectfully solicit a share of your patronage. S. WRIGHT.

"God is good to the Irish." was the motto inscribed over a pipe crossed on a whisky bottle, which the witty Dion Boucault invented for the coat of arms of the "Shaughraun Club." This interpretation of the purpose of Divine Providence would seem to be borne out by an article in the January COSMOPOLITAN treating of the Irish leaders of the nations, and showing that not only has England a Lord Wolseley, a Lord Roberts, and a Kitchener, but that Spain has a Duke of Tetuan, Russia a General Obrutscheff, and Hungary Viscount Taaffe, not to mention an endless array of other Irishmen who have reflected honor upon their native land.

What Has Happened in Genoa During the Past Seven Days—An Interesting Page.

—Fine winter weather.

—The grip is getting in its work.

—Renew your subscription promptly.

—The grip seems to be on the increase in Genoa.

—Mrs. Lou Newman is confined to the house by sickness.

—Richard Dodd visited his son at Syracuse this week.

—Geo. Culver reports a good trade during his special sale.

—The winter has proved a hard one on coal bins so far.

—Only a short time more in which to pay taxes at one per cent.

—A. A. Miller is confined to the house, suffering from the mumps.

—Will Wattles of Scipio was in town Wednesday afternoon.

—An overturned lamp nearly caused a conflagration at Dr. Slocum's last week.

—L. B. Norman has been seriously ill for a few days past. He is convalescing.

—Mrs. L. C. Burns left for Sayre, Wednesday morning, to care for her sister who is ill.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. Cannon have been victims of the grip, but are speedily recovering.

—Mr. and Mrs. Davenport of Moravia are with their daughter, Mrs. G. W. Davis.

—Postmaster B. L. Avery was off duty Wednesday, being threatened with an attack of grip.

—Mrs. H. D. Perry was quite searously ill last week, but at present is much improved.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ames were confined to the house a few days this week suffering from the grip.

—S. Wright of Auburn has rented the Avery blacksmith shop and opened the same to the public this week.

—Miss Bertha M. Lewis left Monday morning for Auburn to spend a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Geo. Conner.

—The Union Social Club will hold a select party at Ogden's hall, King Ferry, Friday evening Feb. 10. Music by Jacobs.

—Miss Pearl Scudder is very sick at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Oliver. She is suffering from acute neuralgia.

—There will be a social party at the hotel hall, King Ferry, Friday evening, Feb. 3d. Good music and a good time is guaranteed.

—Mastin & Hagin have quite an attraction in their display window. Two coons, grey and red squirrels, and their antics are very amusing.

—E. C. Lathrop has a change of ad on the last page this week. His sale is progressing finely and he reports a flattering trade from this section of the country.

—The L. A. S. of East Genoa will meet at the home of the president, Mrs. T. J. Henry, on Wednesday, January 25. Dinner will be served and all are cordially invited.

—Articles for laundry left with Mr. Eaton will receive prompt attention with out extra charge for transportation. The Auburn laundry gives good satisfaction.

—Mrs. G. W. Davis will occupy the harness shop room after Feb. 1st with a fine line of ladies' and children's shoes. G. W. Davis will move into the building now occupied by J. M. Denson.

—Geo. Culver, Locke's leading merchant has sold his new residence just completed and will erect a new block in the near future, into which he will move his merchantile business.

—An item is going the rounds to the effect that it is against the law to drive a horse or team attached to a sleigh on which there are no bells. If this is true it probably applies to cities and incorporated villages only.

—Messrs. Lee Atwater and C. M. Perry left Thursday for DeRayter, where Mr. Atwater will open a cigar factory. The people of Genoa join in wishing him success in the enterprise. Mrs. G. M. Perry is visiting her parents at Watkins.

—Wm. Huson has 25 Plymouth Rock hens for sale.

—Miss Clara Adams of Auburn is the guest of friends in town.

—Justice Byron Hunt had business in Auburn Monday and Tuesday.

—Leroy Nottingham is ill at the home of his sister, Mrs. D. E. Singer.

—Miss Florence Wilcox of North Lansing was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Carson this week.

—Mrs. H. D. Underwood, who has been confined to her home for several weeks by illness, is reported no better.

—Fred W. Smith of Berkshire was in town this week looking over the creamery which he will open about April 1st. Particulars later.

—Photographer Taber found his weekly visits to Genoa unprofitable and left for Auburn yesterday. We regret his departure, which leaves Genoa again without a photographer.

—Rev. Mr. Loughton of Lake Ridge will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist church, Sunday, Jan. 22, both morning and evening. The subject for the evening address is The Life of Abraham Lincoln. An invitation is extended to all to be present.

—Mrs. Dolson widow of the late Elias Dolson, died at her home in this village on Tuesday afternoon, aged about 82 years. She was highly esteemed by all and will be missed by a large circle of friends. The funeral was held yesterday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

—Civil Service examinations, open to all, will be held in most large towns in March, to get clerks for Uncle Sam. Persons wishing to know dates and places and how the positions can be obtained can write Columbian Correspondence College, Washington, D. C., and same will be furnished without cost.

—Much complaint has been made to us from Five Corners that the TRIBUNES do not reach that office at the usual time, and many miss their papers each week. Paid-up subscribers should receive one each week without fail, and we are investigating the matter to see wherein the blame rests.

—One of our esteemed exchanges give this excellent advice to school boys and girls. It says: Your teachers are your best friends. What ever they ask you to do, try to do promptly and cheerfully. Going to school is business for you, just the same as regular trade is business for the older folks, and if you neglect your business now, where and who will finish your life's work? Think of these things, boys and girls.

—The members of the East Venice Alliance will hold a weight social in their new hall Thursday evening, January 26. The gentlemen furnish the supper and wait upon the guests. Each gentleman will be weighed, the ladies paying for the supper at the rate of 25 cents per hundred pounds. An interesting musical and literary program will be carried out. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

ETIQUETTE OF THE DESERT

It is an insult to inquire as to the welfare of an Arab's wife.

Social etiquette among the Arabs is a factor in life to be considered seriously if you wish to live among them without friction. Its obligations are not to be completely mastered in a few months. Sometimes when I have had companions with me presumably thoroughly au fait with all things Mohammedan, the harmony of the occasion has been seriously endangered by some thoughtlessness or ignorance on their part, which to the Moslem could appear only as a contemptuous want of consideration. Thus, no greater insult could be offered to an Arab than a friendly inquiry as to the welfare of his wife—to us a natural civility, but to him a gross impertinence bitterly resented. On one occasion I nearly made a similar blunder. I was invited by a neighboring sheik to go over to see him, and was on the point of riding up to his tent door and dismounting there. Fortunately, however, I recollected in time that etiquette demanded that I should halt fifty yards off, and call in a loud voice: "Have I your permission to approach?" This gives them time to bundle off any of their womenkind who may be about, preparatory to the admission of a stranger. It is curious also to note that, in spite of the real affection existing between father and son, the sense of respect dominates all other feelings, and the sons will never sit at meal with their father in the presence of a guest, but will wait upon both until the father, rising, allows him the opportunity of breaking bread with the visitor.

Provided, however, that you recognize their social customs, my experience has proved the Bedouin to be genuine, warm-hearted friends; and they really become greatly attached to those whom they know and who know them.

India's Forest Reserve.

Few people have any idea of the immense forest area in British India—a valuable asset, which is now being systematically preserved. At the present time the reserves of the forest cover an area of nearly 75,000 square miles, and they may hereafter be further extended in Madras and Burma, where the work of reservation is as yet incomplete. Outside these reserves are about 55,000 square miles of state forests, some of which will eventually be brought within the reserve area. This means that there are in India, practically for all time, forests which would completely cover the United Kingdom. The mountain slopes of the western Ghats are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests of the tropics and include the following trees: Teak, ebony, ironwood, Indian mahogany, sandalwood and the ubiquitous bamboo. In the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, north of the St. Lawrence river, there is one great continuous tract of forest, which extends northward to Hudson and Labrador and which measures altogether about 1,700 miles in length and 1,000 miles in width.

A Rapacious Bird.

A curious transformation in the habits of wild animals is reported from New Zealand, where it is said the kea, or mountain parrot, formerly vegetarian, has in recent years been changed into a rapacious bird of prey. It is unknown in the north island, but in the south island it has become a terrible pest, killing over 20,000 sheep a year. It settles on the back of its victim, and with its powerful beak tears a hole over the kidneys. When it has devoured this tidbit it leaves the sheep to die and attacks another in the same way. So a war of extermination is being waged against this morally degenerate kea.

Arabs Value Water.

No one can travel among the Arabs without being struck by the importance attached to the water supply. Where a rich Englishman would bequeath money to founding a hospital or decorating a church, an Arab can think of no other channel for his charity than the construction of a fountain which will assure him the blessings of all future generations. The Arabs have a curious characteristic in common with horses and other animals. They prefer stagnant water, however bad in smell and appearance, to the most limpid running water, which, they assert, generally contains disagreeable medicinal properties.

The Mandarin's Farm.

A model farm on the American plan and run with American machinery, stock and methods, is about to be established by a Chinese Mandarin who lives near Shanghai.

Descendant of Queen of Sheba.

King Menelek of Abyssinia claims to be directly descended from the Queen of Sheba, being, he asserts, the ninety-seventh in descent from the famous Queen.

Baltimore's Spinners.

No large city in the United States has a surplus of spinsters. Baltimore comes nearest, with only sixty-five more bachelors than old maids.

Germany imports $25,000,000 worth of poultry a year.

Messages and Papers of The Presidents.

A HISTORY OF OUR COUNTRY WRITTEN BY OUR PRESIDENTS.

Edited by the Hon. JAMES D. RICHARDSON, under the Direction of Congress.

It includes all the Inaugural Addresses, Annual Messages, Special Messages, Veto Messages, Proclamations, Executive Orders, including important secret correspondence of the State Department bearing on all National questions in connection with the history of our government from the first administration of President Washington down to and including the Messages of President McKinley.

THE INDEX gives the thread of United States History, every fact verified by the government records, in encyclopedic form, stated clearly and concisely, and refers you to the President's own words: It is truly A NATIONAL LITERARY MONUMENT.

ILLUSTRATED WITH RARE ENGRAVINGS.

These engravings have never before been published. They constitute a complete gallery of Portraits of the Presidents, Government Buildings, Copies of Historic Paintings, etc., etc., all authorized impressions from Government plates.

It bears practically the unanimous endorsement of two Presidents and their cabinets, the Congress, and thousands of other public officials and representative citizens.

WHY THIS ANNOUNCEMENT IS MADE.

The original edition published by the Government was far too limited. Thousands upon thousands of applications had to be refused. It was not the intention, originally, to publish a further edition, but on account of the unprecedented demand, Mr Richardson, who had charge of the work for the government, was able to arrange for a further edition.

The Hon. Ainsworth R. Spofford, of the Library of Congress, has consented to act as General Secretary of the Committee appointed to superintend the distribution of this new and handsomer edition, and to pass upon applications as received.

Any one can make application, but the rules of the Committee allow for but a FEW SETS TO EACH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

This means, of course, that only a few persons in each community can have a set of this great work. Part of the apportionment for almost every district has been spoken for already, so that prompt action is necessary on the part of those who would like to avail themselves of the opportunity.

THE COST IS MERELY NOMINAL.

If a private publisher were to undertake to publish such a work, even if he could gain access to the government records, it would cost not less than a million dollars to produce, and he could not afford to sell it for less than Ten Dollars per volume. There are ten magnificent volumes, averaging seven hundred pages each. The Committee has, however, undertaken to distribute this edition at practically the cost of manufacture and distribution. Applications may now be filed with the Committee on Distribution, and will be passed upon in the order received.

Arrangements have also been made for those WHO WISH TO INVESTIGATE FURTHER before making formal application, so that upon postal card request ample descriptive matter, exhibiting the bindings, engravings and full particulars, will be forwarded, together with rules for making applications.

All such requests, if addressed as below, will receive prompt attention, in regular order.

AINSWORTH R. SPOFFORD, General Secretary,

Committee on Distribution, Dept. _____ Dist. _____

WASHINGTON, D. C.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—On all requests accompanied by a deposit of ONE DOLLAR, as a guarantee of good faith, a set of the books will be laid aside and reserved, pending further investigation, and if you decide within ten days not to make a regular application the amount will be refunded.

The election of Miss Josie Kates as general manager of the Kates Baggage Company, of Atlanta, is a compliment highly bestowed. She is a young and sterling worth and is thoroughly familiar with all the details of business.

A TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

THE DRINK EVIL MADE MANIFEST IN MANY WAYS.

Take a Drink?—What Alcohol Does to the User—It is Foolish to Buy an Ounce of Present Pleasure With a Pound of Future Pain—Abstinence is Safest.

Take a drink? No, not if Reason's taught me better. Than to bind my very soul. With a galling fetter. Water, sweet and cool and free, Has no cruel chains for me.

"Biteth Like a Serpent."

Few things are so much dreaded as serpents. They are so stealthy, and, except the rattlesnake, so silent, and some of them, at least, are so deadly. There is no curb known for the bite of some snakes; the only chance is to cut out the piece of flesh which has been bitten or to burn it out with a red-hot iron, and even this will be of no use unless it is done directly after the bite is received.

What the Turk Likes.

A delightfully characteristic expression of Turkish public opinion is quoted in Lord Warkworth's clever "Notes From a Dairy in Asiatic Turkey." A reforming governor, who (of course) had just been recalled, described to Lord Warkworth his attempts to light the streets.

A Malarial Conundrum.

The Rome correspondent of the Lancet, commenting on the claim of Grassi to have preceded Bigiani in the discovery of the malarial-bearing mosquito, suggests that it would "be of interest to know the distinguishing marks of his 'special mosquitoes,' so as, inter alia, to understand how it is that in Rome, where there are no mosquitoes properly so called, malaria is prevalent, while in Florence, where mosquitoes (properly so called) abound, there is no malaria at all."

Beer and Wine and Intemperance.

It should not be forgotten that the use of malt liquors and light wines has not been found in Europe to be a means of checking intemperance. The French for generations have used light wines in large quantities, and within the last two or three decades have been considerable consumers of malt liquors; but in spite of this, since 1870 they have developed a taste for distilled spirits which threatens, if continued, to convert those who were formerly considered, in the absence of intoxication, a temperate people, into a nation of drunkards.

Felt He Was Strong.

A brilliant young man, thirty years ago, was beginning to form the habit of indulgence in the wine cup. He knew that other men were drunkards, but he felt that he himself was strong, and would never be anything but clear-eyed and strong of nerve and firm of flesh.

A Toast That Touched Their Hearts.

Colonel Thomas W. Higginson said that at a dinner at Beaufort, S. C., where wine flowed freely and ribald jests were bandied, Dr. Miner, a slight, boyish fellow, who did not drink, was told that he could not go until he had drunk a toast, told a story or sung a song.

Bismarck Denounced Beer.

Those people who have been looking with favor upon the increased consumption of beer in this country as an indication that that drink is displacing whiskey will hardly be comforted by a remark of Prince Bismarck, related by his physician, Dr. Busch, in his recently published book, "Bismarck: Some Secret Pages of His History."

Notes of the Crusade.

There were 19,000 arrests for intoxication in New York City last year. Evidently every dive to-day and the saloon will create new dives. The dive will always exist as long as its cause, the liquor traffic, exists.

The Factors of Kissing.

In a kissing contest for $25 a side, which has just been declared off in a small town in Lancashire, England, the challenger sank exhausted at the seven hundredth smack, his opponent having scored eighteen hundred in the hour.

Over in Germany at about the same time a young lover wrote to his sweetheart that he sent her ten thousand kisses. She sent back word that that was all well enough on paper, but that he had not the nerve to perform the feat in a truly manly way.

What the Turk Likes.

A delightfully characteristic expression of Turkish public opinion is quoted in Lord Warkworth's clever "Notes From a Dairy in Asiatic Turkey." A reforming governor, who (of course) had just been recalled, described to Lord Warkworth his attempts to light the streets.

Men and Women Who Work.

A Remedy for the Grippe.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the grippe is Kemp's Balsam, which is especially adapted to diseases of the throat and lungs. Do not wait for the first symptoms of the disease, but get a bottle to-day and keep it on hand for use the moment it is needed.

The Shortest Way.

The shortest way out of an attack of neuralgia is to use St. Jacobs Oil, which affords not only a sure relief, but a prompt cure. It soothes, subdues and ends the suffering.

Coughs Lead to Consumption.

Kemp's Balsam will stop the cough at once. Go to your druggist to-day and get a sample bottle free. Sold in 25 and 50 cent bottles. Go at once; delays are dangerous.

Shally Gorman, Over.

A cripple from a sprain is one who neglects to use St. Jacobs Oil to cure it. Prompt use of it brings prompt cure, and the trouble is gotten over easily.

Beauty Is Blood Deep.

Clean blood means a clean skin. No beauty without it. Cascarets, Candy Cathartic clean your blood and keep it clean, by stirring up the lazy liver and driving all impurities from the body.

Cataract Cannot be Cured.

With local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Cataract is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Cataract Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surface.

Rats and rabbits are becoming a plague in the Azores.

Need not give up when attacked with a severe congestive cold, if Hoxsie's Disks are used. They check any cold. 25 cents.

THE BEST COUGH MEDICINE.

Every Bottle Warranted.
Knowing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be a medicine of great worth and merit and especially valuable for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, we will hereafter warrant every bottle bought of us and will refund the money to anyone who is not satisfied after using two-thirds of a 25 or 50 cent bottle. J. S. Banker.

We publish an advertisement of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in our columns this issue, and wish to say to our patrons that we believe this preparation is worthy of a trial by any person suffering from this agonizing complaint. We honestly believe this preparation will do for you all the manufacturers claim for it. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is prepared by the well known and reliable firm of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, and from our long experience in a business sense, with this firm as advertisers, we feel safe in saying that they would not place on the market a preparation for the cure of dyspepsia unless they had a remedy of the highest merit, and conscientiously believed it would cure this well known and almost universal complaint. We further add that if this preparation is equal to the other well known remedies which they make viz.—DeWitt's Little Early Risers, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve and One Minute Cough Cure, it will speedily win its way into public favor. We cheerfully and heartily give our personal endorsement to this concern; and the reliability of the goods they manufacture, which have been largely the means of their success, and in writing this voluntary endorsement on our part, we feel that we are simply performing a duty which we owe to patrons.

Citation.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK:—To George Edwards, Charles H. Edwards, Joshua Edwards, Allen Edwards, Mary J. Ferrigno.
SHELDON GRETHER; Whereas, E. Byron Whitton of Genoa, N. Y., has lately applied to our Surrogate's Court of the County of Cayuga for the proof and probate of a certain instrument in writing, dated the 1st day of January, 1897, purporting to be the last will and testament of Elizabeth White, late of Venice, in said county, deceased, which relates to both real and personal estate. Therefore, you and each of you are cited to appear in our said Surrogate's Court, before the Surrogate of the County of Cayuga, at his office in the court house, in the city of Auburn, on the 28th day of February 1899, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, and attend the probate of said last will and testament.

And those of you who are under the age of twenty-one years, are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, you will appear and apply for the appointment of a guardian, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the surrogate to represent and act for you in this proceeding.

In testimony whereof, We have caused the seal of our said Surrogate's Court to be hereunto affixed.
WITNESSES, Hon. George B. Tarnes, Surrogate of the County of Cayuga, at the Surrogate's office in the city of Auburn, this 11th day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety nine.
WALTER E. WOODEN,
Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

Foreclosure Sale.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated February 28, 1896, executed by Michael Bauman, of Genoa, N. Y., to Levi Starnes, of the same place, recorded in Cayuga County Clerk's office, on March 9, 1896, at 9 o'clock, a. m., in Liber 151 of Mortgages, page 488, and no suit or proceeding at law having been instituted to recover said money, or any part thereof, and the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the first publication of this notice being $267.75, which is the whole amount unpaid thereon; now, therefore, notice is hereby given, according to the statute in such case made and provided, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and therewith recorded, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, by the subscriber, at public auction, on the 19th day of March, 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the front door of the First National Bank in Moravia village, N. Y.

Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the town of Genoa, N. Y., and being a part of lot No. 51, in said town, bounded and described as follows: Beginning in the southwest corner of lands now (1898) owned by James Lowe and in the center of the highway, thence west along the center of said highway, thence north along the center of the highway running north from the first three corners west of the place of beginning, and to lands owned (1898) by Lucien and John How; thence east along the south line of said How's land about twenty rods; thence north along the east line of said How's land to land of John C. Leghorn; thence east along the south line of said Leghorn's land to lands owned by said James Lowe; thence south along the west line of said Lowe's land to the place of beginning, containing fifty-six acres of land more or less and being the same premises conveyed to said party of the first part by Cornelius Foot and wife by deed dated August 6, 1873, and recorded in Cayuga County in Liber 151 of deeds, page 96.

Dated December 15, 1898.
