Buck-VanOstrand.

The spacious residence of Mr. and Mrs. Perry VanOstrand of South Lansing was the scene of a brilliant wedding on Thursday, Sept. 16, when their only daughter, Martha Townley VanOstrand, became the bride of Bertrand L. Buck, only son of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy A. Buck of East Lansing. The rooms were attractively decorated with gladioli, asters and foliage.

The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock, Rev. J. L. Duesler of Belleville, N. Y., a former pastor of East Lansing church, officiating, the ring service being used. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played by Mrs. Cora Chamot of Ithaca, a relative of the bride. Mrs. Chamot also sang "Oh, Promise Me" preceding the ceremony.

Little Miss Norma Wilson, cousin of the groom, acted as flower girl, and she was accompanied by Master Robert Brooks, cousin of the bride.

The bride was charming in an imported gown of white silk tulle over white taffeta, with silver bead trimming. Her veil of tulle was caught with orange blossoms, and she carried white bride roses. Her attendants were Miss Blanche Howland and Miss Nellie Buck. Miss Howland was gowned in pink silk net over pink and yellow changeable satin, with silver girdle. Miss Buck's gown was of pale green silk net over green and blue changeable satin, with silver girdle. Each carried a bouquet of asters. The groom was attended by James Buck and Kenneth Drake.

Following congratulations, a three-course wedding luncheon was served by Mrs. Granville, cateress, of Ithaca. The decorations of the dining room were in yellow, gladioli, nasturtiums and golden rod being used. The bride's table was centered with a basket of yellow gladioli. Six young ladies, friends of the bride, acted as waiters, the guests being seated at tables throughout the rooms.

About 80 guests were present from New York, Roanoke, Va., Adams, Ithaca, Groton and Genoa. The bride received many beautiful and valuable gifts, including $300 in gold, a fine array of silver, cut glass, china, and other articles.

The young couple left by auto for a trip to points unknown. They will reside in Lansing.

Married Fifty Years.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Divine at Stewart's Corners in Venice, was the scene of a very pleasant event Wednesday, Sept. 15, the occasion being the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

A bountiful dinner was served, covers being laid for sixty guests from Albany, Auburn, Groton, Scipio, Venice, Moravia and other points. A number of the guests present Wednesday attended the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Divine a half century ago.

Following dinner, Dr. H. E. Anthony presided as toastmaster and pleasant responses of reminiscent, humorous and witty nature were given by J. P. Northway of Venice, Benjamin Coggswell of Auburn, Robert Manchester, Sr., of Scipio, E. S. Manchester of Venice Center and John Snyder of Scipio Center. The latter passed his 90th milestone several years since and was the oldest guest present. At the conclusion of the toasts, a few appropriate remarks were made by the host.

The company left many tokens of the happy occasion and departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Divine many more years of health and happiness.

Warns Hunters.

The open season for wild ducks, excepting wood duck, eider ducks and swans began Sept. 15 morning and continues until sunset Dec. 31. Ducks may be shot from the shore or from a rowboat not more than 50 feet from shore or a skirting of flag, but they cannot be pursued in boats. A hunter may take 25 in one day. Game Protector Willard A. Howland particularly warns hunters against potting before sunrise, as that is the time most enthusiasts are liable to take chances.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IN PEACE TIME Aiding Poland

But for the work of American Red Cross agents in all regions of Poland during the last twelve months, hundreds of thousands of people in that tragic country today would be under the sod, victims of hunger, disease and exposure. The job in Poland is one of tremendous proportions and cannot be abandoned for many months to come. Here is a typical scene: A Red Cross worker "at the throttle" of a soup kitchen where hundreds of undernourished women and children are fed daily.

TO LEVY TAX ON BILLBOARDS

Commission Recommends That Massachusetts Legislature Get Revenue From Advertising Devices.

Taxation of billboards and all other kinds of outdoor advertising devices, as well as regulations of their size, location and manner of construction, is recommended in the report of the special billboard commission submitted to the legislature.

The only advertising signs exempt from the legislation recommended by the commission are those which have been erected in conformity with existing law and which call attention to the person occupying the premises or which the sign appears or to the business that is done on these premises or advertising the property itself or any part thereof as for sale or to let.

For all other signs, the commissioner recommended that an annual excise tax be levied, the amount to be determined by the division of highways of the public works department, having in mind in each case the location of such sign or device, the character of the neighborhood, the number and class of persons usually passing within reasonable distance of the sign, and such other factors as in the judgment of the members of the division will give to a sign in that particular location a particular value for advertising purposes.—Boston Transcript.

Beauty Always Appreciated.

Noble architecture and fine landscape gardening exemplify the helpful effect of art. The people's enjoyment of them, of buildings and parks, shows our need of beauty and the necessity of gratifying the desire for beauty. The existence of this craving and the satisfaction of it are evidence that a people has risen from barbarism to civilization.—Spokane Spokesman Review.

CANDIDATE COX, THE UNDIGNIFIED

By E. S. VAN ZILE

From the time of George Washington to the present moment it has been characteristic of the American people to demand dignity as an absolutely essential quality in the make-up of a President. The instances have been so rare in which an occupant of the White House has forgotten the obligation he is under to the nation to maintain his poise under all circumstances that it requires close historical investigation to come upon them. Our Presidents have been, no matter what may have been their shortcomings as executives, worthy in their outward bearing of the eminence to which they had attained.

It is a serious handicap to James M. Cox that he has displayed, in his Presidential campaign, a lack of dignity that has been, in some of its manifestations, actually shocking. It is not demanded, of course, that a Presidential candidate shall go about his campaign activities with a book of etiquettes in one hand and a box of sedative pills in the other. The American public, with its usual sense of justice, makes due allowance always when judging the words and deeds of an aspirant for the Presidency, for the great physical and mental strain that he is undergoing. But there is a limit beyond which its patience and sympathy may safely be tried, and Governor Cox has repeatedly passed that limit.

Of course, it may be too much to expect that a candidate who owes his nomination to the fact that he was the only one of many aspirants who was thoroughly a persona grata to men like Murphy, Nugent, Taggart and Brennan should possess that sensitiveness to the proprieties that has safeguarded the dignity of our Presidents as a class. But even after making due allowance for the fact that a man's manners are influenced by the company he keeps, it is not too much to say that Governor Cox, in his recent public utterances and in certain cheap appeals he has made to people lacking in good taste, has placed himself outside the pale from which alone an occupant of the White House should be chosen.

As President there is every reason to believe that the undignified Cox would offend against a precious tradition that is, as it should be, dear to the hearts of the American people.

COX KNOCKED LIVE HORNET'S NEST ON OWN PARTY'S HEAD

Charge Regarding Campaign Funds Flares Back and Sings Democrats.

THEY WANTED TEN MILLION.

People Willing to Contribute to Get Rid of Democrats, but Not to Keep Them in Power.

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

"God in everything," sang the poet. And this does not even exclude the campaign speeches of Governor Cox.

As a result of Mr. Cox's allegations of a big Republican Campaign Corruption Fund, certain definite facts have been demonstrated by the sworn testimony of the leaders of Governor Cox's own party. They may be summarized as follows:

It has been demonstrated that whereas in their most sanguine moods, the Republican managers never contemplated a campaign fund of more than $4,000,000, the Democratic party, at an expense of one-half million dollars, set up the machinery for the collection of a campaign fund of $10,000,000.

It has been demonstrated that the contemplated $10,000,000 fund of the Democrats did not materialize for the sole reason that there aren't a sufficient number of plain people in the United States who want a continuance of Democratic rule, to contribute even one-tenth of $10,000,000.

It has been demonstrated that whereas, the great body of the people—literally thousands of them—have willingly contributed from 50 cents to $1,000 to rid of the present Democratic administration, and to defeat Governor Cox; on the other hand not thousands and not even hundreds are willing to contribute 5 cents toward a continuance of Wilsonism.

What Records Show.

It has been shown by sworn records that whereas, in despite of Mr. Cox's outraged feelings over the disposition of thousands of ordinary American citizens to help pay the expenses of defeating him in his campaign for the presidency, Mr. Cox in 1914 viewed with complacency the criminal efforts of his campaign managers in Ohio to extort from the Civil Service employees of the state contributions intended to further his personal political fortunes, it has been shown by the testimony of Mr. Cox's own campaign managers that the $4,000,000 which the Republican managers hope to raise for all political purposes this year is not more than can legitimately be expended for this purpose, and that these frank Democratic managers would also like to have a similar amount, but don't see any way of getting it.

It has been shown that the common, ordinary rank and file of the American people, for the first time in American politics, are ready to contribute out of their own pockets to defeat a candidacy which represents all that is repugnant and hostile to American institutions, and that this willingness of the American people to contribute to the expense of defeating the Democracy is the sole basis of Governor Cox's charge of a conspiracy to buy the government of the United States. Incidentally it required the candidacy of Governor Cox to introduce into a national campaign the doctrine that it is possible for the people of the United States to buy their own government, unless Mr. Cox unconsciously means to convey the idea that in this campaign the people are to buy back their government from the autocracy which has seized it and refuses to let go.

Finally it has been conclusively demonstrated that if the Democratic party is to secure any money to waste in a vain effort to achieve a Democratic victory that money must come exclusively from men of the Colonel Deeds' type and the Dayton aircraft Plunderbund, and from the Wall Street international financiers, who alone will profit through the participation of the United States in Wilson's League of Nations.

All of these conclusions have been demonstrated by sworn testimony before the Senate Committee with a mathematical precision which would have met the enthusiastic approbation of the late Mr. Euclid. Governor Cox's great expose has petered out. It was a false alarm.

Let's get back to the issues of the campaign.

Advertising a Sale!

YOU don't leave your rig in the middle of the road and go to a fence-post to read a sale bill do you? Then don't expect the other fellow to do it.
Put an ad in this paper, then, regardless of the weather, the fellow you want to reach reads your announcements while seated at his bedside.
If he is a prospective buyer you'll have him at your side. One extra buyer often pays the entire expense of the ad, and it's a poor ad that won't pull that buyer.
An ad in this paper reaches the people you are after.
Bills may be a necessity, but the ad is the thing that does the business.
Don't think of having a special sale without using advertising space in this paper.

One Extra Buyer
at a sale often pays the entire expense of the ad.

HARDING—THE EDITOR

Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican nominee for President, is thoroughly familiar with the imposing stone and can "make-up" rapidly and skillfully. Here he is shown "making-up" forms in the composing room of his newspaper, the Marion (O.) Star.

A DAY WITH SENATOR HARDING

Calm, Steady, Determined, the American Who is Leading the Republican Party to Victory Goes About the Business of the Campaign in His Modest Office in Marion.

By WILLIAM HOSTER.
The American people will decide, of course. If they can visualize the vital principle which is at stake—the spirit which is at once the keynote and the mainspring of the campaign upon which the nation has entered, there can be no doubt of the result.
It isn't a thing that can be carried about the country, and exhibited from the rear end of a Pullman car. It is wholly apart from the red fire, blaring bands and stump oratory of old-fashioned campaigns. The issue, in short, goes deep down to that principle which has been the mainspring of the national life since the days of Lexington and Concord; and the patriotic citizen, Republican and Democrat alike, by taking counsel with himself, will find it imbedded in his own heart.
Here in Marion, O., you get a concrete exposition of that vital principle. It is good to come to Marion and get the true perspective. You are brought anew, here, to the realization that the country is in process of electing a chief executive to guide the destinies of 120,000,000 people for the four years ensuing from March 4 next; that the very serious business of bringing about what a European observer described as "a revolution by due process of law," is going forward with a proper regard for the dignity and importance of the task.

Scenes Entirely Appropriate.
Your first impression is of the fitness of Marion as the scene for the enactment of such a chapter in American history. It is a quiet little country town, for all its boasted industrial activity; and when you approach the Harding residence, one among many in its simplicity and attractiveness, you feel it is quite in keeping with events that from this typical American home there should come a modest, dignified and capable, up-standing American upon whom the choice of his fellow citizens should fall to uphold the honor and traditions of the nation. This conviction grows when you meet the man. He is typical of the successful business man—of the hundreds of thousands of successful Americans who have accumulated a competence through the ordinary channels which are open to all hard working, straight-forward American boys.

Meet him, now. He has established an office in the home of George Christian, Jr., his secretary, which adjoins the Harding house—and this is typical; chief and secretary live side by side, each owning his own modest home. And by the way, these executive officers are illuminating as to the kind of a man it is whom the Republican party has made its standard bearer in this epoch-making campaign. Every room in the house is given over to the business in hand—the senator's conference room is the Christian dining room, his private office, where the important conferences are held, is the kitchen. In the living room sits Christian. Elsewhere, from cellar to garret, the staff are at work. No confusion, no disorder, no hectic shouting at the top of one's voice, no running around in circles, pounding of the table, no harrying, jimmying or billying, with strident denunciations of the other side, and loud boastings of the way the opposition candidates is to be beaten into a pulp. Just a thorough, careful, business-like transaction of the business in hand—precisely the way in which we like to think the work of 120,000,000 people will be conducted at the White House after March 4.
Step into the dining room and meet the senator. Just at the minute he is reading proof on editorials which are to be printed in his newspaper, the Marion "Star," in the afternoon. The senator stands for everything that is printed in the "Star," and is careful to read what goes into its columns before the paper goes to press. Disposing of the proof sheet, he shakes hands cordially with you, and you are at liberty to size him up.

Mark Him Dependable.
He is somewhat above the average, of course, because he has already been singled out by the people of Ohio to represent them in the senate. But aside from this: You are at once struck by his balance and his poise. You mark him as dependable—safe. There is that in his face, on his brow, which gives assurance that he is not the sort of a man who will speak without thinking, or act without deliberating. There is reserve force in his bearing, determination in his jaws, character in his mouth, kindly sympathy in his eyes.

As you listen to him talk here in the Christian dining room, or later, in a speech to a visiting delegation from the front porch of his home, this conviction is strengthened. He doesn't say anything in his office that he wouldn't say out on the porch, nor anything on the porch that he wouldn't adhere to in all sincerity in his office.
The thing that strikes you at all times—it is the very atmosphere of Marion—is his moderation, his restraint—the absence of all bombast and exaggeration in his statements, the careful presentation of the issues, the avoidance of all attempt to array one class against the other, the conveyance of the desire, if called to the presidency, to be president of all the people; and, without making any high-sounding promises, to give all of the people the best that is in him.

Avoids Personal Controversy.*
Particularly noticeable is his avoidance of personal controversy. Not once since his nomination has Harding referred in a public speech to his opponent. He adheres to the issues. Not once has he permitted himself to indulge in personal denunciation of his rival.
He is sane. He has fixed convictions as to the moderation and balance which should characterize candidates for the high office of the presidency; departure from which he believes, without doing any good to the candidate who offends, does serve to bring American institutions into contempt.

During the war there was a Harding-kind of man in service as bo'sun on an American merchantman. The time came when the ship was torpedoed; and the bo'sun was put in charge of the tiller on the whaleboat in which a goodly portion of the crew took refuge. A storm arose, and there was imminent danger that the boat would be swamped. In the stern sheets sat the bo-sun, rigid and erect, his hand locked to the tiller. He said little—"Steady!" now and then to the rowers; or "hold fast; take her head on!" as the boat rose on the crest of a giant wave, and then plunged straight down into the trough of the sea. But for twenty-three hours straight-away, he held fast to the tiller, and he didn't relinquish it until he had guided the boat hard and fast on a friendly beach.
Then he got up and stretched and asked for a pipe of tobacco.

Calm, steady, determined and knowing his business, one conceives of the other Harding thus guiding the ship through any storm that may arise, to a safe harbor.

Nominee's Former Pastor Still Boosting Man Who Will Be Leader and Not Dictator.

FINDS IN SENATOR NO TRACE OF RADICALISM

Declares Justice, Kindliness and Modesty Stand Out as Foremost Characteristics of Republican Candidate.

Included among the Minnesota Republicans working faithfully and industriously in behalf of Senator Harding, is Rev. D. B. Martin, of Winnebago, Minn., formerly pastor of the Marlon, Ohio, Baptist Church and Senator Harding's pastor. The other day Rev. Martin was asked just why he is so enthusiastic about Senator Harding, and this is what he said:

"It is a peculiar pleasure for me to continue the work which I began twenty-five years ago. It was my privilege to stand on the side lines and boost for Senator Harding when he received his first nomination for public office. When he was a candidate for the senate I was visiting in Ohio and had the pleasure of boosting for him. It is, therefore, a peculiar pleasure to join with this bunch of Minnesota boosters in seeking to put Senator Harding over, in the greatest gift within the power of the people. Being a clergyman, I have been constantly asked by my friends at the college commencement in Michigan, in Chicago and in Minnesota why I am such a persistent booster for Mr. Harding, and I have been asked to state in this presence my reasons for doing so. These are three:

"The first pertains to certain elements of his character. I will give you these as I received them while I was pastor of the Baptist Church in this city, of which Mr. Harding is a member. I asked him and a group of other men to make some Sunday evening addresses. I do not remember much that Senator Harding said at that time, but I do remember very distinctly the words with which he closed his address and which have stood all these years as outstanding elements of his character to me. He closed the address by a quotation from the Prophets, in which he said, 'And what doth the Lord thy God require of thee but to do justly and love mercy and walk humbly with thy God.' Justice, mercy, kindness and humility have in all these years stood as foremost characteristics of Mr. Harding's life—characteristics which are always attractive and make a man's life worth while.

"The second reason is because I believe that there is focused in him the best traditions, ideals and purposes of the great Republican party and so peculiarly fit him to be their leader in this great crisis of the nation's life. I use the word 'leader' advisedly, for it is leadership that we are needing and not arbitrary, dictatorial, autocratic rule. We have had enough of that. If a boss is desired there would be no need for making any change, for the boss that we have is the bossiest.

"The third reason is because I find in him no trace of radicalism. To me radicalism is the greatest danger that we have to face. Our interests are too diverse to admit of anything of that character. We have our agricultural group with its interests. We have our labor group with its interests. We have our financial interests. We have that other great group known as the public, that has always been made the 'goat' with its interests. All of these are of vital interest to the common weal and I believe that Senator Harding is broad enough and sympathetic enough so that the interests of each will be blended in the common interest of all, and all will be perfectly safe under his leadership."

"READ THAT, MR. COX" AND MR. COX DID READ.

A little incident connected with candidate Cox's recent campaign visit to New York indicates that the Democratic nominee is striving to forget certain indiscreet editorials which appeared in his newspaper, the Dayton News, before the owner of the paper aspired to the Presidency.

As the Democratic nominee was leaving the Hotel Commodore after luncheon a commercial traveler forced his way through the throng of curious spectators and thrust into Mr. Cox's hand an editorial clipping which proved to be his denunciation of the commercial travelers of the United States. "Read that, Mr. Cox," commanded the traveling man. The Democratic candidate unfolded the frayed column of newspaper matter, glanced at the heading, scanned the first paragraph, flushed scarlet to the ears and crumpling the offensive and offending editorial in his fist mumbled something which none of those near him at the time would repeat and hurried to his waiting automobile.

In 1904 one of Mr. Cox's newspapers denounced the army of traveling salesmen as "unmitigated bores." What would he say now that he desires their votes?—North Bend (Ind.) Tribune.

Trolley Accident in Ithaca.

Miss Mary Moe, 29, died early Friday morning at the Ithaca City hospital, the second victim of Thursday afternoon's trolley disaster on Eddy street to succumb. Miss Moe is believed to have sustained a fractured skull in leaping from the runaway trolley car. She was unconscious, save for a brief interval from the time she was taken to the hospital. J. C. Barger, 53, of Springville, N. Y., who sustained a fractured neck and internal injuries in the accident, died at the hospital several minutes after being removed from the wrecked car. The casualty list of the accident is two deaths and about 20 injured.

The brakes on the car, going up the hill, failed to work and the car backed down at terrific speed and was completely wrecked with the result above stated.

—Yeggmen recently made the second unsuccessful attack on the Fayetteville postoffice within a year, being frightened away before blowing the safe.

Y., and has accepted a position in Adrian College, Michigan, where he is professor of history and social science. Mrs. Perry and daughter are with her parents at Savannah until Mr. Perry secures a house for his family.

—Some lie playfully, some strategically, and some from force of habit. In "Everything But the Truth" Eddie Lyons lied out of necessity. The action of the entire story covers only eighteen hours; but there is action, excitement and laughter enough in that time to keep the audience thoroughly happy and amused throughout its presentation on the screen. At Gem theater, Wednesday, Sept. 29.

—Monday afternoon, while Thos. Riley was working in the field at the Eaton farm on the Indian Field road, a deer came out of the woods, running in front of him and into his meadow where it grazed for about two hours. It finally ran back to the woods. Two men at Five Corners, Homer Algard and J. LaBar, also saw a deer early Tuesday morning, while at work in a potato field. After a time, the deer disappeared in the woods nearby.

New Superintendent of Schools.

At a meeting of the school directors of the towns of Genoa, Venice and Scipio, which comprise the Fourth supervisory district of this county, at the High school building in Genoa last Saturday, Dr. Fred V. Lester of East Venice was appointed superintendent of schools to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of G. B. Springer. About a year and three months remain of the unexpired term.

The directors of the several towns are R. W. Hurlbut and Fred Stilwell of Genoa, Bert Coffin and Bert Stevens of Venice, and Joseph Wyant and James King of Scipio. James King was made chairman of the meeting and R. W. Hurlbut acted as clerk.

Dr. Lester is a graduate of Colgate university with the degrees of A. B. and A. M., and of Wesleyan university, Illinois, with degree of Ph. D. He has also taken courses in Columbia university. He began teaching in the old Eight-square schoolhouse in Venice, his experience including work in rural and village schools, as school commissioner and college professor.

Dr. Lester requests all teachers to send their certificate reports to him by mail at Venice Center, N. Y.

Johnson M. Tarbell.

Johnson M. Tarbell, 87, died at his home in Genoa Saturday last. He had been in ill health for a long time and on Wednesday he suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he did not rally. His wife died last spring at the age of 91. Their only son was killed at North Lansing about thirty years ago in an accident on the railroad. Mr. Tarbell leaves three brothers, Silas B. Tarbell, C. Burr Tarbell and Frank L. Tarbell, all of Groton.

He was born near Groton and was one of a family of thirteen children.

The funeral was held at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon from the home in Genoa. Rev. F. J. Allington of North Lansing officiated. Interment was in North Lansing cemetery.

Notice!

The annual meeting of the East Venice Cemetery association will be held at East Venice hall on Saturday evening, Oct. 2, 1920 at 7:30 o'clock.

CLERK HAD JUST THE THING

Possibly He Didn't Make the Sale, but He Surely Knew What Hubby Needed.

She was evidently in a hurry, and the fierce glare in her eye aroused the young bookstall clerk from his reverie.

"Look here," she said. "I want a book for my husband. It's his birthday. And I want it for a present. Show me what you have and be quick about it! Nothing too expensive, mind you, and I don't want anything too cheap, either. He's a mild-mannered man and not fond of sports, so don't show me anything in that line. For goodness' sake, don't offer me any of these trashy novels, and no matter how much you try to persuade me I don't take anything in the way of history or biography. Come now, I'm in a dreadful hurry, and I've already wasted too much time here. Of course, you don't know my husband, but from all I've said can't you suggest something appropriate?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the assistant's reply, after an instant's reflection. "Here is a little volume entitled, 'How to Manage a Talking Machine.'"

Cat Climbs Own Tail.

Bessie, the khinkajon, at the zoo, is the wonder of the inmates of the small cat house, for she can climb up her own tail, says the London Chronicle.

If you see Bessie yawning you will know that she has been giving "matinees" in return for grapes and bananas, for the khinkajon is a nocturnal animal and should pass the day in sleep.

She is very much attached to her keeper—as you would agree if you saw her hanging from his finger by the tip of her long prehensile tail. When tired of gazing at his feet she obtains a more cheerful aspect by arching her back, seizing the base of her tail with her hand-like paws and climbing up it.

Folklore About the Hair.

A heavy head of hair indicates few if any virtues, according to folklore gathered from many parts of the world. The Turks claim that women with short intellect have long hair. The Albanians say with finality, "Long hair, little brains." Other contributors say that much hair indicates ungovernable temper and inclination to melancholy. "If a girl has a great deal of hair she will marry poverty, while the girl with little hair will marry rich," according to another source. Curly hair is a sign of a scold, and also early widowhood if the hair falls in little curls at the back of the neck.

A long and peaceful life is promised the owner of hair that grows low on the forehead and retreats up the side of the head over the temples. Chestnut or brown hair denotes fairness in dealings, generosity, absence of deceit, but unhappiness in domestic life.

Betty Would Be Starched.

Betty, aged three, asked numerous questions. One day, while her mother was washing, she asked: "Why do you starch clothes, mamma?" Her mother told her that clothes did not look nice if they weren't starched. The next day Betty asked her mother if she looked all right, and her mother said that she should put on a clean dress, and Betty said: "Oh, mamma, you can starch me instead."

A Humble Opinion.

"What this country needs is more production."

"What the country needs," replied Farmer Cornfossil, with a slight trace of irritation, "is less talk about what it needs and more enthusiasm about deliverin' the goods."

WHEN I AM A SPIRIT.

When I am a spirit—leave me alone!
Don't prick at the tough-skinned riddle!
Would you turn from a feast to gnaw on a bone?
Go, dine while the fiddlers fiddle!

Why lure me back to play the fool—
To bridge your brief hour's yearning
With maudlin talk through a three-legged stool,
With raps or table turning?

I'll lend no aid to an old dame's trance,
As she plucks at the air with her fingers.
She'll bid no spirit of mine to prance—
Let her cluck to the spook who lingers!

Oh, leave me alone! Go, drink your wine,
And look to the moment's living;
Lest you in your world, I in mine,
Lose precious drops of living.

WORKS WITHOUT A BATTERY

Ingenuous Flashlight Evolved by the Germans During the Closing Days of the War.

When the Germans could get no more batteries for pocket flashlights they invented a flashlight that needed no battery, and this was used extensively by officers in the army in the last year of the war. A few of these ingenious things reached New York recently as samples, a manufacturer desiring to know whether there would be a sale for them in America.

Instead of a battery to supply the electric current to the lamp, there is a dynamo. This is set in motion by pulling a chord which, through a train of cog-wheels and a coiled mainspring, starts an armature spinning between six coils, thus producing the electric current that serves the lamp. Each downward pull of the cord produces enough electricity for five seconds.

Batteryless Flashlight is Operated by a Cord.

The apparatus is not much bigger than a shoe-polish box and much the same shape; it is hung by a cord from the neck, the operating cord hanging below in a position convenient for pulling.

The mechanism is inclosed in a tin box, painted gray. The lid is easily removable, but is watertight. Every time the cord is pulled the spring returns it instantly to its position of rest, so that one can have a steady light by keeping on pulling the cord.

The mechanism is strongly made, and there seems no reason why it should not last indefinitely. It is not quite so convenient as a flashlight with a battery, but it has the advantage over this of containing no essential part that must constantly be renewed and that has a habit of giving out just when it is impossible to renew and when it is urgently needed.

QUEER CUSTOMS OF ESKIMOS

Abiding Faith in Odd Beliefs Not Infrequently Works to Their Serious Disadvantage.

Superstition is still a silent monarch among the Eskimos. When the men are away after sea animals the women are not permitted to work on the skins of land animals; and when the men hunt caribou the women must not touch the skins of sea animals. Men must not work on iron until three days after the polar bear has been hunted. The first seal killed in a day's hunting is brought into the igloo through a special hole cut into the ice walls, and the eyes are punched out before it is dragged in the room to prevent its soul seeing the interior, which would bring bad luck.

When the whale-hunting season opens the Eskimos have a dance fest that lasts for a week; and while the Angakook, or medicine man, is demonstrating his ability and arranging details, the ice breaks sometimes and the whales get out into the sea, leaving the celebrating Eskimos without even one catch.

Stefansson, who spent many years among the Eskimos, says they pick up Christianity quickly, because it forbids so many things, and they marvel at Sunday—a day set aside for rest—of which they never dreamed.

Odd Funeral Equipage.

Even funeral customs are changing. A London correspondent writes: "I saw a remarkable funeral yesterday. Four swiftly moving taxicabs, gleaming in the sun, came along Tachbrook street, Pimlico, S. W. The roof of the leading cab was covered with blooms. In the distance it looked as though it were a marriage party, but inside the first taxicab was a coffin almost enveloped in flowers. The occupants of the cabs—men and women—were not wearing mourning, at any rate not the orthodox black. I know no details of the funeral, but others, like myself, as they passed their hats out of respect for the dead, turned again to look on the funeral train."

FIGHTING STORM HIGH UP IN AIR

BREAKS WITHOUT WARNING

Hail and Rain Lash Machine Mercilessly, Making It Toss From One Side to the Other Like a Cork on Surface of Sea.

New York.—An observer in an airplane describing an experience in a storm thousands of feet above the earth writes:

"The sky was strewn with the remnants of a morning cirrus, as the climb was made carefully but swiftly on the wings of a warm wind. Eight thousand feet was reached with the merest effort. The salient features of the countryside could be picked out without glasses. The air had a milky tinge, but it was such as the eye could 'speak' through, and it gave no impression of the moisture with which it must have been heavy. It seemed warm and brilliant, and as the machine throbbed its way through it two warm slip streams flowed back over the wind screen.

Comes Unheralded.

"Some time must have elapsed before the pilot, in twisting the craft round to a new direction, caught a glimpse of a livid purple-gray bank of clouds which had crept up from the south. It had come quite unheralded by thunder, but although the sight was not attractive there seemed neither cause for alarm nor need for a premature descent. Even the growling rumble of thunder at a great distance, which came at last, failed to disconcert, and the airplane soared on with bracing wires slung and the engine in deep, full-throated roar.

"Then, without further warning, the storm broke in full fury. A mighty crash of thunder, which seemed to deafen and almost shake the machine out of the skies, was accompanied by a wild burst of hail and rain which lashed the machine mercilessly and made it toss from one side to the other like a cork on the surface of the sea. In a steaming cloak of rain and mist it was impossible for the eye to see the ground.

"Peal after peal of thunder followed in swift succession between vivid flashes of furious summer lightning. The heavens had opened to pour forth the accumulated passion of centuries. At nearly 7,000 feet up it would be suicidal to descend into the unknown and unseen. Which was safer—air or land? To the pilot, anxious almost beyond endurance, came the thought, common to every flying man, of fire in the air, and as if to confirm this horror a flash in a moment illuminated the whole machine as though it were caught in the probing beam of a searchlight at night. The sky was rent from vault to horizon by a vivid streak of electric fire. The indicating fingers on the navigation instruments oscillated wildly.

Like Wounded Bird.

"It seemed the last moment; but it passed, and still the machine was air-worthy. The hail still tore fiercely at the fabric of the planes; the machine was becoming more and more unstable; but it still hummed on. Down below a cloud of vapor made it impossible to see the earth or to sight a stretch of ground whereon to land. The thunder broke with unabated fury at regular intervals, and at each onslaught the machine quivered like a wounded bird.

"If the pilot continued to fly on it could only be a matter of moments before all control of the craft would be wrenched from his hands. It was equally hazardous to plunge down into the sea of mist in total ignorance of the lie of the land beneath. But to the latter course only could a shred of hope cling. The engine therefore was suddenly shut off and the nose of the machine dropped.

"By the altimeter, watched feverishly, the descent of a few thousand feet seemed to take many minutes. In the thick of a swirling mist a sudden and violent contact with the earth was momentarily expected. But down—down; until at what seemed the critical second there came a sudden brush of steady, grateful air from a region of smiling content and peacefulness, with the earth a thousand feet below. There was no sunshine, but there was also no storm. It had been a cyclone of the upper regions only."

Sought License to Marry Girl Only Ten Years Old

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Accompanied by Mary Lynack, ten years old, of Bear Creek, Pa., John Tomski, twenty-two made application for a marriage license at the courthouse at Wilkes-Barre. In refusing to grant the license because of the age of the girl, the license clerk brought the case to the attention of Judge N. M. Fress.

The girl was accompanied by her father, who swore she was more than fifteen. It was later learned the girl was only ten. The father is to be arraigned for perjury, according to the judge's instructions.

REVIVE TAHITI LORE

Excavators Search Ruins for Relics of Ancient Worship.

Temples Where Human Sacrifices Were Offered Destroyed by Missionaries Centuries Ago.

Papeete, Tahiti.—The ancient lore of Tahiti is to be resurrected and the ruins of the temples of the South Pacific islanders, ordered destroyed a century ago by Christian missionaries, are to be uncovered by excavation.

Efforts to gather the relics of a forgotten worship are being vigorously prosecuted here.

So completely were the wishes of the missionaries carried out that nothing remains save traces of the foundations of the great central temple of Marae at Ateburn, on Tahiti Island, where human sacrifices were offered to the bloodthirsty god of war, "Oro."

Excavations are expected to bring to light some interesting objects, which, it is hoped, will reveal the purposes and uses of this ancient structure.

Marae, while being the chief temple of Tahiti, was not the oldest or the most important in the islands. The temple at Opoa, traces of which still remain on the island of Raiatea, was the sacred center of religion in the eastern Pacific and not until a stone from this had been incorporated in the structure did the Marae temple at Tahiti become consecrated.

It was at Marae that Captain Cook witnessed the ceremonies of human sacrifices chronicled in his "Voyages."

The natives, while professing Christianity and manifesting it by most active church attendance, have a deep fear of these places. Under no circumstances will they approach these temples at night, nor venture near them by day without great trepidation, believing that should they in any way offend the sleeping gods vengeance will come.

SEA GULL MONUMENT

The sea gull monument at the site surrounding the famous Mormon temple and tabernacle at Salt Lake City, Utah, is the work of Mahonri M. Young, grandson of the famous Brigham Young. It is a granite column, fifteen feet high, surmounted by a granite globe upon which two sea gulls of bronze are in the act of alighting. The gulls weigh 500 pounds and the stretch of the wings from tip to tip is eight feet.

The story goes, and is vouched for by leading citizens of Utah, that when the first harvest of the pioneers of 1848 was threatened with destruction by hordes of crickets and all hope of saving the crops was exhausted, clouds of sea gulls flew down in answer to their prayers and devoured the pests until they were completely exterminated, and the crops were saved. Hence the monument.

LIONESS CARESSES 41ST CUB

Helen of New York Zoo Shows Affection for Her Latest Offspring.

New York.—Helen, a lioness caged in Central park, licked her forty-first offspring as affectionately as if the cub were her first born.

Her keepers explained this unending maternal affection by saying that her other children, save two, which died in infancy, have all been sent away to populate other zoos.

Ackbar, the father, roared fiercely when the youngster was born, but later looked upon the event as simply representing one more lion in the world.

Bees Replacing Beer.

Altoona, Pa.—During a baseball game at Duncansville a swarm of bees came over the hill and settled on a bush near the diamond. Some boys procured a beer keg, knocked in the head, and set it under them. A twist of the bush and into the keg went the bees. The improvised hive was turned up on some stones and the new inhabitants immediately went to work. Samuel Kelle carried the keg home and the bees are filling it with honey.

HOME OF DEADLY SCORPION

Region in Mexico That is Avoided by Travelers for a Most Excellent Reason.

Revolutionary bands and brigands may ride up and down Mexico, but there is one strip of territory that even the hardest and most daring of them will not brave. It is a desert country that extends from a point near the city of Durango to the borders of the state of Zacatecas, about seventy-five miles long by fifty miles wide. It is asserted that myriads of scorpions infest this region and are the most deadly of the species.

In the city of Durango, although regarded as outside of the more deadly zone, the death rate, due to scorpion stings, is high. This is especially true as to children. The alachrane, as the insect is commonly called, is regarded as such a deadly pest that for many years the municipal government has paid a bounty of one centavo, equivalent to about one-half cent of American money, for each one killed and delivered to the official custodian of dead scorpions. Something like 100,000 of the scorpions are killed and bounty paid for them annually.

Killing scorpions is a regular industry with many men, women and children of Durango. One is told that some of the natives even go so far as to establish regular colonies of the poisonous insects in their homes for the purpose of breeding them for the market.

GERMS FUTURE WAR WEAPONS

Scientist Draws Dark Picture of Savagery That Will Be Part of Next Conflict.

Mobilization of the mosquito, the house-fly, the louse and various other disease-carrying pests for the dissemination of deadly germs in enemy territory is a possibility of "the next war" pictured by Prof. Maxwell Lefroy, a London scientist.

"I foresee the mosquito from Brazil starting yellow fever in new lands, the house-fly, duly infested with cholera, dysentery or enteric and the typhus-laden louse doing their deadly work much more effectively than spies poisoning wells," said Professor Lefroy in a recent address.

"This would be part of the work of a war office of entomologists—the working out of strategic plans for the distribution of these pests by airplane. It seems that the world is intent upon furnishing an airplane service for these pests, many of which are now held somewhat in check by natural enemies in their native climes. This will give them just the means of transit they have required. It will be a peace-time danger as well as one that could be used very effectively in war. The danger from these 'winged battalions of death' is more serious than one dare estimate."

Airplane Has Its Limits.

The officials of the United States department of agriculture have been in receipt of many suggestions relative to extinguishing forest fires with the use of gas bombs dropped from airplanes that it has been found necessary to issue a statement for the purpose of explaining that the scheme is not feasible. For the purpose of overcoming a detachment of men, a mixture of one part of virulent poison to 1,000,000 of air would be entirely sufficient to accomplish the purpose, but one of 750 parts to the thousand would not be powerful enough to quench a conflagration. Another thing to be taken into consideration is the difficulty of dropping the bombs with the necessary precision. The art of striking a target with any degree of accuracy has not been developed at this time, and there is no prospect that it will be sufficiently perfected to the point of becoming available for the purpose of lighting fires.

To Destroy Grasshoppers.

Poisoned bran bait is a simple, reliable and cheap method of destroying grasshoppers. The formula is: Wheat bran, 25 pounds; Paris green, one pound; or white arsenic, one pound; lemons or oranges, six finely chopped fruits; low-grade molasses, two quarts. The mixture is scattered over the fields. Beneficial results have been obtained from the poison, but in whatever process is followed, communication must wait, for if one farm is rid of the insects, a new invasion will come in from the adjoining farm. An interesting incident of all poison baits is that lemon juice is added, thus it seems that it is necessary to get the hopper a lemon in order to get rid of him.

Aviators Routed in Trees.

New York.—After they had been up in the air in a testing balloon from the Rockaway naval aviation station a night and a day Ensigns Klose, Blackwell and Fieldner landed in the top of a tree on the Rogers brothers' farm in Wheeler Farms district, Milford, Conn. They were picked off the tree by men from the Askan Rabbit company plant, who had followed them for a mile in their descent.

STRIPED BEETLE QUITE HARMFUL

Insect Transmits Bacterial Wilt to Cucumbers, Squashes and Other Plants.

SPRAYING IS RECOMMENDED

Insects Prefer Unsprayed Plants as Food and Efficiency of Control Would Be Enhanced by Use of Early Trap Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Infection with the bacterial wilt of cucurbits does not occur through soil or seed. The striped cucumber beetle and the 12-spotted cucumber beetle are both summer carriers, and probably the only means of summer transmission of the disease in the localities that have been studied. Introduction of virulent bacteria into the interior plant tissues is necessary for infection. These points are given in a recent United States department of agriculture publication detailing the results of studies on the disease, which occurs in 31 states, including the territory from Vermont and Canada to Florida and west to Minnesota, Nebraska, Colorado and Texas. The disease also probably occurs in parts of California. Of the common domestic cucurbits the disease affects cucumbers, cantaloupes, summer and winter squashes and pumpkins, but not watermelons.

Use Bordeaux Mixture.
Spraying with strong bordeaux mixture and lead arsenate paste (4-5-50 plus 2) is recommended where the disease is likely to be severe. Treatments should begin as soon as the cucumber plants develop their first true leaves and should continue at intervals of about a week until the cucumber beetles practically disappear from the field. In localities where downy mildew is also prevalent the treatments should be continued later as a partial insurance against this disease. The beetles prefer unsprayed plants as food, and undoubtedly the efficiency of wilt control would be enhanced if a slightly earlier trap crop, such as squash, were planted along the edges of the cucumber field. The beetles could be easily poisoned there with a strong insecticide.

Pulling of wilted vines during the first part of the season, or as long as it can be done without mechanically injuring the healthy plants, will greatly assist in controlling bacterial wilt if consistently done in all neighboring fields. The diseased vines should be buried, or otherwise removed from access by the beetles.

Where a few plants only are grown in garden plots, screening the hills with fine mosquito netting will prevent the appearance of the disease.

Control in Greenhouses.
For control in greenhouses the beetles, in the first place, should be kept out. Do not grow cucurbits nor pile cucurbit refuse in the immediate vicinity of greenhouses, as this attracts the beetles and many will later find their way into the houses. If the beetles once gain entrance to a house filled

TRANSPORTATION IS BOTHERING FARMERS

Particularly True in Case of Perishable Produce.

Adequate Facilities Would Enable Producer to Pick His Market and Sell When and Where It Is Most Advantageous.

Regardless of the shortage of labor and other production problems confronting the farmer, the main cause for his not securing the full profits due him can still be traced to insufficient transportation facilities, at the time he must get his crops to market. The farmer who can convert the spoilage on the farm into cash goes a long way toward satisfactorily offsetting everything else eating into his returns.

This is particularly true in the case of highly perishable produce, also that which has a high market value early in the season. Another advantage of adequate farm transportation is that it enables the farmer to pick his market. He can sell when and where it will be to his greatest advantage to do so.

The farmers in the potato growing section of Maine have a period of about seventy days to market their crop. The case of one man in Aroostook county and what he did to put his yearly returns in the plus column is not only interesting but typical of how these men solved their haulage difficulties.

This particular grower had a 160-acre potato farm situated seven and one-half miles from a railroad. It yielded about 150 barrels to the acre for a total crop of around 24,000 barrels a year. Road conditions were such that one team of horses could haul but 20 barrels to a load and make but one trip a day to the railroad storage house. In other words, he required 20 teams to handle his crop if he got it to the warehouse in the 70 days between "digging" and snow. Of course all the other farmers of the community were in the same position and naturally none of them could secure anything like 20 teams. Even if they had the loads could not have been handled at the loading platform. Incidentally, the haulage cost of the 20 teams would have been $6,000.

The farmer in question put the problem up to a truck concern. They prescribed a truck for his job. He bought it. This handled 45 barrels of potatoes to the load, made six trips a day and more at night, put the potatoes in the storehouse in 70 days and more than paid for itself while it was doing it as the regular haulage rate by teams was 25 cents a barrel.

The motortruck is not a cure-all for every transportation ill, but it has barely scratched the surface as a farm transportation unit. There are innumerable cases of where it can go a remarkably long way to give the farmer more of the profits due him. This story illustrates but one of them.

TO DESTROY JOHNSON GRASS

Crop of Oats or Wheat Will Keep Plants in Weak Condition and Prevent Root Penetration.

If during the early and mid part of summer the Johnson grass can be kept short enough to keep the plants in a weak condition, comparatively few root-stalks that penetrate deep into the ground will be formed. An oat or a wheat crop serves this purpose quite well. When the Johnson grass is in this weakened condition, plowing in August will further weaken the plants and will entirely kill many of them. If the ground then is given clean cultivation until fall, nearly all of the grass that is not killed by the cultivation will freeze out during the winter. In case a good deal of the grass shows up after this midsummer plowing it may be advisable to plow in late fall so as to further expose the roots to freezing.

SOY BEAN GOOD SUBSTITUTE

When Cured in Time Crop Makes Hay That Is Quite Palatable—Yield Is Satisfactory.

It will take two or three years to get back to the normal amount of hay land, and in the meantime the soy bean is one of the best substitutes for the regular perennial legume hays. If cured in time, it makes a hay that is very palatable and at the same time gives a satisfactory return, per acre. Probably two and a half tons of cured hay would be about the average yield.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

By the PRINCESS SHEHERAZADE

Condensation by Alfred S. Clark

The marvellous tales that Scheherazade told to King Shahriar, stories of love and adventure and magic cannot be attributed to any one author for the very good reason that there never was an author. They are popular stories that, perhaps about the year 1450, were put into the present form by a professional story-teller, presumably a Persian.

In primitive communities where few of the people can read, and where books are difficult to get, these professional readers are in great demand. They pick up here and there tales that appeal to all and blend them into a long narrative. Some people have thought that Homer's long poems originated in this way.

Everywhere in the near east the traveler finds these story-tellers today. An eager audience collects to hear them, each paying a small fee for the privilege of listening. The entertainer declaims as he walks to and fro and always stops his narrative just before an exciting climax, so that he will be assured of listeners on the morrow. His audience follows his recital with breathless interest, especially when he illustrates thrilling episodes with lively pantomime.

Year after year these groups of listeners gathered centuries ago. The story-teller discarded the tales that did not hold the attention of his listeners. Gradually the process of elimination went on until only the best were handed down by word of mouth from generation to generation. Then some unknown benefactor of mankind had them written down and connected them with the framework of Scheherazade and Shahriar. And these are the Arabian Nights that have delighted children and grown men and women for decades.

SHEHERAZADE was a vizier's daughter and when she besought her father to wed her to King Shahriar it was cause for grief to the vizier. For each day was it Shahriar's wont to put to death his bride of the day before. It befell, however, that Sheherazade had her will. As she had hoped, the king was wakeful and to beguile him she began a story of magic. Dawn broke before she had finished and so eager was Shahriar to hear it all that he gave no order for her execution.

For a thousand and one nights did this befall while Sheherazade told tales of love, war and sorcery, of kings, beggars and rogues, of lands where diamonds were more plentiful than pebbles and bigger than eggs, of intrigues in the lanes and bazaars of Oriental cities. In towns and deserts and far islands did necromancers work their wills. Horses flew; dogs talked; mermaids and creatures greater than whales peopled the deeps; ogres and enormous apes crept out of forests; birds so great that their wings darkened the day swooped from the skies. Here, too, were lovers in palaces and hovels, bold and cowardly, yet all so enamored that they swooned at the very thought of the beloved. Underlying all was the colorful Orient, with barbers and porters jostling talpans and princesses in the thronged and picturesque lanes of three cities whose very names conjure up romance—Bagdad, Cairo and Damascus.

Now these are the best liked of Sheherazade's tales:

The Story of Aladdin's Lamp.

Of Aladdin, son of a poor tailor in China, a prankish scamp. An African magician guided him to a subterranean cave where he found the lamp that summoned the genie. Out of nothingness did this genie spread banquets for Aladdin and robe him in rich raiment. He provided him retinues of slaves, bearing basins heaped high with precious stones, who carried to the king Aladdin's suppliance for the hand of the beautiful Princess Badroulboudour. In a night did the genie raise a palace of glowing wonders, of shining marble and gold and silver, with windows incrustated with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, with fragrant gardens and open courts. So Aladdin married the princess and they knew great joy. But the magician returned, stole the lamp and in a trice transported the palace and the princess to Africa. Then was Aladdin woe-stricken, but by magic he found his beloved, poisoned the magician, seized the lamp and came to China, where he and Badroulboudour lived happily ever afterward.

The Story of Sinbad.

Of Sinbad the sailor and his marvellous voyages. Wherein it is related that Sinbad landed upon what seemed an island but which was a great fish that sank into the sea. And of other voyages and greater wonders, of which one marvels most at the adventure with the roc, the bird so huge that it feeds its young with elephants. Sinbad had fastened himself to the roc's leg and it bore him to an impenetrable valley strewn with precious stones from which he escaped by binding himself to a sheep's carcass and was borne away by a vulture. And of the giant who roasted men and whom Sinbad blinded with a red-hot iron. And of the terrible Old Man of the Sea who sat upon Sinbad's shoulders and could not be shaken off until he was intoxicated with wine and Sinbad slew him.

The Story of the Forty Thieves.

Of Ali Baba and his discovery of the stone that swung wide when a voice cried "Open, Sesame!" In the cave was the booty of forty thieves and Ali Baba took home sacks bulging with gold and silver. The robbers traced him and in the guise of a merchant the captain lodged with him. In the yard were stored great jars, one filled with oil and the others concealing the thieves. Ali would it have fared with Ali Baba had not Morgiana, a cunning slave, detected the trick and with boiling oil scalded to death the wicked miscreants. The captain escaped, but returned in a new disguise and again did Morgiana save her master by stabbing his enemy. So Ali Baba married her to his son and he lived joyously upon treasures from the cave.

Many Other Fascinating Stories.

Of the Magic Horse of ebony and ivory, so fashioned that its rider, by pressing divers buttons, could fly whither he willed. It bore a Persian prince to a great palace in a metropolis girt about with greenery. There he looked into the eyes of a princess and they were enraptured. It befell that they rode away on the Magic Horse, but before they were wed an evil man abducted the princess. The disconsolate prince wandered far and at last he found her whom he loved and again they journeyed through the air to his home, where they were married with exceeding pomp and lived happily.

Of a poor fisherman who drew his net from the sea and found therein but a brass bottle. He cut open the top and there streamed forth a cloud of smoke. It collected and, behold! it was a genie, so huge that his head was in the clouds. He would have killed his rescuer had not the wily fisherman insisted that never could he have come from the bottle. The silly genie squeezed himself inside, whereupon the fisherman clapped on the top, nor would he remove it until the genie swore to serve him faithfully. This oath it was that led to the finding of the ensorcelled prince with legs turned to stone and the lake wherein swam fish of four colors that had once been men. After marvellous happenings the prince was made as other men and the fish were men and women. And the fisherman was so rewarded that he was the wealthiest man of his time.

Of Prince Camaralzaman and the Princess Badoura, beautiful beyond compare, and of how each saw the other in sleep and was smitten with great love. But when they awakened they saw not one another for they had been brought together by genie who had carried Badoura out of China to the confines of Persia. Grief so afflicted both that they sickened and were insane from sorrow. Then a messenger from Badoura journeyed far over land and sea until he found Camaralzaman and returned with him to China, where the lovers were wedded. But while they were traveling to Camaralzaman's land he wandered away. Badoura dressed herself in his raiment and passed herself for a man. It befell that she found favor in the eyes of a king and was married to a princess. And Camaralzaman too came to this land and knew not his wife, who heaped honors upon him. At last she revealed herself and was known as a woman and Camaralzaman took also to wife the princess whom Badoura had married and they were happy together.

Of a merchant who, awaiting death at the hands of a cruel genie, was joined by three old men, one leading a gazelle, another two black hounds, and the third a mule. Now it is related that the gazelle and the mule had been wicked wives transformed by magic and likewise had the hounds been evil brothers. When the genie was told these stories of enchantment, he was so diverted that he spared the merchant's life.

About Harun-al-Rashid.

And of many tales concerning the Caliph Harun-al-Rashid and his going disguised into the lanes and bazaars of Bagdad, where he chanced upon strange people who told him strange stories of magic. Once he supped with three ladies of dazzling beauty and with him were a porter dazed with the magnificence he saw and three mendicants, sons of kings, all blind in the left eye. Not knowing the Caliph they told of their fantastic adventures and sufferings and he rewarded them. And again he encountered a beggar who implored him to strike him, a youth who spurred cruelly a mare upon which he rode and a rope-maker who had risen suddenly from poverty to affluence. Their tales too did he hear and them too did he reward. Nor should Abul-Hassan, the wag, be forgotten, whose trickery in pretending that he and his wife were dead won so much gold and so many laughs from the Caliph. And of like import is the mad tale of the humpback who seemed dead and of the talkative barber who restored him to life, of all those who had believed themselves murderers of the humpback and of the amazing tales that they related.

So it came to pass that by the end of the thousand and one nights Shahriar was so delighted in the cleverness of Sheherazade that he wedded her again with regal pomp and they lived happily ever after.

Fall Causes Death.

William J. Norton of Ludlowville fell from a straw stack about 5 o'clock Monday afternoon, a distance of 20 feet to the ground, breaking his neck. He died almost instantly.

Mr. Norton, who was working a farm owned by Mrs. Agnes Townley of Ithaca, and located about a mile east of Ludlowville, was exchanging work with Charles Bower, a neighbor, when he lost his life. He had been helping with threshing of wheat and oats and was about to leave the stack. He stepped to the edge of the stack and reached for the ladder to descend to the ground when he lost his footing and fell head first.

Mr. Norton, who was about 70 years old, had been a constable in the town of Lansing a number of years. He had lived in Lansing all his life. He leaves his wife and a son Leonard, in Lansing, besides three other sons and a daughter.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon from the North Lansing church. Rev. Frank J. Allington officiating. Interment in North Lansing cemetery.

VanVleet—Quick.

A quiet wedding took place at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, Sept. 14, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. VanVleet in Dryden, when their only son, DeForest VanVleet was united in marriage with Mrs. Marguerite Quick. Both of the young people are from Cortland, where the bride was until recently the matron at the Children's Home. Rev. Bruce E. Pierce of Cortland was the officiating clergyman. Mrs. E. E. Scribner of Ishpeming, Mich., the mother of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. H. Price of Cortland were the only guests. After a short wedding journey they will reside at Cortland.

—The apple crop of New York state this year is estimated at 40,000 cars, or more than one-fifth of all the apples produced in this country, and many more than the market under normal conditions can care for. Orchard men of this county, with but few exceptions, cannot furnish containers for shipment, the crop being very heavy, and the fruit in many instances will be converted into cider. The price will be the lowest in many years.
