EVENTS IN AND OUT OF THE EMPIRE STATE.

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings
Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

Martin M. Johnson of Locke has received an increase of pension to $24 per month.

The Ithaca University Preparatory school will be authorized to increase its capital stock from $10,000 to $50,000.

An attempt is being made to secure rural mail delivery for residents along the east side of Owasco lake from Auburn south.

Pensions granted: Original—John W. Belcher, Auburn, $8; Harrison Thomas, Auburn, $10; increase, Ira Scott, Genoa, $8; George Petty, Auburn, $10.

Carl Moore, one of Moravia's ball tossers, tried riding on the cinder path without a tag. As a result Officer Nostrand ordered him before Justice Peckham and he paid a fine of $1.

It is understood in Wells college circles that Dr. Waters has resigned the presidency of the college and that the trustees are looking for a successor. Dr. Waters succeeded Dr. Frisbee several years ago.

Several months ago a new cloak tied in a large pasteboard box was found on the steps of the Moravia National bank. It has never been called for. Parties owning same can get it by calling at the bank.

Considerable talk has been caused by the disappearance of R. E. Eibert, manager of the Auburn branch of the Rochester Clothing Company and fears are entertained for his safety. The police are assisting in the search.

The number of losses among the newspaper correspondents in South Africa is appalling and goes to show what stuff these men are made of. Six have been captured, two seriously wounded and five have been killed.

Upon the application of former Judge Day of Moravia, made in behalf of relatives of Eulalie Morse, an alleged incompetent person, Judge Underwood has appointed Frank S. Curtis, a commission to inquire a sheriff's jury into the mental condition of the woman.

The United States court of claims, in its decision determining the division of bounty money for the destruction of the Spanish squadron at Santiago, declares that the New York was among the vessels engaged. Sampson gets $8,335 and Schley $3,000. As the New York was several miles away and did not fire a shot, the decision of the court of claims is about as sensible as it would be to say that white is black.

A lot of fool women have amused themselves and showed the public their lack of brains by showering flowers, choice wines and cigars on Howard C. Benham, recently tried at Canandaigua for the murder of his wife. He was not proven guilty of the murder of his wife, but he was shown up to be a libertine and a detestable, low-lived brute, while the women proved themselves to be about as fair samples of feminine degeneracy as one cares to see abroad in the land.

If ill luck hangs on, the Moravia ball team will soon look like an aggregation of football players. Gunnell is still suffering from a strained finger, and Wednesday at practice, Welch had the misfortune to get his ear in the way of a ball with the result that the hearing appendage was badly split. Thursday Capt. Carr caught a hot grounder, not with his hands, but in the mouth, with the result that several stitches were necessary to close the wound. Dr. Lee Ryan attended the cripples.

A few evenings since, says the Tully Times, a certain young man of Fabius called on his best girl to return home the conversation chanced to turn to art, and the young lady said to him that he reminded her of Venus de Milo, whereupon the young man was delighted, thinking surely it was symmetrical form she alluded to. When he got home he consulted an encyclopedia and to his deep chagrin and mortification found Venus de Milo had no arms. He went down in the cellar and tried to butt out his brains on a soft cabbage.

Guernsey R. Jewett of Moravia has been appointed private secretary to Attorney General Davies.

A fire evidently set by some person destroyed the Cayuga village hall, the union school building and a dwelling, on Tuesday, June 26. The loss is about $8,000, half insured. Cayuga village has no fire protection except a bucket brigade.

Mrs. Charles Conklin of Niles was severely burned Saturday morning. She was awakened about 4 o'clock by the smell of smoke, and opening a door leading to the kitchen was met by a rush of flames which singed her hair and caught her night robe. Her husband quickly extinguished this fire, but seeing the house was doomed, he endeavored to save a part of the contents. Neighbors arrived and after a hard fight succeeded in saving a part of the goods and also the barns. The loss is about $3,000 with $800 insurance. Mrs. Conklin is expected to recover.

Admiral John W. Phillip, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, died suddenly from heart disease on Saturday afternoon. He commanded the battleship Texas during the Spanish war, and his Christian character and able seamanship gave him a place in the hearts of his men seldom gained by a naval officer. His reverence for the dying, whether friend or foe, was responsible for the order which made him famous. After the battle of Santiago, with his sailors all up on deck and viewing the burning wrecks of the Spanish ships, an old veteran started a cheer which all would have joined. Captain Phillip raised his hand and said "Don't cheer, men; the poor devils are dying over there." A widow and two sons survive him.

The renomination of George W. Benham for county clerk and Gerritt V. Loughborough for county treasurer by the Republican convention Saturday was expected, because both have been efficient and painstaking public officials. This year has been a notable one in the number of renominations accorded by the Republican conventions. Assemblyman Ernest G. Treat was named for a second term at Weedsport Friday, in accordance with the precedent which prevails in this county, and on Wednesday George S. Fordyce broke all records by being named for member of assembly for the second district for the fourth time without opposition. This is a tribute to Mr. Fordyce's services as well as to his political acumen.

It Depends.

It is reported from Albany that the question whether the New York, Auburn and Lansing Road shall be built depends on the promoters of the road—whether they can show their ability to build. It is said the earnestness of the people in the south side turned the scale with the commissioners and their evidence made an excellent showing. This with the more or less copious rain of Tuesday afternoon will make many hearts glad. State Treasurer Jaekel is quoted as having talked with the clerk of the railway commission who said that the granting of the certificate now depended on the promoters. The people throughout the south part of the county are anxious regarding the outcome of the case, and some are fearful that the company is not financially sound. That a char-

Literary Note.

It was a happy inspiration which led "Success," in its July issue, to have the career of that sweet and womanly American girl, Helen Miller Gould, written up by Congressman Charles B. Landis, of Indiana. The latter is as eloquent and versatile as his subject is charming. Another feature of exceptional excellence is a new story of Lincoln—a bit of un-written history, in fact—from the pen of William Van Zandt Cox, secretary of the National Museum at Washington. A pen sketch by James E. Kelly, the American sculptor, shows Lincoln standing on the parapet of Ft. Stevens, in the District of Columbia, with General Jubal A. Early's sharpshooters blazing away at him, in the almost successful attack on the national capital, July 11-12, 1864. General Wright is in the act of commanding the President to step down to a place of safety.

Three forceful writers, Rev. Dr. Hillis, James B. Dill and Dr. George F. Shradly, contribute a symposium on the question, "Are the three great professions declining?" Mr. Dill is the lawyer-promoter who succeeded in patching up the quarrel between Andrew Carnegie and Henry C. Frick. The whole issue is full of well illustrated and admirably written articles, and it reflects credit upon its wide-awake proprietors, the McGraw-Marden Company, now located in splendid quarters in the University Building, Washington Square, New York.

Modern journalism sometimes goes to ludicrous extremes. Not long since the New York Journal published dispatches from its own exclusive source of information, telling of the relief and safety of the foreign ministers at the Chinese capital; it also published telegrams from the crowned heads of Europe thanking the Journal for relieving them of anxiety. It transpired, however, that some of the ministers had been killed and none of them rescued. But the Journal is not embarrassed by a little thing like that, but continues to make other dispatches from its own exclusive source of information.

Perhaps you owe for this paper.

D. A. HYNES,

The Man Who Came Back

By Wilson Parkes.

IT WAS a struggle between Anson Davis and Caleb Jones as to who should win the love and the hand of Mary Doyle. There was rivalry, but no ill-feeling. When Caleb won the prize Anson snatched him on the back and said:

"All right, Caleb, you are the lucky man. I don't believe I was ready to marry just yet, anyhow. I'll wait two or three years and then marry your widow."

"That's mighty kind of you," answered Caleb. "I have heart trouble, and may not live a year, and the thought that you'll take my place will make me die content."

Six months after the marriage Caleb Jones went down to Philadelphia on business. He had never been drunk in his life, but he got drunk to celebrate this occasion. While in a befuddled state he was carried aboard of a ship bound for the east, and when his sober senses returned he was on blue water.

Meanwhile, as he did not return to his village home in due time, an alarm was raised, and for the space of three weeks Caleb figured in the public press and police reports as "mysteriously missing."

Then a body was found in the river, identified as his, and shipped home for burial. Soon after the funeral Anson Davis called on the widow and said:

"Mary, I don't know whether Caleb ever told you about it or not, but there was an understanding between us that in case he died I was to step into his shoes."

"I believe he did mention something of the kind," replied the relict.

"That was kind of him, and saves any further explanation. I guess you thought almost as much of me as you did of him, but he happened to save your life from a cow one day while I was out of town. Poor Caleb! We shall miss him and mourn for him, but at the end of a year we'll be married."

The days and weeks and months went by, and the widow put off her weeds and Anson bought his wedding suit. The marriage day was set, the friends invited and the minister engaged, and another 24 hours would have made the widow Jones Mrs. Davis, when in walked Caleb. He had recovered from his drunk and returned from China.

"I wouldn't have blamed you a bit," he said to the astonished wife, when he learned what was about to happen. "Of course, you thought I was dead, and it was all right for you to marry Anson. I might have written, but somehow I never got around to it. Sorry to have made any trouble, but I got drunk just to see how it seemed, and was carried off."

And when Anson Davis heard of his arrival and came rushing over with his eyes bulging out, Caleb gave him a hearty hand and said:

"Hope I haven't disappointed you, Anson. It was mighty kind of you to else," she replied. "He was surely in that smash, and as he hasn't been heard of since, he must be among the dead."

Again the days and weeks and months flew away, and as no letter came from Caleb and the railroad people had put a tombstone at the head of his grave, the wedding garments were again prepared and the guests invited to the feast.

This time the date was set for Sunday, and the quiet calm of Saturday evening had settled down upon the village, when a lone man with a bundle under his arm appeared and walked straight to the Widow Jones' house without asking for directions. He entered without knocking, and as he placed his bundle on a chair, he said to the astonished woman before him:

"Well, Mary, you see I've got back—is it Caleb?" she gasped, as she peered into his face.

"It's Caleb for sure. I suppose you thought I was killed in that railroad wreck, didn't you?"

"Of course we did! Caleb, this can be you! It must be your ghost!"

"I'm your old Caleb in the flesh, Mary. Have I got back in time to stop your marriage?"

"We were to be married to-morrow."

"Shoo! That's another close shave. I'm awfully sorry about it, but I couldn't get here any sooner. I got a knock on the head in that smash which made me looney, and I went wandering over the country till I was picked up and sent to an insane asylum. It was only the other day that the wheels got out of my head. So Anson was ready to toe the mark again? He's a dear old brick!"

Again Anson Davis came running over to verify or disprove the news. When he saw Caleb Jones in the flesh his feelings were hurt.

"It wouldn't have believed it of you!" he said as he reluctantly shook hands. "Caleb, this is carrying the thing too far. You shouldn't have turned up a second time."

"I do feel kind o' mean about it," admitted the returned.

"I should think you would! When a man's dead and buried and has a tombstone over his grave it's his business to stay dead."

Caleb went into full particulars, and as he could show a head squeezed out of shape and a letter from the superintendent of an insane asylum in corroboration, he was finally forgiven by the aggrieved parties and the wedding garments packed away again.

"I know you feel sort o' edgewise about it," he said to Anson, a few days later, "but I'm hoping that when I do go you'll toe the mark."

"Why, yes; I promised to," was the reply, "and I never break my word. Yes, you can depend on me."

This time it was a year before Caleb had any further adventure, although his heart trouble grew worse, and the doctors told him he was liable to drop dead any day. He went away one day on a seven mile journey to visit a sister, and while crossing a bridge on which a crowd had gathered to watch the flood, the bridge gave way with a crash and 36 people were swallowed up in the rushing waters.

That Caleb was among the swallowed there could be no doubt, as half a dozen people who knew him saw him go down. During the next three weeks most of the bodies were discovered, and his was among the number. The widow identified it by a dozen different marks, and had been very particular about it, because Anson Davis had said:

"Mary, of course I shall marry you when the year is up, and we can't afford to have any more mistakes."

The body was duly buried, the weeds put on for the third time, and the tombstone erected over the grave said that Caleb was not dead, but only gone before.

In that the epitaph was partly right and partly wrong. Had it said that he was not dead, but only gone down the Ohio river it would have hit the nail on the head. For a time Anson Davis kept doubt in his mind, and the widow never looked at Caleb's old boots without wondering if she could possibly have been mistaken in her identification, but as time went on, Caleb's little way of breaking in upon matrimonial programmes was forgotten.

As the year was drawing to a close Anson suggested that a date be named, and Mary named it. It was to be a quiet wedding this time, and it was to be in the evening, and two days before the event was to come off Anson went up to the cemetery and made sure that Caleb was "at home," and likely to remain there.

He reckoned without his host, and only with a tombstone, however. The widow was dressed for the marriage and the minister on his way to the house when Caleb Jones returned for the third time and calmly announced: "Well, Mary, I've got to disappoint you and Anson again, and I say I'm feeling mighty mean about it."

He had gone into the river, sure enough, but a beam had floated him for 20 miles before he was picked up by a steamboat. The steamer was going down the river and in a hurry, and Caleb was finally landed in Cincinnati.

As he had got that far from home, he thought he might as well go further, and he tramped over three or four western states before setting his face homeward.

The three-times widow said he ought to make up his mind to live or die, and quit making her nervous over it, but of course she was glad he had come back. With Anson Davis it was different, however.

"No, Caleb, I cannot take your hand," he said as he drew back. "You are not a man of your word. You are not a man to be depended on. Your dead body has been found three times, and there are three graves in which you are lying and three tombstones telling of your virtues, and yet here you are before us!"

"But don't be mad at me, Anson," pleaded Caleb.

"I'm not mad, but hurt. The injustice of it rankles, Caleb Jones, hear me when I say that I will never, never marry your widow! I'm sorry for her, but I owe a duty to myself, and if you die again she'll have to go it alone for all of me!"

"Shoo!" said Caleb, as his face lengthened and took on a look of sorrow. "I didn't suppose you felt like this about it, Anson, but being you do and being as I can't really blame you, I guess I'll have to stay at home and try and outlive Mary."—Boston Globe.

offer to marry Mary, and I'm glad she accepted you, but my coming home knocks it all out, of course. Don't feel hard towards me, old man."

"I'm disappointed, of course," replied Anson, "but I suppose I've got to put up with it. How's the heart trouble?"

"Awfully bad."

"Well, maybe you won't last long. It was a sort of mean trick, but remember that I stand ready to marry Mary whenever you drop out."

The routine of home life was taken up again by Caleb, and six months passed away. Then he took a journey by railroad, and two trains collided, and he was found among the dead. That is, his satchel was found, and a mangled body was discovered at the same time, and the excited rescuers connected the two together.

The body had been buried before the folks at home heard the news. The wife received the satchel, however, together with a liberal check from the company's adjuster, and she put on mourning again for Caleb.

Anson Davis didn't rush matters. He waited a month before he called to inquire:

"Mary, do you think there can be any doubt that Caleb is in Heaven this time?"

CONCEALING MOVEMENTS.

How an Army Changed its Base Under Cover During the Civil War.

"Some of the boys," said the sergeant, in the Chicago Inter Ocean, "wonder how it is possible for the Ewers in the Orange Free State to conceal their movements from the British. This skillful covering of an army's movements from the enemy seems to be regarded by the rising generation as something new in military warfare, but it isn't. We had several striking examples of this maneuver in our civil war, notably in 1862. After Buell's army had marched from Louisville across Kentucky and Tennessee, had fought in the battle at Shiloh and at Corinth, it drifted eastward in June and July through Mississippi and Alabama toward Chattanooga.

"About the middle of August our division settled down into a camp at McMinnville, as quiet as an ordinary country village. The boys believed that Bragg was between them and Chattanooga, but they were not excited about it. On the evening of the 23d of August orders were issued to strike tents, pack all the baggage in wagons and burn all surplus stores. We moved on the morning of the 24th south 25 miles to Altamont, where we met other divisions and were kept in line of battle for two days. On the 26th we returned to McMinnville and went into our old camp. On the 29th it was reported that McMinnville would be fortified and that our division would remain there permanently. That night we were hurried into line and marched rapidly toward Murfreesboro, and it leaked out that Gen. Bragg had crossed the mountains to our left and had put his whole army in motion toward Nashville or toward Kentucky.

"The enemy's movements had been so completely covered that up to the last minute Gens. Buell and Thomas had been in doubt as to Bragg's objective point. They both believed that they could force a battle at Altamont or McMinnville, but after the troops had been concentrated there Bragg turned toward Kentucky and Buell started northward. So it happened that two great hostile armies moved on almost parallel roads for nearly 300 miles toward the same city, Louisville. The men in the ranks were not informed as to the object of the forced march or as to what was going on about them. They simply knew that the splendid army that had swept southward in triumph across Kentucky and Tennessee to Mississippi in April was now, five months later, hurrying back. They were full of fight, and they wanted to fight, and they came to believe that their general wouldn't let them fight.

"One day about the middle of September our division debouched into a great plain, where the whole army was concentrated. The men had been marching all night, and water had been scarce, and they were tired, hungry, thirsty and irritable. As they came now into the open there was before them a great spring of water bursting from the rock earth like a crystal flood. The tired men gave a cheer, and, breaking ranks, rushed toward the spring. Two or three guards were standing near it, and an officer, wearing a flat military straw hat, was sitting on a horse not six feet away. Heeding neither guard nor officer, the thirsty men ran to and into the fountain. As the foot of one man touched the water and he stooped to fill his canteen, the officer on horseback said, quietly but peremptorily: 'Take your foot out.' The indignant soldier, looking up, said, wrathfully: 'Shut up; no blanked quartermaster's clerk can give orders to me.'

"The officer put spurs to his horse, and in an instant horse and rider rose in the air and came down almost on the stooping soldier and the words were repeated: 'Take your foot out—now.' Looking up, the man saw that the order came from Gen. Buell himself. For hours the general commanding the army of the Ohio sat there on his horse guarding the precious water, saying occasionally: 'Thirty thousand men must drink here to-day, boys, and the spring must not be fouled.' The men accepted this as a sign that a battle was imminent.

"There was artillery firing all the afternoon, but no battle, and again we went hurrying forward. The next day we marched 35 miles and went into camp at midnight, to have half rations up clapboards and flat stones and tried to bake in that way. Our captain, who had been used to roughing it, wrapped a great mass of dough in oak leaves and buried it in the ashes of our rail fire. He produced a large cake, rather dirty, but well baked, and everybody tried the scheme."

AN ASH-BARREL BIBLE.

Striking illustration of the Sad Neglect the Sacred Volume Suffers.

A church in New York city acquired its pulpit Bible in a way that was probably never paralleled. During the absence of the pastor, Rev. John B. Shaw, D. D.—as he relates the circumstances in the Presbyterian Banner—certain repairs and additions to the church edifice had included the gift of a handsome new pulpit. But the new Bible, donated as its companion piece, was found to be too large to fit its lectern, or reading-board. The same objection prevented the use of another one, sent by a different donor.

One day a woman came to the doctor with a neat package, which she proceeded to untie. He was not surprised to see a beautifully bound gilt-edged Bible unfolded in her hands; but his feelings changed when she told him that she had found it in an ash-barrel.

A family, after a short residence in the apartment house where she lived, had moved out that morning, and had left their rubbish with the janitor to be carted away in the city garbage wagon. The costly Bible was among this "rubbish." The family record had been cut out of it, being evidently the only thing about it that its owners valued.

The minister took it to his new pulpit, and it has been there ever since. It fitted the bookboard exactly. He wrote out his thoughts about that ash-barrel Bible, two columns of them; but we cannot repeat them here.

There is a sadly pathetic vision of a sacred wedding gift once prized; of resolutions forgotten; of decaying household piety amid a hurried city life and frequent removals; of a birth and death, and their little record; of the final loss of religious faith and all reverence for its symbols. The family Bible meant only so many pounds of paper and leather—a piece of lumber too heavy to carry away.

There is another form of neglect of the Bible, says the Youth's Companion, that appears less rude and disrespectful to the holy volume. It adores its beautiful covers, but does not open them—a kind of fetish-worship of a book that is never read. Which neglect is the worse?

WRITING ON THE GROUND.

Jesus Said to Have Written Some of the Leading Sins of the Woman's Accusers.

In the Christliche Welt, of Leipzig, No. 35, Prof. Casper Rene Gregory has published a short but very interesting contribution to the disputed section, John 7:35, to 8:11, the object being not a defense of or an attack on this famous pericope, but rather its interpretation on the basis of peculiar readings found by the author in three different manuscripts, one in Athens, another in Mt. Athos, and a third in Dessau, the additional matter adding great dramatic interest and clearness to the words. In the traditional form of the text Christ is described as stooping over and writing on the ground, which action and His deportment results in the accusers of the woman caught in adultery leaving Him and her, apparently in shame. But what it was in Christ's writing that effected this change in the programme of the Pharisees is not indicated. According to the variants found by Gregory, Christ wrote in the sand some leading sins of the woman's accusers, and he interprets this to signify that as soon as these saw that the Lord knew of the great wrongs they had done, but which they had thought were secret, in the consciousness of their guilt they left Him. These additional words certainly make clear what hitherto had been enigmatical in the text. Gregory has evidently a high opinion of this pericope, even if it is not a part or portion of the canonical Gospel. He thinks that possibly it is older than this Gospel itself, and he closes with these words:

"The scene here described evidently made an indelible impression on the souls of those present. In what manner and when and where this section found its way into the Gospel of St. John, we do not know. But who would be willing to miss it?"—N. Y. Outlook.

A Terrible Fire.

Fire broke out in a pile of cotton bales on the North German Lloyd piers at Hoboken Saturday afternoon and more than 100 persons were burned to death, hundreds more were terribly injured, three large ocean steamships were destroyed, and other craft with docks and warehouses also went up in smoke. The money loss is estimated to be not less than ten millions. The steamship Kaiser Wilhelm which was lying at the dock, was towed out into the bay in time to escape from the flames. Nearly all the people burned were employes of the steamship companies and had homes in Germany. Many survivors of the conflagration tell of the inhuman acts of several tugboat captains who refused to rescue perishing people who had no money to give. The government officers will look after these brutes and punish them as they deserve.

The Oregon Struck.

Uncle Sam's famous battleship, the Oregon, which was ordered from the Philippines to the Chinese coast, to aid in protecting American lives and property from the depredations of the Boxers, went aground Friday in a dense fog, striking a rock in the China sea near Chee Foo. She lies easy, and the navy department hopes to float her without further damage. The Oregon holds the world's record for long distance speed, and is the pride of all America.

LATER—The Oregon has been floated and will go to Port Arthur for repairs.

Subsoiling for Root Crops.

Subsoiling for root crops frequently pays largely, for the reason that the ground is put in a shape that permits the roots to develop without resistance in all directions. In addition most of the root crops have tap roots that strike downward for moisture and additional nourishment. Experiments, even in the arid and semi-arid regions, have shown great advantage in subsoiling for such crops. Not only are the root crops benefited, but the potato crop is also benefited. The subsoiling helps through times of drought, and thus prevents a check to the development of half-formed tubers.

"Success" for July is fascinatingly good. It has a score of features worth mentioning, particularly a sketch of Helen Gould by Congressman Landis, a story of Lincoln under fire of the Confederate sharpshooters by Secretary Cox of the National Museum, and a symposium by James B. Dill, Dr. George F. Shrady, and Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, on the question, "Are the three great professions declining?" The secret of the wonderful power of this magazine lies in the fact that it has a mission—a right to live. This mission appears to be to find out the sleeping energies which every human being—even the dullest—possesses, and start them going. It fairly quivers with enthusiasm itself, and believes that enthusiasm is to a man what powder is to a bullet. "Success" wants to be the match that ignites the latent forces. Its field is as broad as the range of human aspirations, and its usefulness in exact proportion to its circulation.

THE VILLAGE NOTES

NEWS PICKED UP BY THE TRIBUNE REPORTERS.

What Has Happened in Genoa During the Past Seven Days—An Interesting Page.

—Miss Owen and Mr. Richards of Cortland were callers in town last Sunday.

—Charles Lane and wife of Summerhill visited his sister, Mrs. W. R. Mosher, on Saturday.

—Mrs. D. E. Norman has placed a new walk in front of her residence, which is a good idea for others to follow.

—The new styles of 1901 calendars have been received at this office and they are beautiful. Call and look them over.

—Miss Cassie Dodd of Syracuse is spending some time with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Dodd, and other relatives.

—The wholesale price of coal has been advanced by 25 cents per ton, but the retail dealers in this section have not yet raised the price.

—Charles Ingraham of Marathon was a guest at Fay Reas' last week. He is foreman in the factory of the Climax road machine and stone crusher.

—Don't fail to read the large announcement of C. R. Egbert, this week. If you visit Auburn any day this month remember the exceptional bargains at Egbert's store.

—Rev. Cordello Herrick, chaplain of Auburn prison, gave a fine address at the Scipio Baptist church on Sunday. His subject was "Duties and Benefits of Membership in the Eastern Star." The meeting was the first annual of the Scipio chapter, and was largely attended. The Genoa quartet sang three appropriate selections, and after the service was pleasantly entertained at lunch by Mr. and Mrs. John Snyder.

—Genoa has reason to be proud of the students who go from here to other places and graduate from institutions of learning. Wherever they go, we hear good reports of their work as scholars. The many friends of Miss Elma Mastin will be glad to know that, on her recent graduation from Cornell University, she received the degree Ph. B., and also special mention in German for proficient work in that subject during the last two years.

—Next Sunday a new time table goes into effect on the Lehigh Valley. The present trains run the same except the north bound local which goes five minutes later. The lake train is added and runs as far as Freeville, passing this station at 6:52 a. m. for Auburn, and at 5:26 p. m. for Freeville. This train runs daily except Sunday. A new Sunday train is also added which leaves this station at and returning passes here at 8 p. m. This train runs from Sayre to North Fair Haven and return.—Locke Times.

—Isaac Hawkins of Ithaca was in town on Tuesday.

—Little Hobart Hagin is recovering from an attack of measles.

—Fred Rundell of Watkins has been visiting friends in town the past week.

—Bert Banker of Genoa is now employed by Erb & Whiting, says the Locke Times.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Potter of Auburn tarried with Genoa friends over the Fourth.

—Mrs. Minnie Eaton is entertaining an attack of measles combined with summer grip.

—E. B. Cobb and G. N. Coon, well known Osborne salesmen, were in town on business Tuesday.

—Amos Haley of Venice Center was renewing acquaintances in this village Wednesday.

—Mrs. W. A. Pugsley has been quite seriously ill the past week. She is improving slowly.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Van Marter returned to Auburn this morning, after a visit with Genoa relatives and friends.

—B. F. Samson of Cortland has been in town on business this week. He advertises a pleasant home for sale or rent.

—Mrs. Alburn Ives had an unfortunate fall Friday last, breaking a rib and causing other bruises. She is recovering.

—Mrs. Jennie Hough and son of Batavia were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sharp, and of other relatives in this vicinity.

—Herbert Greene of Baltimore, Md., has been the guest at Robert Mastin's this week. They have enjoyed several days at the lake.

—On the 8th page will be found an interesting column from B. Rich, the well known Ithaca clothier. If you go to the circus at Ithaca today give Rich's store a call.

—Among the Genoa students who were successful in passing different subjects in the Regents examinations at Union Springs last week, we note Millicent Sellen and Mary E. Sellen.

—Farmers who have some old hay will doubtless get a good price for it. On Wednesday last in the Syracuse market $18 was offered for hay and but thirteen loads were brought in.

—D. W. Smith has purchased a new peanut and popcorn machine which is supplying a long-felt want. The machine works automatically and is operated by gasoline, and enables Mr. Smith to feed a multitude in a short time.

—Among those registered at the DeWitt July 4 were Geo. B. Turner, J. S. Brown, A. J. Parker, Jay P. Nye, Walter E. Woodin, E. S. Mosher, L. Baker and H. Baker, all from Auburn, and good fellows, too.

—The Moravia team is scheduled to play the Watsons of Weedsport, formerly the famous Iliion independent team, at Moravia Saturday, July 7, also Waverly at Moravia the 12th. If the Moravia team wants some extra good practice they should make a date with the Genoa boys right away.

—White & Stewart, the well known produce buyers of Locke, have sold out to L. H. Hewitt, also of Locke, the exchange taking place July 1st. White & Stewart have been dealers there for the last 12 years and have conducted their business in a satisfactory manner.

—Mr. Robert Denton, while working in the cemetery at Little Hollow Monday morning, stumbled and fell backward in such a way as to injure him quite seriously. He was brought to Hotel DeWitt, where his injuries were looked after by Dr. Slocum, and later he was moved to the home of Mrs. Margaret Nichols, where he is being cared for.

—Children's day will be observed at the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, with songs, recitations and exercises by the children. The other services of the day will be held as usual. All are cordially invited to be present. Members of the Sunday school are specially requested to be in their —Independence day was observed according to program in Genoa. The shower in the morning delayed the ball game until after dinner, but did not cool the atmosphere to any extent. The first game was Aurora vs. Genoa, at 1:30, and Genoa won 17 to 8; then came the speaking by Messrs. Turner, Parker, Mosher, Woodin and Brown, who spoke from the band stand to an interested audience. After that was a game of ball between Auburn high school and Genoa, which resulted in favor of Genoa, 18 to 1. The Moravia band was on hand early and made music through the day. There was not, however, a large attendance at the celebration, when compared with other years. The dance at the rink in the evening was largely attended.

Obituary.

George J. Holden passed away at his late residence in Genoa, Tuesday morning, June 26th. He was born in the town of Genoa in 1836, and in early life learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed at intervals; he was also a successful school teacher. He held many important positions of trust in the town, was foreman of the jury in the noted Sheldon trial and was a man of sterling character; surely the community has suffered a distinct loss in his death. Mr. Holden was the last survivor of ten children of Nancy and Thare Holden, and was twice married. His first wife was Sabra Niles, who died April 15th, 1895; his second wife was Delia P. Pierce of Durham, N. Y., to whom he was married April 29th, 1897, and who still survives him. He has been a great sufferer from heart trouble for several years. One year ago last January he suffered an attack of la grippe which seriously aggravated the trouble; the first of last March, he had a slight stroke of paralysis and has been confined to his bed more or less and has been constantly failing since. His faithful wife, relatives and friends deeply mourn his loss. A large number attended the funeral which was held on Thursday at 1 p. m. at the house. Services were held under the auspices of the Sylvan lodge, No. 41, F. & A. M., of Moravia. Rev. Benjamin Franklin was the officiating minister. Interment was made in the Bird cemetery. The Masonic ceremony was very impressive and beautiful.

We are sorry to say that May Riley died very suddenly on June 5, with paralysis of the heart, which causes death in a very short time. She leaves a kind and loving father and mother, sisters and brothers, to mourn her loss. She was a good, humble, obedient, hard-working, industrious girl. She had been complaining for over two years, but seemed to be in better health this spring than usual, except for those bad spells with her heart, sometimes brought on from overdoing. She had been talking of making a visit with friends for a long time and had set the time to go and it seemed as if she must go. It was her wish to make that last visit and she succeeded and we are all in hopes that she enjoyed it as it was her last before God took her. We hope God may forgive those who wronged the girl and her parents. The parents and family are very thankful for the kindness of neighbors and friends, for the large attendance at her funeral and also the flowers that were arranged so neatly on her delicate casket. We hope and pray that God will remember them when sorrow comes. May will be missed among her friends, as she always had a kind, friendly word for every one she knew, but we must remember that God takes us all when he sees fit. A FRIEND.

DIED.

TEMPERANCE ITEMS.

T. D. Pile, the new Lord mayor of Dublin, is well known as a total abstinence advocate.

The Dow tax collection shows that over 300 saloonkeepers in Cincinnati have gone out of business during the past year.

The Woman's Christian Temperance union is fully committed to the project of establishing homes for inebriates in India.

The London Times not long since said: "England, with 500 years of license, is the worst liquor-cursed nation in the world."

A cigarette smoker sends into the air about 4,000,000,000 particles of dust at every pull, according to Dr. Atkins' investigations.

A clergyman was recently hanged in effigy in Boiling Springs, Pa., because of his successful fight against the granting of a liquor license to the village hotel.

During last year the increase in the drink bill for Great Britain and Ireland amounted to no less than £6,169,465, the total being £162,163,474, an expenditure amounting to £3 19s. 11½d. for each man, woman and child of the entire population.

The calling of a grand jury in Hutchinson, Kan., caused a stampede of journalists, gamblers and boot-leggers until the city was as "dry" as the most ardent temperance worker could wish. And now they talk of making the grand jury perpetual.

Less Chance of Recovery.

Prof. G. Sims Woodhead, M. D., professor of pathology, Cambridge university, perhaps the greatest authority on pathology in the world, recently wrote for "Abkari," edited by W. S. Caine, of London, as follows: "For the last year or two I have been keeping note of the various observations that have been made in regard to the use of alcohol in disease, and I am coming to believe more and more firmly that the patient who takes, or has taken, alcohol has a less chance of recovery than the patient who abstains."

A Problem That Puzzles Many.

Which is most profitable, to go into poultry raising for the sale of flesh and eggs to consumers, or to go into the raising of breeders to sell to other people? Well, that depends on a good many things. The man with no capital is not likely to make much trying to raise fancy poultry, unless he is more than ordinarily fortunate in securing customers for his breeding birds and eggs. It takes money to find customers after the eggs and breeding birds are produced. But if a man has the money he can find the customers. The finding of a market for fresh eggs is not difficult, and poultry meat can always be sold at market prices.—Farmers' Review.

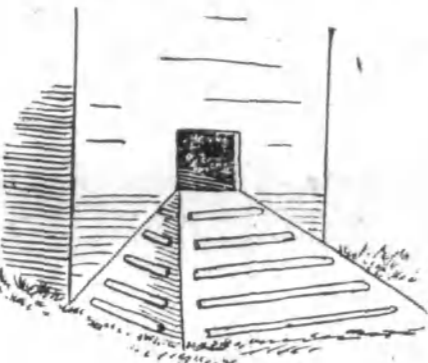

Unshorn ewes must positively be clipped about the udder so that the lambs may get their milk easily. Weak, newly-born lambs should be incubated. Wrap the lamb in a warm blanket and put it in a box or basket kept near a fire.

DEVICE FOR BROODERS.

How to Avoid an Inconvenience Which Has Annoyed Poultry Raisers for a Long Time.

Almost all the brooders, whether factory made or home-made, have a lower story for the lamp and an upper floor in which the chicks are housed, making necessary an inclined board for the chicks to run up on. They are constantly getting under this board, and often become chilled because they do not know enough to "walk the plank" properly. The cut shows how this trouble may be avoided easily. Three slopes are made to the incline, thus affording no chance for missing the way. A chicken is a very stupid thing, and cannot be depended upon to do any thinking for itself. It is this nature of both old and young fowls that makes it so necessary to be constantly watchful in managing poultry. A little lack of care and a dozen chicks, perhaps, have become chilled and lost. The ingenious caretaker by using such devices as that shown in the cut can save himself some work by making it nearly impossible for the chicks to go wrong. There are many such devices for saving labor that can be thought up.—N. Y. Tribune.

FARM TURKEY RAISING.

Giving the Young Birds the Right Kind of Food is the Most Important Matter.

When the turkey hen is in a good sitting mood, give her 17 eggs; at the same time set two chickens on 17 eggs each. When the hatch is off, give all turkeys to the turkey hen.

Feed the young turkeys on curd, often mixing black pepper in it. Feed three times a day all they will eat. Do not give raw corn meal; if fed at all, bake into corn bread. Screenings is a poor food, as it contains many wild seeds, causing diarrhea, killing them in 24 hours. That is the one thing to guard against and the greatest difficulty in raising turkeys. When feeding only curd as the principal food, you overcome that trouble.

I find by keeping the young turkeys in a pen 10x10 feet and 12 inches high for a few days it gives them strength and they can follow the hen. You cannot shut turkeys up in a coop or yard, as they will die if confined. After four or five days old, let them go, see that they come home every night, which they will do if fed morning and evening. For breeding purposes, select hens not less than two years old, toms from two to three, of the Ky Bronze variety.—May C. Suydam, in Farm and Home.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Generally, the quicker a sick hen is killed the better.

Select out the best of the fowls each year for future breeding.

Exercise is better than drugs as a stimulant for egg production.

The hardy, wide rangers, those clean of limb and having small combs, are the kinds of fowls wanted by farmers.

For broilers you should have some breed that matures rapidly, and that will not have to be fed all summer to make them weigh a pound or two.

On the farm, especially, one good breed of poultry, well fed and cared for, is of more value than a dozen varieties neglected.—Garden and Farm.

Sells Fowls in Midsummer.

The cockerels of this season's hatch when sold for market will pay all the expense of their own raising and that of the pullets. The time to sell the cockerels is on the first day that enough of them of marketable size can be gathered together for a shipment. Most farmers put off selling until just before winter. The market is then glutted and prices are at the lowest ebb. The increased size does not make up for the losses which will occur in the interval between midsummer and fall, and the smaller price per pound which will then have to be accepted for them. Taking one year with another, it is a saving of money to sell the surplus young stock in July and August instead of in October.—Farmers' Voice.

Caring for Yarded Fowls.

I lived in town from 1800 to 1807, and 30x66 feet. This was set in plum trees, with an occasional run over the garden and a small grass plat. We had very satisfactory results. We fed whole corn, oats and wheat. They also had milk and scraps from the kitchen. In addition they were allowed to run at will in a small stable yard 30x30 feet. They also had access to the stable and buggy house during the day, but invariably kept on their own ground at night.—J. B. Roberts, in Farmers' Voice.

DIFFERENCE IN BEES.

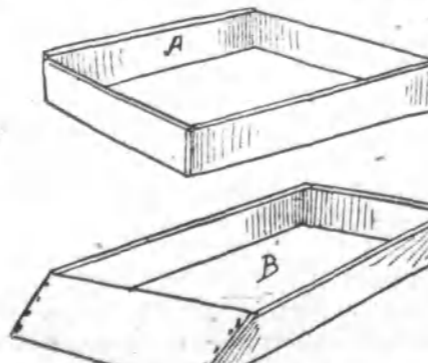

Figures Demonstrate That Some of the Busy Insects Are Not as Busy as Others.

The thought is familiar to farmers that it takes about the same to keep a poor cow as a good one, the chief profit in a herd of milkers sometimes depending largely on a few extra good ones, but the thought may not be so familiar that the same thing obtains with bees. It is none the less true. It sometimes happens in a poor season that one colony stores quite a bit of surplus for its owner, while another colony sitting right beside it not only gives no surplus but does not gather enough for its own support, but has to be fed for winter. It should be remembered that the greater part of what the bees gather from the flowers does not find its way into the surplus boxes, but into the brood chamber to be eaten by the bees themselves. A writer in Gleanings puts the matter in this fashion: The flowers within range of my home yard give on an average yearly, say, 10,000 pounds of honey. Now, if I keep the average run of bees it will take about 100 colonies to gather it, or 100 pounds of honey for each colony. Of this it will take about 70 pounds to keep each colony a year, leaving me only 30 pounds surplus to the colony, or 3,000 pounds from the whole yard. But if I keep stronger and more industrious bees, so that each colony would gather 140 pounds, it would require but 71 colonies to gather the whole 10,000 pounds; and as it would not require any more to keep each colony than it does the poorer stock, I should get 5,000 pounds of surplus instead of 3,000 pounds when I had to keep 100 colonies, to say nothing of the smaller number of colonies to care for, or hives to keep in repair. And what is true of my home yard is true to a greater or less extent of any other yards.

STANDS FOR HIVES.

Upon Their Proper Construction Depends Much of the Success of the Beekeeper.

In making stands for hives, we make them six inches high and the length and width of the hive, using common seven-eighths inch lumber. If the ground in front of the hives is kept free from weeds and tall grass, the style a will do. But if the bees cannot be given very much attention it will be better to make them after style B. The slanting projection will prevent the hive entrance from becoming obstructed, and the loaded bees that miss the alighting board and drop in front of the hives can crawl up to the entrance.—Orange Judd Farmer.

PRESERVING EGGS.

The Water Glass Method, Very Popular in Germany, Has Proved to Be the Best.

Of 20 German methods of preserving eggs the three which proved the most effective are coating the eggs with vaseline, preserving them in lime water, and preserving them in water glass. There is a drawback to the water glass method; the shell easily bursts in boiling water. This, however may be prevented by piercing the shell with a strong needle. This objection having been conceded, the water glass method heads the list, as varnishing the eggs with vaseline takes a great deal of time, and treating them with lime water is apt to give them a disagreeable odor. In most packed eggs the yolk, sooner or later, begins to settle on one side and the egg at once begins to depreciate. This does not happen when water glass is used, and the eggs retain a surprising freshness. In one test it was found that a ten per cent. solution of water glass preserved the eggs so effectually that at the end of three and a half months eggs that were packed on August 1 appeared perfectly fresh. If you use water glass, which costs only a few cents, will make enough to preserve 50 dozen

FARM & GARDEN

A PLOW ATTACHMENT.

It Cost But Little to Make It, and All Who Have Tried It Are More Than Satisfied.

A year ago last spring, while we were plowing a piece of sod for corn, we had difficulty in getting the plow to run right. We were plowing with three horses, and if we set it to take land enough, the jointer would cut too much into the land. We thought some of buying a three-horse clevis like some of our neighbors had, but did not like to pay the price dealers asked for them. So we began to think of some other plan.

Our plow is fitted with a long clevis that fits in notches in a casting on the end of the beam. That is to regulate the depth (Fig. 1). We went to the blacksmith and got him to make Figures 2 and 3. Figure 2 is a piece of 3/4-inch iron rod, perhaps 20 inches long, with a joint about 5 inches from the back end. This short part is flattened and has two 3/8 or 7-16-inch holes in it to bolt to the beam in front of the jointer. The other end has a loop to put the doubletree clevis in. Figure 3 resembles a long U. This is about 9 inches long and made of wagon tire. It has four 3/8-inch holes in it; 3 inches of the open end is brought to an edge to fit the notches in the casting on the plow beam. This is put on over the big clevis on the plow and a bolt is put on each side of it, on the outside of the big clevis. If the bolts do not fit up tight against it, use a rat-tail or three-cornered file and make it fit.

Slip Fig. 2 backwards between the second and third bolts and bolt to the beam. Put your plow clevis in the loop, and you are ready. When you want to change the depth of the plow, the U, being bolted to the big plow clevis, comes out of the notches with it. One of our neighbors saw it a few days after we got it, and, after holding our plow one round, got one made for his plow. Last fall another neighbor put one on his plow. We all like it, and the cost is little. While we do not claim our plows are the best ones made, we do not like to throw them away before they are worn out.—W. E. Cochrell, in Ohio Farmer.

HANDLING CLOVER HAY.

It Is One of the Arts of Farming and One That Is Understood by But Very Few.

The curing of clover hay is one of the arts of farming, and the reason so many farmers depreciate its value is because they have never realized the good results to be obtained from feeding well-cured clover hay. Immediately after clover is mowed down it will begin to wilt and then "dry," as it is termed. The process of curing clover requires more time than some farmers can conveniently give it. If it is mowed down in the morning it will be thoroughly cured so it can be taken in the same day, and if it is cut later in the day it must remain out over night and absorb the dew. This is where the mistake is made. Clover after it is cut should never be allowed to lie spread over the ground in falling dews or rain. I mow clover hay in the morning as soon as the dew is gone and let it cure until toward evening, then rake it up and make it into doodles. In the morning I spread the hay loosely over the ground again, and in an hour it is perfectly cured, then it is hauled into the barn. Clover hay should not be stacked, as it will not keep in wet weather, even dampness will spoil it.—J. C. E. Jacot, in Prairie Farmer.

The Farmers Want Them.

Postal savings banks are what the people are crying for. We believe they can be introduced in the post office as well as was the money order department. The government is the sure one for the people to depend upon for money. We are not afraid of Uncle Sam. Money would always be ready and not be short when asked for. It must come and we must ask our senators and representatives in congress to see that a bill is formulated to this effect. How long shall it be before our nation will be in advance of all other nations on such important acts as these?—W. T. McClure, in Farm and Home.

To Keep Grass Land Fertile.

Grass lands are supposed to recuperate when such lands are grazed or mowed there is a loss of plant food, and the soil will become poorer unless manure or fertilizer is applied. When grass appears to die out it is an indication that the plant food is becoming exhausted. The best plan to pursue is to keep stock off the field and apply fertilizer, following with a heavy application of manure in the fall. If the grass does not show satisfactory effects from such treatment plow the field and plant to corn the following spring.

INTENSIVE FARMING.

When Coupled with Economy It Is Sure to Lead to Happiness and True Prosperity.

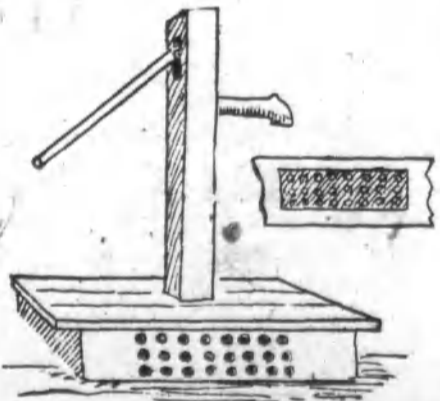

Blest with one of the best countries on the globe, surrounded by peace-loving nations, fitted with dairy schools, agricultural colleges, traveling dairies and farmers' institutes brought to one's very doors, literature cast like leaves of a forest on the best methods of farming, blest with a good soil and pure water, these are blessings not to be thought lightly of. Intensive farming, coupled with true economy, is the greatest need of the farmer of to-day. Too much land as a rule is under cultivation by the individual farmer to give it justice. Fewer acres and more work gives best results, as it takes less help, less machinery, crops can be got in the ground earlier, harvested with less loss, thereby securing best results.

Raise everything needed for the family and stock. Raising a good big garden adds to the health and happiness of the family and length of the purse. Keep as many good cows as the farm will carry, feed principally on corn fodder, keep as many hogs as will use the by-products of dairy and corn, winter hogs on sugar beets. Sell all products of the farm direct to consumer; buy for cash and save discounts; offer nothing for sale but goods of faultless quality and finish, thereby keeping your reputation. Raise a good flock of turkeys, geese, ducks, chickens and if well cared for will show a good profit for time and money invested. Keep all wagons and farm implements painted and under cover. Keep accounts of sales and purchases, never buy things at an auction sale unless needed, and above all leave whisky and tobacco alone. Keep no secrets from your wife in your business relations, as she should be the sharer of all joys and sorrows; often a word of advice from a good wife may help to save the farm. Live at peace with all men.—W. W. Hitchcock, in Farm and Home.

VENTILATE THE WELL.

Unless This Is Done the Water Will Soon Become Stagnant and Injurious to Health.

The illustration shows a plank frame covering the well, with small holes bored on all sides for ventilation. The FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Keep the stock off the meadows. Buy and sell for cash whenever possible.

Many people impoverish themselves buying bargains.

A deficiency of irrigation insures abundant irritation.

It is questionable economy to work the soil when it is wet.

Good roads are a necessity to any enterprising agricultural community.

It is a good plan to go over the fences at once and see that they are in good repair.

Wouldn't a permanent blue-grass pasturage be a good thing on river bottom lands, subject to annual overflow?

Shade trees about the house are desirable, and elm and hard maple are among the best varieties for the purpose.

Recent experiments in sheep feeding at the Montana experiment station go to show that alsike gave better results than either red clover or alfalfa.

One advantage with clover is that it can be grown with a crop of small grain, without special preparation of soil, and at small cost.—Midland Farmer.

ONE-HALF YEAR CLEARANCE SALE

All over the store--six floors, two buildings-- stock has been rounded up for this Semi-Annual Cleaning-Up Sale.

There is Clothing here of such good quality, fine makes, styles and shapes as no other clothing house hereabouts even knows the existence of--they haven't any trade for it. Our Spring business has been enormous. Cornell professors and students, Ithaca's most solid business and professional men were not slow to recognize that the new facilities of this store offered them the GOOD QUALITY of Clothing and Hats they had heretofore often been forced to go to larger cities for, but now lots are broken, and all that is left we can afford to SACRIFICE on--TO TURN IT INTO CASH TO BUY OUR FALL STOCK WITH.

IT MEANS

Suits worth $23 for $13.25; Suits worth $18 for $10; Suits worth $15 for $8;
Suits worth $10 for $6.25; Suits worth $8 for $4.25; Suits worth $6.90 for $3.95,
(and they're all wool, too); Suits worth $5 at $2.90. The same way on Boys' and Children's Suits and Knee Pants. Here are natty Vestee Suits at 50c, $3c and $1, worth double. Boys' Knee Pant Suits to 16 years age at 79c upwards. Boys' All Wool Suits, Coats, Knee Pants and Vests, $2.95 upwards.
Knee Pants, 10c upwards. And then when you come to real necessary clothes we always save you money: Overalls and Overshirts at 19c here are 50c goods--not 15c goods, our "imitators" sell at 19c. Our 69c Cotton Pants are cried out as bargains at $1 elsewhere, while you can buy the best Rubber Collar made, here at 15c, the same or better than what you pay 25c for elsewhere.

OUR HATS AND CAPS, 50c to $1.50, NOW 23c to 79c. We want your business. Come in and see us.

The Sellen House.

The Genoa excise matter, in which Dewitt Rose seeks an order cancelling and revoking the liquor tax certificate of Frank J. Sellen, came up before County Judge Underwood at 2 o'clock this afternoon. W. C. Crombie of Cortland appeared for the petitioner, who was also present, and Hull Greenfield of Meravia was present in the respondent's behalf, explaining that he appeared for the special purpose of objecting on these grounds:
First, to answering at this time before the county judge because the order required him to answer before the Supreme court judge at this time; second, that the statute under which the proceeding is taken is unconstitutional because it contemplates, (a) taking the respondent's property without due process of law; (b) because it deprived him of a trial by a jury and requires him to answer under oath the complaint charging him with a misdemeanor and a felony.

Mr. Crombie thought the objection as to answering before a Supreme court judge was a clerical error in the paper and that the second objection was not well taken.

The court overruled both objections and gave Mr. Greenfield an exception and the latter was allowed to file an unverified answer on the ground that the petition accuses the respondent of the commission of a crime, it being necessary to verify the contention.
The answer denies that any statements made in the application were false and states that the respondent did not fail to file consents.

The court appointed John Van Sickle referee to take testimony in the case.--Auburn Bulletin.

There seems to be considerable sympathy for Mr. Sellen in this matter, and the outcome will be noted with interest.

Doom for Bed Bugs. One application is sufficient, one application kills.
