JULY 1—Farmers are becoming discouraged with so much wet weather. Miss Gertrude Taber of Ithaca is a guest of her friends, Misses Josephine and Edith Brooks this week.

Porter Beardsley of Auburn attended the 74th anniversary of his uncle on Saturday.

Frank Barger returned to New York city last Saturday evening and Lonson went Sunday night; Roswell returned to Esopus on Hudson Monday night. The boys were all in attendance at the anniversary of their grandfather.

A large attendance at C. D. Robinson's barn dance Friday night; the music, as usual, was enjoyed by all.

The social held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edd Buck last Wednesday evening, was largely attended and a success in every way. Lonson and Frank Barger of New York City gave some vocal music which was enjoyed by all. The recitations by Misses Shoemaker and Bacon were also highly appreciated.

Twenty-five ladies were in attendance at the L. A. S. held at the home of Mrs. Celia Learn Thursday.

Miss Belle Wiuna is the guest of her brother Thaxter this week.

On Saturday of last week occurred the 74th anniversary of R. Beardsley's connection with the post office at North Lansing. The day was all that could be desired—a sunny day sandwiched in, as it were, between gloomy, rainy days. Relatives and friends to the number of 68 gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barger to participate in the pleasures of the occasion. A large canvas was provided for protection from the sun, easy chairs were scattered around the lawn, where groups of people were gathered, some talking over the events of the day and others enjoying reminiscences of the past. S. L. Tice was the only one present who was born when Mr. Beardsley was made post master. All ages were represented, from the little child to the aged grandfather who will be 93 years old July 5th. Mr. Beardsley was assisted over to dinner, and sat in the yard long enough to greet many of his friends and to have his picture taken, surrounded by relatives and friends. He did not talk much and at the table ate but little and was then helped back home, where he could rest. His children were all present, 10 grandchildren and 13 great grandchildren. The Barger boys were all home together for the first time in 16 years, which added much to the occasion, for a happier company it would be hard to find. They are singers and with Will Smith to sing bass and Mrs. Minnie Lobbell at the organ, we had some fine music.

The guests present from a distance were Frank and Lonson Barger and Misses Chichester of New York, Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. Wm. Taber and daughter Gertrude, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Boole, Miss Mary and Master John Boole, all of Ithaca, Mr. and Mrs. David Dye and son Harry of Moravia and Porter Beardsley of Auburn. It was late in the afternoon when the company separated, all feeling that they had passed a very pleasant day.

JULY 2—This is a beautiful day, which is very pleasant after so much cold rainy weather. A good deal of hay to be cut and nice weather will be welcome.

There is a great complaint of the scarcity of help. It would be a fine thing if some of the unemployed in the cities could be sent out to help the farmers through haying and harvesting; they might not all be first class help but it would surely do them all good.

Robert Cahalan is home from Auburn and will assist Thomas Owens with his harvest.

Mr. Montgomery of Pittsburg, who is visiting at Ledyard, is shooting a good many woodchucks in this part of Venice.

Saves a Woman's Life.

To have given up would have meant death for Mrs. Lois Cragg of Dorchester, Mass. For years she had endured untold misery from severe lung trouble and bad cough. Often, she says, I could scarcely breathe, and sometimes could not speak. All doctors and remedies failed till I used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was completely cured. Sufferers from coughs, colds, throat and lung trouble need this great remedy, for it never disappoints. Cure is guaranteed by J. S. Banker. Price 50c and $1.00, trial bottles free.

Society Notes.

Baptist church. Covenant meeting Saturday, July 5 at 3 o'clock. Regular services Sunday; morning subject, "The Baptism of Jesus." The gospel service last Sunday evening was largely attended and much interest was manifested in the after-meeting. Next Sunday evening will occur the 5th subject of the series of sermons, "The Boy's Ambition," one of the best in the series, important to all young men. Prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, at 7:30. The white service will be held July 13th, morning and evening.

Presbyterian church. Preaching at 11 o'clock every Sabbath morning. Sabbath school at 12; evening service at 7:30. Midweek prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. A "Fourth of July" service will be held Sabbath morning, July 6. The purpose of this service is to give due religious prominence to the holiday which celebrates the beginning of our national independence. Some special patriotic music in honor of this day will be rendered by the choir. The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held Wednesday afternoon. The pastor desires to commend the Union to the ladies of the church and of the village, as it will afford them a splendid opportunity for doing practical Christian work. The pastor will preach at East Genoa on Sabbath afternoon, July 6, filling the regular appointment of Rev. Mr. Shoemaker. The missionary concert of this week was conducted by the ladies' missionary society of the church.

Peckham Family Reunion.

On Saturday, June 28th, the descendants and relatives of the late John Peckham, met at the family homestead near Poplar Ridge, now occupied by the youngest son, Claude.

The gathering was in honor of David W. Peckham of Norwalk, Ohio., who is now visiting his old home after an absence of many years. There were 49 present at the reunion, among them the five brothers—George of Moravia; David of Norwalk, Ohio; William of King Ferry; John Henry, and Claude of Poplar Ridge; all of whom had not met for fourteen years. The day was a perfect one after all the rain and cloudy weather of the past week. Bountiful refreshments were served at tables, set on the lawn. The time was spent in games and visiting, and during the afternoon a photographer made his appearance, and amid much merriment succeeded in taking a very good picture, which makes a very pleasing souvenir of this happy day.

The hour for parting came all too soon, and the company separated with an earnest hope that we may all meet again.

The "North Coast Limited." of the Northern Pacific which, in its two seasons of service has justly obtained the reputation of being the "Crack Train of the Northwest," was again placed in commission May 4, 1902.

This train replaced trains 11 and 12 and the twice-a-day through train service is maintained, as heretofore.

The "Limited" runs between St. Paul and Portland, via Butte, Spokane, Seattle and Tacoma as in previous years, and is electric lighted, steam heated and wide-vestibled.

New, modernized Pullmans, the most advanced type of Tourist Sleeping cars, new Northern Pacific Railway Dining cars, the usual fine equipment of regular Day Coaches etc., and crowning all, the superb Observation cars of the Northern Pacific Railway at the rear of these trains, all together form a train unexcelled anywhere. It is worth something to see the Northwest on a train like this. Passengers having paid for first-class Pullman berths have the privilege of the Observation car and its fine library and reading room free, others holding first-class tickets pay a small fee for the privilege.

This train carries the eastbound Yellowstone Park travel and the Park Pullman during the Park season, May 30 to Sept. 15. Send six cents for "Wonderland 1902" to Chas. S. Fee, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

ROAD & FARM IMPROVEMENT.

MORE AID FOR ROADS.

New York Has Just Passed a Law Which Should Be Studied by Legislators Everywhere.

Gov. Odell has signed a measure passed by the legislature that is calculated to aid very materially in the work of road repairing throughout the state. It is an amendment to the highway law that made possible the substitution of the money system for that of day's labor in the repairing of the public highways, and the bill that has now become a law provides for doubling the state aid toward such work.

Employment of the money system of road improvement has met with very general favor by the people throughout the state. The provisions of the law are of such moment as to warrant more than summary notice. It is provided that:

"Any town voting in favor of the money system shall annually raise by tax, to be levied and collected the same as other town taxes, for the repair of highways, an annual sum of money, which shall be equal to at least one-half the value at the commutative rates of the highway labor which should be assessed under the labor system, but in any town in which there may be an incorporated village which forms a separate road district, and wherein the roads and streets are maintained at the expense of such village, all property within such village shall be exempt from the levy and collection of such tax for the repair of highways of such town, and the assessors of the town are hereby required to indicate on the assessment roll the property included in such incorporated village in a column separate from that containing a list of the property in the town not included in such village, and shall also place on the assessment roll the names of all persons liable to pay tax who are not residents of such village, and the board of supervisors are directed to levy a tax of $1 on each person liable to poll tax as thus indicated; but this tax shall not apply to assessments made for damages and charged for laying out or altering any road or for erecting or repairing any bridge in such town. The amount of such tax shall be determined by the commissioners of highways and the town board, who shall certify the same to the board of supervisors, the same as any other town charge. The clerk of the board of supervisors of each county containing a town which has voted for the money system shall on or before the first day of January of each year transmit to the state controller a statement certified by him and signed and verified by the chairman of such board, stating the name of each town so voting, and the amount of money tax levied therein for the repair of highways during the preceding year. The controller shall draw his warrant upon the state treasurer in favor of the treasurer of the county in which such town is situated, for an amount equal to 50 per cent. of the amount so levied in each town. The county treasurer shall pay out the amount so paid to him on account of the money tax levied in any such town upon the order of the highway commissioners thereof, to be used by him for the repair and permanent improvement of such highways therein, and in such manner as the commissioner of highways and town board may determine. The sum paid by the state to any town by virtue of this section shall not exceed in any one year one-tenth of the per cent. of the taxable property of such town."

The particular change made is the increase in state aid from 25 to 50 per cent. But the general purpose of the law is to insure the making of road improvements and repairing under the supervision of a competent and skilled official. Under the old system of working out the road tax our farmers were apt to do the work at their own convenience. The times they selected were not always the best times for such work and the systems pursued were seldom the same and rarely applied according to effective and accepted plans of road making.

The money system insures the work being done in a uniform way, at the proper time of the year and according to the most modern methods of road construction. Furthermore, the farmers who so desire may receive employment on the work at a fair wage, under proper supervision and direction.

The system was made optional, and while it was heartily indorsed in many sections of the state before the doubling of state aid as provided in this new law, it should now be universally adopted since such a course will be imperative when the extensive plans for our road improvement are carried out.—Daily Saratogian.

Angora Goats as Browse.

A close observer will notice there are many upland or mountain farms that have some pieces of pasture too dry and perhaps too rocky to yield a profit.

The past few dry seasons have brought in bushes, briars and weeds that have robbed the land of tame grass for the making of good quality of butter. Such cheap land pasture is where the angora goat will thrive best, as they prefer bushes and briars to grass, and will thrive and grow fat where sheep will starve and cows cannot live. Angora goats are very prolific, will live about three times as long as sheep and their mohair will bring about three times the price of common wool.—G. H. Bloodgood, in Farm and Home.

Best Liniment for Strains.

Mr. F. H. Wells, merchant at Deer Park, Long Island, says, "I always recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm as the best liniment for strains. WHAT UNCLE HENRY THINKS.

"See here, you boys that's settin' 'round and findin' fault because this here old world is different just now from what it was— Say, ain't you just a bit ashamed? I'd be if I was you! Look up there at the sky; I guess it's still the same old blue: The leaves a-flutterin' on the trees are just as nice and green As any one from Adam down, I'll bet, has ever seen."

"Say, ain't the breeze that's fannin' you as sweet, I want to know, As any breeze that fer your dads or their dads used to blow? The days are just as long and bright as when the land was new; Man's done a lot of things, bug laws! there's lots still left to do— Why, Alexander thought he'd done the whole thing slick and flat. But Aleck left us quite a batch of jobs to tinker at."

"You think you haven't any chance? Well, back in Caesar's day I reckon there were lots of chaps looked at it just that way. But you can bet old Jule himself wa'n't growlin' round because The state of things had happened to be just the way it was! Say, ain't you just a bit ashamed to set there lookin' blue, When every day some new thing's done that you'd of liked to do?" —S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Visit Yellowstone Park

In 1902, Season runs to Sept. 15. This Park is, beyond argument, the Finest Pleasure Ground in the World, as Congress intended it should be. New hotels have been built and the Government has been constructing new roads and greatly improving old ones, so that tourists can visit the Park with more comfort than ever before. There is a gradual increase of visitors to the Park from year to year, and one can remain as long as one pleases.

The hotel rates are $4.00 per day for seven days, $3.00 per day after that time, and stopovers are allowed without increased charge for transportation. The hotels and service are first-class in every particular and modern—steam heated, electric lighted, etc., in appointments.

The geysers never were playing better, the trout fishing never was finer, and the opportunities for genuine pleasure and profit in sight-seeing were never greater than they are in 1902. The Northern Pacific runs its trains direct to the Park boundary near Mammoth Hot Springs, the capital of the Park.

For six cents I will send our "Wonderland 1902" which has a chapter on the Park; for 25 cents I will send "Yellowstone National Park," an illustrated and descriptive book relating entirely to the Park; for 50 cents I will send "Wild Flowers from Yellowstone," "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." WHY DORSEY REMAINED.

By Gwendolen Overton.

THERE was not much excuse for Dorsey. He had horrible warnings under his very eyes. He had, time and again, said what he thought about any American who would marry a Mexican girl. He knew quite well enough that it was a sin against common sense, which carried its own sure punishment. But he married a Mexican; and the best that can be said for him after that is that when the punishment came he took it like a man, and no one, not even his wife herself, ever heard him complain. He had shaken the dice himself, and he abode by the throw.

She was pretty; he was lonely—at least he thought, then, that he was, but later on he discovered what real loneliness is, the loneliness a deux. To be sure, there were American girls in the town, but they were totally impossible, and, whatever else was to be said of Candalaria Soubieta, at least she was uncommonly well-born. Race was in every feature of her pretty little face.

Dorsey had always cherished unmitigated contempt for the Mexican way of making love. Candalaria had not. So Dorsey made love in the Mexican way—and to the uttermost. In his time he had scoffed at youths who would go to the opera and never look once at the stage, in order that they might nearly cut their necks off on their high collars, twisting their heads around to gaze at a novia seated in her parents' box. He did not now. It was fechando, a tribute to his lady, which was expected of him. He had to practice it everywhere, in the plaza, in the cathedral, in the portales. He had to stand on the sidewalk and talk to her through the gratings of a window, or, worse yet, up to her balcony. All the world might both see and hear, but she broke him to the acceptance of that. It was haciendo l'urso, and a custom of the land. Dorsey opined at first that it was a fool costume, but Candalaria did not understand. She explained that he must see her that way or not at all. "But I called at your house," he objected, "before we were engaged." "It is because we are engaged," said Candalaria, "that you may not call now."

A wit has observed that when the irresistible meets the immovable, if the immovable be a woman, the irresistible retreats from business. But only one who has observed a Mexican woman and her ways can get the full force of that. Dorsey relinquished his Anglo-Saxon prejudices against advertising sentiments and affections to an unfeeling world. He made love through the gratings and by twine-graph for the passers-by to see.

Candalaria went upon the principle that experience has taught the woman of her people, and, believing that it was well to get quite all she could in the way of devotion out of a man while he was yet her novio, since none would be forthcoming from a husband, she put Dorsey through the paces very thoroughly. She quarreled with him for no other purpose than to make him sue for her favor and eat humble pie. She was sweetness itself one moment, and abominable the next. She broke the engagement half a dozen times. Dorsey was not a simpleton. He had more than ordinary ability and good sense. With an American girl for a sweetheart he would have put up with no nonsense at all. But he was putty in Candalaria's little hands. If you doubt the consistency of that, just go to Mexico and watch a similar case for a while.

It was, however, after the Senorita Soubieta had condescended from the glory of her high estate to wed a mere Gringo, and had become the Senora Dorsey, that Dorsey's real pleasures began. To start with, he found that he had a family made to his hand. The sisters and the cousins and the aunts of "Pinafor" were nothing to his acquired ones. They came singly, like the animals two by two, in knots and groups. They were without end. All day long they sat about the patio of the little house where he had hoped to have Candalaria to himself, crouched upon low cowhide-and-wicker chairs, wrapped in black shawls, chattering, giggling, gossiping.

Dorsey had an unhealthy feeling that it was very like a harem. But they had to be treated with respect. They were of his wife's family, and it was a family that was little less than sacred in the land. Her male relatives came too. Dorsey loathed them—worse, even, than he did the females of the tribe. (He called them that to his inmost self.) They were as irreproachable and immaculate in appearance as the females were slovenly. But if they were good for any practical thing, Dorsey had yet to discover it. It annoyed him to know that they were dispersing themselves in elegant leisure about his house, drinking copas of his brandy and good wine, while he was at the office toiling for a modest livelihood. And the worst of it was that he might not even indulge in a thorough-going contempt for them. They were much better educated than he was, and not one of them but had two or three languages and accomplishments. Dorsey himself had been developed along other lines, and he was perfectly well aware that they thought him material and crude.

Now, just as Dorsey was in danger of doing something rash and asserting himself, the way was opened to him. It was the chance of his life. He knew it was, the one knocking of fortune at his door. Dorsey was in the railroad and the railroad was, of course, an American affair. He had taken the place of a native youth who had no notion of letting business interfere with the serious matter of pelando pavo—otherwise, parading beneath his sweetheart's balcony.

The place was a good enough one, but it offered no prospects. That which he now saw afar off did. There was a Great Man at the head of things in the railway, who had had his eye on Dorsey for some time. He wrote at this juncture, that he was going down to the town where Dorsey was to have a look at things, and he hinted at promotion and change, and at a billet in the City of Mexico. Dorsey knew, very well, what the billet would probably be. It required other qualities besides business ability—social qualities, as the advertisements say. It meant making one's self universally agreeable, and entertaining a good deal. And it was a very desirable thing.

The heart of Dorsey was filled with joy. So far as he knew there were not more than a dozen or so members of his wife's family in the City of Mexico. And the city was large and cosmopolitan and alive. He dreamed rosy dreams and told them to Candalaria. She was not so pleased as he had expected her to be. She would have to have papa and mama, the primos and primas, and all the rest. But Dorsey dwelt tactfully upon the shops of the Calle de San Francisco, the drives in the paseo, and the theatre and opera, and she was cheered.

Then the Great Man came. He brought with him his young wife. Dorsey looked at her. He had a sickening sense, as he did so, that his own birthright had been something such as she, and he began to have a proper understanding of what he had done. He told the Great Man that he had a wife himself—that he had married a Mexican. There passed a shadow across the august brow. Dorsey saw it. That night, however, he took Candalaria to call at the hotel. There was trouble about it. Candalaria did not want to go. Why should she bother about a Gringa who was nothing to her. She wished to go to the plaza instead, and to hear the band. They would go to the plaza afterward, Dorsey compromised. "With the Gringa? Pues no!" What would her family say to her for picking up any excursionist that came along? Which—knowing Candalaria—was not a promising frame of mind. Dorsey foresaw trouble. And it duly came.

Candalaria took one look at the Great Man's wife, and decided, out of hand, that Dorsey was in love with her. She did not make a scene then and there, but she took what was very nearly as unpleasant a course. She could speak English very passably, but she shut her little crimson lips now and refused to say a word. When the Great Man or his wife spoke to her, she smiled sweetly and shook her pretty head. "No speak English," was the uttermost she would consent to say. Dorsey's rage was—naturally enough, in view of the situation—very great. But it did not blind him to many things, to the contrast for instance, between the smooth brushed locks of the Great Man's wife, and the frizzled strands of those of his own; between the former's supple grace, and the latter's undeniable chunkiness; between the former's chic, and the latter's dowdiness. Candalaria's feet had never looked so like twin flat irons, and never had her waist seemed so square and her skirt so hitched up in front and dragging behind. In the matter of features and of hands, however, Candalaria had the advantage, unquestionably. Only—Dorsey looked at the face which changed and lighted with every thought; and then he looked at the pretty placid one. He looked at the large, firm fingers and palms, and then at the little, white, flacid ones.

When the situation began to get unendurable Dorsey, in reckless despair, decided to brave his wife and all her family, and to take the Gringos to the plaza anyway. Candalaria saw in that not only open disregard of her wishes, an open affront and humiliation, but a ruse to enable him to walk with the Gringa, with whom he was in love, and to exploit her before the town. While the Great Man and his wife went for their hats, Dorsey gave Candalaria a piece of advice.

"You talk to him," he said; "You can do it, and I want you to."

"I am ashamed," she said, "my English is so bad."

"It is not," he contradicted. "It's charming, and I insist that you talk to him."

"Muy bien," acquiesced Candalaria, "very well."

He should have mistrusted that complacency, Dorsey should.

They walked in the plaza. Then they went to the pasteleria for an ice. Then Dorsey invited them to luncheon the next day. They accepted, and he spent the rest of the night and all the morning devising means and pretexes for getting the black-shawled females out of the way. As for the men, however much he might dislike, he was not ashamed of them. He succeeded so well that there were only two aunts and as many male cousins at the board, and the luncheon went off auspiciously. Dorsey wished the Great Man to see his qualifications as a host, as such were of importance in the post in view. There was only one drawback, which was that Candalaria—having decided that her husband was talking to the Gringa a great deal too much—forgot her English again, and sat in smiling and shrugging stolidity.

After the luncheon, the Great Man drew Dorsey aside, as they smoked their cigars. Dorsey felt that the moment had come.

"Charming little home you have," said the Great Man, glancing about the flowered patio. "A charming wife, and a charming home. What fellow could ask more?"

Dorsey hazarded the opinion that the town, however, was rather dead. The Great Man was a student of the poets as well. He resorted to poetry:

"Death is the end of life; ah, why should life all labor be?"

And by way of illustration he puffed lazy whiffs of smoke at the flowers of the jasmine vine.

"A man could not ask for nearer heaven than this," he said.

Dorsey wondered if this were just bluff—or— He whipped himself up to the scratch, and said something about the ineradicable American love of work for its own sake.

"When," observed the Great Man, "you have reached my age, you will be content enough to rest."

Then he drew out his watch. They were leaving on the afternoon train for the city, his wife and he. The senora would excuse their haste.

When they had gone Dorsey took Candalaria into the house. He stood in front of her with his fists clenched and his jaws set.

"What," he asked, "did you say in the plaza last night?" It was the only chance she had had. "Don't lie to me. I'll ask him if you do."

Candalaria's crimson lips parted and curled up in a sneer. "Why should I lie? I told him that I would never live in the city because there were too many political people and vulgar Americans there."

Dorsey's jaw was not set now. It dropped. "When you knew that he had come to ask me to go! When you knew that I wanted to—" he said. The lips curled a little more.

"When I know," she mocked, "that you wanted to be near your Gringa love—"

She threw back her head with a laugh. Dorsey stood and looked at her for a moment. He was a little dazed. Then he went out of the room.

He was down at the station to see the Great Man off. A mozo followed him, bringing a tribute of flowers. The Great Man stood on the rear platform of his private car—the private car of which Dorsey himself might, with another ending, have had the use. As the train pulled off he waved his hand, and there drifted back to Dorsey amid the rattle and the noise, as the very voice of Opportunity itself, a faint "Good-by."—Gwendolen Overton, San Francisco Argonaut.

Good at Lumber Figures?

There are a great many people who take pencil and paper and figure out the cost of things so they know exactly what they're paying out and how much they take in. It's a good plan?

How many times you need lumber to erect out buildings, make corn cribs, repair stalls, bridges, make grain bins etc. You need the most for your money? The next time you come to Auburn for lumber, make out a list of things needed. Take it to all the other yards, get their prices—then bring it to us and see if we can't give you lower prices on the same quality without knowing the other peoples' prices.

These Constant Railroad Rumors.
AUBURN BULLETIN.

The promoters of the New York, Auburn & Lansing railroad, the road that was planned to run over the road bed of the old Ithaca, Auburn & Western road and was generally called the Genoa road, have received a communication from the powers that be of the New York Central that is quite the reverse of a communication they expected to receive. These promoters succeeded in interesting officials of the Central in their project and when Chief Engineer W. J. Wilgus was here a couple of months ago he gave an audience to several people interested. The result was that Central engineers surveyed the proposed route and reported back to their superiors. Now the promoters are in receipt of a letter from the Central people declining to have anything to do with the plan. The letter states the route is a good one and the scheme is feasible but it is not the policy of the Central to build new lines to come in competition with those of the Lehigh Valley where the Lehigh people are opposed—and the Lehigh Valley people are certainly very much opposed to the New York, Auburn and Lansing proposition.

In this connection comes the following from the Ithaca News: "Whatever doubt there may have been in the minds of Ithaca promoters of the scheme as to whether or not a trolley line would be built from this city to Auburn has been removed by yesterday's developments. J. E. Brown of New York, representing a large amount of capital, was in the city yesterday and in company with Sherman Collins and Charles H. Blood drove over the route of the proposed road. They were met at Lake Ridge by the directors from the Auburn end of the route. Mr. Brown was in the city to inspect the road in regard to its paying qualities and will make a report to the bankers and capitalists in the metropolis who have been interested in its advancement. It depended upon Mr. Brown's decision whether or not these men would invest their money in the new enterprise. After riding over the route and thoroughly looking into the project Mr. Brown decided that it is a good undertaking and announced that the money would be forthcoming. This ends all doubt as to the possibility of building the trolley line and Sherman Collins will go to New York next Tuesday to negotiate for the construction. After the final survey has been finished the construction of the road will be rushed with all possible speed. It has now been definitely decided that the new road will take the upper route from Estey's to this city and will connect with the Ithaca trolley road on Cornell Heights. The New York capitalists will cash all the bonds for the road. A small amount of the stock is to be sold along the route but it is thought that there will be no trouble in disposing of it when the work is once begun. The right of way is all secured."

This is all very nice, but if the Lehigh Valley people get those New York capitalists up in a corner and pick their pockets (as happened to all those rich men Br. Roblee had on hand) then what? Br. Roblee had a lot of capitalists, you know, who were just dying to put up the cash, don't you know, but the Lehigh Valley people wouldn't let 'em, don't you see.

Action Brought for $5,700.

Ebenezer Spafford resides in Locke and last fall he attended the Moravia town picnic or at least started for there, when he was run into by

A new building to be added to the rear of our store will oblige us, while work is going on, to remove goods to the front, where there is not sufficient room to display them. We have decided to have a special sale including goods from all departments, and will offer them at prices which we hope will attract attention.

Without going into the detail of quoting prices, we invite you to visit our store and trust the prices which the goods are marked will induce you to become purchasers. Special sale opened Wednesday morning.

Howard Adams of Moravia, who, it is claimed, was running horses with a man named Brown. Mr. Spafford was tipped out, his leg broken and he was otherwise injured, and his recovery is very slow. Accordingly he has brought action against Adams for damages as follows: For all ailments and injuries $5,000; for being confined in bed three months and loss of work $500; for expenditures in trying to get well, $200. Total $5,700. George W. Benham was appointed as guardian of Adams who is under age.

Died in Moravia.

Thomas J. Webster died at his home in Moravia last Thursday evening, aged nearly 60 years. He was a well known veteran of the civil war, and for years had been associated with the business interests of Moravia. Beside the widow he is survived by seven daughters, seven sisters and two brothers. He was a native of Auburn and the son of the late Nathan Webster. Interment was at Indian Mound, Moravia.

War is a terribly expensive diversion. Just what it has cost England to subjugate the Boers is not yet known. The inquiry now pressed in that country is to learn what has been the money expenditure and how long the onerous war taxes must be borne. But the money expenditure will not by any means cover the total cost, which must include the sacrifices of human life and the destruction of immense values which do not figure in the government budgets. Among these last were the vast business operations in and about Johannesburg, and Cape Town, which were arrested or altogether demolished and which must be restored at heavy cost. These losses have extended beyond the two peoples directly involved in the war, and their effects are felt throughout the civilized world. The prediction of Oom Paul Kruger, that the expense of conquering the Boers would astonish the whole world, has been verified.

CHRISTIAN SMITH, the oldest locomotive engineer in the country, lives near Harper's Ferry in Maryland. He ran the first engine on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at a speed of six or eight miles an hour, which was considered rapid in those days. Wonder how the old fellow would like to ride from New York to Chicago, at the head of the new Twentieth Century Limited, making the distance in twenty hours.

In Memoriam.

Eugene John Hale was born in Pennsylvania in September 1866. He was left an orphan at an early age, and his early life was one of hardship and toil. In 1889 he came to Scipio and worked at farm labor. He married Anna Parker in 1890, they have one child, Avis Hale. He became a member of Scipio Tent, No. 224, Knights of the Maccabees, in September 1896, and has been a consistent and faithful member since that time. He died at Genoa on the 27th, day of June 1902, and was buried in the Scipio Rural Cemetery on June 30. The members of the Scipio Tent attended his funeral, and at a special review held immediately after, adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved—That inasmuch as it is the will of our Supreme Ruler, that our friend and brother, Sir Knight Hale should go from amongst us, and we are grieved because we shall meet him no more on earth, yet we will bow in humble submission. It remains to us who are living, to so live that we too may be prepared for the coming of the day of fate, and neither be surprised, nor leave our duties unperformed; to draw more firmly our fraternal ties, and recognize more fully our dependence on our Creator. To the widow and orphan of Sir Knight Hale we extend assurances of our deep and sincere sympathy and sorrow, and that we shall be always ready to fulfill our obligations to the dependents of a deceased brother.

Married At Scipio.

Miss Anna May Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Murray, of King Ferry, and Dr. Traiton Leroy Hatch, who recently retired from the surgical department of St. Joseph's hospital, Syracuse, were married at St. Bernard's church, Scipio, on Monday by Rev. Hugh Rafferty. The bride was for a time in the training class for nurses connected with St. Joseph's hospital and there met Dr. Hatch. They will reside in Union Springs where Dr. Hatch will take up the practice of his profession.

For Assaulting His Wife.

Edwin R. Myers was received at the county jail Tuesday evening to await further examination on the charge of assault, second degree, which examination was continued before Justice Hitchcock, who committed him, at Venice Wednesday. The complainant in the case is Minnie A. Myers, wife of the defendant.

Five To One Against.

A certificate showing the result of the recent election held in the town of Locke at which the question of the adoption of the money system of highway labor was voted on affirmatively, was filed in the county clerk's office Wednesday. The vote was 122 in favor of the scheme to 28 against it.

—An exchange says that where rural free delivery routes have been established drinking has largely decreased among the farmers, who do not go to the village so frequently as theretofore.

—Mrs. P. B. Hodge favored the editor with a basket of berries which were extra large and of prime flavor. They would be very hard to beat, but anyone who wishes can try, of course.

—The meeting last Thursday of the Genoa cemetery association was quite well attended, and the motion to incorporate the association was carried. The ground will be known as Sunnyside Cemetery.

—It is understood that a new order has recently gone into effect under which the post-office department will pay indemnity for the value of lost or destroyed domestic registered mail matter not to exceed $25 in any one case. The limit heretofore has been $10.

—When it rains easy it often rains hard.

—The time for summer outings is now at hand.

—Arthur Mead and wife were at Auburn Monday.

—Smith Murphy and family of Centralia, Pa., are guests of relatives in this vicinity.

—The days have already begun to shorten although the difference is not yet perceptible.

—F. W. Miller visited the county seat on business Monday. Frank Starner was also there the same day.

—The man who always says, "is this hot enough for you" has had a well earned vacation so far this season.

—Dr. F. M. Willis has sold his property at No. 912 North Aurora street to Louis Relyea for $3000.—Ithaca News.

—There is prospect of Ithaca's securing a big lace factory. A New York manufacturer is looking over the ground to decide the feasibility of the location.

—A pear tree in Mrs. Martha Gilkey's yard was last week in bloom with second growth blossoms. The tree was blasted by frost early in May, but does not, apparently, propose to give up fruit bearing because of one frost.

—John Hale passed away early Friday evening after enduring the pain and suffering of a long illness. The funeral service was held at the Scipio Baptist church Monday afternoon: interment in the Scipio rural cemetery.

—Clark Patchen of Sempronius was in town Tuesday, enroute to take charge of G. W. Atwater's farm work for a time. Mr. Atwater will look around a bit in the interest of his candidacy for school commissioner. We see no reason why he should not receive the nomination for this office.

—It is stated that the Manure Spreader Company of Newark Valley is about to move its factory to Cortland and has rented the buildings formerly occupied by the Howe Ventilating Stove Company, in Elm street. This is the company in which Charles Johnson is a partner and superintendent.

—Lew Carr, the Toronto third baseman, who was hit in the head by a pitched ball about three weeks ago has so far recovered as to be able to play again. His brother, Hart, is doing some great batting for Jersey City. The Carr boys formerly played with the Moravia team.

It pays to feed your live stock an abundance of good food. It will pay you equally well to feed your plants Armour's Animal Fertilizer. They need it.

—Our collector was reading the paper last week and seeing that a man fell 25 feet without injury, he remarked that it ought to have jarred about $3.15 out of him anyway.

—Mrs. Dr. Slocum remains about the same; however a slight change in her condition has apparently been in favor of her recovery, which all hope will soon be announced.

—Rev. Mr. Eddy, an Auburn minister, at the children's day exercises of his church said he would give a thousand dollars for a nice little girl. The next day a man called on Mr. Eddy and took him a pretty little girl which suited him exactly, and he will care for the child as his own. It does pay to advertise.

A. E. Trea, the optician, will be at Dr. Skinner's office next Friday, prepared to treat correctly and scientifically all eye defects. His visits hereafter will occur on the second Friday of each month.

—The engagement of Miss Charlotte Johnson, of Nichols, to Ralph Atwater, of Atwaters, was announced Monday, the marriage to take place early in August. Miss Johnson is well known in this city having graduated from the High School in 1900. Mr. Atwater also graduated from the High School in 1900 and is a member of the class of 1904 in the University.—Ithaca Journal.

—Ward Hussey met with a very unfortunate accident at the creamery Friday morning. A bottle of acid used in testing milk was accidentally tipped over and in trying to save the bottle the boy was badly burned by the acid which fell upon him. His face was badly burned, and his hands also, but hopes are entertained that no scar will remain after the wounds are healed.

—On Monday morning the work of remodeling the H. J. Bool & Co., store in East State street will begin. For the past two weeks the firm has been conducting a discount sale in order to get rid of the greatest part of the stock so that the carpenters would have room to work in. As the building now stands the company has a very limited amount of space. The improvements will be quite extensive. The third story will be extended and a fourth story will be built in addition. This will afford more than twice as much store room.—Ithaca Journal.

FEW GOT HIS AUTOGRAPH.

Prince Henry Disappointed Many of the Friends Who Tried to Get His Signature.

Prince Henry while here was naturally asked often for his autograph, but it is estimated that not more than 100 persons succeeded in getting it. Most of the requests came by mail.

The prince, who had met the autograph fiends on the other side, decided to give his autograph only to certain individuals. These were the president of the society or club of which he was the guest and one or two of those nearest him at table. To this rule he persistently adhered, states the New York Sun.

At all the dinners at which the prince was a guest in this city, and elsewhere requests for his autograph were sent to him in large numbers, most of them in notes addressed to him through the presiding officer. Not a few of these requests were made personally.

The prince always took pains to inform those who presided at the dinner of the rule he had made, and left it to him to explain it to the applicants. In accordance with the rule he made, for himself he always wrote his autograph on the menu card of the presiding officer and of those nearest him at table, sometimes extending it so that perhaps five or six persons had the favor shown to them at the head table.

Had he complied with all the requests made of him, it was said by a person who was with him and knew about his mail, he would not have had time to do anything else throughout his visit but write his signature.

SUFFERER SETTLES FOR FIRE

In Europe the Law Holds to Account, Persons Whose Carelessness Is the Cause.

Fire Chief Dutton, of Washington, was seated in his office a few days ago when he received a report of a fire. The blaze had been a disastrous one and the chief was naturally interested in the matter of its origin.

"Does the report state that an overheated stove caused the fire?" he inquired.

"I think it does," he was informed. "It's a pretty good thing for the owner of the property that he lives in the United States," added the chief, "and not in one of the foreign countries. If he lived in Germany, for instance, the fire would prove rather expensive for him."

"Why so?" he was asked.

"He would have to pay the expense of the run made by the fire department," the chief explained, says the Washington Star, "and unless he paid the money the amount would be charged as a lien against his property. Such is the law in several countries. The law holds to account in this way all persons whose carelessness or negligence causes work for the fire department."

RED CAPE IN LION HOUSE.

Something That Always Causes the Keeper a Great Deal of Uneasiness.

Waving a red rag at a bull, according to a keeper at the Philadelphia zoological gardens, is no more likely to make trouble than exhibiting a red rag to a hungry lion. The keeper explained his grievance to a Record reporter.

"I shall be glad when that youngster gets out of here," he said. "Notice how uneasy the animals are? It's that red cape she's wearing. Feeding-time is a long way off, but that cape looks enough like a piece of raw meat to get the animals excited."

"Watch that old lioness follow the youngster along the front of the cage. You would think she was going to jump through the bars. That girl has been all along the row and has got the whole house worked up. Whenever the animals are hungry a red object sets them going. Listen to the snarling! If that red cape hadn't come along they'd be taking things easy, waiting for dinner-time, but now they'll chafe and fret and work themselves into a fit."

"It's always that way when people wearing something red come through the house."

The Letter R in Massachusetts.

One of the things a westerner misses in Massachusetts is the letter R. A teacher in one of the schools near Boston was conducting a class in spelling. The exercise consisted in writing down sentences read aloud by the teacher. "Mistah Mo'se went to Bavston," said the teacher. The little girl from the west set it down, "Mr. Moss went to Boston," and couldn't understand why she was credited with an error in the marking of her paper later in the day. The little girl has been all but mobbed by her schoolmates—in the cheerful way of these young savages everywhere—for using the short O, the final G and the round R, and she doesn't know whether to surrender for peace, or to stand for her American right to give correct utterance to the language of the country. One of the teachers did try to assimilate the R. She even insisted that her pupils should use it. You must say "moth-er," she urged. "Moth-er," lisped the urchin addressed. "Theah, that's propah," said the teacher, approvingly.—National Magazine.

No Wonder.

A few years ago a rich merchant, as a reward for long service and faithful attention to duties, released his head clerk from his ordinary pursuits and sent him into the country to manage a large farm which had been neglected and the finances of which were in a bad way. The next morning in company with a friend, the new manager was looking about round the fields and meadows when he perceived one of the laborers sowing wheat. "Ah," exclaimed he, "no wonder Mr. W— complained of mismanagement and waste. There's that man actually throwing away corn. I shall have to put a stop to that."—London Tit-Bits.

Sure Not.

Customer—Why do you advise my giving a bald-headed man a brush and comb for a present?

Clerk—Oh, I know he'll appreciate it. He'll never part with it.—Baltimore World.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 23rd day of June, 1899, executed by William A. Tallman and Maude Tallman, his wife, of Auburn, N. Y., to John M. Brainard, its trustee, &c., of the same place, with mortgage recorded in the office of the Clerk of the County of Cayuga in Liber 196 of Mortgages, page 55, at 10:10 o'clock in the forenoon of the 24th day of June, 1899, which said mortgage was assigned by the said John M. Brainard to Frank M. Leary, by him to F. Edwin Parker, and by F. Edwin Parker to Carlton A. Porter, Jr., who is now the owner and holder thereof; and whereas, the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, with interest thereon from the 23rd day of June, 1899, which amounts to two hundred and seventy-seven dollars and seventy cents, which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage. Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, as aforesaid, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described at public auction, at the front door and steps of the Court House in the Town of Auburn, N. Y., on the 16th day of August, 1902, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day. The said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that tract or parcel of land, situate in the Town of Scipio, County of Cayuga, and State of New York, being part of lot number thirty, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the northeast corner of schoolhouse lot at the center of the highway, thence east one chain; thence south two chains and forty-eight links to land owned by John E. Smith; thence west to said schoolhouse lot; thence to the place of beginning, containing one quarter of an acre of land, more or less. Also that other piece or parcel of land lying in the Town of Scipio, being part of lot number thirty in said town and bounded as follows: Beginning at the center of the highway at the north corner of land sold by John E. Beardsley to Thomas Smith; thence south two chains and forty-eight links; thence east four chains and forty-eight links; thence north two chains and forty-eight links; thence west along the center of the highway to the place of beginning, containing one acre of land and being the same premises conveyed to said William A. Tallman by deed from Parlo T. Tallman and wife, recorded in Cayuga County Clerk's Office in Book 108 of Deeds at page 64. Dated May 19, 1902.

A MODEST HERO.

How A. J. Weaver of Wichita, Kan., Captured Aid-de-Camp of Gen. Stonewall Jackson.

Very few people know that Wichita has more heroes of the civil war than probably any other city of its size in America. There are at least a dozen old soldiers in town who played important parts in that memorable struggle. It is said that the famous confederate chieftain, Stonewall Jackson, was defeated but once in battle, and that was by Gen. James Shields. It was A. J. Weaver, of Wichita, who captured Stonewall Jackson's aide-de-camp, says the Eagle, of that town. He is one of the most modest old soldiers. It was at Winchester, a battlefield associated with the name and fame of Sheridan. The confederates were behind a stone wall and giving the union soldiers a hot time. Capt. Weaver's regiment, the One Hundred and Tenth Pennsylvania, got an order to march obliquely across an open field, and was suffering severely, when Mr. Weaver ran up to the colonel and suggested that the movement was a mistake. "Thank you," said the colonel, who immediately ordered a forward movement and a charge upon the stone wall that sheltered the confederates. Capt. Weaver led the charge and was the first to get over the stone wall that sheltered the confederates. One man was shot dead on the right of him and another was shot dead on the left of him, and Capt. Weaver was shot on the top of the head. He stumbled over the stone wall, but recovered in time to shoot a confederate captain through the forehead. Two confederate officers were on horseback in an open space, trying to get away.

"HALT! OR YOU SHALL DIE."

"Halt!" said Capt. Weaver, "or you shall die."

They halted. Capt. Weaver took their swords and placed them under guard. One of them proved to be George D. Jenkins, aid-de camp to Stonewall Jackson.

Capt. Weaver admits that he was scared that day. Men fell about him in every direction. He sought the shelter of a tree at one time and was unconscious for several minutes. He had fired 35 shots without knowing it. He had that many in his pocket, and when he returned to consciousness he had none. "And I didn't have any holes in my pocket, either," adds Capt. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver recently returned from a four months' visit in the east, where he visited at many points in Pennsylvania and Ohio. He spent a day at Gettysburg, where his old regiment distinguished itself, and tells many interesting stories of that battlefield. At Harrisburg he visited the legislature while it was in session and found that in the matter of appearance and general intelligence the average Kansas legislature is far superior to it. Although the Pennsylvania state house cost $4,000,000 it is a barn compared with the Kansas state house. He rubbed it in on everybody he met in comparing the east with Kansas, and telling them how far Wichita was ahead of the eastern towns. Capt. Weaver says he couldn't live back east now.

Uncle Sam Went Everywhere.

A German soldier belonging to the Fifty-second regiment, New York volunteers, who was wounded in the battle of Chancellorsville, Va., and left on the field, afterward related his adventures to the colonel. When the tide of battle had swept past the spot where he lay a confederate soldier came to him and took away his canteen, haversack, rifle and accoutrements and finally demanded his coat and shoes. At this the New Yorker at first demurred, but was forced to submit. Thereupon ensued this conversation: "Where do you belong?" asked the confederate. "To New York," was the reply. "An' what are you doing down here in Virginia?" "Well, I comed down here to fight," said the unlucky New Yorker. "To fight, eh?" said the Virginian. "Why don't you fight in your own state if you want to fight. What business have you here in Virginia?"

The question might have been a poser for some, but the brave German replied:

"Well, I fight mit Uncle Sam, and Uncle Sam he goes eferywere."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

STORY OF GEN. SMITH.

Something About This Soldier in 1861—Not in the Blood to Be Cruel.

"It was not necessary," said the captain to a Chicago Inter Ocean reporter, "to restrain the boys from cruelty. It was not in the soldiers of 40 years ago to be cruel. I served from first to last in the same brigade with Gen. Jacob H. Smith, now in the Philippines. He was an Illinois boy and I was an Ohio boy, but we both enlisted in the Second Kentucky volunteer infantry, mainly because it was reported that Maj. Anderson, just arrived from Fort Sumter, was to command the brigade.

"Our first experience of war was in the mountains of West Virginia, but our first great battle was Shiloh, where Capt. Smith was left on the field wounded. He recovered rapidly, however, and was soon with his company. At Stone river, I saw that brigade meet the charging lines in a crash well calculated to develop all the ferocity in soldier nature.

"I remember that as I looked at the faces of our men as they went over the first line and into the second, I had a feeling of dismay at what might happen. Every face was ablaze with fury, and the men, as they sprang forward into the melee, looked like so many demons. That was a time for cruelty. That was a time for brutal thrust and merciless stroke, but in an instant, it seemed to me, 200 or 300 confederates threw down their rifles, unbuckled their belts, and threw their cartridge boxes to the ground, and there, in the midst of the battle, I saw our men offer their canteens to and shake hands with the men who, ten minutes before, they had been striving to kill.

"Scenes similar to this occurred a score of times in our fighting experience. There were brutal men, probably, in every company, but they were in as great disrepute in the army as they would have been at home. The prevailing spirit of the volunteer officers who went into the regular service in 1865 and 1867 was humane. When they went west to fight the Indians they found a cruel, brutal enemy, and serious accusations were made against some of the superior officers because they ordered Indians on the warpath shot on sight, the critics forgetting that to be on the warpath put the Indians in the position of an active and aggressive line of battle.

"The volunteers who did not go into the regular service were less given to the holding of animosities than civilians. This was illustrated in 1865, when the confederate armies were going to pieces, and when it was understood on both sides that fighting meant loss of life, without promise of any good result. In those months while the union cavalry was raiding districts still occupied by confederate troops, it was not uncommon for a battalion in blue to meet a battalion in gray and hold a parley as to what ought to be done under the circumstances.

"More often than otherwise the men in blue said to the men in gray: 'Now, you boys go home and mind your own business. We will shut our eyes and go west while you go east.' If a vindictive spirit had prevailed there would have been a fight every time men in gray caught sight of men in blue; but the fact is, there was not. There was a good deal of talk then that the war was not over by any means; that the southerners were too sore and too bitter to submit; that the commanders of armies might surrender, but the men who had done the fighting would still continue to fight.

"Soon after I left the service I was in the reading-room of a hotel in Louisville, where a number of ex-confederates were talking over the war. A man who seemed to be irreconcilable said: 'I tell you, boys, the war isn't over. The fighting will still go on.

There has been a good deal of fighting, I know, but there will be more of it. You will see that the men who wore the gray will never submit.' A veteran of the confederate service who had lost an arm and who had a saber cut across the face, turned and asked: 'Where did you do your fighting, my friend?' The irreconcilable answered that he was not in the southern army; that he lived in Indiana, but that he had always sympathized with the south.

"The hard fighters who had worn the gray turned their faces and listened respectfully to his wrathful words, and to his prophecies of continued guerrilla warfare; then the man with one arm made answer: 'While we were fighting, you did the sympathizing. Now we are done fighting and you are about to begin. You may do the fighting and we will do the sympathizing, but so far as we are concerned, the war is at an end for ever and ever.' That was the spirit that brought the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray into fellowship here in Chicago, down in Vicksburg, and at Chickamauga.

Wont Follow Advice After Paying For It.

In a recent article a prominent physician says, It is next to impossible for the physician to get his patients to carry out any prescribed course of hygiene or diet to the smallest extent; has but one resort left, the drug treatment. When medicines are used for constipation the most mild and gentle obtainable, such as Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, should be employed. Their use is not followed by constipation as they leave the bowels in a natural and healthy condition. For sale by J. S. Banker.
