Under the title of "Christian Science and the book of Mrs. Eddy," Mark Twain contributes to the October Cosmopolitan what is the most remarkable magazine article of the month, if not the year. Twain discloses two phases of himself—the humorist and the keen, far-sighted philosopher. He handles the cult a bit severely, perhaps, but he has his reasons for so doing and sets them forth most forcibly. His statement concerning Mrs. Eddy's book is characteristic. Of it he says, "It is the first time since the dawn of Creation that a Voice has gone crashing through space with such placid and complacent confidence and command."

Five 60-foot baggage cars have also been ordered, and likewise four club cars. The latter are strictly for New York suburban traffic and will be an innovation. The seats will be leased to commuters at a stipulated figure for a year. The arrangement insures a lessee a seat on the train when he starts for his business in New York.

James S. Caldwell was arraigned upon an old indictment charging him with perjury. He pleaded not guilty and was released on $2,000 bail. His case was sent to the county court for trial together with all other criminal cases not otherwise disposed of at this term. Caldwell was formerly proprietor of the tavern at King Ferry, where he obtained a liquor tax certificate upon the sworn statement that he had never been convicted of a felony. rouly laid her little hand gently upon his arm and beaming upon him coquetishly answered

"Yes, I have seen a man here whom I would marry tomorrow if he would only help me to escape from Edward Roblin."

The outlaw's face became livid with suppressed passion.

"Who is he? His name?" he cried in a choked voice.

She drew back from him in alarm, but, quickly controlling this feeling, replied with an air of assumed confusion

Polly laid her little hand gently upon his arm

"You know who he is very well, Richard, so there is no need of my telling you."

At this he broke into a horrible laugh of triumph that sent a shiver through the girl's frame.

"Oh, I know who ye mean now," he roared. "It's me, Polly—me. Well, so ye want me to help ye get rid of Roblin? Why, I'll kill him if ye say so, lass."

"No, don't do that," she replied quickly, while her face grew white with apprehension. "I have a far better plan in view. Will you promise to do just what I tell you?"

"If I can, my pretty charmer, yes."

"Well, then, listen," she went on eagerly. "Edward Roblin will leave me to go on this raid tonight, and I will be alone. I will never have a better chance to escape from him. If you manage to arrange it with the men who will be left to guard me I am sure I can find my way to the trail. Have a horse awaiting me there tied to a tree near the clearing, and as soon after the expedition starts as possible I will make my way to the clearing, secure the animal and ride off to some place where you can meet me."

"But I'll have to go along with this expedition or else lose my command in the band," he objected.

"Of course you will," replied Polly, "for it would be cowardly to hold back at such a time. What I mean is that you are to join me on your return, and then we can go to a dominion and get married. Do you approve of my little plot?"

There was something so fascinating in the idea of eloping with this charming man that Richard Smith became faint with delight.

"It's great, Polly! Great!" he roared. "Do I approve of it? Aye, that I do, and ye can depend on me to fix the guards and have the horse in readiness."

"Very well, then," she answered, smiling upon him sweetly. "I will meet you at the Indian rock between here and Goshen." Then, deeming it advisable to end their interview, she waved him an adieu and hurriedly returned to the cavern.

Up to this time she had been so carried away with enthusiasm regarding her stratagem that she had given no thought to its possible miscarriage. But now that she had an opportunity to reflect, a terrible idea occurred to her. What if she should not succeed in making her escape after all? What if her outlaw admirer should suspect her design and join her before the appointed time? She realized that if this happened she would be completely at his mercy, and the thought made her shudder with horror.

While she was absorbed in these dreadful reflections Edward Roblin returned to the cabin, and she determined to tell him what she had done. So, peeping cautiously out of the entrance to make sure that no listeners were around, she drew him aside and whispered hurriedly:

"I have taken a desperate step, Edward, and I want to tell you all about it. Please don't ask me to explain my reasons, but listen. I have arranged with one of our captors to make my escape from this place tonight. He has agreed to furnish me with a horse and as soon as the expedition starts I will hasten to the place where it will be awaiting me, mount it, and ride down into the valley to warn the people of the coming of these bandits. I have found out the very house they intend to plunder, and shall do my best to collect a sufficient force to defeat them."

"You know the house, Polly?"

"Yes, Edward, and I am sure you will approve of my design when you know whose it is."

"Then tell me."

"It is Caleb Shurker's," she responded, scrutinizing his face closely to mark the effect of her words.

Roblin's brow darkened vindictively.

"So it's to Caleb Shurker's we're going?" he said with a grim smile.

"Thank God for that, for I'll now be revenged."

At that moment a Tory thrust his head in at the cavern's entrance and called out:

"The captain sent me to fetch ye, young man. We are about to start on the raid."

The lovers exchanged tender embraces, whispered a few hurried words of farewell and parted, both oppressed with an agonizing apprehension that it might be for the last time.

CHAPTER VII.

THE ATTACK ON SHURKER'S.

As it was fully 20 miles to the house of Caleb Shurker, Claudius Smith decided to start out at an earlier hour than he had at first intended, for this would enable him to advance slowly and spare the horses for the return journey.

So when Roblin reached the glade where the bandits had gathered he found them already mounted for the march. Claudius turned upon him savagely.

"What! Must we be kept waiting while ye make love, varlet? Fall in the ranks, sir, and see that ye behave with spirit!"

Then turning to his men he shouted:

"All ready, men? Forward!"

There was a rattling of arms, a trampling of hoofs, a prancing and wheeling of horses as the bandits formed in line of march and the cavalcade cantered two by two from the glade. Placing himself at its head, Claudius Smith led the way into a broad bridle path that wound through the forest and proceeded for about a mile at a rapid gait. Then the path narrowed and the men fell in single line, picking their way along a rugged descent with their horses at a walk.

As they descended lower and lower along the mountain side the sun dropped from view and gradually the twilight deepened. It grew darker and darker. One by one the stars appeared through openings in the trees overhead, and at last it became difficult for the men to discern each other in the deepening gloom.

At last, they reached the base of the mountains and struck into an unfrequented byroad which ran in a northerly direction. Here they again formed two by two and proceeded at a canter until they reached a little spring that gushed from the side of a precipice. At this place Claudius Smith called a halt for rest and refreshment. The bandits dismounted, partook of a hasty repast and after watering their horses at the spring and quenching their own thirst with copious drafts of spirits from their canteens sprang into the saddle again and resumed their journey.

About 10 in the evening they struck into a highway that wound along the base of Shawangunk mountain. Then the command for silence passed from lip to lip, and they advanced with extreme caution until they came in sight of a great stone farmhouse which stood at the right of the road. The shutters were all closed, and it was evident that the inmates were sleeping. Roblin recognized it at once as the home of Caleb Shurker, and his heart beat quickly with a desire for vengeance.

Captain Smith now called a halt and began a brief whispered consultation with his officers. Roblin was about to draw near to listen to the discussion when it was rudely interrupted by the furious barking of a dog. The faithful animal had been sleeping on the porch of the dwelling and, awakened by the approach of the Tories, now came bounding into the road, making the welkin ring with deep mouthed warnings.

"Blarst the cur!" exclaimed the Tory chieftain, with an oath. Then, turning quickly to his men, he bawled out hoarsely: "Surround the house, lads, and let no one escape. Be quick!"

The bandits immediately put spurs to their horses and in a few seconds had formed a complete cordon around the dwelling. Roblin had taken his station before the front door with an idea of taking an active part in the proposed attack, but while he was gazing fiercely up at the windows, gloating in anticipation of his approaching revenge, an incident occurred which completely swept away every evil purpose from his heart.

He saw one of the shutters on the second story open cautiously and heard a familiar voice call out in frightened tones:

"What would you have, friends?"

It was the voice of Zadie, not as he remembered it of yore, when it was musical with the happiness it expressed, but plaintive, subdued and indescribably mournful. It touched him deeply. A flood of tender recollections overwhelmed him, and he resolved then and there to protect his old sweetheart from harm.

While this sudden revolution was taking place in his heart Claudius Smith approached the window and called up to the girl in tones of mock politeness: "Good evening, Mrs. Shurker! Pardon me for disturbing yer rest, but I would like to have a few words with yer husband."

Zadie left the window and withdrew into the apartment, and a short time afterward the shutter was flung wide open and an old man leaned out of the opening.

"Well, what do ye want of me?" he asked, in a quavering voice.

The outlaw threw off his mask of civility at once.

"What do I want with ye?" he whined, mimicking the old man's treble. Then, suddenly changing his tone to a deep roar, he shouted: "Open the door, ye old rascal, and let me and my brave lads in."

The old man disappeared from the window like a flash, slamming the shutter to behind him, and the next instant a rattling of bolts could be heard as they were hastily driven into their sockets.

"Ho, ho!" cried Claudius, stamping his foot with rage. "So it's to be an assault?" Then, turning toward his men with a gesture of command, he bawled: "Advance, my lads! Batter down the door! Smash in the windows! Make holes in the walls! Tear the house to pieces! But get at the old varlet and drag him out of his hole."

In obedience to his commands the Tories sprang from their horses and rushed toward the building like a pack of hungry wolves. Some hurled themselves against the door, others endeavored to force open the shutters while one or two, more venturesome than the rest, climbed the pillars of the veranda and attempted to enter the house through the windows of the second story.

Among those who chose the latter way of gaining access to the interior was Edward Roblin, for even while the Tory chief was bawling his commands he had fixed upon a plan of action. It was to get into the house before the outlaws, call upon the inmates to follow him into the attic, barricade the stairs leading thither and resist to the last gasp.

Reaching the roof of the veranda before the others, he ran quickly from window to window, picking at the shutters with his saber. It was in vain. They were all firmly bolted on the inside and could not be budged from their fastenings.

He cast a glance upward.

A row of dormer windows projected from the sloping roof, and he observed that one of them was open. If he could only reach the roof he could easily make his way into the building through that passage. But the roof was too high up to be gained.

In the meantime the men who had climbed with him upon the veranda had descended to the ground again, and he was alone. He was on the point of imitating their example when his glance chanced to fall upon the crescent shaped holes which had been cut through the shutters for ventilating purposes. There were two of these perforations—one in the lower and the other in the upper panel of each shutter. By inserting his hand and feet in these apertures it was possible for an active man to raise himself to the roof.

CHEERED THE PRESIDENT.

An Enthusiastic Throng Welcomes the Chief Executive to Chicago.

THE STREETS CROWDED.

Accompanied to the Auditorium By Mayor Harrison and a Reception Committee.

Light Artillery Fires Salute When President's Train Arrives—Mr. McKinley and Secretary Root Among the Speakers at the Marquette Club Banquet.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—After delivering a short address in Galesburg President McKinley made a few remarks to the waiting and enthusiastic thousands in Ottawa and Joliet, and arrived in Chicago twenty-five minutes behind schedule time.

Fully three hours before the time set for the arrival of his train, streets leading from the Van Buren street railway station to the Auditorium annex were jammed with persons waiting to greet the President and his Cabinet, and when, at last, the Chief Executive appeared a roar went up such as Chicago never heard before. The party was accompanied by the Reception Committee of the Fall Festival. Mayor Harrison and representatives of the Marquette Club, the escort from the station to the hotel being composed of five companies of police, three troops of the First Illinois cavalry and the Chicago Hussars. The Mexican National Band headed the line.

On the arrival of the President a salute was fired on the lake front by the Lake View Light Artillery. The line of march was along Sherman street to Jackson Boulevard, to Michigan avenue, south to the Auditorium Annex. There the President retired to his room to prepare for the banquet of the Marquette Club. He did not leave his apartments before departing for the banquet.

One thousand men sat down to the feast in the large apartment and the scene was a brilliant one. The decorations had been arranged on an elaborate scale. Floral pieces surmounted the speakers' table, where the President sat, which was placed on a raised platform beside the east wall. The space back of it was banked with flowers. The large oil painting of the Chief Executive, which hangs in the library of the Marquette Club house, occupied a space back of the speakers' table, and a marble bust of the President was given a conspicuous position.

Archbishop Ireland was the speaker immediately preceding the President, and when the Archbishop had concluded every eye was turned toward the Chief Executive, and the applause became deafening. As soon as silence was restored Toastmaster Winkersham introduced the President, who said: "Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Marquette Club:—I will not interrupt the orderly progress of the program which has been laid before you and to which I must insist that your chairman shall adhere.

"I rise only at this moment to express my warm appreciation of the affectionate salutation of the Marquette Club and to say that I reciprocate it with all my heart.

"We are not strangers. This scene is not altogether unfamiliar to me. I stood before you once before, now more than three years off, your honored guest, and I have for you all only most grateful recollection and unstinted gratitude.

"You have not only been my friends, faithful and unflinching, at all times, but—what is of more moment, and what is much nobler—you have been at all times faithful to your country, faithful to the inviolability of public faith, standing always for honest government and honest money, and ever standing for the honor and integrity of the flag wherever it floats, carried by our soldiers or our sailors, on land or on sea.

Secretary of War Root delivered a speech in which he paid a high tribute of praise to the American soldiers who fought in the Spanish-American war; to those now in the Philippines and also to the veterans of the civil war. He declared that the war against the Filipinos would be pushed with vigor and that there would be no let up until the enemy either surrendered or laid down their arms. Speaking of the difficulty in the island of Luzon the Secretary said:

"The title we have to the island of Luzon is better than our title to Louisiana or Texas, and it rests upon a higher duty to humanity.

"No American executive has the right to take one rod of land under the sovereignty of the American people, and he will maintain that sovereignty in the island of Luzon come who may against it."

Secretary Root's remarks were received with much enthusiasm.

Laying the Corner Stone.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the new government building were the most impressive of any that have taken place at the Fall Festival thus far, and were witnessed by thousands of visitors as well as the townspeople. President McKinley handled the trowel like a veteran at the stone laying business and was greeted with three rousing cheers at the close of his portion of the days program. A military escort headed the procession which escorted President McKinley from the Auditorium to the new postoffice.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1899.

DEAR HENRY: You have perhaps realized ere this that your spring suit must soon be discarded and no doubt you have been bothering your mind to know what you shall wear for Fall. Well, Henry, I have always looked after your wants and feel that it is now my duty to acquaint you with the leading novelties for the coming season. Confidentially I'll tell you the suit that is going to be all the go this season. It is the single breasted fancy worsted suit in a stripe or plaid with a double-breasted vest. Now mind I say double-breasted vest, for without one you'll not be in it. These, Henry, are swell. They are cut and trimmed like those tailor-made suits you used to pay $40 for. Honestly you couldn't tell them from custom-made.

But perhaps you don't care for the worsted goods. Well, why don't you get one of those handsome double breasted blue serges, with single cut vest. They are certainly rich in appearance. Then there are those herring-bones in brown or blue. These are new goods and are bound to be popular. I know you'd like them. There are also the tweeds, the fancy chevviots, the clays and the cassimeres—in fact all the odd weaves, but made up in new and pleasing effects that are bound to suit you. Well, I guess I have written you enough about suits. I want to say a word about your new overcoat and then I'll close. If you're going to get a new one—and I suppose you are—I'll tell you the kind you want. Get one of those light top covert coats with the fancy back (1-2 satin lined.) They are certainly racy because they're all the go. They are going to be worn an awful lot this fall, and I want you to have one. Of course there are the Meltons and the Kerseys, in blue, black and brown, but if you want a handsome garment get a covert. Well, Henry, I can't think of anything else to write. Yes I can, too. If I recall correctly when you purchased your last suit you had some difficulty about the price. Either you didn't have money enough or the price was too high. Say, Henry, before purchasing would you do me a favor? Would you just as soon come around and see me? I can assure you there'll be no such difficulty this time, no not a bit of it. Now, Henry, I hope you'll take advantage of this advice. It will be for your own interest to do so. In the past you have been benefitted, so heed the suggestion that I have given you today. If you do, no matter where you go you will always experience the pleasure and satisfaction of being a well dressed young man.
Sincerely yours,
BEN MINTZ.

FEW PEOPLE know that the United States has had its Dreyfus case. It was not in the army but in the navy. The victim was Uriah P. Levy, a Hebrew, who was born in Philadelphia, in 1792, and died in New York in 1862. He was always a brave man and a gentleman. He entered the navy in 1812 and was sailing master of the famous brig "Argus," which after conveying Minister Crawford to France, went on a cruise and destroyed British shipping to the value of $5,000,000. He was then put in charge of a valuable prize, with which he was taken prisoner by the Britons. On his release he was appointed a lieutenant in the navy, being recommended by Commodore Porter, Decatur, Rogers and Stewart, whose commendation was priceless. Then came a series of terrible persecutions, and Lieutenant Levy underwent six court martials and two courts of inquiry on charges that were shown to be trivial and based on anti-Semitic hatred. The naval courts invariably found him guilty although the higher powers in each case mitigated or annulled the sentence. He was promoted captain, but was ignored by his superiors, and the efforts to force him out of the service were continued. He was in 1855 summarily dismissed by the naval board without a hearing, and in a brutal manner his name was stricken from the rolls. It was an intolerable outrage, and Levy was restored to duty by order of the president. He finally reached the rank of commodore and last served in the Mediterranean, and when he died he was buried with full naval honors. No more loyal man to this country ever was in its service. When in Paris the toast of the U. S. minister to President Johnson was hissed, and Levy promptly sent two challenges and slapped the face of the principal offender. The Frenchmen apologized without delay. The Emperor of Brazil complimented Levy upon his saving the life of a midshipman, but when offered a fine berth in the Brazilian navy, he answered, notwithstanding his bitter experiences, that he would rather be a cabin boy in the American navy than serve under any other flag. Although his life at sea had been one of continuous persecution on account of his race and religion, Commodore Levy was intensely patriotic to the end.

THE LATEST advices from South Africa point to an immediate clash of arms. The Boers are already in possession of many important military situations, and for a time at least will have the advantage because England is not yet prepared for war. There can be but one result to the conflict, however.

Wayne Gallup's Property.

The property of aged Wayne Gallup has been disposed of and Silas N. Gallup, a brother of the principal, has evidently carried his point. There is a deed on file in the county clerk's office dated Sept. 23, the same day that Justice Dunwell at Lyons, by consent of all parties interested, dismissed the proceedings for the appointment of a commission to inquire into Wayne's competency. This deed shows that about 700 acres of land in Cayuga county, the property of Wayne Gallup, has been placed in the hands of Silas N. Gallup as trustee to oversee and look after. The revenue stamps on the deed show that the property is valued at $22,000.

All parties interested having gone on record that Wayne Gallup was competent on the date the deed was filed, Sept. 23, it would seem that it would stand considerable testing if the matter ever came up in court again.

Wayne Gallup is now at the home of his brother, Silas N., at Macedon, Wayne county.—Bulletin.

The ladies and members of the East Venice Alliance do hereby extend their sincere thanks to those outsiders who assisted by their attendance and liberality in making their first attempt at a fair success both socially and financially. We especially extend thanks to Mr. Parks of Locke who had a very fine display of potatoes, oats and corn on exhibition which he donated to the society and which netted them nearly $4. We also thank our East Genoa friends as well as those nearby, and we must not forget the speaker, Rev. Mr. Bell of Moravia, and the Genoa Glee Club, also Prof. Partello and Miss McCredie of Moravia who gave us some very fine violin and organ music, ably assisted by Editor C. A. Ames on his cornet. With the help we have been assured of for 1900, we hope to make number two a success, like its predecessor.

I wish to express my appreciation for the assistance and sympathy of my friends during my recent bereavement. GEORGE BREED.

Wood wanted at THE TRIBUNE office.

During the winter of 1897 Mr. James Reed, one of the leading citizens and merchants of Clay, Clay Co., W. Va., struck his leg against a cake of ice in such a manner as to bruise it severely. It became very much swollen and pained him so badly that he could not walk without the aid of crutches. He was treated by physicians, also used several kinds of liniment and two and a half gallons of whisky in bathing it, but nothing gave any relief until he began using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This brought almost a complete cure in a week's time and he believes that had he not used this remedy his leg would have had to be amputated. Pain Balm is unequalled for sprains, bruises and rheumatism. For sale by J. S. Banker, Genoa, N. Y.

Returned from Klondike.

William Wilcox, Jr., arrived here yesterday from the Klondike, where he has been for the past year. He says that he located at Artic City and that the story of the cold there is greatly exaggerated as it is a dry cold. When the thermometer registers 75 degrees below zero there the cold is not felt more than when it registers 18 degrees below here. He sunk a shaft about forty feet but did not find pay dirt and is now sinking one where he found pay dirt six feet below the surface. He expects to return there some time next month after visiting his relatives and friends here for awhile.—Ithaca News.

This Tells the Story.

Dun's commercial report, an unimpeachable authority, informs us that September was the twelfth consecutive month in which the volume of business, both in and out of New York city, was greater than in the same month of any previous year. Even 1892, which was called a year of flush times, is surpassed.

This is the matter-of-fact statement of a commercial journal, but it tells a great story. The voice of the skeptic and the grumbler is no longer heard. The good times are here. And nowhere in the country have business men better reason to be satisfied with the outlook for an immense fall trade than in our lively city of Syracuse.—Syracuse Herald.

—Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, speaking of the influence of a newspaper, says: "A newspaper whose columns overflow with advertisements of business men, has more influence in attracting attention to building up a town than any other agency that can be employed. People go where there is business. Capitol and labor go where there is an enterprising community. No power on earth is so strong to build up a town, as a newspaper well patronized, and its power should be appreciated."

East Genoa W. C. T. U. held a very enjoyable Parlor meeting at the home of Mrs. Nellie Tupper on Friday evening. Rousing temperance songs were given by the L. T. L., the roll call of members was responded to by Scripture texts, selections by Mrs. Thayer, Mrs. Jennie Harris, and portions of the county president's address by Mrs. Beardsley, with songs by Miss Nellie Young, formed a pleasing program. Over 70 people, young and old, sat down to a New England tea, with tables spread with home-made linen, dishes of blue delft, pewter platter, etc., all illumined by the "light of other days" whose frequent trimming caused much merriment. Young ladies in costumes of "ye olden time" attended to the wants of the guests and the genial host and hostess spared no pains to make the occasion a success, for which they received the cordial thanks of all present.

PRESENTED NO DEMANDS

Believed That Great Britain
is Tying With President Kruger's Patience.

MOBILIZATION ORDERED.

The present situation thought to be thoroughly comprehended by the Boer Leaders.

British Waiting For the Development of Events That Will Warrant
Them in Making a Hostile
Movement—The Boer Government
Trying to Restrain Burgurers.

London, Oct. 10.—Whatever may be the result of Great Britain's controversy with the South African Republic,
every department of the government is as busy as though actual hostilities had begun. The electric flash that announced the mobilization of the army reserves and the summoning of Parliament set every wheel of the Government machinery in motion. An hour after the Gazette appeared Executive orders were being despatched from the War Office to every section of the Kingdom, and the 10,000 bulletins which appeared posted throughout the country are said to have been identified with the proclamation prepared for use had the Fashoda incident required such a step.

London, Oct. 10.—The British Government summoned Parliament in special session and ordered the mobilization of an army corps without even presenting the demands on the Transvaal, which will constitute the British "casus belli."
There is no longer any doubt that the Government hopes circumstances will arise which will precipitate war without the necessity of delivering the threatened ultimatum to the Boer republic. The development of events which would best suit the British purpose is as follows: Maintenance of the present situation for perhaps a fortnight, during which British preparations would be advanced as rapidly as possible. Then some aggression on the part of the Boers on the Natal frontier which Great Britain would be able to stigmatize as an act of war and which would afford an excuse for breaking off negotiations. Next, the maintenance of a defensive policy by the British forces for two or three weeks, enabling the Boers to win minor successes, such as the capture of Newcastle. Public opinion being then inflamed into a unanimous demand for the crushing of the two republics and British forces being by that time ready to undertake an overwhelming campaign, the real war would begin.

It is hardly necessary to say that this situation is perfectly comprehended by the Boer leaders. The Boer Government will use its utmost efforts to restrain the burghers from furnishing an excuse for war, which England is anxiously hoping they will be betrayed or exasperated into supplying. The orders from Pretoria to all the frontiers on this subject are of the strictest description.

Not only the Boers, but Englishmen themselves, are in a quandary what demands the British Government can make, the refusal of which will constitute an adequate justification for a declaration of war. This quandary is all the greater in the light of the affirmation of two Cabinet members
this week that Great Britain has no desires on the independence of the Transvaal. If, therefore, President Kruger is able to restrain his angry followers, who are threatened on all sides by British bayonets, he will succeed in forcing the British Government to commit itself to a policy which it will be unable to justify before the world's conscience.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's address greatly exasperates the Boer party. This is easy to understand because a majority of the anti-Boer side
now openly confess, except in the press and on the public platform, that the professed reasons for their aggression are not the real ones. They regard Bannerman's criticism of their pretended "casus belli" as beside the mark
and resent it accordingly.

Summonses have been issued calling out such members of the reserves as are necessary to bring up battalions wanted for service in South Africa to a strength of about 1,000 each. The men are to present themselves for service on or before Oct. 17.

Boers Not to Invade Natal.

London, Oct. 10.—Most important news comes from the Transvaal. If true, it indicates that the Boers have abandoned all idea of invading Natal.

A cablegram from Newcastle, Natal, says that farmers who arrived there from the Buffalo River state that the Boers are returning to their homes, leaving patrols along the river. The commandoes still remain on the Free State border. The despatch also says that the feeling at Newcastle now is that the Boers do not intend to attack that place, and that the evacuation of the town was premature.

A despatch from Durban also says
that the excitement there has abated, owing to the Boers holding back from the frontier.

This retirement of the Boers is what the British authorities have expected, as their defective commissariat would prevent them from long remaining massed along the border. Telegrams received here recently have made frequent reference to the scarcity of forage and supplies in the Boer laagers, and have stated that many of those in the camps were inclined to strike out for their homes unless active operations were immediately undertaken.

The despatch from Newcastle looks as though they had done as they threatened.

Meanwhile, further transports from India, with two field hospitals and Hussars, have arrived at Durban, and the men and material were at once forwarded to Ladysmith.

Funston Arrives at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Oct. 9.—The hospital ship Solace with Brig.-Gen. Funston and a number of sick and wounded soldiers aboard has arrived here.

The Bear Mad Them Scatter.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9.—A big Malay bear escaped from a State street dime museum and created a panic among thousands of citizens and visitors to the fall festival. A man, a woman, two horses and a dog were bitten by the animal, which ran down the thronged street toward the Court of Honor. Women screamed and men and boys climbed lamp posts and dashed into alleyways. Many women fainted and children cried in terror. The keeper of the bear, Albert Hermann, aided by some of the men, pursued the bear and finally caught it.

Aid for Catholic Hospital.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 9.—St. Vincent's Hospital, a Catholic institution, conducted by the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul, burned here recently and the loss of seven lives resulted. Money aid in rebuilding the institution is being raised by popular subscription. The fund has just received two accessions.
Cardinal Gibbons promised $100 and the Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent Association of Norfolk sent their check for a like amount.

Ohioans Will Hear Senator Frye.

Lewiston, Me., Oct. 9.—Senator William P. Frye has left for Ohio, where he will take part in the campaign in that State. He goes by request of friends of President McKinley. The Senator will talk on the commercial interests of the United States and the Philippine question will also receive his attention.

Dewey Paraders in Trouble.

Atlanta, Oct. 9.—Without formality
of a court martial, Governor Candler has determined to discharge dishonor-ably from the service of the State those members of the National Guard who made a raid on the store and barber shop at Hamlet, N. C., on the return of the Atlanta battalion from the Dewey celebration in New York.

May Contest Plant's Will.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 9.—According to rumor, the will of the late Henry B. Plant, a wealthy transportation manager, which was offered for probate
in June, is to be contested by the widow.

A Popular Journalist Recognized.

Albany, Oct. 9.—The State Tax Commissioners have elected Commissioner George E. Priest of Ithaca as president of the commission. Mr. Priest is the editor and publisher of the Ithaca Journal.

The "Philly Preacher," Rev. J. Kirkman, Bellingham, Ill., says: "After suffering from a chronic lung trouble for ten more." It cures coughs, colds, grippe and all throat and lung troubles. J. S. Banker.

WHY WE ALTER AND REBUILD THIS STORE!
A SMALL BUSINESS }
Selling goods at all you can get for them, grumbling all } the while at high rent, business and living expenses. } Old Method
A LARGE BUSINESS }
Selling goods cheap at a small reasonable profit because } the large business enables buying in larger quantities, }
and consequently buying cheaper. } New Method

The larger business costs so little more than the small, that the entire expense is reduced many percentages, the living expenses are important items to everyone and cost no more when a large business is being done than small.
consequently merchants can sell a large lot of goods at a smaller advance-more profitably than a small lot at a large profit. We tried the old method 14 years, the new one year, and before the first year is over we are obliged either to go back to the old method or to find a larger store. Our neighbor
"E. J. Burritt" wanted to get out; we grasped the chance and rented his store in addition to the old quarters and thus obtained enough room to do the business of the "new method." We ascribe the past year's large business because people advertised us who wear our goods which at the time of purchase they may think only worth what they paid for them, but as time rolls on and the clothes don't change, but keep looking good, don't rip, don't muss, they gradually begin to believe they bought a bargain. They try it again, they recommend their family and friends, and by always furnishing good clothing at our small prices, each of them in turn recommends others—that's what makes a large business. That's what compelled us to get a large store. We are now at it, and will be all fixed up in our new quarters by August 20. And when we get this big store finished we want you to drop in to see us, look around in the new place, wish us success if you like, but always be assured that you are welcome here, whether you come to look; to see what a certain thing when you need it will cost you, or whether you come to shop or visit.

MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME—YOU ARE WELCOME.
We want your good will, and if honorable business methods will do it we'll have your trade and shall hold it.

Thanking the Public for their liberal patronage of the past Fifteen years. Respectfully,
BENJAMIN RICH.

Nearly 58 Years Old!

It's a long life, but devotion to the true interests and prosperity of the American different crops, the prices in home markets, and, in fact, a weekly visitor which should be found in every wide-awake, progressive family.

Just think of it! Both of these papers for only $1.25 a year.

The National Committee reports that Senator Hanna will deliver a number of speeches in Nebraska at an early date.

Brisbane, Queensland, Oct. 9.—Astonishment and dissatisfaction are expressed here at the news that the British war office has placed large orders for canned meats in the United States. As a matter of fact, the Queensland canners, anticipating a large demand, had prepared increased stocks, which will now possibly be a drug on their hands.

Washington, Oct. 9.—No progress has been made toward a final agreement upon a modus vivendi, fixing the Alaska boundary, even temporarily, since the tentative scheme framed by Secretary Hay and Mr. Tower, the British charge, was sent to London for ratification. So far as is known here, the London authorities are waiting upon the Canadian.

Boston, Oct. 9.—The new country clearing business of the Boston Clearing House has proved a success. It was begun on June 8, and the total daily business now amounts to more than $1,000,000. Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 9.—The famous filibustering tugs Three Friends and Dauntless, after having received extra big loads of coal and some mysterious-looking packages, slipped off to sea at midnight. Charles White, the oldest Bahama pilot, is also on board.

Washington, Oct. 9.—The Navy Department has received a telegram from Captain Hemphill of the cruiser Detroit, announcing the arrival of that vessel at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, and her immediate departure thence for La Guayra, where she had been prior to going to Puerto Cabello. Ship Gifford, which has arrived here, had on board five sailors of the steamship Teokoa, which ran on an under-reef at the south of the Straits of Lemaire on Aug. 7. When the Teokoa struck, Second Officer Barnes and four seamen, Yeates, Warner, Finely and Parkiss, believing that she would founder, got into a boat and rowed away. The Teokoa was subsequently saved and put into Montevideo for repairs. Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 9.—Reports from Key West state that 23 new cases of yellow fever have developed and that there is one more death. The total number of cases now is 980, and deaths 44.

Cologne, Oct. 9.—The leading Ultramontane organ, the Volks Zeitung, declares that the Conservatives have succeeded in the systematic efforts they have made for the removal of Prince Hohenzollern as the head of the cabinet. The Emperor has returned to Berlin from his visit to Sweden, and decided to remove the present Imperial Chancellor.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 9.—Julia James Morrison is seriously ill at the county jail, suffering from nervous prostration. Since Judge Estill, in the Circuit Court, refused the actress prisoner bail she has become despondent. During the past two days fever has developed. F. H. James, her husband, will in a few days ask that bail be taken for her on account of her condition.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Through the efforts of Herbert B. Gehr, a Chicagoan, a company has been formed which proposes to build the first railroad on the island of Hawaii. The charter for the Kohala and Hilo Railway Company, the new corporation, was obtained from President Dole by Mr. Gehr on June 26. The capital stock of $3,000,000 has been subscribed, mostly by persons of New York and Boston. On Oct. 24 Mr. Gehr will return to Hawaii with an engineer to have a final consultation with the engineer who is now surveying the route.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 9.—Dr. W. Vaughn, an American who has worked up a large trade among the people of New Guinea, narrowly escaped being captured by the natives a few weeks ago. The news of his experience has been brought here by the steamship Aoranui. Early in September the doctor, with several men, went on a trading and scientific trip up the Musa-

River and inadvertently came into an unfriendly territory and was compelled to retreat hastily to his launch. In the middle of the river the machinery broke down, and the boat drifted helplessly with the current. The natives ran along the shore hurling spears at those in the craft, while others followed the party in war canoes. Several of the men were wounded. A sail was rigged up and the launch got out of reach of the savages.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Frank Holler, a nineteen-year-old cigarette fiend, lies at the point of death in a Brooklyn Hospital, with a bullet in his brain. He shot himself while in a fit, produced by nicotine poisoning. Holler lived with his parents at No. 19 Oakland street, in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn. Until a few days ago he was in the habit of smoking from sixty to seventy cigarettes a day. His health became so bad that his parents cut off his supply of the poisonous weed and would not permit him to leave the house and insanity followed.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Aeronaut Allen, who has been making daily ascensions at Dansville in connection with the street fair being held there, met with an accident that will end his career as a balloonist even if he survives. Although the wind was blowing dangerously hard he attempted the ascension as advertised. His balloon was hurled violently to one side, precipitating the aeronaut into the telegraph wires, breaking his hold on the trapeze and throwing him headlong to the ground, twenty-five feet below. Allen sustained serious internal injuries, from which he will never recover.

Washington, Oct. 10.—Notice has been served on Postmaster George Smith by the International Postal Supply Company of New York, with headquarters at Syracuse, that stamp cancelling machines in use by the Department are infringements upon patents held by them. The notice cites the one in use in the Syracuse post-office and states further that proceedings will at once be instituted in the United States Court asking for an injunction to restrain their use. The matter was referred to the Attorney General for the Department, Mr. Barrett, for an opinion. To what extent this alleged infringement affects the machines used by the Department it is not known. If any action is taken by the International Supply Company it must be made against the individual post-masters as the United States cannot be sued, unless by the consent of Congress.

Intemperance.

Intemperance is soul destroying and often leads to crime. It has been the destruction of many a man, ruined his home, degraded his family and when his last dollar is gone, he returns to a home of destitution and poverty, while the saloon keeper pockets his money, locks up his conscience and retires to a bed of ease, rejoicing over his gain. Sad indeed is the thought that so many young men at the present day indulge in strong drink. A social glass now and then, but it will fetch him sooner or later. Young ladies should shun the company of such. Better is a life of single blessedness than to drag out a miserable existence and at last be doomed to bury her hopes of happiness deep in a grave of despair, who sees nothing to cheer her in the future, whose silent sighings had they a voice, would cry "my day is closed the gloom of night is come." Former City Judge Frank E. Cady's automobile was given a run on the streets of Auburn last night, and was a source of wonder to a crowd that saw it go. The machine is a rather crude affair but it was run along the street at a fair rate of speed. It is provided with wooden wheels, similar to wagon wheels, and not with the pneumatic tires seen on the horseless carriages manufactured by the large concerns. It has capacity for four people in a double seat, one facing front and one to the rear, each holding two people. The machine made considerable noise and frightened some horses which have not become accustomed to such strange sights.—Bulletin.
