LIVING IN CHRIST.

Dr. Talmage Speaks of the Benefits of a Religious Existence.

How It Makes Its Devotees Happier—Practical Religion the Friend of Longevity—Gospel of Everyday Life.

(Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.)
Washington, Feb. 18.

This sermon of Dr. Talmage presents a gospel for this life as well as the next and shows what religion does for the prolongation of earthly existence; text, Psalm xcii., 16: "With long life will I satisfy him."

Through the mistake of its friends religion has been chiefly associated with sickbeds and graveyards. The whole subject to many people is odorous with chlorine and carbolic acid. There are people who cannot pronounce the word religion without hearing in it the clipping chisel of the tombstone cutter. It is high time that this thing were changed and that religion instead of being represented as a hearse to carry out the dead should be represented as a chariot in which the living are to triumph.

Religion, so far from subtracting from one's vitality, is a glorious addition. It is sanative, curative, hygienic. It is good for the eyes, good for the ears, good for the spleen, good for the digestion, good for the nerves, good for the muscles. When David, in another part of the Psalms, prays that religion may be dominant, he does not speak of it as a mild sickness or an emancipation or an attack of moral and spiritual cramp. He speaks of it as "the saving health of all nations," while God in the text promises longevity to the pious, saying: "With long life will I satisfy him."

The fact is that men and women die too soon. It is high time that religion joined the hand of medical science in attempting to improve human longevity. Adam lived 930 years. Methuselah lived 969 years. As late in the history of the world as Vespasian there were at one time in his empire 45 people 135 years old. So far down as the sixteenth century Peter Zartan died at 185 years of age. I do not say that religion will ever take the race back to antediluvian longevity, but I do say that the length of human life will be greatly improved.

It is said in Isaiah lxx., 20: "The child shall die a hundred years old." Now, if, according to Scripture, the child is to be a hundred years old, may not the men and women reach to 300 and 400 and 500? The fact is that we are mere dwarfs and skeletons compared with some of the generations that are to come. Take the African race. They have been under bondage for centuries. Give them a chance and they develop a Toussaint l'Ouverture. And if the white race shall be brought out from the serfdom of sin what shall be the body? What shall be the soul? Religion has only just touched our world. Give it full power for a few centuries, and who can tell what will be the strength of man and the beauty of woman and the longevity of all?

My design is to show that practical religion is the friend of longevity; I prove it, first, from the fact that it makes the care of your health a positive Christian duty. Whether we shall keep early or late hours, whether we shall take food digestible, or indigestible, whether there shall be thorough or incomplete mastication, are questions very often referred to the realm of whimsicality, but the Christian man lifts this whole problem of health into the accountable and the divine. He says: "God has given me this body, and he has called it the temple of the Holy Ghost, and to deface its altars or mar its walls or crumble its pillars is a God-defying sacrilege." He sees God's calligraphy in every page—atomical and physiological. He says: "God has given me a wonderful body for noble purposes." That arm with 32 curious bones welded by 46 curious muscles, and all under the brain's telegraphy—350 pounds of blood rushing through the heart every hour—the heart in 24 hours beating 100,000 times, during the same time the lungs taking in 57 hogsheads of air, and all this mechanism not more mighty than delicate and easily disturbed and demolished.

The Christian man says to himself: "If I hurt my nerves, if I hurt my brain, if I hurt any of my physical faculties, I insult God and call for dire retribution." Why did God tell the Levites not to offer to Him in sacrifice animals imperfect and diseased? He meant to tell us in all the ages that we are to offer to God our very best physical condition, and a man who through irregular or glutinous eating ruins his health, is not offering to God such a sacrifice. Why did Paul write for his cloak at Troas? Why should such a great man as Paul be anxious about a thing so insignificant as an overcoat? It was because he knew that with pneumonia and rheumatism he would not be worth half as much to God and the church as with respiration easy and feet free. An intelligent Christian man would at night and pray and ask God's protection while at the same time he kept the windows of his bedroom tight shut against fresh air. He would just as soon think of going to the top of his house and leaping off and then praying to God to keep him from getting hurt. Just as long as you refer this whole subject of physical health to the realm of whimsicality, or to the pastry cook, or to the butcher, or to the baker, or to the apothecary, or to the clothier, you are not acting like a Christian. Take care of all your physical forces—nervous, muscular bone, brain, cellular tissue—for all you must be brought to judgment.

Smoking your nervous system into fidgets, burning out the coating of your stomach with wine logwooded and strychnined, walking with thin shoes to make your feet look delicate, pinched at the waist until you are nigh cut in two, and neither part worth anything, groaning about sick headache and palpitation of the heart, which you think came from God, when they came from your own folly.

What right has any man or woman to deface the temple of the Holy Ghost? What is the ear? Why, it is the whispering gallery of the human soul. What is the eye? It is the observatory God constructed, its telescope sweeping the heavens. So wonderful are these bodies that God names his own attributes after different parts of them. His omniscience—it is God's eye. His omnipresence—it is God's ear. His omnipotence—it is God's arm. The upholstery of the midnight heavens—it is the work of God's fingers. His life-giving power—it is the breath of the Almighty. His dominion—"the government shall be upon his shoulder." A body so divinely honored and so divinely constructed—let us be careful not to abuse it.

When it becomes a Christian duty to take care of your health, is not the whole tendency toward longevity? If I toss my watch about recklessly and drop it on the pavement and wind it up any time of day or night I happen to think of it and often let it run down while you are careful with your watch and never abuse it and wind it up just at the same hour every night and put it in a place where it will not suffer from the violent changes of atmosphere, which watch will last the longer? Common sense answers. Now, the human body is God's watch. You see the face of the watch, but the beating of the heart is the ticking of the watch. Oh, be careful and do not let it run down!

There are aged people who would have been dead 25 years ago but for the defenses and the equipoise of religion. You have no more natural resistance than hundreds of people who lie in the cemeteries to-day, slain by their own vices. The doctors made their case as kind and pleasant as they could, and it was called congestion of the brain or something else, but the snakes and the blue flies that seemed to crawl over the pillow in the sight of the delirious patient showed what was the matter with him. You, the aged Christian man, walked along by that unhappy one until you came to the golden pillar of the Christian life. You went to the right; he went to the left. That is all the difference between you. Oh, if this religion is a protest against all forms of dissipation, then it is an illustrious friend of longevity. "With long life will I satisfy him."

Suppose you had a supernatural neighbor who came in and said: "Sir, I want you to call on me in every exigency. I am your fast friend; I could fall back on $20,000,000; I can foresee a panic ten years; I hold the controlling stock in 30 of the best monetary institutions of this country; whenever you are in any trouble call on me and I will help you; you can have my money and you can have my influence; here is my hand in pledge of it." How much would you worry about business? Why, you would say: "I'll do the best I can, and then I'll depend on my friend's generosity for the rest."

Now more than that is promised to every Christian business man. God says to him: "I own New York and London and St. Petersburg and Peking and Australia and California are mine; I can foresee a panic a thousand years; I have all the resources of the universe; and I am your fast friend; when you get in business trouble or any other trouble, call on me and I will help you; here is my hand in pledge of omnipotent deliverance." How much should that man worry? Not much. What lion will dare to put his paw on that Daniel? Is there not rest in this? Is there not an eternal vacation in this?

"Oh," you say, "here is a man who asked God for a blessing in a certain enterprise, and he lost $5,000 in it. Explain that." I will. Yonder is a factory, and one wheel is going north, and the other wheel is going south, and one wheel plays laterally, and the other plays vertically. I go to the manufacturer, and I say: "O manufacturer, your machinery is a contradiction. Why do you not make all the wheels go one way?" "Well," he says, "I make them to go in opposite directions on purpose, and they produce the right result. You go downstairs and examine the carpets we are turning out in this establishment, and you will see." I go down on the other obliged to confess that, though the wheels in that factory go in opposite directions, they turn out a beautiful result, and while I am standing there looking at the exquisite fabric an old Scripture passage comes into my mind: "All things work together for good to them who love God." Is there not rest in that? Is there not tonic in that? Is there not longevity in that?

Suppose a man is all the time worried about his reputation. One man says he lies, another says he is stupid, another says he is dishonest, and half a dozen printing establishments attack him, and he is in a great state of excitement and worry and fume and cannot sleep. But religion comes to him and says: "Man, God is on your side. He will take care of your reputation. If God be with you, who can be against you?" How much should that man worry about his reputation? Not much. If that broker who some years ago in Wall street, after he had lost money, sat down and wrote a farewell letter to his wife before he blew his brains out—instead of taking out of his pocket a pistol, he had taken out a well-read

New Testament, there would have been one less suicide. O nervous and feverish people of the world, try this Almighty sedative. You will live 25 years longer under its soothing power. It is not choral that you want or morphine that you want. It is the Gospel of Jesus Christ. "With long life will I satisfy him."

Again, practical religion is a friend of longevity in the fact that it removes all corroding care about a future existence. Every man wants to know what is to become of him. If you get on board a rail train, you want to know at what depot it is going to stop. If you get on board a ship, you want to know into what harbor it is going to run, and if you should tell me you have no interest in what is to be your future destiny I would in as polite a way as I know tell you I did not believe you. Before I had this matter settled with reference to my future existence the question almost worried me into ruined health. The anxieties men have upon this subject put together would make a martyrdom. This is a state of awful unhealthiness. There are people who fret themselves to death for fear of dying.

I want to take the strain off your nerves and the depression off your soul, and I make two or three experiments. Experiment the first: When you go out of this world, it does not make any difference whether you have been good or bad, or whether you believed truth or error, you will go straight to glory. "Impossible," you say. "My common sense as well as my religion teaches that the bad and the good cannot live together forever. You give me no comfort in that experiment." Experiment the second: When you leave this world, you will go into an intermediate state where you can get converted and prepared for Heaven. "Impossible," you say; "as the tree falleth, so it must lie, and I cannot postpone to an intermediate state that reformation which ought to have been effected in this state." Experiment the third: There is no future world. When a man dies, that is the last of him. Do not worry about what you are to do in a future state of being; you will not do anything. "Impossible," you say. "There is something that tells me that death is not the appendix, but the preface; there is something that tells me that on this side of the grave I only get started and that I shall go on forever. My power to think says forever, my affections say forever, my capacity to enjoy or suffer forever."

Well, you defeat me in my three experiments. I have only one more to make, and if you defeat me in that I am exhausted. A mighty one on a knoll back of Jerusalem one day, the skies filled with forked lightnings and the earth filled with volcanic disturbances, turned His pale and agonized face toward the Heavens and said: "I take the sins and sorrows of the ages into my own heart. I am the expiation. Witness earth and Heaven and hell, I am the expiation." And the hammer struck Him and the spears punctured Him, and Heaven thundered, "The wages of sin is death!" "The soul that sinneth it shall die!" "I will by no means clear the guilty!" Then there was silence for half an hour, and the lightnings were drawn back into the scabbard of the sky and the earth ceased to quiver and all the colors of the sky began to shift themselves into a rainbow woven out of the falling tears of Jesus, and there was red as of the bloodshedding and there was blue as of the bruising and there was green as of the Heavenly foliage and there was orange as of the day dawn. And along the line of the blue I saw the words, "I was bruised for their iniquities." And along the line of the red I saw the words, "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." And along the line of the green I saw the words, "The leaves of the tree of life for the healing of the nations." And along the line of the orange I saw the words, "The day-spring from on high hath visited us." And then I saw the storm was over, and the rainbow rose higher and higher until it seemed retreating to another Heaven, and planting one column of its colors on one side the eternal hill and planting the other column of its colors on the other side, and behold, there

There is the river of life, from under the throne of God, clear as crystal, and the sea of glass mingled with fire. Do you want music? There are the oratorio of the "Creation," led on by Adam, and the oratorio of the "Red Sea," led on by Moses, and the oratorio of the Messiah, led on by St. Paul, while the archangel, with swinging baton, controls the 144,000 who make up the orchestra.

Do you want reunion? There are your dead children waiting to kiss you, waiting to embrace you, waiting to twist garlands in your hair. You have been accustomed to open the door on this side the sepulcher; I open the door on the other side of the sepulcher. You have been accustomed to walk in the wet grass on the top of the grave; I show you the underside of the grave. The bottom has fallen out, and the long ropes with which the pallbearers let down your dead let them clear through into Heaven. Glory be to God for this robust, healthy, religion! It will have a tendency to make you live long in this world, and in the world to come you will have eternal life. "With long life will I satisfy him."

THE PRESENT CENTURY.

It Has Seen the Largest Number of Great Men Ever Living at One Time.

It is certain that there is no period to rival the first years of the nineteenth century in its number of great men, no period even to compare with it except the fifth century before the Christian era. In the year 1821, the year in which Napoleon died, the following were alive: In literature, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Coleridge, De Quincey, Wordsworth, Lamb, Landor, Tennyson, the three Brontes, Victor Hugo, Heine, Goethe, Holmes, Dickens, Thackeray, Clough and Blake. Among soldiers were living the duke of Wellington, Napoleon and Moltke, besides a number of great generals who had either seen the Napoleonic wars or were to see the Crimea and the Indian mutiny. Among the philosophers and men of science were Hegel, Darwin, the two Herschels, Owen, Cuvier, Daguerre, Wheatstone, Faraday and Simpson. The painters included Wilkie, Landseer, Turner and Meissonier. Medelssohn, Beethoven and Wagner represented music. Lesseps, Brunel, the two Stephansons represented engineering. Among statesmen or orators were Gladstone, Bright, Bismarck, Russell, Cavour, Garibaldi, Abraham Lincoln, Thiers and Victor Emmanuel. Among historians were Grote, Niebuhr, Mommsen and Guizot; and of a countless host of men who were famous in other directions were Sir Richard Burton, Speke, Le Verrier, Rowland Hill, Cornelius Vanderbilt, John Walter, Wilberforce and Macaulay.

LIVE STOCK AN EXCELLENT DEVICE.

Non-Freezing Arrangement for Watering Hogs That is Superior to Most Patented Troughs.

The hog waterer illustrated is a home-made affair, but is superior to any patent trough or waterer I ever saw. Its cost is but little. It is made of two barrels, Figs. 1 and 2, a section of piping, a tin float and a valve that can be bought at any hardware store.

The barrel, Fig. 1, receives the water from the well. It is set into the ground with the rim just above the surface. The float, a, can be made by a tinner and should be of galvanized iron so that it will not rust out. It should be about 10 inches in diameter and 4 inches es thick. An iron rod, b, is fastened to the bottom of this float and connects with the valve at the bottom, which closes the supply pipe when the barrel is filled. The escape pipe, c, leads from this barrel to the watering barrel, Fig. 2. It will be readily seen that the water in the barrels, if they are set on a level, will remain the same.

For the top of the watering barrel, bolt 2x4 blocks together, as shown in Fig. 3. This will give the hogs and pigs free access to the water without any danger of the smaller ones falling in and being drowned. The supply pipe and also the pipe leading to the trough from the barrel containing the float will be far enough below the surface to prevent freezing, and it will be found that there are few nights cold enough in winter to freeze the watering barrel if it is placed so deep in the ground that no more than an inch or two projects above the surface. The other barrel, which can be placed outside the pen, can be protected by banking with straw or manure and hay. The supply reservoir must be higher than the barrels, a large tank being suitable. The pipe where it leaves the tank enters the ground at once and can readily be protected from freezing.—Orange Judd Farmer.

LIVE STOCK ON FARMS.

Conservative Estimate Furnished by the Statistician of the Agricultural Department.

The statistician of the department of agriculture has completed his annual estimate of the number and value of live stock on farms. Returns from more than 50,000 correspondents show that January 1 there were on the farms of the United States 13,537,524 horses, 2,086,027 mules, 16,292,360 milch cows, 27,610,054 other cattle, and 41,883,065 sheep. This is a decrease of 127,783 in the number of horses, of 48,186 in that of mules, and 384,171 in that of cattle other than milch cows. On the other hand, it is an increase of 302,245 in the number of milch cows, and of 2,768,612 in that of sheep.

The department has made no estimate of the number of swine, but will await the enumeration to be made by the United States census in June next.

There has been an increase in value during the years averaging $7.21 per head in the case of horses, $8.60 per head in that of mules, $1.94 per head in that of milch cows, $2.18 per head in that of other cattle, and 18 cents per head in that of sheep. This represents a total increase in value during the year of nearly $216,000,000, exclusive of a manifestly considerable, but not definitely ascertained, increase in the value of swine. The total increase in the value of the farm animals of the United States during the last three years exceeds $570,000,000. Farm horses have increased in value $151,000,000; mules, $19,000,000; milch cows, $146,000,000; other cattle, $181,000,000; sheep, $56,000,000, and swine about $20,000,000.

How to Care for Sheep.

There are two things that the sheep need as much as any animals on the farm. They need fresh air and they need exercise. The sheep shed should be so built that when it rains or snows so that the sheep cannot take their daily run in the field the windows or upper-half doors can be opened to allow the fresh air to enter freely. If they have not been shorn they will not feel the cold, and only those who grow winter lambs shear in the fall. But whenever the weather is suitable they should have a run out in the field, not a yard bare of grass, and filled with mud and manure, but in an open field. Even in a damp day they may be out for a short time, but not long enough to get their wool wet through. The unbusiness of sheep when in a pasture shows their need of exercise. They will not eat and lie down as a cow does, and some of the smaller breeds are almost as ready to jump on a wall for the fun of jumping as goats are.—American Cultivator.

The sheep eats almost everything which grows, but because the sheep is the champion farm scavenger is no reason why he should have no better fare than weeds and briars.

HOW DUELING WAS STOPPED.

The Arrival of a Man Who Could Shoot Made the Pastime Unpopular.

Years ago in a western frontier town, says the New York Tribune, a traveler, footsore and weary, arrived one afternoon and made his way down one street of the burg. He was suddenly startled by the sounds of shots and, looking up, discovered four men shooting at one another. The men were standing at the four corners of an imaginary square and each shooting at the man catcorner to him. Being in what he supposed a safe position, he paused to watch the outcome of the fray, when a bullet, going wide of its intended mark, cut by his ear. That aroused his wrath, and, drawing his pistol, he dropped him. Another bullet flying wide from its mark, but near to the stranger, caused him to lay out one of the other pair, and the two remaining men sought safety in flight.

In that particular town duels had been previously comparatively harmless amusements, owing to the poor marksmanship of the opponents, but the man who could shoot had arrived, and the inhabitants, although they turned out to greet him in a body and grant him the freedom of the city, did so in manifest awe and trepidation.

Whenever he told the story afterward he used to wind up impressively by saying: "And, boys, in that town after that they went around me as if I had been a swamp."

Good Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a popular baker of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with coughs or whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children, as it contained no opium or harmful drug." Sold by Banker.

The L. T. L. meeting at Mrs. Sharpsteen's was a very pleasant affair. This active young people's society hold meetings once in two weeks, and are steadily gaining in numbers under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Nellie Tupper, now having 22 members. They have 50 good books on hand as the nucleus of a circulating library.

The W. C. T. U. held a social meeting at Mrs. Coon's on Tuesday, 34 being present including Mrs. Smith, president of the Genoa union. Many phases of temperance reform were discussed and an earnest desire for a better condition of things in our own town expressed. May these earnest workers succeed in creating a public sentiment that shall outlaw the liquor traffic.

Mrs. Helen Strong returned home Tuesday after a six weeks' absence at Ovid and Ithaca.

THE MANILA POLICE.

Many Filipinos Now Serve as Guardians of the Peace.

Perform Their Duties to the Satisfaction of Their Chief and Have Displayed Great Courage in Trying Circumstances.

Native police were an experiment once at Manila. Now they are a fixture. They carry their revolvers and wear their clubs in an independent manner, hold their heads high and wear yellow shoes with all the dignity one to the manner born. Col. Williston, the provost marshal, hesitated long time before he would permit natives to carry arms. But at last he yielded to Tiernan, who belongs to the 1st artillery by rights, and who is chief of police by virtue of his appointment and ability, persuaded the council to select a small number of natives to patrol the streets that were not as prominent as the Escolta and public as the Luneta.

Each policeman wears a cap, says the Chicago Record, and that gives him a military air. His uniform is tailor-made and fits him perfectly. The trousers are long enough to reach below the tops of yellow shoes and sometimes are stuffed inside the lacings. On the breast is a silver badge showing a number and precinct. The officers are designated much as they are in the army, either by stripes on the sleeves or straps on the shoulders. They travel out of their stations in twos, one walking along each side of the street. Some were assigned to the markets and others to public buildings which are patronized by the natives. The markets were great places for gambling, and may be yet, but that business is carried on under cover. Time was when the dice rattled and rolled out in the streets in broad daylight. Occasionally a native is arrested, however, and a Chinaman does not dare to show his face if he has ever been guilty of throwing the dice. The police seem to pay no attention to pitching pennies—in fact, they indulge in that pastime themselves. But the way the game is played in Manila it becomes one of skill rather than of chance.

One thing these uniformed men do is to keep the streets clean of all dirt and refuse. A garbage wagon daily comes along every street, the native driver rings a bell, and the householder is supposed to send a servant out with the day's accumulation from the kitchen and the stable. It is one of the duties of the police to see that the carabao cart is not kept waiting too long before a door. These men sometimes become oversensitive. Once, while driving along Calle Nuevo, I saw a policeman knock with his club at the window of a residence. The woman came to see what was wanted, and she was ordered to take from the front fence some clothing she was airing.

The men comprising the force are brave. They have been compelled to rush into houses where robbers were at work. More than one has been carried away to the hospital badly wounded in the fights which have followed. Besides this, they have the confidence of the natives and have been able to inform the officials of dangerous plots or the presence of insurgent agents.

All this has resulted in the appointment of more native policemen and the establishment of more stations. Col. Williston is satisfied that the experiment has proved a success. Among other things it shows that the work of reconstruction will be made easy, ability of the native to administer his own affairs.

Caarina's Cossack Shawl.

The czarina has a shawl which she values very highly. It was sent to her by the ladies of Orenburg, a town in southeastern Russia. It reached her in a wooden box, with silver hooks and hinges, the outside being embellished with designs of spears, turbans, whips, etc., on a ground of blue enamel, that being the color of the Cossack uniform. The shawl is about ten yards square, and exquisitely fine.

Obituary.
Katharin T. Barger, widow of Samuel S. Barger, died at her home near King Ferry on Sunday morning, March 18, 1900 aged 82 years. Funeral on Wednesday the 21st, Rev. W. C. Brass conducting services at the house. Interment in West Genoa cemetery. The deceased had been in her usual good health until within a few days, and even the day before her death was walking about. Indigestion, followed by acute stomach trouble and paralysis, appeared to be the immediate cause of her death. In a few hours she was unconscious and passed away without suffering. Only the close watchers about her could notice the change, and thus ended a long life, nearly all of which was spent in this immediate vicinity. She was a woman of very social disposition and although for some years failing health has prevented her from going out among her friends, those who came to her home were always warmly welcomed. The deceased was and had been for many years a member of the Presbyterian church and during all her trials, disappointments and bereavements her faith never wavered. She was the daughter of Ebenezer Allen who lived in the adjoining town and the oldest of a family of seven children of whom Nicholas T. Allen of Ludlowville, N. Y., and Susan J. Allen of Ithaca, N. Y., are the only survivors. Her two children, Harriet J. Barger and Jerome G. Barger have always lived with her or near her. They both live to mourn her loss. The passing years have made the mother aged and infirm and placed these children among the older men and women, but they have always been children to her, and she has ever felt and acted toward them with the same unselfish devotion and manifest interest. The door which always swings inward has again opened and shut. Another one has passed through. We have followed her to the very portal and can go no further. We must turn away and live with the memories only of that life which is past.

—The lecture course was auspiciously ended by the concert Tuesday evening. The usual large audience was in attendance and all were apparently well pleased. The Genoa orchestra and quartet, assisted by Miss Margery P. Keeler of Union Springs, soprano, Miss Lettie McAllister, pianist, and Ralph H. Ames, baritone, of DeRuyter, M. Conway, trombone, and A. E. Trea, viola, of Groton, rendered a varied program of thirteen numbers and ten encores. It proved to be a very good entertainment and several insisted that it was the best of the course.

—If you lend a man grass seed he is sure to come around later and borrow your lawn mower and if you allow your neighbor to borrow your copy of the TRIBUNE he or she will not miss many weeks without calling for it and carrying it away even before you have read it yourself. It is a cause of common complaint among subscribers, many of whom do not like to refuse the request, but at the same time feel annoyed and chagrined while they calmly look on and won-paper-borrowing nuisance. If it so happens that you are reading this while the man who pays the subscription is patiently waiting for you to return his paper just quietly break off the habit and drop into the office where subscriptions are received with pleasure. By so doing you will win the everlasting esteem and good will of your relieved neighbor.

—An authority says honey is one of the most healthful and nutritious foods besides being the daintiest and most delicious of sweets. It is said to be especially good for children and for people who lead sedentary lives, needing no digestion but being in fact an aid to digestion. One would think it should be more in demand than it is.

—While excavating on the farm of Thomas Henry on the Indian Field road, in the town of Scipio last week, some men exhumed two Indian skeletons, in sitting postures and completely preserved. One of the skeletons was that of a giant and measured three feet across the hips and was eight feet high. The lower jaw bone was of immense proportion. A number of Indian trinkets were found with the bodies.—Moravia paper, May 30, 1878.

—Apples growers whose orchards seem to be running out or dying prematurely may find an explanation of this unfortunate condition in Bulletin 163 of the New York Agricultural Experiment station (Geneva.) This bulletin treats of apple canker, a disease new to science but one which research and quite destructive in some sections and upon certain varieties. The disease is due to the same germ as that producing black root of the fruit. In this case, however, it attacks the trees. Great areas of bark become diseased sometimes girdling the limb or trunk, thus lessening the vitality or destroying the life of the tree. The investigation of the disease has been very interesting botanically, and the bulletin will be found of value to every grower of apples, pears or quinces. It will be sent free on application.

Concert Echoes.

The committee were delighted with the concert Tuesday evening, and feel that the Genoa Concert Co., are worthy of commendation and praise. The writer noted the remarks of the audience and nothing but comments of praise were expressed, in fact several remarked that it was the star of the course. I feel proud that I am a citizen of Genoa, and will say that the company ought not to have any hesitancy in responding to calls. When the committee called upon Dr Skinner to accept the fifth number, he laughed, saying they could not compete with traveling companies. But am pleased that he consented, for it has shown to the public that we have home talent that may be classed with any Bureau company. I know that each one of the committee has done his best to make the course a success and hope that the committee that shall be appointed for next year may have the co-operation of all so that they may secure the best talent.

THE AMERICAN HOG.

It Has Already Wrought Miracles, and Will Accomplish Many More Great Things.

Men have performed miracles. In old times it was not an uncommon thing for richly endowed men to perform wonders. And to-day men perform wondrous things, but as there are so many who have the same faculty the world is not stirred by their acts. There are wonder workers in the lower types of the animal kingdom. The hog has wrought miracles, is now performing them and ever will accomplish mighty things if his master will stand by him and feed him. The hog has contributed largely to the present commercial supremacy of the United States. Mortgages on thousands of western farms and New England homesteads have been banished by the hog. He is still in this laudable business, and the success that is attending his efforts is miraculous. His achievements in this direction have only been equaled by his usefulness in the kitchen. Hungry nations have fed on the swine; he is to-day their staff of life, to a large extent. Pork eaters are not uncivilized. The flesh of the hog contaminates no man, nor lowers his mental capacity unless man becomes a swine. Temperance in eating is as essential to high moral life as temperance in anything else, hence pork consumption should be regulated by gumption.

The hog is a reliable animal. His carcass is ever the coveted object of the pork dealer, who will pay a good price for a first-class article. At three cents per pound the hog has paid debts and his own keeping. At four cents and over he has built new homes, new fences, new barns, clothed children in destitute fields, contributed to charity, helped the poor, administered to the sick, heightened morality and sociability and blest abundantly his custodian.

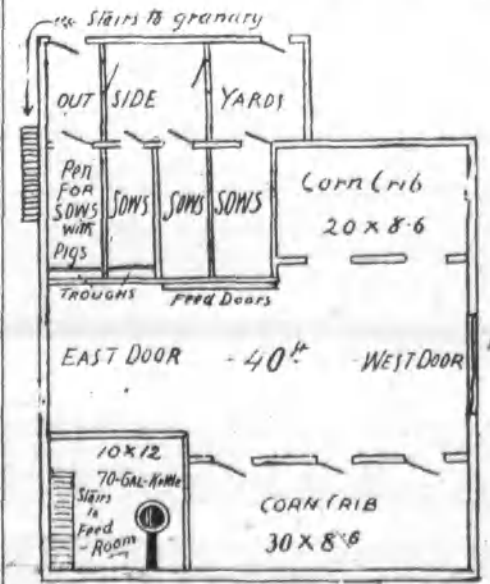

The hog is well advanced toward the fulfillment of his great destiny. What he has done is a reliable index to the large volume which contains the programme man has planned for his future. The swine has contributed to education by building schoolhouses, churches and subscribing for magazines and newspapers. His flesh feeds man, his blood fertilizes our land, his bones help grow poultry. He pays a large per cent. on the feed given him. Man never has lost by treating him well. He stands ever ready to ameliorate adverse conditions on the farm and if given care and attention will extricate farmers from the pit of debt and misfortune.

Mighty is the American hog!—Farmers Voice.

HANDY FARM BUILDING.

It is a Combination of Corn Cribs and Piggery, and Possesses Many Advantages.

My combined corn cribs and piggery is a very convenient arrangement. This cold winter weather my 70-gallon feed cooker comes in right handy. We warm or boil all our small potatoes and other vegetables, milk, etc., in it. The kettle is filled at night, a couple of chunks of wood thrown in, the fireplace closed tight and in the morning the feed is nice and warm. Also use the kettle to try lard, heat water to wash harness, etc. The slop barrel is in the recess back from the hoppers, out of the way in driving through the building.

The building has 14-foot posts, so there is a room over the cooking quarters as well as over the hoppers. For ground feed, I use oats and corn. There is a yard for fattening hogs at the west door and in it a platform for feeding corn. The building is 20x40 feet and has roller doors. The room over the cooking quarters, besides being used for tools and preparing feed, is also used for butchering. Hooks for harness cleaning are between the chimney place and stairway in the cooking room. The outside stairs, shown in the upper left hand corner, go to the granary over the hoppers, where ground feed is kept.—R. L. Holman, in Farm and Home.

HINTS FOR SHEPHERDS.

THE COOK'S FIRST CRABS.

She Had Never Tried to Cook the "Beasts" Before and Never Would Again.

"Here, Bridget," said the kind-hearted boarder, "are some crabs. I heard your mistress say that she was fond of them. Will you cook them for her?"

"Sure and I will," responded Bridget, taking the strong paper bag, containing the collection from the hand of the boarder.

"And it's much obliged the mistress'll be to you, sir," and Bridget started upstairs to show the prize to her mistress, who was ill in bed, while the boarder went to his room on the top floor.

Now it happened that Bridget, in the course of her varied cooking experiences, had never before come in direct contact with crabs. She supposed, very naturally, that the little beasts were dead, the same as the other animals had been which she had prepared for the tables of her various mistresses; and, consequently, she had not the slightest idea of the hideous crawling life contained in the bag, which she held so carelessly in her arms as she entered the room of her mistress. The crabs, however, were only abiding their time.

"Mum," she said, "here's a present the generous Top-Floor-Front gave me, with the direction that I be after cooking them for the mistress," and she held the bag close to her bosom by way of calling attention to their contents.

"What are they, Bridget?" inquired the mistress.

"Crabs," replied Bridget, with a broad grin. "Oh, it's a foim warm heart the Top-Floor-Front has, mum."

"Why, Bridget," said the mistress, anxiously watching her careless handling of the bag, "don't you know that crabs are alive and can pinch?"

"Sure, mum, and you'll be after making jolly, even if you are sick," and Bridget's smile broadened.

"Why, I've baked bushels of the darlint little beasties," and by way of showing her familiarity with the animals she opened the bag and thrust her nose into it to have a good look at them.

Now it happened that an exceedingly large, long-armed and strong-clawed revengeful old crab had pushed himself to the top of the pile within the bag. His black beady eyes caught sight of Bridget's plump nose. He did not know what it was, but it certainly looked as though it was made to pinch.

The nose came closer and closer. Suddenly, the long arm shot upward and the strong pinchers closed with a snap around the red end.

"Holy mither!!!" and with a yell that made the window panes rattle in the house across the street, Bridget leaped up into the air, hurling the bag of crustaceans violently from her; but not until another of the "darlint little beasties" had fastened hold on the little finger of her right hand and two more had gripped the neat white collar she always wore around her neck.

The bag fell on the bed, in front of the sick woman, burst open and about a dozen of the hideous crawlers started for shelter underneath the friendly bed clothes, while a couple made a scurry for the sick woman's long red hair, which was unfastened and lay on the pillow around her head, doubtless mistaking it for seaweed.

Never, in all history, sacred or profane, did a woman get out of bed as quickly as did the screaming mistress, and when she jumped she knocked the crabs sprawling in every direction all over the room.

The Top-Floor-Front and the French dancing master in the back hall room came downstairs, two steps at a time, and gallantly rushed to the ladies' rescue.

The instant they opened the door Bridget, with a yell that would have made the hair of a Comanche Indian stand on end, bounded out, knocking the little dancing master flat on his back, and made a dive for her bedroom in the basement. Fortunately the shock of the collision broke the hold of the crabs and they fell to the floor.

The mistress stood screaming on the top of the centertable, a fringe of crabs hanging to her nightgown and a couple dangling from her long red hair. The moment she caught sight of the kind-hearted boarder she fell fainting in his arms.

A HIDDEN LIGHT.

My Uncle Jim's a wonder:
He would know just what to do
In a military crisis—
Say, another Waterloo.
He could figure in a minute
How his side might win the day
And get out with banners flyin'—
But none ever came his way.

In political transactions
He has foresight rare and keen.
He would know what string to pull at
As he stood behind the scene.
In a "coo-ty-tah," I tell you,
Genius! That's what he'd display,
Changin' all the face of history—
But none ever came his way.

An' as fur financin' erin',
That is where his talent shines;
He knows how folks should handle
Railroad pools an' banks an' mines.
Puttin' through big undertakin's
S'ems to him a pastime gay.
He could fix 'em in a jiffy—
But none ever came his way.

Uncle Jim is livin' quiet
In his house behind the hill,
An' the world goes on without him
Missin' all his brains and skill.
War, diplomacy, finances
Would have felt his master sway
Had occasion ever offered—
But none ever came his way.

UNCLE PETER

By Kennett F. Harris.

THERE is a cheery old gentleman living in a western suburb who is wont to boast of the number of friends he has.

"Everybody likes me," he says, in his open, candid way, "and of course it's natural that they should. There ain't no good reason why they shouldn't like me, is there?"

Of course the person interrogated says there is no good reason and the old gentleman, recognizing in this an added tribute to his popularity, is much gratified.

"The only enemies I ever had were the people I've lent money to," he resumes. "Now, you're a friend of mine and I like you, just the same as you like me; but if you was to ask me to lend you $50 I'd tell you to go plump to Jericho—then I'd keep your friendship. S'posen I should lend you $50. Do you know what'd happen then? No, you don't need to tell me you'd pay it back promptly, just the way you said you would. I know all about that. No, sir!

"Well, mebbe you would and mebbe you wouldn't. Anyway, I ain't going to risk it. You're my friend now and it's the way I tell you: The only enemies I ever had in my life was people I lent money to."

It is the opinion of a nephew that the old gentleman never lent a copper penny in his life and that he is merely theorizing when he talks of the quenching effect of loans upon the sacred frame of friendship. At the same time he concedes that it is more than likely that his relation is right.

"I've given him the opportunity to verify his position in a practical way," said the nephew, one day. "But that was only when I was in a tight place.

WHERE HE COULD WATCH IT.

He said he would love to do it, but he wasn't going to lose the affection of his pet sister's only boy on account of a few paltry, dirty dollars. I told him that I would insert an "unwavering affection" clause in the note along with the interest and waiver of exemptions, but he couldn't see it. On the whole I'm glad he didn't. I went to a man who advertised that he assisted people of delicate sensibilities and cultured instincts. I didn't quite see what my instincts and sensibilities had to do with the case, but it seemed to me that I hit the requirements anyway, and I went to him.

"He soaked it to my delicate sensibilities at the rate of about 15 per cent. a month, and he made it rather unpleasant for me. He could raise the goose flesh on a man's cultured instincts beyond anybody I ever went up against, but after all I don't believe he was a marker to what Uncle Peter would be if a man owed him anything. I can imagine a man cherishing undying enmity toward Uncle Peter about 30 days after he had touched him for a five—supposing such a thing possible. You've heard father tell about the hoe, haven't you?"

The father of the nephew tells about the hoe quite frequently—or, rather, he begins to tell about it. His love for the venerable Uncle Peter has not been dimmed by any sordid squabble over that of his son, but it has been chipped at the edges in some other way apparently.

It appears that when Uncle Peter's beard was of a virile sandiness and long before his farm was surveyed and platted into town lots, with duly dedicated streets and alleys running along the rutabaga and cauliflower rows, he owned a hoe.

Speaking of the cauliflower reminds the nephew's father of the time Uncle Peter's hired man, Lem Jackson, was digging potatoes and threw some clods into the wagon along with the tubers.

He says that Uncle Peter threw the clods out again and exhorted Lem to be more particular and even to take time to knock off any dirt that might stick to "them taters."

"I paid $25 an acre for that dirt, Lem," he remonstrated. "Not only that, but I've spent a matter of $85 more for fertilizers since I took the place. What you throw into that there wagon don't do nobody no good. It don't hold it's shape long enough to pass for a tatur and get paid for as such; it just grinds up inter dust and shakes out of the wagon on the road to town."

Lem retorted: "Uncle Peter, don't you reckon you git even on that with what mud you bring in off the road in wet weather?"

The hoe had been bought at the store where the pleasant and umbrageous town of Lombard now is. When it was new Uncle Peter used to treat it like a fine-tempered razor. He never allowed a hired man to use it, and he used to bring it in with him from the field at noon and stand it up in the kitchen, where he could watch it while he ate his dinner. When the year's work was done he would give it a coat of axle grease to protect it from rust and then would lock it up in the tool-shed.

In course of time, however, the hoe grew dull, and Uncle Peter had to take a file to it. After the third filing he let Lem Jackson take it to hill up the beans, and Lem got tired and leaned on it too heavily.

Uncle Peter took it very hard. He told Lem he would just as soon have had him haul off and slap him in the face. The hired man offered to pay for the hoe, and Uncle Peter said that was the least he could do. He held back $1.65 of Lem's wages, figuring 15 cents for wagon hauling from Lombard. Then he nailed up the fracture in the handle and swathed it with wire, and handing it to Lem, told him to use it more carefully in future.

"I dunno but I ought to charge you fer my time a-fixin' it," remarked Uncle Peter.

The hired man said he'd like to know how he made that out, and "accordin' to the way he figgered the hoe belonged ter him."

"I ain't a-goin' to argyer with you about it," said Uncle Peter, with dignity. "The hoe's mine. I bought an' paid fer it. If it was your's I'd still be entitled to charge you for repairs, but I didn't say that I would charge you. I only said I ought to charge you—and so I ought. By gum! I b'lieve I will charge you."

"When you get a man that'll do things like that you've got a mighty mean man," said Uncle Peter's brother-in-law.

"I used to pity his women folks," he continued. "He had a rightine wife, and as savin' as a woman need be—but she wasn't saving enough for Peter. He'd go nosing around in the pantry and figuring with them on the laundry soap, and he'd pick up a scrap of something or another that he didn't think ought to be thrown out and pack it back into the house and say: 'See here, M'rier; these blamed spen'thrit ways of yours had ought to be quit.' At the same time he never got mad or mean before company. When there was company at the house, his wife told my wife once, she used to sit and just look at him and wonder if it could be that she was mistaken about him after all."

About this time something usually occurs to break the thread of the narrative. It seems to work the same way with the nephew, so that nobody in the suburb has ever heard the story of the hoe in its fullness. Both father and son start in good faith, but the temptation to digress is too much for them. They cannot resist telling about the time that Uncle Peter insisted on the utilization of the water in which Aunt Maria boiled the potatoes—how he insisted that potato soup was a palatable and nutritious article of diet, and would by no means be convinced that it was at least necessary to peel the potatoes before boiling them, holding the peeling of potatoes to be sinful waste. A hundred instances of their relation's frugality tempt them to daily in side paths from the straight and beaten track. The hoe has been filed down to a stub since it was last delivered to the hired man, and there is a rumor that a man in the subdivision named Wheeler was told that a neighbor came by night and borrowed it, but beyond that is nothing but the most vague surmise. It is agreed, however, that Uncle Peter is a pleasant, chatty old man. In fact, he seems to be liked outside of his family.—Chicago Daily Record.

WOMEN AND MINING.

A Number of Instances Which Show That Sex Is No Bar to Practical Prospecting.

Practically mining does not seem to suggest itself as a field in which women can achieve distinction, but the constantly increasing number of woman mine owners in Colorado and other mining states, proves that there is no reason why the women of the future will not compete with men on equal ground in this important department of industry, says the Denver Republican. Many mines in Colorado are owned by women and some are even directed by their feminine owners, who have quickly adapted themselves to the work.

Two or three years ago a school teacher, while spending her vacation in Arizona, located some promising claims through her knowledge of geology. She secured some good specimens, sold her locations in Denver, and then turned professional prospector. She has followed the business with persistence and intelligence, and is now making a most excellent livelihood, with good prospects of securing a fortune. A Seattle exchange recently recorded the sale of two groups of mines located by a woman in the Kalso (B. C.) district. The location had been made by the woman and she had stood by them for seven years until she finally negotiated a sale. She secured $125,000 as her share, the buyers being English and French capitalists.

Such instances prove that sex is no bar to practical prospecting, and in a few years the report of the labor commissioner may show the army of women workers materially increased by a large number of feminine mineralogists, chemists, prospectors and mine owners.

A Candid Publisher.

In the recent death of J. Schabelitz, the famous Zurich publisher and author, the world of art and letters has lost one of its extraordinary characters. He was a shrewd business man, an excellent linguist, a skillful writer, and probably the most savage publisher who ever lived. When he accepted the famous memoirs of Count von Arnim, he wrote on the postal card, with the acceptance, the proviso: "I reserve the right to correct your infernally bad grammar." To an aspiring poet who had submitted manuscript he answered by postal card: "I refuse to be disgraced by printing your doggerel. I don't return the copy because you didn't inclose enough postage. If you will send it, with the price of this card, I will send it to you, but I don't think the stuff is worth the expense on your part." One of his postal cards to a novelist read about as follows: "For Heaven's sake, come and take away the unnamable mass of paper you left here for me to look at." An ambitious historian was crushed by the following, written, like all his correspondence, upon a postal card: "You are making the mistake of your life. You don't want to study history. You want to learn how to write."—Saturday Evening Post.

Remarkable Cures.
The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with remarkable results each time. First with rheumatism in the shoulder, which was relieved by two applications of pain balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, rheumatism in the thigh, almost prostrating him with pain, was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment at night and getting up free from pain. An Ideal Philanthropist

Dr. D. K. PEARSONS, of Chicago

[Special Chicago Letter.]

NE of our American humorists the other day defined a philanthropist as "a man who spends his time inducing other people to spend their money for charity." This definition may be considered witty by some, and quite to the point by others, but it does not apply to the venerable Dr. Daniel K. Pearsons, of Chicago, who has up to this time given $2,500,000 to charity, and has but recently made the announcement that he would dispose of the rest of his fortune, amounting to $1,500,000, in the same way, keeping none of this end. Instead of continuing the practice of his profession—a slow and uncertain way of laying up earthly treasure—he engaged in the sale of farm lands in all parts of the state of Illinois, acting as the agent of eastern capitalists, western landowners and railroad corporations. After disposing of 1,000,000 acres on a percentage basis of five per cent, he found himself a well-to-do man, financially able to become interested in urban transportation enterprises and other commercial ventures. He bought Chicago city lots and improved property, invested in Michigan pine lands and dealt in logs.

Whatever he touched seemed to turn to gold. The hopes of his middle age had reached fruition; and in 1875 he entered upon his matchless career as a philanthropist, the city of Chicago being his first beneficiary. In that year the western metropolis, still suffering from the evil effects of the great fire, had reached the end of its credit. The tax levies were in dispute, all claims against the municipality were paid in depreciated scrip, and the eastern bondholders were clamoring for their pound of flesh. The city council thought seriously of repudiating the bonds, a proposition which was energetically opposed by Dr. Pearsons, who was then one of the aldermen from the First ward. On his own responsibility he went to New York and Boston, convened meetings of the bondholders and pledged his personal fortune for the redemption of the bonds. His reputation for honesty and integrity was so high in the east that the guarantee was gladly accepted; and he returned to Chicago the savior of the city's credit.

When Dr. Pearsons, way back in 1860, resolved to accumulate a fortune, he also made to himself a promise that the money so saved should be disposed of for the public good—during his own and his amiable wife's lifetime, if possible. How well this promise has been kept is evidenced by the fact that since 1860 he has given away fully $2,500,000.

vast wealth and reserving only an annuity of two per cent., or $30,000 per year, payable up to the death of himself and his wife.

Dr. Pearsons is now nearly four score years of age. He came to Chicago in 1860, from Chicopee, Mass., where he had practiced medicine for ten years and accumulated a nest egg of $5,000. His one ambition at that time, according to his own admission, was to get rich; and he worked in sea-

Danger Signals!

Do you take cold with every change in the weather? Does your throat feel raw? And do sharp pains dart through your chest?

Don't you know these are danger signals which point to pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption itself?

If you are ailing and have lost flesh lately, they are certainly danger signals. The question for you to decide is, "Have I the vitality to throw off these diseases?"

Don't wait to try SCOTT'S EMULSION "as a last resort." There is no remedy equal to it for fortifying the system. Prevention is easy.
