Cornell Field Days.

Ideal weather, a program packed so full of features that it was like keeping track of a three-ring circus to try to take it all in, and careful planning and adequate provision for handling the crowds made an unqualified success of the first annual farmers' field days at Cornell which were held at the state college of agriculture at Ithaca Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, according to officials of the college who point out that the most optimistic backers of the field days had set the maximum attendance at 5,000. As a matter of fact, there were easily 7,000 present. The automobiles numbered 700 to 800.

Several of the county Farm Bureaus made auto runs to the field days. Schuyler county was out in force. One man who counted the Schuyler cars said there were 150 of them. This vicinity was well represented.

The demonstrations proved the big attraction and of these the tractor demonstration easily stood first in point of interest and popularity. Some dozen different makers of the new iron farm horses had their machines in operation and the visitors watched with keen interest as they were put through their paces. Glista Ernestine, the college's record breaking cow, was also the center of admiring crowds.

Although it was a disappointment that Seth J. Lowell, master of the National Grange, was unable to speak as planned, his place was admirably filled, judging from the comments heard, by S. L. Strivings, president of the State Federation of Farm Bureaus. He told his hearers that the country faces this year the greatest food shortage in our history since it took 600 millions of bushels of wheat to feed the United States alone last year and this year we have only 500 millions of bushels standing or in our granaries.

Other notable addresses were given by Dr. Jacob Gouid Schurman, who has just retired as president of Cornell, and Prof. Samuel P. Orth of the department of political science of the same institution. Dr. Schurman said he rejoiced that in America at last the rights not only of the wage earners, but of the farmers are now being asserted.

The community singing in the stadium and the auto tours about the farms and campus are two other features worthy of special note.

Five Corners.
July 6—The W. C. T. U. of this place will hold a Dues tea at the home of Mrs. Cora Chaffee Wednesday p. m., July 14. Mrs. A. M. At a meeting of the Herkimer Republican county committee at Little Falls, former Senator Theodore D. Robinson of Herkimer announced his candidacy for the state senatorship in the Thirty-fifth district, as the successor of Burt Z. Kasson of Gloversville. Mr. Robinson, who is a nephew of the late Theodore Roosevelt, declined renomination two years ago to enter the service.

The Orleans county farm bureau has sent out over 600 letters to fruit growers in that county warning them to watch their apple orchards closely for the appearance of green aphids or lice. It is feared that if weather conditions continue to favor the development of green aphids much trouble may result. Orleans suffered a severe outbreak of green aphids in 1918. Many growers lost a large part of their crop. The lice are found on the water sprouts and the new terminal growths.

A big fruit crop in Western New York is looked for by the food division of the Wholesale Merchants' and Manufacturers' association. There will be farm labor enough to handle the crop, it is believed, but the association officials fear that some may go to waste because of the sugar shortage. The association urges housewives to look into the cold pack method of canning without sugar. By this method fruit is dipped in boiling water, then in cold and then packed in hot jars in boiling water.

The New York Central railroad has declined to obey an order by the public service commission, Second district, to reduce its rate of fare for way passengers from 3 to 2 cents a mile on and after Sept. 1 next, the commission announced. Counsel for the commission was directed to commence an action in the supreme court "for purpose of having threatened violation of the law after Sept. 1 stopped," said a statement. Counsel obtained from Justice Hinman an order requiring the railroad to answer at a special term in Albany on Saturday, July 10.

SATURDAY HALF HOLIDAY

The majority of the merchants of Ithaca will close their stores on Saturday afternoons during July and August, beginning Saturday, July 10.

This movement is for the purpose of giving the men and women employed in the stores, a half-holiday with pay each week, for outdoor recreation. It is recognized all over the country that workers in stores work much longer hours than most of those employed in factories or in the various trades, and working indoors during the hot months is particularly hard on both men and women workers.

We wish to work no hardships on our patrons, and during the weeks of Saturday afternoon closing, most of the stores will be OPEN FRIDAY EVENING, for the convenience of the public.

We hope that the public will give their full support to this progressive movement, in this Saturday half-holiday closing, to the firms who are endeavoring to look after the best interests of their co-workers, and will try to do their shopping during the first five and one-half days of the week and Friday evening.

The following firms signed the petition to close Saturday afternoons during July and August

SQUARE MEAL IS CLIMAX OF STOWAWAY'S ADVENTURE

Young Porto Rican who comes in quest of golden city by way of freighter's held finds hunger on New York's East Side instead and a final port in a Salvation Army Post.

Deep in the pitch dark hold of the steamer Bazas, bound north from Porto Rico, not long ago a ragged Porto Rican youngster covered for two days, afraid, yet happy.

Emilio Bilbas had dreamed his dream of adventure, and this was the beginning of its realization. He was on his way to the fabled city of New York. Even his fright when he was haled before the captain couldn't dispel the joy of that certainty.

But no golden pavements gleamed for Emilio in the fabled city. Instead, the day after his arrival he wandered hungrily through the East Side. A policeman found him there. He was a policeman who knew what to do, for within the hour Emilio was stripped of his tropical rags, bathed and comfortably clothed and devouring a square meal in a Salvation Army post.

Emilio has a job now. The Salvation Army is helping him become a credit to the community. As the Army helped Emilio it helps hundreds of others week after week. And that it may go on helping it will ask the American people between May 10 and 20 for a $10,000,000 Home Service Fund to maintain for a year all the phases of its work.

CINDERELLA STUFF

By L. M. HARBESON

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The big room looked like a gigantic and animated toy shop. Red, blue and yellow balloons floated aloft in a haze of azure tulle. Huge jack-in-the-boxes and humpy-dumptys stood tauntingly about and a man-sized Noah peeped unexpectedly out from beside squat trees in green boxes. The spring masquerade of the Art academy, this time a toy ball, was in full swing. The animated toys were having the time of their lives—all but one who was on the point of entering. Miss Dearborn—that was the only name her fellow students knew, not caring what the D. which preceded the Dearborn on her drawings stood for—Miss Dearborn pulled one reluctant foot after the other into the gateway.

She was dressed like Cinderella going to the prince's ball. Her dress had been made not by the magic of a fairy godmother, but by her own fingers in the small hours of the night before out of her gold tissue curtains.

Her shyness made her decide instantly to keep on the black mask she was wearing, although she noticed that no one else was wearing one. Live dolls of all sorts and sizes, teddy bears and all the other animals of the nursery danced by her, tooting horns, blowing whistles, cracking whips and making noises with other infernal machines above which the orchestra blared its fox trots and its waltzes.

She was about to slip out through the door before which she still stood when a deep voice at her elbow asked: "Won't you dance this with me?"

Miss Dearborn swung herself into easy step without answering by more being let's give some away. What and she gave to the party lot, she accepted.

She was older than the rest of the students and worked harder, filling an old dream that had been impossible to her. She was used to working shyly in a corner and eating her lunch alone. For a long while, because she had been christened Dora and had been always called Dolly, she had decided to go to the dolls' ball.

Next day she was back in her corner at the academy trying hard with an aching head, to make the inside of a church look like the inside of a church instead of like a toy ball. All around her the others talked of their fun of the night before. There was much speculating on the masked doll who had fled away at twelve—Cinderella stuff, the hilarious youth said. At one o'clock as she was packing up her paints she heard Charlotte shout: "There's Uncle John. We'll make him take us to lunch."

Miss Dearborn blushed and then turned pale, forgetting that Mr. Thurston could not recognize her. She left her corner, hurried by the long way round so that she would not have to cut across the room in the direct line of vision. She was out on the street soon, breathing hard.

Mr. Thurston, however, was aware of the slim figure, gliding along the wall. It reminded him of his masked partner of the night before. When he could interrupt Charlotte he said: "Who sits over in that corner by the discobolus?"

"Oh," said Charlotte uninterestedly. "That's Miss Dearborn. She was here a minute ago. Why? You wouldn't think she was your Cinderella. She's not young or pretty. She's—she's just Miss Dearborn. You'll have to look further, Uncle Jack."

Uncle Jack thought he knew better, but he kept his knowledge to himself. He told Charlotte he would meet her in the lobby, but by the time he reached there no Miss Dearborn was to be seen there or hurrying up the street.

"Better luck next time!" said Uncle Jack to himself.

The next afternoon, Sunday, while Miss Dearborn was working on the sketch of the church she had brought home, the maid in great excitement announced: "A gentleman to see you, miss." It was the first time such a thing had happened.

Miss Dearborn patted her folds here and there and went downstairs, wondering. Fortunately, Uncle Jack had his back to the window, and she was well in the room by the time he turned and saw her. Otherwise she would have fled.

She gasped and then said quietly: "How do you do, Mr. Thurston?"

Uncle Jack took her hand and held it firmly. "You are coming to tea with me," he said, "to do some talking yourself. You can't escape from me so easily as you seem to think. You are to become human from this minute. We'll finish what that boy calls the Cinderella stuff."

BILLIONS INVESTED IN FARMS

Magnitude of Agricultural Industry Must Be Reduced to Figures to Be Appreciated.

"If all the farmers in the United States should decide to go into some other business—branch out, as we say—they could sell their live stock and crops for one year, and with the money they receive buy all the railroads in the United States, together with all the rolling stock and other equipment," declared Secretary of Agriculture Meredith before the United States chamber of commerce at Atlantic City. "If they wished to go out of the farming business entirely, they could sell their farms along with their crops and live stock, and with the money they receive, buy all the railroads, all the manufacturing establishments, all the mines and all the quarries in the United States. In other words, it would be just an 'even trade' between the farm property and all the other productive property in the United States, except the mercantile establishments. They could with their income from live stock and crops for a single year pay practically the entire national debt. The investment in agriculture amounts to about 80 billion dollars, and last year the value of crops and live stock aggregated 25 billion dollars."

Automatic Club Fees.
These wear-your-old-clothes clubs that have become popular in England and that are gaining a foothold in this country have advantages that may make great international orders of them. Membership, instead of calling for an assessment, means only having and wearing an old suit; and old clothes are always more comfortable than new ones. Moreover, rank must necessarily depend on the condition of the clothes, and that as time goes on will become—shall we say ranker?—so that merely maintaining membership will automatically promote the member, without fees, to the higher levels of the order. A parade of those who have attained the thirty-third degree should be worth seeing.—Youth's Companion.

Elastic Size.
"What kind of figure has Blobbs?" "Well, when it comes to measuring him for suits, he is quite tall, but when it comes to paying for them, he is very short."

The Reason.
Naturally, Adam blamed Eve for the killing of Abel.
"There has been trouble in this family," he exclaimed, "ever since you started to raise Cain in it."

Long Felt Want.

Where Did the Colors Go?
John's mother was washing some of his garments. Holding up one of his new wash suits, she exclaimed: "Oh, dear, dear, John, the colors in your pretty new suit ran." John, who was having much trouble in controlling a fiery steed in the form of a broom handle, apparently paid little attention. A little while later, he came to his mother, and said in a much puzzled manner: "Mother, I can't find 'em any place." "Find what, dear?" asked the mother. "Why, the colors," answered John. "You said they ran. Where did they go?"

GARDEN CITIES HELP TRAFFIC

Transference of Part of Population Relieves Congestion on Cars in London.

Dense morning fogs have combined with the now chronic congestion of passenger traffic to make Londoners realize too vividly the inconveniences of an over centralized population, remarks the London Times. London is undoubtedly too large for health, for happiness and for economical living and production; and, although the amenities of life in this and other great cities have in some ways been increased by providing dormitories at a distance from the work room, the problem of daily transit has been proportionately intensified.

Much is to be said for the garden suburb, but even more for the garden city. The two are often confused or falsely identified, but from the point of view of transport the difference between is fundamental. Garden suburbs represent an extension of the daily traffic of a great town to a more distant circumference; garden cities, a permanent transference of a section of the population to a less crowded center.

Every inhabitant of a garden suburb who works in the city contributes twice a day his or her share to the ever increasing problem of traffic congestion. The colonist of a garden city, on the other hand, definitely relieves the overcrowded centers of the duty of transporting him to and from his work and catering for him and his. Dwellers in garden suburbs are excursionists; the garden citizen is an emigrant. It is of the nature of the community to which he belongs that he shall not only sup, sleep, breakfast and occasionally play lawn tennis and grow beans or roses there, but shall work there as well; and for his reward as a pioneer he escapes the strains and stretches of the straphanger.

TOWNS' NEED OF WOODLOT

Would Be Paying Proposition in These Days of Railroad Strikes and Coal Shortages.

Is there a little woodlot in your town? Zurich, Switzerland, has had one working for it for six centuries and it is still paying big dividends. There is a great big lesson in this, the American Forestry association of Washington says, in these days of railroad strikes and coal shortages.

Many travelers are familiar with the "town forests" of Europe. One of the best known of these is the communal forest belonging to the city of Zurich, in Switzerland, which has an area of 2,840 acres, yielding on the average an annual income of nearly $20,000, or about $7.00 per acre; and this is the most remarkable because most of this income is derived from the sale of firewood, which is perhaps, the cheapest product of a forest.

This tract of forest land has been under management since the year 1309, and it has been steadily increasing in value during these six centuries, writes Prof. John Bentley, Jr., of Cornell, in the American Forestry Magazine. In this country the number of towns and cities that are practicing forestry is still small, and their efforts have been confined chiefly to the protection of watersheds from which the city's water supply is drawn.

Billboards Versus Beauty.

Thus it comes about that people who ride out into the country, eager for the rest and refreshment which only the open country can give, find every field and every little hill dotted by V-shaped signs, erected in the most approved fashion, and ornamented with the approved moldings and machine-made cornices, while the beautiful vistas that might otherwise make each turn in the road a new delight are cut short by successive examples of the approved "head-on" "showings." One needs but to test his own sensations on such a motor ride to know how completely the billboard men are stifling his power to enjoy "natural scenic beauty spots." All their scruples have not preserved to him his native rights in the open country.—Christian Science Monitor.

New Commissioner of Agriculture.

Announcement is made by the New York State Council of Farms and Markets of the appointment of George E. Hogue of Arcade, N. Y., a practical farmer and breeder of Holstein-Friesian cattle, as Commissioner of Agriculture, to succeed Charles S. Wilson, who resigned because of ill health and the demands of his large fruit farm in Ontario county. Mr. Hogue's appointment took effect July 1. As Commissioner of Agriculture, he is a member of the New York State Fair Commission, member of the board of trustees of the State College of Agriculture, at Ithaca, and of the Geneva Experiment Station, at Geneva.

Mr. Hogue comes into the position of Commissioner of Agriculture with a farming experience covering a period of many years. He was born on a farm in the town of Lyndon, Cattaraugus county, and started his farm work by doing chores before and after school, and later worked on farms during the summer while teaching school in the winter. The work on his farm of 1500 acres in Wyoming county is now directed by Mr. Hogue's son, but the new Commissioner of Agriculture still exercises some supervision over the project.

Homespun Yarn.

A cotton case or bag used as a slip-over cover will serve as protection to the winter blankets.

Iron baking pans used for muffins or popovers should be warmed before the batter is poured into them.

In these days, patches are no disgrace. Why not look on them as honorable wounds to our clothes—or as service stripes.

Every woman loves garden roses. Some say they can't grow them. Have you the state college bulletin? Send to Ithaca, N. Y., for H 121.

A one-piece enameled iron sink plus a high back and plus running water and a drain will do as much to make the housewife happy as a new silk dress.

Some persons wonder why their umbrella stays always break loose at the tip, or ferrule. It's probably because they stand their umbrellas in a corner to dry, handle end up, and the water runs down and rusts out the joints.

Agriographs.

Frequent, shallow, level cultivation is best for the garden.

For a succession of bloom, keep all the flowers cut so that seed pods will not form.

Don't let rhubarb bloom if you want the plants to keep on producing good stalks.

As a general rule, it is well to prune flowering shrubs right after they have stopped blooming.

Some farmers think they have no need of psychology. Others say there's a heap of psychology in keeping the hired man satisfied and happy.

Stewart--Hart.

On Saturday afternoon, June 26, at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burr Stewart, east of Groton, the marriage of their only son, John Beardsley Stewart to Miss Leona Evelyn Hart of Groton took place.

The house was decorated throughout with roses and peonies. Rev. H. E. Crossley, pastor of the M. E. church, performed the ceremony in the presence of about 25 relatives and friends.

The bride wore her traveling suit of blue tricotine, with hat to match, and carried roses. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham of Cortland, and little Miss Katherine Graham, niece of the groom, was ring bearer.

The bride received many beautiful gifts of silver, cut glass, china and linen. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Parr of Moravia, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Freeman of Cortland.

A wedding dinner was served, after which the young couple left for a trip to Canastota and Oneida. They will reside with the groom's parents.

It costs money to produce wheat. An investigation of 481 farms by the federal department of agriculture showed that on only two farms was it grown at as low a cost as $1 a bushel, while on 20 farms the cost of production was $5 or over. The average cost was $2.15 a bushel.
