NEWS ABOUT THE STATE

Paragraphs of the Week's Happenings
Clipped from the Tribune's Exchanges.

Batavia has a woman school collector.

Amsterdam has had 80 fires within a year.

Pickpockets secured over $1,000 at the Norwich fair.

Cazenovia's public library comprises 5,626 volumes.

Ten cents seems to be the ruling price for this year's hops.

Dr. Spencer recently pulled over 80 teeth in one day at Whitney Point.

Supervisor Horace Tingar, aged 65, of Clermont, was killed Wednesday in a runaway.

John London, a Delaware county farmer, was fined $100 for selling impure milk.

Solomon A. Campbell of Oneida has received a certificate of discharge in bankruptcy.

A hobo recently made the trip from Buffalo to Albany astride one of the car trucks of the Empire State Express.

Willard Patten of Palentine fell into a threshing cylinder Friday and one leg was torn off, causing death soon afterward.

The electors in Binghamton may vote by machine next November, the common council having decided to purchase Standard voting machines.

For three years or so more some boys at Bainbridge have held a fair of their own. It has proved a success and they will hold another Oct. 11-12.

Ranson Harrington of Oneida Valley, accused of poisoning a horse, was tried on the charge of cruelty to animals and sentenced to six months in the county jail.

It has been learned that there was but one death among the pupils in this city during the last school year. This is a remarkable showing for a city of this size.—Ithaca News.

"Aunt Peggy" Bailey of Indiana has died at the age of 112 years. But for the fact that she had smoked constantly since her eighth year, she might possibly have lived to be an old woman.

Sig. Sautelle's circus, which winters at DeRuyter, has returned to winter quarters after a summer's tour of the Eastern states. His press agent reports a successful season, the show being greeted with good sized audiences at nearly every exhibition.

Wm. Hamilton of Sloansville, Schoharie county, is ninety-five years old but has never been out of the county, never had a ride on the cars nor seen a steamboat. The progress of the rushing world don't trouble him, and he will probably die happy at a ripe old age.

Former express cashier Allen of Ithaca, who suddenly disappeared about a year ago, and was not heard from afterwards returned last week. He has been in South Carolina where he was engaged in the photograph business and later was in the employ of the Adams Express Co. at Atlantic City. He reports that he was worn out with over work and also was discouraged owing to family troubles, and yielded to a sudden impulse to leave quietly. He expects to enter the employ of the Adams Express Co. at Philadelphia.

John Smith of Springport, thoroughly believes the most brazen faced thief has been found. Smith had a cow which he had been fattening for the purpose of selling her for beef and he had managed to get her in pretty good condition. A few days ago, unbeknown to Smith, some man who, by the way, left no clue to his identity, went into Smith's lot, slaughtered the cow and carried the carcass away. Who the miscreant was or just when he committed the theft Smith does not know, the only trace of him being such portions of the animal as are not marketable being left on the ground.

The Canastota glass works were again in operation, some fifty hands being employed.

A railroad man named Post was held up by a colored woman in Syracuse about four o'clock the other morning and robbed of $25.

Ed Towles of Upperville, who weighs 225 pounds, fell 22 feet into the wheel pit of his sawmill and escaped without breaking a limb although he struck on solid rock.

A correspondent of the Hancock Herald says that 1,400 eels were captured on an eel rack at that place on Sunday night and distributed among the citizens.

The saloon keepers of Waterloo and Seneca Falls have been prosecuted for violation of the Baines law for maintaining slot machines in their places. It costs them $650 each to settle.

The Auburn Advertiser says there is a record of 142 new buildings in that city for homes since January 1st and several families are living in barns because they cannot get any workmen to put up their homes for them.

Edward C. Burton, of Chittenango, submitted to an operation for the removal of his left eye, at the Faxon hospital, Utica, last week. The trouble was the result of an injury which he received six years ago, and which has finally resulted in an ulceration of the cornea, with threatened sympathetic action on the other eye.

The conviction of Frank P. Elliott of Greene, sentenced to five years in Auburn state prison for rape committed upon his daughter of ten years, has been affirmed by the Appellate division of the Supreme Court. It was a light sentence, although a hopeful one, for crimes against women usually go unpunished in Chenango county.

A farmer named Timberman living at Summit Station, has a bed of ginseng to which he has been making additions for the past eight years, and which now covers nearly an acre of ground. The part first set out will be ready to harvest next year, and is expected to be highly profitable to the planter, who estimates the total value of the bed at $12,000.

While Willis Hurlbert of Clyde was nearing home Friday with a wheel rake, the holdback broke and the horse ran, throwing him off in front. His wife in attempting to save him, seized the horse by the bits and was thrown violently to the ground, the horse stepping on her chest and crushing it in. As the rake passed over her one of the tines pierced her skull. Recovery is impossible.

Sherwood.

Oct. 2.—A new football team has been recently organized and all the members but one is a member of the I. O. G. T. They will play against the Ingleside team Saturday, Oct. 7. Selah Mastin and wife of East Charleston, Pa., are visiting his sister, A. J. Mastin and other friends. Mr. Mastin was formerly a resident of Sherwood and this is his first home coming in over twenty-five years.

Harris Owen of Cortland spent last week with his mother, Mrs. Carolyn Owen.

Several from this place attended the W. C. T. U. convention in Auburn last week.

Chas. Woodruff of Auburn was a guest at M. A. Simkin's last Friday. C. Coon and wife spent Sunday in Auburn.

All who went abroad to seek amusement on Dewey Day suffered more or less from the heavy dew which fell the greater part of the day.

Mr. D. Young of Ledyard and Miss Marian Mosher of this place were united in holy wedlock Saturday, Sept. 30. The bride and groom left for Auburn where they were married followed by old shoes and the good wishes of their friends.

Mrs. Calvin Fox spent last week with the family of John Wheat of Scipio.

Will Kenyon and John Welty with their wives were guests of friends in Genoa Sunday.

Miss Cora Nichols visited friends in Poplar Ridge a few days recently.

The snow storm of Sunday morning reminds us that winter is fast approaching. It is hopeful, however, that the prediction of some of the weather prophets, that we shall have more warm weather in October than we did in September, will prove true. Otherwise, the coal bins will need to be enlarged and with the prevailing high prices for the article it will cost a small fortune to keep warm for the next six months.

School seems to be prospering under the tutelage of E. C. Eaton.

CHAPTER V.

MASQUERADING AS A TORY.

Of all the Tory leaders who ravaged and terrorized the country around New York during the Revolution Claudius Smith was the most fearless and aggressive. He was a man of powerful physique and commanding presence, of great personal bravery and keen penetration.

In reviewing his tempestuous career we find that he possessed many of the characteristics popularly attributed to Robin Hood. Acts of violence were offset by deeds of charity, hatred and ferocity by gratitude and mercy, and treachery to his foes by unswerving loyalty to his king. He robbed the rich to bestow upon the poor, and concluded his life in true bandit fashion—at a rope's end.

From Fort Lee to Newburg he devastated the region west of the Hudson like a consuming scourge, descending into the valleys with fire and sword, and before a sufficient force could be mustered to assure his capture escaping to his strongholds in the mountains to plan another raid. The topography of the country in which he resided and the times in which he lived were eminently favorable to his peculiar mode of warfare, while he found a ready market for his plunder among the British soldiers stationed at Stony Point and Fort Lee.

Such was the man whom Edward Roblin had agreed to serve.

A month had passed since the outlaw's departure for a dominion to marry the runaways. Yet he had not returned from his mission. His failure to keep his promise caused them the keenest anxiety, which was greatly augmented by the precautions he had taken for their safe detention during his absence. For shortly after his going a band of his outlaws arrived at the cavern under the command of his son Richard, and a close watch had been kept upon them ever since. Roblin fumed and fretted under this enforced captivity.

"Fate is against me, Polly," he would say to the girl. "It seems that I have escaped from the Goshen jail only to be imprisoned here. It is evident that I am doomed to be a captive for the remainder of my days."

To which Polly would reply: "Don't despair, Edward. You will gain your freedom yet, and then we can get married and live happily together. In the meantime we may be able to turn our captivity to the advantage of our country. Let us pretend to sympathize with these Tories and win their confidence. Then we may be able to gain a knowledge of their designs and thwart them."

To this plan her lover readily agreed, and immediately began masquerading as a Tory. He cursed the Whigs, inveighed against the Continental congress and scattered threats of wreaking vengeance upon the patriots so liberally that he soon won the admiration of his captors. Yet although they believed in his sincerity they did not relax their vigilance, and his acting was futile so far as affording him any chance to escape was concerned.

In the meantime Richard Smith had taken a violent fancy to Polly. He persecuted her with his attentions, and on her giving him to understand that they were not agreeable endeavored to intimidate her with threats. Toward Roblin he began to exhibit a spirit of savage jealousy. The latter did not attempt to conceal his own abhorrence of the outlaw, and it seemed likely that their enmity would result in a fierce quarrel, when the unexpected return of Claudius Smith to the camp put a new aspect on affairs.

As he appeared suddenly among his men it could be seen that his eyes were heavy with fatigue and his garments travel stained. It was evident that he had returned from a long journey. To the joyous greetings accorded him he replied with a savage scowl, grumbling: "Cowards! Poltroons! To let yer captain lie so long in a rebel jail without coming to his rescue!"

"What! You have been a prisoner all this while, father?" asked his son, advancing to salute him.

"Aye, and would have been one still had I not employed my own wits to escape."

Then he explained how he had fallen into the hands of the Americans while on his way to fetch the parson and had been lodged in a prison at Kingston ever since.

"And now," he said wearily, "I will lie down for a wink of sleep. In the meantime," he added, throwing a fierce glance upon his men, "do ye prepare for a raid into the valley, for I am determined to have vengeance for my wrongs."

This threat was overheard by Polly, who did not fail to recognize its significance. It meant that the bandit chieftain was about to swoop down upon the defenseless inhabitants of the valley to plunder, ravage and burn. But upon whom would his vengeance fall? In what direction would he strike? If she could only assure herself on these important questions, it might be possible to thwart his design. While she was reflecting in this wise, the bandit strode into the cavern.

"I've come back without a parson, as ye see, my pretty birds," he said with a grim smile. "but I'll keep my promise yet. Ye must wait awhile, however, as I have more important affairs on hand." Then, turning to Roblin, he added, "hold yerself in readiness to start out within a few hours. I intend to lead an excursion into the plain, and ye'll have a chance to show the stuff ye're made of."

"Against whom do you intend to move?" asked Roblin.

"I've not decided yet," was the answer. "After I have rested I'll hold a council of my officers, and form a plan. But why do ye ask this question?" he asked suspiciously.

"I don't know, I'm sure," was the indifferent answer, "for I'm not at all interested in the matter."

Apparently satisfied with this reply, Captain Smith withdrew from the cavern and sought a resting place in a secluded crevice of the rocks.

"So there is to be a council of officers to decide upon the plans for this raid," mused Polly after he had gone. "Well, I'll make it a point to be present at the meeting and hear what the outlaws have to say. Then I will tell Edward all, and together we may be able to outwit them."

With this idea in view she quietly left the cavern and began carelessly promenading the platform outside. She observed with a feeling of satisfaction that the outlaws were so busily engaged in making preparations for their excursion that they accorded her but a passing notice. Some were examining the locks of their muskets, others were preparing cartridges, while others again were grouped around a grindstone awaiting their turn to sharpen their sabers. Richard Smith was sitting apart from the rest cleaning a huge horse pistol, and knowing that he would be present at the council Polly determined not to let him out of her view.

Several hours passed by, and she was beginning to grow weary of waiting when Claudius Smith appeared among his outlaws and commanded the officers to follow him. Then he led the way to the place he had fixed upon for the council. As this was in a part of the rocks outside the camp, Polly feared that she would not be able to reach it unobserved. Watching her opportunity, however, she managed to steal away unseen and by making a wide circuit to reach the place of conference unmolested.

Fortunately for her, the Tory officers had chosen for their meeting place a kind of basin surrounded on all sides by huge boulders. This enabled her to creep within hearing and to watch them without her presence being suspected. Glancing through an opening between two boulders, she observed that Claudius Smith was talking eagerly to his officers, who were grouped around him with an expression of close attention upon their evil faces.

The cheeks of the bandit captain were flushed, and his eyes glittered cruelly, while the ferocity of his countenance was heightened by a livid scar which extended diagonally across it from his forehead to his chin. He was explaining the plan of his intended campaign, and this is what Polly heard him say:

"I'm out for a rich haul this time, lads, and I know just whar to make it. There's no use wearing ourselves out on a wild goose chase for plunder when enough may be got by one bold stroke to enrich us all. Now, while I was in jail at Kingston a fellow prisoner told me of a rich old miser who lives near Shawangunk mountain. He said the old rascal had thousands of pounds concealed somewhere about his house, and it's my intention to seize him and make him show me the hiding place."

"But s'posin' the old miser won't tell?" asked Richard Smith, with a growl.

"I'll find means to make him blab my son," his father answered grimly. "I reckon he'll come to terms quick enough after I've stretched his neck a bit."

This answer seemed to remove all doubts from his son's mind, for after a brief pause he inquired: "But what is this miser's name, dad? If we don't know that, we are likely to fail, after all, for there's many a rebel farmer living near Shawangunk mountain."

Polly bent forward eagerly to catch the chieftain's answer.

For a moment the miser's name seemed to have escaped his memory. Then a gleam of sudden recollection shot from his eyes, and he cried out triumphantly:

"Caleb Shurker's the varlet's name, my boy! Blarst me, if I warn't near forgetting it!"

Without waiting to hear more Polly stole back to the cavern.

CHAPTER VI.

POLLY RESORTS TO STRATEGY.

During Polly's absence Roblin had been summoned to join the outlaws in a glade where they had previously gone to prepare their horses, so that when she returned to the cave it was deserted. Knowing that he was to accompany the expedition, however, she divined the reason for his absence, and sat down on a couch of bearskins to ponder.

A hundred wild projects to outwit the bandit's purposes hurried one after another through her mind, but all were impracticable and had to be abandoned. She began to despair, and then a terrible apprehension seized upon her.

What if Claudius Smith should put his diabolical scheme in execution before she could invent a plan to thwart it?

She was aware that Caleb Shurker had been the cause of her lover's imprisonment and that his wife had abandoned Roblin for the old miser at a time when he was languishing in jail on her account. But as these wrongs had been the means of turning his heart to her, Polly harbored no ill feelings toward them. In fact, she pitied Zadie profoundly for having sacrificed herself to the commands of her tyrant father, and, now that she was threatened with disaster, was ready to run any risk to save her.

But how could this be accomplished? In vain had she endeavored to devise means. Indeed the more she reflected on the problem the greater became her bewilderment, until at last the utter hopelessness and helplessness of her position inspired her to take a desperate chance.

Her plan was to make a catspaw of Richard Smith. She knew that the outlaw loved her in his brutal way and hoped that she might persuade him to assist her by pretending to return his affection.

"The wretch is far too stupid to suspect me," she reasoned, and will willingly lend himself to my purposes. I only hope the expedition will not start until I have had a chance to try him."

So, hastily throwing a shawl over her shoulders, she left the cavern and crossed the platform toward the place of council. She observed that the conference had just come to an end, as the officers were dispersing in various directions. She observed further—and the sight made her heart beat quickly—that Richard Smith was advancing in her direction and that he was alone.

"Out for a stroll, my fair charmer?" he inquired as he drew near.

"Yes; I have come out to see your expedition start," she answered, with a pleasant smile.

"Oh, we shall not leave until after dark!" said the outlaw.

"And then," she returned timidly, "I suppose I will be left alone to the mercy of wild beasts."

"Ye need have no fear on that score," returned the outlaw, with a coarse laugh. "A guard will be left behind to protect ye."

"You are very kind, I am sure," said Polly demurely. Then, with an air of well feigned anxiety, she asked earnestly, "Is it true that my companion is going on this expedition?"

"Do you mean your lover?" This with a scowl.

The girl pretended to be annoyed at the question and answered scornfully:

"My lover, indeed! I am tired of his love. In fact, since I have been in this place I have seen that he is not the only man in the world worth loving."

Here she dropped her eyes modestly upon the ground.

"What's that ye say?" cried the outlaw excitedly. "Ye don't love Roblin? Ye've seen another more to your fancy?"

BURGHERS ARE MASSING

Boer Troops Gathering on the Frontier and May Raid Natal This Week.

ENGLAND EXPECTS WAR

Believes That First Move in a Hostile Line Will be Made on Delagoa Bay by Kruger's Men.

Prospects of a Backdown on the Part of the Transvaal Not of an Encouraging Nature—The British Troops Are Ready to Make a Dash on Pretoria.

London, Oct. 3.—War now seems certain. Every stage has depended upon President Kruger. If he would not back down when the British demands were expressed less sweepingly, he scarcely can do so now, when they are formulated with almost brutal frankness. The negotiations, according to President Kruger's own statements, and judging from all the available information, seem to have reached a crisis.

Rumors of the interference of a foreign Power continues to crop up, but the most sanguine scarcely believe this would turn the British from their determination, though speculation is rife regarding the awkward complications which might ensue by German or Russian diversion in various parts of the globe.

The most probable solution of the present situation seems that the Boers, who must have seen the efforts of the British Government to avert hostilities until the arrival of reinforcements, having, weeks ago, planned a campaign, will put it in action, perhaps as early as this week. They probably will avoid engagements, devoting their energies to the destruction of property and the capture of prisoners, perhaps including a raid on Delagoa Bay. It seems unlikely that they will attack through Laing's Nek and other passes of that boundary, for the simple reason that these points are so openly talked about as their probable points of aggression, keenest observers believing it to be more likely that the Boers will operate through Zohland, thus creating a diversion of the 15,000 British troops, now chiefly massed at Ladysmith.

In the meanwhile a British army corps, consisting of 20,000 men, will be sent out. Parliament will be summoned and no doubt the necessary supplies will be granted.

It is the general assumption that the main object of the British will be the capture of Pretoria. The duration of the conflict is a matter of the wildest surmise, though the Continental and British papers do not express the faintest doubt that it will result in the defeat of the Boers and the addition of their country to Great Britain's colonies.

The underlying motive actuating the British Government has been the suppression of a far-reaching conspiracy for the establishment of a Dutch federation, from the Zambesi to the Cape. It long has been suspected that the Cabinet was prompted by more vital questions than the Outlander rights, and if Mr. Chamberlain is quoted correctly it would appear that Great Britain will not stop until reassured of the absolute safety of her supremacy in South Africa.

A telegram from Pretoria says the wildest excitement prevails there and that the war preparations are proceeding rapidly. Big guns, field telegraphs, burghers, munitions of war and provisions are being hurried off to Volksrust, the projected base of the Boer operations against Natal.

Ten More Are Missing.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—Another party of survivors of the wrecked steamship Scotsman has arrived here. The party included several more of the cabin passengers and the steerage passengers who were rescued by the Allan Line steamer Grecian which arrived at Belle Isle after the departure of the Monfort with the greater number of the wrecked passengers. The Grecian also brought back forty-seven of the Scotsman's passengers and crew. All were in a destitute condition. There are still ten more passengers of the ill-fated ship missing. The Scotsman's crew are held by the police for robbing the passengers and perpetrating other depredations after the ship grounded.

A Relative of McKinley Killed.

Deadwood, S. D., Oct. 2.—W. C. Linn, said to be a distant cousin of President McKinley, was killed in his cabin in the Galena mining district, nine miles southwest of this city, by an explosion of giant powder which he had placed beside a stove to thaw out. He lived only a few minutes. Linn came to the Black Hills in 1876, and was a messenger for a long time on the Northwestern stage coach between Pierre and the Black Hills. He was known as the tallest man in the Hills, being 6 feet 4 inches in height.

Chicago Will Celebrate.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 2.—Chicago will hold her fall festival, the corner stone of the new Post Office will be laid, and the city will be decorated and illuminated for a week, in the first part of October, as never before. Admiral Dewey, President Diaz of Mexico and Governor General Minto of Canada will not be here, but it seems certain that President McKinley will lay the non-union corner stone of the Post Office and brave the anger of the Chicago Bricklayers' Union, of which he is a member.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

Telegraphic Gleanings From All Parts of the World.

Fourteen American prisoners, all enlisted men, have been surrendered by the Filipinos.

HERBERT'S,

DILL & WATER STS., AUBURN.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1899.

DEAR HENRY: You have perhaps realized ere this that your spring suit must soon be discarded and no doubt you have been bothering your mind to know what you shall wear for Fall. Well, Henry, I have always looked after your wants and feel that it is now my duty to acquaint you with the leading novelties for the coming season. Confidently I'll tell you the suit that is going to be all the go this season. It is the single-breasted fancy worsted suit in a stripe or plaid with a double-breasted vest. Now mind I say double-breasted vest, for without one you'll not be in it. These, Henry, are swell. They are cut and trimmed like those tailor-made suits you used to pay $40 for. Honestly you couldn't tell them from custom-made.

But perhaps you don't care for the worsted goods. Well, why don't you get one of those handsome double-breasted blue serges, with single cut vest. They are certainly rich in appearance. Then there are those herring-bones in brown or blue. These are new goods and are bound to be popular. I know you'd like them. There are also the tweeds, the fancy chevots, the clays and the cassimeres—in fact all the odd weaves, but made up in new and pleasing effects that are bound to suit you. Well, I guess I have written you enough about suits. I want to say a word about your new overcoat and then I'll close. If you're going to get a new one—and I suppose you are—I'll tell you the kind you want. Get one of those light top covert coats with the fancy back (1-2 satin lined.) They are certainly racy because they're all the go. They are going to be worn an awful lot this fall, and I want you to have one. Of course there are the Meltons and the Kerseys, in blue, black and brown, but if you want a handsome garment get a covert. Well, Henry, I can't think of anything else to write. Yes I can, too. If I recall correctly when you purchased your last suit you had some difficulty about the price. Either you didn't have money enough or the price was too high. Say, Henry, before purchasing would you do me a favor? Would you just as soon come around and see me? I can assure you there'll be no such difficulty this time, no not a bit of it. Now, Henry, I hope you'll take advantage of this advice. It will be for your own interest to do so. In the past you have benefited, so heed the suggestion that I have given you today. If you do, no matter where you go you will always experience the pleasure and satisfaction of being a well-dressed young man.

Sincerely yours,
BEN MINTZ.
P. S. I am still at 29 and 31 East State St., Ithaca, N. Y.

THERE is a natural curiosity among Americans to know who and what is Sir Thomas Lipton, the well-behaved and courteous gentleman who brot the yacht Shamrock to contest for the championship with our latest design of vessel builders. He is a Scotchman by birth and claims that sometime back in the past some of his people lived in Ulster, which would make him Scotch-Irish. He is surely a combination of Scotch and Irish in his manners, business methods, shrewdness and quickness of action. He boasts of being a Scotch Presbyterian, and those who know him best say that his religion consists of great schemes for the elevation of the common people. It is told that thirty-five years ago a ragged little boy habitually sat on the docks that lined the river Clyde at Glasgow and watched the vessels out on the broad river. "When I get to be a man," said that boy, "I will have a yacht of my own, and it will be the finest and fastest that was ever built." Thomas Lipton was that boy. He was a waif, his father being too poor to send him to school. The boy drifted about but such were his qualities that it was not an aimless drifting. He rapidly grew to be a great business man, and seemingly everything he touched turned to gold. He became a contractor for the British army, and now has his warehouses in every corner of the globe. He is a tea-grower in Ceylon, a hog-packer in Chicago, a gingerale-maker in London. He sells tea in New York. He is a big-hearted, generous, likeable fellow, and his personable qualities commend him as much as do his business successes. He has fulfilled the promise of his boyhood, that he would have a yacht of his own which is one of the finest and fastest ever built.

The career of Sir Thomas Lipton has not all been easy and smooth. He has won great successes, but they have been accomplished despite obstacles and reverses. He has overcome difficulties that would have crushed most men. Busy men trod him under foot when he was a boy. He came to America as a stowaway, worked two years in the South and then found himself so poor that he got to New York as a stowaway, and there picked up enough money to take him back to Glasgow. Out of these difficulties at last came his reward. He is not a gambler nor a mere speculator. He has made his success on a definite plan and by hard work. While he controls 420 stores, sixty of them in London, he manages them all and knows what is going on there. He is said to work twenty hours out of twenty-four. He has never had a strike of his employees; he gives great sums to the poor; he never smokes nor drinks; he is a good-natured bachelor, and is said to have accumulated $50,000,000.

The East Venice Fair.

Wednesday was a perfect day, and was fully appreciated by the large number of people who went to East Venice to attend the Alliance fair. The exhibits were numerous and excellent, the farm products being as good and fair as one could wish to see, and proving most surely that Cayuga county is indeed the garden of the Empire State. The refreshments served by the ladies were up to the excellent standard, and the music and other entertainment were well appreciated. The East Venice fair was quite successful, and next year will be even more so. The Alliance is to be congratulated upon the apparent harmony and thrift of its membership.

Bring Flowers.

Bring flowers, fresh flowers, to the festal board
To wreath the cup ere the wine is pour'd!
Bring flowers! They are springing in wood and vale,
Their breath floats out on the summer gale—
And the torch of the sunbeams hath wakened the rose
To deck the hall where the bright wife flows.
Bring flowers, bright flowers, for the bride to wear.
They were born to blush in her shining hair.
She is leaving the home of her childhood's mirth,
She has bid farewell to her father's hearth.
Her place is now by another's side—
Bring flowers for the brow of the fair young bride.
Bring flowers to the captive's lonely cell.
They have tales of the joyous woods to tell,
Of the free blue streams, and the glowing sky.
And the bright world shut from his languid eye:
They will bear him a thought of his childhood's hours,
And the dreams of his youth; bring him flowers,
wild flowers.
Bring flowers to strew in the conqueror's path:
He hath shaken thrones in his stormy wrath;
He comes from the spoils of nations back,
The vines he crushed in his chariot's track.
And the field looks red where he won the day—
Bring flowers to die in the conqueror's way.
Bring flowers, pale flowers, o'er the bier to shew,
A crown for the brow of the early dead;
For this through its leaves hath the white rose burst,
For this in the woods was the violet nursed,
Though they speak in vain of what once was ours.
They are love's last gift, bring flowers, pale flowers!
Bring flowers to the shrine where we kneel in prayer,
They are nature's offering, their place is there.
They speak of hope to the fainting heart.
With a voice of promise they come and part,
Tho' they sleep in dust thro' the wintry hours,
They break forth in glory; bring flowers, bright flowers.

Obituary.

The grim messenger, Death, has once more come in our midst and this time the dread summons was for little Edward Charles Driscoll, who after three years of intense but patient suffering, has at length yielded up his sweet young spirit, and left sad and desolate another home. Beautiful in life and beautiful in death, all who viewed his remains agreed that angels could not be more fair. Deceased leaves father, mother and two brothers, Thomas F. and Albert W. Driscoll, to mourn his untimely death.

Another little lamb has gone
To dwell with Him who gave;
Another little darling child
Is sheltered in the grave.
God needed one more angel child
Amidst His shining band,
And so He bent with loving smile
And clasped our darling's hand.

During the coming winter Hon. Thomas B. Reed, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, will be a frequent contributor to The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia. Mr. Reed's paper will, in the main, deal with national affairs, and will form a most important and interesting contribution to the history of American politics. Mr. Reed's first article, unlike those to follow, crosses the Atlantic for its subject and tells how the procedure of French law courts, and especially those involved in the Dreyfus case, impresses an American lawyer. The paper, entitled Paris and French Justice, will appear in The Saturday Evening Post of Oct. 7.

The corner's jury has not yet brought in a verdict as to the wreck on the Central near Aurelius.

Millinery.

I wish to say to the ladies that I will be at Mrs. John Palmer's, Five Corners, Thursdays, Oct. 12 and 26, and at the hotel parlors, King Ferry, Thursdays, Oct. 5 and 19, Nov. 2 and 16, with a full line of fall and winter millinery goods. Respectfully, Society Notes.

Rev. George Leck of Auburn Seminary will preach on next Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church. The evening service will be a gospel temperance meeting.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold a gospel temperance meeting in the Genoa Presbyterian church Sunday evening, Oct. 8, at 7 o'clock. A good program will be rendered and all are invited to come. They will also hold a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Eva Slocum Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 11, at 3 p. m. Reports of delegates to county and state conventions will be given.

The Cayuga County Political Equality Club will hold its annual meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 17, at 10:30 a. m., in the rooms of the Woman's Educational and Industrial Union at No. 25 Williams street, Auburn, N. Y.

Mrs. S. B. Mead, as delegate from the Five Corners and West Genoa Union, is attending the State W. C. T. U. convention held at Binghamton this week. Mrs. L. F. Shaw of Goodyears and daughter, Mrs. Geo. L. Ferris of Five Corners, are also in attendance and likewise Mrs. P. J. Adams, Cayuga county president. Greatly to be praised is the work of these women so ambitiously seeking for the suppression of intemperance in its various forms.

East Genoa W. C. T. U. secured the prize banner of the county at the convention held in Auburn last week. A lively discussion was held, East Auburn Union coming in a close second, but by a majority of eight new members, making 28 during the year, the prize was given to East Genoa Union. It will be remembered that West Genoa has held this banner two years, and as it returns again to our town we hope our women may hold it another year.

Wanted—100,000 pounds of dried apples, at once, at Webster's. American oil at Smith's.

Mrs. Byron Hunt will have a formal exhibition of millinery at her home Saturday. The whole stock is open to your examination, merely as things to see, admire and learn from. She asks you as guests not as customers, although service is ready on the instant you express a desire to be served. Plenty of good things for you to see and more added almost daily.

Public Sale.

Pursuant to an order issued by the surrogate of Cayuga county, I will offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Oct. 9, 1899, at 10 a. m., on the front steps of the post-office in the village of Genoa, one Genoa town bond, date 1871, No. 107, $500, with attached coupons, March, 1888, to September, 1901, inclusive. Dated Genoa, N. Y., Sept. 19, 1899.

E. BYRON WHITTEN, Executor of etc., of John Booker, deceased.

New Clothing Stock.

I have received my stock of Winter Suits, Overcoats, Ulsters, etc., and respectfully call your attention to the same. These goods are all new stock and stylish, reliable clothing. I will not be undersold. At Genoa every two weeks. M. KALVARISKI

G. L. S. C.

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle was organized at the Chautauqua Summer Assembly in 1878. Its purpose is to provide a systematic course of reading in history, literature, science, and art, thus securing to those who have been denied college opportunities something of the college student's general outlook upon the world and life, and to give college graduates an opportunity to review the studies of earlier years.

The spirit of the C. L. S. C. has contributed much to its success. "Education ends only with life" is its watchword and the out-of-school people everywhere and of all ages are welcomed into its fellowship. The books have been selected with special reference to the needs of self-educating readers. No entrance examination frightens away the timid aspirant. Indeed, the diploma may be won honorably at the end of four years, on the strength of the student's statement that he has read the prescribed course, without examination of any kind.

Three or more members may unite and form a local circle for mutual help and encouragement, and each circle is entitled to a delegate to the Chautauqua Rallying Day gathering held early in August.

The whole plan is outlined in the following:

A four years' course, designed to give "the broad outlook." Each year's course distinct from the rest. The member does not bind himself by any pledge. A monthly magazine with readings, notes, programs, and announcements. A membership book with special review outlines and pocket review textbook. Individual readers may pursue the entire course alone without disadvantage. Local circles of three or more members should be organized wherever practicable. Expense less than twenty cents a week for ten months. A little forethought will make this possible for almost any reader. A certificate at the end of the four years' course. Seals for written review work and for extra reading.

Since last year the plan of Chautauqua work has been thoroughly reorganized and the expense of the course has been reduced from $6.50 to $4.50. Including membership fee from $7 to $5.

The local circle of this place will commence its work this week and every one interested in education and culture is earnestly requested to be present at the first meeting which will be held at the home of Dr. Geo. Slocum this (Friday) evening.

There are no fees or expenses connected with membership in the local circle. Those reading the full course will have to provide themselves with books and magazine. Reading members take the magazine only. Associate members attend the meetings only and take such part as their time will permit.

Dr. Day, the Specialist.

will be at the Van Arsdale block, Moravia, Monday, Oct. 9th, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; at the Clinton House, Ithaca, Saturday, Oct. 7th; Avery House, Auburn, Oct. 10th, as usual, but desires to give notice to his many patients that hereafter he will only make his visits once in three weeks. The doctor is a specialist in every sense of the word and is having great success in his line. Examinations free and strictly private.

Apple! Apple!! Apples!!! I want all your dried apples and will pay the highest market price for them. T. J. WEBSTER.

Teeth! Teeth! Why Dread Your Teeth?

I dreaded for a long time having my teeth extracted, but finally called on Dr. Dommett and had 17 extracted at one time, with scarcely any pain. I can recommend his method. MRS. OWEN CONNOR.

For the first time in my life I had extracting done without pain. I heartily endorse Dr. Dommett's method of painless dentistry. ALLEN FELLENER, Jeweler and Optician, Union Springs.

During the winter of 1897 Mr. James Reed, one of the leading citizens and merchants of Clay, Clay Co., W. Va., struck his leg against a cake of ice in such a manner as to bruise it severely. It became very much swollen and pained him so badly that he could not walk without the aid of crutches. He was treated by physicians, also used several kinds of liniment and two and a half gallons of whisky in bathing it, but nothing gave any relief until he began using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This brought almost a complete cure in a week's time and he believes that had he not used this remedy his leg would have had to be amputated. Pain Balm is unequalled for sprains, bruises and rheumatism. For sale by J. S. Banker, Genoa, N. Y.
