

CHAPTER IX.
CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

We left Edward Roblin mounting guard at the head of the attic stairs. He could see lights moving about in the house below him and hear the hoarse cries of the bandits as they ran from chamber to chamber in search of plunder.

Presently a terrified scream informed him that they had discovered the hiding place of old Caleb Shurker and were dragging him forth to make him surrender his hoard. He was pleading pitifully for mercy as they forced him to accompany them to their chief. With blows, curses and insults the ruffians drove him before them until they reached the lawn in front of the dwelling where Claudius Smith was awaiting them.

Roblin now left his post and approached one of the dormer windows.

Looking down from this coign of vantage, he descried the shadowy forms of the outlaws grouped around the person of their chief, who was standing under the branches of an apple tree sternly questioning his quaking prisoner. He could hear the hoarse bass of the bandit and the quivering treble of his victim alternating in inquiries and replies, but just what passed between them it was impossible to make out. All at once the bandit shouted angrily:

"Blarst my eyes, what a stubborn fool ye be! If ye'll not tell where the he asked quickly, 'Have any of ye got a rope?'"

The suggestion acted upon the passions of the ruffians like a spark applied to gunpowder.

"Hang the rebel! Swing him up!" they yelled, crowding around the prisoner and shaking their fists in his face.

One of them ran off quickly and soon returned with a stout cord. A running noose was made at one end of it and thrown over the prisoner's head. Then he was hurried beneath the apple tree.

"Now, my lads, swing him up!" commanded the Tory chieftain.

An indescribable uproar followed these words. Roblin could see nothing but a struggling mass of men surging around the prisoner, whose body presently shot up above their heads, dangling at the end of a rope. But he was not permitted to witness the end of the tragedy, for at that moment he heard the sound of footsteps upon the attic stairs.

Instantly divining that some skulking Tories had left their comrades to come hither and plunder in secret, he ran to the head of the flight and, picking up his saber, awaited their appearance through the opening. He was just in time, for the next instant the first of the bandits reached the top of the steps. He was in the act of passing into the attic when he received such a rap on the scone from Roblin's saber that he plunged headlong to the floor below, where he lay like one dead. This had the effect of dampening the ardor of his comrades.

Peering through the opening, Roblin observed that they hesitated, consulted together and then beat a hasty retreat. He heard them running down rapidly through the house and knew that they had gone to bring others to their assistance. Although he realized that he had no hope of successfully withstanding the odds—that would be brought into requisition, he determined to defend Zadio to the last. He fully believed that the outcome of the struggle would be death. Nevertheless this did not deprive him of his courage.

While he was waiting the return of the Tories the girl regained her senses. "Where am I?" she moaned feebly.

Roblin hastened to her side.

"Be still, Zadio!" he whispered, bending over her. "Your safety depends upon it. It must not be known that you have taken refuge here."

"Yes, yes, I know now," she moaned sadly. "The Tories have broken into the house. They are after my husband's gold. Oh, poor, poor Caleb! If they deprive him of his money, it will kill him."

Suddenly the stairs resounded to the tread of many footsteps, accompanied by confused shouts and the rattle of steel against steel. The Tories were approaching. Some of them were carrying torches whose light already penetrated the darkness of the loft.

Hastening back to his post, Roblin could see them hurrying toward the stairs like a pack of hungry wolves. When they reached the bottom of the flight, he drew back into the shadow and waited.

Presently a flaming torch was protruded through the door, followed by a ferocious face searching the darkness. Roblin swung his saber and the rash intruder fell backward down the steps, carrying two comrades with him. The crash of their fall was followed by a few seconds of profound silence, during which Roblin stood over the opening with uplifted weapon, ready to strike down the next Tory who might be bold enough to show his head. Then the stillness was broken by a hoarse voice, mingling strange oaths with direful threats.

It was the voice of Claudius Smith. "Out of my way! Make room!" he roared, pushing his comrades to the right and left as he strode toward the steps.

One of the Tories pointed to the opening into the attic.

"There's an armed devil yonder," he said. "and ye'd better not go near him."

"Coward! Poltroon!" shrieked his chieftain, beside himself with fury. "D'ye think I fear man, God, or devil?"

Blind with rage, he leaped upon the steps and mounted them with the agility of a tiger. As his head came through the floor Roblin struck at it savagely with his saber.

Steel rang against steel, sparks scintillated in the darkness, and the weapon flew out of Roblin's hand. It had glanced off the blade of the saber with which the outlaw had been shrewd enough to cover his attack.

The Tory chieftain sprang into the attic triumphant. He saw in the gloom the form of a man crouching away from him and raised his saber aloft to deal a deathblow. The next instant the blade cut a gleaming swath in the

A flaming torch was protruded through the door, theless it missed its mark, for as he was in the act of delivering it a Tory rushed precipitately into the attic and jostled against him. At the same instant the sharp report of firearms, the clash of swords, cries of terror and shouts of triumph arose in a deafening tumult from below. Another Tory came tumbling into the loft.

"We are betrayed!" he shouted in tones that quavered with fear. "Run, captain, run, for the Americans have surrounded the house!"

Then he and his comrade scurried away in the darkness and concealed themselves in the lumber that littered the attic. Their chief stood at the head of the stairs, looking down upon the tumultuous scene below like one petrified. The light of the torches, borne hither and thither by his men as they fought to escape from their assailants, threw fitful gleams upon his countenance, and Roblin could see that it had turned a hideous, livid hue from baffled rage and despair.

Presently a deep voice thundered above the din.

"Claudius Smith is in the loft! Up and at him, men! Give the outlaw no quarter!"

At this Claudius uttered a defiant laugh. "Aye, but ye must catch me first, ye blarsted rebels!" he growled between his teeth.

Then he turned and ran quickly toward one of the dormer windows. Scarcely had he reached it when there was an onrush of footsteps on the narrow stairs, and a number of furious frontiersmen sprang one after another into the loft, where they scattered and began searching the lumber and rubbish for the bandit chief. Presently one of them caught sight of him as he was in the act of crawling through the dormer window. With a shout of exultation he hurried after him, arriving at the window just in time to see the fugitive scramble nimbly down the sloping roof to the gutter, swing himself to the veranda below, slide down one of its pillars and escape across the lawn to the place where his horse was tethered.

In the meantime Roblin had narrowly escaped death at the hands of the other assailants. On their first coming into the attic they had passed him by unnoticed, and he had since been too much bewildered by the strange events transpiring before him to pay much heed to their movements. Indeed while they were searching the loft for the Tory chief he was engaged in administering to Zadio, who had relapsed into unconsciousness when Claudius swung his saber at her defender. The frontiersmen came upon him while he was chafing the hands and temples of the girl with the idea of restoring her to her senses and, setting upon him furiously, would have dispatched him in the darkness had he not warned them quickly that he was not an enemy.

"Hold, my fine fellows!" he cried. "Would you slay a true American?"

At this they dropped their weapons, and one of them lit a torch and held it close to his face. For a moment he scrutinized the young man's countenance keenly. Then he broke out into a cry of amazement.

"By the powers above, it's Edward Roblin!"

The young man glanced quickly at the speaker, and his heart sank within him, for he found himself face to face with his relentless persecutor, Farmer Price.

—Waterloo and Marcellus are among the nearby villages that have adopted a curfew ordinance. It would be a good ordinance for Genoa, no doubt, but it would be vastly better if in each household paterfamilias would enact a curfew ordinance of his own, and enforce it with a trunk strap.

—We have added one more bargain to our club rate column this week. —The time is now at hand when people are putting up stoves. Look well to your stovepipe and chimney, and be sure it is secure, safe and clean. Fires often result from the negligence and carelessness of persons while putting up stoves. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

—This, from the Dansville Breeze, applies to every community where there is a paper printed: It should be the business of the secretary of every organization to give the local paper the names of the newly elected officers, as soon as the election takes place. The reason an editor publishes many notices of some societies, and none of others is simply because some secretaries are alive to the interests of their societies, while others are not.

—A DeBayer farmer, who has twice saved the life of his best cow by the means, says that when an animal is choking with an apple in its throat the proper thing to do is to thrust a stick the size of your wrist between its jaws and tie a rope to each end and over the horns. This lets the gas escape, and the heat of the throat soon cooks and softens the apple so that it goes on downward. This seems to be a safe and sensible method.

—Milliners tell us that there has never been an autumn when birds and feathers of all kinds are so lavishly used in the decoration of hats and bonnets as this, and the ornamentation varies from one stiff quill to the entire plumage and often the body itself of the bird. All this does look as if the Audubon society had not been very successful and could not compete with the relentless goddess fashion. Though women have proverbially tender hearts, they sacrifice mercy to appearance, and until fashion relegates feathers to the back ground there is no hope for the feathered songsters.

—Now is the time for the Genoa base ball team to begin work for 1900. Get together and organize in a business way, appoint the officers and get started. If the deal is handled properly there will be a snug sum in the treasury next spring. This advice would apply to the band as well. Subscription papers are played out. It is an easy matter to raise a little money if someone will take hold of the project. Among the organizations now at work for next season we notice the Ithaca band, Dryden band, Moravia ball club and two or three organizations in Auburn. Now is the time to get started.

A Lively Race.

Last week Wednesday Geo. Sturdevant of Moravia came over to Five Corners. (He's an undertaker, we believe.) At least, he undertook to capture a transient here. He waited till the shades of night were settling over nature and spying his victim, crept up to him and was about to lay hands on him (his victim didn't believe in the laying on of hands cure) when he started for the nearest fence, believing that over the fence is out, but not so with Sturdevant. He put in a very neat second for nearly a mile, and as his victim was putting more space between them all the time, he bade him good evening, and "Wait" says "Just tell her that you saw me and that I was looking well" (in the back.)

OHIO POLITICS BOOMING

Democrats and Republicans Working Hard to Carry the State This Fall.

PROMINENT MEN SPEAK.

Roosevelt and Bryan Are Greeted With Enthusiasm By Their Admiring Friends.

Mr. Bryan's Tour of The Buckeye State Makes Politicians Talk—An Immense Crowd Turns Out To Hear Governor Roosevelt and Senator Foraker at Cincinnati.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 24.—The most talked of event in the Ohio gubernatorial campaign is the three days' tour through the Democratic counties of the northwest of William J. Bryan, which closed in Sandusky City.

No tour of the State by a public orator in the interests of any party or candidate has ever been made which has been discussed among politicians as has been Mr. Bryan's trip. Although the platform adopted by the Democratic convention indorses Bryan and free silver, both have been kept so effectually in the background in the campaign that this attempt to hold in line the silver Democrats in the northwestern counties, which have shown a tendency to slump for Jones, the independent "Golden Rule" candidate, is regarded as one of Mr. McLean's most brilliant moves.

The effect of the tour cannot be estimated, though the Democratic managers say they expect to net 28,000 majority in the counties Mr. Bryan passed through. This and the cities of Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo and Columbus, which Mr. McLean's managers say they will spare no effort to carry, are the grounds upon which they hope for success.

Reciprocity in Silver.

A brief meeting was held in Clyde. From the rear platform of the car Mr. Bryan briefly addressed the large and enthusiastic crowd present, among whom was Thomas Seilley, eighty-one years old, who presented Mr. Bryan with a silver dollar bearing the date of 1800. Another man returned to Mr. Bryan a penknife which he said the Presidential candidate lost when passing through on his tour in 1896. Mr. Bryan said he believed in reciprocity, and gave Mr. Seilley another silver dollar.

What was said to be the largest gathering in the history of Marion was present to greet Messrs. Bryan and McLean in that town. Fully seven thousand persons crowded the streets. Special trains brought large delegations from Mansfield, Gallon, Delaware and intermediate points. A procession, headed by six hundred horsemen, marched through the several streets.

All of the large manufacturing establishments in the city closed down in honor of the occasion, and long before the hour set for the speech the speakers' stand was surrounded by a great mass of humanity, not more than half of whom could get close enough to hear. On the platform five hundred old time Democrats were conspicuous.

Enthusiasm at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 24.—Music Hall could not contain all wanting to hear Governor Roosevelt and Senator Foraker at the Republican mass meeting here. Governor Roosevelt was entertained at a series of dinners by Judge Taft, the Picadilly Club and others, and was escorted from the St. Nicholas Hotel to Music Hall by one of the largest processions ever seen in this city, including the American Club of Pittsburg, the Blaine Club, Stamina League, Ford Stith League and other organizations, and a battalion of 100 Rough Riders, all veterans of the late war. In addition to the torches and blazing illuminations along the line of march, there was a great display of fireworks.

The hall was filled before the parade reached it. Governor Bushnell and staff were in the city for the annual police inspection and drill, but not at Music Hall. County Chairman Kushman opened the meeting and presented Senator Foraker as the presiding officer. Senator Foraker made a stirring address in support of Judge Nash for Governor and the indorsement of President McKinley.

Foraker on Election.

Senator Foraker emphasized the importance of an overwhelming Republican victory in Ohio preceding the Presidential contest. This never was more needed than now as an emphatic endorsement of President Mckinley and make him President.

Senator Foraker was cheered tremendously throughout, and this reference to Governor Roosevelt set the audience to applauding. When Mr. Roosevelt took the floor the cheering was so vehement and protracted that it was some minutes before he could begin speaking. In the first sentence of his speech he named William McKinley as the next President amid prolonged applause.

A Sepoy outbreak is reported from British Burmah.

President McKinley and his party reached Washington Thursday after the long Western trip.

Acting Indian Agent Nicholson, at San Carlos, Arizona, reported that the threatened Indian outbreak had been averted.

In London Mr. Chamberlain defended the government's South African policy in a speech in the House of Commons.

The Baltusrol Golf Club, near Short Hills, N. J., began an open tournament for women, with sixty-four contestants.

Perry S. Heath, Assistant Postmaster-General, said in Washington that the Republican outlook in Ohio and the West was bright.

The American Bridge Company, with $87,500,000 capital, was reported under organization at Pittsburg, Pa., to control 98 per cent. of the output.

Complaints of Boer outrages upon the natives continued to arrive at Cape Town. These served further to inflame the Basutos and Zulus.

Gen. Lawton and Gen. Young have arrived at Arayat in the Philippines with a force of 3,000 men, and will move against Tarlac, making San Isidro a base.

E. E. Turner, Compton, Mo., was cured of piles by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve after suffering seventeen years and trying over twenty remedies. Physicians and surgeons endorse it. Beware of dangerous counterfeits. J. S. Banker

During the winter of 1897 Mr. James Reed, one of the leading citizens and merchants of Clay, Clay Co., W. Va., struck his leg against a cake of ice in such a manner as to bruise it severely. It became very much swollen and pained him so badly that he could not walk without the aid of crutches. He was treated by physicians, also used several kinds of liniment and two and a half gallons of whisky in bathing it, but nothing gave any relief until he began using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This brought almost a complete cure in a week's time and he believes that had he not used this remedy his leg would have had to be amputated. Pain Balm is unequalled for sprains, bruises and rheumatism. For sale by J. S. Banker, Genoa, N. Y.

WHY WE ALTER AND REBUILD THIS STORE!

A SMALL BUSINESS
Selling goods at all you can get for them, grumbling all the while at high rent, business and living expenses.

A LARGE BUSINESS
Selling goods cheap at a small reasonable profit because the large business enables buying in larger quantities, and consequently buying cheaper.

The Old Method

The New Method

The larger business costs so little more than the small, that the entire expense is reduced many percentages, the living expenses are important items to everyone and cost no more when a large business is being done than small, consequently merchants can sell a large lot of goods at a smaller advance more profitably than a small lot at a large profit. We tried the old method 14 years, the new one year, and before the first year is over we are obliged either to go back to the old method or to find a larger store. Our neighbor "E. J. Burritt" wanted to get out; we grasped the chance and rented his store in addition to the old quarters and thus obtained enough room to do the business of the "new method." We ascribe the past year's large business because people advertised us who wear our goods which at the time of purchase they may think only worth what they paid for them, but as time rolls on and the clothes don't change, but keep looking good, don't rip, don't muss, they gradually begin to believe they bought a bargain. They try it again they recommend their family and friends, and by always furnishing good clothing at our small prices, each of them in turn recommends others—that's what makes a large business. That's what compelled us to get a large store. We are now at it, and will be all fixed up in our new quarters by August 20. And when we get this big store finished we want you to drop in to see us, look around in the new place, wish us success if you like, but always be assured that you are welcome here, whether you come to look; to see what a certain thing when you need it will cost you, or whether you come to shop or visit.

MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME—YOU ARE WELCOME.

We want your good will, and if honorable business methods will do it, we'll have your trade and shall hold it.

Thanking the Public for their liberal patronage of the past Fifteen years.

Respectfully, BENJAMIN RICH.

The foundation has been completed for the Masonic monument to be erected in Lake View cemetery at Penn Yan in memory of the late J. L. Lewis. The stone is being perfected in the quarry in Vermont, and will be completed and ready to be placed on the foundation for unveiling. It is now thought that it will not be possible to have it finished before November 1st, or later. The arrangements for its unveiling will not be made until its completion. Where the monument will be erected is about ten feet west of the original site, the foundation of which has been made very substantial by piling.—Penn Yan Express.

An exchange tells the story of a young woman who stood on the head of a too susceptible barrel to pick grapes, and the disastrous result that followed: The barrel, unused to being taken into partnership by a pretty young woman, lost its head completely and the young woman found herself clasped in an embrace that nothing could break. In a small fraction of a second she found herself fitted with a wooden overskirt several sizes too small for her. She could not walk, nor could she crawl out, so she did the next best thing—tipped the barrel over and started to roll home, resting at intervals to cry for assistance. Finally her cries were heard and she was liberated with an axe. The next time that young woman wants grapes she will buy them or get some one to pick them for her.

The following incident is an actual occurrence. A Lehigh Valley train left Ithaca in due time, a few nights since, and everything took its usual course until the train approached a station not far from this city, when a stop signal appeared on the track ahead. The train was brought to a standstill; the conductor alighted and found, somewhat to his surprise, an old woman with a shawl thrown over her head and a lantern in her hand, standing in the middle of the track. He inquired as to why she stopped the train and was promptly answered, "Why Sarah wrote me she was coming up tonight and I didn't want her to get carried by." For a moment the conductor was speechless, but he politely answered, "Well I guess Sarah will be up on the next train," and signaled to move on.

The College Man's Number of the Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia, though planned primarily to appeal to university men, past and present, will interest all who care for the short story at its best. Robt. W. Chambers, in "The Spirit of the North," tells of the adventures of a party of Columbia naturalists and their quest of the dingee—hitherto supposed to be extinct—in the unknown country behind the Hudson mountains. This story is a rather remarkable combination of exciting action and inimitable humor. Chas. Macomb Flandrau, author of Harvard Episodes, contributes "Prince Protocoff and the Press Club," an irresistibly funny episode of Cambridge life. Jesse Lynch Williams, author of Princeton Stories and The Stolen Story, chronicles "The Great College-Circus Fight" between Princeton students and a passing Wild-West Show; and Arthur Hobson Quinn, author of Pennsylvania Stories, tells the story of "The Last Five Yards." Among other contributors to the number are President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, who discusses the regulation of college athletics; Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who describes the college life of our grandfathers, and President Nathaniel Butler, of Colby College. The College Man's Number will be on all newsstands October 26.

Is Your Clothing Dressy?

If not why not? A neat, up to date suit or overcoat costs no more than an ill-fitting disreputable looking garment. Why not then wear dressy clothing? Our shelves and tables are loaded with just such goods. They are waiting for you to put them on.

Those Fancy Worsted Stripes

call out to fashionable wearers, handsome and rich in out and appearance. They are bound to catch the eye and they'll wear too. We have none better for wear.

Those Ten Dollar Business Suits

are attracting unusual attention. We have them in Cheviots, Cashmeres and Serges in both single and double breasted coats. You can have a check, a stripe, or a mixture, just as you want. These suits are serviceable—that is their principle characteristic. They are also the product of good workmanship, and are very tasty in appearance.

COVERT COATS, COVERT COATS

Have you had your covert yet? If you haven't drop in and see our line. Here we claim supremacy. Anticipating that they are going to be THE fashionable coat this fall, we have selected a line that will meet the approval of the most critical. Very light in color, with strapped seams and that box cut, they are handsome—unmistakably so. We have other novelties too, we have everything you want, we are waiting for you to inspect them. We will be happy if you will call and see our stock.
