Murder in Venice.

A terrible crime was enacted in the town of Venice last Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock and as a result a good citizen is in his grave, leaving a family in deep distress, while two young men are in the county jail charged with the crime of murder.

Robert Shiels resided with his family about two miles east of Ledyard. Four sons and a daughter are living at home, another son works at Geneva, and the oldest son resides with his family on an adjoining farm. A Tribune reporter visited the scene of the tragedy Saturday morning and gleaned the following story of the affair from a member of the family: The father and two sons were building a hay stack just west of the barn, one being on the loaded wagon and the others on the stack, when two men, James Mansel and Edward O'Connor suddenly appeared coming under the trees which stand between the barn and the highway. They demanded that the son Robert come down off the stack and he descended with a pitchfork in his hand. Mansel struck him a glancing blow with a weapon and he dropped his fork and running around the stack with the two men in pursuit, headed for the house. Meantime the younger son had slid to the ground and tried to intercept the men with his fork. But both boys were driven into the house and went up stairs where another son, Arthur, was lying in bed. Mansel and O'Connor stoned the house, threatening to kill Mrs. Shiels who expostulated with them. Mr. Shiels called to them from the stack to desist and then descended to the ground, asking them to go away and not make any further trouble. They met him near the barn and disregarding his pleadings for mercy, attacked him and struck him a terrible blow with a stone, fracturing the skull at the base of the brain. Death must have followed almost instantly. Mrs. Shiels, who witnessed the murder, ran toward the son's house down the road and met him accompanied by J. G. Corey, who had heard the noise and were on their way to the scene. Meantime Mansel and O'Connor had again entered the house and proceeded to smash things generally. They dared not climb the stairs against the pitch fork in the hands of the boys (who were of course ignorant of the father's death) and they went out and hurled stones through the window of the room in which the boys were. Upon arriving upon the scene Mr. Corey went at once to the prostrate form of Mr. Shiels and found life departed. Mansel and O'Connor retreated to the road and returned to King Ferry. Mr. Corey followed on and notified Drs. Dudley and Hatch who hurried to the Shiels home. Coroner Atwood of Moravia was notified and he took charge of the case upon his arrival about 9 p. m. The two men were arrested at the place known as the Wayside Inn by Constable Riley who was assisted by Mr. Corey and Wesley Wilbur and other sturdy citizens. They made feeble resistance to arrest, and are now in much better condition physically than they would be if they had opposed the service of the law. The murderers were taken to Auburn by Constable Riley and Deputy Sheriff Ooon and turned over to Sheriff Coltan about 4 o'clock Saturday morning.

It seems that the assault upon the Shiels home was the result of an assault by the Shiels boys or others on Garret Mansel at the Wayside Inn on the night previous to the attack on the Shiels family. Garret Mansel is the father of James, and they had recently rented or bought the Wayside Inn business of A. J. West who established the place some time ago. It is reported that the elder Mansel received a hard thumping from the Shiels boys, and that James when he returned home from Ithaca and found his father confined in bed from the injuries, vowed vengeance in terms loud and strong. Accordingly, with his friend O'Connor, he hired Harrison Goodyear, who runs a livery business, to take them to the Shiels home. Along the road they are said to have picked up stones in preparation for the fight they expected.

Mr. Goodyear drove on down the road after his passengers got out of the wagon and did not return until the assault was about finished, and he saw very little of it. The coroner took the evidence of those of the family and others who were witnesses of the tragedy, but has not yet filed his findings. The district attorney has taken the case in hand in a very determined manner and will investigate it thoroughly. Other arrests may follow. It is rumored that Mr. Goodyear may be charged with being an accessory to the crime, but all who know him will scout the idea that his intentions were anything but honest.

The elder Mansel went to Ithaca a day or two after the assault, and his condition is reported as not at all serious. He says he don't know who struck him.

The funeral of Mr. Shiels was held Tuesday at St. Mary's church and was largely attended.

West Venice.

Aug. 16—This neighborhood was very much shocked Friday evening by the murder of one of our citizens, Robert Shiels, by a couple of ruffians who were brought there by Harrison Goodyear, a liveryman of King Ferry, after being told (it is said) that their object was to "clean out the Shiels family." A kind husband and good neighbor murdered in his own doorway by men who were entire strangers to him. Very likely if there had been no license in the town of Genoa this would not have happened. All those who vote for license have a responsibility for the crimes that are caused and committed by those who patronize the hell holes that their votes establish all over this fair land.

We are glad to see the stand THE TRIBUNE takes on the sheriff question. We fail to see how any farmer can afford to vote for the machine candidate. It is safe to say that for every dollar Mr. Fordyce spends to get votes the taxpayer will have to pay two back if he gets the office of sheriff. There is a hard fight on in Venice but we think Mr. Herling has the best chance at this time. We have more faith in the voters of the town of Venice than to believe they will vote so directly against their own interests, as they certainly will do if they vote for Mr. Fordyce.

Why the Bicycle Persists.
 Prophets are the great speculators in "futures," and in that sort of gambling the "bears," who see calamities ahead, are usually losers. Nothing has been the subject of more pessimistic forebodings during the last few years than the bicycle, yet the wheel comes out again, almost as numerous and as popular as ever, says the Youth's Companion. Automobiles, it is true, have greatly increased in numbers, and they have been looked upon as the supplanter and successor of the bicycle. "Americans like to travel fast," said a man, recently, "but they don't want to work for it. That is why the automobile appeals to them." There is some truth in the remark, but the fact remains that most of us must "work for it." The bicycle is the poor man's automobile, and a good one. It does not bother him about starting or stopping, does not often get out of repair, requires no outlay for fuel; yet it makes him master of a wider circle of country than he could possibly command without it, and pays him handsome dividends in health and strength for every pound of energy he spends in propelling it. The time of the "scorcher" and the "century run" is past, and the era of sensible wheeling has come in. Those who own and buy bicycles now are those who use their wheels for exercise, for recreation and as practical vehicles. They would cling to their bobby tenaciously even if their own experience had not been reinforced by medical approval, which is now overwhelmingly with them. The bicyclists for years to come will continue to outnumber, as they have in the past, the devotees of every other pastime.

After two centuries the official odium that has attached to the name of Francis Rokozy is to be removed. Rokozy led a revolt against the house of Hapsburg early in the eighteenth century, and declared the independence of Hungary. He refused to submit when defeated, was denounced as a traitor, and it was made an offense for any loyal citizen to communicate with him. A musician of his time composed and named in his honor a stirring march, and has roused the Hungarians on various occasions since, as the "Marschallat" has fired the French Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria-Hungary, recently decided that the time had come for recognizing the spirit of patriotism which inspired Rokozy, and has ordered that his bones be removed from Constantinople, where they were recently discovered, and be buried in Hungarian soil in a manner worthy of so illustrious a national figure.

The center of population of the United States is gradually and rapidly moving westward. A few years ago it was in Ohio, now it is near the center of Indiana and will soon be over in Illinois, but it will be many years before it crosses the Mississippi. The census bureau has found that the exact center of population at the census of 1900 was in latitude 39 degrees 9 minutes and 36 seconds north, longitude 85 degrees 48 minutes and 54 seconds west. If a person is desirous of visiting the spot a better idea of its location can be got by asking most any resident of Columbus. Almost invariably the answer to such a question will be: "Five miles southwest of Columbus in Hen Marr's barn lot." The center was recently marked by a monument.

Recently published figures show that Russia, France and Austria spend more money in promoting agriculture than the United States. This may be true, but the results fall to show that they get more out of it. In France farming is more on the intensive scale, and the line of educational developments is a little different from that followed in this country. Uncle Sam has a big area to look after, but nevertheless some splendid results are obtained, because as a rule the men back of the experiments are not only well schooled in scientific work, but they are practical. Russia is following out the American idea closely.

In his time, Mr. Sage has played many parts in the ownership of shares in dividend-paying railroad and steamship corporations. Suppose vacations were abolished, as Mr. Sage apparently desires they should be, how many transportation companies on water or land would find their passenger business profitable in the summer months? asks the New York Tribune. It is singular that so shrewd a capitalist as Mr. Sage should forget to consider that branch of his subject.

The present difference between Japan and Russia is well exemplified by the patriots of the two countries. Many Russians are fleeing to the United States. Ho Himatsu, a Japanese merchant of New York, is carrying a valise containing $1,120,000 to the mikado.

Real Patriotic Service.
 It is within comparatively few years that the various so-called "women's patriotic societies" have come into the prominence which they now enjoy, and during most of that time there has been an undercurrent of humor in the newspaper references to them. The "Daughters of the Revolution" and the "Daughters of the American Revolution" are essentially and necessarily founded on pride of ancestry, a sentiment which Americans have never regarded with much patience or respect. There has been, therefore, a tendency to regard these and similar organizations as somewhat exclusive and perhaps a trifle snobbish. To those who entertain this idea a reading of the annual report of any of the state regents would be a wholesome pastime. The reader will find a long record of work which may surprise him, and if he is even mildly patriotic, will certainly please him, says the Youth's Companion. One phase of the work is the offering of prizes by local chapters for the best essays on historical subjects by pupils of the public schools. This is a simple and straightforward way of encouraging the study of history and fostering the knowledge on which patriotism rests.

Another work which these societies are doing is the placing of tablets to mark historic spots or to commemorate important events in the life of the nation. They have also performed a most useful service in several states by buying, for use as museums, the homes of famous men or houses which are associated with great public events. These various activities are all in fields which heretofore have been too much neglected. The value of them is already apparent, and will become more and more recognized as years pass. Pride of ancestry may be one of the noblest as well as one of the meanest emotions. It is unworthy only when it allows one to live on the patrimony of fame or public service, without personal effort. When it impels the legatee to maintain a standard already set and forbids him to fall below the measure of duty already performed, it is one of the noblest springs of human action.

There is probably nothing else that attracts the attention of the average American visitor to Europe so much as the sight of women doing work in the fields. The woman with the hoe is the rule rather than the exception, and so accustomed have they become to this form of labor for centuries past that in the peasant classes an effort to change the system would no doubt meet with resentment. As a matter of fact, the large standing armies maintained by such countries as France and Germany make a heavy drain on the male population, and, naturally, the field work falls to the women. The day of toll is long and arduous, and when the setting sun announces the end for the men the women trudge to their thatched-covered cottages and find household duties enough to keep them busy for hours. Life apparently has but little sweetness for these women of toll, yet they are said to be happy and contented with their lot—much more so, in fact, than many a fine lady raised in a palace of luxury. Max O'Rell has well said that the summum bonum of human life is contentment.

Plymouth Landmarks.
 The landmarks which draw an ever-lengthening procession of visitors to Plymouth are all within the compass of an hour's ramble, says the Criterion. North street, running parallel with Leyden, leads to Plymouth Rock, formerly on the water's edge, but now several rods from the shore and shielded by a granite canopy. Close by are Pilgrim Wharf and Cole's Hill, where the first houses of the colonists were set up, and where were buried those who died in the first disastrous winter, the ground above their graves being plowed and sown by the survivors, in order to conceal from the Indians the large number who had fallen.

If matters go wrong in the English house of commons, a convenient explanation would be to attribute the fact to the "sophisticated air" which the members breathe. According to the London Guardian, the winds of heaven are not suffered to visit too roughly the interior of the palace of Westminster, for they are "altered through cotton-wool, and warmed by passing over hot pipes, and then the dead and oppressive product is forced through gratings in the floor of the house, where it picks up the mud from honorable members' boots."

Comparative Railroad Figures.
 The Journal of the Germany Railway Officials' association has presented a careful comparison of operations of the railways of the leading countries for the year 1901. The tables give a comprehensive and interesting view of the varying policies governing freight and passenger traffic and also illustrate many of the peculiarities of the various railway systems. Regarding the relative density of railroads it is shown that the United States has 25.52 miles to every 10,000 inhabitants, France 7.46, and the others from that down to 3.79. Notwithstanding this, Belgium has 22 miles of road to every 100 square miles of territory, Saxony 19.2 and Baden 14.5, while the United States is twelfth in the list with only 6.64, and Austria-Hungary last with 5.2 miles. As indicating how highly passenger traffic is developed in foreign countries, it is shown that the Belgium railway ran 678,391 passenger miles per mile of track, and the rest had all the way down to 89,721 miles, the record made by the railways of this country. Upon the same point it is shown that the passenger revenue of the roads of the United Kingdom averaged $10,060 per mile, Baden, $5,660, and the rest all the way down to $2,219, the average enjoyed by the United States, and $2,184 by the Austria-Hungary roads. Owing presumably to the lighter passenger traffic of the United States, our railroads received a greater passenger revenue per passenger mile than the roads of any other country. The average rate here was 2.013 cents per passenger mile; in France, 1.53; in Switzerland 1.48; in Bavaria, 1.21; Holland, 1.19; Baden, 1.16; Germany, 1.024; Prussia, 0.986; Austria-Hungary, 0.909; and Belgium, 0.767. Despite the higher rates the average distance traveled by the passengers on American roads was 28.58 miles, while in foreign countries it ran from Austria-Hungary with 21.4 to Switzerland with 12.6. On freight traffic the conditions between this and foreign countries are reversed in many particulars from those shown by the passenger traffic. In ton miles Alsace-Lorraine stands first with 909,067 ton miles per mile of road, Prussia second with 773,586, the United States third with 760,414, and the rest down to Holland with 371,500. While the railways of the United States stand first in the average amount charged per mile for passenger service, they are last on the list when it comes to freight rate charges. Switzerland was first, where the freight revenue per ton mile was 2.68 cents; France second with 1.5; Bavaria third with 1.46; Austria-Hungary next with 1.44, and then come Germany, 1.41; Prussia, 1.33; Baden, 1.25; Holland, 1.19, and the United States, where the charge was only 0.75 of a cent per ton of freight hauled one mile. Although interesting, averages are valuable only as such and do not tell fully of conditions, which sometimes change the view that should be taken regarding them.

Make Only to Spend.
 We make more than others, but we spend both carelessly and for advantage, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The American mechanic's home is brightened by pictures; well-made furniture, carpets and tableware are for his use; he has books on the shelf; has a parlor organ, or even a piano; he goes to the play once in a while, and expects a few holidays in the summer, when he can visit some crowded seashore. The American professional man lives in his own house or comfortable apartments, and dresses and lives nearly up to his income, no matter what it is. He is never averse to receiving large fees, but he is averse to storing them away in vaults. And this easy getting and free spending give to us a larger view of life than can obtain among people who are forever counting the pennies and trying to minimize expenditures. Such people will have few of the wholesome pleasures that we enjoy and their lives will lack range and variety. The individual who works for $10 a week and saves $9 of it is your true type of money-maker, but he is not an American.

Cyclone cellars are supposed to be peculiarly western institutions. But recent windstorms have set the people of New York and vicinity to thinking, and some of them to digging, says the Troy Times. Up in Westchester county, where a hurricane did great damage a few days ago, and over in New Jersey, which has been badly ravaged at times, cyclone cellars promise to become popular. And there are persons in the metropolis who sometimes wonder just a little bit whether those sky-scrapers are the safest places in the world in a high wind.

The best things are nearest—breath in your nostrils, light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.

A Wisconsin judge went on the bench last night in evening dress. We are willing to risk attachment for contempt by saying that the garb is an improvement on the thing that looks like a dressing gown.

Somebody has discovered that there are no red-headed dolls. Like the taste for olives, the admiration for red hair seems to be the result of civilization.

THE SUNDAY BIBLE SCHOOL
 Lesson in the International Series for August 14, 1904—Obadiah and Elijah.

(Prepared by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.)
 (Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)
 LESSON TEXT.

(1 Kings 18:1-16; Memory Verses, 13-16.)
 1. And it came to pass after many days, that the word of the Lord came to Elijah in the third year, saying, Go, shew thyself unto Ahab; and I will send rain upon the earth.
 2. And Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab. And there was a sore famine in Samaria.
 3. And Ahab called Obadiah, which was the governor of his house. (Now Obadiah feared the Lord greatly.)
 4. For it was so, when Jezebel cut off the prophets of the Lord, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.)
 5. And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks; peradventure we may find grass to save the horses and the mules alive, that we lose not all the beasts.
 6. So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it; Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.
 7. And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him; and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said, Art thou that my lord Elijah?
 8. And he answered him, I am; go tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.
 9. And he said, What, have I sinned, that thou wouldst deliver thy servant into the hands of Ahab, to slay me?
 10. As the Lord thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee; and when they said, He is not there; he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not.
 11. And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.
 12. And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the Lord shall carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he shall slay me; but I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth.
 13. Was it not told my lord what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the Lord, how I hid an hundred men of the Lord's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water?
 14. And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here; and he shall slay me.
 15. And Elijah said, As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely shew myself unto him to-day.
 16. So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him; and Ahab went to meet Elijah.
 THE LESSON includes the three verses following the lesson text, which give us the account of the prophet's interview with Ahab. There is no parallel in Chronicles. GOLDEN TEXT.—"I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth."—1 Kings 18:12.
 TIME—About three and one-half years after the first appearance of Elijah to Ahab.
 PLACE—Probably not far from Mount Carmel, in the country northwest of Jezreel.
 Comparing Scripture with Scripture. The Prophet's Return: Note that:
 (1) It was timed by God; "after many days"—God always acts in "the fullness of time." Gal. 4:4; Eph. 1:10, etc. It was not for Elijah to know until God spoke. Remember Jesus' rebuke, Acts 1:7.
 (2) It was ordered by God. When God said "Go" it was safe for Elijah to return. The place of peace and safety is with God.—Ps. 31:15.
 (3) It meant blessing. God in the person of His servant Elijah was to return to the land. God's withdrawal meant drought. God's return was to bring rain. God sends blessings when conditions permit. Ps. 86:5, 15. "I will send rain upon the earth." We talk flippantly of the weather the weather-forecaster gives us, and forget that nature is under God's control, and that He sends the sunshine and the rain.—Jer. 14:22; Ps. 147:8.
 (4) Elijah had found conditions changed. Ahab had been searching for the prophet with murder in his heart (v. 10); now he is seeking pastures with anxious dread (vs. 5, 6). The famine had reached to the king's gate (v. 2). How the prophet's words when predicting the drought must have burned into his soul. How the consciousness of God must have been forced upon him. The long and terrible drought had subdued the willful spirit of king and people. It had gained for God a hearing.—Hosea 5:15; Ps. 78:34; 107:39.
 Meeting with Obadiah.—Obadiah was a Godly man (v. 3) in a Godless household, a man who served God in secret. How the wicked turn to the righteous in time of trouble. Obadiah went out seeking a spring of water, and he found the one whose prayer would bring abundance of rain. (John 7:37-39.) Obadiah's faithfulness won for him the honor of the first meeting with Elijah. But he was terrified at Elijah's command. Like many Christians to-day, the fear of man was upon him, and he forgot that the God who sent him would save for him.
 Meeting with Ahab.—Elijah sent for the king. The prophet went to meet the God-fearing Obadiah, but he summons the wicked Ahab to come to him. Here is a suggestion of the dignity and majesty and power of God which will some day be manifested as he summons before His throne those who now wickedly and rebelliously disdain Him. Matt. 25:32; Rom. 14:10-12. Note the two views of the situation. Ahab in hardness of heart and blind unbelief charges the prophet with troubling Israel. Ezek. 12:2; Isa. 6:9; Matt. 13:14. And even Jesus' disciples are sometimes troubled with blindness. Mark 6:52. But the prophet puts the blame where it belongs. Ah, how often the deceitful and wicked heart (Jer. 17:9) charges God with trouble and misfortune, when the fault lies at the door of one's sinful self.

THE GOLDEN TEXT.
 "I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth." (1) A tribute to Godly parents. "Ye fathers (parents) . . . bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." What a responsibility is that of parenthood. (2) An argument for early conversion. Youth is the soul's spring time for the sowing of seeds of righteousness. "Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto Me for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." (3) A testimony to effect of early piety. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

PRIVATE ZEMBLER

"YOU see, it's this way, sir," said the old man as he stepped out of a dark doorway and suddenly confronted a belated pedestrian.

"I'm no thug," said the old man, as a feeble smile crossed his face.

"You miserable old tramp!" exclaimed the pedestrian, getting his courage up as he noted the weak old man before him.

"The old soldier dodge!" growled the other, as he looked up and down the icy and empty street.

"Henry Zembler, sir, late private in the Tenth New Jersey Infantry in the late unpleasantness, as they term it."

"Henry Zembler, late private of the Tenth New Jersey Infantry in the late unpleasantness," repeated the old man as he walked along beside the other.

"Look here!" said the pedestrian as he came to a halt, "it's no use to follow me and pour out the story of your woes."

"And I'm not," was the quiet answer. "I'm the only dog in town without a home."

"Oh, well, let it go," said the old veteran as he turned away. "After all, what good would it be? There'd be to-morrow night and nights after, if I've got to freeze and starve I might as well begin to-night.

"If I thought you were telling a straight story—" said the pedestrian as his fingers gripped a coin in his pocket.

"Henry Zembler, sir, late private in the Tenth New Jersey Infantry in the late unpleasantness," replied the old man as he came to "attention" again.

"Hello, old man—come back! I don't go much on your story, but I'll stake you for to-night."

"Late of the Tenth New Jersey, sir, in the late unpleasantness," replied the veteran as he came to a halt and about-faced.

"Two's right—march!" said the old soldier as he turned the corner.

He had stopped before a long, one-story stone building. There were openings for doors and windows, but only the openings were left.

"Queer—queer!" whispered the old man. "This place has a familiar look. I wonder if— Say, I have it now!

"Ugh!" shivered the old veteran, "but it's better than walking the streets. Attention, company G! Carry—arms! By twos—file left! Forward—march!"

"God of my life!" gasped the veteran as he straightened up, "but that's the voice of Sam Andrews, our old orderly sergeant, and the boys are falling in for roll call."

"And what if I do freeze to death?" he asked and answered after a few minutes had slipped away.

"Company G, fall in for roll call!" "God of my life!" gasped the veteran as he straightened up.

"He calls the names of men who were dead after Manassas," whispered the veteran. "Yes, they died there as we fought and fell back; fought until we had fired our last cartridge, and then fell back with clubbed muskets in hand."

"I remember them, I remember each one. They were good comrades and brave men. When Joe Hooker pushed into the cornfield against Stonewall Jackson at Antietam every stalk and tassel was spattered with our blood."

"And they are dead—dead since the sun went down that day at Cold Harbor. I saw their faces under the moonlight that night as we fell back, and I remember how white they were."

"Oh, well, let it go," said the old veteran as he turned away. "After all, what good would it be? There'd be opening wide to close upon 20,000 dead men! Yes, I can see 'em again, the blue in solid lines, and the gray charging across the meadows and up to the muzzles of our guns till the grass turned red, and in very pity we fired our last volleys over their heads.

"Yes, I remember—I remember," sighed the veteran. "There were Haynes—Hemper—Hopson—Horton."

"Lane—Lakins—Larkin—Lampton!" "Aye, those old names—those old comrades!" whispered the veteran.

"Dead—dead—dead!" groaned the soldier. "He did not call Marble or Meekins, Needham or Noles, Orton or Orville."

"Dead—dead—dead!" groaned the soldier. "He did not call Marble or Meekins, Needham or Noles, Orton or Orville."

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

For President,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
For Vice-President,
CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

The Reason for It.

Under the caption of "An Example of Gratitude" the Moravia Republican remarks as follows:

Some weeks ago two newspapers of this county which have always been counted on the Republican side, started a campaign to split the above party or at least to divert votes from the usual large majority by alleging corruption, extravagance, etc., on the part of its leaders or as the papers say, the "organization."

It must appear to every good Republican that this is a most inopportune season to attempt to stir strife within the ranks of the party. For the first time since 1892 New York is again the chief battleground in a presidential campaign. In 1896 and 1900 the drift was so plainly in favor of the Republican party that only a languid interest was felt. The situation this year is radically different. The New York Democrats are in fighting trim and manifestly hopeful. To find a comparison for the approaching state contest in New York, we must go back sixteen years, to 1888, when both presidential electors and governor were to be chosen in this state. It should be clear to every Republican that only the earnest work of a united party can mean success.

When the editors of the above mentioned papers so suddenly turn reformers, it is natural to inquire into the cause. On the part of one we find that he is a former federal office holder, having been postmaster of his village. Later he is made superintendent of a section of the canal, a lucrative position which he enjoyed for nearly a dozen years. The other belligerent is at this time a federal office holder, likewise postmaster. The proceedings of the supervisors will show that his paper has not been overlooked in the distribution of county printing. Two or three years ago he was an unsuccessful bidder for the printing of the proceedings, it being deemed impracticable and inconvenient to have such printing done at a distance from the county seat. This may have had something to do with his present attitude.

There are editors of other Republican papers in this county, who have rendered equally valiant service for the party and worried along with much less patronage. These two men, who have reaped so good a harvest of the spoils of Republican victories, have enjoyed considerably more than usually falls to the lot of the county editor. Now it will be some time before their actions will be overlooked by all patriotic Republicans.

As it seems to us it is a most opportune time to call the attention of the county taxpayers to the extravagances of the county machine, because they will be more readily interested in political affairs on a general election year than at any other time. We respectfully deny, so far as THE TRIBUNE is concerned, that we are doing anything to divert votes from the Republican party. On the contrary, we are doing our level best to preserve the Republican majority in Cayuga county, not only for this year but more particularly for the future. Things political have assumed such a state in the county that many of our best citizens have ceased to take any interest in politics whatever. This is true in Moravia as well as Genoa, Venice and other towns. It is true throughout the county and everybody knows it. All our efforts so far have been to interest the taxpayers and voters in Genoa and other towns, through which THE TRIBUNE circulates, in their rights and duties as citizens, and to overthrow the influence of the "machine" which we honestly believe is detrimental to the financial welfare of the county and blighting to the great mission of the Republican party. As we have said before, we have no feeling of animosity toward any man and have decided in every instance the opportunity to censure or besmirch the character of any office holder. Personal abuse is never good argument. It is the condition rather than the composition which should be corrected, and the only way the condition can be improved is to change the composition.

The machine papers seem to lay great stress upon the fact that the editor of THE TRIBUNE is also the postmaster. But should that fact necessarily close his duties as a conveyor of public opinion, or deprive him of the right to espouse a cause for the common good, so long as it does not interfere in any way with the proper discharge of the postal duties? Should the district attorney of this county relinquish all his legal practice because he is a county officer, when he might handle both without neglecting either the interests of the people at large or his individual clients? We readily admit that THE TRIBUNE has received in the past some county printing, and for such favors we are not ungrateful. We fail to see, however, why our participation in the established custom of the board of supervisors in years past should forever tie us down to support and uphold the practices of an organization which we have come to believe, after careful consideration, will certainly ruin the Republican party in the county if allowed to continue. During the past few years, when you come to think about it, the political condition of this county has changed quite materially. Democratic officers are popping up here and there throughout the city and country, and the reason is two-fold. The older members of the party are disgusted and the young men are going into the Democratic party, because the ring-in-your-nose methods of "machine" control do not appeal to their sense of fairness or their fighting sinew either. The implied threat that THE TRIBUNE will be forgotten in the annual distribution of county printing in the years to come does not terrify us in the least. We are not conducting a newspaper with an eye single to what we are going to draw at the next session of the board.

There is another and even more important reason why the "anti-machine" candidate for sheriff should be nominated and elected. The people of this county have as their representative in Congress a man who has risen to become the leader of the Republican party in the House of Representatives. No man in this Congressional district can ever hope to occupy the position now filled by Mr. Payne, because it takes years of service to acquire a fitness and a reputation as a sagacious leader, and there are many very popular men in Congress who are entitled to the chairmanship of the most important committee in the House when Mr. Payne shall have finished his work. Wouldn't it be a case of great ingratitude to refuse or fail to stand by this man in his efforts to purify the Republican politics of Cayuga county. Wouldn't we be turning out our own light? The situation assumed by this campaign is such that you cannot support both Mr. Payne and the "machine." If you wish to support Mr. Payne vote for a Herring delegation at the Republican caucus on Tuesday, Aug. 30th.

Threatens to Try Titles.

FROM THE PORT BYRON CHRONICLE.

Angry and desperate because of the splendid fight Representative Payne and his friends are making to protect the people of the county from the high-handed manipulation of the machine, the leaders of that organization are beside themselves, and are voicing threats against any and all persons who have the manhood and courage to oppose the pernicious procedure that has cost the taxpayers a third of a million dollars in money, besides the shame and disgrace incident thereto.

One of the best known and most influential Republicans of the county was recently the victim of the wrath of Senator Wilcox, who informed him that he was "making the mistake of his life" in opposing the will of the machine. White with passion, this modern dictator declared that he was "ready to try titles with Payne" and that it was among the possibilities if he did not cease opposing the "organization." Think of it, fellow Republicans, think of it, citizens of Cayuga County, one of the most eminent public characters, one of the foremost, one of the purest men in the nation, threatened with the wrath and vengeance of the machine because he dare do right.

Men of Cayuga county, what are you going to do about it? Sereno E. Payne is fighting for the material interests of his constituency and the honor of his party; aye, for the honor of the American people represented in Cayuga county. His policy is to break into the sheriff's office and to secure salaried offices in the county in order to smash the political combination made possible by the thousands of dollars contributed to the machine through the fee system now in vogue. The payroll for public officials under machine control approximates $100,000. A ten per cent assessment yields $10,000 by the use of which the machine may corrupt the primaries and perpetuate itself in office. Thus it is that money paid by the overburdened taxpayer is made to pay the expense of welding the bonds that hold him in captivity. No free-booter of old, no feudal chieftain ever exercised more despotic sway over his followers than does the Cayuga county machine over the once free citizens of this county. Taxpayers, you have contributed $327,000 in county taxes and $60,000 in state taxes to keep the machine in power. Will you continue to pay? Will you toil and struggle in field and shop and counting room and continue to pay at the rate of $25,000 per year that the elegantly clad, diamond bedecked wire pullers may live in luxuriant ease and voluptuous comfort?

Is patriotism dead in Cayuga county? Is horse sense one of the defunct virtues in Cayuga county? It would seem that these things were if at the ensuing primaries the people of Cayuga fail to resent the insult to Congressman Payne and protect themselves by sending anti-machine delegates to the county convention. Taxpayers, what are you going to do about it?

—James Fallon and family of Cortland have been visiting friends in town the past week.

—Mrs. Mary E. Sellen of Kentucky is spending a short time with friends in Genoa.

—Leland Conger of Owego has been enjoying a few days with his young friends in the village.

—Misses Kathleen and Florence Norman are spending a few days with relatives at Syracuse and Auburn.

—The Genoa Milling Co. have a force of men repairing the dam and making things in condition for the rush of fall grinding. James A. Wright of Moravia is the millwright in charge.

—The barn dance at W. H. Shaffers' was a great success, there being a large number present and some from quite a distance. The floor, which was all laid that day, proved to be good to dance on.

Best fine Tea 20 cents per pound at H. P. Mastin's.

—J. M. Tarbell and E. B. Whitten have sold their interest in the old railroad bed to B. H. Leonard of Auburn, and the deed was given on Saturday last. Mr. Leonard reports good news from Mr. Craig.

—Quite a number of the Genoa folks went to the circus at Auburn Tuesday. The show is reported to be first class. It appears at Ithaca next Monday, and H. M. Head will arrange to carry a large load.

—Clark Taber of Portland, Oregon, is renewing old acquaintances in this vicinity. He left these parts almost fifty years ago, and his relatives here had heard nothing from him in more than twenty years. He walked from the village up to his brother's Austin, Wednesday morning and represented himself as a ginseng buyer, and it was quite a spell before he was recognized.

—The Republican caucus will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 30, at the store of F. C. Hagin in this village from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m., at which time delegates will be elected to represent the town in the district, county and assembly conventions. The county convention will be held at the court house in Auburn on Saturday, Sept. 3. There will also be elected a new member of the general committee and a town committee of three for the ensuing year. Every Republican voter should arrange to step in sometime between the hours of 2 and 5 and cast his ballot.

—L. B. Norman, D. W. Smith, Charles Carson and Prof. C. E. Harris drove to Cascade Wednesday to attend the supervisors' picnic.

—The Southern Cayuga Veterans' association will hold their annual basket picnic on the Genoa fair grounds on Saturday, Aug. 27. A good speaker and a large crowd are expected.

—Information reaches us that the mention made in the issue of last week of that campaign jug has fallen in some very sensitive places in Venice. We did not intimate or insinuate that any man in Venice was responsible for it or would sanction such an outrage for a moment. If the article is read carefully the meaning will become plain to all.

—Prof. George Clark of Ensenore has been engaged as principal of the Genoa school for the coming year, Miss Marian Ives as assistant, and Miss Flora Alling for the primary department. All grade work will be thoroughly covered, and the languages and higher branches will be carried on. The school building is in a first class sanitary condition, inside and outside, and a large attendance of students from outside the district can be nicely accommodated. Pupils of this vicinity will do well to attend the Genoa school.

THE New York World

THURSDAY-A-WEEK EDITION.
Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The tickets are now made up and the most interesting Presidential campaign the United States has known since 1860 has begun. And it is the most important, too.

Which will it be, Parker and Davis or Roosevelt and Fairbanks? Nobody knows yet, but the Thrice-a-Week World will tell you promptly, fully and truthfully every movement of a hot and thrilling campaign. The real newspaper now prints facts rather than hopes, and it has always been the effort of the Thrice-a-Week World to tell the thing that has happened exactly as it happened. Thus you can judge for yourself and form your opinion.

There is also a great war going on in the East, where the World has a brilliant staff of correspondents in the field, and their reports are found regularly in the columns of the Thrice-a-Week World.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Genoa Tribune together one year for $1.65. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00.

TOILED FOR SEVEN YEARS.

Prisoners in French Penal Settlement Betrayed After Digging Long Tunnel.

Patience in working for freedom even greater than that displayed by the prisoners who escaped from Libby prison during the civil war was shown not long ago in the French penal settlement in New Caledonia. The convicts live in barracks and every evening they are searched and looked in.

Among the prisoners were two marine engineers who were in for political crimes. They lived together in the same hut. Every night for two years they labored at digging an underground chamber beneath their house, concealing its entrance during the day. Every morning each of them carried out some dirt in his blouse or his pockets.

Their hut stood near the seashore. After two years' toil they had dug a tunnel reaching almost to the sandstone bank by the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a large cavity, and in this cavity they set to work building a boat. But cutting through to the beach they were able to come out at night and find pieces of driftwood on the shore, and every serviceable piece of timber they dragged in.

In their underground chamber they made a forge, and with little bits of steel and iron, some smuggled in from the marine repair shops in their hair and under their arm pits, they made, first tools, then bolts, rivets and the necessary ironwork for the building of a launch. Then they set patiently to work building an engine for the launch. When that was finally accomplished they had been working nightly for over seven years.

At this time another convict was lodged with them, a Paris embezzler, and they had to take him into their confidence. For six months he helped them, until everything was ready, except to provision the boat. Then the embezzler turned informer, hoping to gain favor thereby. Next night guards surprised the two marine engineers in their underground chamber, seized their tools, and put them into solitary confinement with ball and chain.

The subsequent investigation brought to light the entire plot. The seven long years of patient toil so impressed the French commandant that a year later he managed to obtain a pardon for the two engineers, and they returned to France.

HOW FROGS CAME TO BE.

Mythical Tale Accounts in Strange Manner for Existence of the Croakers.

Did you ever hear how frogs originated? It is a queer story, but then it happened a long time ago, when the world was young and all sorts of queer things were happening. We can, of course, believe as much or as little of such stories as we please, but at least they entertain us, says an exchange.

Now as to the frogs, they came into being because a weary, thirsty woman was prevented from getting a drink of water. Here is the way the story is told:

"Latona was a beautiful goddess, who lived with the other goddesses and gods on Mount Olympus, where Jupiter and Juno reigned, as you know. She was distinguished for many things, but chiefly for being the mother of Apollo and Diana. It seems that she incurred the ill will of Juno in some way and was banished from Olympus, with no place to put her foot and no shelter for her weary head, for Juno had made Terra, the Earth, promise that she should not find rest anywhere.

"Neptune, the god of the sea, however, took pity on the banished goddess and invited her to the Isle of Delos, which then floated under the water, but rose to the surface at his command. There she found peace and comfort, and there she brought up her two famous children, Apollo to become the god of the sun and Diana the goddess of the moon.

"But perhaps you are wondering what all this has to do with the frogs. It is said that one day while Latona was wandering desolate and weary with her children while they were yet babies she came to a pool of clear, sparkling water. Half dying with thirst, goddess as she was, she ran toward the pool to drink some of the cool water, but a crowd of ugly yokels surrounded it and kept her away.

"She had up to this time borne her privations and sufferings with patience and resignation, but at this act of wanton cruelty her patience gave way and turning furiously on the yokels she turned them all into croaking frogs, which they have remained to this day."

War and Population. Statistics of population seem to show that after long and severe wars, in which many men are killed and the male part of a country's population is greatly decreased, there is for several years a preponderating birth of male children until the normal proportion between the sexes is restored. This seems to have been noted after the Thirty Years' war in Germany, after the Napoleonic wars in France, and even in more recent times after the siege of Paris.

Cost of Coronation. The cost of the coronation of King Edward VII. establishes a record for modern times. It was considered a bold and magnificent thing for the subjects of George IV. to spend £225,000 in putting a crown on his head, but he has surpassed their lavishness by £125,000. William IV. and Queen Adelaide were content with a modest £50,000.—London Tit-Bits.

LEGEND OF THE IROQUOIS.

Origin of the Clan of Turtle Accounted For in a Wonderful and Amusing Tale.

The origin of the family of Iroquois Indians known as the Turtle clan is explained by a legend current in the tribe. It runs as follows:

Once upon a time many tortoises of the kind known as mud turtles lived in a pool in the forest and enjoyed themselves undisturbed for years. They had plenty to eat and often spoke with pity of other mud turtles who lived in pools where flies and bugs and such delicacies were less plentiful.

The chief of the pool was a big fat mud turtle who was noted for his great appetite and his dislike of exertion. Now in the course of time there came a very hot, rainless summer and the happy pool dried up. Then the turtles held a council to decide upon what should be done.

They could not stay where they were, for the mud had become dust or had resolved itself into hard, brick-like chunks, and turtles must have mud and water in order to live. All the neighboring pools were occupied by other turtles, but a wise old fellow who had traveled told them of a fine pool not occupied and which would be an excellent place to which to emigrate.

So the turtles set out for the new pool and as the way was long and the journey lay most of the way across the open country, where the fierce rays of the sun beat down upon them with pitiless severity, they suffered greatly and were almost dead when they finally reached their home and plunged into its cool waters and its soft, delightful mud.

However, one of them failed to reach safety. That exception was the fat old turtle with the big appetite. He waddled along with the others for awhile, but as the sun got hotter and hotter he began to lag behind, and finally he was left alone. The sun blistered his shoulders under his shell and he thought: "Oh, if I could get rid of this shell I could then catch up with the others."

So he began making a great effort to crawl out of his shell, and to his surprise he succeeded at last. But when he had done so he was no better off than before, for the heat now began to scorch his body and he thought to himself: "If I keep on this way I shall soon be a well-done turtle steak, fit only for a feast in some wigwam."

So he crawled to one side and rested under a clump of ferns, thinking that he would resume his march when the sun had gone down.

While he rested there in the cool shade of the ferns he saw an Indian go by, looping along at an easy gait and seeming to travel with such ease that the fat turtle was filled with envy, and thought: "Why cannot I walk on my hind legs the way that man does and get over the ground as easily as he?"

It occurred to him to try it. He tried standing on his hind legs and after a little practice found that he could do so with comparative ease.

This was the turning point in the life of that turtle. He had learned how much could be accomplished by trying, and he said to himself: "I have been a fat, lazy old mud turtle all my life and have never done anything because I was afraid to try. Now I have found that by trying I was able to cast off my shell and by trying I can walk erect like an Indian. I have been a fat, lazy old mud turtle all my life, but now I am going to be a man."

So he began to practice walking and talking and eating berries and roots and wild game, which he caught, instead of contenting himself with his former diet of worms, bugs and flies, and after awhile he became so much like a man that he ventured into one of the Indian villages, where he told his story and completed his education.

He grew slim and tall and learned to hunt with a bow and arrow so skillfully that in time he married the chief's daughter and his descendants are all known to this day as the Turtle clan, the bravest warriors and the most skillful hunters among the Iroquois.

His former companions who reached the new pool remained mud turtles all the rest of their lives and their descendants are mud turtles to this day.

Blind Workers.

The potteries district of England has workshops exclusively for blind and deaf operators. There are 12 blind men and youths employed and five blind girls. The latter are chiefly engaged in making cane handles for shop palls and the men make the special baskets, hampers, etc., required in the potting trades. They are managed by a committee consisting of the mayors of the potteries boroughs, the chairmen of the local district councils.

What He Wanted. At a colliery, near Leeds, is a shaft with a staging around it, its height being considerably above the average of such erections in the West Riding. A miner had fallen off this staging to the ground, and on recovering consciousness, was offered a glass of water. Looking at the water in disgust and amazement, he exclaimed: "hoo far does tha' ha' to fall at this pit afore they gives yer brandy?"—Argonaut.

Cured. Mrs. A.—I bought some of that mixture the agent said would cure my husband of drinking if I dropped it in his coffee.

Mrs. Z.—Did it cure him of drinking? "Yes—of drinking coffee."—Bangor News.

Good Old Summer Time. Lady—What's that? Won't take this coin?

Beggar—No, lady, I'm sorry to say dat dis is one o' me days off. I'm enjoyin' me annual vacation, see?—Chicago Daily News.

AMERICAN GIRLS IN PARIS.

Home for Lene Workers, Students and Tourists Has Recently Been Provided.

The problem of the American girl alone in Paris, either as student or breadwinner, has been solved more or less satisfactorily for many by the American Girls club, says the Brooklyn Eagle, founded by Mrs. Whitelaw Read. Quite recently a new protector of these expatriated workers has arisen in the shape of the British-American Young Women's Christian association which has become an interesting addition to the American colony. While the American Girls club is intended more particularly for students the Young Women's Christian association offers a home for the low price of four dollars a week, to young women of limited means engaged in any occupation.

The house is situated in the Rue de Turin No. 5, and though but a short walk from the business district is well shaded by trees and fronted by a lawn. Some of its features are: An employment directory, reading room, physical culture, home nursing, millinery and French classes outdoor clubs, afternoon tea and social evenings. Bible classes and gospel service. The enterprise has the backing of both English and American women of social prestige; it is the first permanently organized association of the kind in Paris, though at the time of the exposition a regular association branch was started, merely continuing during the summer of 1900. Much of the success of the Paris association is due to the generosity and executive ability of its president, Mrs. John Hoff, who has resided for the past four years in Paris. Mrs. Hoff is a daughter of the late David Whitney, the millionaire, and was born in Detroit, Mich.

The American Girls club established in 1891 by Mrs. Whitelaw Read for American girls studying in Paris. It is located at 4 Rue de Chevreuse, not far from the boulevard Montparnasse, and is on the borderland rather than in the Latin quarter proper. The plain stone facade close on the street gives no hint of the pleasant interior looking from three sides on to a large court and yard beyond filled with flower beds and shade trees. On the rez-de-hausse are the dining and tea rooms, the latter the gathering place of the girls every afternoon at five o'clock, the former containing some dozen little tables where meals are served a la carte at very moderate prices. Coffee and tea cost five cents, meats 12 and vegetables five.

On the floor above are two drawing rooms and the library, a large white curtained room furnished with writing tables, periodicals and a good collection of English and French books. This is a favorite rendezvous of the girls, another is, during the warm season, the long balcony overlooking the court, which with its awnings and vine-clad railings offers an inviting place for a chat of the discussion of a novel.

The majority of the pensionnaires are art students, though in summer numerous tourists take advantage of the home-like atmosphere and low rates of the house. They must, however, be unmarried, as married women are debarred from rooming at the club, though they are allowed to come there for meals. The rooms are rented as low as seven per month, the more desirable ones being slightly higher in price. A large hall on the upper floor of the building serves for entertainments, to which many well-known artists contribute their talents gratis.

GOT WHAT HE CALLED FOR

Wanted a "Second-Hand" Watch, But the Salesman Was Slow of Comprehension.

He was a foreigner and, having entered a large jewelry store on State street, he said to the clerk behind the showcase.

"I would like to examine some second hand watches."

"Excuse me, sir, but this is not a pawnshop," observed the clerk, haughtily.

"No?" said the man, inquiringly.

"But you have plenty of watches," and he pointed to the great showcase full of handsome timepieces, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Certainly," replied the clerk. "Finest stock of watches in town. How much do you want to pay for a watch?"

"How much?" asked the stranger.

"Much as he is worth, so that he is a second hand watch and will keep good time."

"See here, sir, you are in the wrong store. We don't keep second hand watches in this establishment."

The stranger's eyes opened wide. "But you have them here, there and there," he said as he began to gesticulate. "I have said s-e-c-o-n-d h-a-n-d watches," spelling it out as though to make it plainer, "and they are here everywhere, yet you say you have them not. I do not understand you."

"Well, I do now," replied the clerk, sheepishly, as he quickly opened a showcase and produced a tray of watches. "Just a little mix up. No harm done. I hope. Certainly we have watches with second hands. All our watches have second hands. We make no other."

And the stranger got a second hand watch for which he laid down a $50 note.

End of the Game. It was his move. He made it, captured a pawn, and announced: "Mate!"

"I see," she pouted. "But you had the advantage of a bishop."

"Some day, Bella," he whispered, pursuing the advantage, "may I mate you with the assistance of just a common preacher?"

THE LONG-AGO.

D, the beautiful, beautiful past,
With its memories all aglow;
They are gleaming to-night, with a radiance bright.
From the shadowy long-ago.

The mountains, rock-ribbed and rough,
Where our feet grew weary and worn,
Are brought to view and are clothed anew
With a beauty of heaven born.

The storm in the valley sighed,
With its sometimes sweet refrains,
But our souls are at rest on its heaving breast.
For the music alone remains.

The sunset of life draws near
In the sweet and blessed calm;
Its tender ray glids the sombre day,
And mellow its tears to balm.

And we list at eventide
For the distant bells, which, lo!
In the waning light, ring a sweet goodnight

To the chimnes of the long-ago.
—Marion Boal, in United Presbyterian.

The Hollow in the Red Rocks.

By A. W. Whitehouse.

SUDDEN and unlooked for things happen in the mountains. For all that we are civilized, and the bad man is no longer very bad, evil deeds are done among the lonely peaks, and sometimes two men go on a journey, and very long afterwards one skeleton is found.

I am now able to give some sort of an explanation of the motives which brought about the strange disappearance of my partner last October, though many of the facts remain to be cleared up.

To tell a connected story, I have to go back to a time when I was only a small ranchman, holding the nucleus of the present splendid property, and the Black Hills Land & Cattle company did not exist. In a matter of business I had made the acquaintance of old Matthew Sparks, the great dressed beef man at the Chicago stock yards, and the business acquaintance had developed into a personal friendship, during the course of which Mr. Sparks had been very kind to me indeed.

It was in the spring of '97 that I received the letter from Mr. Sparks which made so great a change in my prospects. It was very long, and went rather fully into business details, but one extract from it is necessary for the proper understanding of later events.

"I am sorry to say," he wrote, "that Archie (his only son) has signaled his entrance into business life by a very disreputable social scandal. There was an entanglement with a girl, followed by her suicide. I need hardly say that had I known of it in time, Archie should have done his duty at any cost to the family, but, as it is, Chicago is too hot to hold him, and it will be better for him to keep away for several years. Archie is devoted to outdoor pursuits, and will very probably take quite kindly to ranching, though he is no good at all in the office."

Then followed an offer which made me sit up. Briefly, I was to acquire on his behalf enough neighboring property to support 40,000 head of cattle, and my own interest in the concern was to be so large as to make me a fairly wealthy man in the course of a very few years. The only pill was Archie. I had met that youth, and did not like him. He was to be appointed a subordinate officer in the company, and was to enjoy the income of a large block of its stock, provided that he made his regular home at the ranch and never slept away from it for more than 14 consecutive nights.

Apart from my obligations to Mr. Sparks, the offer was too good to be refused. There is a sweet certainty about cattle when you are enfolded in the kindly arms of the beef trust that no cowman could resist; and so it was not very long before Archibald Sparks came to take up his residence at the ranch.

It is well to say nothing but good of the dead, but as there is not yet any legal proof that Archie has crossed the great divide I must haste to describe him while I can do so with a clear conscience.

He belonged to a not uncommon type that is repulsive to men, though by no means unattractive to women, a type which I can only define as the unpleasantly physical. His body was robust and he had glorified the care of his person into a kind of religion. He was an extremely well-built boy, with one of those yearning, intense faces, that you see among a small class of poets and actors and a large class of brutes. Of brains, morals and application he was destitute.

During the first few months of the expansion of the property the work was chiefly of a clerical nature—securing options, besieging land offices, interviewing surveyors and the like. In this I did not look for any help from my new partner and none was volunteered; but when the great herds of cattle began to pour in from the west and south, I certainly expected to be able to rely on him. And for several weeks, before the novelty wore off, he did save me a great deal of trouble. By July, however, the hot, dry season had begun in earnest, and you could hardly see the stock you were driving for the dust they raised. This was too much for Archie. He was not going to injure his precious eyes for any mere business consideration.

After that I saw very little of him. His time was divided between shooting, fishing and other pursuits of a less reputable nature, and his appearance at the ranch were just sufficiently frequent to fulfill the conditions which held his interest in the property.

It was towards the end of July that Clark Fenton arrived in the town in which we got our supplies. Evidently belonging to the better class of working men, he was short, extremely powerful and spoke pronouncedly through his nose. His conversation was chiefly remarkable from its contrast to the vigorous and high-flavored language used by the natives. He never swore.

Apparently he had plenty of money, and at first when questioned as to his intentions, replied that he had earned enough for a holiday, and was going to look around a bit before settling on a line of work. He was jack of many trades, he said, and could make a good living as soon as he decided. He picked up a number of acquaintances, displayed a great interest in the resources and prospects of the surrounding country and early in August announced that he had determined to try his luck for a season as a professional hunter and trapper.

In this capacity he met with success from the start. He was a brilliant shot, and though the country was new to him, he seemed to have a natural instinct as to the whereabouts of game. Several short trips were arranged by the local magnates, with Fenton as a pilot, and in each case they returned spoil-laden.

Naturally, Archie fell in with him, and naturally they had much enthusiastic talk in common, but their several engagements prevented them from arranging an expedition together till the middle of October.

About this time there were large and destructive forest fires in the Rockies, and the smoke hung a heavy pall over all the land. The sun rose and set blood-red, and men could hardly quench their thirst. Much game was driven out, and, crossing the intervening 40 miles of plain, deer and elk took up their abode on our range in the south part of the Black Hills. Other visitors arrived, not so welcome. A mountain lion was seen by one of our cowboys feasting on a calf, and the next night, ten miles away, he robbed the henroost of a fence-rider.

To harbor the beast meant a certain loss of a thousand dollars a year, and I turned his pursuit and destruction over to Archie, who took to the idea with great eagerness. He at once engaged Clark Fenton to accompany him, and on the 17th of October the pair started with a team and spring wagon belonging to the ranch, loaded with guns, rifles and all the paraphernalia required for a two-weeks' camp in the hills.

From that day to this, no man, so far as is known, has ever set eyes on either of them.

A fortnight went by, but as Archie was supposed to be hunting within our fence (an enclosure, by the way, of about three-quarters of a million acres) and was at work for the benefit of the ranch, I made no report of his absence to his father. But during the third week the weather became very bitter and stormy—too rough, I should have supposed, for my partner—and when, on the 7th of November, I found that none of the cowboys had seen their camp at all, I became alarmed, and telegraphed to Mr. Sparks.

Promptly came back the reply: "Send up to fifty thousand in inquiries. Draw on me."

The number of riders we put out to cover the ground, and the number of detectives we employed would hardly be believed, if I gave them; but up to June, '98, the only things we recovered were the wagon and horses. A Mexican in Arizona was working old Blue, and a missionary on the Crow reservation in Montana had Buck and the wagon, but they had passed through so many hands that it was impossible to trace them back to any one resembling either Clark Fenton or Archie Sparks.

Poor Mr. Sparks took the disappearance of his son very deeply to heart, and his efforts in the search were redoubled, but were entirely fruitless.

In June, '98, I had occasion to ride over a part of the range about ten miles distant from the home ranch. The nature of the country was rather curious. The soil was a heavy, orange-colored sand, growing a fairly good stand of pasture grass, and spangled at this season with wild flowers of every hue. At frequent intervals there rose red sandstone rocks, some of great size, and carved by weather into the most fantastic shapes. Here would be a table, many hundred tons in weight, set on three slender legs; there a thin slab, serving edgewise for a sun dial. Fancy could picture George Washington, the Sphinx and other celebrities, when the strange masses were looked at from the proper point.

These crags were the home of wild-cats, and my bull-terriers (who generally succeeded in following me when I meant to leave them at home) were soon bustling one from rock to rock. The cat finally took refuge in a mass of red sandstone about an acre in extent, the terriers following, and while I waited for them to come out again I amused myself by examining the curious formation. On three sides the walls were sheer, or perhaps a little overhanging, to the height of 40 feet. At the top the weather had done strange work. Crowning the walls were great mushroom-like shapes, on high, thick stems, each different and yet all alike. The intervals were almost regular, giving the appearance of a battlemented tower, or, better, of some vast fantastic crown. To the east there was a cleft, where willows and underbrush grew thickly on a steep slope; and amid them I saw a day spring.

I could hear barking and spitting from somewhere in the rock, and determined to clamber up and see how my dogs were faring. I struggled up through the tangled undergrowth, then, with knees and fingernails up a slippery slope of sandstone, and checked myself at the top just in time to avoid a breakneck fall.

For the great rock was hollow. Just as the sheer walls rose on the outside, so they fell within, enclosing a great pit, perhaps 20 yards in length and 15 broad. In one corner were the bull pups, actively assailing the cat. How had they come there? Examining the pit more carefully, I saw that on one side there was a difficult entrance, where the rock sloped down, and the sheer drop was only about seven feet, though there was no unaided exit for man or beast. I fetched a larrikin from my horse, made a dangerous scramble among the mushroom-headed rocks, and, securing my rope round the stem of one of them, let myself down just in time to assist at the obsequies of the cat.

The field of battle had centered near a small hole in the rocky wall, which a pack rat had partly filled with brush and various rubbish. This had been disturbed by the cat and dog encounter, and further in the hole I saw what looked like brown leather. Brown leather it proved to be—a check book of the kind that folds over, and serves for holding other documents.

The checks had been used, and the counterfoils were scribbled over in pencil. The pencil writing was hard to decipher, but a very short inspection satisfied me that it was a diary kept by Archie Sparks.

This is what he wrote:

October 18—Pain in my foot is awful, but I must write, as I do not expect to get out of here alive. Why did he do it? But you do not know yet what he did, so I will tell. Yesterday we came here and camped at the little spring. Started to explore the rocks about sunset. Found the way into the hollow, and I let myself down by a rope. Left both rifles at the top, and Clark Fenton was to follow me down. Instead of doing so, he pulled up the rope, saying: "This place will do as well as any," and shot me through the right foot. Shock must have made me faint, as I heard him saying things I didn't understand. Finally wished me a pleasant evening; said I should see him tomorrow, and went away. Fenton must be mad, to attack me like this, and I doubt if help arrives in time.

October 19—Fenton is worse than mad—he is Minnie's brother. Minnie was my Chicago girl, you know. Was mining in Oregon then, and I never saw him. Now he tells me he is going to watch me starve to death, and hopes I will enjoy it. Pain in foot worse, and leg swollen. He let me down water in a tin bucket; says he wants me to have plenty of time. I see no hope.

October 20—Screamed all day, but Fenton, or Johnson, as his real name is, told me to go ahead and scream. Pain in foot less, but awful cramps in stomach. He eats his meals in full view of me. I ate gooseberry leaves.

October 21—Minnie came to see me to-day with a baby in her arms; opened a way for me out of the rock; I started to follow, but fell down, down.

October 22—Poor Minnie.

After this there were only a few feeble scrawls.

We have turned over all the loose sand in the hollow, and have had large gangs of men examine the ground in all directions, but have come on no other evidence that would support the idea that poor Archie was buried in the neighborhood.

Up to date there has been no news of Johnson, alias Fenton.

He is thickest, speaks with a nasal accent and never swears.

Not a Promising Client.

An old lawyer tells a good story about a case he had, but which he didn't keep.

An Irish woman sent for him in great haste one day. She wanted him to meet her in court, and he hastened thither with all speed. The woman's son was about to be placed on trial for burglary. When the lawyer entered the court the old woman rushed up to him, and in an excited voice said:

"Mr. B—, Oi want ye to get a remand for me by Jimmie."

"Very well, madam," replied the lawyer. "I will do so if I can, but it will be necessary to present to the court some grounds for a remand. What shall I say?"

"Shure, ye can just tell the court that Oi want a remand till Oi can get a better lawyer to spake for the b'y."

After telling the woman that she would have to get another lawyer to take up the case, he hurried back to his office a very angry man.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

She Would Not Do.

A Boston mother with the true Boston woman's born-and-bred horror of anything "vulgar" had to engage a nurserymaid to take the place of one who had married. An advertisement calling for the service of another maid was inserted in the papers, and an applicant appeared in the person of a demure looking young woman, to whom the mother of the four young hopefuls said: "I am very particular regarding the language used by my nursery-maids. I am especially particular regarding the use of slang. I never allow my children to use any form of slang, and I hope you would not mind if I corrected any grammatical errors I might discover in your conversation."

"Well, I dunno," said the applicant, after a few moments' reflection. "I guess, lady, that I'd hardly come up to the scratch, so I might as well git a move on me an' look somewhere else for a sit. So long, lady."—Woman's Home Companion.

Taken with Cramps.

William Kirmse, a member of the bridge gang working near Littleport was taken suddenly ill Thursday night with cramps and a kind of cholera. His case was so severe that he had to have the members of the crew wait upon him and Mr. Gifford was called and consulted. He told them he had a medicine in the form of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy that he thought would help him out and accordingly several doses were administered with the result that the fellow was able to be around next day. The incident speaks quite highly of Mr. Gifford's medicine.—Elkader, Iowa, Argus.

Sellen's; next Saturday the Osmun family meet at Leo Metzgar's, and the following Saturday the Metzgars meet at Benson Metzgar's; Sept. 1, the Bothwells at A. J. Conger's

Thursday, Aug. 25, a picnic under the auspices of West Groton Grange will be held in Elmore Cutter's woods, to which every one is invited.

Todd Reunion.

The sixth reunion of the Todd family was held at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Atwater on Wednesday, Aug. 10. Some were in doubt as to whether they had arrived at the right place, the house having been improved by a fresh coat of paint. The weather proved rather unfavorable, but kept very few away and did not prevent the young people from engaging in croquet and crokinole. On account of the dampness the tables were spread indoors and were well laden with good things, for the ladies had vied with each other in providing dainty and appetizing food. Later a business meeting was held at which letters were read from distant relatives, and the following officers re-elected for the coming year: President, S. C. Bradley; vice-president, J. D. Todd; secretary and treasurer, Antoinette S. Bradley. Relatives were present from Ithaca, Lima, O., Lake Ridge, Genoa, Aurora and Five Corners. Several have been added to the family during the year by birth and marriage. All enjoyed the occasion and hope to meet again next year at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. French, to which we are very cordially invited.

Fast Races at State Fair.

The throngs that visit the State Fair at Syracuse during the week of Sept. 5 will see the fastest and best races of the year. That the commission recognizes the hold that this exciting sport has upon the American public is evidenced by the fact that $25,000 in purses is offered, which sum, it will at once be seen, will attract famous horsemen from all parts of the country. Commissioner Perreu, himself a horseman of national repute, is giving his entire time to making this feature a pronounced success and is having the hearty co-operation of Commissioners Settle and Wisting.

The list of entries for the events which closed May 2 is very large and it is evident that horsemen appreciate the liberal treatment they receive at the State Fair. On Aug. 23 entries close for twelve additional classes. One of these is a two-minute pace.

The race track is concededly the fastest in the state and already the extensive stables are well filled with fast steppers in training for the various events. Commissioner Perreu, in a recent interview, stated that the driving clubs of Pittsburg, Cleveland and New York will probably send horses for the amateur races and this will, no doubt, be a pleasing feature of the big meeting.

It's Time

you began to think seriously about re-papering those rooms, isn't it? Then there's those curtains and shades too.

Don't Wait

but buy them now. Why? Because we have 41250 square feet of floor space but we need another six or eight for our new fall stock, besides we are going to have it.

Therefore

we must get rid of some of our present stock and that's why we are cutting prices and saying,

Buy it Now

Don't wait until "to-morrow", but come in today and save some money.

LAMPS.

A good big assortment and they are to be closed out cheap at once.
