NEWS OF THE STATE

EVENTS IN AND OUT OF THE EMPIRE STATE.

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

Dell Spencer, a cigar maker whose home was in Ithaca, fell from a moving train at Oneonta Friday, and was instantly killed. He was 42 years of age and unmarried.

John Patchen of Ellsworth has been granted an increase of pension from $8 to $10.

Miss Myra Chandler of Moravia has been engaged to take the position in the Cazenovia Union school left vacant by Miss Maltby's disappearance.

Miss Jessie Maltby, who disappeared from her home in Cazenovia last week Tuesday, has telegraphed her mother that she is in New York city with a friend of the family.

The Pacific and Oriental mail leaves Grand Central Station, New York, by the New York Central, every night in the year at 9:15, and the fourth night thereafter this mail is at San Francisco ready for delivery or transfer to the steamers for Hawaii, Australia, Philippines, Japan and China. See the new "Round the World" folder just issued by the New York Central Lines. A copy will be sent free, post-paid, on receipt of three cents in stamps, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York.

The village of Wolcott, Wayne county, is practically bankrupt, there being only about $60 in the treasury. No more money is due and collectable until next July, except about $150 rebates on laying sidewalks. There is due for electric lights, fire department hose, crushed stone, etc., about $1,300. The village has just laid several miles of cement walk, paying 50 per cent. of the cost at the rate of 4 1/4 cents a square foot. This is what has depleted the treasury. The trustees have allowed the transfer of money from one fund to another to pay accounts, and it is claimed that they had no right to do so, and especially that they should have protected the electric light fund of $1,200, which was rated as a special appropriation.

While J. B. Cushman was eating breakfast at the Butterfield House at Utica, Sunday, a thief broke the lock to his room door and stole $300. No clue was found.

Lyman, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter White of Ledyard, fell from his chair last week Tuesday and received injuries which caused death.

Rev. C. G. Langford of Pittston has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Baptist church of Moravia. He will begin his work there the third Sunday in February.

James R. Babcock of Watertown, a farm hand, stole $250 of his employer's money from a bureau drawer during the latter's absence, and skipped. He is supposed to be in Canada.

A man about 45 years old was found dead in a barn near Lyons, on Thursday. He had apparently been dead about two weeks and was frozen stiff. Nothing was found by which he could be identified.

An effort is being made at Locke to form a "social and business men's club."

The grocery store of E. C. Bowyer of Jacksonville, was broken into on Thursday night and a large quantity of canned goods stolen.

The trial of John Truck on the charge of murder will be held at the next term of Supreme court, which convenes at Cortland, Monday, Jan. 29. On the night of March 14, 1899, Frank W. Miller's house near Virgil was burned and the remains of Miller were found among the ruins. A horse and wagon belonging to Miller were found in Truck's possession and he was suspected of having committed the crime and arrested. He will enter a plea of insanity.

The Fredonia Censor tells of a young man who, on his six acres of land, keeps 800 leghorn hens, the sale of eggs from which last year made him a profit of $1,200. No hen over three years old is kept, and they are non-setters up to that age. He hatches all his chickens in an incubator.

Last Monday morning occurred the sale of Geo. Culver's interest in the Culver block in this place. But one bid was made and the property was struck off to Mrs. Nina M. Culver for a consideration of $5.—Locke Times.

Stephen R. Vancourt, a Farmer tough, was taken to Rochester Sunday, where he will spend 90 days for wife beating.

Mrs. L. H. Hewitt who has been spending a few days at her home at Locke, returned to her musical studies in New York Saturday.

A Cortland man has sold a dog to a New York party for $100. What a waste of money, when in this town a hundred dollars would buy a hundred dogs!—Oxford Times.

The next legal holiday will be Lincoln's birthday, Monday, Feb. 12.

The pension of T. J. Webster of Moravia, has been increased from $8 to $12 per month.

The DeRuyter Masons dedicated their new hall last Thursday evening.

P. C. Keefe has opened a cigar factory in the Central Hotel Block, Moravia. He will manufacture brands formerly put out by him and which met with a popular sale.

Thursday, Mrs. S. M. Rhodes was declared insane by County Judge Almy on the report of Dr. Goodyear and Dr. Baldwin, as commissioners. She was taken to Willard State Hospital on Friday.—Groton Journal.

A large grain barn belonging to John Jakway at Cato, was destroyed by fire at 1 o'clock, Tuesday morning. The barn was situated in the village. Ten tons of hay which were stored in the barn were burned together with one cow. Everything else was saved. The loss was about $1,500. The property was insured for $1,000.

A Fabius woman in suing for a divorce alleges that her husband has not taken a bath in nine years.

Spool cotton has gone up to 5 cents a spool. Its former price being 3 and 4 cents.

In United States court at Albany Saturday, Fred Belmont, 20 years old, of Rochester, plead guilty to impersonating a United States officer at Windsor, Broome county. Judge Cox sentenced him to one year and six months in the Elmira reformatory.

H. H. Warner, the famous patent medicine man of Rochester, has gone into bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,319,027.

The state encampment of the G. A. R. will be held at Utica in May.

A Watertown young man held three men on his shoulders in imitation of the strong man at a circus, and received fatal injuries.

The editor of the Chenango American speaks for Cortland girls as follows: It is said that Cortland has a youthful minister who is eligible to marriage and that he received eight sofa pillows, besides several pairs of slippers, on Christmas day, from young lady admirers. The young ladies of Cortland have the ministerial fever in its worst form. Well, girls, a young minister is as good as anybody, if he behaves himself.

Certain disorderly Cornell students made the time hideous to well disposed theatre goers at Ithaca last week. Citizens who paid their money to enjoy the show went away disgusted, many declaring that they would never attempt to attend a show there again.

Dutchess county supervisors offered a bounty of $1 for each fox killed in the county and so far over 500 fox noses have been brought in.

After an absence in the west of over thirty years, James Baily returned recently to Penn Yan, where he was reunited with his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Baily had been married again, each supposing the other dead.

Douglass Denmark has sued Thos. Brock, a wealthy citizen of Van Etten for $20,000 damages for slander. It is claimed that at the time of the murder of Denmark's father in 1897 Brock stated to several persons that Douglass was the murderer. Brock will fight the case to a finish, all the old murder case will be brought up and sensational developments may come out.

Lodi station wants a barber shop.

Next year we may expect to find something like the following in the daily papers: About 10 o'clock this morning a horseless milk wagon, loaded with cowless milk, collided with a brainless rider on a chainless wheel. The luckless wheelman was badly injured, and being homeless he was taken in a horseless cab to the home of the friendless.—Ex.

George Backer of Elmira, who is in the Alaska gold regions, writes that he has struck it rich. He states that he has $15,000 in gold dust and is taking out $150 worth a day.

Edwin V. Fox, employed at the works of the American Fire Engine company and boarding at the Hoag house, Seneca Falls, attempted suicide last Thursday morning, by cutting his throat with a razor. Drs. Medden and Purdy were called and dressed the wounds, which are not of a serious character. He had been under the influence of liquor for some days past.

Charles M. Benjamin, editor of the Ithaca Journal, has been appointed treasurer of Tompkins county to succeed Charles Ingersoll, the defaulter. The appointment was confirmed by the senate on Tuesday.

Drunken men staggering along the streets of Watkins, frightening women and children, cursing and swearing and making general nuisances of themselves, are almost daily spectacles, Sundays included; and there is no police to arrest them.—Watkins Review.

Sherwood Tent K. O. T. M.

Deputy Great Commander George L. Morse of Auburn, instituted a tent of the order of Maccabees at Sherwood last week Tuesday evening. The tent starts with flattering prospects having a charter of 25. The initiatory work was exemplified by the degree team of Standard tent No. 437 in an excellent manner. After the business had been disposed of a luncheon was served by the Sherwood Sir Knights and a social hour was pleasantly passed. The following officers were chosen for the new tent: past commander, Arthur Painter; commander, Benjamin Brewster; lieutenant commander, Lewis Howland; record and finance keeper, C. H. Koon; chaplain, Henry Brewster; physician, Dr. B. K. Hoxsie, jr.; master-at-arms, Warren Lyons; sergent, Calvin Judge; first master of the guard, Edward Brewster; second master of the guard, Oscar Hill; sentinel, Robert Tabor; picket, Frank Austin; trustees, George Brewster, Dr. B. Gallup Action Discontinued.

The effort of Wayne Gallup to regain possession of his property, which is now under the control of Silas N. Gallup by reason of two trust deeds, one conveying the real estate and the other the personal property to him, will be started all over again. The title of the case was Wayne Gallup against Silas N. Gallup and others. The order to show cause why the action should not be discontinued was obtained by Attorney Frank M. Leary Thursday afternoon and was made returnable in special term this morning. Both Mr. Leary and D. L. Hurlbut were in court together with Harry T. Dayton, representing Hull Greenfield, the former attorneys for Wayne Gallup and the latter for Silas N.

Mr. Leary made the motion for an order of discontinuance. He said the object of the move was to get both deeds of trust in one action which was impossible as the matter stood at present because the deed conveying the personal property has been filed in the county clerk's office subsequent to the beginning of the action. He wanted to bunch the deeds in order that they might be joined in one litigation, thus saving the expense of two publications and two separate actions.

Mr. Dayton stated that he was in a rather peculiar position. He was acting for Mr. Greenfield, the attorney of record for Silas N., and he had heard nothing from the latter in regard to his, Greenfield's, wishes in the matter. He saw no reason why the action should not be discontinued but he thought he was entitled to costs if such order was granted.

The court said there was no question about the right of the plaintiff to discontinue if he so desired, the only question being as to the matter of costs which he thought should be disallowed. The order was granted without costs.—Bulletin, Saturday.

The Gallup matter is up before Justice Dunwell at Lyons today. The argument is being made on Frank M. Leary's motion for an order to compel Silas N. Gallup to appear before William S. Elder for the purpose of being examined as to his ideas of the "power of attorney" vested in him by Wayne when the latter deeded over his property. Mr. Leary and D. L. Hurlbut are present in the interest of Wayne, while Harry T. Dayton and Attorney Weed, of Rochester, are looking after the case for Silas N.—Bulletin, Monday.

The argument in the Gallup case before Justice Dunwell at Lyons on Monday was long and protracted and at its close the court reserved his decision.

POWER.

Have you seen the locomotive as she struggles up the slope, panting, blowing, shrieking onward, like a traveler spurred by hope. Onward, upward, ever pressing, like a being with a soul? But the power that propels her is a shovelful of coal.

Till, at last, she's reached the summit, then adown the hillside flies. Where another mighty mountain starts its journey to the skies: Now no effort, swiftly downward, gently o'er each grassy knoll. Still she now and then is calling for a shovelful of coal.

So in life we upward journey, up life's troublesome ascent. To the Mecca we are seeking, earnestly our feet are bent. But the journey would be lighter; sooner we would reach the goal. If, as fiercely onward pressing, we would shovel in the coal.

True, some early struggle upward, till they reach the mountain height. Then, perhaps, lie idly waiting where the journey is more light: Till again they reach the bottom, but the fellow on the roll. Of the mighty is the fellow who keeps shoveling the coal.

Admiral Blake Among the Pirates
A Page from the History of Tunisia
By David Ker.

"THERE," said my French companion, pointing southward over the smooth, bright water, as we glided into the Bay of Tunis under the splendor of the African sunrise—"there is the place where a battle was fought which you Englishmen ought all to know by heart."

"Admiral Blake's attack on Goletta, you mean?"

"Just so. Yonder, where that sand-bank juts out, stood the five forts that defended the place, and the pirate ships were moored just behind them, in that little bay. Not much sign of all that now, is there?"

Indeed it was not easy to call up any thought of battle amid the untroubled stillness and repose of that glorious landscape. Far along the eastern sky the great purple mountains stood out in endless range, crowned with the two-peaked summit of the mighty Hamet-El-Lif.

Through the deep, narrow gorges that cleft the huge mountain-wall every here and there the first rays of sunrise were just streaming across the vast expanse of blue, sparkling sea that stretched away to the north far as the eye could reach, with a few tiny white sails dotted over it like wreaths of foam.

Along the western shore of the bay extended a line of low, green hills, upon the crest of which a mass of crumbling masonry marked the spot where the ancient citadel of Carthage had fallen before Scipio and his Romans.

Just at the nearer extremity of the broad yellow sand-bar that spanned the whole breadth of the deep blue bay nestled the dainty little town of Goletta, and on the opposite hillside lay, like a drift of snow, the countless white houses, and crumbling walls, and tall minarets, and clustering palm trees of imperial Tunis.

But despite the perfect peace of the spot which once witnessed the finest battle fought there since the fall of Carthage, the memory of that day's work will never die while one man of Anglo-Saxon blood remains to keep alive the instinct of courage and fair play, and standing up against the strong in behalf of the weak.

It is well worth while for anyone, however he may hate war and bloodshed in general, to look back and see what was done here on a certain fine spring morning, two centuries ago.

It is the 3d of April, 1653, and the whole city of Tunis is in an uproar. Wild faces, livid with fear or black with rage, crowd the narrow, winding, gloomy streets, which echo with the clamor of countless tongues, the tramp of feet, the clatter of horse-hoofs and the rumble of artillery-wheels.

Hundreds of swarthy figures, sword in belt and match-lock on shoulder, are swarming over the decks of the nine huge war-galleys which lie moored close under the forts of Goletta.

In the forts themselves crowds of men are hard at work running out heavy guns, piling up cannon-balls, filling powder-chests, or laying sand-bags along the ramparts as an additional shelter; and all eyes are turned watchfully toward the entrance of the bay, and the five great line-of-battle ships that are gliding into it, with the black mouths of loaded cannon gaping hungrily through their open ports, and the red cross of England—not yet altered into the union jack—fluttered jauntily at the mizzen.

High on the poop of the English flagship stands a tall, handsome man, in the uniform of a British admiral. His face is perfectly calm, but a close observer would notice that he wears the same set, stern look that it wore when he held Tauntontown years ago, against the bravest of Charles I.'s cavaliers.

In truth a hard fight against over-

Rodney and Nelson; and the cause in which he is to fight to-day might well nerve any man to do his best. Yonder, behind those batteries that frown upon him from behind the shore, are thousands of Christian captives—many of them Englishmen like himself—chained, ragged, half-starved, blistered by the scorching sun, and seamed with the scars of whip and branding iron. And now, after years of hideous bondage among brutal pirates, which have made the memory of home and friends, and the hope of one day returning to them, seem dim and distant as half-forgotten dreams, their weary eyes see once more the waving of English flags over a fleet coming to their rescue.

Well may the haggard faces brighten, despite the curses and blows of their savage taskmasters. When Admiral Blake came here three weeks ago with a demand for the "surrender of all Christian captives," and sailed away again with no answer save an insolent defiance from the bey of Tunis and his pirate chiefs, there was many a heavy heart among the prisoners. But to-day he is here again, no longer to threaten, but to do; and the message which he brings this time is one which Tunis will long remember.

"Don't thee be troubled, lad," says one of the admiral's crew to a curly-haired boy who is looking wistfully toward the shore. "We'll get thy father out of their claws yet, never fear!"

The boys face glows at the words, and there is light in his clear blue eyes which shows that if fighting is to be done to-day he will not be hindmost.

Ten weary years have passed since stout Tom Jackson, struggling for life on a dismantled wreck, was seized by these pitiless rovers; and the son, who was a child of five when he disappeared, had come back as a boy of 15, to take part in his rescue.

Onward come the great floating castles, in a grim silence which awes the fierce Arabs in spite of themselves. Suddenly there comes a rattle and a splash, as all five ships cast anchor at once. Then a boat is seen gliding shoreward from the admiral's vessel with a flag of truce to give the over-confident pirates one last chance to surrender before it is too late.

But instantly there comes a puff of white smoke from the nearest port, and heavy shot splashing up the water close to the boat's bow, showing what an answer the message of mercy has to expect.

Then Blake's face is seen to darken ominously, and with his wonted tug of repressed anger at the point of his long, black whiskers, he gives the word to open fire. Then up through the still air rises the stern cadence of the old Puritan battle-psalm, to the sound of which Cromwell's Ironsides had swept the best of the royalist soldiers from many a hard-fought field.

"God is our refuge and our strength, In straits a present aid; Therefore, although the earth be moved, We will not be afraid."

"Though hills amid the sea be cast, Though waters roaring make And troubled be; yea, though the hills By swelling seas do shake."

Instantly sea and shore and sky were wrapped in one thick gust of hot, stifling smoke, while the warlike music was drowned by the roar of 500 cannon. Fire, smoke, yells, groans, curses, pelting shot, crashing timbers, falling stones, deafening cannon-thunder, all at once.

Far away in the desert the wandering Arab stopped to listen to the dull booming of the distant cannonade, and trembled as he heard it.

Men with powder-blackened faces fired at random into the cloud of sulphurous smoke that veiled alike ships and forts, broken only by the sudden flashes that brought death along with them. Masts and yards came crashing down on one side, stones and mortar on the other; and still the smoke billowed, and still the cannon roared.

But although the Arabs fought as fiercely as men could do, the dogged, unslackening steadiness of the English fire at length began to tell.

The fort which had fired upon the flag of truce was fast crumbling into a shapeless ruin. Five guns had been dismantled in the second fort, and three more were standing idle, with all their gunners lying dead around them.

In vain the Tunisians yelled and fired and struggled and shook their swords at the death-dealing ships, and lashed their prisoners forward to repair the shattered breastwork. Slowly but surely the battle was going against them more and more.

Suddenly a curl of smoke was seen to rise from one of the pirate's galleys. The Arabs rushed like madmen to quench the fire, but in vain. The smoke eddied into flame, while fresh spouts of fire broke from galley after galley, till the whole pirate fleet was one red and roaring blaze.

Then the enemy began to lose heart altogether. As their fire slackened, that of the British redoubled, and the cheers of the sturdy blue-jackets were heard, even through the thunder of the bombardment.

"Hurrah for old England!" shouted a gray-haired prisoner in the nearest battery.

"Silence, dog!" roared a ferocious Arab, striking him savagely across the face.

That blow was an unlucky one for the Arab. One swing of the iron bar with which the Englishman was work-and the next moment came a splash in the water, a shout from the flagship, and in a few minutes more the long-lost Tom Jackson was being hauled on board of her by his own son, amid a burst of cheering that seemed to split the very sky.

Half an hour later all was over. The pirate prince, as abjectly mean now as he had been boastfully insolent before, went to beg for mercy, and to promise the surrender of all his prisoners.

The next morning Blake sailed out again with the rescued captives, leaving the defeated corsairs to recover their courage by slow degrees, and to bring down upon themselves by fresh misdeeds a still more terrible punishment.

Better Late Than Too Early.

In determining at what age a heifer should be bred her size and maturity must be considered. Some heifers may better be bred to come fresh at two years than others at 30 months. Too early breeding stunts the growth, while if allowed to go too long a heifer is usually more difficult to get with calf. Generally a Jersey can be bred earlier than a heifer of almost any other breed. But all things considered, it is better to breed a little late than too early.—Soleman's Rural World.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

Columbia, S. C., has an ordinance which requires that gates should swing inward.

The castor-oil tree (Ricinus communis) is believed in Egypt to keep away mosquitoes.

The value of the imports of potatoes into England yearly is estimated at about £600,000.

New Orleans represents more than half the total valuation of Louisiana, and consequently pays more than half the taxes.

The Chinese honor their guests by placing before them the oldest eggs obtainable, which are considered their greatest delicacy.

The board of education and the police department of New York are the two most expensive departments of the municipal government. Collectively, their maintenance costs $25,000,000 a year.

A resident of Dawson City writes: "As far as my observations go, the climate here is as suitable for raising winter wheat as in any place in the northwestern or the northern states of America. From my experience of the last two years, I see no reason why this country should not be able to produce its own vegetables and grains."

A rooster figured prominently in a case which was tried in the Coney Island police court the other day. The fowl had been stolen, so the plaintiff claimed, and in proof of his assertion, he called it by name—"George Dewey." Immediately the rooster crowed and flapped its wings, and it was forthwith turned over to its rightful owner.

ELECTRICITY IN CHURCHES.

The Most Modern Appliances Are Being Brought Into Use in These Edifices.

Electricity is put to various uses in churches; in no other buildings, in fact, is it more commonly employed. In this city all new churches are provided with electrical equipment; and many old churches also have been similarly equipped. The same is substantially true of all cities and towns in which there are to be found electric plants. Some churches have complete plants of their own on the premises, but the greater number take the current from the street main.

Besides its use for lighting purposes electricity is now commonly employed in churches for running a motor to operate the organ bellows. This motor can be set in motion or stopped by the organist as he sits in his place at the keyboard simply by the turning of a switch, and in operation it accommodates itself to the demands upon it, running slower when the bellows is full and faster again as it is emptied.

In the newer churches—and such appliances have also been put into older churches—the organ itself is provided with electrical appliances by means of which the valves of the organ pipes are opened. Formerly this was done by means of mechanical appliances that were operated by the pressing down of the key. Now each key is connected by a wire with the valve of the pipe to which it belongs, and when a key is pressed down its wire is brought into contact with a supply wire running along under the keyboard, the circuit is closed, and by means of the power thus transmitted along the wire from the key the valve is opened. It is, of course, kept open until the contact is broken by the release of the key. Organs set up in separate sections in a church are connected by wire in the same manner and readily played from the same keyboard; and new organs, however situated in a church, are now likely to be provided with electrical keyboards.

Church chimes are now played by electricity from a keyboard like that of a piano or organ, at which the player sits with his music before him. Chime playing as formerly done by the pressing down of levers to which cords running to the bells were attached called for very considerable exertion on the part of the player; now the heaviest as well as the lightest bell is rung simply by pressing a key.—N. Y. Sun.

A Man's Calls.

A man must think when making a call to leave his umbrella, overcoat and overshoes in the hall, though he may carry his hat and stick to the drawing-room. He must arise whenever a lady enters the room, and, whether caller or host, he must never look at his watch. Except in his own house he should never find a seat for another, he must not offer his own chair to anyone and should remove his glove before shaking hands.—Woman's Home Companion.

To Boil Sugar for Clear Candy.

Put one pound of granulated sugar in a saucepan with one-half pint of water and a pinch of cream tartar; stir well before it boils, so that the sugar may not settle and burn. When well dissolved stir no more, but let the mixture boil till fine bubbles appear, then begin to try in cold water. If it snaps like glass between the teeth it has reached the crack and is ready for use, and from this all kinds of clear candy may be made.—Household Magazine.

USES OF OLIVE OIL.

Very Valuable in Medicine and Manufacturing.

France Furnishes Us with the Greater Portion Consumed—How the Olives Are Harvested and Handled.

Olive oil suggests to the lay mind little beside salad; and statistics regarding the amount of olive oil imported into the United States annually would call up vistas of indigestion appalling even in this dyspeptic nation. Then, too, the facts about the adulteration of olive oil are calculated to harrow the feelings of a people opposed, on general principles, to being cheated by anyone whose profits are not intended for American use. National pride helps an American to endure being cheated by a fellow countryman; but to be "done" by a foreigner is gall and bitterness. In the matter of adulterated olive oil, however, Americans connive at their own destruction. They cast their bread upon the waters in the shape of cotton seed oil exported to France and Italy; and, after many days, it comes back to them in bottles labeled "pure olive oil." They pay for pure olive oil plus the duty of 50 cents a gallon, and then eat their salad in content.

By far the largest share of our olive oil is imported from France. The best and the worst comes from Italy. The olives of Lucca, in fact of the whole Tuscan district, are famous for their flavor and make the most delicious olive oil on the market; but the Italians haven't the practical business ability of the French, and have never made their oil industry compete with that of France. The market for French oil is so great that the olive crop of France is always inadequate to supply the demand; and every year many French manufacturers send into Italy, buy up Italian oil, clarify it, and sell it under their own labels.

In earlier days the olives were gathered by shaking the trees; but that practice has been abandoned, because it was proved that the bruising of the fruit harmed the flavor of the oil. Now, the olive pickers climb into the trees and pick each olive separately, laying it carefully in a basket. The fruit is crushed in presses much like our cider presses, and the oil is allowed to stand until a sediment forms. Then it is poured off into another cask and allowed to stand once more. After it is fairly clear it is strained through cotton wool or through a mixture of charcoal and sand, and is then ready for adulteration and packing.

Fully three-fourths of the olive oil on the market is more or less adulterated, usually with cotton-seed oil; but the quality of the olive oil generally sold throughout the United States has improved greatly within recent years. There was a time when foreign manufacturers expressed in their own vernacular the theory that any old olive oil would go in America; but the American palate has been educated at considerable expense, and to-day the United States is the best market in the world for the better grades of olive oil. The oil is shipped in bottles or in bulk. Some American dealers, among them many of our most trustworthy firms, prefer to buy oil in bulk, test it and put it up under their own labels, guaranteeing its purity. Other dealers buy it in bulk for other reasons. They buy good oil, adulterate it to suit their wishes, and then bottle it under a fictitious foreign label. It is guaranteed pure by some firm that does not exist. The most trustworthy foreign makers usually put up various grades of oil, and their first quality grade is to be trusted.

Only a comparatively small percentage of the olive oil imported by this country is used for culinary purposes. Large quantities of the purest brands are employed for medicinal use, the remarkable remedial and alimentary value of the pure oil being a well-established fact in medicine. In the treatment of gall stones it has been found an efficacious agent; and in other diseases, tuberculosis, scrofula, anemia, etc., its curative qualities are of great value.

Hundreds of gallons of olive oil are also imported annually for use in the preparation of soaps, pomades and lotions of all kinds; and yet a pure olive oil soap is rare as the dodo. Great quantities of the cheapest quality of oil are used in our silk and woolen factories. It is made from the pulp of the olives after all the best of the oil has been extracted, is shipped in large wooden casks and is admitted free of duty because intended for use in American manufacture.

A well-known New York importer, when asked about the grades of olive oil, said:

"I have just ordered 200 gallons of French and Italian oil. About two-thirds of it will be pure. The rest will be adulterated with my full knowledge and consent. A great many consumers will not pay a price for olive oil which will enable us to pay the duty on pure oil and make a profit. They say that there are oils on the market for a lower price and that they will buy them. We must meet competition; but our first grade of oil is reliable, and I don't mind that when anyone says he will sell you pure French olive oil for less than $2.75 a gallon, he's lying. It can't be done. Very good oil is made of California olives, but the value of the land and the cost of labor makes its price higher than that of the best imported oils; and the chemical qualities of the Lucca soil give Lucca olives a flavor that no others can equal. English and American capitalists are talking of going in for the oil industry in Tuscany. If they do, you'll see Italian oil hum, and France will have to look to her laurels."—N. Y. Sun.

THE Syracuse, Skaneateles and Moravia railroad project does not stay killed. The promoters appeal to the courts against the decision of the Railroad commission, and assert that on its merits the enterprise is bound to succeed.—Herald.

IT WAS at first estimated that the South African war would cost Great Britain about $50,000,000. It has already cost $70,000,000, and the estimate of the final outlay is now placed at $200,000,000. The question of meeting this big war expense is now engaging the attention of the government's financiers. War is an expensive luxury for any nation to indulge in.

A Bankruptcy Decision.

In a decision handed down in the United States Circuit court Saturday Judge Coxe holds that all judgments and levies of the state courts are null and void so far as they relate to the property of a bankrupt, if recovered within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, either by or against him. Judge Coxe also holds that all creditors of a bankrupt are to be considered equal. It is the first time that the question at issue has been decided in this district, although there have been decisions in other districts, some holding one way, some another. Judge Thomas, of Brooklyn, has held that only when a petition is filed against a bankrupt do the judgments fall. Judge Coxe declares in his decision that it makes no difference whether one goes into bankruptcy voluntarily or involuntarily, judgments recovered within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy are null and void.—Seneca Co. Journal.

*Suicide's Horrible Death.

Orra Freeman of Etna, aged 35, ill with grip and despondent over business affairs and the serious illness of his wife, arose from his bed early Wednesday morning during the temporary absence of his nurse. He shut himself in a closet under the garret and set fire to himself. When found he was terribly burned and unconscious and died soon after.

The Butterfly's Pocket.

The male butterflies have the proud privilege of a pocket, but the pocket of a butterfly is wonderfully made. It is really an extension of the under wing folded back on the upper side, but it is exquisitely colored and marked like the upper side so that it is very hard to detect, and no one has yet discovered just how it is opened, although undoubtedly the butterfly can throw it open while he is flying. At first glance there seems to be only white or amber-colored silk floss within, but examine this with a microscope and you will find twisted ribbons, slender rods shaped like a shepherd's crook, others jointed bamboo-like, and flexible rods and tiny scales of various sorts and patterns. It is known that insects have a marvelously keen scent, and it is believed that all these odd little objects are perfume boxes, and that the fragrance so thrown abroad is a signal call to the female butterfly which may be wandering about in the air. It is, to say the least, a very interesting guess, and there is evidence to prove that butterflies and moths are summoned from distances by odors that we would hardly notice.—Philadelphia Times.

Cordovan Leather Boots.

At the court of Elizabeth the wide-topped Spanish boot—handsome, and, to our eyes, theatrical—became popular among the rival courtiers, each endeavoring to outvie the other in the queen's eyes. The most handsome and admired of all were made of white Cordova leather edged with costly lace and having gold spurs. Sometimes buff and red and much more rarely the now prevalent black leather was the material. Shoes for men seem to have gone out of fashion during the Stuart era, so far as the upper classes went. Your plain citizen always adhered to a more or less substantial shoe when at home, and seldom drew on boots save when on a journey—a terrible expedition, however short the distance, up to the middle of the last century. Thus, in Charles II.'s day Cowley, writing to Dr. Thomas Sprat from so near a place to London as Chertsey, says that he might very conveniently come thither "the way of Mampton town—lying there one night."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Fortitude.

"But," he urged, "life is not all joy! Do you know anything to fortify these young persons against the sorrows of life?"

The preceptress of the seminary smiled a sad, haunting smile.

"Yes," she answered in a low voice, but distinctly, "we teach them how to weep without making their noses red!"

Here, again, we were reminded how vastly the scope of education had widened since the days of our youth.—Detroit Journal.

Her Mistake.

The conductor said there was room for a few more inside.

At the Elephant and Castle, when the train turned west, the customary contingent of shoppers got in, and there was an uncomfortable jam.

But the little man kept his eyes on his paper. He also kept his seat.

"Pardon me, madam," said a polite man hanging on to a strap to a lady standing beside him with an armful of paper parcels, "you are standing on my foot."

"I'm so sorry," said she. "I thought it belonged to the man sitting down."

And then the little man's eyes were lifted from his paper, and she got the seat.—Pearson's.

His Regiment.

At an entertainment in Edinburgh, just as the Boer war broke out, the audience stopped the performance to sing the national anthem. So far this was all right, but more followed. A few hot-headed spirits caught sight of a uniform, and the wearer, despite his protests, was carried, shoulder high, around the building. When he regained terra firma some one asked him for the name of his regiment, his uniform not being familiar.

"Regiment!" was the surprised reply. "Man, I'm the doorkeeper. What's gaun wrang wi' ye a'?"—Spare Moments.

A New Arable Notation.

There is a city magistrate living uptown who is possibly raising a mathematical prodigy in the person of his three or four-year-old daughter. She has only recently begun to attend the kindergarten, and yet meditates changes in the system of enumeration now in vogue, which, while startling, are certainly suggestive.

When asked the other day to count, she hesitated some, and then lisped: "None, some, one, two, free, fore."—N. Y. Times.

Where Hope Lingered.

Negroes are unconsciously humorous. The other day two roustabouts were overheard talking. They met on the levee, after one had been absent from the city for several weeks.

"Hello, Bill; how is yer?" said the first.

"Well," was the reply, "de doctors give me up, but de police ain't."—Minneapolis Scimitar.

The Average Man.

His face had the grimness of granite; It was bleached and bronzed by the sun Like the coat on his poor narrow shoulders, And his hands showed the work he had done.

His dim eyes were weary and patient, And he smiled through his pallor and tan A wistful, sad smile, as if saying, I'm only an average man.

I can't be a hero or poet, Nor a dictator wearing a crown. I'm only the hard-working servant Of those set above me. I'm down, And it's no use complaining— I'll get along the best way I can, And one o' these days 'll come morning And rest for the average man.

He wages all battles and wins them, He builds all turrets that tower Over walls of the city to tell

Of the rulers and priests of the hour, Without him the general is helpless,

The earth but a place and a plan, He moves all and clothes all and feeds all, This sad-smiling average man.

Then I lifted my hand in a promise, With teeth set close, and my breath Held hard in my throat, and I uttered A vow that shall outlive death.

I swear that the builder no longer To me shall be less than the plan; Henceforward be guerdon, and glory, And hope for the average man.

—Hamlin Garland in The Outlook.

Rev. Edward Everett Hale.

This eminent divine known the United States over for his great work not only in the church, but as an author and a man who has done years of work for the needy, is quite a hale and hearty man yet and his mind is as bright as a new dollar. He knows how to live, how to take life easy and to make every one around him happy. On his annual trips to Southern Pines, N. C., section he makes that whole settlement of winter visitors happy and they look forward to his annual visits with great pleasure. He knows more ways of making people happy than any other man, and when on the steamers between Boston and Norfolk, Va., it does not take the passengers long to spot the tall prominent man towering above every one around him both in intellect as well as stature, his manners are so winning that the most timid are drawn to him, and it is a great pleasure to spend a day with Doctor Hale on the steamboat ride toward the Southland. Many prayers go up to the Throne on High constantly that this good man may live many years to make this world better. Dr. Hale really cannot conceive of the great love the people have for him.

—An exchange says a test of the law requiring a man to walk an eighth of a mile ahead of a traction engine to give warning of its approach is to be made at Friendship. A horse recently became frightened at an engine in that town and ran away. The carriage was smashed and occupants injured. A criminal action was commenced against the owner of the engine and he was held in $2,000 bail for trial. The outcome will be of interest to persons living in this section of the state, as many have had narrow escapes from the same cause.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding occurred at Sodus, Jan. 18, 1900, when Miss Alice Goldring, daughter of Mrs. E. Volena Goldring, was united in marriage to Jay E. Shaw of King Ferry. The ceremony was conducted at high noon by Rev. Horatio Yates, pastor of the M. E. church of Sodus. Miss Elizabeth Yates of Sodus was the maid of honor, and the groomsmen was Herbert A. Bradley of King Ferry, while Miss Nellie Payne of Sodus was the ring bearer. The bridal procession was led by the ring bearer, who was followed by the maid of honor and the groomsmen. Then came the bridal couple. After the ceremony had been pronounced the wedding luncheon was served. Only the immediate relatives and friends were invited to witness the ceremony.

The bride wore white organdie. The maid of honor was gowned in white organdie over pink, and Miss Payne also wore white organdie. After a wedding trip to the central part of the state, they will be at home at King Ferry where both have taught school during the past few months.

DISAGREEABLE TRAITS.

Sometimes They Impair the Usefulness of Otherwise Upright and Conscientious Men.

Squire Granby was dead. The village people had gathered in the church to hear his funeral sermon. The old doctor, with his nephew, John, who was down from the city, sat in a back pew.

The minister told what everyone there knew to be truth of the dead man. A faithful believer in Christ, a man of high integrity, in whose justice and honesty the whole community trusted, liberal to the poor, walking blameless under every moral law.

"Was all that true?" said John, as he and the doctor walked home.

"Every word of it."

"And yet," said the young man, "I got the impression the other day at the funeral that neither his neighbors nor his family felt his death very deeply. Indeed, I fancied I saw a look of relief on their faces."

The doctor was silent for a moment. "You are too shrewd an observer, Jack," he said. "The squire loved to manage. He was a busy, energetic man, and he thought it his duty to lash every man and woman who was not as busy and energetic as himself. His tongue was like a goad. He was a man, too, who never praised or encouraged anybody. His wife and children probably never heard a word of commendation from him in their lives, strive as they might."

"Then he complained incessantly of the weather, of his food, of the state of the church and the country; of all that his family did or did not do. When he came into the room you felt that a chilly fog had closed in upon you."

"And yet, in spite of these faults, the squire was faithful in his heart to his friends and to God. He probably never was conscious of these disagreeable traits, but they were so noticeable that his neighbors, and even his children and his wife, could not help a certain feeling of relief when he was gone."

"I wonder," said Jack, "if he knew, when he wakened in that other life, how depressing and unpleasant a Christian he had been in this?"

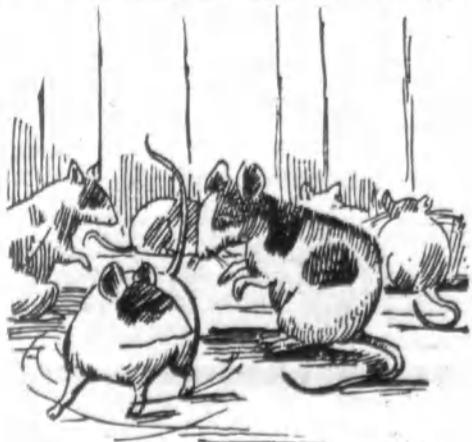

"And I wonder," said the doctor, "if there is no way for you and me to find out our petty faults—our disagreeable personal traits—in time to mend them here in this life?"—Youth's Companion.

PHILIPPINE MICE.

They Wriggle and Squirm, Twist and Turn, and Perform All Sorts of Strange Capers.

You have all seen white rats and mice. You all know how cunning they are, how spry and playful, and what dear little pets they become. Not one of our readers but has at some time owned a few of them or has a friend who has had some. The raising of mice has become a fad of late, and in the east the fanciers are breeding them in colors.

It is a curious sight to see a cage full of these variegated little rodents. Imagine, if you haven't seen them, a yellow mouse, one of chocolate hue and another that looks for all the world like a tiny black-and-tan dog. Some of them are spotted and look like pygmy fox terriers. But the strangest of them all is the Philippine waltzing mouse. Mr. Shroerlucke, a Cincinnati dealer, obtained two pairs of them less than three months ago and he now has two dozen on exhibition in his windows.

They were brought from the far away Philippines by a German naturalist of Berlin, and a Cincinnati physician returned with them here. Just what their native habits are has not been learned, but stop before one of Mr. Shroerlucke's windows and watch the curious little things for a few minutes and you will discover the meaning of their name. They cannot walk three feet in a straight line when they try and it does not look as though they often tried. They wriggle and squirm, twist and turn, and when they are roused they will whirl and spin until they make you dizzy to look at them.

They waltz as nearly as a four-footed creature can. Through the day they like to sleep, huddled together and curled up like little balls; but at night they begin their dance and keep it up for hours, never seeming to tire.

The above cut will give you an idea of their appearance. They are white with black spots or patches, and are smaller than the ordinary white mouse. The head is flatter and longer and the bodies and legs are shorter than those of the common sort. No description, however, will convey an adequate notion of their peculiar waltz. One must see them at their queer antics.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Square Tip to Billiard Cues.

A billiard cue with a square tip instead of a round one is an innovation that may shortly be put to a practical test. Of course, the experts will smile in derision at this statement and say a square tip would be impracticable, but that is because they have never tried it. A well-known amateur of this city, who is of an experimental and inventive turn of mind, conceived the idea and had a special cue made with a square tip. He says it answers every purpose to which the ordinary cue is put, in addition to which it has a number of advantages over the round tip. For one thing, it is impossible to make a miscue. The full force of the cue strikes the ball and gives it more purchase. The point of contact between the rounded tip and the ball is, perhaps, one-tenth less than that of the square tip and the ball, and where "English" is used the latter tip assures a much greater control. The inventor of the square tip has applied for a patent and hopes to introduce it through the medium of several well-known professional players.—Philadelphia Record.

Corduroy Roads.

What a pleasant ride together through Alpena county!—pleasant save for the corduroy roads, which set us both aquiver, as with the old-time ague, recalling the days when they rang the church bells every half hour in Alpena to remind the settlers to take their quinine, and when sawmills (so runs the tale) were operated solely by fever and ague power. Curious sights met our unaccustomed eastern eyes as we rode—log homesteads chinked with plaster, root houses half buried in the earth, sheds thatched with straw, "stump-pullers" (immense portable derricks) at work "clearing up," frequent "dreens," huge mounds of cobblestones newly plucked out of the fields, wagons loaded with cedar ties moving cityward, splendid crops on every hand; so, bless you! who minded the corduroy?—R. L. Hartt, in Atlantic.

Where Time Begins Its Flight.

If one could have truly rapid transit, and be able to pass along the meridian of 180 degrees from the north pole to the equator in a moment, he would have a strange experience if the time selected for the journey were a few moments after midnight on the morning of Tuesday, January 1, 1901, the first day of the twentieth century. Near the pole it would be the twentieth century, Tuesday morning, at 60 degrees north latitude it would be Monday morning that was beginning, the last day of the nineteenth century, for here it is that the western sweep of the date line includes the Aleutian islands in the American day. At 35 degrees north latitude it would be again Tuesday in the new century.—John Ritchie, Jr., in Ladies' Home Journal.

Obeys Orders.

Several members of the Scottish reserve, before leaving for the Cape, were entertained at a farewell supper by their fellow workers in Dundee. "Now, boys," said the chairman after an appropriate speech, "treat what is on the table as you would the Boers." As the feast ended one of the reservists was observed stowing away a bottle of whisky in his pocket. "What's that ye're daein', Tam?" shouted the chairman, good-humoredly. "Oh," replied Tam, "I'm only obeyin' orders. Ye tell us to treat the supper as we would the Boers and, ye ken, what we dinna kill we tak' prisoners."—Tit-Bits.

What He Went For.

A dyspeptic suburbanite reached his home a couple of evenings ago with an ample bandage around his jaw, and his wife, meeting him at the door, was shocked by his appearance.

"Where have you been, Harry?" she exclaimed.

"Dentist's," was the laconic reply, accompanied by a groan.

"Did you get your tooth pulled?" The suffering husband gazed at his better half with murder in his eye, and at last replied:

"Oh, no! I went to get my shoes polished."—Memphis Scimitar.

Teahouse Named "America."

The queen, says a gossip, intends to add one more to the list of teahouses on the Balmoral estate. Each of these retreats is decorated to represent some particular country. For instance, there is "India," which is furnished with bamboo and Indian matting; while "China" is decorated with the Celestial emblems in beautiful colorings. The new teahouse is to be "America," and will be put up in readiness for next year.—Chicago Times-Herald.

He Got It.

Bronco Bill—Ya-as; it was funny that Hurricane Dan should die that way! He got shot by a tenderfoot while hunting!

Grizzly Pete—Gosh! What was he hunting for?

"Why, that was the funny part of it! He was hunting fer fight, and the tenderfoot thought he meant it!"—Puck.

An Indication.

"Is that young woman quick at reparation?"

"I guess she must be," answered Miss Cayenne. "She doesn't seem to have a friend in the world."—Washington Star.

SWEETBREADS DEMI-GLACE.

How to Prepare a Dish That Will Please the Most Fastidious Palate.

Soak in cold water four large sweetbreads for several hours, then place them in a saucepan, cover with fresh cold water and heat gradually; boil slowly ten minutes; remove and lay the sweetbreads in cold water; remove the fibers and fatty parts and place them between two plates to press lightly till cold; then lard the upper part of the sweetbreads with fine strips of larding pork, lay them in a small roasting-pan with a thin slice of larding pork under each one; season with one teaspoonful of salt, add one small sliced onion, a few carrots; cover with buttered paper and roast 15 minutes; add half pint white broth, baste occasionally, lifting the paper and replacing it each time; roast half hour; lay the sweetbreads on a warm dish, remove the pork from the gravy, mix one tablespoonful cornstarch with half cupful cold consommé or broth, add it to the gravy, stir for a few minutes on top the stove, add sufficient consommé to make a creamy sauce; stir and cook five minutes; add a little beef extract and salt to taste, strain the sauce through a cloth into a small saucepan, return to the fire, stir and add in small pieces one ounce of butter. Cut each sweetbread in half, pour over some sauce, enough to glaze them; cut eight slices from a loaf of baker's bread, cut each slice into a round piece the same size as the sweetbreads, brush them over with a little melted butter, and bake a few minutes in a hot oven to a fine golden color; dress these croutons in a circle on a hot dish, place a sweetbread on each one, pour over a little sauce, and fill the center with stewed French peas or pea puree.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Beat Out of His Pension.

A Mexican war veteran and prominent editor writes: "Seeing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I am reminded that as a soldier in Mexico in '47 and '48, I contracted Mexican diarrhoea, and this remedy has kept me from getting an increase in my pension for on every renewal a dose of it restores me." It is unequalled as a quick cure for diarrhoea and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by J. S. Banker, Genoa.

PUT TO TEST.

We notice as each sale progresses, we have lots of followers. While the compliments paid us in the nature of imitating, taking for granted that most everything good has its imitator, still we have refrained from alluding to it in the past for various reasons. Chiefly we know the public will find out in time, that an imitator is nothing more than an imitation, and it is easy enough for the public to draw comparisons.
But our text at the head of this article, we wish to make clear. We notice it is not only confined to the small places, but our surrounding cities have taken our modes and ways. While they are not patented or copyrighted, we still proceed in being the first in war, and last in battle, we therefore put an open challenge to all competitors, big or little, and leave the public to judge who will stand the best test.
Who will give you the most stock to select from; who has made better preparations for out-of-town patronage; who will give you better prices and what's more, who can or will do more for the consumer than the ever tried and not found wanting.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

"A Rose by Any Other Name Smells as Sweet."
The mere naming a few goods or articles is not all there is of its meaning; quoting a few prices is not all there is of a sale; the name of a department store does not mean all there is to your confidence, but just see the list of goods, every article has its different qualities and prices. That even our 32 Page Catalogue has but a trifling of each, so we ask you to come to one of our day's sale. See for yourself the good reason why everybody comes again and again.

HISTORY OF OUR SALE.

In the Spring of 1882, we inaugurated what we termed a ten days' clearing sale, in the most humble way by issuing a circular 8 inches wide, 20 inches long, containing therein a lot of little articles which we dealt in at reduced prices, stating the true and honest reasons, we needed the funds to pay obligations and besides we wanted to dispose of the stock during the dull months of the year, and buy new for the spring. As the old saying and a true one, that necessity is the mother of invention, which has led us into the sale trades.

While we believe in improving and progressing, still we would be ungrateful to burn the bridge that carried us over so safely, we therefore stick to the old and well tried name. While we are enlarging and progressing yearly, and our sales have become a standard symbol of the saving purchasing time; it differs so materially from our first that it is now a woman's carnival, a man's duty, and child's delight in Tompkins County and surroundings.

It is so conducted that at each sale, we sell more, we serve more, we benefit more people than before, ten stores under one roof, 25 apartments, each one nearly a store for itself. It is at your disposal and it's not a few things thrown before you cheaper than usual as a bait, but the entire stock of hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of the best merchandise is placed before you at reduced prices for the time of the sale.
