Overripe hen fruit will command a premium in the United States just as soon as Major Esterhazy arrives here to begin that proposed lecture tour.

A $75 Columbia bevel gear chainless bicycle will be given to the person having the best decorated wheel in the bicycle parade at Dryden fair.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., died at his home in New York City early Tuesday morning, from paralysis, aged about 56 years. He was industrious as well as rich.

Grant Atwood of Moravia and Miss Rosa Bell Mott of Scott were united in marriage at the home of the groom's brother Milo in Groton, Sunday, Sept. 3. They will reside in Moravia.

After an absence of twenty years, Harry Wyckoff has returned to his former home at Wyckoff station and will claim a large farm which was owned by his father, but was sold by foreclosure during his absence.

The Dryden fair occurs Sept. 19, 20 and 21. It is not necessary for us to remind our readers that this is the best fair in Central New York. The Moravia baseball nine and an Ithaca team will play an exhibition game the first day.

S. H. and L. W. Ferenbaugh, proprietors of the Waterloo Democrat, have purchased the Waterloo Observer and will consolidate that paper with the Democrat. The new paper will be known as The Waterloo Observer and Democrat, and will be issued Friday morning of each week.

City Treasurer Firth, while bathing in the lake near Cascade recently had a narrow escape. He had borrowed the bathing suit of Mr. Emmett Rhodes which was too big for him and the trousers slipping he could not swim. Mr. Rhodes rowed quickly out and rescued him from his uncomfortable position.

Eugene Turner, the 6-year-old son of James Turner, an employe of C. C. Adams & Sons at Weedsport, was drowned Friday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock in the Erie canal near the home of Alonzo Northrup. The child had been playing on the towpath and fell into the water.

LaPearl's circus is being run by the sheriff. Last spring LaPearl bought the outfit in Ohio of one Donaldson, giving a note for $16,000 in payment. Nothing of principal or interest has ever been paid and Donaldson seized the circus at Naples Saturday. A lithographic firm and several newspapers are also creditors.

General Elwell S. Otis has sent home so many relics that the family residence is said to look like a museum. Some of the older people will recall the industry of General Benjamin F. Butler in the collection of relics when he was in command at New Orleans.

The new cruiser, the Alabama, is a valuable addition to the navy. With her speed of 17.2 knots per hour in the worst of seas and a crew of Jack there on her together with the other accounts of the modern man-of-war will make many a battleship willing to give her a wide berth during the time of any unpleasantness.

It is reported that Mark Twain has engaged a suite of rooms at the famous Princeton Inn for the winter. We wonder if Mr. Clemens is aware of the fact that that is the wicked place where they keep beer for sale.

By a vote of 58 to 15 the trustees of Trumansburg have been authorized to borrow $500 to purchase a chemical engine. The village already has a steamer and hand engine, but the long spell of dry weather has so crippled their water supply it was deemed advisable to have a chemical on hand.

The Moravia Athletic Association contemplates an excursion to Niagara Falls this month. If 150 or more persons will join the excursion, a round-trip rate of $2.75 may be secured. Tickets good for two days. Those who wish to participate in the trip will please notify F. S. Lewis, Col. Speck, E. A. Beach or P. M. Rathbun.

Black Hawk, chief of the Wisconsin Winnebago Indians, died the other day at the advanced age of 90 years. He was the one exception to the rule that an Indian must die before being eligible to canonization. Black Hawk was always the white man's friend, and more than once prevented his tribe from going on the warpath against the palefaces.

Morris Morris of Morrisville, who was recently detected watering his milk and who attempted suicide by poisoning, was examined by a lunacy commission recently. He was adjudged insane and has been removed to the Binghamton State Hospital. Mr. Morris has been subject to epilepsy and has sustained two shocks by lightning, and has been considered unsound of mind for some time.

The will of the late Emily Lester of Moravia has been admitted to probate and letters testamentary have been issued to D. L. Hurlbut, the executor. The deceased left personal property valued at $1,000 to her niece, Fannie Hurlbut, of Moravia and two nephews, R. W. Hurlbut of Genoa and Dr. Delos Hurlbut of Iowa. Her household effects were willed to the late Mrs. James Stephens and Fannie Hurlbut of Moravia.

The mammoth barn, 210 by 100 feet, on the Burgess farm in the town of Owasco, near Baptist Corners, was burned to the ground Saturday evening last. The barn was filled with hay, grain, wagons, harnesses, farm implements, etc., all of which were destroyed. A large straw stack was also burned. Cause of fire unknown. The barn was insured but the contents were not. William Clancy occupied the premises.

Patrick Lavin of Venice has been working his farm team while both horses had raw sores on their shoulders. C. F. Smith, agent for cruelty to animals, forbid him to use the horses until the sores healed. He paid no attention to the agent's instructions and Tuesday Smith had him arrested and brought before Justice Peckham of Moravia. The horses were also taken there. Lavin plead guilty and was fined $5. He could not gain possession of his horses until he promised to employ Dr. E. B. Doyle to care for the animals. This he did.

Mrs. Lizzie Tinknall, who was murderously assaulted by her husband on the night of May 10, the latter immediately thereafter suiciding, died on Saturday morning at the Auburn City hospital, without ever having recovered the use of her speech or indeed the clear use of her other faculties. The brain matter was exposed by the blunt instrument with which she was struck, yet for a while she seemed to be improving. She showed recognition of attention displayed, but never spoke and of course never threw any light on the circumstances of the domestic tragedy. She was buried in Soule cemetery.

Genoa's Soldier Writes.

MANILA, Phil. Is., July 28, 1899.

DEAR FRIEND—Having a few moments to spare, I will write you a few lines. Your papers received and am very glad to get them for they are as good as a letter. I received the paper that had the picture of the new press in. I suppose you are rushing business now. I hope so, and also hope that the new press will be a success.

We are having some very rainy weather now. We have had one flood here. It rained for five days and five nights, and rain! I never saw the like of it. Everything was flooded and it was terribly disagreeable for us to get around. Out of that five days' rain I had to do three days' guard in it and was wet most of the time. Talk about feeling miserable! That's when I did, and if a man don't get the rheumatism it will be funny; but I am feeling good at present and I hope I will continue on so. The only thing that seems to bother the boys is stomach complaint, and that is a bad thing.

The rainy season lasts till October 1, so the natives say. I tell you that the rainy season is as bad on the natives as the winter is on us. The rainy season is bad on the insurgents for the rain fills up their trenches and the result is that they can't stay in them. If the fields did not flood over it would be a good chance to advance on them, but the water won't let us do anything. But wait till the rainy season is over and there will be a change in the program. After that General McArthur is going to make advance on the "niggers" and try and drive them out of a town called New Mexico and of course if he undertakes such a thing he will do it. General McArthur is in charge of our division, that is the 9th, 12th, 17th, 20th and 21st regiments, about 5,000 men.

I think if they would send General Otis home and let some one else come in his place, this thing would be over in less than six months. General Otis sits down in his place in Manila and gives his orders, and if the truth is known he don't know anything about the situation of the "niggers" half of the time.

Yesterday the Fourth Cavalry was out scouting and they ran into an ambush of "niggers" and got a pretty hot reception. The number killed and wounded is not known. I think quite a number. The Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth colored regiments have arrived and of course we are all glad to see more soldiers come, for the more we have the better it is for us and the quicker the thing can be done up. The more troops we have the bigger territory we can hold. We captured 8,000 tons of rice from the "niggers" the other day. They were trying to get it up the river and of course there was a stop put to it.

Well, I must tell you the news. I was promoted to a corporal yesterday. Of course I get out of all work and other things also. My company commander spoke well of me and that is what got me the stripes. Write soon.

Yours truly,
CORPORAL FRANK M. DENNY,
Co. E, Ninth Inf., Manila, Phil. Is.

CHAPTER I.

AN INTERCEPTED ELOPEMENT.

Of the many historic valleys which lie in the great state of New York that of the Wallkill river is perhaps the most romantic.

Winding through the counties of Orange and Ulster, it is inclosed on the west by the rugged Shawangunk range of mountains, a vast amphitheater of rocks, piled into the most fantastic shapes and abounding in picturesque lakes and beautiful ravines. On the summit of Sky Top, the highest peak of the range, lies the far famed Lake Mohonk, surrounded on all sides by marvelous precipices. On the tops of mountains farther south are situated Lake Minnewaska and Long pond, both remarkable for the depth and clearness of their water and the sublimity of their rocky shores.

Apart from the natural beauties of the region history and tradition have invested it with peculiar interest. Every lonely road has its tale of tragedy, every narrow mountain pass its story of encounter with Indian or Tory bandit, and every rock bound lake its legend. It was from an unlettered chronicler of the valley, spinning his rude but picturesque yarns to a group of fireside listeners, that I am indebted for the facts embodied in the following narrative:

At the base of the Shawangunk mountain, in Orange county, there lived at the outbreak of the Revolution a well to do farmer whose name was Price. His little family consisted of himself, a comely daughter named Zadie and a talented and handsome young man, Edward Roblin, whom he treated like a son, although he was but a farmhand in his employ.

Now, inasmuch as the young people were thrown constantly into each other's company, with few other associates of their own age, it was but natural that a tender and enduring affection should develop and ripen between them. Either Mr. Price was lacking in observation, or else the lovers deputed themselves with great discretion during their courtship. But the fact remains that the first intimation the old man had of their mutual regard was when Edward Roblin boldly asked him for the hand of his daughter in marriage.

The request fell upon him like a thunderbolt.

"You impudent young scoundrel!" he exclaimed in a towering passion. "Give you my daughter? I'll see you to the devil first."

In vain the young man pleaded his cause. In vain did Zadie join her entreaties to his. The old man remained immovable.

"You can't have my daughter, sir, and that's the end of it," he cried angrily.

And, to prove the finality of his decision, he drove the young man from his presence, ordered his daughter to her room and forbade their speaking to one another again. Having thus asserted his authority over his little household, he lighted his pipe and locked himself up in the kitchen to puff his fury away in tobacco smoke.

"What, throw the gal away on such a pauper," he pondered, "when she can have old Caleb Shurker for a husband? Shurker is the richest farmer this side of Goshen, and I've done well to put a stop to this nonsense."

The thought that he had acted wisely in separating the lovers operated to cool his rage, and ere he had finished his second pipe he had entirely recovered his equanimity. In one important matter, however, he failed to exhibit the wise foresight for which he was noted—he did not discharge Edward Roblin from his employ. In fact, he could not well manage his farm without him.

And so it happened that, although the lovers studiously avoided holding any communication in his presence, they found means of carrying on a clandestine courtship behind his back. This prudent conduct on their part completely lulled the old man's suspicions, and he relapsed into his former unobserving ways. In fact, Zadie carried her deception to such a length that she apparently consented to receive the addresses of Caleb Shurker, a concession which was highly gratifying to her avaricious father. Unhappily as he was in the cunning duplicities of love, he was convinced that the young people had submitted meekly to his will. But it was not long before he was rudely awakened from this error.

One morning, about a month after his refusal of Roblin's suit, the young man was not found at his chores. Mr. Price was surprised at this, as he was invariably an early riser. So he went to his room and knocked.

There was no response.

He opened the door. The room was empty, nor did the bed bear evidence of having been occupied during the night. The old man's eyes dilated, and his lower jaw dropped in blank amazement. "A pretty how-d'ye-do!" he muttered suspiciously, then hurried off to the room occupied by his daughter.

On reaching it he did not pause to knock upon the door, but flung it open with a loud bang.

Then the truth broke in upon his mind so suddenly that he staggered and gasped for breath, for Zadie's room was without an occupant. The bed was unruflled, and the pillowshams still in place. A chest of drawers, with its compartments open, showed plainly that it had recently been rifled of its contents, and various articles of feminine attire lay here and there upon the floor where they had been thrown when discarded by their owner.

It was evident that the lovers had eloped.

At first Mr. Price was so dumfounded by the discovery that he stood speechless and trembling in the doorway. Then, as he gradually awoke to a full realization of the deception which had been played upon him, he began to rave like one possessed.

"Hoodwinked! Deceived! Played for a blamed old fool!" he roared, shaking his fist at the empty air. "But I'll catch ye yet, my pretty birds, and make ye repent this escapade."

Then he hurried out to the barn and harnessed his fleetest horse to his chaise. As it was fully 20 miles to the dominie's, he hoped that he might yet intercept the fugitives. But he did not go after them at once, as he had other plans in view.

The local magistrate lived about a mile from the farmhouse, and thither he drove at full speed. Luckily that functionary was at home regaling himself with a breakfast of pork and potatoes in his kitchen, and when Price announced the object of his visit he willingly consented to assist him. Indeed so anxious was he to please the rich farmer that, within five minutes from the beginning of their interview, Price left his presence armed with a warrant for young Roblin's arrest, issued on a false accusation for debt.

"Now, arrest that varlet at once," he added fiercely.

With this document in his pocket the old man hurried off to the constable's to enlist him in carrying out his design. And again he was favored by fortune in finding that officer at home.

"I've got a job for you, Reynolds," he explained as he drew rein at the constable's door. "I want you to come with me and arrest that scoundrel of a Roblin. The varlet has run away deeply in my debt."

"But do ye know whar to find him?" asked the officer.

"Have no fear on that score," was the reply. "He's run off with my darter to get married, and we'll be sure to find him at the dominie's."

"That is if we git thar before him," returned the constable as he clambered into the chaise.

A moment afterward they were flying over the mountain roads as if pursued by a band of furies.

In the meantime the lovers had reached the dominie's house and had been accorded a gracious reception. Indeed the good man smiled so benignly as he ushered them into his parlor that all their misgivings were allayed, but when they stated the object of their visit his countenance underwent a change. He pursed up his lips, knitted his brows and looked so wise and cautious that all their fears returned.

"So you have run away to get married," he said with a dubious shake of the head. "Well, you must grant me time to consider the matter before I consent to unite you."

After much parleying and delay the dominie consented to perform the ceremony.

So everything was made ready for the marriage, and the young couple stood up to plight their vows, when, just as the ceremony was beginning, two men burst furiously into the room. Zadie uttered a piercing cry and fell fainting into the arms of her lover, who, rendered desperate by this blighting of his hopes, had turned a defiant front to the intruders.

"We arrived in the nick of time, Reynolds," cried Farmer Price triumphantly. "Five minutes more, and it would have been too late." Then, pointing a forefinger at Roblin, "Now, arrest that varlet at once," he added fiercely.

Realizing that resistance would be useless, the young man submitted to his fate, while Zadie, disconsolate and inconsolable, was taken back by her father. Later in the day the unfortunate Roblin found himself an inmate of the Goshen jail, a companion of felons of the basest sort, falsely accused, yet without a single friend to rescue him from the clutches of the law.

CHAPTER II.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

In vain did the prisoner protest that he was the victim of a false accusation; that he was under no pecuniary obligations to Farmer Price, but that the money paid to him by his employer, on which the charge for his arrest was based, was for services faithfully rendered.

The word of the wealthy farmer was sufficient to deprive him of his liberty, while his influence was such that he could have Roblin's trial postponed for almost an indefinite period. In truth Zadie's father was aware that the young man's confinement in jail was an effectual obstacle to his lovemaking, while at the same time it cleared the way for carrying out his plans of marrying her to Caleb Shurker.

But Edward Roblin was not the kind of man to despair. Buoyant by nature, possessed of a resolute will and great confidence in his own resources, he bore up under his misfortunes with cheerful courage and sought consolation in the exercise of the talents with which nature had liberally endowed him.

To while away the dull hours of his imprisonment he learned to play the fiddle. In this instrument he discovered a new language in which to express his disappointment and sorrow, his deep affection for his sweetheart and all the tumultuous emotions that harassed his melancholy soul. Plaintive strains of melody, wafted through the bars of his cell, reached the ears of romantic damsels in the outer world, and they would gather under his window of a pleasant summer evening to exchange sighs of pity on his behalf, for his story had got abroad in Goshen, and he had become the ideal hero of many a sentimental heart.

Months rolled by, and still Roblin remained a prisoner. No trial had been accorded him, nor was there the slightest prospect of a hearing for his case, and all this while he had received no word or token from Zadie. It was apparent that the vigilance of her father was never for a moment relaxed and that no messages could pass between them. The strains of the fiddle were now so melancholy and grief laden that one of the prisoner's fair listeners was moved to active pity and resolved to offer him substantial consolation.

Joe Westbrook, the jailkeeper, had a very beautiful daughter named Polly. She was of great assistance to him in his work inasmuch as she had assumed the entire duty of providing food for the prisoners. And now that one of them had interested her sympathies she took upon herself the further duty of taking their meals to them in person.

It may have been the result of accident, but, singularly enough, the fullest plate and the choicest viands now found their way through the "grief hole" of Edward Roblin's cell. Occasionally a delicacy not included in the bill of fare was added to his meals. Sometimes it was a quail or partridge, sometimes a flask of wine. There was no mistaking the significance of these gifts. They informed him that a mysterious friend was taking an interest in his welfare.

REACHING FOR TRANSVAAL

England Evidently Intends to Regain Her South African Possessions.

IT MAKES EUROPE SMILE

Those Under British Rule Make Light of President Kruger's Threatened Opposition.

Declared That if War Comes it Will Be Waged Relentlessly—England Believes Johannesburg Can Be Taken in Six Months—The Boers Plan Purely Defensive.

London, Sept. 12.—Everybody is asking whether or not there will be war. The newspapers are filled with information relating to troops going to South Africa. Eight brigades have been mobilized in home districts, and are ready to start at any moment. The troops are bursting with enthusiasm. Volunteer regiments are pleading to be sent to the front.

Every Englishman knows that the Transvaal will either have to belong to England or else England will have to get out of South Africa. Mr. Gladstone gave the Transvaal away. Mr. Chamberlain is determined to get it back. England may not believe in Mr. Chamberlain, but the situation demands a strong man, and the strong man of the Cabinet is Chamberlain.

It is a little power against a big. The Englishmen recognize that Kruger has some rights that ought to be respected, but England also recognizes that in South Africa there is a bit of country filled with gold that she needs, and England has a way of getting what she wants.

It seems like a small affair, and all the nations of Europe smile at the idea of the Transvaal opposing England. But England knows better. She has learned by experience.

There may not be war, but nearly everybody thinks war is certain. Under any circumstances there cannot be war inside of two months. The Boers can put 30,000 troops in the field; the Orange Free State can put 20,000. Regiment after regiment is leaving England, and among people of experience it is recognized that Great Britain will require at least 100,000 men to obtain a territory that once was hers.

The Commander in Chief, Field Marshal Lord Wolseley, Sir Evelyn Wood, Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, and other Generals have been working strenuously on it for months. Many new features have been introduced, several of them being based on the lessons learned by the American troops in the war with Spain. Among the later is the extreme usefulness of mules in such a country as the Transvaal. The British officers who have been in the United States, Spain, and South America selecting these animals have now been ordered to close their purchases and ship the mules as quickly as possible to the scene of the probable hostilities.

All of these things, to say nothing of the splendid morale and reputation of the regiments selected for the Cape, indicate that if war comes it will be waged relentlessly and strongly and that there will be no abatement until South Africa is flooded with British troops to such numbers that organized resistance by the Boers will be impossible. Conservative opinion places six months as the outside for the capture of Johannesburg and Pretoria.

The Boer plan of mobilization is said to be purely defensive, embracing 45,000 men, who would occupy strategic points in their own country. But this is not likely to prevent a raid upon poorly defended Natal. The greatest dangers the British contemplate facing, apart from the Boer's steady hands and Mauser rifles, are climate, lack of forage, and the scarcity of ammunition owing to the difficulties of transportation. Precautions have already been taken to avoid the two last, but there is no doubt that if war comes many British lives will be sacrificed to enteric fever.

Ordered Miss Ray Reinstated.

Hudson, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Justice Fursman, at Troy, has directed the Superintendent of the House of Refuge for Women, at Hudson, to reinstate Miss Della Gani Ray as General Supervisor of that institution. The order also grants Miss Ray costs, and will entitle her to her full salary from the date of her removal. This is the first decision giving a construction to Rule 23 of the Civil Service Commission, which was approved by the Governor on July 29. Miss Keefe, who for even years has been an officer in the House of Refuge, was summarily removed without a hearing and without the presentation to her of any charges. Proceedings for her reinstatement will be instituted.

The Trust is a Reality.

Pittsburg, Penn., Sept. 11.—After repeated efforts the National Glass Company, the combination of glass table ware manufacturers, is at last a fact. It is to be capitalized at $4,000,000, and is expected to be in operation Oct. 1. Sixteen factories are included in the deal, and three more are almost assured. Each factory will continue to operate under its present management, and the business will be conducted on the lines laid down by the combine when it was originally proposed and the United States Glass Company was included.

Astor Declined Kipling's Poem. London, Sept. 11.—Rudyard Kipling

recently wrote a poem and offered it for publication to W. W. Astor. It was not printed, doubtless because it told of the defeat of the English by the Boers. Kipling's next poem was of quite a different character.

Wants the South American Market.

London, Sept. 11.—It is said that the Amalgamated Coats American Thread Company has absorbed a leading Belgian firm and intends taking others with a view to controlling the South American markets, now supplied by Belgium.

Peary and Party Are Well.

Brigus, N. F., Sept. 11.—The Peary-Harmsworth steamer Windward, Captain John Bartlett, from Etah, North Greenland, August 26, has arrived here reporting all well on board. She will be followed in a week by the Peary Arctic Club's steamer Diana, Captain Samuel W. Bartlett, also from Etah. The Windward reports that all on board the Diana were well at the time the vessels separated.

Waterspout Alarms Many People.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 11.—Rising 300 feet above the ocean, a triple waterspout swept past this city, lashing the surf into fury, imperiling a fleet of fishing boats within three miles of the shore, and just avoiding an unknown coasting steamer and a tug and barges. So rapid was the speed of the waterspout, traveling to the south, that in forty-five minutes after first sighting it had disappeared.

Shipwrecked Sailors Rescued.

Milwaukee, Sept. 11.—Captain Richard Freeman and Nelson Algure, the sole survivors of the Canadian barge Lisgar, which went down in Lake Huron on September 8, have arrived in this city aboard the steamer Case. The two survivors were picked up by the Case twenty miles southeast of Thunder Bay Island Light.

Havana's Death Roll.

Havana, Sept. 11.—The health statistics for the month of August, which have just been issued, show that during the month there were seven deaths from yellow fever.

Revolution is Spreading.

Caracas, Venezuela, Sept. 11.—The revolution, under the leadership of Gen. Castro, is gaining ground. The insurgents now occupy Nirgua, three days' march from Valencia.

The Dreyfus Trial.

The seven French army officers who served as judges at the second trial of Capt. Dreyfus have rendered a verdict of "Guilty—under extenuating circumstances," in other words, Dreyfus is guilty of treason although there is no particular evidence to prove it. The case has been brought to public notice repeatedly during the past five years, and consequently the millions of justice-loving people in America and England especially, have sympathized with the unfortunate officer. The verdict is a curiosity in itself. Such a verdict would be impossible in this or any other enlightened nation and is unpopular even in France, but under the circumstances no other decision could be expected from the trial. It was a mock trial: the president of the court, as well as the other judges, belongs to the army, which in France is the most powerful combination in existence. However, much as the people of the United States sympathize with Dreyfus, we have troubles of our own. We have innocent men lynched and hung without trial, we have the Captain Carter case and a host of other scandals which are well known to all readers of the daily papers. The Philippine question should be settled once for all without delay, as the army of discontents is certainly growing.

It is now reported that a general boycott may be declared against the Paris exposition, and that Germany and Italy will recall their military representatives who are now at Paris. The Dreyfus verdict may yet cause serious international complications.

Business Change.

Mr. E. D. Morse of Greene arrived in the city last Thursday looking for a place to enter business. He finally met Mr. B. F. Slocum and at 8 o'clock Saturday evening a deal was entered into and the stock of clothing at the corner of State and Cayuga streets was transferred to Mr. Morse, he taking possession immediately. Mr. Morse is a very pleasant man and desires that the citizens of this city give him a share of their patronage. His son is to become a partner in the enterprise and will have charge of the store. Reading a Paper from Home.

He was getting home from business—he, a merchant well to do—
The wheels of the electric car were throwing sparks of blue,
And around him were acquaintances who, where they stood or sat,
By look or word or gesture, were inviting to a chat.
But quite ignoring all of them, except to bow and smile
When hailed by some one in the door or just across the aisle,
He read with boyish eagerness, while speeding o'er the street,
The poorly printed pages of a little country sheet.
He read of Tom Jones' enterprise in adding to his barn,
And learned that "Solon Huddleson had got a brand-new yarn,"
That "Auntie Simpkins gave a tea," that "crops are pretty good"
And that "Ab Bailey came to town and brought a load of wood."
Well, yes, these things are trifles, perhaps to you and me,
For him they are reminders of the times that used to be;
And from his busy city life he glances back with joy
To see the town that circumscribed his doings as a boy.
Each poorly printed paragraph upon the homely sheet
Presents a scene familiar or a friend he used to meet,
And maybe—you can tell it by the smiles that quickly come—
There's mention of his mother and the other "folks" at "home."
Men wander far out for fortune and find it, too, and yet
The farm and slothful village and its folly they ne'er forget;
And there's not a thing in city life which greater joy can give
Than the little country paper printed where they used to live.

WHY WE ALTER AND REBUILD THIS STORE!
A SMALL BUSINESS } The Old Method
Selling goods at all you can get for them, grubbing all the while at high rent, business and living expenses.
A LARGE BUSINESS } The New Method
Selling goods cheap at a small reasonable profit because the large business enables buying in larger quantities, and consequently buying cheaper.

The larger business costs so little more than the small, that the entire expense is reduced many percentages, the living expenses are important items to everyone and cost no more when a large business is being done than small, consequently merchants can sell a large lot of goods at a smaller advance more profitably than a small lot at a large profit. We tried the old method 14 years, the new one year, and before the first year is over we are obliged either to go back to the old method or to find a larger store. Our neighbor "E. J. Burritt" wanted to get out; we grasped the chance and rented his store in addition to the old quarters and thus obtained enough room to do the business of the "new method." We ascribe the past year's large business because people advertised us who wear our goods which at the time of purchase they may think only worth what they paid for them, but as time rolls on and the clothes don't change, but keep looking good, don't rip, don't muss, they gradually begin to believe they bought a bargain. They try it again, they recommend their family and friends, and by always furnishing good clothing at our small prices, each of them in turn recommends others—that's what makes a large business. That's what compelled us to get a large store. We are now at it, and will be all fixed up in our new quarters by August 20. And when we get this big store finished we want you to drop in to see us, look around in the new place, wish us success if you like, but always be assured that you are welcome here, whether you come to look; to see what a certain thing when you need it will cost you, or whether you come to shop or visit.

MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME—YOU ARE WELCOME.
We want your good will, and if honorable business methods will do it, we'll have your trade and shall hold it.

Thanking the Public for their liberal patronage of the past fifteen years. Respectfully, BENJAMIN RICH, RICH'S

THE VERDICT UNPOPULAR.

Decision of the Court-Martial in the Dreyfus Case Generally Denounced.

DECLARED TO BE UNJUST

Rabbi Silverman, of New York, Says the Conviction is a Crime Against Humanity.

Philadelphia, Chicago and Other American Cities Harshly Criticize the Court's Finding—A Committee to Be Organized to Intercede for Dreyfus' Pardon.

New York, Sept. 12.—Divergence of opinion almost as remarkable as the verdict itself greeted the news of the Dreyfus verdict in New York. In the French quarters—if that term may be used to designate a territory no longer homogeneous and distinctive—the opinion practically was unanimous that Captain Dreyfus had been convicted justly, that the judges before whom he was tried were men of probity and had played a heroic part in standing by their convictions, and that they had in their possession evidence of such an incriminating character, not revealed at the trial for state reasons, that a conclusion could have been reached after five minutes' deliberation.

This was the French view, by which is meant the view of the anti-Dreyfusites, principally on the ground of religious differences and prejudices. It represented the wish as well as the hopes and expectation of those who were against Dreyfus, not because the evidence showed guilt, but because the bitterness of hatred, directed solely against the accused officer's religion, obstructed all sense of fair play.

The American view was a protest against an astounding injustice; and against the bringing in of a verdict directly opposed to the evidence; a contempt for hidden proof that the judges did not dare make public. No affair entirely disconnected with American matters ever has aroused such interest in New York. It was the chief topic of discussion in the hotels, in the elevated railroad trains and on the surface cars, and it gave opportunity for vociferous expression of opinion in several theatres.

In Keith's where an impersonation of Dreyfus is a principal feature, the applause was tremendous at each appearance of the officer. In the Criterion, where "The Girl from Maxim's" is being played, the temper of the audience was shown when J. M. Francour, who takes the part of a French army officer, was hissed and booed the moment he appeared on the stage. Every audience in every place of amusement was a Dreyfus audience; every reference to the verdict brought forth a storm of condemnation; every suggestion of injustice a storm of applause.

And what was true of the theatres, where the barometer of popular opinion rarely is at fault, was true also of the hotels and other places of public meeting—with the possible exception of the Hotel Martin, the rendezvous of many native born Frenchmen. Most of them who dined there twirled their cigarettes and said they believed that the verdict was just and merited. Chief among these was Henry Fournier, who in 1894 told several regiments embraced within the department to which Captain Dreyfus's regiment belonged, to send a representative to witness the degradation of the convicted officer.

"I was a member of the bicycle squad," said M. Fournier, "and it was my duty to serve this notification on the commandants of the regiments, in accordance with French military law, to be present to witness the breaking of Captain Dreyfus's sword and the stripping of his insignia of rank from his shoulders. Do I believe him guilty? What else can I believe? He was tried by a court of honorable soldiers, a court that was sworn to see justice done, and pledged on its soldierly honor to find a true verdict."

"But did the evidence justify the verdict?"
"The judges did their duty. They did not make public all the proof they had in their possession. That would have been impolitic, and would have given to the enemies of France information that belonged to France alone. Yes, I believe Dreyfus to be guilty, but not the only guilty one. Colonel Henry—yes; Esterhazy—yes; Du Paty de Clam—impossible."

On the Dreyfus side there can be found no more fair and consistent champion than Rabbi Joseph Silverman of Temple Emanu-El, Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street. Dr. Silverman always has been outspoken, and has not hesitated to offend his co-religionists if he was convinced that he was in the right.

"A calamity to France, a crime against humanity and a perversion of justice," is his summing up of the verdict. "The trial," he continued, "was a travesty of all court procedure. It was one of the greatest judicial blunders and crimes of the century. The voice of the world will yet declare Captain Dreyfus innocent and do justice to his honor."

Upon learning of the verdict Assistant District Attorney Blumenthal took preliminary steps at once for the organization of a committee of citizens, irrespective of religious belief, and including clergymen of different denominations, to start a movement for the holding of a mass meeting for the purpose of making public protest against the conviction of Dreyfus and his sentence of ten years by the court-martial. Despatches received here from Philadelphia, Chicago and all the large cities in this country are to the effect that the verdict rendered against Captain Dreyfus and the sentence imposed is denounced as manifestly unjust and unwarranted by the evidence produced at the court-martial.

Dreyfus Confident of Freedom.
Rennes, Sept. 12.—Captain Dreyfus claims that five years imprisonment on Devil's Island counts for a ten-years sentence and says that he is confident he will be released before Oct. 15. He bears the verdict bravely under the encouragement of his wife and friends.

HIS WORK CUT SHORT.

Death of Mr. Eustis Ends an Elaborate Literary Work.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 12.—James Biddle Eustis, former Ambassador to France, died here of pneumonia, followed by heart failure.

Ever since his arrival in Newport early in the season he had worked incessantly on an elaborate article entitled, "Dreyfus and the Jewish Question in France," which he was preparing for a New York magazine.

Mr. Eustis believed in the innocence of Dreyfus, and hoped his article might be made such a presentation of the case as to forever dispel from the American mind at least any thought of Dreyfus's guilt.

He had collected a vast quantity of documents never before made public in this country and carried on an extensive correspondence with officials in France familiar with the Dreyfus case.

James Biddle Eustis was born in New Orleans in 1864. His mother was a Louisianian, but his father came from New England. After being graduated from the Harvard Law School, in 1884, Mr. Eustis practiced law in New Orleans until the civil war, when he entered the Confederate army as Judge-Advocate.

In 1876 he was elected a United States Senator. He was re-elected in 1885, and in 1893 was appointed by President Cleveland as American Minister and later Ambassador to France, a position he held more than four years. On his return to this country, in 1897, he became associated with the law firm of Jones & Bovin, of this city, a connection which he retained until his death.

He Clubbed the Maniac.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Charles Lowden, who is in charge of the tower signal house of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, between Larchmont and Mamaroneck, had an exciting encounter with George Gallagher, a maniac, of Port Chester. While Lowden was attending to his signals Gallagher broke in the door of the house and seized him by the neck, and then a tussle ensued which lasted for several minutes.

Lowden finally seized a club and knocked Gallagher down. He then had to hold him there, and meanwhile trains were passing and depending on his signals. He managed in a few minutes to signal the milk train to stop. When the train hands came into the tower they took charge of Gallagher and handed him over to the police.

Hastings Couldn't Give Bail.

Bellefonte, Pa., Sept. 11.—Major W. H. Hastings, brother of ex-Governor Hastings, who was arrested on the charge of forgery and of obtaining $5,000 from the Third National Bank of Philadelphia under false pretense, was unable to give bail in the sum of $3,000 and in consequence was remanded to jail to await trial. The crime for which Major Hastings was arrested, was committed five years ago, since which time he has been a wanderer in Spain, France, Germany and Italy. He returned here last Friday. The prisoner's general actions together with his threats against his brother's life, indicate that his mind is unbalanced.

Don't Want Imported Officers.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 11.—An important conference of leading Alabama Republicans was held here. Among those present were Col. William Youngblood, P. D. Barker, Robert Barber, and Julian Bingham. The conference denounced the importation of outside material to fill officers and usurp direction of the party in Alabama. This denunciation was based on the action of Circuit Judge Shelby in appointing Charles J. Allison of Tennessee, cousin of President McKinley, Clerk of the Federal Court for North Alabama.

Two Hundred Vessels in Line.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 11.—The embargo on Lake Superior navigation by the sinking of the steamer Douglas Houghton, in the "Soo" passage, on Tuesday, has been lifted. The largest fleet ever gathered on the lakes, if not in America, began to move soon after, and one vast naval procession headed down the lake while another started on its way to Lake Superior. In the two there were 200 of the largest craft under the American flag save the few ocean liners.

J. S. Banker.

Chester H. Brown, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cured me of a severe case of indigestion; can strongly recommend it to all dyspeptics." Digests what you eat without aid from the stomach, and cures dyspepsia. J. S. Banker.

It's a long life, but devotion to the true interests and prosperity of the American People has won for it new friends as the years rolled by and the original members of their family passed to their reward, and these admirers are loyal and steadfast to-day, with their faith in its teachings, and confidence in the information which it brings to their homes and firesides.

As a natural consequence it enjoys in its old age all the vitality and vigor of its youth, strengthened and ripened by the experiences of over half a century. It has lived on its merits, and on the cordial support of progressive Americans.

It is the New York Weekly Tribune, acknowledged the country over as the leading National Family Newspaper. LOOK ON A WHITE TABLECLOTH WITH HORROR.

Their Marvelous Gowns—The Chinese Maid or Matron Would Consider It Disrespectful if a Man Dofted His Hat in Her Presence.

The Empress of China is described as being in her 64th year, without having lost her love of power. It is difficult to credit the Chinese women with a "love of power," when for years we have been accustomed to thinking of them as doll-like creatures, hampered by their tiny feet.

The Chinese women have wardrobes of beautifully embroidered silk and satin robes lined sometimes with the softest and richest fur. Even the peasant women wear ornamental garments—bright-colored tunics, such as blue ones over red trousers, or light blue over trousers of pink.

The most gorgeous costumes are to be seen at the theatrical performances, which play an important part in religious rites. The Chinese ladies spare no pains in arraying themselves at such times, and arrive in their best silks and satins, ornamented with many pearls and much jewelry, often going so far as wearing two sets of earrings at one time. Their hair is wonderfully dressed and heavily gummed, and decorated with all manner of gaudy artificial flowers, while their cheeks and lips are profusely covered with rouge.

The average height of a Chinese woman is about 4 feet 6 inches, but in their trousers and tunics, which are the most common articles of female dress, they look even shorter. As a nation, they are extremely superstitious, particularly the lower classes, and men and women alike are much given to gambling. It is no uncommon thing to see a woman burning joss sticks, and offering up petitions and prayers for good luck to attend her gambling speculations to Fu Fi, the God of Earth, who is believed by the lower classes to favor all gambling.

Before a Chinese woman is married she sends with great pomp and state to her future home her entire trousseau, which is packed in large boxes, the keys of which she brings with her when she comes, and on no account is the bridegroom ever supposed to be allowed to see what is contained in these precious trunks until after the wedding is over, when they are shown to him with much pride and ceremony.

In a number of ways the Chinese differ totally in custom from Europeans and Americans. For instance, it is considered the greatest mark of disrespect to remove one's hat in company; and the greatest compliment it is possible to pay a Chinese man or woman is to tell them they look older than they are. Again, no Chinese man or woman would on any account, ever dream of eating off a white cloth, looking upon it with great horror and superstitious distaste, much in the same way as we would regard a winding sheet.

It is reported that some capitalists are engaged in an effort to lease three thousand acres of the marsh land situated east of Savannah for the purpose of utilizing the vast amount of flag and marsh grass which grows on this soil for rope and binding twine and other productions derived from these sources. If these parties are successful, a factory will probably be located in Clyde or Savannah which will be of very substantial benefit to which ever town is selected.

There is another political complication in the town of Niles aside from the supervisorship affair. At the town meeting held last February, William H. Robinson, Republican, was elected inspector. It turned out that there are two men in the town of that name and both claim the office, neither showing any disposition to give it to the other. In all probability both will serve and the Town Board will decide which one of the two is entitled to reimbursement for his labors, a matter of $10 or $12. One is sure to find in the pages of the "Cosmopolitan" some topics of immediate interest, and in all the output of the September magazines no article so holds the readers as M. SAINT-JUST's detailed description of the organization of the French Secret Service. The writer knows his subject, as he was former Chief of Division in the intricate organization. The reader lays the article down bewildered at the conception of the web which has been woven closer and closer around the French people since the days of Napoleon.

Experiments are being made to demonstrate that a railway car, by means of electricity generated by the friction of the wheels, will furnish light and heat for itself. On several Western roads the experiment is said to be successful, and it is now being tried on the New York Central. Somebody, Depew is the man quoted, compares it to the attempt of a man to vault over a wall by pulling at his own boot-straps. Not only are cars to be heated and lighted by the energy generated by the running car axle, but the plan is to provide by the same means the cold storage or refrigerator car. Heretofore this energy has run to waste, and now it is to be utilized to effect great economies in railroading. What next?

Ten New and Original Songs Which Can Be Had Free.

What will the great metropolitan papers do next? This is the question some one asks nearly every day. But there is one which leads all others. It has gained the sobriquet of "America's Greatest Newspaper" by just such remarkable pieces of enterprise as the one which has just now attracted the attention of the press all over the country. Last week the New York Sunday World announced that it would give away an album of new and original music, consisting of ten of the up-to-date class of songs that are now so popular, such as songs of sentiment, "coon" songs, "cakewalks," &c. These ten songs the Sunday World proposes to distribute one each week, with every copy of the Sunday World. When it is considered that the average price of new music, written and composed by popular authors, is from 30 to 45 cents, the unparalleled enterprise of The World in giving the song away with a big Sunday newspaper, for which only 5 cents is charged, is apparent. The World requests that we publish the following announcement:

A Music Album free. From Sept. 3 to Nov. 5, the Sunday World will issue weekly a song in sheet music form, with handsome colored cover. The entire set will be mailed, postage paid, for 50c. Remittances received after Sept. 3 will get the back numbers and each new number issued. Besides the song The World will also send its colored Art Portfolio, which is a marvel of journalism; its Sunday Magazine, which equals the monthly periodicals, and its Comic Weekly, which excels every comic weekly in the United States except two, and in its comic scope equals these two 10c. publications. Write a postal card to the Sunday World Music Editor, Pulitzer Building, N. Y., for a list of the songs.
