Two hundred forty-four persons are being cared for in the Masonic Home at Utica. The number includes 47 orphans.

The annual picnic of the Supervisors of Cayuga county and their families and friends will be held at Cascade Wednesday, June 20th.

Auburn has decided to erect a new iron bridge over the Owasco outlet at Lizette street, and the contract was awarded to the Groton Bridge Co. at $12,900.

The employes of the Standard Oil Co., at this place have received a ten per cent increase in salary, says the Ithaca Journal. How in the world can the company afford it?

Here is another wreck caused by a misplaced switch: A Chicago young man has broken his engagement because he found his affianced's false hair on the parlor table.

Duane Brown of Pharsalia has received a check of $491 from the state as recompense for the 21 head of cattle condemned last year and slaughtered under the tuberculin test.

The sureties of Norris Griffin of Fayetteville have paid $792.91 in settlement of the judgment found against him for violation of the excise law by selling liquors election day.

Prof. Benj. Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, and late of Cornell University, was one of the passengers on one of the Yosemite stage coaches which were held up recently.

Mrs. James Small shot and killed Mrs. Lou Ostrander in Baldwinsville Saturday afternoon as the result of jealousy over the alleged alienation by Mrs. Ostrander of the affections of Mrs. Small's husband.

A refrigerating plant has been put in the milk depot at Homer. The first expense was $2,500. Twenty pounds of ammonia will do the work for a year and any desired degree of cold can be obtained.

Alice J. Murdock, aged 22, has been granted a divorce from David L. Murdock, who is the Auburn correspondent for several daily newspapers. They were married at Fleming five years ago.

Judgment for $235.09 on failure to answer in the case of Smith Collier against Bert Tate, on a promissory note given March 21, 1898, in Moravia and payable in a year, was filed with the county clerk Friday.

H. R. Murray of the Canastota stock farm, sold a 2-year-old Almonarch colt this week to E. R. Ladew of New York, for $2,500. It is doubtless the best price ever paid for a 2-year old in Madison county.

Rev. Francis Tuck has sued the Weedsport Baptist church for $192 claimed to be due, and the church replies with a counter claim of $60. The proceedings were had before Judge Underwood at Auburn this week.

In 1896, President McKinley said: "I hope that the time will not be far distant when every workman in this country can get work, and get it too, at fair and remunerative wages." The time was not far distant, and it is still with us.

A fire is emitting smoke from the old tanbark pile near the old tannery building in the first ward. It is said that the fire began when the tannery burned down in 1896 and has continued to burn ever since, in all kinds of weather.—Ithaca Journal.

County Judge Underwood appointed W. J. Greenfield receiver for Chas. D. Gorman, the latter the defendant in an action brought by Wm. E. Keeler. The receiver gave a bond in the sum of $500 with S. Edwin Day and Wm. E. Keeler as sureties.

Life is full of uncertainties. That John Brown was taken recently to the Orange county poorhouse is an ordinary piece of news. The unusual feature in the case is the fact that John Brown not many years ago was himself superintendent of that poorhouse.

Henry B. Coman of Morrisville has been named as special attorney general by Attorney General Davies to defend any actions which may be brought on account of the enforcement of the franchise tax law and there is plenty of prospect of that kind of business.

The Ways and Means Committee very properly sat down upon Representative Richardson's (Democrat) proposition to admit sugar and molasses free of duty from Cuba and Porto Rico. Its effect would have been to make a present of $14,000,000 to the Sugar Trust.

The Republican national convention is near at hand, and the Democratic less than a month away; and still neither candidate for Vice President has been selected. The startling possibility is suggested that the bosses are going to permit the conventions to fill the second place on the respective tickets.

Russell Sage has lost a block of Union Pacific stock, put up at auction, because he didn't have a certified check to deposit in part payment of his purchase. The troubles of this worthy old gentleman seem to be multiplying as his fortune approaches the $100,000,000 mark.

A queer case of sickness at Penn Yan has attracted a great deal of attention from medical men of that section. Miss Mary Gregory, aged 24, of that place, has lived for over 60 days with an average temperature of 112 degrees, and on one occasion it reached 119 degrees. This is authentic as it has been confirmed by the tests of eight or ten physicians. The previous theory of the blood being changed at 108 degrees is necessarily exploded. The lady is suffering from fever developed from an attack of appendicitis.

There is progress in thievery as well as in other branches of business. Perhaps the most novel scheme to cover up the evidences of robbery that has ever been tried, was put into practice on an Atlantic liner recently. Three expert thieves took passage on the boat, carrying with them an ostrich, which they pretended to be taking to the exposition. Each night they went through some stateroom and robbed the occupant of jewelry which they immediately fed to the bird. The thefts were discovered, but the hiding place of the booty remained a mystery until the ostrich's dead body was found outside the city of Paris, with its insides cut open. FALMAGE ON CREEDS.

Preacher Would Rid Humanity of Ecclesiastical Dogma.

Moves for a Creed for All Denominations Made Out of Scripture Quotations—Things That Hammer Christians.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopfch.]
Washington, April 22.

At a time when the old discussion of creeds is being vigorously and somewhat bitterly revived this discourse of Dr. Falmage has a special interest. The text is John xi, 44: "Loose him and let him go."

My Bible is at the place of this text written all over with lead pencil marks made at Bethany on the ruins of the house of Mary and Martha and Lazarus. We dismounted from our horses on the way up from Jordan to the Dead sea. Bethany was the summer evening retreat of Jesus. After spending the day in the hot city of Jerusalem he would come out there almost every evening to the house of his three friends. I think the occupants of that house were orphans, for the father and mother are not mentioned. But the son and two daughters must have inherited property, for it must have been, judging from what I saw of the foundations and the size of the rooms, an opulent home. Lazarus, the brother, was now at the head of the household, and his sisters depended on him and were proud of him, for he was very popular, and everybody liked him, and these girls were splendid girls—Martha, a first-rate housekeeper, and Mary, a spirituelle, somewhat dreamy, but affectionate and as good a girl as could be found in all Palestine. But one day Lazarus got sick. The sisters were in consternation. Father gone, and mother gone, they felt very nervous lest they lose their brother also. Disease did its quick work. How the girls hung over his pillow! Not much sleep about that house—no sleep at all.

From the characteristics otherwise developed, I judge that Martha prepared the medicines and made tempting dishes of food for the poor appetite of the sufferer, but Mary prayed and sobbed. Worse and worse gets Lazarus until the doctor announces that he can do no more. The shriek that went up from that household when the last breath had been drawn and the two sisters were being led by sympathizers into the adjoining room all those of us can imagine who have had our own hearts broken. But why was not Jesus there as He had so often been? Far away in the country districts, preaching, healing other sick, how unfortunate that this omnipotent Doctor had not been at that domestic crisis in Bethany. When at last Jesus arrived in Bethany, Lazarus had been buried four days and dissolution had taken place. In that climate the breathless body disintegrates more rapidly than in ours. If, immediately after decease, the body had been awakened into life, unbelievers might have said he was only in a comatose state or in a sort of trance and by some vigorous manipulation or powerful stimulant vitality had been renewed. No! Four days dead.

At the door of the sepulcher is a crowd of people, but the three most memorable are Jesus, who was the family friend, and the two bereft sisters. We went into the traditional tomb one December day, and it is deep down and dark, and with torches we explored it. We found it all quiet that afternoon of our visit, but the day spoken of in the Bible there was present an excited multitude. I wonder what Jesus will do? He orders the door of the grave removed, and then he begins to descend the steps, Mary and Martha close after him, and the crowd after them. Deeper down into the shadows and deeper! The hot tears of Jesus roll over his cheeks and plash upon the back of His hands. Were ever so many sorrows compressed into so small a space as in that group pressing on down after Christ, all the time bemoaning that He had not come before?

Now all the whispering and all the crying and all the sounds of shuffling feet are stopped. It is the silence of expectancy. Death had conquered, but now the vanquisher of death confronted the scene. Amid the awful hush of the tomb, the familiar name which Christ had often had upon His lips in the hospitalities of the village home came back to His tongue, and with pathos and an almightiness of which the resurrection of the last day shall only be an echo, He cries: "Lazarus, come forth!" The eyes of the slumberer open, and he rises and comes to the foot of the steps and with great difficulty begins to ascend, for the cement of the tomb are yet on him, and his feet are fast and his hands are fast and the impediments to all his movements are so great that Jesus commands: "Take off these cement! Remove these hindrances! Unfasten these grave-clothes! Loose him, and let him go!"

Oh, I am so glad that after the Lord raised Lazarus He went on and commanded the loosening of the cords ments that bound his hands so that he could stretch out his arms in salutation and the tearing off of the bandage from around his jaws so that he could speak. What would resurrected life have been to Lazarus if he had not been freed from all those cripplements of his body? I am glad that Christ commanded his complete emancipation, saying: "Loose him, and let him go."

The unfortunate thing now is that so many Christians are only half-liberated. They have been raised from the death and burial of sin into spiritual life, but they yet have the grave-clothes on them. They are, like Lazarus, hobbling up the stairs of the tomb bound hand and foot, and the object of this sermon is to help free their body and free their souls, and I shall try to obey the Master's command that comes to me and comes to every minister of religion: "Loose him, and let him go!"

Many are bound hand and foot by religious creeds. Let no man misinterpret me as antagonizing creeds. I have eight or ten of them—a creed about religion, a creed about art, a creed about social life, a creed about government, and so on. A creed is something that a man believes whether it be written or unwritten. The Presbyterian church is now agitated about its creed. Some good men in it are for keeping it because it was framed from the belief of John Calvin. Other good men in it want revision. I am with neither party. Instead of revision I want substitution. I was sorry to have the question disturbed at all. The creed did not hinder us from offering the parable and the comfort of the Gospel to all men, and the Westminster Confession has not interfered with me one minute. But now that the electric lights have been turned on the imperfections of that creed—and everything that man fashions is imperfect—let us put the old creed respectfully aside and get a brand new one.

What a time we have had with the dogmatics, the apologetics and the hermeneutics. The defect in some of the creeds is that they try to tell us all about the decrees of God. Now the only human being that was ever competent to handle that subject was Paul, and he would not have been competent had he not been inspired. I believe in the sovereignty of God and I believe in man's free agency, but no one can harmonize the two. It is not necessary that we harmonize them. Every sermon that I have ever heard that attempted such harmonization was to me as clear as a London fog, as clear as mud. My brother of the nineteenth century, my brother of the sixteenth century, give us Paul's statement and leave out your own. Better one chapter of Paul on that subject than all of Calvin's institutes, able and honest and mighty as they are. Do not try to measure either the throne of God or the thunderbolts of God with your little steel pen. What do you know about the decrees? You cannot pry open the door of God's eternal counsels. You cannot explain the mysteries of God's government now; much less the mysteries of His government five hundred quintillion years ago.

I move for a creed for all our denominations made out of Scripture quotations pure and simple. That would take the earth for God. That would be impregnable against infidelity and Apollyonic assault. That would be beyond human criticism. The denomination whatever its name be, that can rise up to that will be the church of the millennium, will swallow up all other denominations and be the one that will be the bride when the Bridegroom cometh. Let us make it simpler and plainer for people to get into the Kingdom of God. Do not hinder people by the idea that they may not have been elected. Do not tag on to the one essential of faith in Christ any of the innumerable nonessentials. A man who heartily accepts Christ is a Christian, and the man who does not accept Him is not a Christian, and that is all there is of it. He need not believe in election or reprobation. He need not believe in the eternal generation of the Son. He need not believe in everlasting punishment. He need not believe in infant baptism. He need not believe in plenary inspiration. Faith in Christ is the criterion, is the test, is the pivot, is the indispensable.

But there are those who would add unto the tests rather than subtract from them. There are thousands who would not accept persons into church membership if they drink wine or if they smoke cigars or if they attend the theater or if they play cards or if they drive a fast horse. But do not substitute tests which the Bible does not establish. There is one passage of Scripture wide enough to let all in who ought to enter and to keep out all who ought to be kept out: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Get a man's heart right, and his life will be right. But now that the old creeds have been put under public scrutiny, something radical must be done. Some would split them, some would carve them, some would elongate them, some would abbreviate them. At the present moment and in the present shape they are a hindrance. Lazarus is alive, but hampered with the old grave-clothes. If you want one glorious out the experiments of old ecclesiastical vocabulary. Loose her, and let her go! Again, there are Christians who are under sepulchral shadows and fears and hobbled by doubts and fears and sins long ago repented of. What they need is to understand the liberty of the sons of God. They spend more time under the shadow of Sinai than at the base of Calvary. They have been singing the only poor hymn that Newton ever wrote:

'Tis a point I long to know;
Oft it causes anxious thought;
Do I love the Lord or no?
Am I His or am I not?

Long to know, do you? Why do you not find out? Go to work for God, and you will very soon find out. The man who is all the time feeling his pulse and looking at his tongue to see whether it is coated is morbid and cannot be physically well. The doctor will say: "Go out into the fresh air and into active life and stop thinking of yourself, and you will get well and strong." So there are people who are watching their spiritual symptoms, and they call it self-examination, and they get weaker and sicker in their faith all the time. Go out and do something nobly Christian. Take holy exercise and then examine yourself, and instead of Newton's saturnine and bilious hymn that I first quoted you will sing Newton's other hymn:

Amazing grace, how sweet the sound
That saved a wretch like me;
I once was lost, but now am found;
Was blind, but now I see.

What many of you Christians most need is to get your grave-clothes off. I rejoice that you have been brought from the death of sin to the life of [Continued on page 6]

 life as for vinegar to resemble honey to the taste. A thief can't enjoy religion any more than an honest man can enjoy burglary.

In the long run a man will live as he thinks. Give me the thoughts which you cherish most kindly, and it is like giving me the minor and major premises of a proposition—the conclusion is logically inevitable. Those thoughts are as certain to make or unmake you before your sun goes down as an effect is certain to follow a cause.

Give me the power to sow what thoughts I please in your mind, and you put into my hands your destiny
 here and hereafter. Examine yourself critically and you will discover that your moral attitude exactly accords with the kind of thoughts you entertain. This is an appalling fact of psychological science, and the action of the law is as inexorable as the law of gravitation. No man can think high and live low, or think low and live high.

A strong emotion—sudden fear, for example—will send the blood through the body like the water in a millrace.
 It controls the body as perfectly as a giant handles a child. Even the physical features take on a new expression, and the fact of inward terror is made visible in the face. The body is a mere puppet which the inner man governs at will, and it is more obedient than a slave.

If a man cherishes the vice of avarice, or dissipation, or unhealthy stimulus, or selfishness, to such extent that the habit becomes chronic, a chemical change takes place in his molecules,
 and the expression of his countenance advertises what is going on within. In the galleries of Florence are two busts
 of Nero. The first is of a sweet child, and the face is beautiful. It bears the stamp of innocence. It is a pleasure to look at it. The second is that of a youth who has abandoned himself to his passions, and the lines which indicate it are as plain to the observer as the furrows in a plowed field. The face is repulsive, and you turn from it with something like disgust.

You can be happy and useful under any circumstances if you fill them with Heavenly purposes. Greed, and envy, and selfishness are the bane of our human life. We long for what we have not, and are thus unfitted to do the best with what we have. We live in a dream of what we hope to acquire, and are always restless, uncomfortable and discontented. If we could persuade ourselves that we can be happy with what surrounds us, that our mission is to get as much out of life as is possible, instead of worrying because others have more than we, and so finding fault with Providence and our ill luck and reaping the misery which such thoughts always bring, we should change the color of our environment and the quality of our character. You may be pretty sure that if you cannot be happy where you are you cannot be happy anywhere. Neither wealth nor fame can give you what you want,
 for you must find it in your soul or not find it at all.

This is Christianity rightly understood—to do all you can in whatever position you occupy and to make your little life great with great thoughts.
 God is the guest of poverty as well as wealth, and poverty with God is better than wealth without Him. The spirit of Christ is the spirit of love and contentment, and though you have hardships and bereavements they melt away in the presence of the Divine Lord. You bear them with patience, and patience is another word for strength. Perfect peace will come at last to him who endures, and peace unlocks the doors of Heaven.—George H.
 Hepworth, in N. Y. Herald.

SEED THOUGHTS.

Sin has no depth to which there is not a depth of mercy in God to correspond.—Gordqn Hall.

If the life of Christ be not your pattern the death of Christ will never be your pardon.—William Seeker.

Religion does not consist in getting up an amount of steam and then subsiding. It means endurance.—Rev. P.
 C. Yorke.

The surrender of self-assertiveness
 leads to an experience more manifestly divine than any we have known before.
 —Rev. Dr. Raymond.

In living together, our main duty is to compromise, not principles, but those things, especially our own, which yet cannot be indulged in without injustice or injury to others.—J. F. W.
 Ware.

It seems as if heroes had done almost

not much more can come till common men awake and take their common tasks. I believe the common man's task is the hardest.—Phillips Brooks.

Faith Forms Character.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." What we believe determines what we think and do in the actual life. It fixes the principles and furnishes the motives of life. It is thus within our power, in large measure, to determine our character, our working force and influence in the world.—United Presbyterian.

THE NEED OF HUMANITY.

World Wants Help from the Awful
 Fact and Terrible Consequences of Sin.

It is impossible to shut the eyes to the fact of human sin. Mankind continues to do wrong and everybody knows it. The most buoyant optimist cannot be blind to the fact that sin in a hundred forms surrounds him everywhere and the whole time. Although it undoubtedly is true, as we rejoice to believe, that the world is growing steadily better, human sin is as universal and often as conspicuous and as deadly as it ever was. It works its results of ruin as surely as ever. Human happiness is blasted as the outcome of it. Characters are shattered, and lives are debased.

The great cry of this age, as truly as of any other, even among those who are hostile to the Gospel, is the cry for help from the awful fact and the terrible consequences of sin. The world needs a Redeemer just as truly as it ever did. It needs the same sort of a Redeemer whom it always has needed. It needs precisely the kind of redemption which the Gospel offers it through Christ. It never has outgrown, and never can outgrow, until changes shall have taken place which at present are only foreshadowed, the need of a Redeemer.

The more personal we make our study of the subject, the more certain we are to be convinced of this need. It is not merely the degraded victim of vice, but the Christian of the purest and loftiest spiritual attainments, who says of himself in all sincerity: "I am a grievous sinner, and must be redeemed by an all-powerful Saviour."
 This consciousness of guilt is as inherent as any other factor of human nature. Christ and His redemptive work never will become out of date. He who thinks that he can dispense with a Saviour and can rest safely upon whatever virtues he possesses is blind to his own spiritual condition and ignorant of the relation between himself and his God. Happy is he who out of the consciousness of his guilt and need has reached forth and grasped the saving hand extended to him.—Boston Congregationalist.

The Cure of Loneliness.

Selfishness is one great cause of loneliness. If a man builds walls around himself, so that he may keep all that he has to himself, he soon finds that he has built walls around himself to shut out all that might come in to him from others. So the cure of loneliness may be the overcoming of selfishness. The medicines for this disease of loneliness are potions of generosity, of thoughtfulness for others, of self-sacrifice, taken in large doses. Even when the loneliness comes from the bitterness of loss and sorrow, forgetting self, going out of self and doing for others is the only cure that God has given on earth for its healing. For this reason we find Jesus speaking of the life given even unto death for others as a cure for loneliness. He said: "Except a grain of corn die it abideth alone."
 And He was speaking, not of wheat, but of life. Are we ever taken with times of feeling lonely? Then let us go and do something for somebody. That is the cure.—S. S. Times.

A Cazenovia wool buyer makes the statement that there is at least double the amount of wool in Madison county this year than there was four years ago. And it is bringing a much better price, too. One of the reasons for this state of affairs is the fact that there were 284,000,000 pounds less wool imported this year than four years ago.

While crossing a bridge with a traction engine and hay press, Dan Mitchell and Chas. Thompson had a very narrow escape from death. As the front wheels rolled off the bridge, one end of it went down, and only skillful management of the engine saved the lives of the men. Those drawing heavy loads, look out for the bridges.

The Noble Game.

The balmy breath of spring is come
And all the World is fair;
The robin twitters in the trees
And mud is Everywhere.
The skates are hung upon
The wall, the oyster
Takes a snooze,
And everywhere we smell
The mint
And eke the cooling booze.
The bowling fad has died away,
The games of whist
Are o'er;
The cough-drop signs are showing
Round and leke
"Please shut the door!"
The new spring suit, the fancy boot,
We see upon
The street,
And many a shirt is on
Th' alert
To pipe spring's chanson
Sweet!
Now from the dark unfathomed
Caves, the man comes
With the bat,
The wire-made mask, the bulging
Glove, with spikes and Peaky hat.
The small boy howls his Lungs in twain,
The fans join in the call;
All o'er U. S.'s free confines
We hear the yell—
"Play Ball!"

The scientific culture of grass is a matter which has not received the attention it deserves

from western farmers. The Kansas Board of agriculture is endeavoring to interest the farmers in this matter, and its latest report contains the result of extensive investigations into forage and feeders. Kansas is grass' empire," says the secretary of the board, and it was John J. Ingalls who delivered the most eloquent peroration ever made concerning grass, in which he said: "Forgets decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal," and again, "It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance or splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth and air, and yet should its harvest fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world." The most popular grass is alfalfa, which was carried from Chili to California about 1853, and has since spread eastward beyond the Mississippi. This, says the Chicago Tribune, is still the main reliance of the trans-Missouri farmer. Its introduction shows what can be done. The loon that it has been to the farmers of that section is scarcely estimable. But the timothy, clover, bluegrass and other grasses have not been so carefully nurtured as they might be. The report of the Kansas board shows that it pays to use some care in the cultivation of these grasses and that the attention results in a finer crop that makes the efforts well worth while. The suggestion is made that much ground that is now left uncared for, the hay being cut with no attention to the sowing or preparing of the soil, might be made to yield a more abundant harvest. The increasing price of hay should commend this advice to farmers, for, in spite of an annual crop of nearly 70,000,000 tons, there is no danger of overproduction.

Hetty Arms is dead, says a Hartford (Conn.) special to the Chicago Tribune, and so passes away the sole link that existed between the writer of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Harriet Beecher Stowe, and the south. Mrs. Henrietta McKay Arms was southern to the core, but she nursed Mrs. Stowe to her dying day. She was her friend and companion for years. Mrs. Arms was a Virginian. Her father was Taverner McKay, and a hotter southerner never drew breath. Her husband was equally anxious for war. Mrs. Arms' husband died soon after the war closed, and in the end she lost all her property. She drifted to Hartford and took up nursing. Fate led her to Mrs. Stowe's employ, and this hater of all things northern became the friend and nurse of the writer of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

An automobile race on Long Island has resulted in a record, for 50 miles, of a trifle more than two hours. That is not up to the work of the fastest bicycle riders, but it utterly distances anything possible with horse vehicles. In view of the fact that the race was run in April, on American roads, the time shows in a striking way what may be expected of automobiles as means of rapid and easy travel on ordinary country highways. They are gaining popularity and prominence steadily, and their future is not doubtful.

Florida agriculturists are devoting much attention to the cultivation of espinosa, otherwise known as the Florida coffee weed, owing to its seed, which resembles the coffee bean. Its principal value seems to be that of an adulterant. The plant is native in Mexico, and heretofore no attempts have been made to raise it in this country. Satisfactory results have, therefore, obtained in Florida, and a rapid growth of the industry in that state is predicted.

In Newton, Mass., the other day, says a local exchange, a man's five-dollar bill was blown out of his hand, and he could find it nowhere. A friend out a piece of paper just the size of the bill and liberated it at the same place where the man had lost his money. The paper blew down the street and around into an alley, and there the man found the five-dollar bill.

A Massachusetts correspondent of the Albany Country Gentleman, who wants all dogs, if not killed, restrained from running at large, says the flock of sheep on many a farm is to the farmer "just the difference between enough and not being able to live."

When the writer of a letter offering the mayor of Boston $1,000 for a good position appeared at the mayor's office the other day he was found to be an honest-looking old man, who said he thought all officials got their jobs that way.

The Englishman possesses on an average $1,480, the Dutchman $720, the trian and Italian $500, the Russian $300, the Frenchman possesses $1,300. The American? Well, he possesses all he can get.

An American woman has started a natural feet society in China, and it is said to be making progress. How would a natural hair society do over here?

Five women sitting together in a Philadelphia street car the other day carried finger purses, the initials on which spelled the word E-M-P-T-Y.

INEBRIETY IN THE NAVY.

Careful Inquiry Into the Causes of Disasters at Sea Show That Alcohol is in Part Responsible.

Some recent inquiries made at the navy department regarding the losses of government ships have brought out the strong probability that many of these cases were due to the failures of officers who were spirit drinkers. It has been known semi-officially that at least the disasters occurring to two government ships were intimately associated with and followed from the drink excess of the officers. In one instance where a subordinate officer was in active command, and at the time using large quantities of spirits, the ship was wrecked. The inquiry did not disclose this fact, because of the responsibility of the superior officer. A number of instances have occurred of the wrecking of warships belonging to other countries, whose officers were intoxicated at the time of the disaster. Officially grave errors of judgment and blundering stupid conduct appeared entirely unusual for officers of experience. Probably one of the most prominent disasters was the capsizing of the English battleship The Royal George, many years ago. The officers had been intoxicated the night before, and were still drinking.

The extraordinary behavior of an English admiral who went down with his ship from a stupid blunder was explained by his alcoholic excesses the night before. In many of these cases official inquiry covers up the real facts to save the reputation of the officers and the management of the navy. Several great liners have gone down in mid-ocean whose captains were known to be alcoholic drinkers. At least three ships have disappeared manned by the same class of men. One of these recent ships loaded with passengers, which disappeared in mid-ocean, was officered by moderate drinking men. The merchant marine has for many years suffered so much from this possible cause that the underwriters are becoming more strict in refusing insurance to any ships which are not officered by total abstainers. Two of the great Atlantic lines have strict orders that no officer shall use spirits on duty, under pain of dismissal. One of the leading underwriters in New York asserts as his opinion that fully half of the ships wrecked are due to the alcoholism of the officers. The fact is becoming recognized that both the moderate or occasional drinker is unfitted for accurate work.—Journal of Inebriety.

—J. E. Fell of Venice Center was a business caller in town Saturday.

—Mrs. Alta Bush and children visited friends in Cortland county over Sunday.

—Charles Gorman of Locke and Mr. Reed of Moravia were in town Tuesday on business.

—R. W. Hurlbut is excavating in the rear of his large barn for the foundation of a silo.

—Numerous villagers are buying the winter's supply of coal now while the price is $4 per ton.

—Mr. and Mrs. John G. Law of Moravia were visiting relatives here a day or two last week.

—Barker, Griswold & Co., Auburn, are selling royal blue serge suits, as you may see by their ad.

—J. P. Nye of Auburn, well known as a politician, was in town on business a few days last week.

—A fine job of grading has been done around the new Avery residence on east hill. It bids fair to be a very pleasant place to reside.

—The Moravia Register has added a column to each page, which gives more space for news as well as ads. We are glad to see that Editor Beach has nearly recovered from his tedious illness.

—Ex-supervisor McMillan of Summerhill has gone to Scotland to visit his parents, who reside at Dinduff, Leawolt, Wigdenshire. His numerous friends will wish him a pleasant journey.

—It ought not to be necessary to remind pathmasters of the law which requires them to remove all the loose stones from the highways once every month during the summer, but some pathmasters are so forgetful.

—The superintendent of public instruction says that when poor children are not properly clothed for attending school the poormaster, upon application must provide clothing for them. Also that the law compelling children to attend school must be enforced in every case.

—The forest worms are appearing on all sides in unheard of numbers, and there are reports from all over the country of the awful havoc made by these pests. The prospects now are that unless some efficient remedy is found to destroy these worms, our beautiful forests are doomed to speedy —Art Loomis had business at Moravia on Monday.

—H. M. Head, the stage engineer, went to Auburn on business Thursday.

—A. A. Miller has been home from his work on the road a few days this week.

—Avis Merritt went to Auburn on business Monday. He has had much work in the shop this season.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carson returned Friday from a several days' visit at Ithaca. He left one of his speedy young horses there for a little training.

—The great ball game advertised for Monday at Moravia didn't materialize; the colored champions failed to appear, and a large crowd was disappointed.

—S. Wright is off duty for a few days, having been kicked by a horse early Monday morning. One knee was badly strained. Peter Mahaney is doing the work in the shop.

—There was a large attendance at the Sunday school convention at Five Corners, Tuesday. Both sessions were very interesting, and the excellent program was carried out successfully.

—P. McElroy of the Moravia team was in town Tuesday looking over the base ball situation. It is possible that he will join the local team for the season. "Mack" has lately been farming it at A. J. Hurlbut's, which accounts for his hearty, well-fed appearance.

—Charles Wilcox was severely injured Wednesday. He was riding a horse and leading another, which was tied to the saddle. The led horse ran away and twisted the rope about Mr. Wilcox in such a way that he was bound to the saddle and badly hurt internally.

—Spare the birds! It has been shown that one pair of robins will bring to their young in one season more than 3,000 worms of all kinds. The robin alone saves to gardeners and fruit growers more than enough to compensate them for injury done by all other birds together.

—The following were among the Genoa students who partook of the Regents examinations at Moravia this week: Leon Davis, Pearl Norman, Georgia Lester, Edith Hunter, Mayme Dean, Sadie Storm, George Storm, Jennie Banker, Florence Loomis and Millicent Sellen.

—A novel entertainment is going on at the Baptist church at Venice this afternoon and evening. At two o'clock a curiosity shop will be opened, at 5 to 7 o'clock a notable meal will be served, and then an old time concert will be given. A good program has been prepared and all who attend are assured a pleasant time.

—Sign posts giving the various distances are being erected at the crossings of the principle roads throughout the town. They will be hailed with delight by many an anxious traveler. The signs are made by the county "jail birds" and are set up by the highway commissioner. Towns throughout the county may be supplied.

—We are requested to say that services are being held as usual at the Presbyterian church. On account of the illness of the pastor, the pulpit is being supplied from Auburn. Rev. Mr. Hopkins preached two very fine sermons last Sunday. The members of the congregation and the Sunday school are urged to attend all the services the same as usual. Children's day, which was necessarily postponed

—Ad Moe and family have moved from Ludlowville into part of Mark Bower's house.

—John Q. Hollister of Coxsackie, who is visiting his former home for a few days, was in this village Monday. He is deeply interested in the outcome of the present railroad project.

Dr. Dommett, dentist, will be in Genoa on Monday, June 18th.

Arthur M. Seekell, insurance agent, of Union Springs will be in Genoa Monday, June 18th.

—To all appearances Genoa will have a good ball team this season. Though a little tardy in organizing, the projectors are taking hold of the business in a way that means success. The grounds have been rented and the diamond is now being put in shape. Wilson Hosmer has arrived, and one or two other outside men are expected. Several challenges have already been received from neighboring teams.

—A naturalist who has been studying the subject advises the public to do everything possible this summer to see that the birds are not molested. Several new varieties are here feeding on the forest worms. Among the birds most industrious in the work are the purple finch, orchard oriole and song sparrow. All these birds will eat the worms while they are small, but a bird on a woman's hat doesn't eat anything.

—Under the date of May 5th, Corporal Denny writes from Tarlac, a town probably 80 miles north of Manila and ten miles east of the Dagupan & Manila railroad. He has been confined to the hospital several weeks with fever, with temperature as high as 105 for three days, and now is improving. His company has been at the front ever since they landed at Manila, and he is mighty tired of it, and expresses a strong desire to get back to the states and civilization. He also sent a Manila paper, enclosing two cartridges dropped by the running rebels.

John Emory, who with Floyd Wager was indicted for burglary, third degree, and larceny, for entering a Genoa farmer's sheep shed early last March and stealing a ewe, which the two men were afterward found eating at the Bushnell shack in Genoa village, elected to withdraw his plea of not guilty, providing the court would accept a plea of guilty to petit larceny only. This was satisfactory and, after the usual formalities, Emory was sentenced to the Monroe county penitentiary for a term of the Gospel, but you need to get your hand loose, and your feet loose, and your tongue loose, and your soul loose. There is no sin that the Bible so arraigns and punctures and flagellates as the sin of unbelief, and that is what is the matter with you. "Oh," you say, "if you knew what I once was and how many times I have grievously strayed you would understand why I do not come out brighter!" Then I think you would call yourself the chief of sinners. I am glad you hit upon that term, for I have a promise that fits into your case as the cogs of one wheel or as the key fits into the labyrinths of a lock.

A man who was once called Saul, but afterward Paul, declared: "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." Mark that—"of whom I am chief." "Put down your overcoats and hats, and I will take care of them while you kill Stephen." So Saul said to the stoners of the first martyr. "I do not care to exert myself much, but I will guard your surplus apparel while you do the murder." The New Testament account says: "The witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." No wonder he said: "Sinners, of whom I am the chief."

Christ is used to climbing. He climbed to the top of the temple. He climbed to the top of Mount Olivet. He climbed to the top of the cliffs about Nazareth. He climbed to the top of Golgotha. And to the top of the hills and the mountains of your transgression He is ready to climb with pardon for every one of you. The groan of Calvary is mightier than the thunder of Sinai. Full receipt is offered for all your indebtedness. If one throws a stone at midnight into a bush where the hedge bird roosts, it immediately begins to sing, and into the midnight hedges of your despondency these words I hurl, hoping to awaken you to anthem. Drop the tunes in the minor key and take the major. Do you think it pleases the Lord for you to be carrying around with you the debris and carcasses of old transgressions? You make me think of some ship that has had a tempestuous time at sea and now that it proposes another voyage keeps on its davits the damaged lifeboats and the splinters of a shattered mast and the broken glass of a smashed skylight. My advice is: Clear the decks, overboard with all the damaged rigging, brighten up the salted smokestacks, open a new log-book, haul in the planks, lay out a new course and set sail for Heaven. You have had the spiritual dumps long enough. You will please the Lord more by being happy than by being miserable.

Heaven is 95 per cent. better than this world, a thousand per cent. better, a million per cent. better. Take the gladdest, brightest, most jubilant days you ever had on earth and compress them all into one hour, and that hour would be a requiem, a fast day, a gloom, a horror, as compared with the poorest hour they have had in Heaven since its first tower was built or its first gate swung or its first song caroled. "Oh," you say, "that may be true, but I am so afraid of crossing over from this world to the next, and I fear the snapping of the cord between soul and body." Well, all the surgeons and physicians and scientists declare that there is no pang at the parting of the body and soul, and all the restlessness at the closing hour of life is involuntary, and no distress at all. And I agree with the doctors, for what they say is confirmed by the fact that persons who were drowned or were submerged until all consciousness departed and were afterward resuscitated declare that the sensation of passing into unconsciousness was pleasurable rather than distressful. The cage of the body has a door on easy hinges, and when that door of the physical cage opens the soul simply puts out its wings and soars.

"But," you say, "I fear to go because the future is so full of mystery." Well, I will tell you how to treat the mysteries. The mysteries have ceased bothering me, for I do as the judges of your courts often do. They hear all the arguments in the case and they say: "I will take these papers and give you my decision next week." So I have heard all the arguments in regard to the next world, and some things are uncertain and full of mystery, and so I fold up the papers and reserve until the next world my decision about them. I can there study all the mysteries to better advantage, for the light will be better and my faculties stronger, and I will ask the Christian philosophers, who have had all the advantages of Heaven for centuries, to help me, and I may be permitted myself humbly to ask the Lord, and I think there will be only one mystery left; that will be how one so unworthy as myself got into such an enraptured place. Come up out of the sepulchral shadows. If you are not Christians by faith in Christ, come up into the light; and if you are already like Lazarus, reanimated, but still have your grave clothes on, get rid of them. The command is: "Loose him, and let him go."

LEARNED A LESSON.

How a Young Business Man Was Brought to Realize It Was Time to Stop Drinking.

"I think," said a successful business man, "that most young men get into the drinking habit before they know it, or, rather, realize how far they have gone. In some instances they are born in it, but, thank heaven, that kind are in the minority. I know how it was in my case. Up to the time I was 25 I had trained with a fast lot of young fellows, and we all drank more than was good for us. I had a fine place in a firm, the same one, by the way, of which I am now at the head, and the head of the house was a man of just the kind of horse sense all men ought to be who have the business of training young men in their keeping. I did not neglect my business, and had been receiving promotions right along, and when my friends suggested that I was drinking too much and that it would finally get me down, I laughed at them and took my drinks just the same. I sincerely thought they didn't know what they were talking about, and I did not think the liquor was hurting me or that I couldn't let it alone when I wanted to. My older brother talked to me on several occasions, and I laughed at him and called his attention to the fact that I had been promoted three times in the last two years, and if the liquor was doing for me what he said it would that could not have happened. I believed it thoroughly, too, and felt that I would drop it quick enough if it were injuring me.

"One day the head of the house called me into his office and told me he was afraid I was getting too fond of liquor. I laughed at him, too, in a very respectful manner, however, and told him they were all mistaken, and that I really felt no bad effects, and could stop at any time. I thought I ought to, and a lot more of the same old argument used by every young man who is beginning.

"That's all right, my boy," said Mr. B., "but I'll tell you how much harm it is doing you, and what I think of it. It is doing you so much harm that if I hear of your getting under the influence again or of visiting the saloons as you have been doing I shall ask for your immediate resignation. I can see more than you can, and still I may be mistaken, and you may be all right. However, I shall give the house the benefit of the doubt, and get a man to take your place who does not drink."

"Then for the first time I realized that I was being injured, and the realization was direct and positive. It couldn't be laughed off, and though Mr. B. might be mistaken, as I thought the others were, it was not going to do me any good, so I resolved to do what I always said I could do if I wanted to—quit. I didn't have any serious trouble in quitting, either, for I was young and the habit wasn't formed. All I needed was a realizing sense, and I got it in a way that has lasted to this day. I talk to my young men in the same way, and I haven't a man in my employ who drinks enough for me to know it, though some of them may take a drink occasionally."—Washington Star.

WHAT IS TACT?

IT WAS a combination of spring weather and steam heat in the office and Ellsworth drooped over his desk. His languid thoughts had straggled far away from the abstract spread out before him. Suddenly he reddened and set his teeth together with a click. Then he threw back his head and began humming a tuneless melody, the burden of whose words was: "La-la-la!" There was a defiant bravado in his voice which impressed the stenographer in the outer room and which made Goodwin stare as he came in just then.

"Thanks for your hospitality. If you urge me I will," opened Goodwin, stretching himself upon the office couch with the manner of a fellow who had been there before. When he was well settled he turned a spring lassitude eye on Ellsworth and drawled:

"Since when did you learn to sing?" Ellsworth called to his stenographer to shut his office door. Then he managed to exert himself enough to swing his swivel chair until it faced another and to hoist his feet.

"Goodwin," he asked, in a solemn tone, "what is tact?"

"Tact," said Goodwin, lazily, "is what the other fellow hasn't got."

"Then I'm the other fellow."

"Oh, pshaw! 'Tisn't so bad as all that, I guess."

"It's worse than that. I'm a bump on a log, I tell you. That little tune you caught me warbling—"

"Tune?" inserted Goodwin.

"That little aria I was executing as you came in is a way I have of trying to express indifference when a vision of one of my bad breaks flits before me. Say, I've got more recollections of that kind than you could shake a stick at, and they're always coming across me on tired days like this. You know what I think tact is? It's not letting the emergency rattle you. Talk about 'tact vs. talent'—a fellow's got to have both. Talent I've got—"

"He's so modest!" soliloquized Goodwin.

"Talent I've got," repeated Ellsworth, with conviction, "but tact—no. Remember the chestnut about the amount of tact it requires when you've lifted your hat to a stranger to make him think you were only scratching your head? That's the idea I'm getting at. To master the sudden situation, instead of letting the sudden situation master you. The things a fellow's had time to plan out don't count. Now, just before you came in, a fool thing I did last week struck me suddenly. There wasn't any reason why I should think of it. It just came without any warning and made me get as warm as if it had happened a minute ago. I tell you I suffer from these things, and when they come into my head before I know what I'm about I find myself making an effort to throw them off by singing out like that."

"Singing?" queried Goodwin.

Ellsworth grinned. "It never occurs to me that a codfish is very sympathetic, Goodwin, except when I am associating with you. Queer what comparisons will do, isn't it?"

"How'm I going to sympathize without knowing what the matter is? Spring is moving along and the way I feel now I am going to take my summer vacation early this year. Suppose you'll be ready to tell me what you've got on your mind by the time I get back?"

"Maybe—if you give me a chance. All there was of it was this: Coming back from my trip north last week I had to change cars at Detroit and I forgot my overcoat—left it in the other train and never thought of it until my train had begun to pull out of the station. I rushed out on the platform and there came the porter of the other car, running after me, all out of breath. Next minute he swung himself on the steps of my sleeper and landed my coat in my arms. Of course I knew what to do. There's nothing small about me, Goodwin—you know that. I never thought of putting the fellow off with a quarter. That's a $65 overcoat. What I was feeling for was a half, but somehow or other I couldn't get my fingers on it. The train began to move faster and faster, the porter was shifting from one foot to the other, with his hand on the railing all ready to swing off as soon as I'd done my duty; I pawed wildly in my pocket for the fifty-cent piece that wouldn't come, and at last, as the train was going almost full speed, I jerked out a silver dollar in desperation, slammed it into his hand and yelled out: 'Here, take this—it's the smallest I've got!'

"That'll do, Goodwin—that'll do. I'd like to see the tragedy you couldn't get humor out of. I suppose you'd have laughed at the time to see me charge into the car and fire the coat at one seat and myself at the other. It wasn't that I was mad about giving him the dollar—but why couldn't I have done it in a way to get the credit on it? Why did I have to pose as a chump? That's what does me up—it's lack of tact, I tell you."

Goodwin was sitting up to laugh.

"Say, I wonder what you'd think of performance of mine at the bacble for the programme, so I went around and warned some of the fellows to get ready for impromptu speeches, and bejiggered if they didn't prepare so much that I thought they'd talk all night. I knew I'd got to call out all I'd spoken to or have hard feelings, so I managed to whisper to Gorman and a couple of others that they'd better cut us off with crisp, short speeches in order to get an example to Franklin, because old Franklin was liable to prose all night. Then I got around by Franklin and told him we'd enough of these long-winded old figureheads—for heaven's sake to stir us up with one of his short breezy talks. Now, that sort of thing, Ellsworth, is what I call tact."

"I don't," said Ellsworth. "There was nothing sudden about it. I could have done that myself."

"Hold on, now, till you hear it all. I'd no sooner left Franklin and tipped back to my seat, putting myself on the head for a diplomat, than up he gets and begins his speech by saying that he's just been informed the company has had enough of these long-winded old figureheads—and so on!"

Ellsworth groaned appreciation.

"Never you mind—it didn't stump me!" boasted Goodwin. "The fellows' jaws began to drop and everybody looked at me, but up I jumped and I says—as easy and smiling as you please—says I: 'Gentlemen, pardon the interruption, but I want to propose a toast within a toast. Here's to Jonathan Franklin—the merriest and most accomplished liar of them all.' Well, sir, everybody roared and Franklin didn't know where he was at and the other fellows said afterward that it was mighty poor taste in Franklin to call them long-winded figureheads, even for the sake of his joke on me. How was that?"

"That," agreed Ellsworth, with a touch of awe in his tone, "that's the real thing. That's tact." And he puffed at the cigar he had lighted in a leisurely, plenty-of-time fashion.

Goodwin took to the couch once more.

"According to our deductions," he said, slowly, "tact seems to be the ability to be gracefully—or, at least, to deceive."

"I should add to that definition the words: 'On the spur of the moment,'" said Ellsworth, with an air of settling a weighty question.

In the silence that followed both men seemed to drowse. An electric bell roused Ellsworth and he swung back to the telephone on his desk.

"Hello!" he cried, in a sharp business-like tone that went off like a cannon in the sleepy office.

"Yes, I've done that very thing! In the pressure of business this morning I utterly forgot your Aunt Mary was coming. What time was the train due? Thunder! She must be half-way out to the house by this time. Why, sure! I meant to meet her—as much as could be—but you've no idea how things pile up on a man when he gets down to the office in the morning. The matter was completely crowded out of my mind. Pity you didn't call me sooner, dear. I'd have shaken everything and gone to that train. Yes, things are pretty heavy to-day. I'm working on that big abstract, you know. Yes—a good many interruptions—men coming in to consult, and all that. No, don't hurry—there's only one man waiting now. Let him wait. You're more important to me than any man. Oh, no, I don't think I'm working too hard, dear. This spring weather's a little trying for a fellow that has to go right on digging, but I think I'll stand the strain all right. Too bad about Aunt Mary. You know nothing but business would have made me forget your wishes. Shall I bring you some violets? Not much—I won't forget that! Good-by."

He was solemnly relighting his cigar as he caught Goodwin's admiring eye.

"And yet you say you haven't tact!" said Goodwin.

"Oh, well," deprecated Ellsworth, elevating his feet once more. "Any man could rise to an emergency like that. I was talking to my wife."—Chicago Daily Record.

The Campaign of 1900

Is now open and is probably the most important since 1860, and the issues are just as important, just as well defined, and more numerous than ever before, and these vital facts together with what is happening every day in all parts of the world, make it imperative and necessary that the intelligent man, woman and child should read the newspapers. It is the only way to keep posted, to keep in touch with the political, military and social events, and to enable the voter to cast his ballot for what he knows he wants. To enable one and all to prepare for this national event, the following campaign offers are now quoted: When taken in connection with the GENOA TRIBUNE, the Tri-Weekly World one year 65c; the Tri-Weekly Tribune one year 80c; Weekly Tribune 25c; Semi-Weekly Post-Standard (Syracuse) 50c; Rochester Democrat and Chronicle 55c; New York Daily Press $4.50. The GENOA TRIBUNE is $1.00 per year; 50 cents for six months. Send through your post-master or address
