NEWS ABOUT THE STATE

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

John Manning, who had his examination Saturday on the charge of passing counterfeit half dollars, was held under $750 bonds for his appearance at the next grand jury.—Ithaca News.

A contract has been let with a Utica firm for the construction of a large and expensive pipe organ for St. Patrick's church at Oneida.

The O. & W. machine shops at Norwich have shut down indefinitely, throwing a large number of men out of employment.

E. M. Knight of Farmer will set out 3,000 peach trees on his place next spring.

Notwithstanding the resolution recently passed by the supervisors doing away with town meetings, the Democrats of several towns will hold caucuses and make nominations. De-Ruyter and Lenox democrats held their caucuses last week.

It is reported that vandals have been breaking into and plundering cottages along the shores of Cayuga Lake near Sheldrake and the cottage owners have offered a reward of $25 for the arrest of the guilty parties.

Harrison L. Beatty and District Attorney Matteson of Bainbridge, in company with Dr. Barton of Rome, left for the Bermuda Islands Wednesday. Mr. Matteson will remain only four weeks.

At Utica, Friday, John Doe and Richard Roe were indicted for murder in the first degree for having shot and fatally wounded John Mooney in Caseville, December 22, 1898. They are indicted jointly upon two counts. Thirty-two witnesses were sworn in this case.

Benj. F. Haley, a letter carrier of Buffalo, was received at Auburn prison Saturday under sentence of one year for robbing the mails.

Fifty years ago this month the first mail train over the Erie railroad was run almost to Binghamton. The company had contracted to deliver the first mail to Binghamton by the 1st day of January, and the government gave the company three days' grace. The contract was fulfilled by running the first passenger train through to a point near Kirkwood. The mail was then carried the rest of the distance by horseback.

Oliver C. Churchill of Homer has been granted an original pension of $12 per month.

There is quite a flurry in Lyons over the shortage of $7,000 of town money as shown by the accounts of Supervisor G. W. Koester, deceased.

Daniel McCauley has purchased the place near Lansingville, formerly owned by F. B. Davis.

A burning gas well caused $1,500 damage at Baldwinsville Friday evening.

Bang Falcon of East Syracuse [was arrested last week on the charge of criminal assault proffered by his 16-year-old daughter, Lulu. His arrest discloses one of the most revolting crimes ever committed, the daughter's charges being corroborated by her sister, Mrs. Arthur Briggs of Baldwinsville.

The Regents' department has sent out to all regents schools in the state the following notice: "In future, question papers are to be sent to schools in strong steel boxes, instead of envelopes or packages wrapped in paper. As the integrity of the examination dictates strict adherence to this rule, and there will be only one box for each school, no extra papers will be sent to the school after the box has been shipped."

Party nomination of candidates to be voted for at town meeting must be filed with the town clerks of the several towns fifteen days before the date of the annual town election occurring February 21.

Henry Wavle of Dryden against whom four indictments were found by the recent grand jury for selling liquor without a Raines Law certificate was to have been tried at the present term of court, but on Monday waived the trial and entered the plea of guilty. Sentence was given under the first indictment fining him $300, which was immediately paid, and sentence under the other indictments withheld during good behavior.

The entire dairy of 25 cows belonging to Jordan Sarle of New Berlin have developed tuberculosis and must be killed.

The weekly expense per capita for keeping and caring for the inmates of Willard State Hospital during the year ending September 30, 1898, was $3.02. This includes the cost of maintenance, nursing, medical attendance, officers' salaries, etc. The total cost was $364,000, or $1,000 per day.

Sidney Robeneau, eighteen years of age, was instantly killed Friday morning while cutting timber on a farm, four miles south of Seneca Falls, by a large tree falling on him. The body was terribly mangled.

The Lehigh Valley management decline making any changes in their schedule of trains to accommodate Auburn, and reply to the request of the Business Men's association that "Any additional trains to those now running would have to be run at a loss; and any change of time for the convenience of Auburn would probably result to the inconvenience of other communities."—Argus.

W. E. Dunn of Verona has been granted a pension of $80 per month.

The Central railroad has ordered 3,000 new freight cars and 30 locomotives, to meet its increasing business.

Last Thursday, Assemblyman Gould, of Seneca county introduced a bill to repeal the fish net bounty law. Good for Gould.

Senator Wilcox has introduced a bill appropriating $80,000 for a guard lock, bulkhead and dam in the Cayuga and Seneca Canal for the purpose of regulating the flow of water from Seneca lake.

The village of Joy, Wayne county, was practically wiped out the 7th, only a blacksmith shop escaping the flames. Loss about $25,000.

John Thomas, colored, died at Penn Yan last week aged about 120 years. When 62 years old he married a colored girl of 16 and she with eight children survive him.

Electric Railroad for Genoa.

The air is rife with with railroad rumors and several lines are being built through the town to connect with the old Murdock line. It seems a great pity that the business community along the abandoned line of the valuable Murdock route cannot make that still intact roadbed available in connection with the projected enterprise in electric railways. Genoa, with its great wealth of agricultural facilities without railway transportation should wake up to the situation and devise a way to get to market on something better than wagon wheels.—Argus.

Resolutions.

At a regular communication of Lansing Lodge, 774, F. & A. M. the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased the Divine Master of the Universe to remove from Earth our friend and brother, Clinton Howser, be it

Force of Habit.

A trick of habit to be noticed in many returned volunteer soldiers was publicly observed at the horse show the other day. An exhibitor, who was an officer and did good work in Cuba, was approached by his groom to receive orders. The orders given, up flew the hand of the groom to his hat. But, to the astonishment of every one around, up also flew the hand of the ex-soldier to his hat, and the groom's gesture was responded to with a military salute. In a moment the smile of the ex-officer showed that he realized what a victim of habit he had become, but the first impulse appeared to be irresistible. "The fact is," commented another ex-soldier, "it will be some time before any of us get over the habit of returning a salute. Thanks to those long months of practice, it has become a kind of second nature."—New York Evening Sun.

RELIEF FROM PAIN.

Women Everywhere Express their Gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. T. A. WALDEN, Gibson, Ga., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At my monthly period I suffered untold misery, and a great deal of the time I was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Before finishing the first bottle of your Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, also used the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, and have been greatly helped. I would like to have you use my letter for the benefit of others."

Mrs. FLORENCE A. WOLFE, 515 Mulberry St., Lancaster, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years I was troubled with what the local physicians told me was inflammation of the womb. Every month I suffered terribly. I had taken enough medicine from the doctors to cure anyone, but obtained relief for a short time only. At last I concluded to write to you in regard to my case, and can say that by following your advice I am now perfectly well."

Mrs. W. R. BATES, Mansfield, La., writes:

"Before writing to you I suffered dreadfully from painful menstruation, leucorrhoea and sore feeling in the lower part of the bowels. Now my friends want to know what makes me look so well. I do not hesitate one minute in telling them what has brought about this great change. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is the greatest remedy of the age."

INSOMNIA

"I have been using CASCARETS for Insomnia, with which I have been afflicted for over twenty years, and I can say that Cascarets have given me more relief than any other remedy I have ever tried. I shall certainly recommend them to my friends as being all they are represented." THOS. GILLARD, Egin, Ill.

THE FLOWER OF GALA WATER.*A LOVE STORY.

BY AMELIA E. BARR.

(Copyright, by ROBERT BOWEN'S SONS.)

CHAPTER I.

CONTINUED.

"Ah, the poor little flowers! Set out so primly, they must feel as if they were at school, and not enjoy themselves at all. If I was a flower, I would rather be a bluebell and grow out on the mountain-side just where I pleased. But we have a fine garden at Levens-hope, and the house is old enough to have stories about its rooms and queer dreams in all its chairs. There is even a ghost in the long corridor—not one of the modern scientific ghosts, full of psychological suggestions—but a plain, simple, straightforward ghost."

"Have you ever seen it?"

"Very often in the twilight. There is nothing that fears me in the harmless, melancholy wraith."

"Some unhappy lady of former days, I suppose?"

"Ah, no! A brave young laird of Levens-hope who followed Prince Charlie. Do you see yonder narrow road winding across the mountain-breast southward? The Highland host took it, and young Walter Brathous was with them. He was only twenty years old then, and he never came home again—in the flesh. His picture is in the corridor, a gay, handsome-looking boy, with the unlucky white rose of Stuart over his heart. All the Janfaries, too, have been men of the sword. My own father died at the head of his company in the onset of battle."

There did not seem to be any answer proper to this statement, and Mowbray did not attempt a platitude; yet he made Katherine feel that he was interested and sympathetic. Indeed, his whole nature was in a condition of happy turmoil, and he could not command the words he wished. It was as if a door of his soul, hitherto closed, had been suddenly opened by Katherine's hands, and he was confused and amazed and under a kind of enchantment. The green hills on which he walked with her were not earthly hills; the air he breathed with her had in it some diviner element. Her low voice, her sweet, rippling laugh, the sway of her garments against him, the miraculous light in her eyes, threw him into a delightful trance, in which he saw visions of Love, like unto Katherine; and all his soul and all his senses were subjugated by the sudden splendor of the revelation.

And Katherine knew that this luminous, still serenity had nothing whatever to do with insensibility. She understood intuitively that it was the natural expression of feeling that had not yet learned how to speak. She herself was conscious of some emotion new and strange. She talked about a score of idle things, because her instinct told her silence would be indiscreet. She was a little fearful, and she knew not of what she was afraid. Her lips voiced pleasantly all the proprieties that guard everyday life; but below her lips her heart was asking with a persistent iteration questions which as yet she answered only with a peremptory "Hush!"

The minister and Jessy walked a few yards behind them. They were talking of the entertainment to be given to the stranger.

"He is welcome a day or two at the manse," said Doctor Telfair, but without much cordiality. "You know, Jessy, there are always my sermons to write, and the thought of a visitor is the thought of the burns and of the fish in them; and you'll allow, my dear, that there is not much spirituality between trout and sermons."

"His father was your friend."

"Until a woman parted us. That was long ago, and I hope I have Christianity enough not to visit on the lad the ill-will I once had toward his father. Ask him to stay a week or two weeks, if you like his company."

"You seemed to enjoy talking with him, father."

"Not much. He has no political sense, and he is an Episcopal in religion, and fishing he has no right kind of respect for. His company is neither 'here nor there' for menfolk, and for young girls he might be dangerous."

"Why should he be dangerous?"

"He has 'a way' with him, and I could see that he was fairly bewildered with Katherine's beauty. I'm thinking the laird may ask him to stay a few days, for Brathous knew his father well enough. They were in the same classes, and the young English squire was a well-kent figure. Brathous was proud in those bygone days to have a bow or a word from him. The young man favors his father, though he is not handsome."

"Katherine appears to be pleased with him."

"Katherine should keep mind of her manifest destiny. She would be a foolish girl to bring complications into it. I see Brathous is coming to meet us; so I will just step forward with Mowbray and introduce him."

He did so, and, with the young man at his side, walked briskly toward the advancing laird, while Katherine waited until Jessy joined her. They both watched the meeting with interest, for both knew the uncertain disposition of the laird of Levens-hope. Fortunately Brathous was in a very good humor. He had just received an American reaper and some fine Jersey cattle, and he was ready to welcome any one who was ready to admire them. But, apart from this favorable condition, he was pleased with his visitor; pleased with the memories he called forth, and pleased with his gentlemanly appearance and quick appreciation of the scientific farming which was the special pride of the laird of Levens-hope.

Katherine and Jessy watched the three men turn toward the barns and the farm-buildings, and they understood what would be sure to follow.

"For an hour at least their talk will be of bullocks," said Katherine, with an air of disappointment. "Let us go into the house and sit with my mother. And yet what a perfect afternoon it is for a walk!"

They were at the wide entrance gate, and at Katherine's tone of regret both turned and looked back over the mountain-path they had just trod. It was flushed with the most delicate tints of green. There were tufts of primroses where the meadow was the dampest, and the air was full of fragrance from the yellow blossoms of the broom. The wan cold water flashed and rippled with translucent tints in the bursts of sunshine. The osnels were flitting from stone to stone, the linnets lilted in every bush; and all over the grassy parapets by the gates there was a mist of bluebells nodding in the soft wind a welcome to spring. The loveliness, freshness and the sweetness of the scene went forever into Katherine's memory, blending itself magically with the face and voice of the stranger who had walked by her side.

Slowly the girls went through the garden together, stopping to admire the white powdered auriculas and the budding lilacs, and lingering long by the pond, that was shadowed by the large white thorn, for it was just breaking into a wonder of snowy blossom. The house of Levens-hope stood in the midst of the garden. It was built of rough, weather-beaten stones, touched here and there with moss, and it was old enough and lone some enough to be the habitation of all the ghosts and dreams Katherine's fancy gave it. But the interior had an air of heavy, old-fashioned comfort, brightened with many modern elegancies, making it altogether satisfying and even picturesque.

The girls went leisurely to a parlor on the second floor, a long, low room with many windows and bright fire on the hearth. Here they found Mrs. Brathous. She was sitting in a comfortable wicker chair, with a basket of tangled silks and worsteds on her lap. As the girls entered she smiled and pointed to them.

"I wish I had been born a good, methodical creature," she said, with a long sigh, "for I would need to be a very saint to unravel this weary tangle and keep my temper the while."

"Have you finished your screen at last, Mrs. Brathous?" asked Jessy.

"I have, my dear. Some day also I will finish my cooking book. You say 'at last' very wisely, Jessy, for little duties must give way to great ones, and the writing of a book or the working of a screen are things that can keep, but wasteful servants require to be watched and guided every hour of the day. Did you meet the laird as you came through the garden?"

"He is gone with the minister and an Englishman to see the Jersey cows."

"An English gentleman?"

"Yes; the son of an old college acquaintance."

"Then I must set by my worsteds and look to the cake-basket and the pantry-shelves."

She rose with the words and began to put away her sewing materials. Katherine looked lovingly after her mother, who was an exceedingly pretty woman, small and plump, and very becomingly dressed in a plum-colored silk gown and a little white-lace cap tipping the abundant coils of her dark-brown hair.

"You might put on a lighter frock, Katherine," she said. "Jamie Wintoun will be sure, somehow or somehow to find himself here, and then there will be four pairs of feet for a reel or two."

But though Katherine went to her room ostensibly for this purpose, she did not fulfill it.

"You could not look lovelier, Katherine," said Jessy.

And Katherine touched the cashmere softly, and remembered that she had put it on that afternoon fresh and new. And dresses have their destinies. In this one she had spent the most wonderful hour of her life, and she would not alter a ribbon or add a brooch. Neither would she reason with herself as to the "why" of this resolve. The dress had had a happy beginning. To make question about it might spoil all.

"It just suits you, Katherine," continued Jessy. "It 'jumps to the eyes,' as your gowns usually do. So different to Clara Heriot's, which always have a secondhand look. Let us go into the garden. We can saunter about in the sunshine until the laird and the others come to us."

So Katherine replaced the sailor hat, and threw around her shoulders a little red cloak, and as they went out together Jessy said:

"There must be poets around taking notes, for it was but yesterday I read a verse that was surely inspired by you, Katherine—

"First, a small cloak of faded red;
Then a soft dress of laurel green;
Then a beloved brown-rippled head,
With fair, sweet face the curls between."

I wonder if I made it up myself; for I tell you, Katherine, you turn every one either into a poet or a lover."

Then Katherine would have kissed her friend, but the laird suddenly came round a private hedge, and the minister called to his daughter, and Mowbray stepped to the side of Katherine. Thus they went through the garden together, talking of many things, smiling, laughing, touching hands as they swayed downward the branches of the budding trees, almost touching cheeks as they bent their faces among the hot-house flowers, full of intoxicating scents and dreams of love-laden blossoms.

Here they lingered a little behind the party, and Mowbray, looking suddenly into Katherine's face asked in a low voice:

"How long have I known you, Miss Janfarie?"

"I cannot remember. It seems a long time ago. I must have dreamed about you when I was a child. Do you remember?"

"Yes."

"What do you remember?"

"That your name is—Katherine—Katherine!"

She paled divinely and drew a little away. But his eyes were upon her—eyes full of piercing light, yet languishing and lengthening like the eyes of love. Virgin passion burns to whiteness, and the brightening pallor of Katherine's cheeks was that "complete steel of saintly chastity" that "angels lack." Mowbray bowed before it. She passed onward and he felt that an atmosphere had fallen between them that he could not, even by thought, invade. Yet he was strangely happy. He had been permitted to take this great step forward and he had not been sent back. That was much. And Katherine Janfarie could never forget him. As for himself, he knew that Katherine was his lost Pleiade found again; the star of all his future life.

A few steps brought them out of the warm perfumed air into the cool freshness of the mountain breeze. Jessy was waiting at the door of the hot-house.

"I dare not enter it," she said, "the heat and scent always give me a headache. I am not from the tropics, that is evident."

She was astonished to find Katherine and Mowbray so quiet. She wondered if "anything had been said." Being herself yet of the uninitiated, she did not understand that silence is the first speech of hearts invaded by the melancholy and mystery of love.

The mirth of the evening was a discord. The laird was in that riotously happy mood which was the next disagreeable thing to his unreasonably ill-tempered mood. He made jokes with the minister and snubbed Katherine and scolded his servants, and imagined himself to be very imposing, because every one remembered he was their host and tolerated him. During the evening Jamie Wintoun, as Mrs. Brathous had predicted, "found himself present;" and then she carried out the rest of her plan and played some merry reels which Katherine taught Mowbray how to dance. It was a charming lesson, for Wintoun was one of those fair, tall, long-necked youths, who are always glad to be accommodating and happy to make others happy.

Also he had more influence over his uncle than any other mortal, and he succeeded in partially subduing the offensive prominence of that gentleman. For he had not, as yet, the least jealousy of Mowbray. He had known Katherine nearly all his life. He had no more fear of losing her than he had fear of his estate slipping away from him. When Katherine was twelve years old and he was eighteen they had been told they were destined to marry each other at the proper time; Katherine had made no objection then and no active one since. Therefore Wintoun looked forward to his marriage with the Flower of Gala Water very much as he had anticipated the coming of his majority. Both events were the ordained blessings of the heir of Wintoun-Lands and Lawers-Moss.

About ten o'clock the minister said: "There is light now of moon and stars, laird, and I will be moving home with my daughter and my guest."

Then the laird was specially affusive; he wanted all to remain; he wanted Mr. Mowbray to stay a few days, a few weeks if he liked. It was hard for Wintoun to make him see the propriety of asking the minister's guest to remove to his house. But Mowbray's serenity threw an air of propriety over all mistakes and enabled him in his short adieu to give Katherine, at once, both the assurance and the hope he desired. The laird and Wintoun conveyed the party to the gates, and Katherine took the opportunity to slip away to her room. She stood in the dark and watched the three figures like three shadows disappear. Then Mrs. Brathous spoke to her and Katherine turned and saw her mother at the open door.

"The laird bids you come downstairs, Katherine."

"I cannot come down to-night, mamma."

"The laird will be angry."

"He is neither king nor kaiser, Who cares?"

"Katherine!"

"Indeed, mamma, darling, I am in revolt. And if you would 'dare him' only once he would creep into a mouse-hole. I am not going to answer his summons this night, nor any night again unless I wish to do so. I will follow the Janfarie motto, and 'do my will and fear not.'"

SUBMARINE TREASURE.

Gold and Diamonds Lying at the Bottom of the Sea.

From the London Mail: On the Cornish coast, about five miles from the Lizard, it is quite common to pick up Spanish dollars which have been washed ashore from the wreck of a galleon that went down in 1784 with a large amount of bullion on board. It is surprising that, with all the modern appliances for diving, systematic attempts are not more frequently made to recover treasure from the deep. As early as 1598 a great deal of treasure was recovered, including the historical golden cup which once belonged to Frederick, king of Sicily, from the wreck of one of the ships of the "Invincible Armada." In 1680 an American named William Phipps came over from Virginia to this country and craved the assistance of Charles II. toward recovering some wrecked treasure on the coast of Hispaniola. Charles provided him with a ship and the necessary funds, but the first attempt proved unsuccessful. In a second effort he was financed by the duke of Albemarle, and this time he succeeded in recovering specie to the value of £200,000, and after paying all expenses he was able to give the duke the sum of £80,000 as his share in the venture. The specie on board H. M. S. Lutine, wrecked in 1799 off the coast of Holland, amounted to £1,200,000, and the whole of this still remains at the bottom of the sea, with the exception of £99,859, recovered in the year 1859. Attempts to recover the remainder are still being made. Diving operations resulted in the recovery of £80,000 in gold from the wreck of the ill-fated Royal Charter, which took place close to Moelfra, off the Anglesea coast, but a vast number of diamonds are still lying about the wreck. £40,000 in specie was recovered from the wreck of the Hamilla Mitchell, in the Chinese sea, after lying in twenty-three fathoms of water for upward of twenty years, and £90,000 in gold was saved from the wreck of the Alphonso XII, which was sunk in twenty-six and one-half fathoms of water off the Canary islands in 1885. Some of the French ships sunk at Trafalgar contained vast treasure. Five tons of silver plate, excluding the famous silver gates of St. John's Cathedral, Malta, and a ton and a half of gold plate, mostly studded with jewels, the plunder of the Maltese churches, were on board one of these ships. Not an ounce of this treasure has been recovered.

In China a wife is never seen by her husband before marriage. In this country some wives seldom see their husbands after marriage.

LOOKING OVER
 The entire field of science, nowhere has there been such progress as in the science of optics and the fitting of glasses. Our success in this line is due, in a measure, to the fact that we embrace every new, MKK-TROUSERS idea, employ all the latest instruments, as well as constantly seek to originate new methods of excellence that will in any way aid us in the practice of our profession.
CROSMAN & SWART, Opticians,
 27 Genoa St., AUBURN.

ONE OUT OF SEVEN.

What does this mean?" he asked.
 "Reuben—"
 She hesitated.
 "Well?"
 "I fear—that an obstacle has arisen to our marriage."
 "What obstacle could arise?"
 "Two hundred thousand dollars have been bequeathed to me on condition that I should not—"
 "Marry?"
 "Yes."
 "And you, choosing between the two hundred thousand and me, prefer the money."
 "It is such a fortune and I have such a desire for it."
 Reuben Austin turning away, left her without a word. It was certainly a strange will, but Benjamin Griffin was a strange man. He died a bachelor with no particular love for anybody and no one had any particular love for him. Benjamin had divided his fortune equally among seven marriageable widows in the town of Rathbone, where he resided. He scarcely knew them, for he avoided the sex in general, but he knew that they were all anxious to be married again at no distant day.
 The condition was that each should come into possession of her two hundred thousand in six months, and should continue in possession of the same as long as she remained unmarried; and in the event of the marriage of one, her share should be equally divided among the rest.

The seven widows walked out of the house. That evening there were seven miserable men in Rathbone. Six received peremptory orders to cease their attentions. The seventh, a good looking young man with bright eyes and honest countenance, called on Mrs. Douglass with what result we have seen.
 The six other widows watched her house to see if he repeated his visits. They were wishing he would, for her share would then fall to them. The last week but one before the six months had passed, Reuben Austin was busy in the shop whistling at his work, trying to be merry, though he had lost twenty pounds since he lost his love.

"Reuben!"
 He turned and saw Mrs. Douglass standing in the doorway.
 "Reuben, I shall not take the money."
 "Do you prefer me?"
 "Yes."
 "Dearest!"
 Before the week was out they were married and the other six rejoiced. In a day or two, according to notification, the heirs would hear from the executor.

Mrs. Austin, late Mrs. Douglass, was summoned with the rest. They found exactly the same company present as on the former reading.
 "A codicil to the will read six months ago," said the executor, "then sealed and not to be opened until now was attached. That codicil it is now my business to read to you. It is to be hoped that no one will be unpleasantly disappointed in view of the terms laid down in said codicil, which reads thus:
 "Whereas, I, Benjamin Griffin, having thorough disgust for money considerations in matrimonial projects and entertaining a high respect for matrimonial affection and fidelity, have made my last will and testament in writing bearing date, etc., and have hereby bequeathed the value of my fourteen hundred thousand dollars to seven widows of, etc., named respectively, each, on condition that each shall remain permanently unmarried; now I do by this, my writing—which I hereby declare to be a codicil to my said will—I do hereby order and declare that my will is that the sum of one hundred thousand be under the provisions stated divided among said, etc., provided each shall, notwithstanding the temptation I have set in her way, remain true to her matrimonial engagement with the gentleman she now lovingly professes to be the choice of her heart.

"In case one or any of the said, etc., should discard or fail to marry said man of her choice, I do hereby order and declare that the said sum or sums shall to her or them be forfeited, and if one or any of the said, etc., remain true to said, etc., share or shares falling to the lot of those who proved untrue shall be given to her or them in equal shares."
 "The hundred thousand dollars then falls to Mrs. Austin, who, I believe is the only one among the within named parties who has adopted the course which secures a title to the money bequeathed."
 Six disappointed women filed out of the room. The rest of the fortune was divided among relatives.
 "I was so glad that Mrs. Morley, a second cousin of his, got a good share, for I know she has a family to support and is quite poor," said Mrs. Austin to her husband, "but I am still more glad that I was true to you, dear."

Neat Tailoring.
 An English war correspondent in a Cuban prison sent for a tailor to make him a suit of clothes, but on the arrival of the man of the shears the prisoner found he could only consult with him through the bars, and had to stand quite close to them to be measured. In a few days, however, the tailor again appeared on the scene with the garments cut out and pinned together for fitting on, and this he accomplished by stretching his arms through the window bars as before until the "fit" was to his mind correct.
 When the correspondent came to wear this extraordinary suit a short time after he found it most satisfactory and well fitting—so much so that it is being worn in London now with much pride.

USES FOR WOOD PULP

THE MODERN WAY OF CONVERTING TREES INTO USEFUL ARTICLES.

The Material Costs About One-Half the Price of the Genuine Article—Telegraph and Telephone Poles and Bricks Some of the Things Manufactured.

It is wonderful how extensively paper is taking the place of such substances as wood, brick and iron in various mechanical trades. For instance, boards of all sizes and shapes are now manufactured out of wood pulp very faithfully to resemble the grain and texture of every kind of wood. The material costs about one-half the price of the genuine article, and is used by carpenters, cabinet-makers, picture frame-makers and boat builders for panelling, wainscoting and decorative work generally where lightness and durability are required. Two excellent qualities that the paper boards possess are that they are not subject to warping and dry rot. There are no bad knots to mar the appearance of the surface, and as the material is smooth and does not require planing, and can be easily cut with a fine saw, there seems every reason to believe that it will in time be used even more than it is.

Telegraph and telephone poles, flag-staves and spars for small sailing vessels are the latest development in the line of manufacture from paper. They are made of pulp in which a small amount of borax, tallow, and other ingredients are mixed. These are cast in a mould in the form of a hollow rod of the desired diameter and length. The poles and spars are claimed to be lighter and stronger than wood. They do not crack or split, and it is said that when they are varnished or painted the weather does not affect them. Besides possessing these advantages, the paper-made article can be made fire-proof by saturating it in a strong solution of alum water. When thoroughly dry the paper poles and spars thus treated will resist the action of flames.

The manufacture of enamelled paper bricks, which commenced in 1896, has now become a definite industry, as the material has been used for building purposes all over the United States with very satisfactory results.

The production of these bricks on the hollow principle is a marked feature in their form, the object being practically the same as that sought in the making of hollow forged steel shafting. Not only is a defective center removed, but it is possible to put a mandrel into the hollow, and, by applying pressure the walls are operated upon from both inside and outside. When a solid body is heated the temperature of the interior always varies from that of the outer portion, at first often resulting in the expansion of one or the other that causes the defects. It is for these reasons that the plan of forming the bricks upon the hollow principle and plugging them afterward is of advantage. Sawdust is found to be a good filler for this purpose. It is first fireproofed, as is also the paper pulp used in the bricks, and then it is mixed with cement and pressed into the hollow of the bricks and smoothed and enamelled over.

Spiders Help Make Balloons.

In the professional school at Châlons-Meuden, the spiders have now to spin for the benefit of the balloons, which are used for scientific and military researches. The spiders are grouped in dozens before a reel, which withdraws the delicate threads. One spider can give a thread from 20 to 40 yards in length, after which performance it is released. The threads are of a pinkish hue, and are washed to remove the sticky surface layer. Eight threads have to be combined. The resulting texture is much lighter than ordinary silk of the same bulk, and strong cords for military balloons can no doubt be obtained in this way.

Benefit of Peasage.

Every one may not know what the term "benefit of peasage" implies. A peer can demand a private audience of the sovereign to represent his views on matters of public welfare. For treason or felony he can demand to be tried by his peers; he cannot be outlawed in any civil action, nor can he be arrested unless for an indictable offence, and he is exempt from serving on juries. He may sit with his hat on in courts of justice, and should he be liable to the last penalty of the law, he can demand a silk cord instead of a hempen rope.

Aluminum Musical Instruments.

A new use for aluminum is reported from France, where attempts to construct violins, bass-fiddles and other string instruments of this metal have been entirely successful. It is stated that these instruments produce a richer sound than those manufactured of wood, and that this is especially the case with higher notes.

No Objectionable Literature in Russia.

In Russia many scientific and miscellaneous books are not allowed to be sold, simply on account of a few objectionable lines. But if any one needs the book he can send a letter, with a certain fixed sum of money, and get special permission to order a copy.

In the statistics of crime in the United States Arizona stands first, Nevada second and Massachusetts third. But here is a fine illustration of the dangers of statistics without explanatory notes. In Arizona 45 percent, and in Nevada 46 per cent. of the criminals are murderers or persons who attempted murder. In Massachusetts 40 per cent. of the crime is drunkenness which that state punishes with great assiduity and severity.

Milo Howell a Suicide.

Milo Howell, a well known farmer of Lansing committed suicide at his room in the Tompkins House at Ithaca on Thursday evening of last week by hanging himself with the fire escape rope. He had been stopping there several days and being taken ill, his wife had sent her sister-in-law, Mrs. Helen Bower, to care for him, and while Mrs. Bower was at supper he had taken the opportunity to take his life. Mr. Howell was 53 years old, a member of Fidelity Lodge 51, F. & A. M., and favorably known by a large circle of friends. Mrs. Howell stated to a reporter that for the past eight years Mr. Howell had been acting strangely and a close watch was kept on his actions. Insanity was in the family; his mother starved herself to death and he has a sister in Willard asylum now. He also had two uncles who killed themselves. The funeral was held Sunday from his late home.

A Probable Contest.

Unless unexpected results happen between now and the first of next month a will contest of no mean proportions will arise in Surrogate's court over the last testamentary document left by the late Hannah Winslow, of Springport, who died in Union Springs, Nov. 4, last. The personal property is estimated at $6,000 and the real estate at $5,000. There are about 20 heirs who live at Ledyard, Poplar Ridge, King Ferry, this county; Amsterdam, Troy and Hannibal, this State, and in Mississippi and Wisconsin. The will offered was executed May 25, 1898. In the preliminary examination Wednesday there was a large attendance of interested parties and several witnesses were on the stand. The matter was finally adjourned to February 1, when the petitioners will offer the will for probate and the objections will be filed.

A Quiet Wedding.

The home of Mrs. Jane Cutter at East Lansing, was the scene of a quiet wedding on January 18th, 1899, when their youngest daughter, Miss Bertha J., was united in marriage to Mr. Charles H. Conklin of Fleming. Rev. S. H. Haskell of Enfield performed the ceremony, punctually at the noon hour. Only the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present. The bride was tastefully attired in white laced-down and carried a bouquet of white roses. The groom was dressed in the conventional black. Miss Cutter is one of East Lansing's brightest daughter's, and Mr. Conklin is one of the first young men of Fleming. Mr. and Mrs. Conklin took the evening train for Rochester and other places of interest.

Terribly Injured.

A boy about 15 years old, named Bishop, was seriously injured at the plaster quarry north of Union Springs village Monday morning. Doctor Hoxie was summoned. The accident was caused by the stone crusher in which, through carelessness, the boy was entangled. His life may be saved, but his arm and perhaps a leg must be amputated.

Concert Postponed.

The concert which was to have been given at the Venice church this evening by the Genoa orchestra and vocalists, has, on account of the illness of several participants, been postponed until Saturday evening, February 18th. Further particulars will be announced later.

Hotel Burned.

The Myers House at Fair Haven was burned last Sunday morning. The cause of the fire or where it originated is unknown. The hotel was owned by L. H. Wallace of Syracuse and the loss is about $3000 with an insurance of $2700.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions were recently adopted by Sherwood Lodge No. 456, upon the death of Adelbert Underhill.

WHEREAS it has pleased our Father to remove our brother while yet in the prime of life and usefulness, we realize that there is grander work for him in the great beyond, therefore it is

Resolved that in the death of Bro. Underhill our lodge has lost an honest conscientious temperance man, and one who was always ready and willing to do all that lay in his power for the upbuilding of our order.

Resolved that the charter and regalia of our lodge be draped for ninety days in memory of our deceased brother.

Resolved that we extend to the bereaved family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in their affliction, and commend them to the consolation of Him who healeth all our wounds.

Resolved that these resolutions be presented to the family and also published in the official organ, GENOA TRIBUNE, and Auburn Journal, and also spread upon the minutes.

Messages and Papers of The Presidents.

A HISTORY OF OUR COUNTRY WRITTEN BY OUR PRESIDENTS.

Edited by the Hon. JAMES D. RICHARDSON, under the Direction of Congress.

It includes all the Inaugural Addresses, Annual Messages, Special Messages, Veto Messages, Proclamations, Executive Orders, including important secret correspondence of the State Department bearing on all National questions in connection with the history of our government from the first administration of President Washington down to and including the Messages of President McKinley.

THE INDEX gives the thread of United States History, every fact verified by the government records, in encyclopedic form, stated clearly and concisely, and refers you to the President's own words: It is truly A NATIONAL LITERARY MONUMENT.

ILLUSTRATED WITH RARE ENGRAVINGS.

These engravings have never before been published. They constitute a complete gallery of Portraits of the Presidents, Government Buildings, Copies of Historic Paintings, etc., etc., all authorized impressions from Government plates.

It bears practically the unanimous endorsement of two Presidents and their cabinets, the Congress, and thousands of other public officials and representative citizens.

WHY THIS ANNOUNCEMENT IS MADE.

The original edition published by the Government was far too limited. Thousands upon thousands of applications had to be refused. It was not the intention, originally, to publish a further edition, but on account of the unprecedented demand, Mr. Richardson, who had charge of the work for the government, was able to arrange for a further edition.

The Hon. Ainsworth R. Spofford, of the Library of Congress, has consented to act as General Secretary of the Committee appointed to superintend the distribution of this new and handsomer edition, and to pass upon applications as received.

Any one can make application, but the rules of the Committee allow for but a FEW SETS TO EACH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

This means, of course, that only a few persons in each community can have a set of this great work. Part of the apportionment for almost every district has been spoken for already, so that prompt action is necessary on the part of those who would like to avail themselves of the opportunity.

THE COST IS MERELY NOMINAL.

If a private publisher were to undertake to publish such a work, even if he could gain access to the government records, it would cost not less than a million dollars to produce, and he could not afford to sell it for less than Ten Dollars per volume. There are ten magnificent volumes, averaging seven hundred pages each. The Committee has, however, undertaken to distribute this edition at practically the cost of manufacture and distribution. Applications may now be filed with the Committee on Distribution, and will be passed upon in the order received.

Arrangements have also been made for those WHO WISH TO INVESTIGATE FURTHER before making formal application, so that upon postal card request ample descriptive matter, exhibiting the bindings, engravings and full particulars, will be forwarded, together with rules for making applications.

All such requests, if addressed as below, will receive prompt attention, in regular order.

AINSWORTH R. SPOFFORD, General Secretary,

Committee on Distribution, Dept. _____ Dist. _____

WASHINGTON, D. C.

SPECIAL NOTICE—On all requests accompanied by a deposit of ONE DOLLAR, as a guarantee of good faith, a set of the books will be laid aside and reserved, pending further investigation, and if you decide within ten days not to make a regular application the amount will be refunded.

When Mme. Verne's granddaughter Hortense was betrothed to M. Moran, it became necessary to celebrate the occasion by a little family supper. But when Mme. Verne had counted them all, she found, to her horror, that they numbered thirteen. She thought her to invite M. Roden, the cure, who had christened little Hortense.

So M. Roden was invited, and all went well until two days before the supper, when an unimportant young cousin bethought him to break a limb, and reduce the party again to thirteen.

The time was short, but madame made the best of it. She invited the music teacher, who accepted with delight. Matters were arranged once more, when a message came to Uncle Pierre which demanded his presence elsewhere.

Again there were thirteen guests, and but half a day remaining. Mme. Verne was equal to the emergency. She sent a note to a deaf gentleman of her acquaintance, begging him to come. And now all was well again.

The ladies were adding the finishing touches to their toilettes in the dressing room, when suddenly screams were heard to resound through the house.

The maiden aunt, Mlle. Rosine, had caught her dress on fire. It was extinguished before she was hurt; but the dress was spoiled, her nerves upset, and she could not and would not remain to the supper.

Mme. Verne was in despair. Suddenly she remembered her notary. A carriage was at the door. She tossed on a hood and shawl and hurried in to it.

It was only five minutes' ride to the building in which the notary's office was located—a many-storied edifice, of which he occupied the second floor.

On the first were situated the apartments of M. Moran—Hortense's betrothed husband. As she hurried past their door Mme. Verne glanced toward them and saw a lady dressed in black speaking to a servant, who, at the same instant, shut the door in her face.

Mme. Verne, having mounted the stairs, was doomed to a disappointment. The notary was in, but he was suffering from an attack of the gout. However he could give her the direction, to a quorthieme, who, if he was disengaged, would be happy to hire himself out for supper time.

As she reached the foot of the stairs, however, she paused. A woman, dressed in black, sat upon the lower one, rocking herself to and fro and moaning. She touched the figure upon a shoulder and said: "My poor child, what is the matter?"

"I have come from the country; I am an orphan; I have no relatives; I came to find a friend who promised me everything; I know no one here. Yesterday I spent my last sou. Is there anything for me but the river?" Suddenly an idea flashed upon the madame's mind.

"At least you shall earn your supper," she said. "Come with me."

She hurried the girl into the carriage and drove away with her, explaining as they rode the emergency in which she found herself.

"You will wear a dress of my granddaughter's," she said. "A black lace which may be thrown over your own. And with these words she led the girl into her home upstairs into her own apartment, where she adorned her in haste and led her out to the table—the loveliest guest there—lovelier far even than the golden-haired Hortense.

Absorbed in her duties as hostess, Madame Verne did not notice, as the others did, a strange thing that took place as M. Moran seated himself and glanced toward the strange guest. As her eyes met each turned deadly pale, and each seemed to find it impossible to look away.

Once only did the strange girl speak in a whisper to Mme. Verne. "This is a betrothal feast, madame?" "Yes, my child."

"Your granddaughter, the beautiful young lady yonder, is to marry M. Octave Moran?" "Precisely; in two months."

After this she said nothing more. At last they were about to leave the table, and the old grandfather arose. He had something to say to the young couple—kind admonitions to him who was about to take her into his keeping; but he ended thus:

"But I give her to you gladly, my dear Octave, for I know you to be an honorable man; and I believe you will give her a heart as pure and fresh and ill unwritten as the one she gives to you, a heart worthy of her acceptance."

As he uttered the last sentence Octave Moran had slowly turned his face, as though attracted by some mesmeric influence, toward the stranger. Their eyes had met and fixed in a strange stare; the other guests were all staring at them.

Suddenly Octave Moran started to his feet and dashed out of the room. There were thirteen at the table. Something flashed into the hand of his pale woman, at whom all gazed and she fell forward upon the table.

When they lifted her they found a dagger buried in her heart. Death had been more prompt with its thirteen than usual.

They found over her dead bosom that night a miniature of Octave Moran, a lock of his hair, and a little golden reas soft as down, and in her pocket some letters. That was all; but Hortense never married M. Moran.

A Wealthy Mendicant.
The wealthiest living professional beggar, Simon Oppasich, was in 1893 sentenced to seven years' hard labor for perjury. He was born without feet or arms, and his physical defects brought him exceptional sympathy and cash. In 1880, at the age of forty-seven he had saved $60,000; and in 1888 he had by speculation increased his fortune to $125,000 in cash and some $200,000 in Trieste and Parenzo real estate. Since then he has quadrupled his wealth by trading on the bourse.

The Notes in a Bar.

Counting the dancing notes in a bar... sunlight sounds like one of those... never ending tasks with which malignant faeries delight to break the spirits of little heroines in the German folk stories.

Dr. Frankland's experiments have shown us how to count the microorganisms, and now a Scotch scientist, by a totally different method, has been enabled to take stock of the more harmless, but hardly less interesting, just notes.

That this power of prying into atmospheric secrets will eventually yield important results must be obvious to all. Among the most curious discoveries already made is the direct and constant relation which exists between dust particles and fogs, mist and rain.—Pearson's.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

The dreariest thing is wasted love. A man doesn't begin to love till his passion becomes of age.

The more a woman studies finance the surer she is that nothing makes a probability so clear as a pattern.

Probably Cupid's success is due to the fact that he has only one string to his bow.

If there were no such thing as love, there would be no such things as music in the world.

Whenever you see a self-made man you can be pretty sure it's more than some woman's fault.

To man achieves success as long as a contradiction to himself, or as long as he is not a contradiction to a man.

There are two women in the average man's life—the woman he wants to marry and the woman he wishes he had married.

When a woman resolves to spread sunshine and happiness around her begins by carrying a sad, wistful look in her eyes and talking in a low, plaintive voice.—New York Press.

Massachusetts is the only State in the Union in which the judges are appointed to hold their office during good behavior. There are seven States in which the judges are appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate or of the Council in which they are elected by the Legislature, and thirty-three in which they are elected by the people.

Ayer's Hair Vigor. It causes the oil glands in the skin to become more active, making the hair soft and glossy, precisely as nature intended.

It cleanses the scalp from dandruff and thus removes one of the great causes of baldness.

It makes a better circulation in the scalp and stops the hair from coming out. It prevents and cures baldness.

Ayer's Hair Vigor will surely make hair grow on bald heads, provided only there is any life remaining in the hair bulbs.

It restores color to gray hair. It does not stain the hair in a moment, as does a hair dye; but in a short time the gray color of the hair gradually disappears and the darker color of youth takes its place.

Would you like a copy of our book on the Hair and Scalp? It is free. If you do not obtain all the benefits mentioned from the use of the Vigor, we will refund the money.

German Emperor's Employees.

There are 1500 people upon the German Emperor's list of employees, including 350 women servants, who are engaged in looking after the twenty-two royal palaces and castles that belong to the crown. Their wages are small. The women receive not more than $12 a month and the men servants from $15 to $25 a month.

The Liquor Trade in America. Though there are doubtless many employers of labor on this side, says the London (England) Hospital, who are affected in their choice of workmen by the fact that these are or are not abstainers, we do not think that the question has ever been made the subject of a Government inquiry here.

Not so in the United States, where the commission appointed by the Government schedules the replies made by no less than 5901 establishments, detailing their practice in regard to the taking on of the 1,745, 923 employes in their service. The employers include individuals or companies engaged in agriculture, manufactures, mining and quarrying, transportation and retail trade. The habits and opinions of these different employers are naturally varied. With 1618 the report is that the habits of the prospective employes regarding drinking are not taken into consideration, but the large majority, viz., 5863, takes care to discover what a man's habits are. Besides those who object to their employes taking intoxicants at any time, whether on or off duty, there are a number of employes who insist merely that while actually at work they should abstain from liquor, and also those who, while they do not lay restraint on the majority of their employes, insist on those in responsible positions refraining from drink.

Thus in all departments of industry there are a good many firms who demand abstinence from engineers, managers and watchmen. In agriculture stress is laid on teamsters being non-drinkers, for fear of carelessness and cruelty in the handling of cattle on the part of intoxicated men. In mining and quarrying the restriction is applied chiefly to handlers of explosives and to electricians and the like, any blunder on whose part might lead to great injury to their fellow workers, not to speak of damage to property. In transportation almost all branches of the service are, in some companies, forbidden to have anything to do with alcohol; trainmen, motor-men, conductors, telegraph operators, electricians, switchmen and pilots.

What Drunkards Cost Boston. Last year the city of Boston expended the sum of $115,802 for the support of drunkards in the House of Correction in Suffolk County, according to figures furnished by Penal Institutions Commissioner Marshall. While all of Suffolk County, which includes besides Boston the city of Chelsea and the towns of Beverly and Winthrop, furnishes inmates for the penal institutions, the entire cost of maintaining the institutions is borne by the city of Boston. This is because the control of the institutions is left wholly to Boston.

Commissioner Marshall says of Deer Island: "There were 8447 committals to this institution for drunkenness, and the aggregate of the time served by those committed was equivalent to 1813 years. With a per capita cost of maintenance of $64.70, the cost of the maintenance was $511,318." At the South Boston House of Correction "there were 107 committals for drunkenness, and the aggregate of the time served by those committed was 13,460 days. With a per capita cost of maintenance of $124.47, the cost of maintenance of the above number was $4500."

A Champion's Testimony. A champion cyclist was asked: "Do you ever take spirits of any kind? I mean whisky or brandy?" "No; they out the breath short. You can't race and take brandy. It may help a little, but it leaves you worse. I believe that if five or six men were together in a race, say two miles from the tape, and one was handed a drink of brandy, it might let him break away and win easily; but if he had ten miles, or had a long race before him, he would find great difficulty in riding. His breath would be out short. The man who drinks brandy or whisky will soon be broken-winded."

"So you don't believe in brandy?" "No; it may help for a short spurt, but it is no good for a long run. Only a temperate man can be a good racer."

An Authority on Alcohol and Longevity. "Life is considerably shortened by the use of alcohol in large quantities. But a moderate consumption of the same also shortens life by an average of five to six years. This is consistently and unequivocally seen in the statistics kept for thirty years by English insurance companies, with special sections for abstainers. They give a large discount, and still make more profit, as not nearly so many deaths occur as might be expected under the usual calculations. According to federal statistics in the fifteen largest towns of Switzerland, over ten per cent of the men over twenty years of age die solely or mainly of alcoholism."—Dr. A. Forel, late professor of physiology in the University of Zurich.

IVORY SOAP PASTE.

In fifteen minutes' time, with only a cake of Ivory Soap and water, you can make in your own kitchen, a better cleansing paste than you can buy.

Ivory Soap Paste will take spots from clothing; and will clean carpets, rugs, kid gloves, slippers, patent, enamel, russet leather and canvas shoes, leather belts, painted wood-work and furniture. The special value of Ivory Soap in this form arises from the fact that it can be used with a damp sponge or cloth to cleanse many articles that cannot be washed because they will not stand the free application of water.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING.—To one pint of boiling water add one and one-half ounces of Ivory Soap cut into shavings, boil five minutes after the Soap is thoroughly dissolved. Remove from the fire, and cool in convenient dishes (not tin). It will keep well in an air-tight glass jar.

Citation.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK:—To George Edwards, Charles H. Edwards, Joshua Edwards, Allen Edwards, Mary J. Perigo.

SAND GREFFING: Whereas, E. Byron Whitten of Genoa, N. Y., has lately applied to our Surrogate's Court of the County of Cayuga for the proof and probate of a certain instrument in writing, dated the 1st day of January, 1897, purporting to be the last will and testament of Eber Edward's late of Venice, in said county, deceased, which relates to both real and personal estate, Therefore, you and each of you are cited to appear in our said Surrogate's court, before the Surrogate of the County of Cayuga, at his office in the court house, in the city of Auburn, on the 28th day of February 1899, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, and attend the probate of said last will and testament.

And those of you who are under the age of twenty-one years, are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, you will appear and apply for the appointment of a guardian, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the surrogate to represent and act for you in this proceeding.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the seal of our said Surrogate's Court to be hereunto affixed.
Witness, Hon. George B. Turner, Surrogate of the County of Cayuga, at the Surrogate's office in the city of Auburn, this 11th day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety nine.
WALTER E. WOODEN,
Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

Foreclosure Sale.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated February 29, 1895, executed by Michael Bruton, of Genoa, N. Y., to Levi Starbuck, of the same place, recorded in Cayuga County Clerk's office, on March 7, 1895, at 9 o'clock, a. m., in Liber 121 of Mortgages, page 835, and no suit or proceeding at law having been instituted to recover said money, or any part thereof, and the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the first publication of this notice being $175.73, which is the whole amount unpaid thereon; now, therefore, notice is hereby given, according to the statute in such cases made and provided, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and therewith recorded, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, by the subscriber at public auction, on the 15th day of March, 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the front door of the First National Bank in Moravia village, N. Y.

Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the town of Genoa, N. Y., and being a part of lot No. 21, in said town, bounded and described as follows: Beginning in the south-west corner of lands now (1895) owned by James Lowe and in the center of the highway thence west along the center of said highway a vein north along the center of the highway a vein north from the first three corners place of beginning, and to lands of or with Lucien and John Meads' land abutting south line of said Meads' land abutting said Meads' land to land of John C. Lechorn's land east along the south line of said Lechorn's land to lands owned by said James Lowe, thence south along the west line of said Lowe's land to the place of beginning, containing thirty-six acres of land more or less and being the same premises conveyed to said party of, first part by Corneilus Post and wife by a deed dated August 6, 1878, and recorded in Cayuga County in Liber 151 of deeds, page 98.
