Buffalo Bill's show at Ithaca July 6. Popular airs are not in it with popular heiresses.

We hear a great deal about "sweet girl graduates," but not one word about the young Daniel Websters.

Gen. Joe Wheeler is finding it hard work to serve his country and maintain his place in the Democratic party.

The new boat, purchased by Willis Atwater at the Cayuga House, Shel-drake, was at the dock in Ithaca recently. It is a beauty and pleased its owner.

The Chittenango Pottery company has been awarded the contract for making china souvenirs for the Pan-American exposition to be held in Buffalo in 1901.

The steamer Frontenac began regular trips last Tuesday. This season the steamer will also make the trip on Sunday, but at a later hour than during the week.

Dr. Smith of Fleming is coroner, town clerk, health officer, notary public, registrar of vital statistics, and is taking the census also. How is that for office and business.

The Terminal railway ties, 22,000 in all, which have been lying idle in O. & W. yard in Sidney the last eighteen months, will be sold at auction on Saturday, June 30, at 9 a. m.

Contrary to law, farmers at Mendusa, Schoharie county, sprayed their apple trees while in full bloom, and the result was that one beekeeper, Edwin Snyder, lost his entire colony of bees—100 hives, valued at $500.

The possibility of a great European war draws public attention to our almost entire dependence upon foreign shipping for our foreign carrying. Such a war would deprive us of ships and strike a frightful blow at our export trade.

Atwood Bros. is the name of a firm, composed of Grant Atwood of Moravia and D. M. Atwood of Groton, which will open a general store at Covey's old stand, Moravia, Aug. 1st. The firm will handle farm produce on a larger scale than heretofore attempted.

An 11-year-old girl named Ella Moore, whose home is in Oswego, was recently operated on at St. Joseph's hospital, Syracuse, for tumor of the stomach. The tumor was found to be a wad of hair which Ella had from time to time bitten off from her own tresses and swallowed. She will recover.

The Delaware & Lackawanna railroad has issued a booklet entitled, "Feathers of Fashion." It is a story of Bichfield Springs and gives a history of this famous resort in a very interesting manner. Two of the illustrations are cut from Harper's Magazine for June 1899.

Many will learn with sorrow of the death of Dr. F. S. Capen, A. M., Ph. D., at his home in Buffalo last week. In a fit of mental depression he committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas. For fifteen years the deceased was professor of mathematics in Cortland Normal school.

A Philadelphia paper contained a romantic story announcing the wedding of Miss Grace Smith of Romulus to Samuel Ditchfield of Upland. The marriage was the outcome of Ditchfield's finding a love letter in a grape basket, which Miss Smith had written, asking the person into whose hands it fell, to correspond with her. —Ithaca News.

The Seneca Canning Co. have received their first carload of cans for this season's pack of corn, and expect another car in a few days. The company will put up more corn than in any previous year. Already upward of 180,000 cans have been sold. The packing of this amount, together with the work in the evaporators, will make things hum this fall. Another large force will be required to handle the crop of the Diamond vineyard. At least 100 out-of-town people will be employed.

Thursday morning a strange acting man, without hat or shoes, appeared in Sempronius village, frightening women and children. He was unable to give any account of himself and he was taken before Justice F. A. Covey who in turn took him to Moravia, where Justice J. A. Wright attempted to learn his name, residence, etc. He gave his name as Walter Clark, but afterwards thought that was not right. He did not know where he had worked or where he had come from, but it was thought that he had wandered from the county house. Justice Wright committed him to the county jail for 6 months.

State Fair.

The commission appointed by Governor Roosevelt to manage the State fair is actively at work, and the outlook is extremely flattering for the largest and best agricultural exposition ever held in New York state. The half-mile track is being converted into a mile track at an expense of over $12,000. New buildings are being erected, the present buildings are being repaired, repainted and renovated. A new and attractive main entrance is being built. The grounds are being leveled, new walks and roads made, and in fact everything is being done in a thorough and substantial manner. The railroads are making more liberal concessions in freight and passenger rates. The press of the state and the other agriculture societies are lending their aid in making this a fitting closing exposition of the nineteenth century.

A New Book for Tourists.

Not a little of the rapidly increasing popularity of the Adirondack Mountains both for tourists seeking pleasure and recreation and for those seeking health, has been obtained through the information contained in the splendid little books and folders of the "Four-Track Series" issued by the passenger department of the New York Central. The latest issues this year are Nos. 6 and 20. The former being a booklet of 72 pages, containing many illustrations of scenery and the principal hotels, together with a brief description of the mountains and large maps; also a complete list of the hotels and boarding houses with their location and rates. The latter is a 48-page folder, containing large maps of the region and voluminous information not found in any other publications. The book or folder will be sent free, postpaid, to any address, on receipt of a postage stamp, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent Grand Central Station, New York.

Horse Thief Caught.

John Clark, a noted horse thief, was arrested in Skaneateles Monday morning, by Chief of Police Dove for the theft of a horse and wagon from E. F. Lynch on May 1 at Berkshire. Chief Dove went to Berkshire to claim the reward of $50 which was offered for Clark's arrest. Clark is 60 years of age and has served six terms in Auburn prison.

The Happenings of the Week in Our State Villages.—Newspaper Correspondence.

Ludlowville.

JUNE 18—It is reported that Mr. Merritt Whitlock and Mrs. John Kelly were married at King Ferry last week.

The annual excursion of the Union school which was taken on the Frontenac to Cayuga Lake Park was said to be the largest excursion of this school. A very enjoyable time is reported by all who attended.

Quarterly service was held in the M. E. church Sunday evening. An excellent discourse was delivered by Presiding Elder F. T. Keeney of Auburn.

Mrs. J. W. Allen of Key West is spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Burling.

The lawn social held at M. E. Sperry's by the Presbyterian society last Wednesday evening was very well attended, the proceeds being $8.

David Clark is ill.

Mrs. Lucius Holden has gone to join her husband in the West.

Wm. Miller has purchased a building lot of S. A. Riggs. Consideration $200.

The "Spinsters' Convention" or "Old Maids Made Over" which was given in Odd Fellows hall last Friday evening was so well received that it was repeated Saturday evening. The proceeds were about $30. The Old Maids went to North Lansing Tuesday evening.

F. Lee Norton of Lestershire visited friends and relatives in town last week.

Venice Center---West Hill.

JUNE 14—The month of roses and other blooms is here. From the window we see a bush of red peonies on which are about 40 full-blown flowers—a gorgeous cluster. The rose peony is almost in full bloom.

The "full-moon" storm was a little tardy, but no less welcome, reviving vegetation.

L. E. Wood came from Cortland the 12th. His sons Earl and Theodore are recovering from measles.

George Stevens who has been so critically ill is reported able to sit up.

Paul Donovan is home from his visit of some weeks at his brother's in Oneida.

Misses Lena and May Conkling are spending the week in Moravia taking Regents' examinations.

Miss Mattie Wheat spent Sunday at her father's.

Mrs. Samuel Wheat entertained J. A. Wood and wife of Moravia with other friends. The Cannon house, ever famous for its good cheer and hospitality, appears to retain its former prestige.

The former friends and neighbors of Mrs. Dr. Fordyce were greatly saddened to hear of her sudden death on Decoration day.

Miss Whitney has but one more week of school, then a long vacation.

We are pleased to hear that all the sick in the Murdock mansion are recovering. M. W. Murdock and children expected for vacation.

Your correspondent has not fully recovered from a severe attack of pleurisy.

JUNE 18—C. E. Smith of Ithaca visited his cousin, L. E. Wood, the 17th. His daughter Lena will graduate Tuesday. Some of the young ladies who had their graduating frocks failed to "pass," so will not graduate.

Master Chas. Andrews attended with others the Regents' examinations in Moravia.

Quite a number went from this way to the entertainment at Ledyard. Earl and Theodore Wood are able to resume their studies at the Normal Belltown.

JUNE 19—Mrs. J. Crim who has been seriously ill is improving.

Misses Ruby Davis and Ella Grant passed Sunday in Groton, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cheesman.

Miss Mamie Hakes is spending her vacation with Mrs. Geo. Atwater.

Children's day exercises were observed last Sunday.

Miss Lizzie Wager of Bloomington, Ill., is passing the summer with her parents.

Mrs. D. Tuthill is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Atwater.

Frank Youngs, who has been so critically ill, is improving. Dr. Rosecrans allowed him to be brought home last week.

Mrs. Augusta King, aged 74, a former resident of this vicinity, died at the home of her daughter in Ithaca and was buried the 13th at Forest Home cemetery.

The Sunday school convention at Five Corners last week was very interesting. The afternoon session was made spirited by discussions of the excellent papers read by Mrs. Jesse Corey and S. M. Mead. In the evening Rev. G. McDonald of Syracuse gave an able sermon which was followed by an excellent address by Rev. Mr. Terwilliger who held the attention of the audience despite the lateness of the hour.

East Venice.

JUNE 19—It is very dry and a short crop of hay is assured.

Ed Boles wears a smile these days, on account of the little daughter that has come to his home.

Mrs. Bower is gaining slowly and Mrs. Smith Young is improving.

A year ago the Alliance set Saturday last as the day for their picnic, but it failed to materialize.

It is reported by some of our berry raisers that the forest worms are eating their bushes.

Capt. Murdock is still keeping up courage and expects good news from the front daily. It looks now as if he was slated for something beside railroad issues in the future. A man with his record is hard to beat.

F. C. Whitten and wife, D. Holden and F. Gillespie were in Auburn the last of the week.

Our last party was a success, although the weather was bad; 57 numbers were sold and all had a good time.

Rev. W. A. Pugsley preached to a fair sized audience in the hall Sunday afternoon.

Geo. Freece and family visited in Lansing Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lane of Lansing visited their daughter, Mrs. E. Boles, Sunday.

Abram Hodge, the veteran correspondent of this place, is again able to be out.

John Smith and son Bert with their wives called on friends here Sunday.

Ledyard.

JUNE 18—The church grounds have been much improved by laying new walks and making other improvements.

Mrs. Delos Aikin spent a part of last week with her sister at Fleming.

Mrs. Edith Brightman is trying to master a new wheel.

Florence Wilbur is home from Moravia for the summer vacation.

G. N. Coon and family are spending the week at his father's.

D. Aikin has been indisposed for the past week.

Our school closes this week after a year's successful work with Maude Drake as teacher.

The festival at the church Friday evening was well attended. Proceeds $15.

Mr. and Mrs. George Coon are visiting friends in the southwestern part of the state.

A QUEER GIRL

By S. H. James.

"SHALL I invite her?" Stella Reeves paused, with pen poised in the air.

"Can I help you, Stella?" asked Mrs. Reeves, from the depths of her easy-chair by the fire.

"I was thinking, mother," responded Stella, "whether I should invite Myra Garland to spend a week here. You know that Patty Harper, Nellie Campbell and Jennie Stagg are coming."

"Why not invite Myra?" asked Mrs. Reeves, eyeing her daughter curiously. "Well, I don't know," said Stella, slowly. "She is ever so nice a girl, but she's queer."

"How queer?"

"Very quiet, and not at all like other girls. Sometimes I like her, and sometimes I do not, and that is the way with all the girls. She is not good company, I am afraid, and yet I want to invite her for that very reason. She never goes home except during the summer, and it is so dreary in the academy during Christmas and Easter holidays. But I dare say she will not come, anyhow."

"Invite her, Stella," said Mrs. Reeves, quietly. And Stella did.

It was night when Myra came, the train being late, and Mrs. Reeves did not see her until they all sat at the breakfast table next morning.

All the girls were there, and at first Mrs. Reeves mentally decided that Myra was only a homely girl with brown hair and hazel eyes, and much like other girls, but before the meal was ended she found herself watching the girl with increasing curiosity. She was queer, in her reversed, almost morose, manner, in her habitual silence and her grave, sweet smile.

"She is queer," said Mrs. Reeves to herself, "but I like her."

Before the day was out she liked Myra more than ever. When the other girls went out for a walk, Myra stayed indoors, fed the canary, dusted the bric-a-brac, and shook up the sofa and chair pillows, and did several other little tasks which Stella generally forgot.

Within three days Myra was firmly established in the Reeves household. She was so handy and so helpful and so good natured, everybody said, that Stella and the girls actually held a caucus to discover why they had called her queer, and failed to find a cause.

On the evening of the third day Arthur Reeves came home on leave from the naval school, where he was a cadet. Arthur was only 18, but such a big, burly fellow, especially in his cape overcoat, that you would have taken him for 25 at least—at a distance.

"You shall be our cavalier, Arthur," said Stella, "and I promise you shall have your hands full."

"All right," asserted Arthur, carelessly. "Bring on your girls; you can't frighten a sailor."

Then began a round of gayety such as fairly took away the girls' breath. They made trips to the old mill and the abandoned powder magazine, they went hunting and skating, and Arthur was the guiding spirit in all their pranks.

Myra revived her reputation for queeriness in these expeditions.

"By the great hoop-block!" cried Arthur, with undisguised admiration, to his mother, as he was eating a late breakfast. "I call her a jolly girl, and no mistake."

"The girls say she is queer," said Mrs. Reeves.

"Queer!" he burst out. "Well, yes, perhaps she is, but I wish there were more queer girls like her. Is she rich, mother?"

"I believe not, Arthur."

"That's lucky!"

"Lucky?"

"For her. She will have to work, and she is sure to make her mark, and it will be a big one. Mother, I think—"

"Arthur!" called Stella, outside, "if you ever get through eating, we girls would like to have you drive us to the post office."

On Tuesday Arthur's leave would expire, and so it was arranged that on Monday there should be a picnic. It was Arthur's idea.

"Why not?" he asked. "It's mere nonsense to suppose that you can't have a picnic only in summer. What's the matter with taking the big sleigh, loading it up with picnic grub, including rubber blankets, in case we want to sit on the ground, and having a first-class time generally?"

It was unanimously voted that there was "nothing the matter with it," and on Monday morning the picnic sleigh jingled off.

Myra was there, even more quiet than usual, and her only response to the general chatter was a grave smile.

"What an old grandmother she is!" whispered Nellie Campbell to Jennie Stagg; and Jennie nodded a vigorous assent.

"I believe she has some dreadful ailment," whispered Patty Harper, in her turn, "and I wouldn't be surprised to see her drop at any moment."

"Pooh!" said Stella, contemptuously; "it is only Myra's way."

Meanwhile the object of these remarks sat quietly on the box-seat with Arthur, and said never a word.

"I say," said Arthur, at length, "why don't you talk?"

"Because I have nothing to say," replied Myra, tranquilly. "Besides, I am thinking—"

"Of the picnic?"

Myra smiled.

"Something more important than picnics. Have you ever been in Cairo?"

Arthur looked at her in amazement.

"What a queer girl!" he exclaimed involuntarily.

Myra actually laughed.

"I know I am," she said, quickly "but that is not answering my question. Were you ever in Cairo?"

"Twice."

"Do you know where the British consul general has his office?"

"Quite well. But what in the world—"

"Patience! Is there a large brick warehouse directly opposite, owned by an English firm, where ivory, ostrich feathers and spices are stored?"

"By Jove, there is!" ejaculated Arthur, in increasing amazement. "I remember it quite well, it is such an old building. But I say—"

"One more question," interrupted Myra, for the first time betraying some excitement. "Do you remember the Englishman's name?"

"Let me see," reflected Arthur. "I have heard it often enough. It is Golden-Garden—no, Gar—yes! Garland! Why, that's your name, isn't it?"

"Yes," answered Myra, with another smile. "The Cairo Garland was my uncle. He is dead, and I am going to Egypt next month to straighten out his affairs. I hear they are dreadfully tangled."

Arthur nearly let the lines fall.

"You are going to Egypt!" he repeated, mechanically. "Do you know anything about Egypt?"

"Not so much as I expect to," replied Myra.

And before Arthur could tell her what he thought of a 17-year-old girl going half round the world to settle anybody's affairs, Stella called out:

"Arthur, how long is it going to take to find a picnic ground?"

"We won't go a foot further," said Arthur, reining up. "We are eight miles from home now, and it looks like snow."

"Let it snow!" cried the girls, recklessly.

Then they swept a clear space spread out the eatables, and began to eat right away, as picnic folks always do, while Arthur blanketed the horses.

But this picnic was just like every other picnic. Not being in summer, it couldn't rain; so it snowed, and after braving it out until they looked like snow images, it was decided to scurry home.

Then the usual accident occurred, but somewhat more serious than usual. One of the horses kicked Arthur on the knee as he was hitching him, and he sank down in a heap, with a cry of pain.

At this there was a great uproar, and the horse, highly alarmed, showed signs of lashing out again. In which case Arthur would have been brained, when Myra stepped forward quietly but quickly, and led the horse out of reach.

"Are you able to stand?" she asked, gently.

"Just about," replied Arthur, trying to choke off a groan. "I think some small bones must be fractured. Can any of the girls hitch up the horses?"

There was a blank silence, and then Myra said:

"I think I can, if you will look on and keep me from going wrong."

Arthur was thereupon helped into the sleigh, and just about the time the horses were hitched up he complicated matters by declaring that he felt so faint he could not drive.

"What shall we do?" wailed Stella.

And there were signs of a regular panic, when Myra said:

"I will drive, if Stella will show me the way."

Arthur was helped into the house, and then Myra added to the prevailing astonishment by volunteering to go for the doctor.

"It is only a mile," she said, "and I have my hand in now."

You may be sure that Mrs. Reeves and the girls made much of Myra for the next day or two, and were as much grieved as amazed when she announced her intention of leaving them for a long and perhaps dangerous journey.

"I thought," said Mrs. Reeves, inquiringly, "that you had no friends besides your aunt?"

"So did I," said Myra, quietly. "It was the morning of the picnic that I received the letter announcing my uncle's death."

"And you made up your mind within an hour what to do?" queried Arthur, who was propped up among some cushions.

Myra smiled assent.

"A very queer girl," said Mrs. Reeves to herself for the hundredth time.

She said it again when Stella received a letter from Myra, dated Cairo, March 10, 1885, telling her how she had administered her uncle's estate, and winding up with these words:

"You need not expect to see me for some time, as I have joined the Red Cross society, and I leave for Khartoum to-morrow."

"With all her money!" exclaimed Stella. "Well, I never! I was certain that she would go to Paris the very first thing!"

Not another word from Myra until a month after the cable brought the news that the war in Egypt was over, and then came another long and loving letter.

Arthur was home again, taller and stouter than ever, and very anxious to hear about the queer girl.

"I'll wager she's tired of the Red Cross," he said, with a laugh. "She is too young for such miserable scenes."

"She has left the Red Cross society," said Stella, with a look at her mother.

"I knew it," cried Arthur.

"And," continued Stella, slowly, "she has started for Chinese Tartary—"

"What?"

"To devote her life to missionary work. Her aunt is amply provided for, and the remainder of her fortune and all her life Myra has given to the heathen."

There was almost a painful pause for a full minute, broken by Arthur.

"You're right, mother—she is a queer girl! The queerest I ever knew."

"More than queer," was Mrs. Reeves' quiet comment. "She is the stuff that martyrs are made of."—Golden Days.

 Mississippi when it was the main artery of traffic in the great west and throbb-ed with the wealth of the young nation, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Capt. Deming has had a life of more than ordinary excitement, and even now, safe in snug harbor though he is,
 his eyes light up as he tells of the days when he stood at the wheel and connected his boat past rebel batteries that flung shot and shell at him. He was pilot on the Carondelet when she made her famous run past Island No. 10, and no words can tell better the daring of the trip than the simple ones of the white-haired old gentleman:

"Early in 1862," he says, "I was pilot on the gunboat Carondelet, under Commodore Foote, who had charge of the Mississippi flotilla. The confederates had fortified Island No. 10, and we lay in the river a few miles above it, held in check by the terrible reputation that

FLAMES BROKE OUT OF BOTH SMOKESTACKS.

the island had acquired. Below, a few miles, was Gen. Pope, with his army at New Madrid, surrounded by the flood that accompanied the spring rise. He could neither retreat nor advance, and was in danger of the enemy. It was vitally important to reach him, and we did it.

Late in March the Carondelet, under command of Capt. Henry Walke, was selected to run the island, and preparations were at once begun to make the trip. A barge was procured and lashed to the port side of the boat and loaded with cotton bales, cordwood and baled hay to protect the upper works of the gunboat. It was decided to make the trip on the first dark night, and we lay inactive for several days, suffering more from the terror of anticipation than we did from the reality of the trip.

On the evening of April 4 clouds gathered in the south and a storm blew up far down the river. The clouds gathered darker and mounted higher above us. The lightning flickered brighter and the thunder rolled ceaselessly. A fierce wind came up the river and the white tops began to blow off the yellow waves. Under just enough steam to give steerageway we cast off and drifted down the river toward the island. The steam exhaust pipes had been cut out of the smokestack and led into the wheel boxes, so that no sound of the exhaust would be heard when we got up a full head of steam, and we drifted down the river looking like a farm wagon overboard. I was in the pilot house with my partner, Dan Weaver, and 'Tip' Fishback, a reporter on the St. Louis Democrat.
 Weaver had the wheel and I watched the river, for I was familiar with the shore of the island and could direct the steering of the boat.

"Outside, First Master Hoel was on the starboard side of the pilot house, watching the Missouri shore. We drifted down the river slowly in the teeth of the wind, and the roar of the thunder and the splash of the muddy waves breaking against the two boats drowned every other sound, and with our eyes strained to see through the blackness of the night, made more dark by the flashes of lightning, we drifted down opposite the head of the island, where the batteries were ready to blow us out of the water. We could see the shore of the island plainly when the flashes came and were fearful of discovery, but we drifted on slowly, and Weaver whispered down the tube to the engineer for more steam. I felt the old boat quiver and the rush of water began to show up white over her bow as we went faster. Full speed was called for, and as we gathered way I could see the island drifting past faster and faster. The tension was terrible. Not a shot had been fired at us, and we were beginning to think we would slip past safely, when all of a minute flames broke out of both smokestacks and down the river we went, careening two

Weaver sang down through the tube to the engineer: 'Give her h—ll' and she jumped ahead faster than ever.
 Fishback sat down on the floor and started writing out notes by the light from the smokestack, and the banks of No. 10 began to roar and flash.

"I will never forget it as long as I live—the flashing of the lightning and cannon from the rebel batteries; the roar of the guns and the strange color of the river where the light from the burning soot in our smokestacks fell on it. The river looked as yellow as saffron and the whiteness of the waves as they broke into foam against our square bow was like snow. Every now and then a ball would splash in the water ahead of us, raising a spray that looked ghostlike. We swept down through the great curve in the river, every nerve at its greatest tension, watching the shore and feeling the ducking every time a gun roared on the bank. The fire went out as the soot burned out of the chimneys, and through the darkness, made more than dark by the recent light, we swung safely by the lower end of the island out into the main channel safe and sound, after a trip that I would not take again if the riches of the world were offered me. The relaxation after the strain was terrible. I was as weak as a child.

"In deep water we could relax our vigilance, and the lights on the boat were soon burning. Over the sound of the thunder that was still rolling fore the sound of three guns that told our friends above the island of our safety, and as we came to at the New Madrid levee everybody in town was there and a score ran waist-deep into the river to catch the line that we cast out. We were made fast to the shore and a hundred men carried us up over the muddy bank to where Gen. Pope was waiting to see Capt. Walke. In a few days Island No. 10 had fallen and we were joined by the rest of Commodore Foote's flotilla. The men joked us a great deal and called us farmers, asking the price of baled hay and farm produce, but we did not mind it. We were only too glad to have the baggage between us and the Johnnies, but I believe to this day that if our smokestacks had not caught fire we would have slipped by without being discovered. We had come down the Missouri side of the island, although the channel was on the Kentucky shore, but the high water of the spring rise made it possible for us to take the chances with some hope of success, and by careful watching we got through without scraping the mud. The Missouri side of the island was not nearly so strongly fortified as the other side, and the flashing of the lightning and dash of the rain made it hard to hit us. We were not struck at all, but every time I heard a gun fire I ducked as if it was coming for me."

GLEANINGS.

John Ruskin called tobacco "the most natural curse of modern civilization."

Every saloon at Tullahoma, Tenn., has been placed under the legal ban charged with Sunday liquor selling.

The London (England) Times says:
 "England, with 500 years of license, is the worst liquor-cursed nation in the world."

During the last 20 years the deaths from alcoholism in Great Britain have increased 82 per cent. among men, and 145 per cent. among women.

A recent investigation showed that 93 per cent. of the inmates of the New York house of industry were sent there for crimes resulting from the use of intoxicating drinks.

Confusion in the head, vertigo, stupor, faintness, nausea, vomiting, general depression of the nervous and circulatory functions, follow the ingestion of large quantities of tobacco.

Eyesight is frequently impaired by the use of tobacco, due to the paralyzing of the nerves controlling the iris, or paralysis of the optic nerve, sometimes resulting in absolute loss of sight.

Cheese manufacturers at Washington are endeavoring to obtain legislation to prevent the production of misbranding of the product, and their activity has served to call attention to the recent rapid strides in the production of cheese in the United States.

The yearly output of cheese in the country is estimated at about 265,000,000 pounds. The largest producing sections are in New York, Wisconsin, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Vermont and Ohio, which states contain 4,897 factories, and whose increase in product and factories is estimated at about 30 per cent. during the last five years. The butter industry is the most important of the dairy interests, its production reaching 850,000,000 pounds annually, but the cheese production is a good second. Of the product it is estimated that the United States consumed about 210,000,000 pounds, of which 12,000,000 pounds is imported, while about 70,000,000 pounds is exported. An indication of the expansion of the cheese industry is given in the figures of exports, which have practically doubled during the last four years. In 1896 the exports were 36,860,000 pounds; in 1897 they rose to 50,900,000 pounds; in 1898 to 63,600,000, and in 1899 to 70,200,000. The largest purchaser of American cheese is England, and it is no joke to say that a considerable proportion of the "Cheshire cheese" sold in London comes from the United States. It is said that a number of exceedingly fine cheeses are made in America so closely resembling Stilton, Roquefort, Brie, Edam and Neufchatel varieties that a connoisseur might be mistaken easily.

Experts of the department of agriculture have reckoned that 70 years ago in this country it required just a bit over three hours to produce a bushel of wheat. To-day an average bushel is turned out in ten minutes. In 1830 the cost of the labor consumed was nearly 18 cents; at present it is only 3-4 cents. Similar figures might be cited for other products of the soil, says the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, but it will suffice to say that during the year 1899 a saving of $681,500,000 was made in the raising and harvesting of the seven principal crops in the United States by means of machines and methods invented within the last half century. In other words, the production of exactly the same crops 50 years ago would have cost that much more money. This gives a vivid notion of the benefits conferred upon mankind by modern agricultural invention. The wheat crop is increased at least one-eighth by the use of a single contrivance known as the mechanical seeder. Without the cotton gin it would be practically impossible to raise and to market the cotton crop of this country, which now amounts to 10,000,000 bales or more annually. The up to date corn husker, which is a recent invention, husks the corn and at the same time cuts the husks, stalks and blades into feed. In corn shellers the very latest is a steam power machine which will shell a bushel a minute, carry off the cobs to a pile or into a wagon, and deliver the grain into sacks or wagons. But the most wonderful contrivance of all is the combined reaper and thresher, with which it is necessary only to drive across the wheat field in order to obtain the wheat ready for transportation to the elevator.

Up to Date Farming.

The wise men have been concerning themselves about this matter of the good-fellowship of women, and are asking themselves the old question as to whether the eternal feminine may be at the same time an eternal good fellow. It seems, says a Chicago paper, to be a rather personal matter and one which all good fellows must decide for themselves. Some men would forever keep women within the rather narrow confines offered by a pedestal, while others would insist upon the cramped limitations of a footstool, and now it seems that there is still another class who would be glad to have a woman occupy the companion armchair and smoke of the same brand of cigars. It all seems to be a matter of smoke, this question of feminine good-fellowship, and is based upon a common liking for the same kind of sports. It is safe to say that the man who yearns for this kind of fellowship, who sighs for a feminine companion who can share his material thirsts, and who can soar with him in the smoke clouds of his own making, will have no difficulty in discovering this smoky affinity. But the effect of this demand upon a large number of women will be to drive them to the footstools and the pedestals.

The Census Man.

With eager glance, expectant eyes, with stiff protruding lips, From yard to yard and house to house most fearlessly he skips; Armed with a pencil and a pad, a strong case-hardened jaw, He tells the "people that they "must" because it is the law. "How old are you?" and "What's your biz?" and "Come, now, what's your age?" His questions set your teeth on edge, your choler in a rage. "Y' smoke er chew?—How many wives?— You've got to tell the cause," And with his pencil in the air, he comes a sudden pause. To bachelors he says, "A wife? Why not?" he then demands; You'd like to grab him by the neck and swat him with your hands. By Jove! you couldn't hurt him, and even with a brick; And ridicule? A senseless waste, his hide is far too thick. He interrupts you at your meals, before you're out of bed, He thunders forth his questions till you wish that he were dead; And worst of all, he gets things wrong, it seems to be his plan— Oh, save us, Uncle Sammy, from the brassy census man! —H. MACG.

Having succeeded The Bool Co. we are making a loud call for the trade within a radius of fifty miles of Ithaca. Our aim is to do four things:

- 1 Carry a full and complete assortment of rich and medium goods in each department.
- 2 Be able always to show the newest styles and patterns.
- 3 Make prices as low as equal goods can be sold anywhere in the world, with ONE PRICE for all.
- 4 Give courteous attention to everyone who shall visit our store, whether a purchaser or not, make prompt and painstaking deliveries, and accommodate our patrons in every way possible.

Particular favors will be shown to out of town customers. An entire stranger from a distant town buys at exactly the same prices as the richest or most influential nabob in our own city, and he gets this extra: we pay the freight.

—Everybody in this vicinity is anxious for railroad news, and several are quite impatient at the delay of the commission. We understand that the commissioners have not yet rendered their decision.

—It may not be generally understood, but the fact is nevertheless true, that the man who will beat a carpet in the back yard is greater than he who stays down town until midnight talking politics.

—The editor expects to enjoy three or four days next week in attendance at the annual session of the N. Y. State Press Association which meets at Brighton Beach June 26, 27 and 28. This office will be open as usual.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Hagin and son Hobart and Mr. A. A. Mastin attended Commencement exercises at Cornell two or three days this week, Miss Elma Mastin being one of the graduates.

—The graduating exercises of Moravia High school occur this evening. Vance E. Avery of this place is a member of the graduating class and several of his friends will attend the exercises.

—Residents of this town are pleased to see the cemetery improvements that have been made this spring. David Dingey, who does the work, is the right man in the right place; he takes great care in grading, trimming trees and keeping the grass cut.

—The roads in and about town need working, not merely piling sods up in the center but fill the mud holes and level off the surface with the road machines and then rake out several wagon loads of stones to the mile. From King Ferry to Auburn the roads are fine. They are worked at the right time.

—D. C. Mosher is certainly having more than his share of misfortunes. Being confined to the house with a relapse of his long illness, and now he has lost two good cows and two or three others are sick from lead poisoning. They found some pieces of old lead pipe somewhere about the pasture and carried them in the mouth.

—It is quite true that if a publisher accepts starvation prices for his advertising space it is his own fault. But it is not to his injury alone. Such papers tend to cheapen the space of all their contemporaries. It is through ignorance; hence the value of discussion on the subject. If he can be taught something it will be profitable not only to himself, but to all the fraternity.

—Genoa will celebrate the Fourth. The large posters will soon tell you all about it.

—It is McKinley and Roosevelt, and where could be found a stronger combination.

—Mrs. Frank Bryant and daughter of Groton have been spending the week at W. E. Miller's.

—Mr. Sharp of Syracuse is the guest of his sister, Mrs. H. M. Roe, and other relatives in town.

—Ice cream will be served at Hotel DeWitt Saturday evening, the proceeds for the benefit of the ball team.

—The Farmerville lodge, No. 183, F. & A. M., will hold a Masonic festival and ball in the Holton storage building at Farmer on Wednesday evening, June 27. We acknowledge an invitation to attend.

—The base ball season will open here with a game next Tuesday at 3 o'clock, on the new ball grounds, the Auburn High school boys being up against the Genoa boys. These Auburn boys were here last year and played as nice a game as we saw last year. Admission 15 cents; ladies 10 cents.

—Miss Lola B. Alling of 138 Seymour St., entertained a number of her young friends yesterday afternoon from 4 to 8, it being her ninth birthday. A bountiful luncheon was served and a good time was had by all. The little hostess received many pretty remembrances.—Auburn Bulletin.

—Several from this town attended the annual outing of the supervisors and their friends, which was held at Cascade Tuesday. It was a large attendance and it proved to be a pleasant occasion. Either the county statesmen are powerful eaters or Landlord Baker was short of provisions; at all events, the eatables were exhausted before all had been fed.

—Dey Bros. & Co., of Syracuse had a unique advertisement in a recent issue of the Syracuse Herald. The advertisement occupied two full pages and announced a midsummer sale, enumerating hundreds of bargains and showing a portrait of the manager of each department. Altogether it was a most attractive announcement.

STRONG HAY DERRICK.

If Properly Made and Used It Will Be a Valuable Addition to the Haying Machinery.

The base of this derrick should be made of 3x12 stuff, 14 feet long, the center crosspiece of 2x8 and the outside crosspieces of 2x8, all mortised in as shown in cut and securely bolted, one bolt at each corner passing through foot of brace, which should be made of 4x4 stuff. The post (e) may be either round or square (if square 8x8 is none too large), and should be 9 or 10 feet high.

The pole (a) should be 35 or 40 feet long, depending upon the size of stack or rick to be made, and should be of good stiff timber. White oak is good, and seasoned elm first class. Slab off butt end to save handling unnecessary weight. Have your blacksmith make a fork (b), and fit in old buggy spindle on top of post for fork to work in. The piece (c) is made of straight-grained 2x5, hinged to post and bolted to pole. The two hooks for pulleys are made as illustrated to bolt through pole and short end to enter shallow hole to prevent pulley jumping off.

The derrick should be set to the windward of the stack and if it does not swing over stack when load is clear of ground tilt the far corner a little by putting block under it. If properly made and used it will be a valuable addition to the haying machinery for those who stack their hay in the meadow. The writer stacked ten acres of good clover last year in a little over half a day with no one else on the stack from beginning to finish. You would never dream there was so much hay in the stack. It was so well packed by the dropping of the heavy loads. — Orange Judd Farmer.

TIMELY HORSE NOTES.

Little Things Which, if Properly Attended To, Will Prevent Sickness and Promote Health.

Keep whatever the horse drinks out of scrupulously clean, for the animal is very fastidious in regard to water. Never feed hay in the old-fashioned, high hay rack, for it is a fertile cause of inflammation of the eyes. If the horse has mange, break up the scabs, with soap and water, and apply a strong decoction of tobacco; repeat in a couple of weeks, and whitewash the stalls. After collar or saddle galls have been washed with warm water and castile soap, apply witch hazel. Teach the horse to promptly obey the word of command. Be sure the collar fits.

Whenever the horse is fretted or becomes confused, stop all effort to get him to move until he is over his excitement. Feed regularly and water often; a half day is too long to keep a horse without water. The horse likes sugar, and if it is given a lump when it is caught in the field, there will never be trouble in catching it. Keep a close watch of the feet; if they become hard apply a flaxseed poultice. Very often a few weeks on pasture will build a horse up wonderfully. If the young horse has sore mouth—lamas—wash out with chlorate of potash and water. Horses are often made to interfere by the way they are driven; if your horse interferes, see if more careful driving will not help the matter. In India barley is scorched before it is fed to horses, and is less dangerous as horse feed in consequence. The breeding of saddle or coach horses is profitable. — Charles H. Springer, in Epitomist.

NOTES ABOUT SHEEP.

Lambs may be pushed from birth by stimulating the ewes' flow of milk.

An excellent lamb food to begin with is two parts of bran and one part corn meal or crushed oats or barley; and one part of cotton seed meal if it can be procured.

Unskillful shearing calls for immediate attention to the proper treatment of cuts made in the skin. These should be immediately protected by a coat of clean pine tar.

As soon as the sheep are sheared the ticks will gather on the lambs, much to their discomfort and damage. The easiest remedy is to dip the lambs or to wet the skin all over with any good sheep dip.

Scours in young lambs may be checked by giving them ten drops of this mixture: One dram each of tincture of opium, ginger, rhubarb and cardamom seed. It is a cordial and a preventive of trouble of this kind, and should be given in a little water twice a day, or in bad cases three or four times. Give three times as much to the ewes. — American Sheep Breeder.

BARNYARD ADJUNCT.

An Open Shelter Which Is Just as Useful in Winter as During the Summer Season.

No one knows until he has had experience with such an open shed at the side of his barnyard how very necessary such a shelter is for the farm animals. The cows can lie there during summer nights after being driven in from the pasture, thus being secure from showers or storms at night. The sheep can be fed there during the winter. A farm team can drive in under its shelter if caught in a shower. The expense of building such a shed is small, indeed, compared with the benefits to be derived from it. — N. Y. Tribune.

AN ALL-YEAR SHELTER.

Sale of Immature Calves.

A law that would prohibit the sale of calves for food before they are three months old would put an end to "bob" veal and lead to improvement of stock, for the reason that if farmers were compelled to feed their calves to the age of three months they would then give some attention to breeding in order to derive as much as possible from the calves. The scrub bull would soon become useless under such a system, and the farmers would find the change greatly in their favor. Many of the infant calves are sold when but three days old and are then unfit for human food. — Prairie Farmer.

Milk Yields the Profit.

In the dairy profit must come out of the milk and milk alone. Beef should not be considered. It hardly pays the dairyman to feed an animal ten or twelve years in order to sell for beef when at the outside three years' feeding should be sufficient to mature and finish for market a beef animal. Feed the dairy cow for milk and consider the returns from the milk as the profits, and when the animal fails as a dairy cow sell to the best advantage, considering what is received as so much gain. — Rural World.

Long Rows Save Labor.

An exchange well illustrates the importance of long rows by telling of a western farmer who had plowed land 100 rods wide and a half-mile long. He made three fields, each 33 rods wide and 160 rods long. When planted in corn he found that his man could cultivate it the long way of the row in three days, while if going the other way there was four days' work. Just one day extra was spent in turning around at the end three times as often.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS

GOD SEETH NOT AS MAN SEETH

"Life has gone well with me to-day," one said.
 And raised his head,
 Looked with exultant eyes,
 Fearless of change, defiant of surprise,
 Into the future—lo!
 An awful vision rose,
 Clear-cut against a background dark with woes,
 He reeled as 'neath a blow:
 "Ah, God! Can it be true
 That is the meed and due,
 Just recompense and terrible redress
 For my superb success?"
 "Aye, for it fed on what another lost,
 Raised itself on the downfall of that other,
 And stole its brilliance from a blackened brother;
 Success—at what a cost!"
 "Life has gone ill with me to-day," one said,
 With drooping head,
 Raising his tired eyes,
 Filled with the weary pathos of surprise:
 At lofty purpose balked,
 At noble work o'erthrown;
 Defeat seemed aye to claim him as her own;
 Dolorous failure stalked
 Before his burning gaze—
 When lo! with rapt amaze,
 He saw a vision of the future rise.
 Cried he in glad surprise:
 "Dear God, can it be true my baffled dreaming Hath of a surety wrought so much for Thee?"
 "Aye, work, or good intent, or thought
 For me,
 Fails not, whate'er the seeming."
 —Minnie Leona Upton, in N. Y. Observer.

RESPECTABLE SIN.

It is Not the Outward Manifestation
 But the Root of the Matter We Should Look To.

It is with sins as with men of families; some have pedigree and some have not; for there are kinds and modes of sin that have, in all ages, been held in respect and embalmed with all the honors of history; and there are others that never were, and never can be, raised above the level even of disgust. The noble sins will, of course, be judged in a very different manner from the humble, base-born sins.

The sins of fame, honor, place, power, bravery, genius, always in good repute, will not seldom be admired and applauded. But the low-blooded sins of felony, and vice, and base depravity, are associated with brutality, and are universally held in contempt. Whether the real demerit of the two classes of sin is measured by such distinctions is more questionable.

Such distinctions certainly had little weight with Christ. He was even more severe upon the sins of learning, wealth, station, and religious sanctimony, than upon the more plebeian or more despised class of sins. Indeed, He seems to look directly through all the fair conventionalities, and to bring His judgment down upon some point more interior and deeper.

He appears, in general, to be thoroughly disgusted with all the mere respectabilities, whether men or sins. The hypocrites of religion, the impostures of learning, the gilded shows of wealth gotten by extortion, the proud airs of authority and power employed in acts of oppression, provoke His indignation, and He deals with them in such terms of emphasis as indicate the profoundest possible abhorrence.—Horace Bushnell.

TO CONQUER WORRY.

Good Rules for the Overcoming of an Enemy of Happiness and Usefulness.

Consider what must be involved in the truth that God is infinite and that you are a part of His plan.

Memorize some of the Scripture promises and recall them when the temptation to worry returns.

Cultivate a spirit of gratitude for daily mercies.

Realize worrying as an enemy which destroys your happiness.

Realize that it can be cured by persistent effort.

Attack it definitely, as something to be overcome.

Realize that it has never done, and never can do, the least good. It wastes vitality and impairs the mental faculties.

Help and comfort your neighbor.

Forgive your enemies and conquer your aversions.

The world is what we make it. Forward, then! Forward in the power of faith, forward in the power of truth, forward in the power of friendship, forward in the power of freedom, forward in the power of hope, forward in the power of God!—Henry Vincent.

Prosperity Hard to Bear.

There is one hard thing to bear in this world, and that is prosperity. The fact that we do not feel it as a burden does not affect the truth that it is hard to carry it and yet stand upright. To be honest, generous, considerate, fair, magnanimous, in "prosperity"—ah! this is not easy. Yet this is what it means to stand upright. Under a worldly...

usually stoop-shouldered and weak-kneed. Pray for the prosperous!—S. S. Times.

Opportunity of Trouble.

The tests of life are to make, not break us. Trouble may demolish a man's business but build up his character. The blow at the outward man may be the greatest blessing to the inner man. If God, then, puts or permits anything hard in our lives, be sure that the real peril, the real trouble, is what we shall lose if we flinch or rebel.—S. S. Times.

DELIRIUM TREMENS CURED.

Cold Water Bath Given to a Victim of Debauch and Ills Life Is Saved.

Maurice Lettulle, in La Presse Medicale of July 8, 1899, describes the case of a man 33 years of age, admitted to the Hospital Boucicaut with a severe attack of delirium tremens, which had begun four hours before. At the time the patient was in intense excitement, but was capable of answering questions. The muscles of the trunk were in a constant tremor, and the limbs were thrown about with great violence. A camisole was applied which, instead of calming, seemed to aggravate the excitement. The temperature on admission was 104.5 degrees Fahrenheit, and the face and extremities were cyanosed. Seven hours after the beginning of the attack he was given a cold bath of 64.4 degrees Fahrenheit. He remained in the bath for 30 minutes, and at the end of that time suddenly passed into a state of collapse, with the pulse remaining at the same rate as when he entered the bath, 108. In the meantime the temperature had fallen to 92.6 degrees. This was ten minutes after the bath had been given. From this extremely low point the temperature gradually improved until 12 hours after the bath had been given, when it was normal. The patient did not have a return of the delirium. The author enters into a consideration of the literature of the treatment of delirium tremens by cold baths. He regards it as a distinct improvement upon the use of opium, chloral or digitalis. The bath in the case described was administered for too long a time, but he thinks it is justified in these very grave cases, and in the case in question it was followed by a lowering of the temperature and a disappearance of the delirium.

POWER OF TEMPERATE LIFE.

He Who Cannot Govern Himself Is Not Qualified to Govern Others.

He who cannot govern himself cannot govern others. Persons of influence are as a rule persons who have attained self-discipline. Self-mastery means the mastery of one's lower self by the higher. The body must always be subject to the soul. It always will be when the soul is master of itself. The affections are mental and spiritual attributes, not physical. The body cannot love, the soul only loves. If we could see deeply into man we should find that every physical appetite took its beginning from a spiritual desire. (Spiritual is here used in its root meaning—that which pertains to spirit. In this sense a desire may be either good or bad.)

When the soul sets its affections on things below its earthliness and depravity affect the body. An undisciplined spirit is self-indulgent and the physical nature soon comes under the sway of its imperious desires. We attribute too much influence to the body when we speak of intemperance. We say the drunkard is bound and helpless through appetite and disease. But life-long drunkards have often been completely released from their passion for liquor through the renewing and converting grace of Christ.

The first step toward the discipline of temperance is to yield the life to God's control. Daniel accepted God's ideal for himself. He placed manhood before wealth, and integrity of soul before promotion to power. He trained the body for the sake of the soul, and the soul for both its own and the body's sake. How magnificently he scorned luxury and self-indulgence.—N. Y. Observer.

Mr. W. S. Whedon, cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Ia., in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For sale by J. S. Banker.

For Sale.

The well-known fruit farm of the late J. M. Mersereau, situated one mile north of the village of Cayuga, N. Y., is offered for sale. Good dwelling house, large barn, cider mill, dry house, poultry houses and enclosed yards, sufficiently large for keeping 300 fowls. Cooper shop, good well, cisterns and spring, 165 apple trees, 350 peach trees, 215 plum trees, 1125 pear trees, 95 prune trees, 26 cherry trees, 1 1/2 acres of Famous Mersereau blackberries, 1 1/2 acres raspberries, mostly red variety, 1/2 acre currants. It is one of the best paying country properties in this locality, and is well worth double the price asked. For particulars, call on or address,

3 Times a Week.

The first number of the TRI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE was published November 20th, 1899. The immediate and cordial welcome accorded it from the Eastern and Western States insured an unexampled success. Baptist Church Notes.

BY THE PASTOR.

Special sermon Sunday morning, "Why I am a Baptist." Evening topic, "A Looking Glass."

Young people's meeting at 7 p. m., led by Vance Avery.

Bible study Wednesday evening, 8 to 8:30. Everybody come.

The Children's day exercises were a great success, literally, numerically and financially. Collection for Sunday school mission work, $10.26.

The ladies of the church will hold a garden party at the residence of Mrs. Clarence Lewis next Tuesday evening, June 26th. Ice cream, strawberries and cake will be served. Proceeds to go towards remodeling the interior of the church.

Miss Florence Loomis and Mr. O. M. Avery were baptized at the close of prayer-meeting Wednesday evening.

Don't forget the "Happy Hour Service" Sunday evening 7:30 to 8:30.

Society Notes.

Scipio Chapter, No. 173, Order of the Eastern Star, will observe its first anniversary by holding a public meeting at the Baptist church at Scipio, on Sunday, July 1st, 1900, at 3:30 o'clock. This meeting will be addressed by Brother Cordello Herrick, the chaplain of Auburn prison. The Genoa Male Quartette will also be present and render some selections. All Masons with their families are invited to be present.

Children's day will be celebrated at the East Genoa M. E. church on Sunday evening next, June 24th. Appropriate exercises, consisting of special singing and recitations, will be rendered. A collection will be taken for the educational work of the church.

The Five Corners and West Genoa W. C. T. U. will hold their quarterly tea meeting at the home of Mrs. Geo. Morrison Friday afternoon, June 29. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in the cause of temperance to be present and assist in the good work. Supper 10 cents.

County Convention.

The Republican electors of Cayuga county are requested to send delegates from the towns and wards of the county to a county convention of the Republican party to be held at the Court house in Auburn, N. Y., on Saturday, the 30th day of June, at 12 o'clock m., for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for county treasurer, county clerk and for coroners and for such other business as may come before said convention.

E. H. THOMPSON, Chairman.
E. T. QUIGLEY, Secretary.

—Owing to the serious disturbances in China, some of the United States soldiers and sailors have been ordered from Manila to China, and in unison with the troops of other nations will endeavor to protect the foreign residents of the Chinese cities. Among the U. S. troops sent is the 9th Infantry of which several Cayuga county boys, including Corp. Denny, are members. However, we doubt if Denny is yet recovered enough from the fever to go into active service.

It will be to your interest to call and get prices on shoes at Mrs. G. W. Davis' before purchasing.

Since our last issue ravages by the forest worms have become more noticeable. Especially is this true of forests located on high ground. The reason advanced for this is that the heavy frosts in May were not as effective on the hills as they were on lower ground. Whatever the explanation may be the worms are working sad havoc with the landscape. One substantial farmer visited his woods after dark on a still night, and could hear the pesky things eat; he said it sounded a great deal like sheep eating at a little distance.

Great reduction in millinery, shirt waists, ladies' ready-made wrappers and shoes at Mrs. G. W. Davis'.

—Usual services at the Presbyterian church. On Sunday, morning and evening service, Sunday school at 12 m., Christian Endeavor at 6:30. On Thursday evening at 7:30, the weekly prayer-meeting. No service was held last Sunday evening, so that all could attend the Children's day exercises at the Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Hopkins of Auburn preached a most excellent sermon in the morning and it is expected that he will occupy the pulpit next Sunday. The church is very fortunate in having the pulpit supplied by such an able man, and all should appreciate it.

Trimmed hats at lowest possible prices at Mrs. G. W. Davis'.

—Now then secure your cook book. The delay in finishing the books, while displeasing to all, could not be helped. A part of the books are now ready, and the balance will be completed in a few days. The difference between this book and others that sell for the same price is that every recipe is practical and first-class, while many in other books have not been tested and would not be used. Not all the good cooks of this vicinity could be represented in this book, but we think it safe to say that all the recipes printed therein are from good cooks. The books can be obtained at Mrs. F. C. Hagin's or of several other ladies of the Presbyterian society. Price 25 cents.

DUTIES-MAKING HINTS.

If They Are Followed as Closely as Possible a Good Article is Sure to Result.

The first and foremost essential is absolute cleanliness, and this applies to the cow stable, the milking-pans, milk-pans and all other utensils, the milk room, etc. When the milk is brought in, strain it as soon as possible, filling each milk-pan half full. If the milk-room is very near the kitchen or other living rooms, place newspapers over the pans to keep off the dust. Do not break into the cream if it can be avoided, and do not let the milk go over three days without skimming.

Put the cream in a large stone jar and mix it over well each time fresh cream is added. Keep the jar in a rather warm situation if possible. The degrees Fahrenheit is about right. Empty into the jar whenever the jar is full and after the cream has become half filled churn the cream into butter. In cold weather the process may be quickened by setting the churn and all in a dishpan of hot water.

In churning, let the strokes be firm and even, and do not leave off until the butter has come. The butter should be gathered in a wooden bowl and quickly worked over to dissolve the salt and eliminate the buttermilk. Then it may stand for a few hours, when it should receive its final working over. A few dipperfuls of cold water should next be added to help dissolve the salt and to get the butter into shape for packing. The main point of mixing the butter is to make it of a good consistency for putting in the jars; it should not be worked over too long or the salt grains will cut the globules, thus making it sticky. Butter should be worked over at a temperature of about 60 degrees. A higher temperature causes it to be soft, while a lower one makes it "mealy."

In winter, if the butter is not of a good, rich color, do not hesitate to put a teaspoonful or two of some first-class butter coloring in with the cream, before churning, as the liquid is perfectly harmless and will add much to the selling qualities of the butter. Many people will not buy unless it is colored to just such a shade. Fresh, clean dairy butter is something that will always bring a good price, and anyone who follows the pursuit will find that it pays if carried on intelligently. Poor butter is a drug in the market, but anyone can soon learn to produce first-class butter, just by exercising a certain amount of care, common sense and perseverance.—Ohio Farmer.
