NEWS OF THE STATE

EVENTS IN AND OUT OF THE EMPIRE STATE.

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

It is stated that L. V. Main will soon build an addition to his store at Myers.

The Stickle farm, North Lansing, is to be occupied the coming season by Wm. Smith.

Ten thousand cabmen in Naples are on a strike, being opposed to the introduction of automobiles.

The trustees of Cazenovia offer fifty dollars reward for the conviction of any person mutilating shade trees.

The old song, "Shall we Gather at the River" must be familiar to the warriors in South Africa by this time.

Manager W. L. Wright of the Cornell baseball team has awarded the 1900 contract for suits and supplies to B. Rich.

Mrs. Lottie Sherman of Virgil was lodged in the county jail Wednesday, in default of bail on an arrest for cruelty to animals.

Dentistry is not new. A 4,000-year-old mummy has been discovered with filled teeth and the unpaid dentist's bill in his pocket.

The battleship Kearsarge has got her commission and joined the navy, four years and forty-eight days after the signing of the contract.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature making the office of supervisor a salaried one—$150, without any perquisites whatever.

Dr. Leslie E. Keeley, who attracted public notice by his origination of the famous Keeley gold cure for drunkenness, died in Los Angeles, Cal., on Feb. 21.

A bill has been introduced in the assembly by Mr. Martin, providing that farm laborers to whom wages are due, may have a lien on the crops or produce on the farm.

Tim Shinnick, for several years captain and manager of the Auburn baseball team, has signed to manage the Oswego team in the State league during the coming summer.

Russia demands that the Sultan of Turkey shall provide for the repatriation of the Armenians who, during the time of the persecutions, took refuge in the former country.

The village of Groton with one of the best waterworks systems in the country; the best of water and a system which is self-supporting, wonders why so many villages and cities have failed in such important ownership.

Rev. Robert Clements of Cuba, N. Y., has been called to succeed Rev. John T. Stone as pastor of the Presbyterian church of Cortland, Mr. Stone having been called to the pastorate of Brown Memorial church of Baltimore, to succeed Rev. Maltbie D. Babcock, D. D.

Lynn J. Arnold, surrogate of Otsego county, has just issued a booklet entitled, "Instructions to Executors and Administrators." Mr. Arnold, quick to appreciate the embarrassment that the average citizen experiences when entrusted with the care of an estate, has compiled plain, clear, concise instruction and, coming from such an authority, it will at once be recognized as useful and timely.

In its crusade against Olga Nethersole's "Sappho" the New York World has posed as an austere censor of morals, yet it gives over several columns of its paper each day to a verbatim report of the testimony in the case. This testimony, which is supposed to be private, is quite as harmful in the moral sense as anything in the play can be, but The World scatters it broadcast, where it will reach the eyes of many young people who would never think of visiting the theater to see "Sappho." The World is therefore a worse offender against public morality than Miss Nethersole.

At a special town meeting held in Greene to vote to raise by tax $1,000 to aid in the completion of a soldiers' monument, the proposition was voted down by a majority of one. The vote stood 145 against to 144 for.

An exchange says: "It may be well said that the time has come when boys must choose between a cigarette and employment of any kind. The boys who smoke cigarettes are not fitted for anything else."

Administrators of the estates of Frank M. Newton and Margaret M. Kennedy of Homer have brought suits against the Cortland & Homer Traction Company, to recover $30,000 damages each for their deaths in the trolley wreck caused by a collision with a D. L. & W. train on Nov. 9 last.

Coach Jennings of the Cornell baseball team has cut the candidates down to twenty-five men, preparatory to the Southern trip. He says the only scarcity of good material is a pitcher, but that he thinks the trip will develop some good men for that position from among the new material.

Talking about profit in poultry, an exchange tells of a farmer who gave his daughter two chickens and promised to feed the increase for four years provided she took care of them. She has $64 in bank, 200 chickens that he is buying feed for, and it looks as if she would own the farm at the end of four years.

A bill has been introduced into the assembly to increase the pay of the inspectors of election as follows: Inspector will receive $8 on days of registration and election day, and $7 for extra hours of election on canvass and count. The pay of poll and ballot clerks is also increased. Whether this effects all towns or only large cities we know not.

Admiral Dewey says frankly that the Nicaragua canal will need no fortifications. He thinks the navy will furnish a sufficient defense. We shall not always have Dewey with us, but his accomplishments and those of other naval heroes, Paul Jones and Oliver Hazard Perry, for instance, will always be inspiration enough to keep the United States navy manned with officers of ability and enthusiasm. Dewey's confidence in the navy is not misplaced.

A team of horses fell 30 feet in the Goodrich stone quarry at Auburn recently, and sustained but slight injuries. The horses were backed up to an embankment and the wagon cramped but before they could stop horses and wagon fell over the 30 foot wall into the quarry beneath. A cut in the left hind leg of one of the animals was the extent of their injuries but the wagon was demolished.

W. J. Roche of Scott, who is known in the northern portion of the county as the "cabbage king," informed a Standard man last week, that during the past season he raised over 250 tons of cabbage. He has already sold 200 tons, but still has on hand over fifty tons of the choicest picked heads on which he expects to realize $50 per ton. The entire crop was packed in racks and placed in a cool cellar, where it has kept in fine condition awaiting the highest market price. It will be remembered that Mr. Roche last year sold the last of his cabbages for $60 per ton.—Cortland Standard.

Michael Connelly, a Watertown man serving a 20-year sentence in Auburn prison for highway robbery, has fallen heir to an estate valued at $8,000 left him by his father. The property is to be held in trust for a period of five years following Connelly's discharge from prison. If at the end of that time he has behaved himself like a good citizen, he is to come in full possession. If otherwise the property is to go to the state of New York. Connelly has been a model prisoner and for a number of years has been employed as a runner in the main hall. His sentence expires in September.

A dispatch was received at Batavia last week to the effect that Ernest Kingdon of Stafford, Genesee county, who enlisted in the 40th volunteer infantry, has been found sleeping at his post, tried by court martial and sentenced to be shot. It is said a number of Filipino rebels entered the camp while Kingdon was asleep and killed two or three American soldiers.

The mock trial given by the Debating society at the High school building, Tuesday evening, was well attended. The case was that of The People against Carey Briggs for the alleged murder of one Adams in the town of Sennett. A mass of evidence for both the prosecution and defense was offered. In behalf of The People appeared Vance E. Avery and S. Edwin Boardman, while Benjamin Akin and Cornelius VanDuyne looked after the defense. The jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.—Moravia Republican.

A young bachelor sheriff of a neighboring county had an attachment to serve on a handsome young widow. He called and said: "Madam, I have an attachment for you." She blushed, and said the attachment was reciprocated. "You misunderstand," he said, "you must proceed to court." She said she knew it was leap year, but she'd rather he would do the courting. "Madam," he continued, "this is no time for trifling, the justice is waiting." "O, I prefer a minister," said she, "a squire married me the first time, and had bad luck." The finale has not been reported.

"The American Soldier in the Philippines," a notable article—at once an appreciation and a vivid, stirring picture of our boys in the field—has been written exclusively for The Saturday Evening Post (of Philadelphia) by Senator Albert J. Beveridge. Senator Beveridge writes as forcefully and as brilliantly as he speaks. A keen observer, with the faculty of grasping the thing of vital and human interest, what he has to say will interest every American. This great article, the first and only one that Senator Beveridge has written for any magazine or periodical since his return from the Philippines, appears exclusively in the March 17th number of The Saturday Evening Post.

A Correction.

An item in the Auburn papers this week was incorrect in stating that the Port Byron stage was the only one that made a trip every day last week. The King Ferry stage was the only one that made six trips last week, and the credit for the battle with the deep snow should be given where it is due, to the King Ferry stage driver.

Roof Gave Way.

The roof of two sheds in the rear of the Presbyterian church at King Ferry fell under the weight of snow and ice, Monday, with serious results. Atlas Atwater and F. Hollister had hitched their horses in the sheds and when the roof came down the two cutters were smashed to splinters and Mr. Atwater's horse was badly injured. A number of school children were in the shed a few minutes before the roof fell, but fortunately they had gone.

More Valuable Maps.

Another valuable addition to railroad literature has just been issued by the Passenger Department of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad. It is No. 5 of the "Four-Track Series," entitled "America's Winter Resorts," and its conception and execution are in keeping with the high standard which marks these publications.

No. 5 briefly illustrates and describes the principal winter resorts of America, including the great Southern resorts, Cuba, Puerto Rico, California and the Hawaiian Islands.

One of the striking features of this folder, however, is the series of maps in five colors, occupying one entire side. These maps are probably the finest of their kind ever published by a railroad. The center map shows North and South America, and is presented for the purpose of aiding the Pan-American Exposition, which is to be held at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1901. A profile outline of the Nicaragua and Panama Canals is also shown, giving elevations, location of locks, etc. The winter resorts of all sections of the United States, Cuba and Puerto Rico are indicated by a large red dot, the map of the Southern California resorts being on an enlarged scale. These maps are fully in keeping with the high standard of excellence established by the New York Central in this class of work, and being geographically correct, are valuable for reference, aside from being a guide to the resorts of America.

A copy of "Four-Track Series," No. 5, will be sent free, post-paid, on receipt of a one-cent stamp, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, New York Central Railroad, Grand Central Station, New York City.

A Magnificent Hotel

IN THE PINEY WOODS OF NORTH CAROLINA BUILT BY YANKEE MONEY.

Among the many Northern people making investments in the South is a prominent hotel man of New York, Mr. Charles St. John, who is owner of the High Point Inn of Port Jervis, N. Y., and owns the best conducted hotel in the Southern states, the Piney Woods Inn. It is located at Southern Pines, N. C., and is fitted up with every modern convenience. It is built in the center of a fifty-acre park of pines, and it is surprising how reasonable are the rates of board. The best of accommodation, including private bath rooms, is much less than what is charged by the majority of hotels that furnish much less accommodation, and this speaks well for Yankee business ability and pluck. Southern Pines is located on the Seaboard Air Line, which has its headquarters at 371 Broadway, New York. The Old Dominion Steamship Co. is especially interested in connecting with this great Southern Railway Company at Portsmouth, Va., and persons wanting to make a delightful trip to the South at a very small cost, are advised to go to Southern Pines by the Old Dominion route. General information can be obtained at the Old Dominion office in New York or at the S. A. L. office, 371 Broadway, New York. Mr. St. John is only one of thousands of good business men from the North who have gone to the South and settled on that live, progressive railroad, the Seaboard Air Line, which is offering more inducements to business men than any other road in the

The Adams Murder Case

An American "Cause Celebre."

(Special New York Letter.)
NO CASE in the history of American criminal jurisprudence has caused greater interest among the lawyers of all nations than that which ended in New York the other day in the conviction of Roland Burnham Molineux for the murder of Mrs. Kate J. Adams.

Told in brief, the history of the crime for which Molineux is to pay the death penalty is as follows: Mrs. Adams, a widow 52 years of age, died suddenly on Wednesday morning, December 28, 1898, at her home, No. 61 West Eighty-sixth street, New York, after taking what she thought to be a dose of effervescent salts used to relieve headaches. The physicians who attended her and the coroner's office were equally sure that she had died of one of the deadliest poisons known, cyanide of potassium. Interest was added by the fact that if the police theory should prove correct the poison was intended for Harry Cornish, physical director and manager of the Knickerbocker Athletic club, who received the package containing the poison as a Christmas gift. Cornish and Dr. Hitchcock, the first physician called in after Mrs. Adams was taken ill, both tasted the contents of the bottle and were seized with the symptoms of cyanide poisoning. Cornish boarded with Mrs. Adams and her daughter, a Mrs. Rogers, wife of an insurance agent. On Tuesday evening Cornish and the two women went to the theater, after which they had supper. The next morning Mrs. Adams complained of having a headache, and applied to Cornish for some bromo-seltzer. He gave some of the contents of the bottle to her. Mrs. Adams took a heaping teaspoonful in a glass of water. She was taken ill at once, and died in a few minutes after the physician arrived. The gift, which was received by Cornish on Christmas eve through the mail, was a silver medicine holder, with a small bottle, supposed to contain bromo-seltzer. The silver case was a match-holder, just large enough to hold the bottle. It was nearly noon before the death was reported to the coroner's office. Dr. Weston, of that office, went to the Adams house and secured what was left of the supposed bromo-seltzer. Analysis proved that the stuff contained a portion of cyanide of mercury.

A few days later a morning newspaper printed an article headed "The Police Want Roland B. Molineux," and so the defendant was first brought into the case. Molineux, while a member of the Knickerbocker Athletic club, a year before, had had serious misunderstandings with Cornish concerning athletic matters. In searching for enemies of Cornish, Molineux was picked out, and handwriting experts later testified that his writing corresponded with that on the poison package. The morning after the publication of his name in connection with the case Molineux, then a prominent society man, and his father, Gen. Molineux, a veteran of the civil war, presented themselves at the house of Capt. McClusky, chief of detectives, and the younger man asked if he was wanted. He was told he was not, and so the matter ended for a time.

ROLAND BURNHAM MOLINEUX.

Then the handwriting experts again compared the address with Molineux's writing, and pronounced it his. At the coroner's inquest the district attorney was instrumental in securing a verdict to the effect that Mrs. Adams came to her death through poison administered to her by Harry S. Cornish, the poison having been sent to him by Molineux.

The latter was arrested at once, and an indictment found against him, which, later on, was dismissed. A succeeding grand jury refused to indict, and Molineux was discharged, only to be rearrested at once on the charge of assaulting Cornish. Then there followed another long legal battle, and Molineux was again discharged and rearrested. He waived examination on the assault charge, and finally the July grand jury found an indictment against him in seven counts, for the murder by poison of Mrs. Adams. His trial was a long one, and ended in his being found guilty, his execution to take place in Sing Sing prison during the week of March 26.

Many notable lawyers are dissatisfied with the verdict and the conduct of the trial, which cost the state of New York $175,000, and which has financially ruined the Molineux family.

WILLIAM WALTER WELLS.

JUST TWO AUTHORS.

"REALLY, I feel much flattered," confessed Mary Bell Duncan to her aunt, Miss Mathilda Duncan. "This is, you may say, the first public recognition of my ability."

She flushed at the egotism of her words, and handed her aunt a printed circular which set forth the fact that the Writers' association intended to meet at Clinton, Ia., for purposes artistic and sociable, and Mary Bell Duncan, otherwise "Bryant Hawley," was invited as a representative western writer to be present.

Miss Mathilda Duncan, being a kindly woman, endeavored to appreciate the gratification of her niece. Writing had always seemed rather a singular and affected thing to her, especially in the line of fiction. She hadn't so much to say against history—that was well enough. She had not confessed to any of her neighbors that Mary Bell, who enjoyed the reputation of being a sensible girl, had taken up writing, and as she used a masculine name to hide her identity in writing, there seemed not much danger that she would be found out. Her stories, published in a number of well-known periodicals, had, as it transpired, attracted sufficient attention to cause the officers of the Writers' association to inquire of the magazines her true name and address, that she might be invited to participate in their literary convention.

"The thing that gives me the most pleasure in the matter," said Mary Bell that evening, "is that I shall almost certainly meet Helen Hepburn—you know I have spoken to you about her stories a number of times. She writes about the very things that I would choose to write about if I had the power, and in the way that I would like to do if I could. Sometimes, when I read what she has written, it seems to me that I must have written it myself. It will be a happy day for me when I meet her. I expect to take satisfaction in her acquaintances that I never have in the society of anyone else."

"I hope you will meet her," replied Miss Mathilda, just a trifle hurt. She knew she had not been just the person to raise an imaginative, sensitive, bookish girl, but she had done the best she could, and it was not pleasant to be reminded in this thoughtless way of her failure to fill that girl's intellectual needs. But she put vanity aside and saw Mary Bell off in all the splendor of her first tailor-made suit. Mary Bell's eyes were glowing and the face full of health and expectation.

"It is nice to be young," observed Miss Mathilda to herself, as she went home to prepare the pedigree of a hog she was to place on exhibition at the county fair.

All the way to Clinton Mary Bell's heart beat merrily. She was an author going to an authors' convention. How little the woman who sat in the seat next her guessed it! How far from suspecting it the young man who came in and took a seat beside her! He was a pleasant young man who looked like a commercial traveler. He had a handsome leather case with him—a dress suit case—though Mary Bell did not know it—which contained without doubt, so she said to herself, his samples. His large, round head, with its close-clipped hair, his hearty laugh and frank, direct manner, and his rough tweed suit marked him, somehow, as a knight of commerce.

"Could anything be more modern or more commercial?" observed the young author to herself. "How different the ideas he will offer me from those I shall get from Helen Hepburn when we meet." And with a view to enjoying the contrast, she kept up a vivacious conversation with the young man. Mary Bell had not had much social experience, but was possessed of a natural sense of politeness, so she endeavored to talk about things that would interest this engaging Philistine. She discoursed about her aunt's stock farm, and about the relation of trade to politics, and defended imperialism and sympathized with those who had to live on railroad trains and at eating houses.

"I once read a touching and beautiful story about a commercial traveler and a little boy; I think it was called 'The Nomad,' and it was written by a fellow of the name of Bryant Hawley. I always think of that story when I hear anyone sympathizing with the commercial traveler," said the young man. Mary Bell flushed with exquisite pleasure, for, of course, the story was her own. She endeavored to show her gratitude in a practical way by talking with the young man about his calling.

"What line do you carry?" she asked. "I—I beg your pardon?" stammered her companion.

"What house do you travel for?" "O—ah—h—h—a pencil house. But speaking of pencils, I don't know any writer today whose pencil I would rather hold than that of the same man I was speaking of—Bryant Hawley. I am convinced that if we were to meet we would prove the best of friends."

Mary Bell covered up her delighted embarrassment with a hasty remark.

"Do you sometimes feel that way about people, too?" she inquired. "Now, that is just the feeling I have about a certain woman unknown to me at present except through her beautiful work. I hope to have the great privilege of meeting her this afternoon, and I am ardently dreaming that she will like me as well as I like her."

"Ah!" said the young man, much interested. "Do you like to tell me her name?" "Indeed," cried Mary Bell, "I would rather speak her name than not. It is a distinguished one—it is Helen Hepburn."

For some reason that Mary Bell could not surmise this remark appeared to discomfit the young man exceedingly, though he did not look displeased, but conversation flagged between them. It seemed almost as if they had suffered some sort of a misunderstanding. At Clinton Mary Bell got her belongings together, and held out her hand to her companion as the train moved into the station. She desired to part good friends with him—he was certainly a delightful young man! What a pity, she thought, that we cannot keep within our knowledge the people we meet and choose. "Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing,

Only a signal shown and a distant voice in the darkness; So, on the ocean of life, we pass and speak one another— Only a look and a voice, then darkness again and a silence."

Some one came bustling up—evidently a member of the reception committee.

"Are you Miss Duncan? I thought so. Where's Mr. Denslow? We expected him on this train."

Mary Bell's companion raised his hat.

"That is my name, madam."

"So glad! Did you two travel down together? But perhaps not. Allow me, Miss Duncan—otherwise Bryant Hawley—Mr. Denslow—better known as Helen Hepburn."

The two bowed stiffly. They were distinctly embarrassed. They both blushed; then they laughed.

"Please get in this carriage," said the bustling lady; "I believe you are both to be entertained at the same house."—Chicago Tribune.

Remarkable Cures.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with remarkable results each time. First with rheumatism in the shoulder, which was relieved by two applications of pain balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, rheumatism in the thigh, almost prostrating him with pain, was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment at night and getting up free from pain. Southern Pines, N. C., is a newly established village on the Seaboard Air Line. Hundreds of northern people go there every winter and all seem pleased at the grand climate and the enterprise manifested on every hand. Piney Woods Inn, an elegant new hotel, offers splendid accommodations at very moderate rates and as a natural result is always crowded. You can buy excursion tickets to Southern Pines, so the fare costs but little, but it is always best to write ahead for accommodations at Piney Woods Inn.

Preparing veterinary medicine is a prominent feature of our prescription department. We do not slight such prescriptions simply because they are to be given to animals. Drugs of doubtful quality are not "good enough" at our store. This is why you should bring your veterinary prescription here Sagar Drug Store, Auburn.

Homes Wanted.

FAMILIES, both Catholic and Protestant, willing to offer a good home to a friendless boy or girl of any age from infancy to 10 years, and who will receive the child as a member of the family and give it such care and training as will fit it for a life of self-support and usefulness, are invited to correspond with State Charities Aid Association, 105 East 22d St., New York City

Religion of Ghosts.

I have in my house a book used in spiritualistic service. It contains a catechism and a hymn book. The catechism has these questions and answers:

Q. What is our chief baptism? A. Frequent ablation in water.
Q. What is our inspiration? A. Fresh air and sunshine.
Q. What is our love feast? A. Clear conscience and sound sleep.
Q. What is our prayer? A. Physical exercise.

And then it goes on to show that a great proportion of their religious service is a system of calisthenics. Then when they want to arouse the devotion of the people to the highest pitch, they give out the hymn on the sixty-fifth page:

The night hath gathered up her silken fringes.

Or, on the fifteenth page:

Come to the woods, heigh ho!

"But," says some one, "wouldn't it be of advantage to hear from the future world? Don't you think it would strengthen Christians? There are a great many materialists who do not believe there are souls, but if spirits from the future world should knock and talk over to us they would be persuaded." To that I answer in the ringing words of the Son of God: "If they believe not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

Teach your children there are no ghosts to be seen or heard in this world save those which walk on two feet or four—human or bestial. Remember that spiritualism at the best is a useless thing, for if it tells what the Bible reveals it is a superfluity, and if it tells what the Bible does not reveal it is a lie.

Instead of going out to get other people to tell your fortune, tell your own fortune by putting your trust in God and doing the best you can. I will tell your fortune: "All things work together for good to them that love God." Insult not your departed friends by asking them to come down and scabble under an extension table. Remember that there is only one spirit whose dictation you have a right to invoke, and that is the holy, blessed and omnipotent spirit of God. Hark! He is rapping now, not on a table or the floor, but rapping on the door of your heart, and every rap is an invitation to Christ and a warning of judgment to come. Oh, grieve Him not away! Quench Him not. He has been all around you this morning. He was all around you last night. He has been around you all your lives. Hark! There comes a voice with tender, overmastering intonation, saying: "My spirit shall always strive."

SUGAR BEET TROUBLES.

Michigan Farmers Are Not as Enthusiastic About Growing Beets as They Were a Year Ago.

The farmers of Berrien county, Mich., who have for several years been growing sugar beets for the Wolverine Sugar company, whose plant cost $300,000, last year lost money on their crop, and at a farmers' institute recently they did not mince words in speaking of the misfortune for which the factory seems to be at least in part responsible. They claim that the facts relating to beet culture and the soils adapted to the root were misrepresented to them by their contract solicitors. The state inspector who assisted in making the contracts believes the loss sustained by the farmers due to an unfavorable year and their inexperience as growers. The farmers, however, are not satisfied with this explanation, having lost their time and summer's work, and demand assurance of a paying price, else no beets will be furnished the factory by them. The factory has made some concessions, but the farmers insist upon more before they will agree to grow more beets.

This case is given to show that rosy as sugar beet growing is represented by some to be, it has the shady side, and even with a good season, large yield and convenient transportation facilities, there is plenty of room for disappointment. Farmers, however, have the success or failure of a factory in their own hands, for if satisfactory prices are not received, they can cease growing the beets, and the factory will close. It may be that the Michigan farmers' loss is a result of "a bad year and their inexperience," so that, even if alluring prices are offered by factories for beets, farmers inexperienced in growing them should go slow and develop gradually as growers, always taking into account the uncertainty of seasons.—Farmers' Voice.

ABOUT THIN SEEDING.

A Good Practice Because It Gives Plants a Chance to Grow to Perfect Maturity.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune writes that having been informed by one whom he knew to be a good farmer that he had planted wheat 16 inches between the rows and three inches apart in the rows, one grain in a place, and had harvested 84 bushels to the acre, he planted a small plot to wheat on September 22, 1898, on hard clay soil that was manured in the spring and planted to strawberries. The planting was six inches apart in the row between the strawberry rows. Two rows he planted one grain to the hill; one row two grains to the hill. He gave the wheat one cultivation on April 24. The average number of heads to the hill in the rows planted one grain to the hill was 18 large heads. The largest number of heads to a single grain was 30, which gave a yield of 2,097 grains. The row with the two grains to the hill gave an average of 19 heads to the hill. The greatest yield was 36 heads to the hill, which gave a yield of 2,035 grains—62 less than the one grain hill. The yield was at the rate of 106 bushels to the acre, providing the planting was 12 by 6 inches. I planted a small plot to oats on the same kind of soil on April 24, planting six inches apart, one grain to the hill, and cultivated four times. The yield was at the rate of 175 bushels to the acre, providing the planting was done 12 by 6 inches. He has raised as many as 45 large heads from a single grain, when planted six by six inches apart one grain in a hill, and in 1897 he had two hills of rye, one of which yielded 126 heads and the other 127 heads, each grown from a single grain. The plants have more room for their roots and are abundantly and constantly fed at such distances while in close seeding they have periods of starvation.

GABLE BARN DOOR.

On Most Farms It Is Worth While to Add This Convenient Arrangement to the Barn.

It has always been a good deal of trouble to close the end door to a barn where hay is taken in with a horse hayfork. We prefer to drive in the barn to unload the hay, but will admit that a barn will hold more when it is taken in at the end. The cut explains itself. The upper part of the door is hung to the lower part and folds in when open, and will open clear back under the cornice, and can be easily closed by closing the lower part first and raising the upper part from the inside. This closes the opening sufficient to keep out all storms, provided the barn has a hood to accommodate the hayfork, and all barns should have a hood to keep the hay from rubbing against the barn so hard. The hood is not shown in the sketch, as it would hide the view of the door.—A. S. Forsman, in Ohio Farmer.

According to the Canadian experiment station reports, rape stands at the head of the list of forage plants used as a green food for the growth of lambs in both carcass and fleece.

INCUBATOR CHICKS.

It Is Less Trouble to Raise Them Than It Is to Run After a Lot of Setting Hens.

Blessings on the man who first invented the incubator. It seems little short of marvelous how these wooden machines (when intelligently managed) will hatch chickens so perfectly. They really have a better start in life than the chicks the old hen hatches, for the very simple reason they have no lice. How many readers have tried hatching ducks in an incubator, I wonder. There is no prettier sight than one of those wonderful machines full of little ducks when the last ones are out of the shell. The greedy little things begin to "nose around" (with their long yellow bills) for something to eat before they get dry. I hatched three little quails in my machine last summer. After they got dry I tried to put my hand on one of them and he hopped away to the darkest corner, the little fellow didn't want to be "cotched."

Some people condemn artificial incubation. For my part I would rather give the incubator the little care it requires than to run after a lot of setting hens. It is so aggravating to have an old hen stay off her eggs till they are cold, or maybe break half the eggs. Some old hens are like some people, there isn't much dependence to be put in them. And if you have a good incubator (and I believe the most of them are all right) you can depend on them as money makers. Of course there is more work attached to raising the chickens. So much depends on the person, whether he make a success of the chicken business. Then I think one has to have a love for any work he is engaged in to be successful.—National Stockman.

HOW TO RENDER WAX.

Description of an Effective Sun Extractor Invented by a Pacific Coast Beekeeper.

I melt and cake all my wax in a sun extractor of my own invention, which is illustrated below. It is made of two compartments, both of which have glass lids. The wax to be melted and renovated is put into the top or large compartment. There is a slatted frame placed on the bottom of this upper box and a burlap sack is placed on top of this slatted frame. The wax is placed on this sack. The glass lid is then put on, and as the wax melts it will strain through the sack and run down through the spout into the lower part. A common dishpan sets under the spout to catch the wax. There is a little water in the pan. The glass will keep the wax hot all day. If any dirt gets through the sack, it will settle at the bottom of the hot wax in the pan, and when the wax is taken out, next morning, it will be in the shape of a beautiful cake, while all the dirt will remain in the water. By this method there is little bother and no danger of the wax getting on fire and endangering the house. The wax is entirely free from foreign substances, and is first class in every respect.—F. E. Brown, in Agricultural Epitomist.

There are now 716 rural free-delivery routes in the country, and in nearly every case they have added to the department's income and reduced its expenditure in that particular district. The increase of facilities given by daily delivery of mails at rural residences leads the people to write more letters, and buy more goods which may be sent them by post. The work of sorting and making up the mails is consolidated in one central station, with a consequent saving of expense. In one well-populated Maryland county 63 small post offices have been abolished by the introduction of the system. The postmasters in this case strenuously objected to losing their jobs, and obtained the signatures of a majority of the residents to a protest against the new system. The department persisted in its plans, and put on wagons which are virtually post offices on wheels, and which not only collect and deliver mails, but also sell stamps and money orders. The people who said they preferred to go after their mail and wanted the old post offices retained now see their mistake, and would not on any account go back to the former system. The benefits to the rural population of mail delivery at their homes, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, are so plain as to require no argument. That the plan promotes education and contentment on the farm is evident. The system should be extended as rapidly as possible to every district where the population is sufficiently dense to give business enough to come within reasonable distance of covering the expense. The policy of the post office department has always been to keep in advance of the demand for postal facilities, and that policy will doubtless be continued in the matter of rural free delivery. The safety of the republic is in the enlightenment of its citizens, and the postal service is a great facilitator of education. With the general extension of rural free delivery there will be less talk about the monotony of farm life and less desire on the part of young people to get away from the farm to the city.

At the New Year's reception at the white house, reports the Washington Star, three ladies, a mother and two handsome daughters who are well known in society here, passed into the red parlor and then entered the line. Just behind them came a colored woman, and back of her two young ladies, quite plainly dressed, and then a man. The society woman gave her name, "Mrs. Dobson," and each of the young ladies said "Miss Dobson." Then the young lady of color said "Miss Dobson" and the two young ladies behind her each murmured "Miss Dobson," and were followed by the young man, who said "Mr. Dobson." By that time everybody within hearing distance was shaking with suppressed laughter. The seven "Dobsons" eyed each other scornfully after they got into the east room, and, excepting the society woman and her daughters, went their several ways, they being in no way connected. The name was not Dobson, but that does not matter.

There is a movement on foot to request the president to put civilians in charge of all receptions. The plan of putting the affairs at the white house under an army officer has, members of congress say, proved a distinct failure, as subordinates in the military service are far from attentive to the civilians from congress and the departments.

Col. E. F. Fleming, who was appointed under ex-President Cleveland as clock-master of the treasury department, still holds that position. He has over 500 clocks in his care, and is known as "Father Time." He starts on his round of winding his eight-day clocks on Monday and gets around to the last one on Saturday night.

THE UNITED STATES ARMY.

Its Patriotism and Valor Have Gilded the Pages of History from Washington's Time.

The army, from the days of Washington, has been practically on the frontier—the vanguard of civilization. It penetrated the forests, crossed the plains and scaled the mountains, carrying the flag of its country before the hardy pioneer, the miner, the hunter and the home builders, who have spread civilization over the vast continent of America. In the great wars in which the government has been involved its fortitude, patriotism and sacrifices have gilded the pages of history. In the long series of engagements against a savage foe it has endured all the hardships, the privations and exposure incident to such warfare, where no mercy is expected by those who are so unfortunate as to fall into the hands of the enemy. While there are certain features connected with the military life which subject those engaged in the service to hardships and even sufferings, yet there is a charm in serving one's country and representing such a nationality as ours, that is the boast and pride of all true Americans; and it is a pleasure to be in the service of a free and enlightened people.

During all these years, notwithstanding that at times there may have been certain influences tending to dim the luster of the service—influences which would seem to be not for the best interests either of the army or the nation—yet, in the main, the army has maintained a code of morals and a high sense of honor and integrity that are most commendable. Devotion to the welfare of one's country is as sacred as life itself to those who are engaged in its service. Undoubtedly the army received its greatest inspiration from the high character of Washington himself, who inspired it with the noble impulses of his grand character. Its achievements will live in history as long as noble deeds shall be honored and revered. Its purpose has been to maintain the institutions vouchsafed to us by the fathers, to force back the elements of savage ferocity, to give protection to the weak and innocent, to guard the welfare of the people of this republic in every quarter of this vast territory, and to sustain and support the civil government. It has been a tower of strength to the citadel of law and order, and a bulwark to the liberties of our people.

Military life is one of constant labor, study and rigid and faithful application to duty, and I have such unbounded confidence in the character of the army that I feel sure in the future it will maintain the same principles and loyalty that it has manifested during the century now closing.—Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

QUARRELOVER WEDDING GOWN

It Cost the Bride Her Intended Husband, But She Married His Brother.

The historical and genealogical societies often bring to light interesting family tales and traditions. In a paper read before a local society a New England woman recently related an amusing anecdote of a spirited ancestress of revolutionary days.

The damsel, Abigail by name, was loved by twin brothers, Asaph and Ashel, but only Asaph had had the courage to propose marriage. Although the girl had been suspected of an inclination for the shyer brother, she accepted the more venturesome Asaph, perhaps partly through pique. The wedding day was set, but then a difficulty arose. She was an ardent patriot, he a rather lukewarm one. It was during the very darkest days of the war, and it did not appear to her fitting that the marriage should be celebrated with much expedition or display. All the money that could be spared was wanted to help the cause, while as to the wedding dress she would not have dreamed of imported finery, even if she could have afforded it. She vowed she would be married in homespun or not at all.

Asaph's ideas were different. He was not willing to dispense with either feasting or fine clothes, but desired to make the wedding a grand occasion. A quarrel ensued, which ended by his declaring obstinately that a wife should submit to the authority of her husband and that he should expect his bride to stand up before the parson in a silk gown and nothing less.

"A bride, sir, is not yet a wife," was the girl's reply, and upon that they parted.

It was but a few days before the wedding. During the interval Abigail refused to see her lover, sending word that she was too busy with the preparation of her wedding outfit. This Asaph complacently accepted as evidence of submission to his will. The silk dress was no doubt in hurried process of preparation, he thought.

The day arrived and the hour of the ceremony, but to the groom's anger and confusion his bride appeared before the assembled company in a plain cotton gown, a kitchen apron, her sleeves rolled up and her hands floury from the kneading trough!

"Will you take me as I am?" she asked, with a courtesy.

"Never!" shouted the bridegroom, and left the house. Not in the least disconcerted, the fair Abigail smiled invitingly at Ashel, who, plucking up his courage, stepped without a word into the place vacated by his brother, and they were married there and then. Moreover, they "lived happily ever after," quite in fairy tale style, despite the dubious promise afforded by the lady's temper. Asaph remained a bachelor till his death.—Youth's Companion.

—The Weedsport Sentinel tells of a boy there who fainted away when a pretty girl kissed him. Wonder how the Weedsport girls kiss, anyway.
—We notice that the anti-thieving association of Preble recently held an interesting meeting. Such a society could do business in Genoa and vicinity.
—B. J. Vanderbelt of Despatch, a suburb of Rochester, has been in this place this week, looking after the sale of real estate there. It would be a good investment, apparently.
—The rise in the price of white paper is cutting quite a figure with our dollar exchanges, and in fact, some of the higher priced journals, judging from the quality of paper some of them now use. It costs to publish a first-class local paper all of $1.50 a year; it can't be done for any less.—Seneca County News.

—Robert Mastin is out again after a brief struggle with the grip.

—Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Avery went to Syracuse Wednesday morning for a few days' visit.

—E. C. Starner of Weedsport was looking after his fine cigar trade in this vicinity this week.

—F. Sullivan was home from Union Springs over the week. He is well pleased with his prospects there.

—The stages were blockaded Tuesday by snow, although the Locke stage made a trip in the afternoon.

—Chicken thieves are abroad. Arthur Sellen missed nearly 50 fowls from his flock on Saturday morning.

—O. M. Avery lost his purse one day recently and was glad to find it in the coal bin. It contained over $200.

—J. D. Morton and friends of Locke were in town Sunday evening, attending services at the Baptist church.

—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sill entertained friends at euchre Wednesday evening in honor of their guest, Miss Tillson.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Ames went to Chenango Forks Monday, where her mother is seriously ill. He returned home Wednesday.

—O. C. Ingraham of Marathon arrived Tuesday to begin work for S. S. Goodyear. This is his second season with Mr. Goodyear.

—Theo. A. Miller fell from the roof of his house one day last week, while removing snow from the roof, and was considerably bruised and shaken up. Fortunately no bones were broken.

—Word has been received from Harry D. Crosby, comedian, now with the Arnold Wolford Theatrical Co., which is playing in the New England states, that as soon as the theatrical season closes he would come to Genoa and rehearse a company of local talent and stage one of his latest plays.

—W. J. Gilfilian has been in town the past week introducing the new lamp which burns gas generated from gasoline. The light is of a greenish tint, which is said to be the least injurious to the eye of any artificial light, and is cheaper than kerosene, being much more satisfactory.

—The lecture by Prof. A. W. Hawks was a great success. A Genoa audience never enjoyed more fun and less rudeness, more ridiculous statements mingled with important truths from the lips of any person, and we are sure that all who heard him cannot fail to see the better, brighter side of life which should be cultivated and exhibited daily.

—The enumerators who will count us when the census is taken next June will wear badges like policemen. They will not be required to wear uniforms, as their job is not likely to last long enough to justify a uniform. These badges will be a shield surmounted by an eagle made of German silver, and across the face of the shield will be the words, "U. S. Census, 1900."

—Among the notaries public appointed recently we find the following persons in this vicinity: E. B. Cobb and H. C. Willis, Ledyard; F. A. Dudley, King Ferry; Francis Hollister, S. B. Mead, Five Corners; W. Howland, Sherrwood; George R. Kent Scipioville; Frank Kenyon, J. Snyder, Scipio; P. W. Miner, J. M. Stewart, Locke; E. B. Mosher, Poptar Ridge; Frank C. Smith, Fleming; Byron Hunt, Genoa.

—Charles Carson, Wm. Gilfilian, A. E. Holley and Lee Atwater went to Auburn Tuesday and encountered some of the snow banks for which Scipio is justly famous. The horses got away twice and the second time Mr. Gilfilian attempted to keep up with the procession by hanging to the rear end of the sleigh. He was dragged half a mile or more, and has a lame back in consequence, which with the broken harness, completes the damage list.

The Lectures Course.

The lecture by Mr. Hawks at the Presbyterian church on Monday evening was the fourth in the course, and to all appearances pleased more people thoroughly than any of the other entertainments. He is a gifted lecturer and impersonator, and nothing we could say would enhance his estimation in the minds of our readers. The committee in charge of the course have decided to close the series with a concert, and in consideration of the universal demand have arranged with the Genoa Concert Company to give an entertainment on the evening of March 20. While other talent could have been secured, the manifest desire of the people was for a concert by the local company, and as the committee have simply endeavored to please the people, the above arrangements have been made. Further announcements will be made next week. All course tickets not punched five times are good for the next entertainment.

Police Court Items.

Last Friday two cases occupied the attention of Justice Hunt. The People against John Benson, which was adjourned until March 14. John Dempsey vs. Kate Caldwell, Dempsey bringing action for damages for breach of contract, accruing from their hotel business at King Ferry. This case was held open until the 14th, when arguments will be heard or briefs submitted. F. M. Leary for plaintiff; D. R. Lewis for defendant.

On Saturday, the case of Jay Bradt vs. Oliver Snyder came before Justice Lanterman and jury at King Ferry. This was also a case of damages for breach of contract on a horse deal. Bradt sued for $25 and the jury decided that he should have it. Leary and Hunt for plaintiff; Lewis for defendant.

Sunday morning Reeves and Boyer who occupy the Shangle farm west and south of the village, heard lambs bleating and going to the barn they found that a sheep, the mother of two lambs four days old, was gone. They traced tracks leading from the barn to a place east of E. H. Tift's woods where they saw the pelt and remains of a sheep. They followed a bloody trail to the highway at Little Hollow and then came to Genoa to consult officers. Constable Smith remarked that he had noticed drops of blood leading toward Howe's mill, and being armed with a search warrant they investigated the shack occupied by the Bushnell tribe and found what was left of the sheep. They also found John Emory and Floyd Wager there, and they were locked up until Monday morning. Being brought before 'Squire Hunt, charged with burglary and larceny, they plead guilty and were taken to jail to await the action of the grand jury. We hope Sheriff Wood will feed them mutton three times a day for the next two months. The Bushnells, whose presence is a disgrace to any civilized community, were advised to move out by Thursday to avoid arrest for being accomplices to this and other transactions, but we notice they are still there. One or two families in this village should have an eider-down party, and in lieu of tar, THE TRIBUNE will furnish ink, warranted fast black and sticky.

THE RIDE TO SCHOOL.

When the snow is coming down,
And the fences, bare and brown,
Capping white,
And there's not a breeze to stir
Flakes that held to branch and burr
Through the night;
Then there comes a happy feeling in the memory of the day
When I rode to school with father in the old pung sleigh.

There was snow the same as now,
Topping every branch and bough
Through the wood;
And the spruces seemed to be
Each a giant Christmas tree
Where it stood,
Best and hung with toy and doll, till I wished that I could stay.
And would turn about and watch them from the old pung sleigh.

Then the shapes along the walls—
Queer old women holding shawls
In their laps;
And the tents without a door,
And the balsam stumps that were Pointed caps;
And the tracks across the snow, where a squirrel frisked away
When he heard the squeak and rattle of the old pung sleigh.

There were thimbles you could see
On the big thorn apple tree
Near the bars;
And the flakes that fell about,
As I held my mittens out,
Looked like stars;
And beside the road a hemlock reached its arms across the way,
And would sift a shower on us in the old
pung sleigh.

And the lash on father's whip,
How it used to trail and dip
In the snow.
I can hear the chickadees
Singing in the maple trees.
And I know
From the pleasures of the present I would gladly turn away
Just to ride to school with father in the old
pung sleigh.
—Florence Josephine Boyce, in Youth's Companion.

LIBERTY—OR WHAT

The day was drawing to its close.
Already the sun had begun to tint
the western sky with a soft crimson glow. The windows in the weather-beaten barracks caught and held the rosy light as though loath to let the brightness go, and even the little thatched cottage under the hill was bathed in the glory.

Within the little cottage under the hill preparations for the evening meal were being made. Back and forth across the room a tall, straight figure moved, full of that supple grace of the southern woman, says the Chicago Herald.

"Zoritsa, have you heard what decision has been made?"

"No, mother," answered the girl.
"Capt. Newcombe told me to-day that they were all on the tiptoe of expectation, but determined to fight it out and win, no matter what happens."

"The captain is very gallant. If all the men were as brave as he there would be no doubt about an American victory."

"I am afraid your criticism is unjust, mother. You are letting ten come under the ban of your displeasure because you chance to know the merits of one. Capt. Newcombe thinks all his men brave."

"Well, we need not complain of Lieut.
Hope's courage, for he certainly displayed perseverance, at least, before he won you, after many rebuffs."

"Oh, yes, Lieut. Hope is exceedingly brave, if you call persistence in a love

"DID YOU THEN LOVE HIM SO MUCH?"
affair bravery. I wonder if in war a besieged army is ever worried into being captured. Really, I feel like a prisoner of war since—"

"Hush, Zoritsa," came softly from the corner. "You are hasty. It is no less than treachery to—"

"Treachery!" interrupted the girl, impetuously. "I think your definition and mine differ; but forgive me, dear," suddenly softening and laying her flushed cheek against her mother's soft hair. "I am tired to-night. And—mother—do not ask me why—I have craved my liberty as no one ever did before—and to-night I'm free, mother —free! Do you understand what that means to me, dear? I have broken my engagement with Lieut. Hope."

"It may be at the risk of your happiness, dear."

"I have gladly taken that risk, and rejoice in my liberty. Ah! mother, liberty! I wonder not that men's lives are lost for liberty!"

The Widow Juanquez and her daughter were in the little cottage making bandages and otherwise busying themselves with work for the army.

"It is strange, mother, that Capt.
Newcombe did not come in as usual
this evening."

"Yes; he said yesterday he would come up as soon as his duties were performed. I do not understand his absence."

Zoritsa glanced quickly at the still girlish figure bending over her work.
Was that a flush softly creeping over the fair, youthful face? She caught her breath. Did her mother care?
She had not thought of that—but then—why not? Was not the "senorita" the belle of the village? And yet the thought had never come to her that it was still possible for a man like the captain to win her mother's love. Why, even the idea was absurd. Did she really care for Capt.
Newcombe? Surely his interest, at least was no more than friendship.
When he hears that she is not bound to Lieut. Hope will he not show her it is she whom he loves?

Great excitement seemed to prevail in the village next morning. At every other door groups of people were standing, the men angrily gesticulating, the women crying. In front of the cottage were two or three villagers talking to "Irish" as he was familiarly known in camp.

"Yes," he was saying, "them sphal-peens up there, jerking his thumb toward the barracks, 'were too busy enjoyin' av thimselves to be bothered wid the thrubles av a handful av poor divils. But ye'll never be afther catchin' Capt. Newcombe a-nappin', and ez soon ez he heard the fuss offered himself and his men to go and help them."

"Yes, we wint, but how many hev come back agin? The dirty sphal-peens made a ragged edge of our company—the finest ye'll see anywheres —and the captain himself has been killed entirely. Ah! 'twas a sorry day that brought Paddy Malone to this God-forsaken country!"

The two women within, so dear to each other, and yet each seeming to stand in the other's happiness, strained their ears to listen. Almost unconscious of the other's presence, they both ran out at the man's words and stood there with drawn faces, deathlike in their awful pallor, while he repeated the news that made desolate many a happy fireside and veiled with tears the light in loving eyes.

The widow's lithe form swayed and trembled, and she would have fallen had not Zoritsa suddenly seemed to realize that her mother was there.
With a quick catching of the breath
and a dry, choking sob in her throat, she reached out her arm and caught her.

Each read with anguish the truth in the other's eyes, and in each heart was a momentary struggle for the victory. The painful quietness of despair seemed to envelop the young girl, and, with eyes heavy with un-shed tears, she half-blindedly led her mother into the house.

This, then, was why Zoritsa had claimed her freedom. Oh, why had she not told Zoritsa before that the captain had already confessed his love for her? And it was only last night they were to have told her of their happiness. To-day he is dead—dead!
Unable to control herself, she broke into passionate weeping.

"Dearest," the girl said, drawing the golden head to her breast, "did you, then, love him so much?"

"Love him? Better than life!"

There may be—there must be some dreadful mistake." She did not know her mother had seen the love light in her eyes and had rightly interpreted it. Though there was not a quiver of an eyelid, her heart was breaking.
Already her light had gone out. Her world was a world of darkness.

Night came on. One by one the stars appeared. A solemn hush lay over all. Even the camp seemed deserted, and naught save the occasional screech of a whip-poor-will broke the dread silence.

Yearning for the sympathetic stillness of the night and the companionship of the broad, calm sky, dotted with its myriads of stars, Zoritsa drew her shawl about her, and with a heavy heart went out into the darkness.

What was that? Sounds of rejoicing? How they grated upon her now!
"but what were they saying? Hush!
"Captain—alive—prisoner—escaped—"

Could it be true? Her heart gave a great leap. Yes! there was a loud "Hurrah!" It was true! He was not killed after all, then, and perhaps not even wounded! Ah—but she was not to think of herself. Yet why should she give up the hope hidden in her heart so long and make the little mother unhappy? With a moan more heartrending than sobs she threw herself upon the ground.

"God! God! Thou who didst teach us to love! Why, oh, why didst thou give me this chalice, only to withdraw it as I stooped to drink?"

In an agony of soul she wrestled with her own desires—her own love—and it seemed to her very life—and conquered.

Quiet, resigned and calm, she found her way home, softly unlatched the door, and went in.

The bright moonlight streamed in a silver—its brightness, with upraised face, almost transfigured with happiness, was the "senorita" clasped in the captain's arms.

Without having been seen, and stiffing a sigh, the noble girl turned away.

"And this is liberty? Aye, liberty to follow Thee, O Christ, to be bound to Thee with the chains of Thy love —liberty to serve Thee in serving others—to spend and be spent in Thy service." * * *

On the field, in the hospitals and in the filthy prisons, his presence seems to radiate a peace that the world cannot give. In her face can be traced the story of a battle fought and a victory won in the almost forgotten past, but her quiet services tell of the outpouring of a heart of love to the sufferers of the present.

Sodium Nitrate for Gardens.

Sodium nitrate is especially valuable for intensive culture in gardens and fields tributary to large cities where quickness and abundance of growth are factors of prime necessity. The ready-formed nitrate is an indispensable fertilizer for flowers and gardens as well as for fields. It performs a function which cannot be easily replaced by any other form of nitrogenous material among field crops. The sugar beet is especially susceptible to the influence of nitrate of soda and this is the most economic form of nitrogenous fertilizer that can be secured.—Dr. H. W. Wiley,

RELIGION OF GHOSTS.

Dr. Talmage Warns People Against Modern Spiritualism.

The Witch of Endor a Type of the Fallacies of the Present Day—Denounces It as Witchcraft and Sorcery.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]
Washington, Feb. 25.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage discusses a theme never more under exploration than at this time and warns people against what he calls a religion of ghosts; text, I Samuel 28:7: "Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at Endor. And Saul disguised himself and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night."

Trouble to the right of him and trouble to the left of him, Saul knew not what to do. As a last resort he concluded to seek out a spiritual medium or a witch or anything that you please to call her—a woman who had communication with the spirits of the eternal world. It was a very difficult thing to do, for Saul had either slain all the witches or compelled them to stop business. A servant one day said to King Saul: "I know of a spiritual medium down at the village of Endor." "Do you?" said the king. Night falls. Saul, putting off his kingly robes and putting on the dress of a plain citizen, with two servants, goes out to hunt up this medium.

Saul and his servants after awhile reached the village, and they say: "I wonder if this is the house," and they look in, and they see the haggard, weird and shriveled up spiritual medium sitting by the light and on the table sculptured images and divining rods and poisonous herbs and bottles and vases. They say: "Yes, this must be the place." One loud rap brings the woman to the door, and as she stands there, holding the candle or lamp above her head and peering out into the darkness, she says: "Who is here?" The tall king informs her that he has come to have his fortune told. When she hears that she trembles and almost drops the light, for she knows there is no chance for a fortune teller or spiritual medium in all the land. But Saul having sworn that no harm shall come to her, she says: "Well, who shall I bring up from the dead?" Saul says: "Bring up Samuel." That was the prophet who had died a little while before.

I see her waving a wand, or stirring up some poisonous herbs in a caldron, or hear her muttering over some incantations, or stamping with her foot as she cries out to the realm of the dead: "Samuel, Samuel!" Lo, the freezing horror! The floor of the tenement opens, and the gray hairs float up and the forehead, the eyes, the lips, the shoulders, the arms, the feet—the entire body of the dead Samuel—wrapped in sepulchral robe, appearing to the astonished group, who stagger back and hold fast and catch their breath and shiver with terror.

The dead prophet, white and awful from the tomb, begins to move his ashen lips, and he glares upon King Saul and cries out: "What did you bring me up for? What do you mean, King Saul?" Saul, trying to compose and control himself, makes this stammering and affrighted utterance as he says to the dead prophet: "The Lord is against me, and I have come to you for help. What shall I do?" The dead prophet stretched forth his finger to King Saul and said: "Die to-morrow! Come with me into the sepulcher. I am going now. Come, come with me!"

And, lo, the floor again opens, and the feet of the dead prophet disappear and the arms and the shoulders and the forehead! The floor closes. Oh, that was an awful seance!

We are surrounded by mystery—before us, behind us, to the right of us, to the left of us, mystery. There is a vast realm unexplored that science, I have no doubt, will yet map out. He who explores that realm will do the world more service than ever did a Columbus or an Amerigo Vespucci. There are so many things that cannot be accounted for, so many sounds and appearances which defy acoustics and investigation, so many things approximating to the spectral, so many effects which do not seem to have a sufficient cause.

To unlash the door between the present state and the future state all the fingers of superstition have been busy. We have books entitled "Footfalls on the Boundaries of Other Worlds," "The Debatable Land Between This World and the Next," "Researches Into the Phenomena of Spiritualism" and whole libraries of hocus pocus, enough to deceive the very elect. I shall not take time to rehearse the history of divination, Delphic oracle, sibyl or palmistry or the whole centuries of imposture.

Modern spiritualism proposes to open the door between this world and the next and put us into communication with the dead. It has never yet offered one reasonable credential. When I find Saul in my text consulting a familiar spirit, I learn that spiritualism is a very old religion. Spiritualism in America was born in the year 1847, in Hydesville, Wayne county, N. Y., when one night there was a loud rap heard against the door of Michael Weekman; a rap a second time, a rap a third time, and all three times, when the door was opened, there was nothing found there, the knocking having been made seemingly by invisible knuckles. In that same house there was a young woman who had a cold hand passed over her face, and, there being seemingly no arm attached to it, ghostly suspicions were excited.

After awhile Mr. Fox with his family moved into that house, and then they had bangings at the door every night. One night Mr. Fox cried out: "Are you a spirit?" Two raps—answer in the affirmative. "Are you an injured spirit?" Two raps—answer in the affirmative. Then they knew right away that it was the spirit of a peddler who had been murdered in that house years before and who had been robbed of his $500. Whether the spirit of the peddler came back to collect his $500 or his bones I do not know.

The excitement spread. There was a universal rumpus. Hon. Judge Edmonds declared in a book that he had actually seen a belt start from the top shelf of a closet, heard it ring over the people that were standing in the closet; then, swung by invisible hands, it rang over the people in the back parlor and floated through the folding doors to the front parlor, rang over the people there and then dropped on the floor. A senator of the United States, afterward governor of Wisconsin, had his head quite turned with spiritualistic demonstrations. The tables tipped, and the stools tilted, and the bedsteads raised, and the chairs upset, and it seemed as if the spirits everywhere had gone into the furniture business! Well, the people said: "We have got something new in this country. It is a new religion!" Oh, no, my friend, thousands of years ago, we find in our text, a spiritualistic seance!

Nothing in the spiritualistic circles of our day has been more strange, mysterious and wonderful than things which have been seen in past centuries of the world. In all ages there have been necromancers, those who consult with the spirits of the departed; charmers, those who put their subjects in a mesmeric state; sorcerers, those who by taking poisonous drugs see everything and hear everything and tell everything; dreamers, people who in their sleeping moments can see the future world and hold consultation with spirits. Yes, before the time of Christ, the Brahmans went through all the table moving, all the furniture excitement, which the spirits have exploited in our day, precisely the same thing over and over again, under the manipulation of the Brahmans. Now, do you say that spiritualism is different from these? I answer, all these delusions I have mentioned belong to the same family. They are exhumations from the unseen world.

What does God think of all these delusions? He thinks so severely of them that He never speaks of them but with livid thunders of indignation. He says: "I will be a swift witness against the sorcerer." He says: "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." And, lest you might make some important distinction between spiritualism and witchcraft, God says, in so many words: "There shall not be among you a consulter of familiar spirits, or wizard, or necromancer, for they that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." The Lord God Almighty in a score of passages which I have not now time to quote utters His indignation against all this great family of delusions. After that be a spiritualist if you dare!

Still further, we learn from this text how it is that people come to fall into spiritualism. Saul had enough trouble to kill ten men. He did not know where to go for relief. After awhile he resolved to go and see the witch of Endor. He expected that somehow she would afford him relief. It was his trouble drove him there. And I have to tell you now that spiritualism finds its victims in the troubled; the bankrupt, the sick, the bereft. You lose your watch, and you go to the fortune teller to find where it is.

You lose a friend; you want the spiritual world opened, so that you may have communication with him. In a highly wrought, nervous and diseased state of mind you go and put yourself in that communication. That is why I hate spiritualism. It takes advantage of one in a moment of weakness, which may come upon us at any time. We lose a friend. The trial is keen, sharp, suffocating, almost maddening. If we could marshal a host and storm the eternal world and recapture our loved one, the host would soon be marshaled. The house is so lonely. The world is so dark. The separation is so insufferable. But spiritualism says: "We will open the future world, and your loved one can come back and talk to you." Though we may not hear his voice, we may hear the rap of his hand. So, clear the table. Sit down. Put your hands on the table. Be very quiet. Five minutes gone. Ten minutes. No motion of the table. No response from the future world. Twenty minutes. Thirty minutes. Nervous excitement all the time increasing. Forty minutes. The table shivers. Two raps from the future world. The letters of the alphabet are called over. The departed friend's name is John. At the pronunciation of the letter J, two raps. At the pronunciation of the letter O, two raps. At the pronunciation of the letter H, two raps. At the pronunciation of the letter N, two raps. There you have the whole name spelled out—J-o-h-n, John. Now, the spirit being present, you say: "John, are you happy?" Two raps give an affirmative answer.

Pretty soon the hand of the medium begins to twitch and toss and begins to write out, after paper and ink are furnished, a message from the eternal world. What is remarkable, the departed spirit, although it has been amid the illuminations of the Heaven, cannot spell as well as it used to. It has lost all grammatical accuracy, and cannot write as distinctly. I received a letter through a medium once. I sent it back. I said: "Just please to tell those ghosts they had better go to school and get improved in their orthography." Now, just think of spirits, that the Bible represents as enthroned in glory, coming down to crawl under the table and break crockery and ring tea bells before supper is ready and rap the window shutter on a gusty night! What consolation in such miserable stuff as compared with the consolation that our departed friends free from toil and sin and pain are forever happy, and that we will join them, not in mysterious and half utterance which makes the hair stand on end and makes cold chills creep the back, but in a reunion most blessed and happy and glorious! "And none shall murmur or misdeout. When God's great sunrise finds us out."

I learn still further from this subject that spiritualism and necromancy are affairs of darkness. Why did not Saul go in the day? He was ashamed to go. Besides that, he knew that this spiritual medium, like all her successors, performed her exploits in the night. The Davenport, the Fowlers, the Foxes, the spiritual mediums of all ages, have chosen the night or a darkened room. Why? The majority of their wonders have been swindles, and deception prospers best in the night.

I indict spiritualism also because it is a social and marital curse. The worst deeds of licentiousness and the worst orgies of uncleanness have been enacted under its patronage. The story is too vile for me to tell. I will not pollute my tongue or your ears with the recital. Sometimes the civil law has been invoked to stop the outrage. Families innumerable have been broken up by it. It has pushed off hundreds of young women into a life of profligacy. It talks about "elective affinities" and "affinital relations" and "spiritual matches" and adopts the whole vocabulary of free loveism. In one of its journals it declares "marriage is the monster curse of civilization." "It is a source of debauchery and intemperance." If spiritualism could have its full swing, it would turn this world into a pandemonium of carnality. It is an unclean, adulterous, damnable religion, and the sooner it drops into hell from which it rose the better both for earth and Heaven. For the sake of man's honor and woman's purity I say let the last vestige of it perish forever. I wish I could gather up all the raps it has ever heard from spirits blest or damned and gather them all on its own head in thundering raps of annihilation!

If God is ever slapped in the face it is when a spiritual medium puts down her hand on the table, invoking spirits departed to make a revelation. God has told you all you ought to know, and how dare you prying into that which is none of your business. You cannot keep the Bible in one hand and spiritualism in the other. One or the other will slip out of your grasp, depend upon it. Spiritualism is adverse to the Bible, in the fact that it has in these last days called from the future world Christian men to testify against Christianity. Its mediums call back Lorenzo Dow, the celebrated evangelist, and Lorenzo Dow testifies that Christians are idolaters. Spiritualism calls back Tom Paine, and he testifies that he is stopping in the some house in Heaven with John Bunyan. They call back John Wesley, and he testifies against the Christian religion, which he all his life gloriously preached. Andrew Jackson Davis, the greatest of all the spiritualists, comes to the front and declares that the New Testament is but "the dismal echo of a barbaric age" and the Bible only "one of the pen and ink relics of Christianity."

Good Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a popular baker of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with coughs or whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children, as it contained no opium or harmful drug." Sold by Banker.

Herb teas are as useful remedies as they ever were—better if made from properly gathered and cured leaves roots and barks. We are careful to replace the old ones with new ones when it comes on. Here you will find fresh...

INSECT DRUNKARDS.

Bees, Flies and Butterflies That Get Dizzy and Fall Like Human Toppers.

Yes, bumble bees, flies, butterflies and beetles are habitual drunkards, if the statements of a certain Dr. Weir are to be believed. He found that in some of the southern states these insects alight on certain plants, drink heartily from the calices of the blossoms, fall prostrate on the ground, and after awhile rise into the air and fly around like mad, just as drunken men would do if they could fly. Dr. Weir then collected the pollen of these plants, half a teaspoonful, to see whether it would affect a man in the same way. He swallowed this and after 15 minutes found that his pulse beat faster and there was a slight rise in the temperature of his body. Then he gathered the blossoms, distilled them in water and administered a hypodermic injection in his left arm. Almost immediately the pulse was accelerated and after a half hour he felt decidedly dizzy. By this observation of the insects Dr. Weir was led to the discovery of an oil in these plants, affecting man and insect alike.

An Eye to the Main Chance.

When the Inverness-shire militia was mobilized at Aldershot, over 1,000 strong, and its members exhorted to volunteer for the South African war, there was no response, and at last one man stepped from the ranks and addressed the officers, saying that his comrades would go to war if they were promised a share in the Transvaal gold mines when the country is conquered.

That Unlucky Number.

A Webster (Mass.) man died in the dentist's chair the other day while having 13 teeth pulled. The Chicago Times-Herald says that here is more good working material for superstitious people.

Black Diamonds for Gold Nuggets.

Coal has been discovered near Dawson. The owner of the mine probably will be willing, thinks the Chicago Record, to exchange his product for gold of equal weight.

Trans-Atlantic travel has reached a point where all the discomforts that used to exist years ago in connection with the details of arranging trips are no longer known, the Railroads and Steamship Companies furnishing facilities that remove any difficulty whatever, and making it very easy and simple for a passenger to complete his arrangements.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has made it a custom for some years of having passenger representatives located at New York City meet all incoming passenger steamers from European ports, and also passengers arriving by its trains, who are going abroad; and in fact, attend to all business in connection with arranging for hotel accommodations, sleeping or parlor car tickets and the checking of baggage, etc., etc., that is necessary for passengers destined to points beyond New York via the Lehigh Valley Line, or the transfer to steamers of passengers and baggage, looking after steamship accommodations, etc.

Mr. Charles A. Foucart, who is the Steamship Passenger Agent representing the Lehigh Valley Railroad, is always on hand to meet incoming steamers, and will also meet parties on arrival of Lehigh Valley trains, to see to their comfortable transfer to the steamship. Mr. Foucart is a thoroughly experienced man, and his manner of performing any service for passengers is so cheerful, that it is in reality a pleasure for one just coming off of a long steamship trip, to meet him.
