The spacious rooms were most tastefully decorated with evergreens, smilax and cut flowers. About 75 of the relatives and friends of the bride and groom witnessed the impressive ceremony which was performed by the Rev. Mr. Brass, in his pleasing and efficient manner. After the ceremony a bounteous wedding supper was served. The presents were many, both useful and ornamental and their elegance showed the high esteem in which the contracting parties are held by their friends. BATAVIA, Java, Jan. 15, '99.

DEAR FATHER:

I have been in the Soerakata and Preanger districts for several days and have found much pleasure in visiting a large number of estates. It is a pleasure to find our machinery giving full satisfaction, to hear it praised so highly by those who have been using it long enough to know its merits, and to note the bright prospects for future trade.

We are now milling a good portion of the Java coffee crop, and next time you go to the grocer for a pound of coffee, stop and think that most likely, on the plantation it was prepared by our machinery.

Immediately joining the Soertkata however, there is not so much coffee but sugar cane is more extensively cultivated, and the mills for grinding this cane are numerous and elaborate. In addition to these plants or "frbrieks" as they are called here, many plantations have our portable rice and carry on also the milling rice, to supply the local consumption if nothing more. Rice and sugar cane go well together, the same land being utilized alternately for these for the past two or three years and the planters are looking for bright times in the immediate future, at least until Cuba is on her feet again. A good portion of the Java sugar goes to America. A sailing ship was loading off Tegal when I was at that port. The captain said he would be three traced but the route he would take. He out brought a cargo of 120,000 cases of oil.

Surrounding Buitenzorg there are many coffee estates—I might say also rice plantations for here in the tropics rice is cultivated not only over the lowland, but well up the hils and mountain slopes, the fields being terraced of in small flats to retain the water.

I recently spent two days at headquarters of one very large estate | Padang is smothered in cocoanut 500,000 acres. This vast tract of land the States half ay good, few bicycl-was purchased many years ago, at a ists would take to the railroad. small figure, by one Mr. Hofland, an Eurasian gentleman from Celon, who subsequently amassed an immense fortune, died, and left the estate to his sons who were not long in running through with the property by mismanagement and throwing it into the hands of a bank which now controls it. In Hofland's day, he made his home nothing short of a palace, the amount of marble being used in its construction almost rivaling the Taj at Agra. Marble floors throughout, and marble figures imported from Italy adorn the entrances, whilst just in front of the house and erected upon a large base, stands a bronze statue of himself, bearing in one hand the deed of the lands. Java planters as a rule live like kings and do a deal of entertaining, and Hofland was no exception. His house gave extravagant accommodations to fifty guests.

On the Pamanuekan lands you see groves of nutmeg, cloves, cinnamon, tea, and their production of coffee reaches nearly 400 tons. 400 tons of not what you know as Java but they grow chiefly the Liberian bean. The Liberian coffee tree grows higher than the Arabian or other varieties. The fruit on the tree is larger and more irregular in size, varying from our smallest cherries to the dimentions of a large hickory nut and containing very little saccharine matter. The trees are so high-from 10 to 20 feet-that the pickers use ladders in gathering the crop. All the ladders spent Sunday and Monday with her are made from bamboo which grows luxuriantly all over the country.

This Liberian fruit when picked from the tree, goes to the pulping house, lies in back for a day or two, is passed then together with a constant stream of water through a pulping machine which removes or separates the pulp or fruit, which is more or less fibrous, from the bean, the former being carried away to rot and disappear and the latter going to a vat where it lies about three days to ferment, after which it is washed, dried, and milled-milled of course on our milling machinery, which Springs has returned home. guarantees results equaled by no oth- James Tierney has moved sections I have seen monkeys quite as numerous as they are found in some parts of India. You see them perched in the very tops of the highest trees, you see them running over the ground, you see them everywhere and you see them stealing coffee too.

Traveling through part of the East is very expensive, $30 per day on some steamers and very ordinary ac-codomations at that. Post and telegraph rates are high, everything you want to purchase costs twice what would seem a fair price. To send a letter home I pay just twice as much as you pay to get one to me, and the interior postage on letters is equivalent to four gold cents, just double our rates at home. You enter a barber shop for a hair cut and shave and you pay not less than 60 cents in gold and some exact 80 cents. It is he same in Siam and the barbers are not worthy of the name either; they seat you in an ordinary chair and use the crudest combs, brushes and general barber equipment. In any country I have visited, I have yet to find where barbering comes up to the American standard.

A FEW DAYS LATER.

Being about to sail for Sumatra I brought my letter on to post by the homeward bound Dutch mail. We had a fairly good voyage up notwithcrops. Sugar estates have paid well standing the southwest monsoon, and after forty-nine hours steaming, along and a few miles off the green coast, where dense vegetation exists right down to the very seashore, we reached Padang early on the 20th inst.

Padang is not a large place and the harbor is small, affording wharfage for only three steamers, and there is months in reaching New York, and not very much shipping. The possible resources of the country are said to equal those of Java but the people necessary for the thorough development are not here. I suggested that they import from the densely and over-populated sections of Java but am told that the Javanese will not

A LOVE STORY.

BY AMELIA E. BARR.

CHAPTER III.

CONTINUED.

Mowbray held his cup of happiness with a steadier hand, but he was strangely affected by this sweet realization of man's capacity for a double existence. For it was not so much that something new had come into his life, as that something old had been returned to him. To love Katherine had been no fresh lesson; he had found her at first sight familiar, and the sense of "right" in her had been the earliest sensation she inspired. Admiration and affection followed quickly, but he was certain the instant and primal idea of his heart was that Katherine was anteriorly and inalienably

As he stood feeling the sweetness of this right, but not in any way reasoning about it, Jessy came to him.

"Where is Katherine?" she asked. "Katherine is mine forever," he answered, with the selfish irrelevancy of a lover; for he had not yet been able to consider Katherine with reference to any person but himself.

"Well, then, Mr. Mowbray," said Jessy, "if you will take my advice you will go and talk to Katherine's mother. She is just a most important person. This is your happy hour, and all its work will prosper. So do make the most of it, He went instantly to Mrs. Brathous. She had just put on a new summer gown in which she looked exceedingly pretty, and she was in that charming mood which a consciousness of good looks inspires; so Mowbray was one of those welcome guests who come just at the right time. She made him feel that she was glad to see him, and he lost not one moment in opening his case. He seated himself before her, he spoke with an eloquence which denied all objections. In a few minutes he was holding her hands and begging her to stand by Katherine and himself against all odds. She was not very easily persuaded. She said Wintoun had looked on Katherine as his future wife for nearly seven years. She spoke of the laird's long, unwavering determination to unite the two estates by marriage. "For Wintoun is his heir," he said; "and Wintoun-Lands and Levens-hope are no mean patrimony." Mowbray, however, had words far beyond her reasoning; he talked with his heart and she grew silent. Then the tears came to her eyes, and at this favorable moment Katherine entered the room and slipped within her mother's arm and laid her cheek against her mother's

Mrs. Brathous stooped and kissed her child. She had begun then to give way. And Mowbray's adoration of the girl, his impetuosity, his determination to take no denial were irresistible. Undeniably, also, his beauty was a silent but powerful friend, for there seemed to be a natural fitness in the marriage of a man so handsome with a girl so lovely. At the last Mrs. Brathous surrendered unconditionally.

"It is enough, Mr. Mowbray," she said. "I am convinced by something beyond your words. My heart is with Katherine and you, and I will stand by you to the very uttermost."

Then she stooped forward and kissed the young man, and with the kiss took him fully to her love and trust.

After this happy settlement the day went to Love and to Love only, for the generous mother set the whole household to this happy key. While Katherine and Mowbray wandered in the warm, sunny garden, she talked to Jessy of the affair, and with her own hands spread a more festive

"We will let them have a day or two in paradise, Jessy," she said, "for the laird will pull their happiness to pieces as soon as he finds it out."

But for once good fortune was on the side of the lovers. Wintoun went that very day to Dalkeith to assist at the marriage of a friend, happily oblivious of the stranger who was intermeddling with his own marriage. And the theological fray was more flerce than had been anticipated; before each man of both clergy and laity had said their say, four days had elapsed, and even then return was a little delayed, because the laird had bought a Galloway pony, and a man was to hire who could ride it over to Levens-hope, So it was Saturday evening when Brathous reached home. He found nothing to mar the peace and happiness of his return. Mowbray had gone to Edinburgh to buy a betrothal ring, and he intended to remain over the Sabbath in the capital. Wintoun was sitting with Mrs. Brathous and Katharine, giving them an account of the wedding he had attended, and all three were in a pleasant mood of welcome. Besides which he had the further satisfaction of feeling that throughout all his journey he had seen no finer house, no more beautiful garden, no more admirably kept farm than his own.

Sabbath increased his self-satisfaction. The elders who had not been to Selkirk were anxious to show him attention. He put a larger offering than usual in the plate, and was glad he had done so when the minister made an allusion to the Selkirk meeting, and to their delegate, the laird of Levens-hope. Then on Monday the very thing happened which Katherine had foreseen—Mowbray came to Levens-hope with the minister. They met the laird in the garden, and Mowbray was welcomed effusively and carried off to the stalls to see the prize ox and the Galloway pony. His stay to dinner was taken as a matter of course, and when Wintoun arrived Mrs. Brathous said "she thought the three young people ought to walk over to the manse for Jessy; and then they could dance a reel or two before supper."

Brathous did not like the proposition, but having been so good-natured hitherto, he could not at once summon the necessary courage to contest either the walk or the dance. So Katherine with Mowbray and Wintoun went over the hill for Jessy, and the result was precisely what Mrs. Brathous anticipated. Jessy and Wintoun walked back together, and Katherine and Mowbray turned aside into Leven's wood to seen saint's well; and then they were delayed by the roaring of a notoriously ill-tempered bull, and could not reach home until an hour later. For it had taken Mowbray all that extra time to put the circle or gems on Katherine's finger and to tell her how long and dreary the two days had been without her.

scold Katherine for it on their return. "It was not Miss Janfarie's fault, sir." said Mowbray, quickly. "Pray do not let your position as host make you blame her in my place. I asked Miss Janfarie to show me the saint's well. Neither of us is responsible for the furious animal you keep so near the high-road and which-permit me to say-ought to be shot at once."

"Mr. Mowbray, you are a stranger. Your ignorance is your apology. As for Katherine,"—and he looked angrily at the girl, who stood with her hand in Mowbray's hand.

Then Mowbray's dark eyes flashed a defiance which the laird might have quarreled with had not Mrs. Brathous stepped between them with her charming smile.

"Mr. Mowbray, Jessy is waiting for you. Katherine, you are keeping Jamie waiting for you. And if you want me to play a reel, you had better make haste while I am in the mood of being good-natured."

In spite of her merry words there was a look of anxious deprecation in her eyes, which both Katherine and Mowbray respected; for she knew with what magical speed suspicion grew in her husband's mind. He had entertained a doubt, twenty would follow. and confirmation be close behind. So, though her fingers struck out the tingling notes, and the light feet of the happy dancers kept time to them. she could see the anger and dislike brooding in her lord's white, weak face; and when he suddenly left the parlor she knew he had gone to his room to walk himself into a passion of

It was upon her the storm fell. "Near midnight!" he cried, when she entered the room, "A woman of your age daffing and dancing till such

"Why not scold the minister? He thought no harm of our daffing and dancing.

"He didn't? Then he ought to have a reprimand, and I will see that he gets it."

"I hope you will." There was a threat in the "hope" which was provoking. The laird felt it.

"Katherine behaved herself shamefully," he continued. "Let Katherine alone,"

"I am her guardian." "I am her mother." "She was making love to that Englishman. I saw her."

"Madam! Madam! I-I-" "You know nothing about it,"

"I made love to you."
"You did not. If you had even tried I never could have married you. You asked me to be your wife, and I agreed

"You know nothing about love-makbecause you were Katherine's guardian-and I thought it would be as well to watch the guardian."

"This is intolerable! I will not bear it!" "It is the truth. You will have to bear it!" "It is shameful! shameful! shameful!" "It is shameful that I have to invent excuses for your bad manners every time we have company. There is no use in storming and sniffling, Alexander."

"I will not have that Englishman in my house again. I will order the servants to turn him out."

"You, yourself, asked him here. If any servant turns him out, I will turn the servant after him."

"A nobody! An adventurer! Oh, dear me! What a dreadful thing it is to have a kind heart!"

"You said he was the son of your friend. If he is an adventurer, what right had you to introduce him to my daughter? A fine guardian you are! And as for your kind heart, no one ever was or ever will be better of it. There is no use sitting up to worry, Alexander. Every one in the house is asleep, and I am going to my room." "I shall not sleep a wink. How can

I with such goings on?" You will sleep well enough. You might as well. Nobody will mind your staying awake. Good-night."

But in reality he did not sleep much. He was troubled and anxious about Wintoun's affairs, for after Alexander Brathous he regarded James Wintoun as the person of most importance. He was his sister's son, and he looked upon him as his own heir. His marriage with Katherine was the pet project of his life, for Katherine's money would redeem Wintoun-Lands, and besides this Katherine was one of the best blood of the Border, and her beauty and grace would be suitable adjuncts to his nephew's wife. But there was another reason, and though he seldom gave it, even to himself, it was by far the most potent. He had taken the mortgage on Wintoun with some of Katherine's money, and if Katherine did not marry James Wintoun, he would have to replace this money when she came of age and demanded an account of his stewardship. And the sum was so large wat he sould only do so by mortgaging Levens-hope.

It seemed to him, therefore, that it would be an outrageous wrong to permit the fancy of a mere girl to make void all his plans to save two fine estates-estates which in the end were The delay, however, made the laird | to belong to her and her children. In very angry, and he did not scruple to fact, he told himself that he would not and could not have any interference with a project so wise and so beneficial for all concerned. Nobody had interfered yet, but he had a suspicion of Mowbray, for he noticed that the Katherine who talked and danced with Wintoun was but a colorless shadow of the Katherine who talked and danced with Mowbray. She was sweet and polite and cold to Wintoun. She was light and life and flame with Mowbray. If Wintoun said loving words to her they fell like snowflakes on steel; if Mowbray but looked at her, his looks lightened her eyes and burned in her cheeks and flashed in smiles her answer. The lovers had told themselves they would be very careful. They had promised Mrs. Brathous to door to say nothing which would rouse the laird's suspicions; but who ever succeeded in hiding love? And whenever were two lovers even ordinarily careful? The next morning a circumstance occurred which confirmed the anger of Brathous and brought about a crisis before any one was prepared for it, The laird got into a conversation with his upper gardener and incidentally heard from him that Mr. Mowbray had been a constant visitor during the week he was from home. Immediately he sent a peremptory message to Mrs. Brathous. When it referred her to the seldom used large drawing-room she knew her husband had something particular to say, and that he contemplated saying it with all the emphasis he desired. And she divined at once the subject to be discussed.

The temper in which she intended to discuss it was shown by the circumstance that she did not hurry herself in the least to answer the imperative order. Indeed she delayed so long that she found the laird standing impatiently at the open door of the room, waiting for her approach.

"Why did you not come quicker, Helen?" he asked fretfully. "I sent you word that you were to come in naste."

"I was talking to Katherine. Why did you send for me to come to this room? Are you, really, at last, going to get a new carpet for it?"

"No, madam. I am not likely to have money for new carpets. I chose this room because I want to talk seriously to you, and I did not wish the servants to hear us."

She smiled scornfully and asked: "Pray what is the matter now?" "Matter enough! Why did you deceive me? Were you not afraid to ask a stranger to my house while I was away? One would think you were trying to make a match between him and Katherine-trying to ruin both Katherine and ourselves. I am alself with the news." emember that it was

him when he was here last? You who said, with your usual ridiculous effusiveness: 'On your return, Mr. Mowbray, come and stay. a few days-a few weeks if you wish?' If I had not made him welcome, you would have asked: 'How I dared to turn one of your invited guests away?' As for match-making—that, it seems, is your business. You have been planning to marry my poor little girl ever since you had the charge of her, It has been your one care for Kather-

"I was planning for her happiness and welfare."

"You were planning for your nepnew. Jamie wintown may not appear to Katherine all that he appears to you. Katherine may not think it a supreme joy and privilege to use her money to release Wintoun-Lands-to spare your mortgaging Levens-hope! Oh, I have reached the bottom of your plans, Brathous! Understand this, I will not have my daughter sacrificed to carry out your plans." "I understand that you are going to rain your daughter. Who is this Mowbray?"

"You said you knew him." "I will tell Doctor Telfair what I think of him. I will that! What right has he to bring the fellow to my home?"

"Speak to Doctor Telfair, by all means! He will tell you some truths Quarreling with you ought to hear. you is no pleasure. I shall not continue it.

"I am going to send Katherine back to school.

WINNER OWNS PHOTOGRAPH.

One of the queerest lawsuits ever placed on record is now being tried in New Haven, Conn. To recover a photograph of herself Miss Gertrude Mills is suing her aunt for its possession, the aunt claiming in her turn that it was freely given her and therefore remains her property. To this statement Miss Mills has another word to say. "I want it distinctly stated that I never gave her this picture and she had no business with it. The suit I have begun is a replevin suit and damages are placed at $5. The picture is worth possibly 50 cents. I have several times asked my aunt to give me the picture and she has as often refused. Now I propose to see if the law will not protect my interests and give me this photograph."

MISS GERTRUDE MILLS.

Miss Mills is a bright, prepossessing young woman of 19 or 20 years of age. Her father, James Mills, is proprietor of a restaurant at 112 State street and her aunt runs a rival restaurant across the street. This is one of the oddest suits ever brought before a Connecticut short. Both sides have hired counsel and propose to fight the case to the bitter end. The trial will come up some time this week before Justice A. C. McMathewson. Back of the suit is a long story of family disagreements. Several times there have been suits for slander entered by the parties to this case, none of which has ever come to trial.

Always the Same.

Somebody has unearthed a book written by Barthomolew Anglicus, about 1260, of which one of the most amusing chapters is on the children of his day.

They dread no perils more than beating with a rod (he writes), and they love an apple more than gold, and make more sorrow and woe for the loss of an apple than for the loss of a heritage.

They desire all that they see, and pray and ask with voice and with hand. They keep no counsel, but they tell all that they hear and see. Suddenly they laugh, and suddenly they weep. Always they cry and jangle; that is, unless they be still while they

When they be washed, anon they make themselves unclean again. When their mother washeth and combeth them, they kick and sprawl, and put with feet and hands, and withstand with all their might.

All of which makes it appear that those 1260 youngsters were the same then as now, Those Loving Girls.

Work on the Topographical Map. The continuation of work on the topo-graphical map of the State requires an appropriation of $20,000. A bill providing for that such has been introduced in the Assembly by Mr. Allds. The preparation of this map has been going on for the last seven years by the United States Geological and Topographical Survey and the State Engineer and Surveyor. The State is paying one-half of the expense, and the other half is being borne by the United States Government. Work on the map was begun in 1892, during the administration of the State Engineer and Surveyor Martin Schenck. It has been carried on yearly since that time. It is of necessity a slow process, and will take several years to complete. During the seven years that the work has been in progress $172,000 has been expended. With this sum thirty-nine per cent. of the surface of the State has been surveyed. There are forty-four thousand square miles of territory in the State, so that about seventeen thousand, one hundred and sixty square miles have been com-pleted. At this rate it will cost about $516, 000, of which sum $258,000 will be borne by the State. The map is being prepared in atlas form. Each page shows the topographical conditions of fifteen minutes of longitude and fifteen minutes of latitude, When complete it will be one of the most valuable scientific documents in the possession of the State.

The annual report of Superintendent of Banks Kilburn on savings banks, safe de-posit companies and trust companies show he excess of assets over liabilities of the safe deposit companies of the State on January 1, 1899, was larger by $160,000 than one year ago. The resources of the trust companies, exclusive of those which came into existence in the year, increased $80,000,000, and the new institutions added $15,500,000. The savings banks deposits were augmented by $49,500,000. These figures are eloquent of the good management and prosperity which the institutions in question enjoy, and of the improvement which the year has witnessed in business. There are 190 savings banks in the State, with aggregate deposits of $816,144,367.50 and total resources of $923,420,861.82, making their surplus $106,896,623.10. The increase in the amount due depositors dur-ing the year was $49,459,451.38, in total resources $58,669,617.80 and in surplus $4, Claims Rich Farm Lands.

George W. Armstrong, living near Oswego, lays claim as one of the heirs of Captain John Wood, of Revolutionary fame, to 1800 acres of choice farming land in Sterling, Cayuga County, and Walcott and Butler, Wayne County, under letters patent issued to Captain Wood on January 16, 1797. The property is assessed at $50,-000, and is said to be worth three times that sum. Captain Wood served in the Revolutionary army. He was taken as a prisoner to Quebec. There were 12,421 deaths reported to the State Board of Health during January, an average daily rate of 400. The number of deaths exceeds that of January, 1898, by 2800. From acute respiratory diseases nearly 3000 deaths were reported, 700 more than in December and 1200 more than in January, 1898. The increase has been chiefly in pneumonia and acute bronchitis which caused twenty-three per cent. of total deaths. The most of this increase is due to the prevailing epidemic of grip, from which it was estimated that 1800 deaths came in December and 3000 in Jan-

The Ellicott Square Bank of Buffalo has closed its doors. The bank had a capital of $300,000 and was organized in 1891. A meeting of the stockholders was held and a decision was arrived at to go into voluntary liquidation at once. The bank has not paid a dividend for a long time, and the outlook was not considered favorable enough to warrant the continuation of business. An arrangement has been made with the Buffalo Commercial Bank by which depositors will be paid in full on demand.

GET A RAISE IN WAGES. THE CONGRESS ADJOURNS

New England Mill Workers Secure an Advance of 12 1-2 Per Cent.

MANUFACTURERS AVOID A STRIKE

Representatives of the Operatives Held a Conference With the Mill Owners at Fall River and Won a Signal Victory-The Advance is General, and Over 30,000 Workers Are Benefited.

FALL RIVER, Mass. (Special) .- Concerted action on the part of the textile labor organizations of this city has forced the Manufacturers' Association, representing the mill owners, to increase the wages 1216 per cent. It is a signal victory for the rades unions in New England, and its infinence will be felt in every mill town east of the Hudson River.

Already news of a corresponding increase in wages comes from Providence, R. I., Lowell, Lawrence, New Bedford and nearly all the great mill centres in this section of the country. The advance in wages takes effect in this city on April 3. Its direct effect in Fall River will be to add $25,000 a week to the wages of 30,000 operatives employed in eighty-one cotton mills, owned by forty corporations.

There is no doubt about ninety per cent.
of all the mills in New England following the lead of this city, and that means many hundreds of thousands of dollars in the pockets of the mill operatives, and there-tore additional prosperity throughout this section.

It was for this identical raise of 12½ percent, that the New Bedford mill workers waged the greatest strike in the history of the industry just one year ago. Led by able representatives, Fall River operatives resorted to diplomacy and played a waiting game. Without a loss of one day's work they have won where New Bedford falled; won not only for themselves, but for their fellow workmen throughout the country. country.

Fifteen representatives of the labor unions, known as the Textile Council, met by agreement the sub-committee of the Manufacturers' Association to discuss the demand which the operatives had made for an increase of 12% per cent. in wages. The manufacturers showed no disposition to restore wages willingly, and it was only after the hardest kind of a fight that the representatives of the labor unions were able to make terms with them.

THE MORAVIA WRECKED.

Steamer Lost on a Bar Off Sable Island-No Trace of the Crew.

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (Special) .- Captain William Corkum, of the fishing schooner Mondego, which arrived at this port a few days ago from a fishing trip, brought news that the overdue Sloman line steamer that the overdue Sloman line steamer Moravia, Captain Jorgensen, which sailed from Hamburg for Boston, with a valuable cargo, was wrecked on the northeast bar of Sable Island about February 14. On that date Captain Corkum picked up a quantity of wreckage, including a few whips and lead pencils, a barrel and a life preserver bearing the name of the Moravia. Two days later he spoke the schooner Arbitrator, Captain Spinney, also of this port, who, on learning what Captain Corkum had picked up, informed him that the Moravia was ashore and broken in two.

Captain Corkum sighted the schooner Hattle A. Hockman, whose Captain also had sighted the Moravia. Captain Spinney of the Arbitrator said that he had been in close to the her during the gale of Febin close to the bar during the gale of February 12 and 13 and that after the storm bated he started for the fishing grounds. It was then that he ran across the Moravia. It was then that he ran across the Moravia. She lay on the bar, about eight miles from the northeast light. She was broken in two, and the seas were beating heavily against her. Captain Spinney at once set a sharp lookout for any signs of the crew, but no trace of them did he discover.

The Moravia's cargo was valuable and was roughly estimated to be worth $250,000. The insurance on the cargo is scattered, nearly every marine agency in Bostered, nearly every marine agency in Bosten having an interest. Her crew all told numbered between forty-five and fifty men. The valuation of the vessel is said to be about $150,000.

A BILLION DOLLAR SESSION.

After an All-Night Session Congress Disposed of the Most Important Measures -Senate Closed Its Session With Characteristic Dignity - Testimonial to Speaker Reed-Some of the New Laws.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Special) .- At noon on Saturday, according to the timepieces in the Chambers of the Senate and the House of Representatives, the Fifty-fifth Congress was adjourned without day, having been in session all night and having disposed of all the measures of pressing importance that were under consideration.

The Senate, with its characteristic dignity, closed its session without an incident of a sensational or frivolous character. The Vice-President made a graceful little speech of farewell.

In the House Mr. Balley, the Democratic leader, offered the usual resolution of confidence and respect, accompanied by a brief and happy tribute to Speaker Reed's fairness as a presiding officer. Speaker Reed responded in a two minute speech, and declared the Congress adjourned without day

Then followed a musical demonstration, in which everybody present joined. In front of the Speaker's desk Representatives Bennett, Foote and Sherman, of New York;
Fitzgerald, of Massachusetts; Henderson, of Iowa, and a score of others started to sing "America." Instantly the entire assemblage arose and joined in the song.
The large flag over the Speaker's desk was hauled down from its resting place and wayed over the heads of the growd by Rep-waved over the heads of the crowd by Representatives Low, of New York, and Hull, of Iowa. "Dixie," "Yankee Doodle," "Auld Lang Syne" and the "Doxology" were rendered successively, and cheers for Admiral Dewey, the army, the navy and the nation concluded the ceremonies.

WHAT CONGRESS DID.

Passed 1635 Bills and Resolutions, Provided For the Army and Navy and 3 Code of Laws For Alaska.

Washington, D. C. (Special). — The House of Representatives of the Congress just adjourned passed 1635 bills and resolutions. Several important bills of general legislation have become laws. The most important of these are the Army Organization bill, the Navy Personnel bill, the bill providing a code of laws for Alaska, the Omnibus Claims bill, and numerous im-the Omnibus Claims bill, and numerous important public building bills.

Among the important projects which failed to receive favorable attention in the closing days were those providing a Pacific cable, for an anti-ticket-scalping law, for an eight-hour law, for a Government for Hawaii, and for a Government armor-plate plant.

The Naval Personnel bill completely reorganizes the navy, and is the consummation of years of earnest effort by the Navy Department. The original Army bill was intended to meet the same want for the army supplied to the navy by the Personnel bill, but it failed, and the present bill is considered defective in that it is only a temporary measure. It, however, increases the army to 100,000 men and provides for the retention of this number until 1901.

NEW SHIPS FOR THE NAVY.

Secretary Long Will Proceed With the Construction of Cruisers.

Washington, D. O. (Special).—Congress has authorized the construction of three first class battle ships, three first class armored cruisers, and six protected cruisers, and has, in the same act, declared that none of these ships shall be built except the six protected cruisers.

Secretary Long says that it will be impossible for the Navy Department to continue to build any of the battleships, because it is not possible to procure armor at the figure provided, that is, $300 a ton; but there is no such restriction in the case of the six smaller cruisers authorized to be built. Therefore, Secretary Long says, he will proceed at once to prepare the plans will proceed at once to prepare the plans and advertise for proposals for building these ships, which are of a useful type and much needed in the navy.

This difference of pay grows out of the provisions of the Personnel bill recently passed, by which the nine Rear-Admirals at the top of the list are to receive the pay of Major-Generals of the army and the last nine Rear-Admirals the pay of Brigadiar-Generals.

The Venomous Spiders.

There is no doubt whatever that spiders are venomous, and a few of them are dangerously so. It may surprise the average reader to learn that the typical poisonous spider possesses a poison gland and a hollow tooth or fang through which the venom is introduced into the wound made by the tooth. The gland is situated much as in the rattlesnake, the poison sac being attached to the root of the fang by a small tube that conducts the venom down the hollow shaft. Here, indeed, is one of the oddest facts of naturenamely, the similarity of arrangements in snake and arachnid for the purpose of injecting venom. It is certain, however, that spiders do not always use their poison in striking; they do not need to employ it in killing insects ordinarily, and it would appear that the venom gland is under the control of the animal. With the rattlesnake poison being injected by the mere act allied statements.-Dr. Brinton, in of closing the jaws .- New York News. | Science.

The Seat of the Soul.

Understanding by "soul" the highest intellectual faculties, it is worth considerable trouble to find out where these functions are located. Savages believe that it is in the liver or the heart; cynics suggest that it is in the stomach; phrenologists place them in the front part of the brain; but the most advanced physiologists are now inclined to teach that the posterior cerebral lobes have the highest intellectual value. Dr. C. Clapham's arguments to this effect are quoted with approval in the "Centralblatt fur Anthropologie" (1898, Heft 4). These arguments are that man has the most highly developed posterior lobes, and this is conspicuous in men of marked ability and in the highest races. In idiots the lobes are imperfectly developed, and in chronic dementia these portions of the brain reveal frequent lesions. Numerous authorities or cobra it is very different, the are quoted in support of these and

DISCONTENT AT SANTIAGO.

Dissatisfaction With the Government. Santiago, Cuba (By Cable) .- Between 2000 and 3000 men have been suddenly thrown out of work in the Province of Santiago-over 700 in the immediate neighborhood of this city. Although Governor-General Brooke has wired $30,000 required for the February pay rolls, there is still a deficit of nearly $20,000; and the orders from Havana still hold good limiting the expenditure during the month of March for the entire province to $10,000. Mayor Bacardi has cabled the Governor General desiring to know what he is expected to do with such a large number of men suddenly thrown out of work, "Though we are perfectly friendly to the Americans," he said in the dispatch, "the present policy seems suicidal; for public improvements are greatly needed, and the men also are greatly in need of work." Major-General Wood, Military Governor, refuses to make any further statement than that he will obey orders. Groups of men, on street corners, in clubs, and in cases, openly abuse the American Administration, saying that the Spanish was infinitely preferable, as in the worst times, during peace, considerable more men were engaged in public works under the old regime than are now so employed. Cubans who affect to be cognizant of the whole situation, say it will be quite impossible to avoid an outbreak of some sort.

NEW TREATY WITH ENGLAND,

Senate Ratifles an Agreement Relating to the Property of Deceased Citizens.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Special) .- The Senate Committee on Foreign Relation on Friday agreed to report favorably a treaty be-tween the United States and Great Britain sent to the Senate by the President.

The treaty regulates the descent of property of citizens of this country who die in Great Britain and of British subjects who die in the United States. It provides that property in such cases shall be disposed of as if the person deceased should die in his own country, and gives administrators, ex-ecutors, etc., three years in which to settle estates. The Senate in executive session ratified the treaty.

TRAIN SAVED BY A SHIRT. Red Undergarment Used to Flag an Express in Danger.

WILKESBARRE, Penn. (Special). - John Milata, who lives close to the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad, between Cranberry and Long Run Junction, stopped an ex-press a law nights ago near his home by waving his red undershirt at the engineer.

Milata saw a cave-in in the track a short time previous and hurriedly divested himself of the flaming garment to use it as a signal of danger, thereby saving the train from plunging into the chasm, which was caused by a break in the Cranberry mine.

WANTED—Case of bad health that R-I-P-A-N-S will not benefit. Send 5 cts. to Ripans Chemical Co., New York, for 10 samples and 1000 testimonials, Keep Warm by Breathing. The simplest way to get warm after exposure to cold is to take a long breath with the mouth firmly shut. Repeat this several times until you begin to feel the heat returning. It requires a very short time to do this. The long breath quickens the pulse and thus causes the blood to circulate faster. The blood flows into all parts of the veins and arteries and gives out a great deal of heat. It is stated that this method of deep breathing prevents colds and a great many other ailments if begun in time.

Links With the Past.

Here is an addition to your interesting list of "links with the past." A relative of mine was talking the other week to an old man who had seen Sir Walter Scott (at the great Carter-haugh football match in the year of Waterloo). Sir Walter himself, in writing of his mother's remarkable knowledge of past times, says: "She had often spoken to a person who perfectly recollected Cromwell's entry in to Edinburgh." Here, therefore, we have a "link" between 1899 and 1650. -London Spectator.

Last year there were in New South Wales 3422 full-blood aboriginals and 3663 half-castes. Twelve years back the full-bloods numbered slightly more than double the half-castes, but since then they have decreased at an annual average rate of 150, against an average annual increase of eighty-sit half-castes.

The Dog and His Chum.

Friendships between human beings, too, are shown and strengthened by little deeds of thoughtful kindness, like this one reported by the Burlington Free Press:

A very ordinary-looking farm horse harnessed to an old wagon stood by the curb, and on the board that served for a seat lay a small dog of such mixed blood that no guess can be made as to his breed.

As a delivery wagon passed on the opposite side of the street a large red apple fell off. Before it stopped rolling the dog bounded across the street, picked it up with his teeth, and with tail wagging rushed back to the horse, in front of which he stood up on his hind legs while the apple was taken from his mouth.

As the horse munched the apple he made the peculiar little noise that horses make when petted, and doggie replied with throaty little barks which plainly told what a pleasure it had been to go after that apple. Then he went back to his nap on the wagon-

A Loud-Voiced Telephone.

French scientific journals describe a new telephone, invented by M. Pierre Germain, of Paris, which is capable of being heard a quarter of a mile away, when used in connection with a phonograph. With the ordinary receiver, it is said, this telephone "speaks" so loudly as to startle people walking in the street a hundred yards distant.

General Hale's Brigade Advances Toward San Tolan and Mariquins, and Dislodges the Enemy.

A CUNBOAT ASSISTS IN THE ATTACK

Natives Secure New Supplies of Smokeless Ammynition and Prepare For an Attack.

Manila, Philippine Islands (By Cable) .-An advance was made Monday morning by General Hale's brigade on San Tolan and Mariquina. The Americans met with resistance from the largest body of the natives they have yet encountered.

The Colorado, Nebraska and Wyoming regiments, with eight guns; the Utah Regiment and two companies of the Oregon regiment were engaged. A gunbont also took part in the fighting. The Twentieth Infantry was held in reserve.

The fighting spread to General Wheaton's brigade, consisting of the California, Washington and Idaho volunteer regiments and the Sixth Artillery.

The natives were dislodged from their positions and compelled to retreat. Eight Americans were wounded. All the native buts have been destroyed at Mariquina, and the country there is pretty well cleared. Apparently the rebels have secured a new supply of smokeless ammunition recently, as there has been a noticeable difference during the last few days.

The rebels, anticipating an American advance, are busy in throwing up defenses in every direction, and it is reported that they are levying men and supplies in every province. As a result great dissatisfaction prevails among the tribes ordinarily unfriendly to the Tagalos, particularly among the Ilocanos, who assert their defined a specific to convening the Tagalos. sire to assist in conquering the Tagalos, if furnished with arms.

Nineteen vessels, with an aggregate of 297 officers, 2990 men and 253 marines make up the naval contingent.

A FILIBUSTERING FAILURE:

An Expedition From Kansas City Stranded in New Orleans.

NEW OBLEANS, La. (Special) .- One hundred and twenty-five men reached New Orleans a few days ago, received a bright new quarter each and were told to go and find dinner. It was the much-talked-of filibustering expedition. In the even-ing the same men were assembled and told that all who desired would be sent back to Kansas City, as the expedi-tion had failed. The party was made up in Kansas City, and a fine class of men rushed headlong into a scheme without rushed headlong into a scheme, without even knowing what particular republic they were to overthrow, or what rich country was to be given over to their pil-lage. The finances of the company came from some mysterious source.

Contracts had been made with the Macheta Line in this city to carry 110 men to Honduras, but the company abrogated the contract and left the crowd stranded, without officers, and with only a little money. Over half of the men went back and the rest decided to remain in New Orleans, rather than face the humorous outgivings of their friends in Kansas. The men are a fine-looking lot, and would have made an excellent showing in any army.

A TRACEDY IN INDIANA.

Double Murder, Suicide and Arson at Poseyville.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (Special) .- A double nurder and suicide took place at Poseyville a few days ago. Mrs. Elizabeth Konobloe, a wealthy widow of Posey County, lived with her son-in-law, Steve Glowser and his wife. On the day of the tragedy the Konchloe home was discovered in flames, and neighbors attempting an en-trace found the doors locked. When the fire was finally extinguished and the house entered, the bodies of Mrs. Kenchloe, Glowser and his wife were found in a room so badly burned as to be almost unrecognizable. Besides Glowser lay a shotgun. From all indications Glowser first killed his wife and mother-in-law, then saturated the room with oil and set the house on fire, and lay down upon the bed and shot himself just above the heart.
