Advertising a Sale!

YOU don't leave your rig in the middle of the road and go to a fence-post to read a sale bill do you? Then don't expect the other fellow to do it.

Put an ad in this paper, then, regardless of the weather, the fellow you want to reach reads your announcements while seated at his fireside.

If he is a prospective buyer you'll have him at your side. One extra buyer often pays the entire expense of the ad, and it's a poor ad that won't pull that buyer.

An ad in this paper reaches the people you are after. Bills may be a necessity, but the ad is the thing that does the business.

Don't think of having a special sale without using advertising space in this paper.

Operations in preparation for digging for oil in the Pine Plains-Shekomeko section of Dutchess county have begun. One promoter has already sunk seven shafts in an effort to locate the source of the oil which has been found on several farms. Great excitement has been caused in the neighborhood by the discovery of the oil, which is of a light color entirely different from the crude oil usually found.

According to the 1920 census figures Allegheny county has lost 5,000 in population since 1910. The latest census shows a population of 36,843 whereas in 1910, the population was 41,843 and in 1900, 41,501. All towns in Allegheny county lost except Wells-ville and Cuba since 1900 and Wells-ville is the only town that showed a gain since 1910. Only four of the incorporated villages in the county grew in population in the past 20 years. Andover, Cuba, Richburg and Wells-ville.

But that isn't all. David finds mercy, as our text guarantees, for Nathan immediately replies, "The Lord hath also put away thy sin."

Once again David seizes his harp, and the palace walls ring with the glad refrain of the thirty-second Psalm, "Blessed is the man whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered!" Blessed be our God; when he covers sin beneath the cleansing blood of the Lamb of God, there is abundance of prosperity assured, "for who so confesseth and forsaketh his sin shall have mercy."

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 55:7, 8.

Guilty, But Pardoned

By REV. E. J. PACE
Director of Missionary Course, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT.—He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whose confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy.—Prov. 28:13.

A story comes from ancient Sparta in illustration of the fortitude in which the youth of that rigorous military state were trained, telling how a boy permitted a stolen fox, hidden under the folds of his tunic to eat into his vitals, rather than allow his theft to be discovered.

What a graphic picture of many a man or woman who through years of anguish have grimly endured the gnawing of unconfessed sin.

Such was the case with King David. His body was clad in the royal purple, and seated on a throne; but his soul was in hell, and had been there more than a year. He had sinned, grievously sinned in the matter of the wife of Uriah the Hittite. In idleness upon the roof of his palace the lust of his eyes awakened an illicit passion for the wife of another, whom he took, and by craft rendered a widow. With cunning cleverness he attempted to conceal his crime, thinking all would be well. But David penned no psalms, and his harp awakened no melodies in the royal palace all that year. He thought to prosper, but his prosperity was turned into the drought of summer.

Made Coward by Conscience. But that year of agony dragged on, during which, as he afterwards confessed (Ps. 32:3), his "bones waxed old through his roaring all the day long," all because his "tongue kept silence." Then Nathan came, David's old friend, the prophet Nathan. We can well imagine how his knees smote each other as the chamberlain announced Nathan at the door. Ordinarily David would have greeted the old prophet with a hale and hearty welcome, but not today. Of all men he cared to see it was not Nathan. But he must not be discourteous; let him come in. Dignified, clear-eyed Nathan stands before the king. David's eyes are shifty; his face is pale, and his whole bearing is ill at ease. Now he's in for it. But imagine his relief when from the lips of Nathan fall, not words of denunciation, but a complaint about a man losing his sheep. Ah, how immensely relieved is King David! The blood comes back to his face! he is alert, and all attention now, his old self-reliant, righteous self. Sheep; why he knows all about sheep, having grown up with the flocks out Bethlehem way. "Say on, Nathan; what was it you said about a sheep?" (To himself): "My, I'm glad he isn't going to talk about sin."

"Found Out" by His Sin. Then follows Nathan's story of the rich man stealing the only sheep of the poor neighbor to feed a chance guest, and the king is furious. "As the Lord liveth, the man that hath done this shall surely die." Hold on, David, you are going too far. The law grants only four sheep for one, but you would take the man's life! But how like him we all are! What sacrifice will we not undergo, what service will we not render, rather than get down.

"Thou art the man," thunders the prophet, and David crumples into a heap before his merciless uncovering of that sin, and weakly says: "I have sinned." But now the flood-gates are open, and with a body shaking with sobs, he pours out his soul in that matchless penitential Psalm (the fifty-first), which has been the beaten pathway back to God for millions of sinners since.

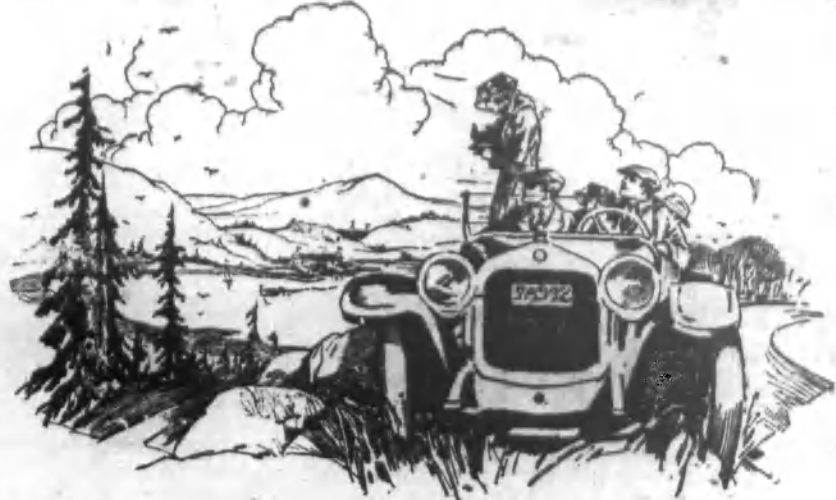

Forgiven. But that isn't all. David finds mercy, as our text guarantees, for Nathan immediately replies, "The Lord hath also put away thy sin."

Once again David seizes his harp, and the palace walls ring with the glad refrain of the thirty-second Psalm, "Blessed is the man whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered!" Blessed be our God; when he covers sin beneath the cleansing blood of the Lamb of God, there is abundance of prosperity assured, "for who so confesseth and forsaketh his sin shall have mercy."

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 55:7, 8.

"If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—1 John 1:9.

PRICE TALK

There can be no regular scale of charges for dental service. Some is the worth-more-kind—others the worth-less-kind. But there is a standard of quality and it should be put as high as the best and most knowing skill can place it. I believe that my method of dentistry creates such a standard. There is also a standard of value and my moderate charges define that—and then my guarantee makes everything safe and satisfactory.

Rare Treat for Genoa People.

The concert Monday evening in the Presbyterian church was a great success and those who failed to hear it, missed a fine opportunity to hear some excellent music. The program below was rendered, with the addition of an encore for each number, and received well-merited applause from the large audience. The entire program was greatly enjoyed and highly commended by all.

Special mention should be made of the solos by Mrs. Aiken, the well known soprano of Auburn. Mrs. Aiken was in fine voice and her solos were charmingly rendered. Many Genoa people have heard Mrs. Aiken sing on several occasions, but never more delightfully than on Monday evening.

Mrs. Lue Slocum King of King Ferry had never before played at a public recital in this village and her piano numbers were a revelation to many of her unusual ability as a pianist. She also was the excellent accompanist for Messrs. Bradley and McCourt and for Mr. Clark, violinist.

Mr. Clark, who has appeared in several concerts in Genoa, again delighted his audience. His violin selections were admirably rendered and were greeted with generous applause.

Mrs. Stuntz, who always pleases with her readings, was especially good in the selection given.

Show Some Good Cows.

Recent reports of cow-testing associations in New York show that the largest organizations are in Delaware and Cortland counties where 608 and 607 cows are tested respectively. St. Lawrence comes third with 518, and Broome and Orange are almost tied for fourth with 493 and 492. A new association has just been formed at Chafee in Erie county.

Livingston and Cattaraugus counties' associations have the highest number of 40-pound producers.

Of the associations reporting, the high cow for the state in butterfat production, for the month, is a Jersey in the Warsaw-Varysburg association in Wyoming county, followed closely by a Holstein-Friesian in Tioga. In pounds of milk the same Holstein-Friesian leads the state, followed by a grade Holstein in Cattaraugus.

Card of Thanks.

The family of the late Mrs. Frances Wilbur wish to express their appreciation of assistance rendered at the time of her death and burial, and especially to neighbors and friends for their kindness.

—Cortland's population is now 13,294, a gain of 1,790 in ten years.

THE WARM DAYS

BATISTE ROBE AND RIBBONS

Dress Suitable for Late Afternoon or Informal Evening Wear is Interesting as Simple Adaptation of Egyptian Style.

The first warm days often find us quite unprepared in the matter of clothes. This is especially true after a cold, late spring such as the one just passed, which offered little incentive to buying thin frocks. So, if we have delayed in our shopping, writes a prominent fashion correspondent, it means that we confront a real problem—that of getting a suitable warm weather wardrobe together quickly.
The difficulty is to get clothes that will give service for the greatest number of occasions. In the summer we frequently face the unpleasant fact that we have not the right dress for the occasion, and nothing is more discomforting than the feeling of being unsuitably dressed.

We are realizing more and more the need of the practical combined with beauty in our clothes. The sensible woman, however, never sacrifices beauty to the purely practical. In the dark gorgonette crepe frocks we have this combination. No fabric has yet been able to supplant the good, substantial navy blue gorgonette crepe for wear on hot days, offering as it does the advantages of coolness and lightness.

There are those who, in their desire to help reduce the high cost of living, talk of the economy of gingham, but a gingham dress is never an economy —rather it is a luxury to be enjoyed in the country. In the first place, ginghams are anything but inexpensive and, furthermore, frocks made from them require frequent and careful laundering, which under existing conditions means constant additional expense. Even with the best of care they never look quite the same after a visit to the laundry.

Real Organdie Flowers.
Although we have seen a great deal of taffeta during the last year, its glory has not yet been dimmed. We have had it combined with organdie in an infinite number of ways, but no lovelier union of these two has appeared than is seen in the models made entirely of silk and decked with huge white organdie flowers applied with long, loose stitches of dark thread.
The flowers are not cut from flat pieces of the muslin, but are twisted defly and shaped so that they are big and puffy. The pieces simulating leaves are veined with the dark thread.
In a dress of this sort the white appears also in the bodice in the form of a front which extends over the skirt and is bound with the dark blue taffeta. A white organdie bow at the back of the neck also is bound with blue. The short sleeves have a tiny turned-back cuff of organdie worked with blue in a loose long and short stitch.

To wear in the late afternoon or as an informal summer evening dress nothing could be more suitable than the embroidered batiste robes which have again come into fashion. We have on these both solid and eyelet embroidery. The frocks themselves are just little straightline affairs which tend to show off the beauty of the needlework. A great deal of care is exercised in the selection of washes for such dresses. Wonderful ribbons are chosen.

The embroidered batiste robe is given further elaboration by the introduction of a lovely square mesh lace.
A remarkable ribbon is used for the girdle. It is about an inch wide and of three shades of blue, one running into the other, giving the appearance of three separate ribbons stitched together.

Another method of introducing a bright-colored ribbon into an embroided batiste robe is seen in a frock having cherry red satin ribbon with a rough surface starting at the neckline in the form of panels, slipping through medallions at the waistline and continuing down either side of the front until they are caught under the hem.

Another frock shows ribbon again featuring as the distinctive note. This is interesting as a simple adaptation of the Egyptian style, which many people have been inclined to think of as representing elaboration only. Here a beautiful brocaded ribbon—dull red and silver—is used to give an Egyptian effect to the simplest and most practical sort of chiffon frock.

Lace With Batiste or Organdie.
It is interesting to observe another way in which lace and batiste are combined. Brown lace is used for a chemise top cut just like a long smock reaching to a low neckline. A double piece of ecru batiste is attached to the bottom of the smock to make a straight skirt. Where the two are joined a garland of batiste flowers veined with brown is applied. A sash of narrow brown ribbon girdles the waistline.

The same idea might be carried out in lace and organdie. Brown lace with organdie of the same color but slightly lighter in shade is effective, or lace may be dyed any color and used with white organdie. With the wonderful choice of ribbons that we have now a very distinctive effect may be given by the sash.

Still another pleasing use of brown is seen in an evening frock. This is one of the dancing frocks, made with a somewhat high neck and cap sleeves, which are beginning to take the place of the extreme décolletage—another instance of the turning away from extravagance toward simpler things. The bodice and tunic of the skirt are composed of brown taffeta and the trimming is tiny bows of the silk. The taffeta petals have an inch-wide edging of lighter brown tulle. Beneath the tunic are three tulle skirts, also cut in the form of petals. The first is of a very dark shade of brown overlaid with dull orange. There is a narrow foundation skirt of silk, making in all four skirts, one above the other.

Evening Frock With Billowing Skirts Black taffeta and black tulle are used in a similar way, the only reason being in the skirt, which consists of four tiers of black tulle petals, so that the idea of the four skirts is carried out, but entirely in the net. The bodice is plain almost to the point of severity. It is cut to fit the figure rather snugly and crumple at the waistline. As in the black lace dresses brought out earlier in the season and which still enjoy considerable prestige, a bit of bright color is introduced by veiling scarlet flowers with net. The bodice boasts of no trimming other than a quaint little corsage bouquet, also bright red.

Only the slender woman may aspire to the Cheruit evening frock, with its billowing skirts composed of irregular loops of pink taffeta. These loop draperies, brought out by Cheruit earlier in the season, were looked upon by many as being exceedingly impractical. This, however, has not proved true. They have been eminently successful in evening things.

REALIZE VALUE OF GARDENS

British Housing Authorities Forbid Erection of Dwellings Without Suitable Breathing Spots.

The new methods of land development in Great Britain now adopted by local authorities mark a clean breakaway from the "jerry planning" methods of the past. Instead of crowding from thirty to forty houses per acre in closely packed streets, local authorities, acting under the guidance of the ministry of health, are adopting the standard that in urban areas not more than twelve houses, and in rural areas not more than eight houses, should be built per acre. As a benefi-cent result of the adoption of these new standards the large garden is to be henceforward a fundamental feature of every newly built home.

The distance between houses on opposite sides of a street is not less than seventy feet, thereby making a broad park line road. Under the new method the cost per house of garden suburb roads on an estate with twelve houses per acre and with a frontage of twenty-five feet per house is less than under the old method with twenty houses to the acre and only 17-foot frontages to the houses.

This is the opening out of a new period of English town and village development. Under a clause added to the housing and town planning act in the committee of the house of commons every urban local authority with upwards of twenty thousand population, must between 1923 and 1928 prepare a town-planning scheme, and under the clause the exercise of town planning care will become general.

CONSIDER THE GARDEN PATH

Matter Worthy of Careful Thought When Improvements Around Home Are Being Planned.

It is the question of paths that comes to the fore when garden improvements are being discussed.
There are not many gardens in which the paths could not be improved, either in their substance or their relation to surrounding things.
They require as careful consideration as the beds and borders or the lawn in the making of new gardens.

Turf paths are deservedly popular if they be something more than narrow strips of grass. The latter are ineffective and troublesome. But a wide turf path kept neatly both in surface and edge is a delight, especially when it runs beside or between broad masses of flowers or well-grouped ornamental shrubs. It would be better for the garden-maker, however, not to indulge in this fancy unless he be prepared either to keep the paths in order himself or to pay for the necessary labor.

Good paths of stone or brick are a never-failing delight, but bricks are difficult to obtain—more difficult now than at any time in memory.

Birds in Cemeteries.

Not long ago it was suggested that with excellent propriety we could make of every cemetery a bird sanctuary or refuge. The proposition appears to have found wide favor through numerous articles in the press, and a few instances are known where the idea has been made a reality.

What could be more fitting than to make of these silent and sacred resting places of our dead, the abodes of creatures that bless and beautify the world of the living.

What could be simpler than to plant and nurture such shrubs and trees as by the berries and fruits they bear would attract to them these untiring servants of man? The decorative value of such planting would obviously be considerable. The songs of birds, the sweetest of nature's music, will take away from these silent cities something of the sadness and gloom that inevitably enshadows them.

Good Citizenship.

To be a good citizen one must not live for himself alone, he must support religion, education and many worthy objects, and must in all ways be a good neighbor and a good friend.
These obligations at times cost money, and where do we find the best of such people? It is safe to say, in most cases, that those who have saved and been thrifty are the ones who are most dependable. They are the best neighbors, the best friends, active in supporting the church, the school, lectures and all other good works that enlighten and make for happy and self-reliant people.—Exchange.

Protect Insect-Killing Birds.

We have come to an era of birdlife conservation. Economic, humane and sentimental interests, united in common cause, have won in the long contest in which bird life was at stake. It is lamentably true that we have lost forever some dozens of species and that the fate of twice as many more is hanging in the balance, but, says William M. Morrill in Our Dumb Animals, the tide of destruction has been stemmed, the hand of the de-spolator stayed; henceforth safety supplants slaughter, preservation takes the place of persecution.

"SHAVING FEAST" FOR BABIES

Important Event in Life of Chinese Infant, When He is Just a Month Old.

A month after a child's birth in China its parents give what is called the "shaving feast." On this eventful occasion the barber comes and shaves off all of its hair except a small tuft on the fore part of the head.

When the little one is old enough to play with toys the fond parents place before it on a table a sword, a book, a pen, medicine, needles, boats, etc., and allow it to take up whatever appeals to it most. The idea is that the youngster's choice betokens the occupation or business it will follow when it grows to maturity; if it chooses a pen, the supposition is that it will be a writer; if a book, it will be a scholar; if a sword, it will be a soldier, and so on.

If the child at any time becomes gravely ill its mother hastens to the temple and solemnly promises the gods to consecrate its life to their service if they will intervene to save its life. Thus it often happens that young Chinese become monks very much against their wills.

The child's first birthday is made the occasion of great festivities. Often great quantities of "mien"—noodles—are prepared and sent about to all the relatives and friends. Succeeding birthdays are scarcely noticed until the tenth. Then a great celebration is held.

ASKED TOO MUCH OF TIRES

Small Boy's Comment Appeared to Sum Up the Situation in a Thorough Manner.

Judging from their appearance, the two gentlemen who were visiting London from the north of England hadn't been troubled overmuch by food regulations or shortages. More, their bulk suggested profiteering in every direction.

And their wives were not much smaller. Plump didn't really describe them; they were worse than that.
Going along the Strand, the tire of the taxicab which had the job of carrying them suddenly burst with a terrific bang. Of course, the usual crowd collected like magic, and prepared to watch the free show.

At the request of the driver of the taxi, his four fares descended one by one. As they appeared, the eyes of a small newsboy began to goggle, and when the four of them stood in a row on the curbstone, he eyed them solemnly, and then exclaimed:
"And no bloomin' wonder, either!"—

Makes Pictures of Cloth.

It is not often that an entirely new method of producing pictures is discovered, and an Oregon artist is attracting considerable attention with a process as pleasing as it is original.
Instead of using fluid pigment of any kind, bits of colored cloth, painstakingly cut to the particular shape and size of each detail of the work, are pasted upon the canvas background, which is stretched over this board. Some of the most important particles of fabric are shredded out to mere threads to get the desired effect, while the bulkier objects of the scene are built up in relief, says a well-illustrated article in Popular Mechanics Magazine. A sharp-pointed stick serves as a brush for this curious art.

The finished pictures exemplify the remarkable results attained when the genius and the artistic sense are coordinated.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR GREATER FAIR

Exhibits and Attractions Best in the Country.

FAMOUS TEX McLAUGHLIN TO PERFORM IN THE CLOUDS

Grand Circuit Races to Bring Out Fleetest of Horses—Record Entries in All Departments.

The great climax up to which the Greater New York State Fair has been developing and building for a period of seventy-nine years will be reached this year, when, from September 13 to September 18, the eightieth anniversary of the institution will be celebrated.

Not only will this year's fair eclipse all previous expositions held in this State, but it will equal, if not excel, any of the state fairs of the United States.

This statement is made after reviewing the entry lists for the rich purses provided for the cattle and equine exhibits, the long lists of blooded sheep and swine, the thousands of fowl with the highest pedigrees, rabbits and canines from aristocratic progenitors, the guaranteed presence of the fleetest and most notable light harness horses in training today, agricultural features of rare interest and a multitude of attractions that will require a full week to inspect and thoroughly study.

It will be the fair of all fairs, not alone for the spectacles which each day will be unfolded before the many thousands of persons from every part of the State, and even from remote sections of the country, but as an institution of education for the rural citizens of the State it will furnish the agriculturists with an insight to progress made in farm machinery in this era of intensive farming.

When a breeder invests several hundred thousand dollars in a herd of cattle he is reluctant to bring his prize bulls and record breaking cows a long distance unless he is assured a full measure of protection. He is forced to demand safe and sanitary quarters for his cattle, and this demand is also heard from the men who produce the best types of sheep and swine. The colossal structures in which the cattle and horses will be stabled are the best that money and labor could produce, and it is a high commentary on the wisdom of the State Fair Commission that the great buildings have been made sanitary for the visitors as well as the animals.

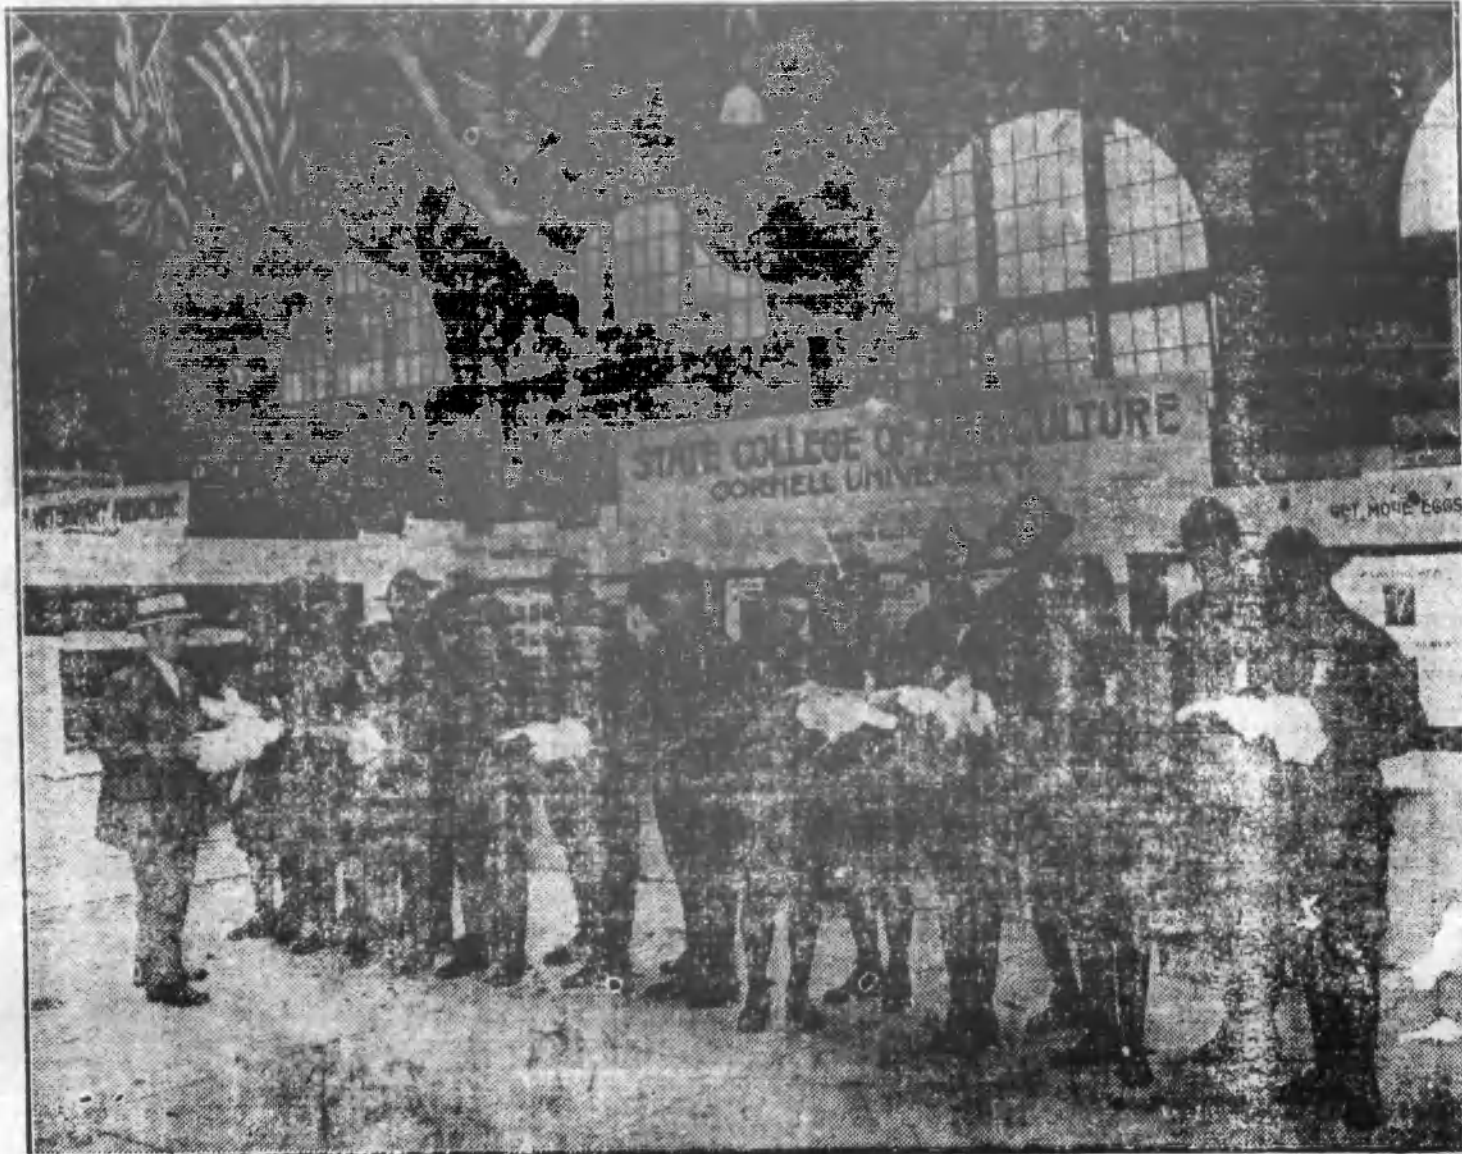

The horse is endeared to the agriculturist. He is an absolutely necessary adjunct to the farm. Great interest is always taken in the exhibit of draft horses and other types. The display this year will be better than ever. The Horse Show, with an entry list of the finest blooded animals, exceeding any show of the last few years, will be a real feature of the fair. There will be adequate space, the old show ring having been enlarged and better accommodations afforded the exhibitors. The judging contest in another ring, directly in front of the grand stand, will provide the visitors with a collection of equines of all types and will be a real spectacle in itself.

The races of the light harness horses for purses amounting to $40,000, under the sanction of the Grand Circuit, will hold the attention of thousands of persons who each year look forward to these notable contests.

State Fair visitors require diversion and entertainments. They will find amusement features in the Greater Midway, which proved wonderful attractions in all of the outdoor shows from Maine to California.

The State Fair Commission laments the death of that famous aviator, Omer Locklear, who fell from the clouds in California, but the commission is fortunate in being able to announce the substitution of Tex McLaughlin, a world war flier, who duplicates every feat which Locklear introduced, besides which he leaps from an aeroplane high in the air to descend to earth by means of a parachute. He will make a change of planes while in flight, and he will demonstrate his acrobatic ability on a trapeze suspended from a swift moving plane.

The State Conservation Commission has notified Lieutenant Governor Harry C. Walker, president of the Fair Commission, that the exhibits of the department will be greater than ever. The display of trout of all kinds will be augmented by every variety of fresh water fish found in the State. There will be a splendid exhibit of pheasants and wild ducks, which the department is propagating.

STATE COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE DOES MUCH EDUCATIONAL WORK AT STATE FAIR—SCENE SHOWS CLASS OF FARM BOYS LEARNING SOMETHING ABOUT POULTRY.

SHEEP AND SWINE

Exhibits at State Fair Will Show Growth in Breeding Industries.

The steady growth in sheep and swine breeding industries will be indicated by the exhibits at the State Fair, which promises to be larger than for a number of years. The prospects are that many sections of the State which have come to be known only recently as sheep country will be represented.

Wool exhibits will furnish a new feature of the sheep department. It is being strongly supported by the New York Federation of County Sheep Growers, which has contributed toward the premiums for the wool classes which amount to $114.

The prize money in the sheep classes amounts to $5,653, which should furnish a strong incentive to sheep owners to compete. The interest of national registry organizations in the New York State exhibition is shown by the specials contributed by the Shropshire, Hampshire, Cotswold and Oxford associations.

With the advantage of the Eastern Berkshire Congress as a feature, the State Fair Swine Show should attract unusual attention. The American Berkshire association has contributed $350 in specials, bringing the prize money for this breed to $1,000. In addition the Berkshire association offers a silver trophy for the best boar and three sows. The Chester Whites and Duroc-Jerseys will also be well represented. Associations representing these two breeds have contributed special prizes. The total prize money in the swine department amounts to $3,597.

DOMESTIC ARTS

State Fair Department More Attractive With Larger Premiums.

A new and more modern arrangement of the china and painting classes in the premium list of the Domestic Arts department of the State Fair has been arranged this year, and the amount of premiums has been increased.

A special effort has been made to attract artists in both professional and amateur classes with a view to making the 1920 exhibition the most interesting in the history of the fair. The work will be cared for by a corps of efficient assistants, insuring protection of exhibits.

The housekeeper is urged to obtain and study the premium list of this department with the possibility of setting aside a jar or glass of preserves or jelly for exhibition at the fair. Three premiums are given in classes for wheat bread and cakes. The premium money in this department aggregates $1,812.25.

TO SHOW LATEST FARM MACHINERY

STATE FAIR EXHIBIT MEANS MUCH TO AGRICULTURE.

Gasoline Engine Now Used for Variety of Farm Work.

Latest Implements Have Increased Value of State's Food Products Notwithstanding Labor Shortage.

The farm machinery show of the New York State Fair has developed into an established institution of incalculable value to the State agricultural interests. With practically all of the leading manufacturers of farm machinery and implements of the East and a great many from the West represented, it affords the farmer the best opportunity of the year for building up his farm equipment.

The fact that the people engaged in all branches of agriculture are taking full advantage of this exhibition by studying the demonstrations and acquiring the labor saving machinery best suited to their needs means that agriculture in New York is being placed on a firmer basis and the value of the State's food products is being steadily increased. The importance of the gasoline engine, now useful in most every kind of farm work, may best be appreciated when the scarcity of labor and the insufficient number of draft horses is taken into account. Without the labor saving devices of the last decade many farms now contributing towards the annual yield of food products could not have been operated. Farm work of most every nature, but a few years ago considered only possible with the use of horses or labor, is now performed by the gasoline engine and the implements it drives.

The State Fair Commission won the earnest attention of the farmers to this feature of the fair with a series of demonstrations officially conducted and supplemented by demonstrations by the individual machinery people. Just as soon as the farmer became convinced that the fair's farm machinery show was a fairly complete exhibition and afforded an opportunity of witnessing actual tests he became interested, and when the manufacturer or agent noted this interest he was prepared to go to an unusual expense to put on the exhibit that is interesting and profitable to the progressive farmers.

In other words, the machinery or implement men and the farmer have been brought together by the fair to their mutual advantage, and the State as the third party comes in for a big share of the benefit through the increased value of farm products produced by modern implements and the most approved methods in farming.

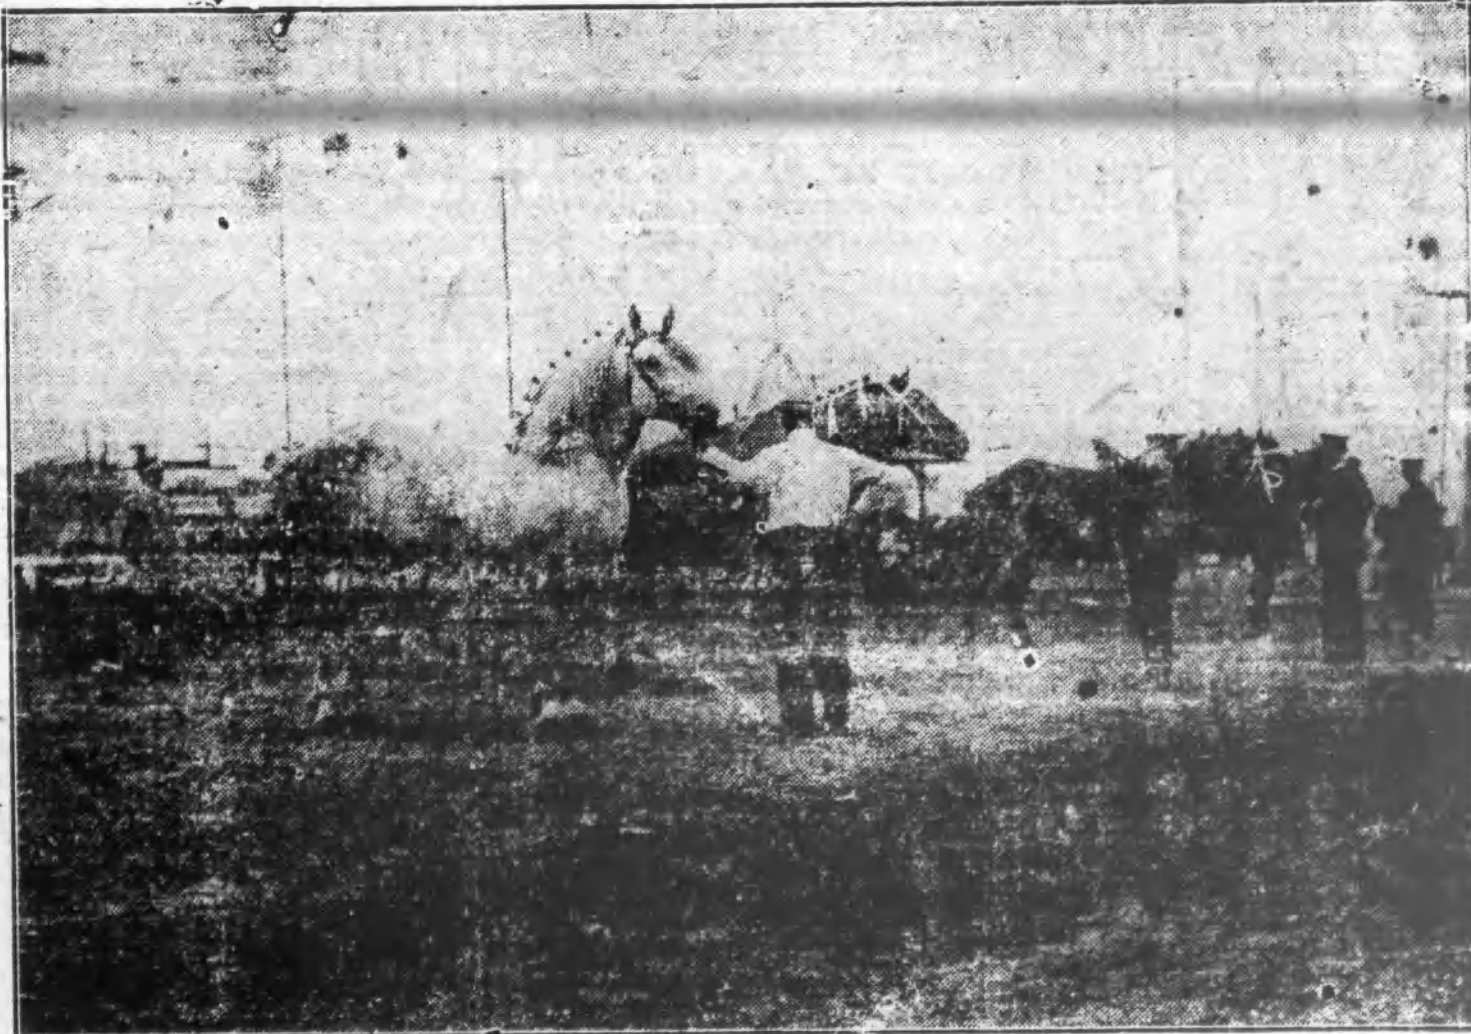

Every type of farm tractor offered for sale in the East will be exhibited at the State Fair, and the interested farmers will have a chance to decide which is most valuable for his purposes. The importance of this marvelous mechanism to agriculture may be judged by the fact that, with the tractor but eleven years old, the annual output now exceeds 300,000 machines.

Recent developments have produced the all purpose tractor, which is getting most attention nowadays. With this tractor, many of which will be seen at the fair, the farmer cannot only plow, prepare his soil for planting and harvest his crops, but he can thresh, bale, cut wood and perform other farm work which previously called for much man labor.

It is reported from the Fair Commission officers at Syracuse that 60 per cent more apples have been allotted in the farm machinery section than in any other year of the fair.

EXPECT 100,000 PEOPLE.

Every Syracuse interest is working for an attendance of 100,000 people on the opening day, of the State Fair, Monday, September 13. By proclamation issued by Mayor Harry H. Farmer a civic holiday has been ordered, and all factories, stores and offices will be closed the entire day to allow employees to attend the fair. The celebration of Syracuse Day will be started with a monster parade of floats in the city and ending in the fair grounds. A special feature in the way of attractions will be furnished by athletic games in which teams representing all large Syracuse industries will compete. These events will be held on the mile track immediately following the Grand Circuit horse races. The committee directing the movement for a record attendance is composed of 100 prominent citizens appointed by the Mayor.

AUTO RACING AT FAIR.

When the State Fair officials determined to have automobile racing as an attraction on Saturday, September 18, it was determined to go after the famous drivers of the country. Among those entered are the stars of the great Indianapolis speedway, including Louis Chevrolet and Ralph De Palma. Since the last races at Syracuse a concrete wall has been built completely around the first turn of the mile track, a distance of 1,600 feet, for the protection of the spectators.

the plane, loosening a parachute attached to his belt, and with this descends to the ground.

During the months that Locklear was raising the hair on the heads of millions of spectators McLaughlin was emulating the successful navigator of the air. He became so adept and proved such a worthy pupil of the original plane chaser that it was natural that he should be chosen to fill the shoes of Locklear. There is no aerial stunt that he will not attempt, and he will come to the State Fair as the greatest living aerial attraction.

BIG HORSE SHOW

Military Classes and Jumpers to Furnish Feature at Syracuse.

Horses used for military purposes will come in for more than ordinary attention at the Horse Show in connection with the New York State Fair, which opens at Syracuse September 13. The prize list recently announced by Commissioner P. Lorillard, Jr., of Tuxedo Park shows that extra inducements have been made to attract the cavalry horses not only in the National Guard, Reserve Corps and State Troopers, but from the regular service as well, and this opens the possibility of securing the twelve cavalry horses which General John J. Pershing selected in Europe during the world war and brought to this country. It is General Pershing's opinion that these twelve horses represent the best type of cavalry horse he has yet discovered.

General Pershing has been invited to be the guest of the State Fair Commission during the fair, and in view of his desire to join in encouraging the development of the cavalry horse in this country there is a strong probability he will accept.

There are no less than eighteen classes for hunters and jumpers, and these events, promising to attract some of the biggest stables in the country, and they are sure to add a highly spectacular touch to the horse show. One of the classes will determine the grand champion jumper of the country.

Ponies will also share the plaudits of the crowd, for many attractive prizes have been offered for ponies in harness and under saddle.

The usual array of equine aristocrats will be shown to stylish gigs, single, double and in tandem, some by lady drivers. They will be the same exhibitors who participate annually in the big shows at Newport, Mineola, Boston and Philadelphia.

Famous Aviator Jumps From Plane With Parachute.

HAILS FROM TEXAS AND WAS STARTED BY LOCKLEAR

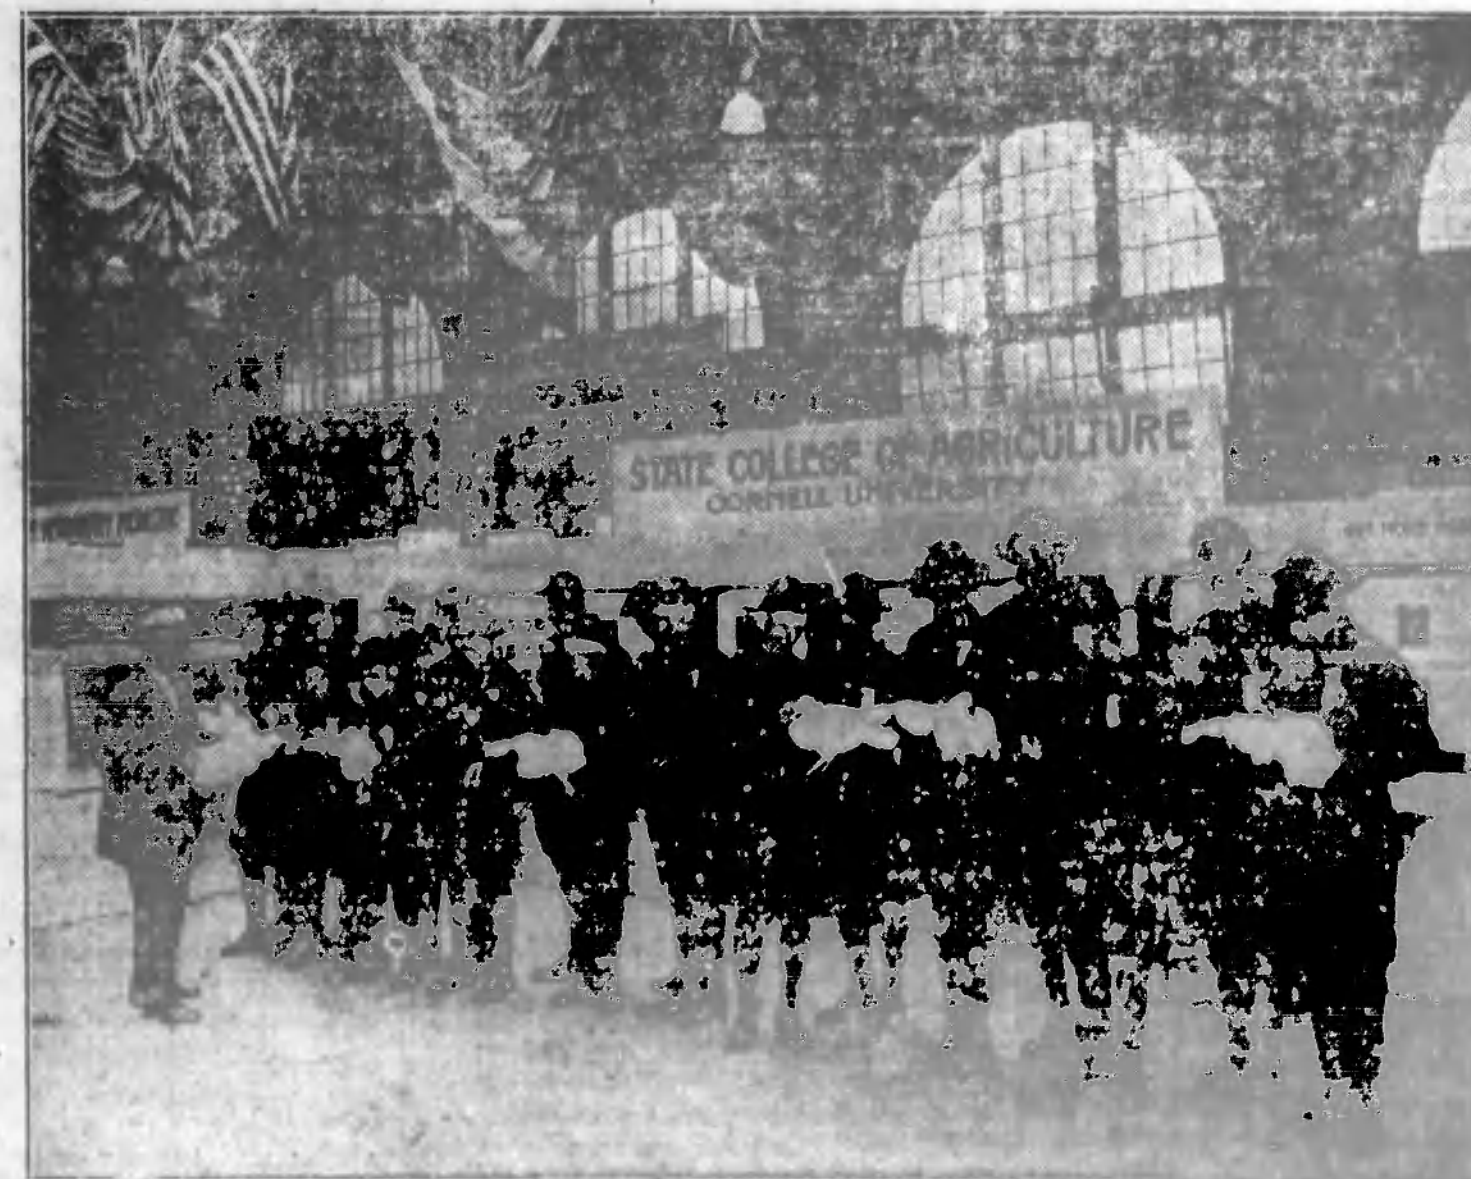

Changes Planes With Aid of Ladder While Blindfolded—Has Other Death Defying Stunts.

If the visitors to the New York State Fair last year were thrilled by the amazing spectacle of Lieutenant Omer Locklear changing from one aeroplane to another and executing gymnastic feats on the wings of his plane, they may prepare for a sensation in the presence of Locklear's successor, Harry (Tex) McLaughlin, who will be the aerial feature of the Fair this year.

Like Locklear, the young Texan is a fatalist. He has been trained to substitute for the dead aviator, and he has brought into his program several death defying stunts which Locklear did not attempt.

McLaughlin will leave one plane for the other while blindfolded, which alone is one of the most astounding sensations of this age of aeronautics. He is a gymnast with flexible muscles and cords of steel. McLaughlin hangs by his teeth at the end of an invisible wire, where he performs the famous spinning whirl. He does a three fingered stand upon the top wing of a plane. He drops ten feet to the end of a rope after hanging by his toes to a trapeze.

As a climax, McLaughlin jumps from Everybody Eat Apples.

Eat more apples! Bake more apples and apple pies! Have apple sauce for breakfast every morning! It is the appeal to consumers made in a statement issued by Dr. Eugene H. Porter of the State Division of Foods and Markets.

With a bumper crop in all the eastern states, New York this year will produce one-fifth of all the apples raised in the United States. In all there will be approximately 40,000 cars of New York state apples to market. This quantity is several times as many as the markets can take care of. Unless the usual consumption is increased many of these apples will be left to rot on the ground, for the price which the grower is now offered for them is only $1.50 a barrel and that sum does not pay the cost of the barrel and the picking and hauling to the station, not to mention the other costs of the grower in raising the apples.

In addition to the ordinary retail stores where apples are now sold, Commissioner Porter states that arrangements are being made with many large chain stores and department stores that do not ordinarily handle fruit of any kind to this year buy apples direct from the growers and feature sales of apples at specially low prices. Arrangements are also being made with the market bureaus of nearby states to feature apple campaigns in these states to stimulate the consumption of this fruit.

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away" is an old saying. Apples are an excellent food. The red striped Dutchess apples which are just now coming into the market are the very best for pies and cooking. Later will come the Twenty-ounce, a large red apple that has no superior for baking purposes. Still later will come the McIntosh, a small, bright red apple which is superfine for eating purposes. These New York State apples are worthy of a place on every table. If consumers will only act and bring their buying power to bear on the problem it can be solved; the farmers can be saved from loss and the consumers secure an excellent food at low cost.

The whole solution hinges upon the response of the consumer to the appeal to use more apples. As a beginning in the drive it is urged that the first week in September be made an "apple pie" week and that every man, woman and child in the State consume some of this wholesome food during the week. If this were done the problem of moving the early apples, which are best fitted for cooking purposes, would be solved.

Agriographs.

So few birds are harmful that when one has doubts, it is better to protect them all.

This fall is a good time to plant shrubs and perennial plants. Larkspur is good for a blue background.

Reward the vegetables that behaved well this season by saving the seed for next season's planting.

Seed corn selected in the field where it grew can be judged on how it performed in competition with neighboring stalks.

After the farm implements are sheltered for the season, axe and saw help make farmers independent of the coal shortage.

Warren Earl of Cleveland, Ohio, who is 86 years of age and the oldest member of the family, gave reminiscences of his early days, which were spent in the log cabin built by his grandfather, Abram Earl, when the latter migrated from New Jersey to the farm now owned by Almon Lampkin in the town of Newfield. At the business session Isaac K. Earl was re-elected president and Dora L. Earl, secretary and treasurer.

Among those in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Whitten of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Whitten and daughter Clara of Genoa and Miss Celia Parker of Venice.
