We Trust Doctors

If you are suffering from impure blood, thin blood, debility, nervousness, exhaustion, you should begin at once with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the Sarsaparilla you have known all your life. Your doctor knows it, too. Ask him about it.

You must look well after the condition of your liver and bowels. Unless there is daily action of the bowels, poisonous products are absorbed, causing headache, biliousness, nausea, dyspepsia, and thus preventing the Sarsaparilla from doing its best work. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. Act gently, all vegetable. The dose is only one pill at bedtime.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass. Also manufacturers of HAIR VIGOR, AGUE CURE, CHERRY PECTORAL.

Psychic Research.
An organization has been recently incorporated in New York city under the name of the American Institute for Scientific Research, for the purpose of organizing certain scientific investigations while it conducts in one of its fields a system of philanthropic work. It is not to be associated, says Weeks' Progress, with any form of teaching or propagandism, whether philosophical, scientific or religious, but is modeled after the Carnegie institution, excepting that it will be limited to two distinct classes of phenomena. The two fields comprehend abnormal and alleged supernormal psychology, or psychic research. It is maintained that it is high time that these fields should receive the attention of the scientific world in some other manner than mere recognition. The plan of the new institute has the indorsement of a number of the leading psychologists of the country, nearly all of them connected with the universities of the country. As soon as possible the institute will see that a proper clinic for the study and therapeutic treatment of certain types of functional diseases of mind—insanity, hallucinations, secondary personality and such troubles as may be made to yield to hypnotic suggestion—is provided.

Professional Nursing.
Among the developments and improvements of recent years few have been better or more beneficial than modern methods of nursing the sick. In the good old days of open fireplaces, with tinder and flint in place of matches, when a person fell sick the members of the family did the nursing, and if it was too much for them the neighbors came in and helped. If the sickness was protracted and severe a kindly coterie took turns in sitting up with the patients. All that sort of thing has been changed, especially in the cities and larger villages. Now the hospitals have training schools for nurses, and into them come strong, healthy, intelligent young women, who, after three years' apprenticeship, with plenty of hard work and lots of experience, are granted a graduate's certificate, and they go to the homes of their patrons, taking care of the sick. They do it deftly, acceptably and intelligently. It has come to be recognized that a good nurse is quite as important as a good physician as an aid to recovery. The work is hard, but it pays well, and it attracts some of the brightest and best young women.

Causes of Pneumonia.
Discussing the cause and prevention of pneumonia, the ravages of which are coming to be so serious a matter everywhere, the Pittsburg Gazette says: "As in case of most maladies, pneumonia finds lodging in a debilitated system which has not the power to resist its inroads. But another cause besides physical derangement lies in the overheated rooms of our cities, where humidity is lacking. When we pass out of doors we enter an atmosphere where the humidity averages about 70 per cent., when it might have been as low as 30 in the house or office. This sudden change is a shock to the mucous membranes and induces pneumonia. Thus it is argued that a room where the temperature stands at 65 degrees and the humidity at 66 per cent. is safer and more comfortable than one where the temperature is 72 degrees and the humidity is 35 per cent. Experts claim that attention to this one question of moist air in buildings will do much to reduce the prevalence of pneumonia."

President Roosevelt has departed from the social usages of many years in becoming a dinner guest at the house of the vice president-elect. For 20 years it has been the custom of the president to do no dining out. The regular formal dinners—and very stupid functions they are—have been held during the winter and a few informal and less stupid ones have been wedged in. But President Roosevelt sees no reason why he should be entirely cut out from the good times at other people's houses merely because he happens to be president.

The Orange Judd Farmer, in discussing the latest horticultural freak, the seedless apple, cautions intending growers against paying fancy prices for seedless apple stock, claiming that they are not commercially warranted. While the apples may be seedless, they contain the usual core, or carpels. The blossom end of the apple, instead of being closed, is more or less open, and extends a considerable distance toward the center of the fruit.

It is rumored on the other side that one woman, an American, is making a tour of the countries of Europe, offering $2,000,000 for a king. She will marry any man, a king, who will accept her and her millions. They say she has now come to the lesser kingdoms.

The following is from an essay on the Japanese written in the grammar school examinations in London by a lower school boy: "Until recently the Japanese used to fight with bows and arrows, but now they are equipped with the complete arms of a Christian."

Good is better than evil and cheap, but a good many people want a discount these

The Oyster Problem.
If the treasury department of the United States has its way the oyster, which has never been looked upon as a symbol of industry, will be officially classed as a factory hand, and to the ingenious Japanese will belong the credit of having put the oyster to work. The united wisdom of the board of United States general appraisers has decided that the oyster is not a manufacturer, but the department is not satisfied, and is going to appeal to the learned judges of the United States courts to confirm its view that the oyster is to be classed among the world's workers. The occasion for the raising of this momentous question is the dispute as to the duty which ought to be assessed on certain half pearls from Japan, which the importers claim to be natural pearls, and therefore dutiable at only ten per cent., but which the treasury department declares are artificial and therefore dutiable at the rate of 20 per cent. The pearls are made as follows: The Jap, who, by the way, must be a patient fellow and willing to wait a long time for the wages of his labor, selects his oyster and bores a little hole in the shell. Into this hole he fits a minute plug of mother of pearl with the end projecting a little into the shell. The end of the plug acts as an irritant, and the oyster does the rest. He secretes a fluid, which is deposited in layers around the obstruction, and which in the course of two or three years forms a perfect half pearl. The patient Jap then fishes up his oyster again, prides the shell open and saws off the pearl. If the courts decide that this pearl is a manufactured article the oyster must clearly be the factory hand.

College Slang.
"Now that the college vacations are over," said the man who has several sons in the universities, "I'm just beginning to adjust myself to the real English language again. While my children were home there was much slang talked about the house and I tried to keep pace with it—not to use it, of course, but to understand what it means. The term the boys used the most was the verb 'hop.' Jack would 'hop over to Brooklyn' to see his Aunt Alice, or, it might be, he would only 'hop upstairs.' But it was always 'hop.' Then they were talking about the chance of my oldest son, who is a junior in college, being president of his class in senior year. 'No,' said the youngest, 'Tom can't get that; he doesn't throw out his chest enough.' That meant bring himself prominently before his classmates. Still another term was to 'get pushed back for' so much money, meaning to spend it. But the most remarkable term was that of my daughter, 15 years old, who is at boarding school. She speaks of all her boy friends as 'genties.'"

"Insufferable Barbarism."
The London Daily News prints a letter from a college teacher in Japan in which appears this extraordinary statement: "The Japanese government, finding such numbers of prisoners of war unable to read or write, has issued a decree that prisoners who can read and write Russian must teach those who cannot for two hours a day. Polish prisoners are taught to read and write Polish in the same way." This is insufferable. When a heathen government presumes to find faults and imperfections among a civilized people, a people who have inherited the splendid traditions of Christian enlightenment and stand in the forefront of the world's army of progress, it is time to call a halt. Think of it! A yellow heathen dares to discover that a white Christian can't read and write.

Senator Money tells a story of the tribute a Mississippi minister recently paid to the press. The town in which his parish was located had been visited within a short space of time by several catastrophes, all of which, with harrowing details, had been duly exploited in the local papers. The clergyman was moved to make the misfortunes of his townsmen a subject of prayer. He knelt in the presence of his congregation and began fervently: "O, Lord, doubtless Thou hast learned through the papers of our recent and grave afflictions."

William Welch, of Lempster, N. H., enjoyed Christmas for the one hundred and fourth time, and he will observe his one hundred and fifth birthday anniversary March 29, 1905. He claims to be the oldest member of the blue lodge of masons in the United States. He is enjoying life with good health, eyesight and hearing and still finds great enjoyment in his pipe. He enlisted in a New Hampshire regiment August 21, 1862, and served until discharged in Savannah, Ga., in 1865.

Hudson, Minn., used to have a resident known as "Hod" Taylor, who edited its local paper, the Hudson Star. He had a boy in his office whom everybody in Hudson called "Mose" Clapp. Taylor is now assistant secretary of the treasury and Clapp has just been reelected as United States senator from Minnesota.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by
J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y.
Press Correspondent New York State Grange

PROVINCE OF THE GRANGE.

What Overseer Fuller of the New York State Grange Has to Say.
Overseer George A. Fuller of the New York state grange in his annual report to that body had this to say relative to the province of the grange in political affairs:

Let us confine our efforts strictly to those problems pertaining to agriculture and our own business. If we allow ourselves to be drawn into the disputes and controversies which are vexing other classes and other industries we are getting away from the basic principles of the grange. The Persians have a legend of the discovery of the diamond mines of Golconda. Once Ali Hafed sat with his wife looking out on the river that flowed through his farm. Soon some children came through the trees bringing with them a stranger. In confidence the traveler showed Ali Hafed a diamond that shone like a drop of condensed sunshine. He told his host that one large diamond was worth whole mines of copper and silver, that a handful would make him a prince, and that a mine would buy a kingdom. That night Ali Hafed went to bed a poor man, for discontent is poverty. When the morning came he sold his farm for gold and went forth in search of diamonds. Years passed. Old and gray, he returned in rags and poverty. He found that the peasant who bought his farm was now a prince. One day, digging in the white sand in the stream at the foot of the garden, the peasant saw a shining something that sent his heart to his mouth. Running his hand through the sand, he found it sown with gems. Thus were found the mines of Golconda. Had Ali Hafed dug in his own garden, instead of starvation and poverty he would have owned gems that made nations rich. If we throw aside the opportunities to benefit agriculture at our very doors and travel away into new fields to deal with problems that do not concern us we will discover sooner or later that the opportunity to stand between the task and the world's need comes to us but once and if not improved is lost forever.

FOOD ADULTERATION.

Report of the New York State Chemist to Legislature.

The national grange and many of the state granges in their declaration of purposes each year declare against the adulteration of food products and are seeking legislative means to make such adulteration impossible. Patrons throughout the country will be interested to know that the New York senate committee on health is considering an amendment to the pure food law. State Chemist Wheeler made a report in which he showed that many samples of canned meats and fish were adulterated. Of sixty-nine samples of tomato catsup sixty-three were adulterated. Cochineal was used for coloring purposes. One sample of coffee contained starch. Eight of seventeen samples of cream of tartar were adulterated. Only thirteen out of thirty-four samples of honey were found pure. Twelve samples of lard contained cottonseed oil, while fifty-nine samples of molasses and sirups contained glucose. The outcome of the senate bill against the adulteration of food products will be watched with interest.

Consolidating Rural Schools.

Mrs. T. D. Sanders, lecturer of the Michigan state grange, says: "I believe a trial of consolidating two or more small adjacent rural schools would go much further toward showing the advantages of such a school system than all the preaching and lecturing that can be given to a rural community. What we now want is to try the actual workings of consolidation of district schools. Unanimous public sentiment will not come until repeated practical experiments have been thoroughly tested; then, like rural mail delivery, the experiment will be succeeded by the general use of the system."

A Pennsylvania Plan.

The Pennsylvania state grange has a custom of pledging candidates for congress and the state legislature on important matters of public policy before election. They have a system of interrogating the candidates that works with marked success. It is coming to be known as the "Pennsylvania plan," and other states are adopting some of its features. It seems to be a very effective measure for protecting the farmers' interests in the legislature.

A Good Scheme.

Columbia (Pa.) Pomona grange awards a fine banner at each session to the subordinate grange having the largest delegation in attendance. That grange can retain it until the next meeting of the Pomona, when it is to be relinquished to another grange having more members present unless it can retain it on the same condition, a very good way to get out a large attendance at the Pomona meetings.

Ladies to the Front.

That women are coming to the front in official grange positions in New Hampshire is quite evident. There are now five granges in that state that have practically all lady officers. Twenty-five have lady masters, over half the secretaries are ladies, and 224, or seven-ninths of the whole number, are lady lecturers.

The grange is for the farmer primarily. Keep that fact before the public.

TESTED SOLDIERS' NERVE.

"The Doctor" Tells of a Wartime Experience When the Troops Lay in Front of Thundering Cannon.

"Firing over men with heavy guns," said the Doctor to the Inter Ocean correspondent, "was from the surgeon's standpoint a very interesting experiment. I never saw the experiment tried until after our army had been driven back at Stone river, and when it was proposed then to throw the infantry to the front of the artillery, and fire over them at the attacking enemy. I demurred. The idea was to save the artillery as well as the infantry. The general insisting that when the heavy guns had shattered the enemy's line our own infantry would be in position to finish the work."

"So it happened that the men of our division were formed in line in front of five or more batteries of artillery, ordered to lie close to the ground and await orders. The men could see the confederate line coming at a double quick, and they wanted to know what the damned fool general meant. But no sooner were they down than the batteries opened on the confederates, the shot and shell passing not more than two feet above the heads of our own men. Most of these were stunned by the unusual situation and by the roar of the guns so near them."

"I observed those in my vicinity very closely to note the first effect on nerves. Most of them accepted the situation in good part, and, turning their faces to the ground, waited patiently for the end. On a few the strain was too much, and, while not a shot or shell touched them, they were at the end disabled and helpless. Others seemed dazed and in a state of collapse until the artillery at a signal ceased firing and the order came to charge. Then the men who had seemed to be on the point of collapse went forward blindly but lustily, returning to their senses as they ran. Some of these were in the hospital the next week, and their cases were a mystery to me and were very difficult of treatment."

"I speak," said the Sergeant, "for those who kept their heads and who made no complaint except on account of the burning wadding from the guns or the fiery flakes or sparks that fell in showers on their backs and more often than otherwise burned through overcoat and blouse before they were discovered. The boy's talked about being held at the cannon's mouth, about the surprise that awaited the confederates in front, and as the performance continued longer than they expected, they wriggled from place to place on the ground, doing considerable visiting."

"It seems incredible to me now, but while that bombardment was in progress I received visits from two men of regiments in other divisions whom I had not seen in the course of the war. One of them was an old schoolmate. His regiment had been driven back on our left just as we were ordered to lie down in front of the guns. Noticing the number of our regiment, and, as he put it, feeling a little lonesome, he decided to join us and see the outcome of the new tactics."

"When the firing began, and the smoke from 30 or 40 cannon settled down upon us, darkening the air about us like a cloud, he asked where company C was, and, with his nose to the ground, crept along the front of three companies until he found me. All our faces were black with dirt and smoke, and when my old schoolmate, without looking up, spoke my name, some one said, jocularly: 'What you want, Dirty Face?' and slapping me on the shoulder, said: 'Here is your man.' We lay side by side for what seemed to us a long time, when there came creeping toward us another figure."

"The fellow was coming slowly, his movements in the smoky gloom reminding me of pictures of Indians creeping on an enemy. Like the other, he asked for me, and when I said: 'Here!' he hopped close beside me, speaking only one word, 'Teacher.' I felt, rather than saw, that one of the incorrigibles of my first school had come to me. He made me to understand that it was his private opinion that hell had broken loose and that we were all doomed. Oppressed by this impression he thought he would like to die with somebody who knew him, don't you know? Therefore he came over to his old teacher. After this charge he took everything back about the end of the world and all that, and, so far as I know, is living to-day."

The Number of His Regiment
 By FRANCOIS COPPEE

THE country was magnificent and the tramp was evil in looks. He was one of the vagrants that appear in swarms at the harvest times, but so ugly and suspicious in appearance that he was driven away from all the farms where he asked for work.
 The stick of oak upon which he leaned looked less like an innocent walking stick than a murderer's bludgeon and, stamped on the under side of his coarse blouse, there was doubtless the black, ignoble number of the galley or prison.
 His age? Misfortune knows none. Tall and thin, he walked with the agility of a young man, but his yellow mustache was grizzled and years of military discipline showed in his straight shoulders and erect carriage. The man was following a narrow path between two cornfields, whole high stalks reached nearly to his head.
 He had no idea where the road would lead him. Before him and beside him the golden fields shone in the June sun. Scattered gayly among the waving corn stalks, were brilliant poppies and blue cornflowers where, his note betraying him, the cicada shrilled monotonously. Overhead, the pure blue of the noon sky was unbroken by a single fleecy cloud.
 The tramp rubbed his arm across his wet brow.

The day before, in answer to his horse, pleading question: "Have you a day's work for me," the farmers, after a quick glance at the rough face, had, one and all, replied defiantly: "No! We need no one."
 There were just three sous left in the tramp's pocket. With these he had bought a bit of bread and eaten it as he went along, drinking from the brook beside him.

When night came, a June night, glowing with radiant stars, the outcast jumped a hedge and, his stick for a pillow, slept soundly until daybreak. To-day he had had nothing to eat, but his keenest distress was his lack of tobacco. It was long since he had been able to get any, and the pipe in his blouse pocket was a constant aggravation.

As he plodded through the warm, sweet-smelling fields, the tramp thought vaguely of his dark, horrible life.
 A founding brought up by a charity nurse in the country, he could recall nothing of his early childhood save his terror of the old woman whose hand was always lifted to strike. He had worked with her in the forests, gathering dry wood and rooting in the soft earth like a pig for the acorns that eked out his scanty fare of black bread and thin soup, and somehow, in some way, he had scrambled up to boyhood.

When he was eight the old crone reluctantly sent him to school, where he learned to read and write and count. But his comrades, little peasant boys with red cheeks, full of nourishing soup and cruelty, called him the witch's son and would have nothing to do with him. He returned their hatred warmly and his school life was the scene of constant fighting, battles in which, happily for him, he was almost always the victor.

His wicked old nurse died when he was 14 and the boy would then have starved had he not obtained work as stable lad at three francs a month and the privilege of sleeping in the straw. Hated by his companions, mocked by all the girls about him, passing for an idiot because he was sullenly unsociable, he had yet grown to be a strong, vigorous young man. Then he was seized by the conscript officer and sent to the Seventy-fifth regiment of Infantry.

Those first years in the regiment were his only happy memories. There, for the first time, this parish, this social outcast, learned the meaning of the words equality and justice.
 His uniform might be too thick in summer and too thin in winter, but it was what every other soldier wore; his rations were often impossible to eat, but his were no different from anyone else's; in his barracks, in the bunk next his, slept a viscount who had enlisted after several escapades. Here—what a surprise! one man was the equal of another; and to rise in rank, one virtue only was necessary—obedience.

This much his early training had taught him. More intelligent, less illiterate than most of the blockheads in their red trousers, the man had won his corporal's stripes at the end of his first year; at the end of the second he was a sergeant. Now, when he met them, the privates were the first to raise their hands in salute.

A single night of drunkenness, of folly, and all that he had gained was lost. He had just been appointed sergeant-major. One day, when he had the company's pay in his pocket, three glasses of absinthe, taken one after another in a spirit of bravado and a girl with cruel eyes, had made of him a thief, a criminal.

 From that time on, his life was horrible once more. Bitterly he remembered his shamed attitude before the epaulettes and crosses of the council of war.

Then came the interminable years of service in the African battalion, crushing stones for the roadways beneath a burning sun, tortured by thirst. Out of this furnace and infamy he came forth at last with a heritage of eternal burning thirst and a spirit gangrened to the very core.

There was no further luck for him after that, no chance to redeem himself. No one had thrown him a saving rope, no one had lent a hand to pull him from the mire.
 Seeking a day's work here and there, wherever he could, he had trodden the country roads an outcast shadowed by his past. When his hunger became too keen he committed petty thefts, swiping his way as in Algiers. The rude hand of justice had more than once fallen heavily upon his shoulder.

Two years ago—where was he? In prison. And last winter? Prison again. Now for three days he had walked in the full harvest and not a day's work could he get. His last sou was gone, he had eaten his last crust. What was he to do? What was to become of him?

Presently the tramp paused at a meeting of the roads. Before him was a cross with an image of the Christ roughly carved.
 Shrugging his shoulders, the tramp turned to the left.
 Two hundred yards farther on he saw a rich country house separated by a hedge and a lawn of beautiful green grass from the road. As he approached a lady, in a cool summer dress, came out on the terrace and, called to a little boy playing on the grass with a large Newfoundland dog. The child turned back at her call, and the dog, grown suddenly angry, ran to the hedge and barked furiously at the sinister stranger.

The tramp shook his fist at the great villa, and, overcome with bitter despair, turned sharply to follow a narrow footpath across the fields. It was then that he found himself among the cornfields, his legs aching with weariness, weak from lack of food, alone, lost, desperate.

Suddenly a cock crowed loudly before him. A house was near. The man looked up defiantly. So be it, then. He would go there and beg. If they would give him nothing he would steal. He would even kill.
 Running his finger along the edge of his knife, he tightened his belt and, following a curve in the path, found himself in a narrow farmyard. With frightened cries the hens fled beneath his feet as he strode across to the door of the thatched cabin.

"Hello!" cried the tramp, and after a second's waiting, "Hello!"
 There was no reply. Doubtless the peasants were all at work in the fields.
 With a strong thrust, the man pushed open the door and entered the cabin. The room, the only one in the house, was low, and in one corner stood the bed. In the center stood a table, on which was spread a loaf of bread and a package of tobacco. Opposite the wide fireplace was the heavy oaken chest where every peasant hides his stocking of silver and sometimes gold pieces.

For the first time in his life the tramp had been a housebreaker. Well, he would carry the game through to the end.
 Grasping his knife, he went over to the chest to force it open. But a paper hanging near it attracted his attention. Mechanically he lifted his eyes and read: "Seventy-fifth regiment, Infantry."
 The man stopped short.

It was a certificate of honorable discharge made out to Jule-Mathieu Dubois, corporal in the Second company, Third battalion.
 So he was about to steal from a man of his old regiment! Not of his time, no; the date of the paper was still recent. But no matter!
 His hand wavered; then fell. "Fool!" he muttered softly.

His roving eyes caught sight of the bread and tobacco on the table. That much he might surely have. A man may always borrow from a comrade, may he not?
 He cut the loaf in half, and drawing his pipe from his pocket, filled it. Then he walked quietly out of the house, down the path between the cornfields and passed out upon the high road. As he once more passed the crucified Christ at the meeting of the roads, he looked up and said, with a merry grimace at the corner of his lip:

"It's a pity you didn't serve in the Seventy-fifth, too! If you had you would find some work for me to-night!"—From the French in N. Y. Sun.

Education Above Birth.
 Japan has a proverb which says, "Thy father and mother are as the sky and earth, thy Lord as the moon, thy teacher as the sun." This is the nation that takes lessons wherever they are to be learned, and goes to school at the feet of the western nations in admiration and respect, but without loss of national character. It is significant that people who worship their ancestors and whose emperor claims direct descent from 26 centuries of emperors should possess the motto, "Education is more than birth."—Youth's Companion.

Where the Blow Falls.
 "Our son wishes to marry; do you think he can afford it?"
 "Yes; but I don't think we can."

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS.

The Grange interested in the Education of Boys From the Farm.
 A very important question is this "How can we best inoculate the whole school system with the spirit and the knowledge essential to land culture?" One answer to this question many believe to be in the establishment of agricultural high schools, and, if we mistake not, Minnesota is setting the example in this line of work. According to the New York Tribune, what is wanted is such a modification of our common school system that it shall point toward the farm rather than from it. There really is no innate difficulty in making botany and entomology, agricultural chemistry and elementary geology parts of the school course. Nor is there any reason whatever why a common school education shall not take in the study of birds and their value to the fruit grower. Geography and mathematics do not seem to us any more important studies than those we have named; nor are they any more adapted to the class of pupils found in our common schools. We believe it is true that every child is a born naturalist. He studies nature by instinct. The chief problem is how to provide a class of teachers better equipped to instruct in nature study.

In Alabama it has been determined to have an agricultural school for each congressional district. Several counties thus come together to sustain special schools for teaching the science and art of agriculture. The Tribune is of the opinion that this comes pretty near the solution of the problem, and it seems far wiser to create congressional high schools for the distinct purpose of agriculture than to add annexes to a number of small colleges that are struggling for an existence. The course was to cover three winters of six months each, leaving the student on the farm during the six crop months. It is said that 82 per cent of the pupils remain in agricultural pursuits, while not less than 70 per cent go directly back to the home farm—go back qualified to be interested in farm work and to engage in it with success. One-third of the course of study pertains to those sciences that are closely related to agriculture, one-third to the art and science of agriculture itself, and the remaining one-third covers the usual high school course.

GRANGE TOPICS FOR 1904.
 These Are the Subjects Suggested by the National Lecturer.
 May.—What are the relative merits from cultivation and fertilization derived by growing crops?
 June.—Can improvement be made in the present method of marketing crops?
 July.—What is the duty of the farmer in the management of the affairs of his political party?
 August.—What is the duty of the farmer in the management of the affairs of state or nation?
 September.—What is the duty of the farmer in the management of local affairs, including churches, schools and roads?
 October.—What constitutes the essential features inside the ideal home?
 November.—What are required as the outside attractions of the ideal home?
 December.—What should the different members of the family contribute to an ideal home?

There are many ways of developing an interest in the grange in these topics, but we know of none better than to have a short paper assigned to be read as an introduction to the discussion, and let this be followed by a "question box," the questions having been carefully prepared beforehand and assigned and to be of such a nature as to bring out all phases of the subject under consideration.

The Dominion Grange.
 Dominion grange, Canada, at the annual session held recently, elected as master for 1904 Henry Grose. A feature of the session was the address of Master Jabel Robinson, M. P., who retires after twenty-one years of service. He dealt chiefly with the tariff and trusts and spoke strongly in favor of rural free mail delivery and the taxation of railways.

Strong Grange County.
 The Androscoggin county Pomona Grange of Maine has a large membership. At the annual meeting this year the membership was reported to be 2,636. Maine ranks third in membership in the United States, and over one-tenth of its membership is located in Androscoggin county. There are nearly 4,500 Patrons in that county.

The New York state grange began May 1 to issue a monthly lecturers' bulletin for the benefit of subordinate grange lecturers. It is edited by Frank Shepard of Lawrenceville, N. Y., lecturer of the state grange.

Has your grange ever had a fair? If not, why not? You will be surprised at the amount of stuff one little grange can get together if it tries hard.

Grange headquarters at the St. Louis exposition will be open from Sept. 1 to Dec. 1 and will probably be in the Administration building.

Where you find a well organized and efficient degree team there you will find the degree work rendered most impressively.

Terrific Race With Death.
 "Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and A. E. THE New York World
 THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

The tickets are now made up and the most interesting Presidential campaign the United States has known since 1860 has begun. And it is the most important, too.
 Which will it be, Parker and Davis or Roosevelt and Fairbanks? Nobody knows yet, but the Thrice-a-Week World will tell you promptly, fully and truthfully every movement of a hot and thrilling campaign. The real newspaper now prints facts rather than hopes, and it has always been the effort of the Thrice-a-Week World to tell the thing that has happened exactly as it happened. Thus you can judge for yourself and form your opinion.

There is also a great war going on in the East, where the World has a brilliant staff of correspondents in the field, and their reports are found regularly in the columns of the Thrice-a-Week World.
 The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 16 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the GENOA TRIBUNE together one year for $1.5. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 26, 1905.

The International Railway Congress.

FROM THE OUTLOOK.

Much more than honor to the American railroad world was conferred on the United States when, at the Paris meeting of the International Railway Congress in 1900, the Congress accepted the invitation of the American Railroad Association that the meeting in 1905 should be held at Washington. The previous meetings had been held at Brussels in 1885—when the Congress came into existence as an outcome of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of railways in Belgium—in 1887 at Milan, in 1889 at Paris, in 1892 at St. Petersburg, and in 1895 at London. It was only at the London meeting that American railroad men began to identify themselves with the Congress and with the work which goes on under its auspices between one Congress and the next. Before that time they had held aloof, but they were so impressed with the world-wide usefulness of the Congress that Colonel Haines and his colleagues of the American Railroad Association came back from London in 1895 determined that the Congress should meet in 1905 in this country. The invitation of the American Association was accordingly tendered to the Congress at the Paris meeting in 1900, and was promptly accepted. Honor was then done to the American railroad world; but in honoring the railroad men a real service was at the same time done to the United States, as, consequent upon the meeting at Washington and the tours which followed, railroad experts from all quarters of the globe have been made acquainted with American railway achievement, with the best and most adaptable features of American railway equipment, and with the science and economy of railway transportation as it has been developed in this country. This will all tell advantageously for American trade, and it will also open up new fields of remunerative work for men who have been trained in American railroad methods and practices. It was one of the objects, perhaps the chief object, of the American Railroad Association, in inviting the Congress to Washington and in organizing the Railroad Appliances Exhibition and the tours for visiting members of the Congress, to make American railroad achievement widely known among railroad experts of the Old World; and from this, as well as from other points of view, the Congress at Washington was a complete success. The railroad world had hitherto seen nothing like it, for the attendance was much larger, more cosmopolitan, and more representative than at any of the six preceding Congresses. Between three and four hundred American railroad men were in attendance during the Congress, which lasted from May 4 to May 13, while as regards delegates from overseas, these numbered three hundred and twenty, and included representatives from every country in the world, no matter how small, that is possessed of anything in the way of railways worth describing as a railway system. In addition to the large delegation of American railroad men, most of whom were thus brought into actual touch with the Railway Congress for the first time, Germany, also for the first time, was adequately represented in the Congress; while at no previous Congress were there so many delegates from Great Britain and from British Colonies. In all British Colonies except Canada the railways are owned by the State, and it is doubtful whether at any Colonial conference held in London there were more Colonial railway men in attendance than there were at Washington—most of them as has been said, representing State-owned railways.

There were five sections of the Congress, and in all more than sixty section meetings were held at Washington, each section devoting itself throughout the Congress to a particular department of railway economy. The papers were from experts. The discussion was also by experts, and many of the subjects, especially in the Locomotive and Equipment Section, were of a highly technical character. But there was scarcely a single meeting of a section which did not develop some point of popular interest, especially to a traveling people like those of the United States.

When the Congress came to an end, there was scarcely a phase of railway development or economy which had not been under discussion and debated from every conceivable point of view—American and European. There were many ladies at the Congress, and for them there was a social program nearly as full as that arranged for the Congress itself. Washington is increasingly becoming the scene of great cosmopolitan gatherings. Up to the present it is doubtful, however, whether it has had a more comprehensively interesting or more important cosmopolitan convention than that of the 1905 meeting of the International Railway Congress. The display in the Transportation Building at St. Louis coming as it did so shortly before the Congress, dwarfed the importance of the Railway Exhibition in Monument Park. The most popular feature of the Exhibition was a magnificent example of the Atlantic type of passenger locomotive—perhaps America's greatest contribution to railway science.

Disasters—Preventable and Otherwise.
FROM THE OUTLOOK.

Of the two recent terrible calamities, one was beyond the power of man to foresee or prevent. The little town of Snyder, in Oklahoma, was all but destroyed by a tornado, which killed nearly a hundred people out of its twelve hundred inhabitants, wrought havoc among the frail frame houses, and left in its track a confused mass of beams, roofs, and debris, in which were buried or half-buried, five score of dead, and perhaps double as many injured and suffering survivors. The accounts show that all possible help was rendered with true Western vigor and efficiency by railway officials and workers and by the people of the neighboring country. The terrific force of the tornado is indicated by the fact that piles of wreckage were found fifteen miles from the demolished town. As to the other disaster, that on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Harrisburg, while the exact manner of its happening could not well have been foreseen, it is easy to read in the event a forceful lesson; namely, that explosives in quantities should be handled by railways only in the most careful way, with exceptional precautions, under rigid inspection, and with heavy penalties for violation of the legal restrictions; and that, where necessary, we must have the immediate passage of laws making such restrictions. In this case a car full of dynamite (one report puts the amount at 50,000 pounds) was made up, with thirty-five other cars, into an ordinary freight train. A railroad expert is quoted as saying, "Dynamite is simply classed as slow freight, and is treated just like so much coal, except that a sign is generally put on the car reading 'High Explosives.'" The freight train was suddenly signaled to stop by a shifting-engine (note, by the way, how many railway accidents are caused by the recklessness of shifting-engines at local stations which are using through tracks), and the long, heavy train was "braked down" so sharply that the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth cars were pushed off their track and on to that nearest them. The former of these cars was that with the dynamite, and a moment after it was struck by a fast westbound passenger express. Instantly there was a terrific explosion, and so complete was the demolition of the Pullman cars that it seems almost incredible that any of the passengers should have escaped alive. Some twenty or more were killed, and a very much larger number were seriously injured. Fire almost at once broke out among the wreckage, and the scenes of torture and suffering were heartrending. A curious point in regard to the cause of this accident is that it was the indirect result of a law which was passed for the protection of brakemen on freight trains, or rather of the way in which the railroads sometimes comply with the provisions of this law. It requires that at least fifty per cent of the cars on a train shall be provided with air-brakes. The railroads often meet this requirement by putting air-brakes on the front half of the train only. In this case, when the brakes were sharply applied, the forward end of the train was stopped abruptly, and the latter half of the train with nothing to restrain its impetus, very naturally "buckled." While it is perfectly true that under modern industrial conditions high explosives are a necessity and must be transported by common carriers, it is simply criminal recklessness to carry them in a mixed freight train of prodigious length. The sudden jars and stops of such an unwieldy train threaten disaster to a car of dynamite every minute. Let such extra-hazardous material be carried in special, single cars, with special instructions as to right of way, and, if necessary, at a special rate. In England this course is regularly followed. Passengers have a right to know that they are not constantly passing thousands of pounds of high explosives on a parallel track within two feet of them. If there is not now law enough to insure proper transport and inspection of explosives, the State Legislatures have a plain duty to perform; and in inter-State traffic Congress and the Department of Congress are also responsible.

There has been no formal invitation to Justice Hooker to resign. But consider the amount of money he would save to the State if he did. He can become a hero by preventing the last State Legislature from getting together again.

A MATTER OF HEALTH

W. C. T. U. Institute.

The annual institute of Cayuga county W. C. T. U. was held at Moravia last Thursday and Friday. There was a large attendance of delegates, officers and members, and the institute was a great success. This was made possible in a large degree by the hearty cooperation of the clergy and the members of the W. C. T. U. of Moravia. Mrs. Frances Graham, state president, was the conductor, and Mrs. Lillian Osborn, the county president, presided. Thursday evening Mrs. Graham gave an address on "The Reason Why," which was enjoyed by a large audience. During the evening Mrs. Graham also sang a number of selections to the delight of her hearers. The day sessions were filled with papers and discussions on topics of interest and value to all. The exercises given on Thursday afternoon by the Moravia L. T. L. were worthy of special mention. The recitations and songs were rendered in a highly pleasing manner. The music throughout the institute was very fine. Space will not permit a more detailed account, but one important item must not be overlooked, namely, that seventy dollars was pledged by the County Union to furnish a room at the Anchorage at Elmira, N. Y.

—Miss Lena Goodelle made a business trip to Auburn Tuesday.

—R. W. Hurlbut had business at Auburn several days recently.

—John G. Law was a guest at D. C. Hunter's over Sunday.

—Henry Smith of Lake Ridge was in town one day recently.

—Allen Landon of Poplar Ridge was in town on business Friday.

—W. H. Sharpsteen, Esq., had business at the county seat last Thursday.

—W. O. Andrews has been confined to his bed for several days. He improves slowly.

—Mrs. D. C. Hunter is spending the week with friends and relatives at Moravia.

—Rev. J. C. Long of North Lansing was calling in town on Friday last.

—E. S. Preston, the Ithaca insurance man, was in town on business Tuesday.

—A. D. Adams and wife of Auburn are visiting Fred Wood and family at Venice Center.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Morrison expect to start tomorrow for a visit with their son and family at Amsterdam.

—The author of "John Brown's Body" died last week. This shows how long a man may be alive without anybody knowing it.

—Charles F. Waldo returned to Cortland Monday afternoon after a few days' visit with his mother and sisters.

—A. A. Mastin is preparing to build a cement walk in front of his residence and store. This will be one of the best improvements that has struck the town in a long time and it will be appreciated.

—Two members of the Grange in this town tried the examinations at academy hall Saturday afternoon for the Cornell scholarship in the winter course. The Pomona Grange is entitled to two scholarships this year. The result of the examination will be announced later.

—The band wagon is doing its best to hold up the wrecked sheds in the rear of the old church. It is strange that the folks who shed so many tears when the old wagon rolled out of town at a $60 clip, should so neglect it, now they've got it back.

Bermuda Multiplier Onions at Smith's.

—Commissioner King has been doing some excellent work on the town highways which will surely be appreciated next spring if not before. The section of road near the cemetery has been repaired in a very substantial manner. A wide, deep trench was dug and filled with stone and covered with gravel, and the same process is going on farther east near the schoolhouse. It is safe to wager that the bad sink holes at these points last spring will be missing hereafter. Fred Fulmer is in charge of the work in this part of the town.

—Memorial day will be observed in this village next Tuesday with appropriate exercises and music at academy hall at 2:30 p. m. The G. A. R. respectfully ask that the school children bring flowers and attend the service in a body. Conveyances will be ready after the exercises at the hall for the ride to the cemetery.

Don't forget to go to J. Singer's while in town. That is the place to buy the best hat for the least money.

—On the evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 9, 10 and 11, will be presented at academy hall a drama in five acts entitled "The Ticket of Leave Man" or the experiences of Sherlock Holmes in London. This is an intensely interesting story by Tom Taylor, on which was founded the startling incidents woven into the novels of A. Conan Doyle, and will hold the attention of the audience throughout the evening. There will be numerous tableaux. A splendid cast of characters has settled down to continued rehearsals, intent upon creating the most favorable impression on the opening night, that the capacity of the hall on the succeeding nights may be thoroughly tested. Come early; don't miss this entertainment. Leave your laundry at Singer's.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Tremain are spending a few days with their daughter, Mrs. Ida T. Swift, at Cortland. They will remain over the 30th, that being Mr. Tremain's 87th birthday.

If you want a Rain Coat see Smith and save money.

—S. H. Thompson, a former resident of this vicinity, who now lives near Iowa City, Iowa, suffered heavy loss by a cyclone several days ago. His fine large barn was demolished, his stock killed and the roof of his house blown off. This breeze destroyed buildings along a road for 15 miles, but no people were killed.

—As will be seen by a reprint from the Auburn Journal, work has actually commenced on the Auburn end of the "Genoa" road. A TRIBUNE representative who was at Auburn Tuesday walked down the Central track to see what was being done. He found a dozen section men putting in a connecting switch which was nearly completed. The road bed extended in a curve and was graded for quite a distance, and some ties were laid out in position. The section boss said he had orders from the N. Y. C. to grade 500 feet. The reporter followed along the line as staked out to where it is to cross the Lehigh by a bridge. Capt. Murdock and B. H. Leonard, who were overlooking the construction of the switch, were in high spirits at the state of affairs. Mr. Leonard said that the N. Y. C. had agreed to build the switch and 500 feet of track at the expense of himself and others, and that from that point the work would progress as fast as circumstances would permit. A good heavy rail is being used and the workmanship seemed to be first-class in every way, showing that the switch is intended for permanent use. The strip of land claimed by both parties, was found to belong to a third party by title of a judgment against the I. A. & W. It was assigned to Attorney Aikin and will be sold next month to secure a good title.

Society Notes.
Rev. E. L. Dresser will preach a memorial sermon in the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning and at Five Corners in the afternoon. All veterans and patriotic citizens are especially invited. Services at Five Corners in the evening Sunday school as usual. Prayer meeting on Thursday evening. All are invited.

The regular meeting of Genoa W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. J. L. O'Hara, on Friday evening, June 2, at 8 o'clock. A report of the Institute at Moravia will be given by the delegate, Mrs. Sisson. The honorary members are especially invited to attend this meeting.

Services will be held in the Universalist church June 4 at 3 p. m.

Memorial Day at King Ferry.
Capt. Geo. M. Smith Post, No. 201, G. A. R., will observe Decoration day as follows: At 1 o'clock p. m., May 30, by decorating the graves of comrades. At 2 p. m. will march to McCormick hall to attend the regular Decoration day exercises, consisting of addresses by Rev. Father Nelligan, Rev. Wm. Jacques and others. Singing by the King Ferry choir and music by Streeter's orchestra. A flag drill will also be given by ten children from the Ledyard school.

There will also be the annual union service on Sunday evening, May 28, at King Ferry Presbyterian church conducted by the pastor, Rev. Robt Ivey. Let all comrades make an effort to be present at both of the services.

JOHN BURNS ON DRINK.

What the Member of British Parliament Has to Say to the Laboring Man.

Mr. John Burns, M. P., addressed a large meeting in Manchester recently on "Labor and Drink." The lecture was one of the Lees and Roper Memorial lectures, and was reported by the London Times as follows:

"Mr. Burns said that the drinking habits of the poorer classes had contributed to their political dependence, industrial bondage, civic inferiority and domestic misery. As one bred almost in the slums, who had watched the matter as a county councillor and a legislator, he was convinced on the subject. He described the public house as the antechamber of the workhouse, the chapel of ease to the asylum, the recruiting station to the hospital, the rendezvous for the gambler, and the gathering ground for the jail. There was no compensation in drink.

Dealing with the figures of the money spent in drink, while deploring the immense amount spent in every working family, he answered a recent critic by pointing out that two-thirds of the drink bill was spent by three-quarters of the population, and only half the amount per head was taken by the working classes as was taken by the classes above them. But whether the expenditure was £4 per family or £15 per family, working people could not afford it. As to drink and trade, he said that they were promised from 2d to 2½d per family per week if they would tax bread from abroad. Why not save 5s per week by leaving off beer? Our expenditure handicapped us in the trade battle with Germany and America, because our larger consumption prevented us from spending as much money per head in other directions, and especially on education.

"He concluded a vigorous tirade against drink as the source of all evils by denying that poverty caused drink as much as drink caused poverty, and by declaring himself dead against municipalization as a remedy. It would cause drinking to become a civic virtue and to be regarded as local patriotism."

IN GERMAN PALACES.

Tendency Toward Use of Non-Alcoholic Beverages Is Very Marked.

It is a fact that, in the course of the year, several thousand bottles of unfemented grape juice have been supplied by one firm to the royal palaces in Berlin, Wildpark, Wilhelmhoehe, Cardinen, Homburg, and in the princely house of Plon. It is also certain that the empress has for a long time past only taken these drinks, and that a great many of the court ladies and gentlemen have followed the example of the empress. Prof. Dr. Schmidt, who lately performed the throat operation on the emperor, learned to know these drinks from seeing them on the emperor's table and spoke of it when he returned home to Frankfurt. The kaiser gathered quite a collection of temperance literature and sent it to the minister of war and has ever since encouraged all efforts to promote temperance in the army, and acknowledged its importance for the well-being of the people. It is also worthy of notice that last Christmas Prince Henry presented all in the navy with the temperance pamphlet, "The Poison Tree of the German People."—Dial of Progress.

TEMPERANCE ITEMS.

Boston has fewer saloons than any of the large cities, according to population.

Mortality from cancer is very high in beer-drinking districts of Germany, such as Bavaria and Salzburg.

We can never get the saloon out of politics so long as we get our politics out of the saloon.—Henry Faxon.

The most dangerous saloonkeeper is the one who most successfully conceals that the devil is his business partner.—American Issue.

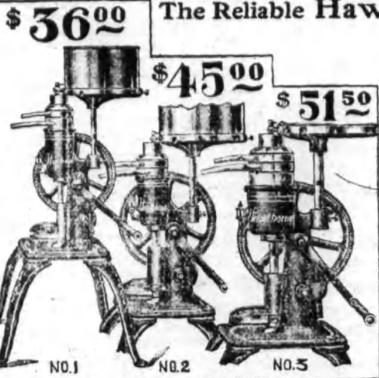

"The Druggists' Circular" says that no physician ever prescribes the minute fraction of a drop of alcohol for a patient which he cannot avoid prescribing if he wants to, because there is now a wealth of other remedies.

The average saloon is an evil place. There is no doubt about that. It takes the bread out of the mouths of many wives and children and compels them to live under conditions unfit for human beings.—Duluth Herald.

The Hon. James Bryce, M. P., has been lecturing before the law school of Columbia university, and in one of his lectures spoke pointedly and clearly on laws regulating the liquor traffic. He declared that by careful experiments and persistence we have in this country gone farther and accomplished more than they have on the other side of the water.

A Doctor's Testimony. A well-known German doctor in one of Vermont's cities bore the following testimony to the liquor traffic under license: "Last year I could collect $250 per month. This year I cannot collect 15c. It is all going for whisky." This fits fair to be the common verdict of physicians, merchants, landlords and tax collectors as saloons continue to exact the money from the pockets of the average man who drinks. How long shall it continue?—American Issue.

Here is a Genuine Bargain The Reliable Hawthorne Cream Separators

Montgomery Ward & Co. Michigan Avenue, Madison and Washington Streets—Chicago

Nobody—not even a manufacturer—ever made prices so low on Standard High Grade Separators as we are quoting now.

Our No. 1 Hawthorne Cream Separator, with a capacity of 250 lbs. of milk an hour, guaranteed in every way, we now sell you at $36.00. It is superior to any other make.

Our No. 2 Hawthorne, capacity 350 lbs. of milk an hour, we sell at $45.00. If it does not satisfy you, send it back.

And our No. 3 Hawthorne, capacity 500 lbs. of milk an hour, for $51.50.

Either size will be sent you on approval and for you to test and try, and if it does not prove to be the very best cream separator you ever heard of, you can return it at our expense, and not be out one penny.

We have sold thousands of Hawthorne Cream Separators—at higher prices than we now offer them—and all have given perfect satisfaction.

You will find former prices at which we have been selling Hawthornes on page 77 of our No. 73 Catalogue, as follows: No. 1, $48.75 (now $36.00); No. 2, $63.75 (now $45.00); No. 3, $75.00 (now $51.50). We have not changed them or cheapened them in quality in any way in order to reduce the price, but have placed a very large order in anticipation of your wants, and in buying by the thousands at one time, have secured a concession in price, which we give you.

The Hawthorne is identical with the cream separator that received the Gold Medal at the St. Louis Exposition last year, in competition with the world. The expert judges acknowledged it to be the best skimmer in the world; easily cleaned; sure to be sweet, safe, and easy to operate. Our dairy manager has made tests with the Hawthorne that show it to leave less than one one-hundredth of one per cent of butter fat in the skim milk in December, and even do better than this during the summer. It will skim cleaner than any other separator at any price, and is, in reality, the same separator, only sold by us under another name, that is usually sold for $65.00 (for No. 1), $85.00 (for No. 2), and $100.00 (for No. 3).

We will gladly send you a full description of the Hawthorne; or we will send you for free examination either size you desire, without advance deposit of any kind, if you follow our directions in "Paragraph 3" on page 3 of our No. 73 Catalogue. But the best plan is to send the cash with your order, get and use the separator, and then decide as to its merits. If you'll take your money back for it, after you've used it, you can have it for the asking.

Now we have made it possible for everyone to own a perfect cream separator. There is no excuse for your doing without, now, or for putting up with an inferior machine any longer. Send in your order today and have the separator to use at once.

CHESS PLAYERS' PERIL.

Case of Champion Pillsbury Illustrates Dangers of the Game.

The recent attempt of Harry Nelson Pillsbury, champion American chess player, to do away with himself while temporarily insane recalls the fact that other noted chess players have lost their mental balance as a result of too close application to the game. William Steinitz, who was champion of the world for twenty-five years, died in an asylum, and another famous player, Paul Morphy, champion of America in his day, was afflicted with insanity. In Mr. Pillsbury's case temporary mental aberration resulted after the performance of a delicate operation at a hospital in Philadelphia, where he was under treatment. When left alone for a moment he tried to jump out of a window, but was prevented from doing so by attendants.

The chess champion is thirty-two years of age and is a native of Boston. He early evinced a strong taste for mathematics and on taking up chess as a boy of sixteen soon developed a great liking for it. In 1892 he won his first important match, defeating John F. Barry, champion of New England. He won the Hastings tournament and the world's championship in 1895. It was the strain caused by blindfold contests which affected Morphy's mental faculties, and such tests of endurance combined with excessive smoking are said to have broken down Pillsbury's nervous system. He has devoted much attention to blindfold chess and often played twenty-eight games of this character simultaneously, it is said. Paul Morphy was credited with only eight.

Save sheep Manure.

No farmer can afford to let any of the sheep manure go to waste, as its fertilizing properties are of the very best, says Farm Journal.

Sheep manure will continue to enrich the ground and show in the crops for a dozen years. Sheep manure is worth the price of a building to preserve it.

Selecting Seed Corn.

After shelling the seed corn better results can be obtained by hand picking it much the same as you pick beans. Throw out all small or inferior grains and save only the plump uniform kernels that are true to the type you consider the model of excellence.

Care of Horses.

We know a farmer whose horses never have sore shoulders, says Farmers Advocate. Every evening after unharassing he washes the horses' shoulders with cold water. This removes the dirt, cools the shoulders and keeps the flesh healthy.

Fertile Eggs.

Fertile eggs should be gathered often, as with a very little heat they begin to incubate. A number of hens laying in the same nest sometimes furnish heat enough to render the first eggs laid unfit for table use.

Tarrentine For Swine.

A little tarrentine given occasionally in the slop is an excellent preventive of disease among swine.

Keep the Hog Healthy.

A hog is a hard animal to cure when sick, but an easy one to keep well with proper care.

Trusses.

We fit trusses that completely reduce the rupture and give absolute comfort. You can turn, lift and squirm when we fit the truss. No charge for our expert fitting. The Sugar Drug Store, Auburn.

Saved by Dynamite.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her." Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and grip. At J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and A. E. Clark's, King Ferry, drug stores. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed; 50c and $1.00 bottles.

Let Common Sense Decide

Do you honestly believe, that coffee sold loose (in bulk), exposed to dust, germs and insects, passing through many hands (some of them not over-clean), "blended," you don't know how or by whom, is fit for your use? Of course you don't. But is another story. The green berries, selected by keen judges at the plantation, are skillfully roasted at our factories, where precautions you would not dream of are taken to secure perfect cleanliness, flavor, strength and uniformity.

From the time the coffee leaves the factory no hand touches it till it is opened in your kitchen.

This has made LION COFFEE the LEADER of ALL PACKAGE COFFEES.

Millions of American Homes welcome LION COFFEE daily. There is no stronger proof of merit than continued and increasing popularity. "Quality survives all opposition."

SONG OF THE PESSIMIST.

Yes, I know th' season's perfect fer us farmers—lots o' wet, An' th' fields is gettin' peppered till they're soaked as they kin get; Heavy snowfalls is perfectin' an' preservin' o' th' wheat, An' th' country is a-prosperin'—y' never seen th' best, But these times is always likely t' precede a duller spell, It's a sartin sign o' sickness when y' feel a' awful well, Low o' wheat will bring down prices an' will make a lot o' toll, An' sich heavy crops as them is mighty wearin' on th' soil! Mills is runnin', wheels is turnin' an' th' wages all is good; Times is boom'n' like th' mischief, Teddy's helped 'em all he could, Can't see nothin' to distress us—felt th' same way once before, An' I learnt it was a token that disaster laid in store, When yer feelin' best, git busy with yer most suspicious look, Fer th' straightest streak o' roadway leads you to th' sharpest crook, Kittle water gits th' stillest jes' before it starts t' boil, An' these awful heavy crops is plum' exhaustin' to th' soil!

A Sociable Bear

BINGO, the best, most accomplished and most human bear that ever lived in Maine, is dead, the victim of a greedy hunter's rifle, and his thick, glossy pelt hangs high in a Bangor market shop, waiting for a purchaser. The death of Bingo has caused sorrow to many who dwell in the wild region about Seboomook Falls, and well it might, for to these mourners, he was, both in youth and in middle age, a sociable neighbor and appreciative friend.

Melville Doughty, better known as "Long Mel," feels especially sad over the loss of his furry friend, for from long experience in forest life and close contact with wild things, he knows that it is 100 to 1 that he will never again meet with such a knowing and sociable sort of bear as the late departed.

"Seems if they might a-found some-thing else to shoot in all this country up here, 'cept that one good, decent bear," mournfully remarked Mel, as he sat on the deacon seat at McLean's camp and added the smoke of his corn-cob pipe to the general fog. "Why, that bear was as good a neighbor's I ever had, an' I've ben livin' in these parts more'n 30 year."

"He was left an orphan when he was just a little cub, an' I found him one day a-suckin' o' his paw at the edge o' the tote road to the falls. Brought him home an' give him some mush an' molasses, an' he sot right up like any child an' in-lyred it, too. When he got some size on him he quit stayin' 'round the camp so reg'lar, an' used to go out foragin' on his own hook. Then he went to dennin', like any bear, which was only nat'ral, but he always was neighborly, an' never seemed to forgit what I'd done for him."

"Member the time well when he fit a lucifer that got into the camp an' would have et up my little girl—fit him an' licked him to shoestrings, too, by gosh. Pulled the same young one out of the lake when it got in over it's head, an' did a lot o' other good turns that I'll never forgit. Did a good many chores, too, around the place. Do you good to see that bear weed his onion patch—jest rasped them weeds outen' the ground with his claws, like a patent harrow. All he asked for his trouble was a dish o' mush an' molasses. Bears is terrible fond o' sweet stuff. But Bingo, he was an honest bear—never stole anythin'. He'd set all day 'side of a keg o' molasses an' never put a paw into it."

"Summer time, Bingo used to go up above the falls an' fill himself with raspberries, an' our little girl would go 'long with him. When he'd got his own fill, he'd turn to an' fill the little girl's pail—could do it quicker'n scat. Ever see a bear pick berries? Well, sir, when it comes to that kind o' business, you an' I ain't in it with the slowest bear that ever wore fur. Nat'ral talent with 'em."

"Bingo, he hadn't no faults but one. He did like likker. Some one down to McNulty's camp learnt him that. He went down there one Christmas an' sot a while with the boys, who were havin' o' a great time. A Frenchman had come over the line a few days afore that with a bag o' morson—that there white rum the Canucks have—an' it was passin' 'round pretty free that Christmas day. One o' the fellers, Jack Kelley, I'm Bangor, he says, 'There's Bingo—what's the matter with givin' him a ball out o' that kag?' So they poured some out in a big tin dipper, an' give it to Bingo, an' cuss me if he didn't swaller it down's though it'd ben molasses syrup. Pretty warm in the camp, with a big fire a-blazin', an' fust thing they knew that morson begun to work on Bingo. 'Fore anyone could move, that there bear up an' grabbed the kag put it to his head an' gulped down 'bout a quart. Then, mister, things begun to hum."

"There was a Frenchman in the crew named Paul Larsen, who thought he could rattle some, an' he'd ben showin' off that afternoon while Bingo was in camp, throwin' everyone he come to. Bingo, he membered this, an' when the morson begun to bile up inside o' him an' he got to feelin' real good an' kinky, he jest raced over to where Larsen was a changin' o' his pants an' grabbed him 'round the belly with both paws. Larsen he yelled for the bear to let go, but Bingo he jest grinned—he could grin an' laugh like anyone human—an' twisted that Frenchman off'n his feet like he was a child, throwin' him on the flat o' his back with a slam that made his teeth rattle."

"Then the crowd they yelled an' laffed fit to raise the roof, an' Bingo, knowin' that was plause, he jest danced a jig in the middle o' the floor, kicked over all the seats and ripped blankets off'n bunks an' fin' chased the cook out to the wangan, cause the cook was a man he didn't like. Hit him over the nose once, 'cause he stuck his head in the cook-house winder.

"Well, sir, the cook he yelled bloody murder, an' shut the door o' the wangan camp after him with a bang an' bolted it inside. Bingo, he jest sot there in the snow, a-waitin' for the cook to come out, an' all the camp crew couldn't budge him. They might a-done it with an ax, o' course, but they wouldn't, 'cause they thought a heap more o' the bear than they did o' the cook, who used to be a barber down to Milo Junction, an' wore striped shirts and put ile on his hair. Comin' on night, an' the men wantin' supper, they had to send two miles for me to come over an' paeerfy Bingo."

"When I showed up that there bear was 'shamed as a boy caught stealin' apples. He come along home all right, an' went to sleep in the corner. For two weeks arter that he went 'round kind o' sheepish, which is more'n can be said o' most men arter a spree. Once in a while since then he took a nip, but never none to hurt, an' he never went near McNulty's camp agin."

"Bingo, he liked music. When I'd get my old fiddle down arter supper an' scratch out the 'Arkansaw Traveler,' the 'Drunk Sailors' an' the 'Portland Fancy' tunes we used to dance to down to Bangor 'fore the town got so fash'nable it forgot how to dance, Bingo he'd set there front o' the fire an' roll his eyes, it made him feel so good, an' keep time with his paws. He liked the 'Arkansaw Traveler' best, an' I learnt him to dance a few steps o' that. He'd git all worked up over it—all played out so's he'd have to take a rest arter it. Then I'd give him a nip out o' my little jug, an' he'd go to sleep an' snore like one o' John Ross's drivers. But he's gone now—dead an' gone, an' things is kinder lonesome up home. I'd a-give the best hundred dollars I ever see to that feller that shot him if he'd a-took some other bear, for the like o' Bingo ain't this side o' Fort Kent."—N. Y. World.

TALES OF SAVINGS BANKS.

Romantic Incidents Which Illustrate Some Peculiar Phases of Everyday Life.

A ragged little newsboy entered a Pittsburg bank one day and boldly invaded the private office of the president, relates William S. Power, in Success Magazine.

"Say, mister," he said, "can I put some money in this bank?"

"Certainly you can," the president answered; "how much do you want to deposit?"

"A quarter!" exclaimed the youngster, pulling a handful of pennies and nickels out of his pocket. The banker took him over to the receiving teller and introduced him with all the deference that he would have shown to a millionaire.

The boy left the city soon after opening the account, but he kept adding to his deposit from time to time, and, as he was naturally bright and shrewd, everything he undertook prospered. He is back in Pittsburg now, the head of a successful manufacturing concern and one of the bank's most valued customers.

A year ago a proud young father out in Michigan sent $25 to open an account for his first-born son, then less than a week old. "The boy'll need it some of these days," he wrote, "and we may as well begin to save for him right off." Six months later a tear-dimmed letter came, asking to withdraw the money, to pay the little fellow's funeral expenses.

A working woman in a little town in New York sent a dollar bill in the name of her daughter, six years of age. "She'll be marrying by and by," she said, "and ought to have something to start life on." That was nearly two years ago, and almost every week since a dollar bill has been added to the account. There'll be a snug little marriage portion for the young lady some day, if nothing happens.

Not long ago a woman living in Illinois sent five dollars, with explicit instructions not to let her "old man" know about it, as "he'd be after spendin' every cent of it for drink."

Twin Lives.

It is wonderful how alike some twins are, not only in feature, but in character. It is seldom, however, that the lives of twin sisters or brothers are so nearly alike as those of Mrs. Mary Sissons and Mrs. Ann Dennison. These old ladies recently kept their eighty-fourth birthday at Arnold, Nottinghamshire, near which they have lived all their lives. The twins were married on the same day by the same clergyman. They married brothers. Both lost their husbands as the result of accident, and both married a second time. Both enjoy good health, and neither has ever seen the sea.—London Tit-Bits.

Swell Redskin.

Kenekah, a centenarian Osage Indian, went to a photographer in Pawhuska, Okla., the other day and had his picture taken for the first time. He was dressed in a magnificent blanket, with splendidly decorated buckskin breeches. Among the bone ornaments around his neck was one which he declared to be the claw of a lion he killed many years ago with his hunting knife. The claw is profusely studded with diamonds. Kenekah is known as a learned and wise Indian among his full-blooded who cling to the old customs and they show him great faith and reverence.

GEN. HARRISON'S GRIT.

A Reminiscence of the Battle of Resaca by One of the Men Who Were There.

"Ex-President Benjamin Harrison was as brave a soldier as ever went into battle, for as a member of his regiment I saw him tried in more than one place which put the courage of men to a supreme test," said Mr. J. L. Ketcham, a prominent manufacturer of Indianapolis, at the New Willard. "Mr. Harrison really never had the opportunities that fell to some others, but I have always been of the belief that he had in him the elements of a great military chieftain, as well as of a leader of men in times of peace."

"It was at the battle of Resaca that I saw him give an exhibition of grit that was an inspiring spectacle. It was a beautiful Sunday morning, the 15th of April, 1864. Our brigade of five regiments was encamped on a height crowned with a grove of fine trees. The confederates were posted on another hill some little distance away, and this was covered with about as dense a growth of underbrush as I ever saw. We knew that the guns of the enemy were concealed in this thicket, and pretty soon the word went around to 'fix bayonets.' That, of course, meant that we were to charge on the foe and take his guns if we could. An order to 'fix bayonets' is one of the most serious that can come into a soldier's ears, for it implies that desperate fighting is imminent, and that the hours of his life may be few."

"But most of us were young and zealous, and, nerving ourselves to the bloody work ahead, we prepared to dash down our hill, across the intervening hollow, and at the confederates. It was just at this time that Harrison, at the head of his regiment, yelled out in his peculiar ringing voice: 'Come on, boys, and shout for Indiana.' He was answered by a wild hurrah, and forthwith we charged on the run, all thought of danger forgotten and animated by the example of our colonel, who exposed himself with utter fearlessness. On account of the dense undergrowth we were at a terrible disadvantage, nor did we find out till later that back of their cannon the southerners had strong earthwork defenses. At first they gave way, then they rallied, and at least 150 of our brave boys went down in face of their deadly fire."

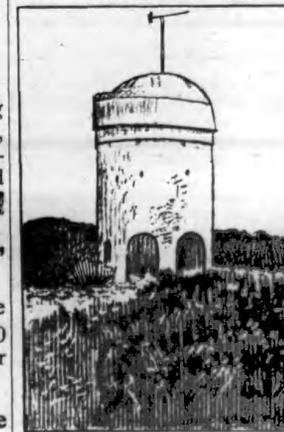

"Among those hurt was my good friend Maj. Daniel Ramsdell, now secretary of the United States senate, who lost an arm in the charge. I didn't mean to give you a history of Resaca, but will finish by saying that we waited till night and then we invaded that thicket and took the guns that we failed of capturing that day."—Washington Post.

SOLDIERS' WATER TOWER.

Odd Structure Erected Years Ago in Massachusetts, But Never Used —Now a Ruin.

Located far up on the hills to the west of Lake Assawampsett, in Lakeville, Mass., stands a water tower, built about 20 years ago. It is an imitation of the old stone mill at Newport.

About 25 years ago, according to the story, the national soldiers' home, located at Quincy, was to be moved to Lakeville. A tract of about 100 acres was secured there, occupying a beautiful position, from which every lake in the great chain was clearly visible. Plans were made for the erection of buildings. The first requisite was water. Accordingly a 60-foot well was dug. A place to store the water was next needed, and this came in the form of the old tower. It was built of field stone, cemented together. Six columns were constructed with arches between, and a column in the center to support the whole. Above these columns the massive stone tank was built, which would contain thousands of gallons of water. An arched roof was added and it was attractively set off with a weather vane.

Shortly after the completion of the tower, work on the home was stopped, and it has never been renewed.

For a time the residents thought a reconstruction might come, but such was not the case, for although the home still owns the property it is rented as a farm. The old tower is rapidly falling apart, having received little attention since it was built.

Joke That Was Lost on the Yanks. After the collapse of the confederacy ex-Senator Wigfall, a member of the confederate congress from Texas, fell in with a party of union soldiers in that state. Being well disguised, he entered freely into conversation with the soldiers of the guard. In the course of which he asked what they would do with "old Wigfall" if they were to catch him. "We should hang him, sure," was the prompt reply. "Serve him right," exclaimed Wigfall. "If I were with you I'd be posted at one end of the rope myself."

GRANGE RECOMMENDED.

Hon. Luther Tucker Addresses the Agricultural Students of Cornell.

In an admirable address before 250 young men at Cornell College of Agriculture Hon. Luther Tucker, editor of the Country Gentleman, had this to say about the Order of Patrons of Husbandry:

"Aside from our innumerable societies that unite special classes of agriculturists, our associations of horticulturists and dairymen and breeders even of every minor variety of live stock, with some of which societies I pray you actively to take part, there is the one great union of all agriculturists, the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, which is emphatically deserving of your support and which I hope you will do all that you can both to advance and improve. You cannot join it too soon after you have begun active life, and there is very little danger of your devoting to it too much time or attention. Mind you, I speak of the Order as it is at its best, not as it sometimes has been, not as it possibly sometimes may be. For long periods and over wide regions of our country the grangers, as they are sometimes absurdly called, because they meet in granges, much as one might call Freemasons lodgers because they meet in lodges—the so called grangers pursued objects wisely chosen and permitted themselves to become the prey and the tool of the farmers who, as Secretary Morton forcibly put it, are farmers because they farm the farmer. The journal with which I have the honor of being connected looked askance at the Order for long years. We never said anything against it. We hoped and trusted that some day it would work off the froth and foolishness of its youth and develop into a power for good that would command universal respect, but we had grave doubts, and we waited to see. What we hoped for has largely come about, and from the organization of the present day you cannot afford to stand aloof."

FOR CLEAN FAIRS.

The Grange and the County Fairs in Connecticut.

The Hartford (Conn.) Times commends editorially the position taken by the Connecticut state grange in reference to the gambling devices at the fairs held in that commonwealth. This paper says that the overseer of the state grange of Connecticut speaks out in no uncertain tone regarding some of the practices at agricultural fairs in the land of steady habits. He says the great blot on the agricultural interests of his state are the gambling, stealing and liquor selling permitted at the fairs. He gives one instance where a man went to a fair with a specified amount of money, with which he had intended to purchase a wagon which was one of the exhibits. The visitor ran up against a slot machine and tried to double his money, so as to buy a better outfit. The result was that he went home "cleaned out" of cash and minus a wagon. This is mentioned only as a sample of what is going on with the consent of the fair managers in Connecticut, and the overseer protests against it as demoralizing and harmful. And doubtless his protest will be heeded. Agricultural fairs can be and have been made most useful and profitable. But it is degrading them to base uses to allow them to be made the allies of gamblers and to turn them into occasions of drunkenness and disorder.

A Pomona Programme.

We take the following suggestive programme from the Michigan state grange lecturer's bulletin, a very helpful little publication:

9:30 a. m.—Conference of the officers and executive committee regarding future plans for Pomona work.

10:30—Fifth degree session. (Reports of subordinate granges to be along the line of their greatest needs and what definite plans they have made to meet such needs.)

11—Recess for dinner.

1 p. m.—Programme. (Open to all fourth degree members.)

Opening song.

Roll call of Pomona officers. Response, giving favorite charge from the ritual.

Opening address, "Progress Our Pomona Grange Should Aim to Make This Year in Helping Our Subordinate Granges, and What Steps Shall We Take to Attain It?" by master of Pomona.

Discussion.

Recitation.

Paper, "What Experiments With Grain, Fruit, Vegetables and Flowers May Be Conducted by Members and Reported to the Granges at the Close of the Season With Helpfulness?"

Song.

Talks and Discussion, "What Changes Shall Be Made in Our Crops or Their Culture This Coming Season?"

Paper, "Attractive Music in the Home and Grange."

Music by the audience.

Education.

National Lecturer N. J. Bacheider contends that the country boy and girl are entitled to as many privileges as the children of city people and that they must have just as good schooling.

He says, "Education is a public function because it is for the welfare of the state as well as of the individual."

All the members of the Pennsylvania experiment station faculty and all the students taking the agricultural course are members of the local grange, and the grange owns a good hall. Professor H. A. Surface is master.

The grange offers a grand opportunity to young men to qualify themselves for public speaking. Hundreds of good speakers have had their first practice in the art in the grange meeting.

THE YATES-PHALANX.

Interesting Bit of Reminiscence—Eager to Enlist and Hard Fighters Afterwards.

"The Yates phalanx," said the captain to the Chicago Inter Ocean reporter, "had a hard time getting into the service and a hard time getting out. I remember well that we began to organize the phalanx as soon as the news came to Chicago that Fort Sumter had been fired on. We had 800 men for the regiment and that we could not be accepted under the first call. The men were so disappointed and irritated that they joined in an effort to have the regiment accepted by the state of Missouri. The tender of 800 fighting men was no small thing in the first months of the war, but Missouri could not accept us and the boys were in a state of mind.

"We had lanked on our name, Yates' phalanx, carrying us through, but other regiments got ahead of us in completing organization. We thought the governor hadn't taken enough interest in his phalanx, and some of us told him so. Thereupon (the governor) to show his interest in the regiment, sent Capt. O. L. Mann to Washington to urge the immediate acceptance of the phalanx. Finally the regiment was accepted as the Thirty-ninth Illinois infantry, the day after the first battle of Bull Run was fought. We left Chicago October 13, 1861, for St. Louis. Five weeks later we were ordered to Williamsport, Md., and in a month were soldiering with the best of the regiments in the field.

"We went into the service a prize drill battalion and in good time we won a reputation as good marchers and fighters, and Gov. Yates showed a very kindly interest in us. While we were in North Carolina, in January, 1863, the governor sent us a new flag with his portrait on it, and several months later we took that flag into Fort Wagner on Morris Island, South Carolina, under what might be called a suspension of the rules. That was a long siege, and we were in the trenches a good many times. It so happened that we were in the trenches on the night the general assault was ordered. Our outlook discovered that the fort was being evacuated, and under the leadership of Col. O. L. Mann we scrambled into the fort just in time to cut the fuses set to blow up the fortifications.

"After a scrap with the confederate rear guard we hoisted the Yates flag on the parapet and our commanding officer sent a quaint dispatch to Gen. Gilmore, announcing that the Yates phalanx was in the bombproofs of Fort Wagner two hours ahead of time. This was talked about a good deal when we were in January, 1864, and came to Chicago on veteran furlough. We went back in March with 750 men in the regiment to Butler's Army of the James, and in the course of the next six months lost nearly 200 of them in battle. In the charge at Deep Run, for example, we climbed over the confederate works to find them ready for a hand-to-hand fight. They put 104 of our men out of action, but we captured the works."

ARMY SCOUT'S TRICYCLE.

John Armstrong Said to Have Used Old Three-Wheeler Now at East Weymouth.

In a little barn on Canterbury street, East Weymouth, Mass., surrounded by old furniture and covered with a mantle of cobwebs, rests one of the oldest tricycles in the country, and one which saw much service and figured in many events during the civil war.

It was built by John Armstrong, alias Kelley, a scout in the union service. He traveled many miles on the old machine, and, according to stories told, it carried him out of danger on several occasions. Before the war he built the machine, constructing the hub of the front wheel out of a section of an oak limb and using broom handles for the spokes. His seat was an army rubber blanket fastened to a frame and his knapsack was held by a dog chain.

When he could not scout on foot he used the wheel. His longest ride was from Washington to Portland, Me., return to Washington and from there to Boston.

Just before Armstrong died he gave the machine to its present owner, John J. Higgins, at that time a member of the Sixty-first Massachusetts infantry. Mr. Higgins says there are many who would give a good sum of money for the machine and he has had several excellent offers for it, but would not part with it at any price.

The old machine, which Mr. Higgins says he would ride if the front wheel was not sprung, is on exhibition at 19 Canterbury street, East Weymouth, and bears many marks of its service.

News of Auburn.

AUBURN, May 24—Chief of Police William C. Bell is attending the convention of the International Chiefs Association in Washington this week.

John Swart, of No. 9 Orchard avenue died Sunday evening from shock and exposure after an attempt at suicide. For the past year Mr. Swart had been rather feeble but had been able to be about the house for some time past. Sunday morning about 4 o'clock his daughter, Mrs. William Jack, heard him moving about and heard him go out to the out-house but thought nothing more of it and went to sleep. At 7:15 her husband rose and a little later found his father-in-law in the out-house and bleeding. He at once called for help and assisted him into the house and sent for Dr. Charles A. Gwynn. When the physician arrived he found that Mr. Swart had hacked himself on the wrist with a razor but had not inflicted any serious injury. However, he advised his relatives to be careful as the exposure might prove fatal, as it did. He died that afternoon about 4 o'clock. Mr. Swart was 76 years old and for the past two years had made his home with his daughter and her husband. Funeral services were held at their home today at 2:30 p. m. Burial was made in Soule cemetery.

Thomas Allen, a negro, was received at the prison Monday from Ithaca. He has a sentence of not less than one year nor more than three years and one month for attempted rape, second degree.

Barry Jackson was Monday sentenced to an indeterminate sentence in Auburn prison for manslaughter in the second degree. George Raines, Jackson's attorney, will fight for a new trial.

The Epworth League of this district will hold a convention at the First Methodist Church in this city Friday and Saturday of this week. Bishop Fowler of New York will be the principal speaker.

Salem Town Commandery No. 16, K. T., has elected the following officers: Eminent Commander, John Armstrong, jr.; generalissimo, J. Had Pearson, jr.; captain-general, T. A. Moon; treasurer, C. E. Kirkpatrick; recorder, J. N. Starner; prelate, Rev. L. J. Christler; senior warden, Fred F. Irish; junior warden, E. C. Stanley; trustee, James Donley.

In Surrogate's Court Monday William A. King was granted letters of administration on the estate of the late Marianne King of the town of Ledyard.

The coal drivers' strike has been declared off and the strikers have returned to work. No concessions were granted by the dealers, but they promised to raise the pay of the drivers whenever they are convinced that the men are entitled to an increase. The business agent, Mr. Robbie, who has conducted the strike, has returned to Buffalo. The men struck for an increase in pay from $1.75 to $2 per day. The dealers contended that there was comparatively small amount of work for the drivers at this time of the year and, therefore, that an increase was unwarranted.

Con. E. D. Metcalf, president of the Auburn Business Men's Association has returned from Atlanta, Ga., where he attended the convention of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Genoa Road Begun.

Something more substantial than making maps is being done in the promotion of the New York, Auburn & Lansing railway, the trolley line which is to connect Ithaca with Auburn. The Central railway is constructing a switch west of the factory of Richard Eccles & Son, which is to be used by the trolley company for unloading material to be used in constructing the line. The promoters of the trolley line have secured nearly all the rights of way and the main obstacle now is the crossing over the Lehigh Valley railway, just west of this city. The engineers of the two companies and the state railway commissioners have held several conferences on the question. It will have to be an overhead crossing, but the Lehigh Valley people insist that it shall be wide enough to cover ten tracks. Naturally the trolley people object, as the Lehigh has only one track there at the present time.

Workmen in the employ of the New York, Auburn & Lansing railroad and employes of the Lehigh Valley railroad clashed Sunday on a strip of land in Underwood street, title to which is claimed by the Lehigh and also by B. H. Leonard, one of the active members of the proposed new road. No bodily harm was done on either side but the Lehigh, so it was stated by Messrs. Taber & Brainard, who have the latter's interest in charge, were in possession of the road.

The work of making a connection with the New York Central's line was completed Saturday and this morning the gang of men doing the work for the New York, Auburn & Lansing started to lay rails and ties over this strip of land in Underwood street. They were met by a force of men in the employ of the Lehigh and were informed that they must cease their work because the land in question belonged to the Lehigh and they, the workmen of the New York, Auburn & Lansing, had no right on it. For a time it looked like trouble, but the Lehigh men won the day and now are in possession.

The land in question is about a half acre and the title is in dispute. B. H. Leonard claims that he has a deed of the property giving him a clear title and the Lehigh on the other hand makes a counter contention. The Lehigh claims to have owned the land for a number of years, having acquired it from its predecessor, the Ithaca, Auburn & Western and had paid the taxes for the past 18 or 20 years.

Mr. Leonard owns the land adjoining without a dispute to his title, but the half acre claimed by the Lehigh does not belong to him, according to the latter road's contention. The deed that he holds, so the Lehigh Valley claims, was given by the same grantor that gave the deed to the L. A. & W. and hence is of no value as a title. Attorney E. C. Aikin, who is interested in the New York, Auburn & Lansing, said the matter would probably mean a fight in the courts. —Auburn Journal.
