NEWS OF THE STATE

EVENTS IN AND OUT OF THE EMPIRE STATE.

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

District Attorney Dayton and his partner, W. E. Woodin, have dissolved partnership, owing to Mr. Dayton's official duties.

Directors of the Morris fair have voted to add $1,000 to their already liberal premium list. Horse racing has no pull and the farmers get the benefit.

Sidney expects to have at least one representative at the coming Paris exposition. Editor Bird of The Record, has decided to take a trip across the water, and besides visiting friends and relatives in different parts of England, expects to spend a week or more in Paris, taking in the sights of the great show. He is booked to sail by steamer Majestic of the White Star line on June 6.

Jones, of Binghamton, whose unique advertising earned him the sobriquet of "Jones, He Pays the Freight," has been in obscurity for five years. He lost nearly all his property, then tried Klondike and failed and finally invested in a zinc mine in Missouri. This last he pushed with his old-time energy, and at length developed one of the richest lead mines in the country, and "Jones He Struck it Rich," is likely to be his future appellation.

Manager Carr has signed "Tommy" Welch of Auburn as an outfielder for Moravia's baseball nine this season. Welch played several games with the local nine last year and put up a good article of ball. Five games have been scheduled so far, as follows: May 30, with Toronto University, in Auburn; May 31, with Cortland State League, in Moravia; June 8 and 9, with Cuban Giants in Auburn; June 11, same in Moravia.—Moravia Republican.

The outlook from present indications is that there will be no beet sugar made at the factory in Rome the coming season. The concern is in financial straits and has gone into the hands of a receiver. This state of affairs is said to be due to the factory which is to be started at Lyons, where the acreage for the Rome factory is located, and where the promoters of the Lyons factory are offering beet growers as good as $6 per ton for their beets.

Stephen Willard Pierce died at his home in Ashland, Mass., April 7. Mr. Pierce was born in Genoa, N. Y., Feb. 23, 1833. Early in life he moved to Easthampton, Mass., and in 1862 enlisted as a musician in Co. K, 52nd Mass. regiment. At his return home he founded the Mt. Town thread mill. In 1882 he went to Ashland to accept the foremanship of the Warren thread mills. In 1892 and 1897 he suffered paralytic strokes. He is survived by his wife and one daughter. Charles Niles of Locke is a half brother of the deceased.

Charles J. Martin died at his home in Eaton on Thursday morning, April 19, aged 58 years. He was born in Lewis county, N. Y., Aug. 9, 1842, and when he was six years old moved with his parents to the state of Illinois. At the age of 16 he enlisted as a drummer boy in an Illinois regiment, and served in the civil war, where he was twice wounded. After the war he was in a scouting expedition and crossed the plains to California in company with Col. William F. Cody, the famous scout, now known as "Buffalo Bill." He returned to New York state in 1876, and married Miss Cora A. Baker, at Pine Woods, and they came to Eaton about ten years ago. Besides his wife, he leaves a brother and five sisters, who reside in the West.

Tuttle's Gold Mine.

It now looks as if D. M. Tuttle of this village would not receive any particular benefit from the deposit of gold recently discovered on his farm southeast of this village. According to the laws of this state, discoveries of gold or other precious minerals are public property and a title to a farm does not convey a title to a deposit of gold, if it should be discovered. The first persons staking out claims are entitled to the precious metal. The Bee is informed that Mr. Tuttle's tenant, Putnam Vibbert, and certain other individuals have staked out all the valuable claims in the Cole Hill gold district. It is probable that a big lawsuit will result as some of the claims are said to overlap each other. Mr. Tuttle keenly feels the disappointment of having what appeared to be sudden wealth wrested from him by a technicality, which he did not understand. No report has yet been received from the United States Assay Department on the richness of the dirt on Mr. Tuttle's farm, but several who claim to know considerable about gold mining say that the deposit is very rich in yellow metal.—Canastota Journal.

The Greatest of Campaigns

IN THE middle of the month of October, 1805, Emperor Napoleon was with his magnificent army of Boulogne, preparing for the invasion of England. Secretly Austria and Russia entered into a coalition with England against him, and prepared to assail him in the rear. Five hundred thousand allied troops were immediately on the march, for the invasion of France, without any declaration of war. Of these, 250,000 were Austrians, 200,000 Russians, 50-000 English, Swedes and Neapolitans.
 There were also 200,000 Prussians, formidably armed and disciplined, eager to join the coalition upon the first reverse which should attend the French arms. To meet these armies of combined Europe, Napoleon had but 186,000 combatants, 38,000 of whom were horsemen.

The allies supposed that they were moving in secrecy, and that they were to strike their victim by surprise.
 But a vigilant eye was watching them.
 The moment the Austrian troops commenced their march, by the invasion of Bavaria, Napoleon's ally, he put the seal of silence upon all the avenues of information, and, by means of 20,000 carriages which he had in readiness, transported his army, with almost the speed of the whirlwind, across France passed both the Rhine and the Danube, and planted his batteries in the rear of the division of 80,000 Austrians who had entered the Bavarian kingdom. The retreat of the foe was thus cut off, and he was separated from his supplies and could hope for no aid. The Austrians could not have been more amazed had an army descended from the skies.

As Napoleon was thus rapidly concentrating his troops in the rear of the foe, he wrote to Talleyrand:

"The Austrians are in the defiles of the Black Forest. God grant that they may remain there. My only fear is that we shall frighten them too much. If they allow me to gain a few more marches I shall have completely turned them. Forbid the newspapers to make any more mention of the army than if it did not exist."

Napoleon seemed to be omnipresent. Night and day, almost without food or sleep, he was on horseback, galloping from post to post. For eight days and nights of incessant rain, the emperor had not taken off his boots, or even thrown himself upon a couch of rest. One night Napoleon overtook a brigade of his soldiers on the march. Gathering them around him, as a father would assemble his children, he explained to them minutely the situation of the enemy, and the maneuvers by which he hoped to gain a triumphant and bloodless victory. He had no fear that there would be a single deserter to betray his trust. As he put spurs to his horse and disappeared in the darkness, a burst of irrepressible enthusiasm cheered him on his way.

In less than three weeks 30,000 of the Austrians were taken captive, and 36,000 more were trembling behind the ramparts of Ulm, all possibility of escape being cut off. The batteries of the French were placed upon the adjacent heights, and now and then a shell fell into the city, portentous of the approaching storm.
 Gen. Mack, in despair, sent Prince Maurice to the emperor with a flag of truce. The prince, as was customary on such occasions, was conducted through the lines of the French army to the emperor's headquarters, blindfolded. When the bandages were removed he found himself in the presence of Napoleon, in a storm-torn tent, through which the rain dripped freely. The emperor stood upon a loose board, which alone protected his feet from the water which deluged the plain. Nothing remained for the Austrians but unconditional surrender.

The next day was clear, cold and brilliant, when a scene was witnessed seldom paralleled in the annals of war. Thirty-six thousand Austrians marched out from the city and laid down their arms before the conqueror. Napoleon stood upon the hillside, before a camp-fire, as the melancholy procession defiled before him.
 In generous terms he said to the officers, humiliated and grief-stricken:
 "Gentlemen, war has its chances.
 Often victorious, you must expect sometimes to be vanquished. Your master wages against me an unjust war. I say candidly, I know not for what I am fighting."

The exultation of the French army was boundless. Sixty-six thousand prisoners, 200 pieces of cannon, 90 standards and an immense amount of military stores had been taken in a campaign of 20 days, and with the loss of but 1,500 men. A few thousands only of the great army of invasion had escaped, in fugitive bands, through the defiles of the mountains.
 But astounding as was this success, the French army was still in imminent peril. But 80,000 of the 500,000 of their army had been captured or dispersed.

hurryng down through the plains of Poland, at the head of 116,000 troops.
 Dense columns of Austrians, numbering 70,000, from Italy and the Tyrol, were making forced marches to combine with the Russians. A Hungarian army, 80,000 strong, was goaded forward to join the enemies of France.
 Thirty thousand English troops, landed in Hanover, united, with Swedish and Neapolitan auxiliaries, were hastening to the scene of conflict.
 The queen of Prussia had also effected an interview between her husband,

Frederick William, and the emperor of Russia.

These two sovereigns met at midnight, in the tomb of Frederick the Great at Potsdam, and over the remains of the great warrior pledged their mutual faith against France.
 Prussia placed her army of 200,000 men at the service of the allies. Napoleon was nearly 500 miles distant from his capital, and all Europe deemed him ruined beyond redemption. His only safety lay in attacking his vastly outnumbering foes before they could concentrate.

"Forward to Vienna," was the command. It was an audacious march of nearly 400 miles farther into the very heart of the enemies' country, regardless of impregnable fortresses and swarming armies upon his right and his left.

"If Napoleon," says his brother Louis, "in his bold and often hazardous actions, seemed to calculate wholly on his good fortune, no person seemed to leave less to accident in the conception of his plans. He always considered things under every imaginable aspect. And though he never, or scarcely ever, experienced reverses, he was in every enterprise prepared beforehand for whatever might happen."

At the command: "Forward to Vienna!" the whole French army moved resistlessly on, sweeping the valley of the Danube like an inundation.
 All Austria was terror-stricken. The panic in Vienna was dreadful, as each day the resistless host drew nearer.
 On the morning of the 13th of November the eagles of France glittered upon the heights which surrounded the Austrian capital. Resistance was hopeless. Emperor Francis, with a fragment of his army, had fled to the north, seeking the protection of Russia. A deputation of citizens waited upon Napoleon, imploring his clemency, and surrendering to him the keys of the city. No private property was allowed to be touched. But the government chests and arsenals, filled to repletion with the munitions of war, fell into the hands of the victor. One hundred thousand muskets, 2,000 cannon and military supplies of every kind replenished the stores of the French.

In 40 days the emperor had transported an army of 90,000 men from the shores of the ocean to the remote capital of Vienna. His descent of the Danube was a continued battle and a continued victory. But his situation now seemed more perilous than ever before.
 Detachments which he had been forced to leave by the way, to protect lines of communication, had dwindled his available troops, that he could lead into battle, to but 70,000 men.

Armies in the vicinity, amounting to 350,000 men, were straining every nerve to concentrate and destroy him, but they did not know the strategic skill of their opponent. He paused for a moment to decide where to strike the first blow, and then fixing his eyes upon the legions of Alexander crowding down through the defiles of the Carpathian mountains, and who were soon to be joined by Emperor Francis and his routed troops, he gave again the order for the onward march.

The blasts of winter already swept the hills whitened with snow. But the indomitable host, eagerly following their leader, plunged into the wilderness of the north, until they disappeared from the observation of France.
 On the 1st of December, the French, 70,000 in number, met the Russians and Austrians, 100,000 strong, on the field of Austerlitz, more than a thousand miles from the capital of France. The conflict was short and terrible. Alexander and Francis, from an adjacent eminence, witnessed the discomfiture and almost the annihilation of their united army. Accompanied by a few guards, they joined the fugitives and fled from the gory field, depressed with the thought of their defeat.

A flag of truce, borne by the hand of Prince John of Austria, was sent to Napoleon, imploring an armistice. It was readily granted, and the next morning Emperor Francis repaired to an appointed place for an interview with Napoleon. He found the French emperor standing by a camp-fire built by the side of a wind-mill, which alone protected him from the wind which alone protected him from the wind which swept the frozen hills.

"I receive you," said Napoleon, "in the only palace which I have inhabited for the last two months."

"You have made such good use of that habitation," Francis replied, "that it ought to be agreeable to you."

The terms of peace were soon concluded both with Austria and Russia.
 When Emperor Francis had withdrawn, Napoleon, being in one of his reflective moods, walked for some time thoughtfully before the fire, and was heard reflectively to say:

"I have acted very unwisely. I could have followed up my victory, and have taken the whole of the Russian and Austrian armies. They are both entirely in my power. But—let it be. It will at least cause some less tears to be shed."

Napoleon returned with the utmost rapidity to Paris, leaving the army to follow by easy marches, which occupied three months.—Ledger Monthly.

Not the Clock.

An old lady entered a watchmaker's shop and handed the assistant a pendulum of an old Dutch clock.

"Here, mister," she said, "I want you

"But you must bring the clock," said the assistant.

"You stupid fool! the clock's all right. 'Tis the pendulum that 'on't go," said the old lady, indignantly.—Spare

FARM WATER SUPPLY.

How to Run It from the Pump Right Into the Barn by Means of a Spout.

Some pumps need only a little elevation to make it possible to run the water by a spout right into the barn, where the cattle can drink without being exposed to cold or storms. The cut shows a pump raised and the elevated platform boxed in, the interior being filled with hay to keep the pump from freezing. This is not a PUMPING WATER INTO THE BARN. difficult job, and the results are often worth a great deal during a single winter even. The pump can be lowered again for summer use if desired, setting the elevated platform away for use again the following winter. Few realize what an immense amount of animal heat (and therefore feed and milk) is wasted when cows are turned out to a watering place on a cold day in winter. The animals come in shivering, their backs rounded up with the cold and every hair standing on end. It takes an hour at least before they feel comfortable again. Under such conditions the best results in dairying cannot be secured. Where water can be run into the barn in the way suggested, it will, on standing awhile, acquire the temperature of the barn, being then much more suitable for cows to drink, while the latter will also be saved the exposure to cold winds.—N. Y. Tribune.

GOOD CROP TO RAISE.

The Demand for White Beans is Great and They are Sure to Bring Good Prices This Year.

Those who are in close touch with the market are expecting white beans to command high prices for a number of years to come. Stocks on hand are very much depleted, owing to a great falling off in production during recent years and an increased demand. For example, the Michigan crop for 1896 was 3,649,135 bushels, that of 1897 was 1,765,175 bushels, that of 1898 954,064 bushels and the 1899 crop was only 762,000 bushels. In California and New York, two states in which large areas of beans are grown, less than one-half of full crops were obtained last year, while in Canada and Europe the crop is light. With very light yields the world over, the United States and English governments have been buying very heavily for the army and navy. It is thus apparent that the supply must be quite limited, and several good crops must be secured before there is a normal surplus.

In view of these facts, it would seem as though beans would be a good crop to plant this coming season if good seed can be secured and one has suitable soil.—Rural World.

Danger in Wire Fences.

In an article in the Journal of the Royal Agricultural society on lightning and its effect on trees, Mr. Brodie calls the attention of English farmers to a point of great practical importance. In Britain and America the increasing adoption of wire fences has given rise to considerable damage to live stock from lightning. He quotes on this matter the director of the Iowa weather and crop service. "Unquestionably, wire fences, as now constructed, serve as death-traps to live stock, causing a vast amount of loss every year. And it is also quite evident that a considerable percentage of danger may be avoided by the use of ground wires at frequent intervals in the construction of wire fences."

Quality of Seed Corn.

The yield of corn is dependent in no small degree on the quality of the seed, which should be selected before the corn is cut, having regard to the size and character of the stalk as well as to the ripeness and type of the ear. When the season is especially favorable for thoroughly maturing the ears, enough seed to last at least two years should be gathered, completely dried out before frost and stored in a warm, dry place. A difference of two per cent. in the yield of dry matter on two adjacent acres was noted in favor of the crop grown from well-ripened seed over the yield from seed grown in a wet, cold

Review.

Lady-Bugs and Grain Aphid. Additional evidence comes from the Montana experiment station to show the usefulness of the dainty lady-bug. In a study of the grain aphid, lady-bugs were seen to prey upon these pests. The lady-bugs were observed to go down upon the roots of grain in the fall in search of the aphid and to pass the winter along with the aphid in that situation. The pretty lady-bug should never be destroyed, as she is at all times the friend of man.

HERBERT'S,

The Railroad Situation.

Supervisor Murdock of Venlee was in town Thursday on business and dropped into our sanctum for a few minutes. Mr. Murdock has been doing a lot of hard work for the success of the proposed railroad. He told of the work done by Mr. Cutter, the surveyor, and stated that about 3 1/2 miles would have to be built, which was easy to grade. Messrs. Conklin and Roblee are now seeking to have the State Railroad Commissioners set the date of their meeting to consider the New York, Auburn & Lansing railroad, and they hope to have the commissioners sit in Auburn. In case they are successful in this, they urge that all persons interested in the road (and surely that includes everyone) should attend this meeting, not necessarily to testify before the commission, but to show by their presence that the people are all interested, and that the road is a public necessity. However, representative parties all along the line are expected to make such statements as they are able to from their knowledge of facts and history. Personal appearance is much preferred to affidavits. We quote from the letter of an Auburnian to the Journal:

"If there are people anywhere in the state of New York who need and deserve railroad facilities, they are the residents of the towns of Fleming, Scipio, Venlee, Genoa and Lansing. For nearly fifty years they have had their money invested and paid interest on bonds for a line of railroad upon this proposed route, and have only had the use of the same for a brief period, and are now compelled to transport their produce an average of seven to ten miles over difficult roads to a point of shipment. All of this territory, comprising the choicest and most productive land in Cayuga and Tompkins counties, is handicapped by this inconvenience and expensive cartage, which often absorbs all the profit of the crop raised by the farmer. These people have expended since the inception of the enterprise, about 1853, nearly half a million dollars in the endeavor to provide more convenient transportation, but are at present in practically the same condition as at the beginning."

A Convenient Motive Power.

Some four weeks since, O. J. Spencer of Union Springs installed in the press room of THE TRIBUNE office a 2-horse power gasoline engine together with the shapting, etc. necessary to drive the large press upon which this paper is printed. After a most thorough trial of the machine we find it capable of doing all that an engine can do, and believe it to be superior for ordinary purposes to any other power obtainable. The engine occupies but little floor space; it is automatic and requires little attention while running, and twenty seconds of time is all that is required to start or stop it. There is no smoke, no heat, no dust, and at the present price of gasoline the expense of operating this engine is not more than six cents per hour. With this machine we are able to turn out THE TRIBUNE at the rate of twenty-five copies per minute, and the typographical appearance of the paper is not surpassed by any in this vicinity. Mr. Spencer is the state agent for these engines, which are built by the Lambert Company at Anderson, Ind.

Dewey's Change of Mind.

On Nov. 6 last, Admiral Dewey was interviewed by a newspaper man upon his candidacy, and is reported to have made the following statement:

"I would not under any circumstances consent to be a candidate for the Presidency, and I should consider it an act of friendship if the press would treat this decision as sincere and final. I wish they would now drop the matter. I feel that any further booming of my name for the Presidency tends to make me ridiculous."

The admiral is now on a stumping tour in the middle west, and is receiving rousing demonstrations at all the large cities. His speeches, while interesting and earnest, seem to lack the finish of a political student, and he apparently don't care whether he receives the nomination or not. Meanwhile we suppose Mrs. Dewey is anticipating her first reception at the White House, as the wife of the president.

Of Interest to Wool Growers.

The following letter received by Mr. W. P. Purdy, Venlee, from Messrs. Philip Jagode & Co., wool merchants, Philadelphia, should interest farmers who grow wool. The letter is dated March 17, 1900, and reads as follows:

DEAR SIR—We write to ask if you will kindly use your personal influence to stop the use of "sisal grass" or binding twine, by the growers in your vicinity. With the exercise of the utmost care in the removal of this twine from the fleeces, some fibres are liable to adhere to the wool, and follow it through the various processes without discovery until the goods are dyed, when every strand shows plainly on the surface. This leads not only to vexatious delays, but also serious claims and cancellations. Some manufacturers refuse to buy wool in which they see more or less of this twine, and others will only do so with the privilege of rejecting fleeces so tied. You can therefore readily see from this brief statement, the troubles the use of this twine entails, and eventually the grower will be the sufferer. We would suggest that you call to your aid the local and county papers, and feel confident that when the subject is properly placed before the grower, he will discontinue this most pernicious practice. Many localities have already abandoned it, but in New York, Michigan and Wisconsin the custom still largely prevails, and the fact that the wool is from one of these states, is often sufficient to create a prejudice against it in the minds of some manufacturers, even before examination. The difference to the grower between the cost of grass twine, and the smooth, hard kind which should properly be used, must be very trifling, and certainly can bear no relation whatever to the many difficulties and losses it causes the consumer. Trusting we will have your co-operation in this matter which should certainly interest all who in any manner handle the staple.

We remain, yours truly,

He Wanted to Die.

John W. Sherman of Locke, who has been in poor health and was doubtless suffering from melancholia resulting therefrom, tried to end his life by suicide. He went to the barn and cut his throat with a dull blade, and then he went up stairs and hung himself. His wife found him in time to save his life, and a physician sewed up the gash.

HANDY CHICKEN COOP.

Not Too Heavy in Construction to Be Carried to Any Place Where It May Be Desirable.

The accompanying illustration gives an idea for the construction of a neat, handy and healthy coop. It can be made of any size. For one or two broods of chickens, about 4 feet square and 2 feet high in front and 18 inches high in the rear, is a convenient size. It should be made with a tight floor to prevent the entrance of rats, skunks, etc., and also to aid in keeping clean. The entrance should have two doors. One of them merely a frame over which is stretched wire netting with meshes fine enough to exclude all prowlers of the night. This is to be used in the summer time when it is too hot to shut the coops with the tight doors. The other door can be made to shut over the wire door by hinging at the top. The wire door is made to slide in from the top or end. With the coop tightly closed there will not be sufficient ventilation. A ventilator made of 3 or 4-inch boards nailed into a box about 2½ feet long, set in the middle of the coop roof and extending down inside to within a couple of inches of the bottom will suffice. At the rear, to aid in cleaning, should be a door about 5 inches wide, extending the whole length of the coop at the bottom. By lifting this and using a small hoe-like tool, a, made by taking a block 4x8 inches and boring a hole in the center and putting in a handle about 2 feet long, the job of cleaning is a short and easy one. All coops should be painted and the roof made tight enough to prevent leaking. These coops are not too heavy to be carried to any place where it is desirable. The illustration shows the coop with one door raised, showing the wire netting.—American Agriculturist.

BEEES IN THE SPRING.

Why It Is Not Advisable to Remove Them from the Cellar Before the Weather Is Settled.

There are often warm days in the early spring when bees might be removed from the cellar, but the trouble is that winter is not always over with the advent of the first spring-like day. There may be several days, or even two or three weeks, of quite warm weather, in which the willows, alders, elms and soft maples bloom, and it is really desirable that the bees enjoy all these advantages; but such fine weather, when it comes early, is quite likely to be followed by freezing weather of several days' duration, and even by a snowstorm. The fine weather encourages the bees to fill their combs with brood that would eventually produce workers ready for the fields just at the opening of the first white clover blossoms, but the cold drives the bees into a compact cluster in the center of the hive, leaving half the brood, perhaps more, unprotected. This brood perishes; besides, the newly-hatched bees, if any there are, are tender, like a newly-hatched chicken, and easily succumb to cold. The old bees have lost a good deal of their vitality and the cold snap is the "last straw" needed to send them to the bottom of the hive.—Farm and Home.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

In placing an incubator in position use a spirit level, to be sure it is level on all four sides.

There is greater danger now from too much ventilation in the poultry house than from too little, especially when the wind is blowing.

It is a wasteful habit to throw grain or any food for poultry onto filthy ground or into unclean troughs or vessels. It also endangers the health of the flocks.

If the poultry yard does not pay the grocers' bills, then one of two things is true—either the fowls do not have enough attention or your credit is too good at the grocery store.

Have the brooder heated to 90 degrees when you first remove the chicks from the incubator, but do not keep it at that temperature longer than four or five days. By that time 80 degrees is high enough, and in three weeks it may be lowered to 70 or 75 degrees.—Farm J.

mode of feeding was to throw the soft food in dirt, as the more dirt a hen could eat the better, but this has been found a delusion. Hens can eat all the dirt they wish without having it forced on them. Many diseases are induced by compelling the hens to eat a mixture of food and filth, and all feeding places should therefore be kept very clean, as filth is not always discernible and may be present in a decayed condition. The better plan is to feed on boards, or in troughs, and clean them daily.—Prairie Farmer.

CROP-BOUND BIRDS.

Unless a Hen Is Valuable It Is Better to Kill Her Than to Try and Save Her.

When birds are troubled with what is known as "crop bound," various methods may be applied. When it first begins it is best to try gentle moving of the mass from the outside. This may break up its compactness and cause some of it to pass into the gizzard. In case the mass sours and begins to ferment, it will have to be removed. We have seen the advice given to fill the crop of the bird with water and hold it head down so that the food would run out. The writer has never been very successful in this mode of treatment, but has had birds expire under it. The cutting open method is often recommended, but we cannot say from experience how successful it generally is. The advice is generally given to put a small hole through the skin and crop membrane, pulling the skin over some, so that the cut in the skin and the cut in the crop will not naturally come opposite each other. The cut in the crop should be only large enough to permit the finger to go in and bring out the food. After the sack is thoroughly washed out, the cut in the membrane may be sewed up, and a like operation performed on the cut in the skin. We do not believe this will pay with any but a very valuable bird. Certainly it would not pay on the bird that the farmer has to sell for 25 cents. A bird properly handled will not become crop bound.—Farmers' Review.

HANDY HENS' NESTS.

They Can Be Cleaned Easily and Are Just the Thing for Birds That Eat Their Eggs.

I send you my plan of hens' nests. After four years' trial I think they are the nests for hens that eat their eggs, and for handiness in cleaning them, but if anybody has any better I hope he will let us know. I use one-half-inch lumber. The length of two nests is 30 inches, width 19 inches, height 14 inches, entrance, 7-inch alley back of the nests and entrance 7 inches. That makes the nests 11 inches square. The strip back of the nests I make 4 inches wide. I make the bottom separate from the nest, so don't nail the nests to the bottom, for when you want to clean your nests all you have to do is to lift the nests off the bottom and scrub them off. I also make the bottom 6 inches wider than the nests, and set it up on posts 18 or 20 inches high, but you can suit yourself about the height.—F. P. Beers, in National Stockman.

Keeping the Eggs Clean.

It ought to be self-evident that all filth of every kind should be removed from the hen's nest, and on no account should one be allowed beneath the roosts where the hens remain on their perch through the night. Fowls always pass their excrement once or twice, if not oftener, during the night, and this falling into a hen's nest will inevitably soil the nest and the eggs. This is bad for the hens, for it soils their feathers, but it is still worse for the eggs, which have porous shells, through which foul odors pass and spoil the egg. The evil is worst in hot weather, as the effluvia destroys the life in the germ of the egg, and if the egg is to be eaten it does not make it more appetizing to know that its porous shell has been in contact with filth. Therefore buyers of eggs should look to the shells, and reject those that are dirty or that show signs that they have been washed.—American Cultivator.

Pure Breeds as Layers.

It is no question of fact, but a commercial fact, that the pure breeds lay as well, they fatten as well, as the mongrels, and the contingent chances of profit in extra prices obtained for pure breeds gives them the decided advantage. First crosses with pure breeds may actually give higher averages in egg production for the season, but one has to set against this advantage the breeding losses in the second season. It pays best to keep to purity, and breed amongst your table birds, whichever may be your particular object. So many breeders have no object. They do not much care either way. To such, of course, we have nothing to say.—Rural World (England).

Liver Complaint in Fowls.

Nux vomica is used as a specific for liver complaint. The symptoms of this disease are a sickly yellowish color about the head, the comb turns dark colored, the liver is larger (upon post-mortem examination), and the discharges are watery and light colored. Liver complaint is supposed to attack birds soon after being on exhibition, or is caused by any sudden change from warm to cold houses, or from overfeeding. If taken in time nearly every case can be cured by giving nux vomica, in homeopathic form, allowing six pills three times a day to a large fowl, and less to a small bird.—Farm and Fireside.

It is time now to get the unused horses in condition for spring work. They should be fed rather lightly at first, increasing gradually to a full ration.

THE STUDY OF BUGS.

Pursued for the Benefit of Farmers as Well as Consumers.

Our Washington Correspondent Describes a Visit to the Most Interesting Branch of the Agricultural Department.

[Special Washington Letter.]

WHILE the insecticides, vermicides, germicides and microbe killers are diligently engaged in efforts to destroy certain forms of life, there are scientists in government employment who are making strenuous efforts to hatch obnoxious insects and their parasites.

Under the direction of the department of agriculture, in a building erected specifically for that purpose, insects are bred and reared in a large glass conservatory which serves as a hothouse for the propagation of bugs of scores of species. They are as carefully cared for as the eggs in chicken incubators, and are given plenty of light and warm, moist air all through the winter and during the damp or chilly days and nights of spring and autumn.

Although it is conceded that the greatest study of man is man, there are scientists who seem to have accomplished all that they desire in that direction, and they devote their waking hours to the study of bugs, beetles and all of the forms of minute animal life. In all sorts of jars, from a small jelly glass to a large glass globe of kettle form, they have insects in various stages of development. The daily history of each insect is carefully noted, and all of its transformations are historically treated for several generations.

In one of these jars there are two sunflower heads infested with the larvae of beetles. These larvae have buried themselves in the sand with which the vessel is partly filled, and there they have been hibernating for four months. Very soon they will be set out in the sunlight. They will then emerge as perfect beetles, will lay eggs in the sunflowers and a new generation will be watched with solicitude and interest.

The careful study of these things has been fostered by the department of agriculture in order that ultimately the best methods of destroying the pests, and preventing their propagation, may be discovered by those who make specific study of these subjects. Some time this spring the department will issue bulletins for farmers, giving all of the information which has been acquired during the past 12 months in these studies.

One of the officials, upon being complimented upon the value of the work which is being done, said: "We are doing some good, but of course it is very little. You must understand that there are about 10,000,000 species of insects, and we are treating them by scores instead of by millions. Human knowledge is exceedingly small, and facts. Philosophy asks: 'Why?' and tries to give the reason. Theology goes a little farther. But all students, all scientists, philosophers and theologians are striving for the advancement of human knowledge. And sometimes our bitter divergences and controversies result in bringing forth truths which might never be developed but for the earnestness and increased energy which are let loose by acrimony and controversy."

But to return to the jars: In one of them, which is half full of beans, there are hundreds of bean-eating bugs which will continue to live and reproduce their kind so long as the food supply is continued. In one small jelly glass there is a large Irish potato, where a lot of little flies have laid their larvae, and the potato is fairly riddled with the holes which have been made by the larvae. Another larger glass jar contains a few yucca pods. In the sand beneath them are buried a number of grubs which have deserted the yucca pods. Some time in April they will emerge, not as grubs, but as moths. The yucca will then be blossoming, and the moths will live on the blossoms. Nature supplies food for all manner of life, and the food-eating insects bring death to these forms of vegetable life.

One of the strangest things in this collection of wonders is the fact that half a dozen huge oak galls not only nourish the gall bugs, but protect their destroyers. Just as a cancer is concealed within the body of a human being and protected from medical and surgical agencies while it eats away a human life, the oak is stung in hundreds of places by gnatlake insects; forms over the injured parts, where eggs are deposited, odd-looking growths which protect the offspring of the gall bug until they are able to come forth, lay other eggs, and perhaps sting the very stem which fostered them.

A microscope is required to see the wood-boring larvae. In one jar, which is partially filled with sawdust instead of sand, several pieces of bark are to be seen, completely riddled and honey-combed by wood-borers. They bury themselves in the sawdust during the winter, just as others bury themselves in the sand. When they come forth and are large enough to be seen with the naked eye, they are removed, killed and stuck on pins in boxes, according to their species, numbered and described in the scientific library of reference books. Each insect has its scientific name, and the students here give the full history of its development.

Dealers in large quantities of wheat and flour have lost on their investments, sometimes heavily, because flour beetles and wheat moths have destroyed their property. Here in a jelly glass containing a little wheat flour are some of the beetles at work. They are watched in their progress from egg to larvae and from larvae to beetle. The wheat worms and joint worms are seen feeding upon the stems of the wheat plant. There are also jars showing the work of root-devouring bugs. When they have eaten up the roots in their jars they come to the surface, but cannot escape, because inverted jars cover them. They do not burrow through the ground. They eat roots destroying plant life. Then they come to the surface and travel to the nearest contiguous plant, burrow to its roots, and begin their deadly work.

Most singular of all to an uneducated observer of these singular things is the fact that upon all of these insects the microscope discloses parasites, which devour the insects themselves. Long years ago Dr. Johnson said: "Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em; while they, in turn, have lesser ones, and so ad infinitum." The writer was not a great scientist, but he had some idea of what these learned students of insect life have disclosed so plainly. Cyrano de Bergerac, in the sixteenth century, wrote of some discoveries of the same kind, made by himself. But these writers were only able to imagine that what they saw with the naked eye must be going on in the lower forms of life. There is no imagination, however, in the things which are now to be seen in the agricultural department, and in the scientific institutions of some of the great universities.

This study of parasites is distinct from the study of the insects. When it is known that certain parasites speedily destroy the insects, the parasites are cultivated and encouraged to increase and multiply. The oranges of California which have been destroyed by the fluted scale insect are now saved by the dissemination of the Australian ladybug, which preys upon the scale, but does not injure the oranges. The chinch bugs of Kansas are being destroyed by the fungus which eats the chinch.

This is the practical part of the story. These bug students have learned which parasites will kill the bugs, and then they have sent the parasites forth on their mission in various sections of the country. Vegetation is destroyed by the insects, and the insects are destroyed by the parasites. By putting into the field big armies of parasites the insects are eaten up, and vegetation is saved from its almost invisible enemies.

These pale-faced young men and these bald-headed veterans in the science of bugology are quietly doing a whole lot of good for all of us; for the farmers in the fields, and for the dwellers in cities who depend upon the farmers for the food which sustains their lives.

OUR AIM:

It has been the policy of this firm that a certain percentage is sufficient for our legitimate profits. No matter what price we buy at, the selling price should be in accordance with the price paid for. Not for what we can get for it but what we actually need to pay for running our business expense, and this being a backward season and an accumulation of a large stock, which necessitates its moving fast and at once, at the time when everything is needed in dress and house furnishings. Therefore the bargains which we are to give you for this sale are more noteworthy than ever. And while we modestly state a Quarter of a Million Dollars' worth of merchandise is at your disposal, divided in our different departments, for this week, at less price than you will be able to obtain for a long time to come under the present conditions.

OUR REASONS FULLY TOLD.

Since the rise in prices of all grades of merchandise and our unlimited sources for buying has been steadily going on, it is natural that we have obtained more goods than we can ordinarily sell during the regular routine of ordinary business, and we therefore have lots of goods, which while bought cheap, are more than we are really in need of at the present season.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by J. S. Banker.

Hog Feeding in Iowa.

Iowa is the greatest hog feeding state in the union. Many farmers feed from 50 to 200 every year. Of course corn is the staple food. On one point they are about all agreed. Every man of any account lays out his feed on a closely boarded floor, which is raised some feet from the ground. If to this is added a raised sleeping place the greater comfort, combined with the smallest cost of feeding, is provided, and as a result of the combination the pigs are always healthier than by any other method of handling.—Farmers' Review.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my showcase, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by J. S. Banker.
