Memorial.

We, the members of Five Corners Grange, are again called upon to pay our last tribute of love to a true and loyal member of our order—Sister Eva Cheesman. We do not know how to express in words, how great is our loss, but when we remember that "God's ways are not our ways," and that He does not willingly afflict, but in his infinite wisdom bids us, "Be still and know that I am God," we bow in humble submission to His will, knowing that our loss is her gain, and that she has passed on to that home, "Where everlasting spring abides and never fading flowers."

We wish to extend our heartfelt sympathy to the loved ones in her home, whose loss is far greater than ours. They will ever remember her loving counsel and cherish her Christian virtues and may God help them and us to so live that when the Master calls, He may find us waiting.

Resolved, That a copy of the above memorial be sent to the immediate family, also to our local paper for publication and a copy spread on the record of our Grange.

CHANGE OF HEART

By ELIZABETH WILLIAMS

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The man shivered slightly, and shifted his feet restlessly. He wanted to look at his watch, but that would have meant coming out into the moonlight, and, just now, he preferred the dark. Suddenly a girl appeared on the snow-covered garden path. In the cold, winter moonlight she looked like the shadow of a girl, and her slow, almost groping movement was like that of a sleep-walker's, though the man who watched her eagerly from the shelter of the great tree beside the gate.

As she approached, he might have seen that her large eyes were dark with trouble and that one hand rested lightly at her throat as if she breathed with difficulty. The concealed man failed to notice her distress, however. "Well?" was his crisp, staccato question as the girl came close to him.

She stopped suddenly at the sound of the voice from the shadow.

"Ronald?" she whispered. "You—you frightened me—"

"Well?" repeated the man, impatiently.

"You know?" queried the girl in a voice so low that it could hardly be heard above the sound of the light wind that cracked among the dried bushes of the garden.

"I know what he wants," answered the man impatiently. "He told me this afternoon that the doctors consider his case hopeless and that he would like to marry you on his deathbed so that he might leave you his money—$100,000." He fairly purred the words. "You accepted, of course?"

"Accepted? How could I, Ronald? I engaged to you and David your rival such a short time ago?"

Ronald moved irritably, then controlled himself with an effort. "You don't seem to understand, Helen, what this would mean to me—to us," he corrected himself. "The marriage would be a mere form—a matter of a few hours at most. Then you would be free. We could be married, just as we had planned—but with what a difference!" he went on excitedly, his voice growing sharp with eagerness. "No waiting, no worry—I could es-be a sorry mess—" He paused to rest, smiling feebly again, but in a moment he went on. "I can arrange about the money some other way—"

"Oh, don't; please don't talk about the money," Helen broke in. "I can't bear it!" She took a step toward the bed and dropped into a low chair beside it. She felt physically incapable of standing longer. Her world was tottering about her. The man she had thought she loved had proved himself selfish and mercenary, whereas the man she had spurned stood out at last in his true colors.

"David," she whispered, taking one of his hot, feverish hands between her two cold ones. "David—I want to marry you!"

"But darling," he answered. "You don't understand. I might live—" "Oh, David, dearest! It is you who don't understand. I want you to live as my husband. I'm afraid that I'm proposing to you!" And leaning swiftly forward, she pressed her flushed cheek against the hand she held. She could not see the rapture that suddenly illumined his face, and before he could answer, the nurse's pleasant voice came to her from what seemed a long distance.

"I'm afraid I'll have to ask you to go now," she said. "I can't have my patient excited—doctor's order, you know."

"Don't worry about your patient, Miss Grey," came the feeble but happy voice from the bed. "I think that I'll take a little nap now. I've decided to get well this time."

Five hours later a white and shaken Helen met the doctor in the hall below, for his verdict.

"The crisis has passed," he said gently. "The boy will live. I think that you had something to do with it," he added, kindly. But Helen did not hear him. For the first time in her life, she had fainted.

David Stevens and his wife are a very happy pair, but he has never asked her what made her change her mind on that wintry night. Perhaps he knew what he was doing all the time. Helen wonders, but she wouldn't ask him for anything in the world.

DISH COVERS AS LIFE SAVERS

Practically Serves the Same Purpose Now as That for Which They Were First Used.

We have covers to our serving dishes today for the obvious purpose of keeping hot the food that is being taken or left upon the table. But to such prosaic use does the dish cover owe its existence. The original of hot vapors. It was a receptacle of grave and weighty portent, of greater dignity even than our adamantina safes today. For to its keeping was intrusted more than the protection of mere riches—it held the safety and life of a king!

"Unesay lies the head that wears a crown" was particularly true in the middle ages, when crowns were the most transient of things. Every throne had its pretenders and usurpers and reformers, who, other methods failing, often found it expedient to remove the obnoxious incumbent by poisoning him. For a consideration, co-operation to this end could always be depended upon from the personnel of the kitchen!

To guard against such premature death an ingenious king conceived the idea of dish covers. These were always padlocked in the kitchen after the chef, in the presence of a trusted official, had tasted the food, and were unlocked at the table by the steward of the household who there partook of the contents of the dish before any of it was served.

This precaution proved to be efficacious, and dish covers were soon adopted by all fearful monarchs and nobles. And they have come down to protect us from what we in this unfortunate age fear more than poisoning—indigestion!

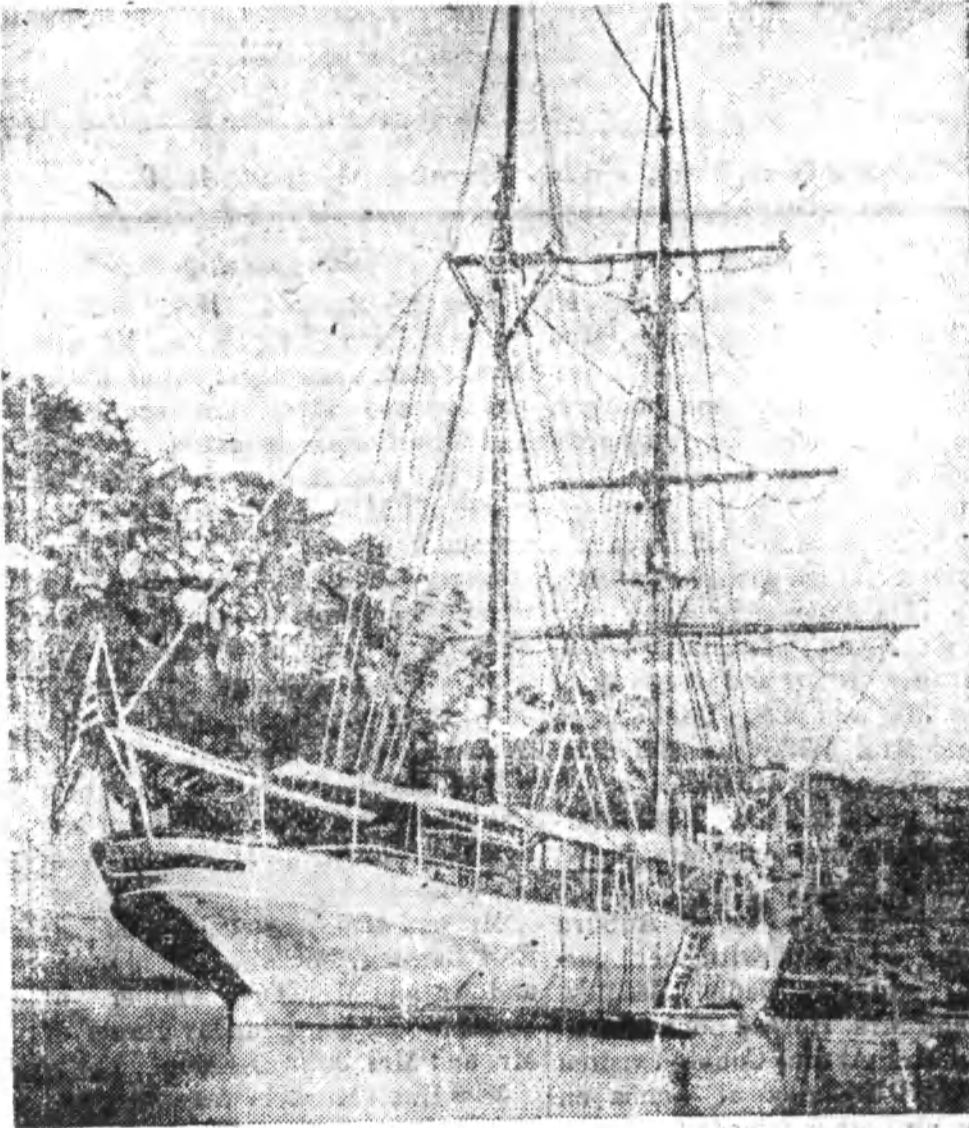

THINK TOO LITTLE OF HEALTH

Majority of People Take No Precautions to Avoid the Attacks of Disease, Until Too Late.

There are a number of more or less scientific articles on the subject of health. The first, followed by perhaps most people, is to give no thought to the preservation of health or avoidance of disease and if trouble arises to resort to drugs or call the doctor. This is a very careless attitude. The second is to be very careful to try to avoid disease but pay no attention to the cultivation of general health. This is only half scientific. The third method is to cultivate general health on the ground that disease cannot attack a healthy body and accordingly to pay little attention to avoidance of disease. This is better than the first two attitudes but is not sufficient, for vigorous people are not always immune to infectious diseases. Indeed, some diseases, such as typhoid and influenza, make their most virulent attacks on the strong and healthy. The fourth and best attitude is a combination of the foregoing. One should seek to promote the very best condition of general health and take all reasonable precautions against disease. Then if disease does come in spite of all, a doctor should be consulted and, if need be, drugs may be used to help remove obstacles in the way of nature or tide the person over a crisis. Drugs should never be depended on as a cure for habitual stimulans.

Wheat Raised Before Christ. Ancient China raised wheat twenty-seven centuries before Christ.

Baptist Ship Is on Christianity Cruise

In and out among the hundreds of small islands in the Sea of Japan a little white ship threads its way on a never ending cruise of Christianity. It is the Church of the Fukuin Maru, and it carries the gospel message to thousands who could not be reached in any other way.

The ship, like the itinerant preacher and the circuit rider of the old days, makes part in lonely out of the way places. It dispenses a hospitality that might well be envied by American churches with better advantage. Natives flock to hear the messages delivered on its deck.

The Fukuin Maru is the only floating Baptist church in the world, and it is regarded by members of that denomination as one of the most unique efforts of the Christian missionary movement. For years it was commanded by Captain Luke Bickel, who recently died, and now the Northern Baptists are endeavoring to find a captain-ship who will take his place.

"There are 33 churches of the Baptist faith in Japan, with a total membership of 3,651. Plans have already been outlined, however, for the building of 15 new churches immediately and later to erect a church in every center of Baptist work.

"The people of Japan are ready to listen to the gospel," a recent report of the field survey committee of the Northern Baptist Convention says. "Their faith in the old religions is broken. But the gospel must be presented to them by men of their own race who are competent to present it in a strong, intelligent way. We must have thoroughly trained Japanese leaders and pastors who can command attention."

Careful consideration is being given the building of the Christian church in Japan so as to win the respect of the people. "A rented store on the side street does not command the respect of the Japanese any more than it does of the Italians in New York," the report states. "Our fine institutional church building, the Tanemaru in Tokyo, ought to be duplicated at every important center, and attractive, dignified houses of worship should be erected at every other point."

The Baptists are endeavoring so far as possible to develop complete independence of the Japanese churches, under their own leaders.

conditions of foreigners, to improve factory conditions and to prevent the immigrant from being exploited. They are also urged to help enlarge social, educational, civic and religious opportunities of the newcomer. Women of Baptist churches are urged to cultivate personal friendships with individual foreign born women. Children are being taught to make friends of the children of foreign born families.

Work among "New Americans" is specifically planned in the reports of the various state conventions of the Baptist Church. Eleven nationalities will be brought into contact with the plans as outlined in the reports of the state conventions of Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Colorado, Idaho, Arizona, Washington, Oregon and California. These nationalities include French, Russians, Poles, Italians, Roumanians, Hungarians, Slovaks, Mexicans, Japanese, Chinese and Scandinavians.

Twelve city mission societies, having a standard form of organization and operating in the larger cities, will be broadened in scope and more such social, educational and religious centers established as the present New World Movement plans are put into effect.

NORTHERN BAPTISTS HAVE NEW PAPER

February saw the appearance of Volume 1, Number 1, of "The Baptist," the new official organ of the Northern Baptist Convention. Issued in Chicago, the weekly had a first printing of 75,000.

Dr. Lathan A. Crandall, formerly of Minneapolis, is editor-in-chief. Dr. Clifton D. Gray, editor of "The Standard," which "The Baptist" has absorbed, is managing editor. "The Standard" had been a household word in Baptist homes since 1873.

Among the contributing editors of "The Baptist" are Governor Carl Milton of Maine, Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale and Helen Barrett Montgomery. The purpose of the new paper is "to portray from week to week the forward steps of the denomination in the general advancement of Christianity."

Employment by many American communities of visiting nurses has inspired foreign mission societies to plan similar work, and a training school is being developed at Moulmein (Burma) Hospital for Women, so that Burmese villages may have similar workers.

Sixty-seven languages are spoken in an area a little larger than Michigan, according to the report of Baptist missionaries in Assam, British India, a province which lies close to the border of Tibet. Assam is a great tea producing center, its exports being 1,700,000 chests in 1917.

Henry W. Bowes has been reappointed postmaster at Bath and Frank M. Evers at Fredonia. Guy O. Hixman has been appointed postmaster at Angelica in place of S. R. Hooker, resigned.

Campaign headquarters of the Republican women's state executive committee were opened in New York at the Hotel Van derbilt, Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, chairman of the committee, presiding.

Farmers in Allegany county unwillingly accepted the new milk price for May at $2.42, claiming that this price is much less than the cost of production brought about by the soaring feed and labor prices.

The unofficial convention of the Republicans at Saratoga in August will this year recommend a complete state ticket. This was announced in Syracuse by George A. Gyan, chairman of the Republican state committee.

A big packing house on the farm of Jay Crandall at Brcton, a prominent grape grower, which at one time was used as a basket factory, was burned to the ground with its contents. The loss is estimated at $4,000.

Plans to increase the capacity of the city hospital at Lockport to 50 beds, making the institution a registered hospital with the state health department, are being considered by the newly created board of managers.

On account of the unusually severe weather last winter, many growers of black raspberries near Dundee report their vines badly injured. In some fields it is estimated that as many as one-third of the bushes are killed.

Horseheads people are in luck. The Horseheads creamery has established a dip milk station and sells milk at the following prices: Single quart, 9 cents; three quarts, 25 cents; over three quarts, 8 cents a quart.

The Western New York Association of District Superintendents of Schools of which Superintendent E. A. Stratton of Randolph is president, will hold its 10th annual meeting on May 12 to 14 at the Hotel Statler in Buffalo.

Governor Smith has signed the Knight bill amending the penal law so as to make receivers of stolen property valued at more than $50 guilty of felony and receivers of stolen property worth less than $50 guilty of misdemeanor.

The board of managers of the Steuben county tuberculosis hospital has appointed Dr. C. E. Cobb of Alfred as superintendent of the institution to succeed Dr. Elliott L. Dorn, who resigned some weeks ago to become superintendent of a tuberculosis hospital in Lily Dale.

Buffalo and other Western New York delegates to the Republican national convention will leave in a special car on Saturday night, June 5. New York city delegates have chartered a train, which will pick up delegates at Albany, Syracuse and Rochester. The Buffalo car will be coupled to this train.

One woman, who owns a farm near Randolph and who on account of the scarcity of labor last fall harvested only a part of her potatoes which they were bringing from $1 to 1.50 a bushel, recently brought 30 bushels which had lain under the snow all winter into town, where she found a ready sale for them at $3 a bushel.

Binghamton will have a "teacherage," or home for teachers. The enterprise is the outcome of the housing scarcity, one of the great obstacles to obtaining and keeping public school teachers in that city. A stock company will be formed to finance the project. There will be rooms for teachers, a boarding club, rest, reading and tea rooms.

The Orleans County Agricultural society will receive $2,806 as its reimbursement from the state department of agriculture from premiums on exhibit at the 1919 exhibition at Albion. The Monroe County Agricultural Fair society, whose grounds are at Brockport, will draw $3,432; the Genesee County Fair society at Batavia $4,000, and the Rochester exhibition $4,000.

From present indications there will be a bumper crop of fruit of all kinds in Chautauque county this year. The apple, peach and pear orchards are reported to be blanketed with fertile buds. It is stated that every snow of last winter had a good effect on the orchards, and the growers declare that unless a heavy freeze comes on to kill the buds, the yield of apples, pears and peaches this season will be the heaviest in recent years.

The good roads committee of the board of supervisors has been authorized to co-operate with the county highway superintendent, Harry D. Waldo of Albion, in equipping for highway work the six big motor trucks recently turned over by the federal government to the state and assigned to Orleans county. It is estimated that it will cost about $700 each to put the machines in first class condition and replace missing parts.

Physicians in the rural districts of New York state are becoming increasingly scarce. Dr. Herman M. Biggs, New York state health commissioner, told the Society of American Physicians in convention at Atlantic City. He said the small town doctor is following the farm laborers to the cities. A recent survey in 20 rural districts in the state with a population of 300,000, showed, Dr. Biggs asserted, a total of only a little over 900 physicians, of whom only 3 per cent had been graduated in the last five years. There is also a scarcity of nurses in the country districts he said.

The Betts bill, making it a misdemeanor to furnish false news to a newspaper, was signed by Gov. Smith. The new law, which is incorporated in the penal law, reads: "Any person who knowingly and willfully states, delivers or transmits by any means whatsoever to any manager, editor, publisher, reporter or other employe or publisher of any newspaper, magazine, publication, periodical or serial, any false and untrue statement of a fact concerning any person or corporation, with intent that the same shall be published, is guilty of a misdemeanor." The Betts law becomes effective Sept. 1 next.

Watched Her From the Shelter of the Great Tree.

fashion myself in business—we could have our own house—a car—geez! what couldn't we have?"

Helen turned and stared at the man beside her as if she saw him for the first time. She stood erect, intent, nothing of the sleep-walker about her now.

"And suppose," she said evenly, "that David should recover—as we all hope?"

"There isn't a chance in a million," he answered exultantly.

"But you'd take that millionth chance by marrying the girl you say you love to your erstwhile rival, for the hope of money—?" Her voice faltered and stopped.

"Helen, do be reasonable," Ronald muttered. "Just try to think what it would mean to me!"

"You've said that twice," answered the girl, and without another word she turned and went back through the winter-racked garden to the house.

A white-capped nurse met her at the door. "Mr. Stevens is asking for you," she said in her quiet voice. "He is very low—the crisis will come tonight. We don't want to refuse him anything, but, please, don't stay more than five minutes."

At the door of the sick room Helen passed a moment to collect herself, then went softly in.

At sight of her David Stevens stopped his restless tossings and greeted her with a feeble smile.

"Helen," he whispered with labored breathing. "Helen, dear, I have been thinking—thinking—I've been wanting to do something for you—and I wanted, oh, how I wanted, to call you my wife, if only for a half hour. But I was selfish—suppose that after all I should live to bring misery to the life of the woman I love. That would

Home of General John J. Pershing

Gen. John J. Pershing has purchased the above home at 1748 B street, Lincoln, Neb., and has announced his intention to make Lincoln and Nebraska his permanent place of residence. In announcing the purchase of the home, the general said: "As soon as I retire from the service, I intend to make Lincoln my permanent home, and, as far as I know now, will enter business in Nebraska. I hope to see my son, Warren, graduate from the University of Nebraska, as I did nearly 30 years ago."

AMERICAN PHYSIQUE

Records show Yankee army better physically than any other army.

Every now and then somebody comes along with something like this which is taken from the columns of one of the best-known American newspapers: "Because the American girl doesn't eat enough, because she doesn't guard her health, because she doesn't get sufficient exercise, because she is below the physical standard, she is to blame, when she becomes the American mother, for the faulty rearing of the babies of the nation; she is to blame for the lack of strength and vitality of the youth of the nation; the generation which preceded her is to blame for the bodily unfitness of one of every four men called for service in the nation's armies."

It may be true, observes a writer in the Charleston News and Courier, that one out of every four men called for service in the war was rejected because of bodily unfitness but that was because America, having an almost unlimited number of men, was able to set the military physical standards very high and still get more soldiers than she needed. The American army was far away better physically than any other army; and after what America did in the war, it would be very hard to persuade any European, especially any German who served on the western front, that the physique of this nation is inferior.

"Appian Way" Was Ancient Rome's Main Thoroughfare and Fashionable Promenade

The Broadway of ancient Rome was in its time not less famous than the principal thoroughfare of New York. It was called the "Appian Way," and along it flowed all that was most interesting and picturesque in the life of the imperial city. Thronged with chariots and the vehicles of fashion, it was the favorite promenade of the idle rich. Over its smooth pavement successful generals, to whom had been granted the proud privilege of a triumph, led their returning armies, and hosts of unhappy prisoners of war.

The Via Appia, however, was not more than a city street. It was the metropolitan terminus of one of the great Roman military roads. Begun in 312 B. C., it ran through one of the great city gates outward to Lavinium to Capua, Tarentum beyond. One mile beyond the city was the magnificent Temple of Minerva.

Along the thoroughfare today are ruins of once beautiful buildings that resemble those of Northern France and Belgium. And no wonder, inasmuch as their destruction was wrought by barbarians who were the ancestors of the present day Germans. But the great road, like others of Roman origin, extending over most of Europe, remains a wonderful monument to a bygone civilization.

Mulberry Bark is Used to Make Paper for Clothing

"Kamike," as paper clothing is called in Japan, is made of real Japanese paper manufactured from mulberry bark. The paper has little "size" in it, and, though soft and warm, a thin layer of silk wadding is placed between two sheets of paper and the whole is quilted. Velvet shirts and trousers made in this way are made

Lights in Ocean Depths Afforded by Multitudes of Sea's Minute Animals

On still nights in tropical waters the sea oftentimes is illuminated as if by fires of its own. Every breaking wave crest looks like a flame. An oar disturbing the surface seems to dip into molten metal. Swimming fishes leave wakes of brilliant brightness.

The phenomenon is due to the presence in the water of multitudes of minute animals, each of which holds up its tiny torch, so to speak, to contribute to the illumination.

Marine creatures of many tribes—crustaceans, jelly fishes, cephalopods and fishes of various species carry lights. Some fishes have luminous disks on their heads, others have luminous spots along their sides.

The "angler" fish has a regular torch for a back fin, enabling it to see while looking out for victims which its light is expected to attract. Another finny species, found only at great depths, carries what looks like an electric light bulb, which serves an equivalent purpose.

It is in the depths of the ocean that the really remarkable light bearing fishes dwell. There is a realm of inky darkness, into which no ray of daylight penetrates. If they are to have light, they must furnish it themselves; and, to catch every possible glimmer, most of them are provided with huge eyes.

OLD TUNES

As the strata of perfume, heliotrope, rose, float in the garden when no wind blows, Come to us, go from us, whence no one knows;

So the old tunes float, in my mind, And go from me, leaving no trace behind, Like perfume borne on the hush of the wind.

But in the instant the airs remain I know the laughter and the pain Of times that will not come again;

I try to catch at many a tune Like petals of light fallen from the moon, Bright and bright on a dark lagoon.

But they float away—for who can hold Youth, or perfume, or the moon's gold? — Sara Teasdale, in Scribner's.

Maine's Indian Named Rivers Are Numerous—Hard to Spell

The nomenclature of Maine probably outdoes that of any other state in furnishing memory tests in spelling. Among its Indian named rivers are the Penobscot, Kennebec, Androscoggin, Allagash and Saco, and among the lakes and ponds Messecumcungtic, Sylladadobah, Sebago, Schoodic, Oupseptic, Caucesomoc, Pamcoog-kamock, Baskellegas, Cobhoseedec-tee, Chingquassbamtacook, Metchunkunk, Pennesowasee, Maran-choic, Amiscoggin, Chesuncook and Wolekenabacook.

SEE NEED OF GOOD ROADS

"Doughboys" Who Served in France Impressed by the Excellence of That Country's Highways.

Signs multiply that the returning soldier is to be the strongest of all apostles of good roads. He knows that except for the network of highways leading to Verdun not even the heroic poilu could have kept the Germans from passing. Day and night, as long as the peril lasted, an unending line of motor tracks rolled into the threatened region and back again. On a scale only slightly less impressive, it was always so when there was a "show up." In the minds of our soldiers, however, the military need of stone roads seems less important than the commercial need, and always a deep sense seems present of the beauty of the smooth and shaded highway. The Amaroc News, official organ of our army on the Rhine, points out that of the 2,750,000 miles of highway in the United States, less than 275,000 miles, or one in ten, has any form of surfacing whatever. But it becomes lyric when it notes that in France "each road, it matters not how small or how seldom used, has its quota of beautiful shade trees, whose limbs form an arch to protect the traveler from the sun." The American legion will have posts throughout the land, and wherever there is a post there will be a band of men who know the value of easy communication and who know how to have their way.—New York Times.

FOR MORE COMMUNITY MUSIC

Boston Newspaper Makes Strong Point of its Value in Creating a Sense of Unity.

The growth of community music means many things, remarks the Boston Herald. It means an endless source of pure pleasure to those who listen, and far more to those who participate. It means a mighty stimulus to the love and understanding of good music. It means that at last we are beginning to weary of being entertained by others and mean to create and perform our own music, through our own efforts. Most important of all, it means that America is discovering at last that she is a united nation and is expressing her joyful sense of unity in song.

Let us see that the children have their share in this national awakening, a voice in this national chorus. Let every village, town and city gather its young people and train them for a community chorus or orchestra. There could be no surer means of making them loyal to each other and to their country and of preparing a musical future for the nation.

The word war has taught us, for one thing, how to come together as a community for spiritual expression in song. We shall be the richer if we preserve and cultivate this practice.

For Home Builders to Decide.

The first question to confront the home builders is: "In what section shall we locate?" That is a question for the individual to decide, but the things he should look at carefully and answer before buying are: Is it a healthful location? Is the transportation service good? Has the town complete sewerage system? Is the water supply good? Can gas and electric light be supplied at a reasonable rate? Are there city conveniences, such as mail delivery, fire and police protection, good schools, churches, clubs, and, last but not least, what is the possible future of the place? Is it well protected by restrictions for residential purposes? Will two-family or apartment houses encroach on business come too near? It is the restrictions on the surrounding property that are of vital interest to the purchaser, not the restrictions on the place being bought. You know what you are going to do and you also want to know what others in the vicinity would do, should they be so disposed.

Primer on Billboards.

A little primer on the city and its billboard problem:
"Haven't the property owners a right to do as they please with their property?"
The United States Supreme court said in a decision in 1908: "The state is quasi sovereign and representative of the interest of the public has a standing in court to protect the atmosphere, the water and the forests within its territory, irrespective of the consent or dissent of the private owners immediately concerned."
"But does this right apply specifically to billboards?"
Yes. In 1917 the Supreme court said: "A city, exercising the police power may prohibit the erection of billboards in residence districts in the interest of the safety, morality, health and decency of the community."

Clark-Streeter.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Streeter at Venice Center on Saturday, May 8, when their older daughter, Lois Mildred, became the bride of Mr. Floyd Harry Clark, son of Mr. James Clark of Ludlowville.

At 4 o'clock the bridal party descended the stairs to the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March played by Mrs. Lucy T. Coddington of Syracuse, and took their places 'neath an arch of evergreen. Rev. L. W. Scott of Auburn performed the ceremony, the ring service being used.

The bride wore a gown of blue silk and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Miss Gertrude Streeter, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. She wore dark green satin and carried pink carnations. Mr. Charles Peckham acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a wedding supper was served to about sixty guests.

Guests were present from Auburn, Syracuse, Ithaca, Ludlowville, King Ferry, Genoa, Poplar Ridge, Moravia and Venice.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts including linen, cut glass, furniture, silver, pyrex, blankets and currency.

After showers of rice and confetti, Mr. and Mrs. Clark left for a short wedding trip. They are at home to their friends at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Streeter.

Plant Trees as Memorial.

Four evergreen trees were planted on the lawn of St. John's Episcopal church in Auburn, in memory of the four members of that parish who lost their lives in the World war. The trees were set out with appropriate ceremonies on Friday afternoon last.

The departed service men whose memory was thus honored were Lieut. Eugene Irish, Company F, 167th Regiment, 42nd Division; Sergt. William Harry Ward, Company M, 108th Infantry, 27th Division; Corp. Clyde Mead, Company M, 108th, and Pvt. Mather de St. Croix, Company M, 23rd Infantry.

City Judge Kennard Underwood, who was a lieutenant with the American forces overseas, delivered an appropriate address, laying stress upon the appropriate nature of the memorial. The trees will be marked with appropriate plates or tablets at a later date, it was explained.

- SYNOPSIS:
Scene I. Early one morning in Flowerland, while wandering about waiting for Aurora, Queen of the Dawn, her Flower Nymphs are frightened by a sudden encounter with a lot of Imps. Confusion ensues until Aurora appears. The Imps prove to be Princes bearing a message to Aurora, and an invitation for herself and Nymphs from Apollo, the Sun King, to a feast in Sunlight Palace. The Imps assert that Apollo is very tired of sleeping, and longs to be released from behind the "Silvery Bars of Dawn," where he is imprisoned. All hasten to Apollo.
Scene II. Aurora and Nymphs, attended by the Princes, open the "Silvery Bars of Dawn," and Apollo appears. After the greeting of Apollo and Aurora, amid showers of flowers from Flower Nymphs, all join in the chorus finale, "Oh, Then to the Feast in the Palace of Sunlight." Tableau.

Low Pay Reduces Pastors.

For the first time in the history of the Pittsburgh Presbytery twenty-one of the 139 churches are without pastors, it was stated at a session of the quarterly meetings of the Presbytery. Of the 57,500 members of the Presbytery nearly 8,000 through the lack of permanent pastors, have to rely on supply pastors to conduct their Sunday services, and some are not served.

It was pointed out that whereas statistics for the entire country had shown that one doctor in five and one lawyer in seven receive $3,000 a year, only one preacher in one hundred ever attains to that salary.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

FROCKS FOR GIRLS

Suggestion for Two-Fabric Dress for Spring Wear.

Outfit May Be of Silk or Wool With Panel of Plain Velvet; Embroidery Optional.

The sketch offers a suggestion for making a two-fabric frock for a little girl of six or eight years, or the panel idea may be employed in making over a last season frock. The dress may be of silk or wool fabric with panel of plain velvet, or the dress proper may be of plaid with plain panel. The use of embroidery or braiding as an extraneous touch is, of course, optional.

Spring dresses for little girls are now being bought up by all the shops in anticipation of the early demand for them, as the average mother attends in advance to the wardrobe of her small daughters, buying or making, nearly all the clothes that will be needed during the coming spring and summer. In the first showing of little checked gingham frocks an exceptionally smart model shows a straight line dress with elbow sleeves dignified by a scarf of self fabric attached to the back of the collarless neck and drawn to the front, sweater scarf fashion, the whole being held in to the figure by a little black patent leather belt. The material used for the dress was red and black checked gingham. Touches of black braiding were used as trimming.

Cotton materials, such as gingham and rep, that are used in generous quantity in the development of children's dresses are very high in price at present, so that any dress, whether made at home or purchased ready to wear in the shops, will cost three or four times as much as it would a few seasons ago.

Short sleeves are shown in nearly all spring and summer dresses, whatever the material. A very attractive trimming touch is the use of tailored points or scallops on the many ruffles used, both on skirts and sleeves of the frocks.

The popularity of velvet is the real feature of midwinter apparel for young girls and children. Another feature is the tendency to follow in general line the styles developed for grown-ups.

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES.

Keep piece of charcoal in refrigerator. Everything will keep sweet. Soaking potatoes 15 minutes in cold water before boiling makes them meaty.

Straight hanging dresses are the most satisfactory for working about the house.

If alum is added to the paste used in covering boxes with paper for scapbooks, moths or mice will not invade them.

To remove marks made by placing hot dishes on a polished table, rub well with turpentine. Leave this on for some time, say half an hour, then polish and the marks should have quite disappeared.

When the wall paper happens to need a patch and the new paper is conspicuously bright compared with the old, hang the new piece in the sunshine, watch closely, and you will find that it will soon sun-tone to match the old paper. You may then patch your wall and the patch will be hardly noticeable.

Off Cloth as Trimming.

Offcloth is the latest addition to dress trimmings in Paris. The piece of woven ribbon proved so alluring that fashion, has gone one better than woven ribbons and provided offcloth. Strappings and motifs of it are incorporated with embroidery and silk

LITTLE ERNIE AND HIS PET RABBIT

This young gentleman in the picture with the rabbit is Ernie.

Ernie is one of the little boys who lives at the Salvation Army Rescue Home, 69 Cottage street, Buffalo. Ernie boards at the Home while his mamma goes out to work.

In addition to caring for fatherless little boys the Home is a refuge and hospital for unfortunate girls and women who have served prison sentences and who need some sanctuary where they may plan a new start in life.

The Salvation Army drive which is continuing from May 10 to 20 will furnish funds for enlarging the Home and making it a greater power for good in the community.

Mothers of children who live at the home, have the privilege of eating supper with their children twice a week and of putting them to bed.

"This keeps up the mother touch," says Adjutant Miss M. E. McGee, in charge of the Home.

POLICEMEN JOIN S. A. CAMPAIGNERS

Take Part in Drive Now Going On for Home Service Fund.

"I'll do anything for the Salvation Army," was the way Chief James Higgins of the Buffalo Police Force expressed himself when he was asked whether the good offices of the coppers couldn't be impressed into service in the nation-wide ten million dollar drive now being conducted by the Salvation Army.

"The services of the police department are at your disposal," he added. "Fair enough," said Brigadier Edwy White, head of the Western New York work of the army. "In fact, it's even better than we anticipated."

And now every policeman on the department is working in the interests of the Home Service Fund. Chief Higgins is commander-in-chief of the army of policemen, heads of precincts are captains of the different division and the lieutenants under him are in command of squads.

The city is being thoroughly canvassed. Every home is being visited.

ONCE A PAN HANDLER NOW A CAPTAIN.

Religiously Avoided Work Now He Enjoys It With Salvation Army.

Five years ago Fred Brennecke was a professional pan handler and as such eked out a hand to mouth existence. Work was distasteful to him and he studiously avoided it. One evening, pan handling having been particularly unproductive, he was forced to the necessity of applying to the Salvation Army Industrial Home on East 129th street, New York City, for food and shelter. Both were supplied as well as a bath, the latter compulsory, and clean clothes.

He accepted all but didn't relish the idea of doing work in compensation, consequently he planned on "beating it." But Mr. Brennecke reckoned without his boss. Somebody handed him a brush and varnish and set him to work at varnishing an old kitchen table. This was a novelty and not altogether displeasing. The work bug got him.

Fred didn't beat it. He stayed and enlisted in the Salvation Army. Today he is Captain Brennecke and occupies the position of superintendent of an industrial home conducted by the army.

Work that was once distasteful to him now he finds a pleasure. He's an untiring worker, up early and to bed late. Just now he's working tooth and nail in behalf of the Salvation Army's nation-wide drive for $16,000,000 for the Home Service Fund. This drive closes on May 20th

2ND MISSION COMES FROM PHILIPPINES

Body Headed by Senate President Quezon Reiterates Demand for Independence.

That the Filipino people are in earnest in their demand for immediate independence is indicated by the coming to the United States of a second Philippine mission to work for independence. Coincident with this announcement the War Department received a cable from Manila stating that the all-Filipino legislature had adopted resolutions reiterating its plea for immediate independence.

The second mission, like the first, is composed of the leading men of the islands and will work in the United States not only for immediate independence, but also to bring about "better understanding, greater confidence and closer economic relations between the United States and the Philippines."

The mission is again headed by Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, who is well known in America, having been for six years resident commissioner to the United States. Mr. Quezon and the Hon. Sergio Osmena, Speaker of the Philippine House of Representatives and Vice President of the Council of State, are the leaders of the Nacionalista party, which has been in power since 1907.

Senate President Manuel L. Quezon.

While Speaker Osmena is not so well known in the United States as Quezon, he is considered one of the ablest men in the islands. Senate President Quezon recently referred to Osmena as "the greatest Filipino since Rizal."

The personal relations between Osmena and Quezon are probably without a parallel in modern politics. They have been the leading political figures in the islands for 12 years, yet there has never been the slightest indication of rivalry between them. Throughout their college life as well as their long political service each has refused to be a candidate for any position that the other aspired to.

During the years Quezon was the Philippine delegate in the American Congress he won the esteem and confidence of both the Republican and Democratic sides of the chamber. Whenever he spoke he was assured of a good attendance. One of the official short hand reporters once declared Quezon used the purest English of any member of the House.

Osmena, as president of the Nacionalista party, is the leader of the national movement for independence. "Osmena is the premier 'de facto' of the Philippines," said a leading Filipino journalist, now in America. "A very conscientious and tireless worker, thorough and persistent, a genius for grasping the big features as well as the smallest details of public affairs, cool headed, quiet by temperament and education, a deep thinker, an eloquent speaker, a polished writer, a keen observer of men—such is Osmena."

Both Osmena and Quezon have been consistent advocates of Philippine independence, yet when the occasion demanded it they have never hesitated to champion the cause of America's good intentions toward the islands.

FILIPINOS WANT AMERICA TO GIVE INDEPENDENCE

Maximo M. Kalaw Declares U. S. Cannot Consistently Refuse "Self-Determination."

By MAXIMO M. KALAW, Secretary of the Philippine Mission, Author "The Case for the Filipinos," "Self-Government in the Philippines," etc.

"When they show sufficient capacity," "When they are able to govern themselves," "When they are educated enough." Thus run the answers of many Americans pressed with the question as to when the Filipinos should be granted their independence. Now, "ability," "capacity" and "sufficient education"—What do they mean in black and white?

Senator Shogun may think no people is capable of self-government that does not establish the judicial recall, or that has no Billy Sunday. John Smith of Somerville may think no people is capable of self-government that does not vote his democratic ticket, or go to church on Sundays.

"Capacity for self-government" is as broad and elastic as the world, and if that should be the criterion for the granting of Philippine independence, America might as well say to the Filipinos, "I will give you independence when it pleases me to do so."

Fortunately, the American promise to the Philippines is not based on such obscure and abstract conditions. It is based on a definite, tangible thing. When America, through her Congress, officially told the Filipino people that they would be granted their independence as soon as they could establish a stable government, no abstract or obscure condition was meant. Stable government, according to American usage, means a certain, definite thing.

The United States promised the Cubans the same thing, that "when they have established a stable government, then American troops would be withdrawn." As soon as the Cuban people elected a government suited to themselves, capable of maintaining order and fulfilling all international obligations, there was a stable government in Cuba, and American troops were withdrawn.

When Congress passed the Jones law, it simply borrowed the phrase "stable government" from the Cuban history and applied it to the Philippines. The history of Philippine legislation shows that in black and white. With full knowledge of what it meant, the Filipino people accepted the Jones law and immediately began setting up the stable government required by Congress as a pre-requisite to independence. The stable government is now a fact. It is indeed more than that; it is an undisputed fact.

The official representative of the United States in the Philippine Islands, the Governor General, reported to the American Congress and the administration that "the Filipino people have established the stable government demanded by Congress as a pre-requisite for the granting of independence—namely, a government elected by the suffrage of the people, which is supported by the people, which is capable of maintaining order and of fulfilling its international obligations."

The Philippine question is therefore no longer a question of politics, argument or supposition. To the Philippine mind, at least, it is now a question of whether the United States is ready to discharge its own obligations fully and completely. America went before the world in the recent war as the avowed champion of "self-determination" and Filipinos cannot see how America can consistently refuse to act.

The Filipino people, however, have no grudge or grievance against the American people. There is a message of friendship and gratitude. They seek independence as the natural and logical outcome of America's policy in the islands and of America's solemn promise to them. They come willingly to give privileges and concessions not incompatible with their national welfare.

The Filipino people are willing to accept independence under any of the following conditions: Under a League of Nations, guaranteeing its territorial integrity; under the protectorship of the United States for the first few years; under a treaty of neutrality between the United States, England, Japan, France and other powers, or even without any condition whatever—absolute and complete independence. They have no fear of Japan. Philippine independence, in our opinion, is not inimical to Japanese interests. The Japanese are now free to come to the Philippines, but at the present time there are less than 10,000 Japanese in the islands. There are six times as many Japanese in California as there are in the entire Philippine Archipelago.

The Filipinos are willing to take their chance as a nation. Smaller nations beset by graver problems and dangers have taken a more hazardous chance at freedom, and have succeeded.

The Happy Man

By REV. L. W. GOSNELL, Assistant Dean, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.—Ps. 1:1-3.

Literally, the Psalmist said, "Oh the happiness of the man!"

In order to attain the happiness he sets forth certain things: must be avoided—the counsel of the ungodly, the way of sinners, the seat of the scornful.

It will be observed there is a gradation here. A man may begin by giving heed to the advice of those who are rebellious in principle—for such are the "ungodly." Then he may be emboldened to follow the crooked path of those who leave the way of righteousness and whose acts are wrong as well as their principles—for such are "sinners." Finally, he may settle down among the most abandoned class those who do not only practice evil but scoff at all goodness and good men—for such are the "scorners."

John Wesley's Hundred Men.

Said John Wesley, "Give me a hundred men who fear nothing but God and hate nothing but sin and I will shake England." God gave him a hundred such men and England—and the whole world, indeed—was shaken. That fear of the Lord which makes us hate even the garment spotted by the flesh is the first requisite to the happiness of which the Psalmist speaks.

But having set before us the negative aspect of the matter, the writer of the Psalm now goes on to the positive: "His delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night."

The "law of the Lord" refers to the Scriptures generally. For example, John 10:34 and 15:25 show us that the Psalms, and not the writings of Moses only, are designated "the law."

One has well said: "This delight in the Word of God is alone mentioned, because it comprises everything; the summary at once of all that he commands and all that he promises; the preservative against sin and temptation in every form, as the Psalmist elsewhere says—'Thy word have I hid within my heart, that I might not sin against thee'; and the sure guide in all difficulties and dangers," as he says again—"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path"; at once 'able to make wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus,' and 'profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works' (II Tim. 3:15-17)."

Inwardly Digesting the Scriptures.

Note also that the happy man not only delights in the law of the Lord, but "in his law doth he meditate day and night." His interest in the Word of God is not a matter of stated times only, but when prosecuting his business by day and when waking in the night he reverts to it with pleasure and ruminates upon it. He not only "reads, marks and learns" it, but "inwardly digests" it.

Certain blessed results are now noted in the case of the man who, on the one hand, avoids sin and, on the other, makes the law of God his delight. He is like a tree bearing fruit in season, for in every situation and relation of life he adorns the doctrine of God his Savior in all things. The expression, "planted by the rivers of waters," shows he is under the special care of the heavenly Husbandman; it refers to the practice in the East of watering the trees in a garden "by leading rills or rivulets of water along the rows from a reservoir or well sunk in the midst."

The leaf of such a plant of the Lord shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper; or, as the words may be read, "shall come to perfection." The buds of a righteous life come to maturity. The righteous are not disappointed. What a contrast to the ungodly!

The secret of it all is given in the closing verse of the Psalm: "The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous." He looks upon them approvingly, and his favor is life.

Well may we exclaim with the Psalmist: "Oh! the happiness of the man!"

A Mood. There is a transcendent mood of the spirit wherein the meaneast flower that blows awakens thoughts too deep for tears; when the grass blade is oracular and the common bush seems afire with God, and when the splendors of closing day repeat the flash of jasper and beryl. It is when the soul is keenly conscious of relations to systems surpassing sense and to a creative personal spirit, by whom all things are inter-fused.—Richard Sailer Storrs.

The Inland Marine Corporation

now offers you the chance to get these taxes back and to make money besides by purchasing some of the limited number of shares of its common stock.

On April 1, 1920, the Inland Marine Corporation was formed through the consolidation of the Shippers' Navigation Company and the Long Island Barge Company.

It now owns and is operating a fleet of ten cargo steamers and forty-seven barges on the New York Barge Canal from New York City to Buffalo. It is the only organized transportation line operating the canal.

It has the finest fleet of barges in the country and is the only coastwise company in the world with a billing and hauling over 300 water and rail routes to any part of the world. Every foot of water in the fleet has been used for the season of 1920 for east bound cargoes.

INDIAN EX-CRIMINALS SPIN SALVATION WITH SILKEN THREAD

Hindoo woman reeling silk under Salvation Army tutelage. (Insert) Former criminal chief who has been led to better ways by the Salvationists.

Silk, silk and salvation form a combination that is working miracles beneath the tropic sun of India.

Sin has rocked in the very cradles of the criminal tribesmen for centuries. That same vicious system of caste which has sentenced the son of a weaver to weave and the son of a storekeeper to keep store has through ages condemned the son of a criminal tribesman to rustle cattle, pillage and commit murder.

But now the Salvation Army by using silk to take the sin out of the "crime" is bringing about both the material and spiritual salvation of a people.

These criminal tribesmen, gathered into settlements by the British government, were taken in hand by the Salvationists, were taught to care for the mulberry trees, to rear the silk worms, to reel and weave the silk. They have ceased to be criminals. They have become expert weavers, and they like their new jobs. They work at them more industriously than they ever did at banditry. And they are now reeling and weaving more than a ton of raw silk a month.

In each country the Salvation Army adapts its methods to the peculiar needs. Here in the United States it does a great work among the prisoners in penitentiaries. It maintains nurseries in the slums, rescue homes and maternity hospitals, industrial and Americanization centers and institutions of many other kinds. To support these during next year the Army will ask the people of this country to contribute $10,000,000 during its 1920 Home Service appeal from May 10 to May 20.

Tercentenary Celebration.

The Sulgrave Institution is an association with members drawn from both England and America, which has the custody of the ancestral home of George Washington in England, known as Sulgrave Manor. It is under the auspices of this association, allied with other organizations, that the celebration of the tercentenary of the coming of the Pilgrims, of the signing of the Mayflower compact, and of the calling by the Virginians of their first legislative assembly, is held. The committee on education, of which the New York State Commissioner of Education is the chairman, has been selected, and under its guidance it is hoped that every school in the country will sometime during the period from May 1 to Dec. 31, 1920, celebrate this tercentenary with appropriate exercises.

The committee which has the program for schools and colleges in hand suggests that teachers and others make use of the following days so that as far as possible there will be celebrations simultaneously throughout the country in the year 1920, on June 4-6, Nov. 11, 24-28, Dec. 19, 20.

Peach Crop Estimate.

Government estimates give New York state, as a whole, an estimated fifty per cent of a peach crop for this season. The same source of information in April of last year gave New York State, as a whole, an estimated eighty-five per cent of a peach crop, but their final estimate of actual production was twenty-five per cent of a crop last year. The difference between the estimate in April and their final estimate was due to a tremendous dropping shortly after the blossom period.

California produced 16,000,000 bushels of peaches last year or over one-half of the total production of the country, and promises another large crop this season, nearly 90 per cent of which will be canned or dried.

The indications now are that Georgia will ship 10,000 carloads of peaches this season.

25 Per Cent SAVED NOW

THIS is the wedge—a sharp wedge—that we are driving into the high cost of living with the hope that it will split the merchandising market wide open and let in both light and reason. High prices do not begin with the retailer. They begin back with the increased cost of raw material, with the restriction and high cost of manufacture, with the tying up of goods by speculators, and with unsettled conditions of labor. But high prices do culminate with the retailer and the sledge-hammer blow that may break their backbone must begin at the point of contact with the consumer.

You may choose from the entire retail stocks in our Big Store all at 25 Per Cent Off (with few exceptions)

We believe this is the proper time to begin to reconstruct business on a peace-time basis.

Although our store is more modern, more attractive, more sanitary, yet our prices are based on a lower margin of profit and lower than anywhere that we know of. We sell you better garments for the same money than you pay for garments in smaller shops. You never need hesitate to make this store "your store." The sensible American woman will find the best kind of service here.
