Besides many other useful presents, there were a number of gold pieces. All united in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Close many more years of married life. History has repeated itself in golden weddings in this family. They celebrated their fiftieth anniversary in March, 1835. William, their son, and Esther Hollister, were married in March, 1818, and celebrated their fiftieth anniversary in 1868. The parlor meeting held at the home of Alice B. Barger Monday afternoon was not largely attended, as the bad weather detained a great many. Her theme was victory through faith and the ultimate triumph of right. Good music was rendered by the ladies' choir. Those who were not present missed a rare treat.

On to South Otselic.

That the Lackawanna company is seriously considering extending the Cincinnati branch to South Otselic and eventually to Norwich, as the Democrat has for some time insisted would be done, is shown by a conference held Wednesday evening between G. E. Zipple, general baggage agent of Hoboken, C. E. Wickham, engineer of Binghamton, and H. H. Shepard, division superintendent of Syracuse, representing the Lackawanna, and the business men of South Otselic.

The result of the conference is of course conjectural, but that the Lackawanna company will eventually run to South Otselic we firmly believe.—Cortland Democrat.

REVOLT HITS CRONSTADT.

Sailors Mutiny in Force and Begin Murder and Plague.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 14.—Sailors at the stronghold of Cronstadt mutinied and set fire to the town. Communication with St. Petersburg has been practically cut off, and it is impossible to ascertain how serious the situation is.

Gen. Trepoff resigned the Governor Generalship of St. Petersburg and his last official act as chief of police was to collect these 150 sailors from various St. Petersburg jails and send them under arrest to the naval authorities at Cronstadt. They were loaded on a steamboat, which started for the fortress. On the way the sailors overpowered the crew and took control of the boat, which arrived at Cronstadt flying a red flag.

The emblem of revolution was seen from shore and a mass of soldiers and sailors assembled to welcome the mutineers. Two hours later the town and fortress were entirely in their possession. The sailors plundered the government spirit depots. They secured several machine guns, which they used against the troops.

The boom of guns was audible in St. Petersburg. It is learned that the sailors aboard the warships are bombarding the Cossacks ashore and that the forts are firing wildly. It is presumed that the garrisons in some of the forts have mutinied.

Later despatches announce that the mutiny has been suppressed.

London, Nov. 14.—The Bucharest correspondent of the Daily News says that absolute piracy prevails all over the Black Sea. Several fugitive families have disappeared from steamers, leaving no trace behind them. The anti-Jewish riots at Akkerman, in Bessarabia, have been renewed and the town is in flames.

A St. Petersburg despatch says that Poland will receive autonomy, with a viceroy and a representative assembly. Count Benckendorff, at present Russian Ambassador to Great Britain, will be the first envoy.

Beef Packers May Escape.

Washington, Nov. 14.—An important conference was held between Attorney General Moody, and C. B. Morrison, United States Attorney at Chicago, relative to the prosecution of the officers of the so-called beef trust. The case was gone over in great detail, chief consideration being given to the claims of the packers that Commissioner of Corporations James R. Garfield obtained the information upon which the present proceedings are based upon condition that they should be immune from punishment.

Gov. Higgins Will Be Heard From.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 14.—When asked about the Speakership yesterday Governor Higgins said that of course he was taking no part in the campaigning. "It is for the Assembly," he said, "to elect a Speaker. However, if it should appear that it will select a candidate whom I should regard as unworthy and unfit for the office you can depend upon it that I will have something to say and nobody will have any doubt as to my opinion."

Preservation of Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Nov. 14.—The interest which President Roosevelt is reported as taking in the preservation of the scenic spectacle of the Falls of Niagara is here looked upon as intimating that possibly before very long the Federal government will assume control of the Niagara Free Park and, with the Dominion of Canada, stop its desecration by power companies.

Millions for Old Men's Home.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—After bequeathing $100,000 to his widow, $500,000 to other relatives and $50,000 to eight Chicago charitable institutions and a hospital in Pasadena, James C. King set aside the residue of his $1,500,000 estate to build and endow a home for old men who have been unable to provide for themselves.

Several aldermen were present and said that they were not opposed to the new company coming into the city, but wished it to make an arrangement to enter over the tracks in Tioga street if possible."

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage—in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free. So see that the picture in the form of a label is the exact copy of every bottle of Emulsion you buy. Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 108 N. 3rd St., N. Y. Prepared and sold by All Druggists.

Fault with "Education."

In all our schools, high and low, but especially in the higher grade ones, and in the colleges and universities, not enough time is given to the study of the various branches. Long before the subject has been grasped and mentally digested, says Dr. Wolf von Schierbrand, in Public Opinion, the pupil is hurried on to new fields. Repetition is similarly treated, hastily, skimming the surface only. The most slovenly methods of tuition, to judge from what I have seen and heard myself, are nearly everywhere in these United States in vogue in imparting a knowledge of geography, general history, languages and foreign literature. The system is largely to blame. Let us see. I have already spoken of one error committed, that of undue haste. But there are several others. Teachers are not given latitude enough in teaching. The system adopted everywhere forces them to teach in a cut-and-dried manner, largely mechanical, leaving little, if any, "leeway" to the individual teacher, and still less choice to the individual pupil. Again, there is a great deal too much memorizing and drilling, and not half enough exercising, whetting and sharpening of the pupil's own reflective powers, and instead of making it the teacher's chief aim to "make the young idea shoot," to get the gist of the matter into each head, and to make the pupil tell in his or her own words what has or has not been imbibed, the prevailing method is to get the scholar to repeat, nearly always in a mechanical way, the lesson learned in as nearly the identical words used in teaching as may be. This is learning by rote, not by mind; it trains the memory, but not the intellect; knowledge thus acquired does not become a part of the pupil's brain. It is but a superficial acquirement, overcrowding the memory cells and oozing out again bit by bit. The only efficient way to teach is to make every pupil's mind fixate the salient facts of each matter, to be amalgamated and digested thoroughly.

Laziness a Disease.

Certainly not all lay persons suffer from disease of the brain, but, according to an editorial writer in American Medicine, lassitude in children is often a cerebral symptom, and should not be overlooked as such. Says this writer: "Change of disposition in children is often wrongly interpreted, and both parents and teachers have recourse to various means to secure improvement, such as reprimanding, forcing, depriving of food, etc., although conditions grow worse instead of improving. A child, for example, enjoying heretofore good health, all at once undergoes a radical change. He becomes slow in his actions, takes more time than usual in eating, dressing, studying; his intellectual faculties become less vivid, memory fails, he lacks attention. The condition is diagnosed as 'laziness' and bodily punishment is inflicted. A child like this is certainly ill, and coercive training will not improve the condition, but strictly medical attention. The subject is certainly important from a practical standpoint, as the future of such a patient depends upon the early recognition of the pathologic condition. It should be borne in mind by every parent or teacher. Cheerfulness, laughter, vivacity, are all attributes of youth, and if these characteristic features of childhood are rapidly replaced by lassitude and impairment of intelligence, the condition is undoubtedly morbid."

Women as Teachers.

Four-fifths of the teachers in the United States, according to a recent census bulletin, are women, and there are more teachers in this country than there are clergymen, lawyers and physicians together. In the proportion of women teachers to the whole number of teachers employed the United States leads the world, although in nearly every civilized country the greater part of the teaching is done by women. This is in line with the general tendency toward the advancement of woman to a better place in this country. In 1890 the number of women in paying positions in this country was 3,914,571, and in 1900 this number had increased to 5,329,807. However, as the number of men in paying positions has also increased in the same time, it must not be accepted as certain that women are going to crowd men out of positions in intellectual employment altogether.

This generation has seen in a remarkable fashion the results of popular expectation and general habits on physical development in the case of women. The number of tall and strong girls now is most striking, and equally so are the beauty and vitality of many women who are past the fiftieth birthday.

The report that says that the adulterated will lend a good deal of encouragement to those pessimistic souls who believed that it had long ago got past that possibility.

A woman, the thirteenth child and born on the 13th of the month, recently died in Alabama at the age of 105. Might have known something would happen

Business Qualities.

There are many qualities necessary to success in modern business life; but there is none of more importance to a man holding a position of responsibility than the power to make a plain, straightforward, business-like statement, either by speech or in writing. The quality of fluency is not so much what is required as the qualities of accuracy and clearness, definiteness and brevity, tact and judgment, writes Prof. W. Ripper, in Technics. If we are not clear and precise it is certain that those who listen to us will be no more clear, when we have finished, than we are ourselves—probably much less so. We must have no vague and misty ideas about the subject, but they must be crystallized and definite. These qualities of our thought and speech, however, cannot be left to chance. They are attended as the result of effort, of careful and independent thought on the subject for ourselves, of looking at it from many points of view, and thus satisfying ourselves and those who listen to us that we thoroughly understand what we are talking about. It clears one's own mind in thinking out a subject to talk it over with a colleague, or to write out a statement of it, or to dictate it to a shorthand writer. Having decided what to say, and having properly arranged it, the last point is how to say it. The first essential is to speak distinctly, then to be natural, straightforward, lucid; neither to strive after effect nor to exaggerate, but to give the impression that we are ourselves convinced of the cogency and force of our own contention.

Picture Post-Cards.

Picture post-cards have become a nuisance. The originals were evolved in Germany. Some are nasty, some vile, some salacious, some profane—all vulgar and inane. This country is following suit rapidly. The post office authorities are helpless, says the New York Press, as any particularly objectionable card may be inclosed in an envelope and mailed. On the continent of Europe extra stamp charges constitute one of the evils of the craze. Unpleasant, as a majority of the tourists are, to read the inscriptions printed on the cards in the language of the particular country in which they may be traveling, they fail to see that nothing beyond the address is allowed if the card is intended for a foreign destination unless extra postage is paid. The result is that the sender writes: "Another for your collection," "Having a ripping time," "Remember me to the gang," "Have one on me," etc. When the card arrives the recipient pays the extra postage and says things about the idleness of picture post-card senders.

Every one realizes that in far too many cases the funeral expenses incurred, especially by the poor, are a terrible burden. While one must respect the feelings which prompt the expending of a large amount to do honor to the memory of one who has gone, the burden thus incurred is often larger than can be borne by the family. Undoubtedly there are cases where every cent that the head of the house has left for the support of a widow and children has been used up in funeral expenses, a lavishness being thus shown that is entirely unjustifiable. Admittedly, says the Boston Herald, such questions have to be handled with great delicacy, but the church can do much to limit to more reasonable amounts what is thus expended.

A Worcester bride of 24 hours is tearfully being carried to Yarmouth, N. S., on the steamer Boston, while her husband is trying to get there ahead of her by train. This sad separation is the result of practical joking by kind and loving friends. "If I meet any of them serpents in our Garden of Eden, I'll knock their slats in," remarked the wrathful groom as he boarded the train. Under the circumstances his violence to grammar and other things may be pardoned.

A fair-minded Missouri contemporary hands it back to a feminine contributor thusly: "Mrs. Taylor, who is a pleasant and estimable woman and who can bake the finest cake ever made, having sent us some and therefore made us a judge, and who has a family of nice, clean, polite children, and who plays the piano beautifully and gives lessons to a few fortunate pupils in our little city, had a tooth pulled Friday."

Esra Meeker, who left Iowa in 1852 and went to Oregon with a party who drove ox teams, will start from the Pacific coast early next spring with a similar conveyance, and if possible will drive to Kainsville, Iowa. He will follow the old emigrant trail and has arranged to lecture at a number of places along the route.

One thousand farmers held a meeting at Mexico, Mo., and passed 26 pages of resolutions against the automobile. Thus it will be seen that the use of non-puncturable tires and of a machine that is absolutely sure on the get-away is rapidly increasing.

Fate of the Tough Boy.

A boy stands on the street corners smoking cigarettes, using slang, becoming an adept in the finesse of polite swearing, making remarks about all the women that go by, and telling exactly where old Tom Smith misses it in the management of his business affairs. He dotes on the appellations of "June sweetener," "tough" and "peachereno," applied to him throughout the community. His conduct, says the Nebraska City Times, is commended at by the witless girls of the town on the road to God knows where; he is dubbed the "proper stuff" by his associates, while the younger prodigals look upon his reputation as a consummation devoutly to be wished. After a little there is an opening in the firm of Stoddard & Stoddard for a promising boy, offering a good salary to start on. But our young "peachereno" doesn't get it. No, sir; he doesn't get it; and he can't understand why he, of all the young men round about, should not have been approached with that proposition at least three days before anybody else was thought of. Miserable, incorrigible fool! Poor, wretched, wryheaded, incapable, with distorted conceptions of life! What hath a business house to do with thee? Or, why should a respectable institution of whatever nature covet thy presence? Boys, business men of your town know you better than your own parents do. Their eyes are on you when you are least aware. You may slip away from your old mother, who sits busy with her knitting; you may dupe and deceive your best friends; you may elude the watchful eye of your teacher; you may trifle with the confidence of your Sunday school superintendent, but you can't fool the business men of your town when they have a position to be filled.

Public Faultfinding.

The ability to point out with disagreeable clearness social evils and public perils is not alone enough to entitle justly a man to any great amount of public esteem. Cassandras in breeches or petticoats, says Atlantic, are of no more real service to-day than in the heroic age, and the miracle about the lady herself was not so much that the Greeks paid no attention to her forebodings and warnings, but that some impatient hero who had work to do did not wring her dismal neck. There has never been a time when our country has needed to have ideals of service made more fresh and attractive, or when the real work of the world, done by its sane, healthy and kind-hearted workers, needed greater recognition. It is the good rather than the bad in us which needs encouragement and exposure, and if it once finds work to do, the bad in us will be far less noticeable or troublesome. It is a poor gardener who devotes too much time to weeds at the expense of the vegetables and flowers.

Indications are not wanting that his most gracious majesty King Edward of Great Britain and Ireland grows old and peevish. The latest incident in proof of this deplorable tendency comes from Cowes, where the king has a royal residence, Osborne house. Some repairs were to be made in the naval cadets' school near by and his majesty asked to be shown the plans. The architect sent with the drawing had a wart upon one side of his nose. This disfigurement caused his majesty great annoyance and he has demanded that the architect be removed from charge of the repairs. Everybody in London is laughing at the incident. Some of the comic papers have gone so far as to express regret at the delicate state of the king's health.

The business of stenography and typewriting has been injured, according to a recent writer, by the large number of young women who are attracted to it by the pleasant conditions which surround the work rather than by the work itself. Business men who have ceased hoping to find women stenographers worth high wages now pay poor wages, and have thus made the occupation less attractive to women with a fair education. There still remains, however, an urgent demand for women who are worth $20, $25 and $30 a week.

Miss Clara Driscoll, a patriotic Texan who some time ago purchased the historic Alamo property to prevent the building of a hotel upon it, has been reimbursed by the state legislature and her patriotism has been warmly appreciated. In July, she received $25,000 and she has recently been called to Texas from New York to receive $40,000, which will complete the purchase.

Out at Salt Lake the authorities have at last captured a famous female robber, trousered, armed to the teeth, and rejoicing in a long list of successful hold-ups. The moralists may now point out that the same degree of intelligence, honestly devoted to summer boarding, would probably have long

President Roosevelt at 47.

President Roosevelt became 47 the other day—seven years past the age at which, according to Dr. Osler, a man's usefulness comes to an end. And he is still growing. He is still young in vigor and enthusiasm. He is still a "coming man," for, though much of him has "arrived," there is much more to come. He is still the youngest of the Presidents. He is still boyish in his manner and in his amusements. He can still go back to his mother's birthplace and find still living there the negro mammy who was his mother's nurse, and the daddy who decorated the home for her wedding. To them he is still young, Teddy.

The years don't count. The tremendous affairs with which men occupy themselves in the world put wrinkles and gray on the surface only. No man can be really old at heart so long as his mother's birthplace and the nurse of her babyhood remain unchanged, to welcome him and refresh him and bathe him again in the sweet emotions and influences of boyhood, as a spring of perpetual youth.

It is within the year that President Roosevelt has attained footing as a commanding world-figure. He is just learning to walk in the steps of the higher statesmanship. Firm international strides are yet to come. He has just learned to lisp of peace and steadily-established progress throughout the world, and the nations have heard and heeded. Bold, wise speech in world-wide affairs will come in time. It is fine to combine the vigor and enthusiasm of youth with the experience and caution taught by years. Few men can do it. The few who can, have a fine foundation for greatness.

New Method of Healing Trees.

Among the results of recent experiments in horticultural lines, none seem to us of greater interest and promise than those relating to the new method of healing and nourishing trees. An agricultural exchange says:

Aside from the fumigation and spraying of diseased plants, the first gleams of light are breaking in treating diseased plants and trees with medicants, some nutritive, and others curative.

A Russian investigator has just reported the results of some five hundred experiments of this character, which he conducted by introducing into the trunks nutritive salts, both in the dry state and in solution. Experiments were made with oaks, poplars and sycamores, which suffered from frost, diseased white acacias, pear and apple trees. In all cases results were more or less favorable. Chlorosis, or bleaching of leaves, was treated successfully with iron sulphate, as well as a destructive fungus disease of the grape vine known as anthracnose. Fungus diseases of the apple and oak were also successfully combated by administering medicine internally, as it were, by allowing the plant to take up the solutions in its sap and distribute them to the diseased cells in this way. The extensive changes of the tissues of old trees into gum, as familiarly encountered on cherry trees, a process known as gumm-sis, was effectively treated by solutions of acetic, oxalic and tartaric acids. Of greater significance, however, was the attempt to combat the numerous boring insects that infest orchard and forest trees, by poisoning them by the introduction of poisonous solutions into the sap. For this purpose arsenic, copper sulphate, magnesia and barium were used, and the results were quite satisfactory in destroying the bark borer, apple moth and one species of plant louse. With the extension of the knowledge of plant pathology and physiology, the new method of healing, nourishing and stimulating trees may be looked to assume proportions undreamed of at present.

Two little fellows were bragging of their respective possessions. At last one said: "Our hen laid the biggest egg you ever saw." "That's nothing," said the other lad. "My grandpa laid a foundation-stone on Monday!"—Scissors.

The Bachelor Girl.

She is not an evil, indicative of race suicide. She is a salutary step. She indicates progress. Marshall Field, twice married, declares that marriage is a good thing, if one gets the right woman or man. American bachelor girls are applying Mr. Field's theory, and waiting for the right one. In the so-called "good old days" they didn't wait. Hence the seed of the divorce evil, and inferior offspring—the genuine seed of race suicide. In those days they married the eligible whom parents selected, or the substantial one, who offered a good home, in order to escape the awful ignominy of becoming an old maid. And then came unhappiness. But things are changing. It has been discovered that a man in her life is not, to every woman, an indispensable attachment. True, the fullest and best, and most fortunate life is that in which the right man is. But failing to find the right man, a woman does infinitely better to paddle her own canoe.—Syracuse Journal.

A Marvel and a Mystery.

Nothing that has occurred in connection with wireless telegraphy is more significant of the ultimate solution of its remaining problems than the report of recent experiments at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. The military authorities, while experimenting with a kite attached to a wireless telegraphy outfit, were surprised the other day at receiving messages evidently sent from a ship at sea.

They discovered, after a little time, that they were in communication with the West Virginia, the vessel of the American Navy carrying President Roosevelt from New Orleans to Washington. They received all the messages intended for the shore station with which the President's ship was in communication, and then they got in touch with a ship far out in the Gulf of Mexico, hundreds of miles away; and took a message which a young woman passenger was sending to her family.

This is the first time that messages have been picked up in such an impromptu manner hundreds of miles from where they originated.

There's something almost uncanny about wireless telegraphy. It is a means of communication which sets at defiance all our preconceived ideas of conquering long distances. It substitutes the intangible and the mysterious for the palpable and the material.

It bridges the wastes of land and sea and permits the mariner and the explorer to keep in touch with home and civilization, though they themselves are surrounded with the mystery and the loneliness of the infinite. Some day it may permit us to hail the planets and talk with their inhabitants, if they have any.—New York News

Did You Ever?

The following from the Kansas City Journal is worth republishing several times, with the hope that some of the pointed truths may penetrate the rhinoceros hides of some of the loafers that infest every section: A loafer on the street, whose wife was probably at home getting out a neighbor's washing to make money to buy the children shoes, asked a busy man if he ever saw a bald-headed woman. "No, I never did," replied the busy man. "And I never saw a woman waltzing around town in her shirt sleeves with a cigar in her teeth and running into every saloon she saw. Neither did I ever see a woman sitting all day at the street corner on a drygoods box telling people how the secretary of the treasury should run the national finances. I have never seen a woman go fishing with a bottle in her pocket, sit on the bank all day and go home drunk at night. Nor have I ever seen a woman yank off her coat and say she could lick any man in town."

The managing editor wheeled his chair around and pushed a button in the wall. The person wanted entered. "Here," said the editor, "are a number of directions from outsiders as to the best way to run a newspaper. See that they are all carried out." And the office boy, gathering them all into a large waste-basket, did so.—Washington Life.

THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS

A Contest Expected in New York Over Mayorality

OHIO GOES DEMOCRATIC

The Ring Smashed in Philadelphia—New Jersey and Maryland Republican—Union Labor Victorious in San Francisco—Republicans carry Chicago and Newport.

New York, Nov. 14.—George B. McClellan was reelected Mayor of this city, but William R. Hearst gave him a closer run for it than any successful candidate for Mayor here has had in late years. The Mayor's plurality in the whole city is only 3,600. Two years ago it was 62,684.

Control of the Board of Estimate remains with the Democratic administration. Even were Hearst Mayor-elect it would still be lodged there, 9 to 7.

The Tammany candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen and for Presidents of Manhattan and the Bronx are all elected.

Tammany elected 20 of the 44 Aldermen voted for in this county. In 1903 it elected 33.

Mr. Hearst says he intends to hire some of the biggest lawyers in the United States to undertake the work of contesting the election.

The vote for District Attorney, with 86 districts missing, was Jerome, 114,170; Osborne, 101,091; Shearn, 68,882; Flammer, 12,436. Jerome's plurality over Osborne, 13,079.

The vote for Mayor was: McClellan, Democrat, 228,494; Hearst, Municipal Ownership, 224,755; Ivina, Republican, 137,478. McClellan over Hearst, 3,649.

The first step in the fight of William R. Hearst to contest the mayorality election was taken when the Hearst lawyers secured an order from Justice Gaynor in Brooklyn directing the Police Department to deliver the ballot boxes to the Board of Elections forthwith.

New Jersey.

Jersey City, Nov. 14.—The election in New Jersey increased the Republican hold upon the State Legislature and makes it almost impossible that a Democrat should succeed United States Senator John H. Dryden in 1907. The Legislature stands: Senate—Republicans, 17; Democrats, 4. Assembly—Republicans, 45; Democrats, 15.

Bayonne, N. J., for the first time in ten years, elected a Republican Mayor, Pierre E. Garven, who defeated John C. Dempsey by 835 votes.

Mark M. Fagan was reelected Mayor of Jersey City, defeating ex-Alderman Archibald M. Henry, his Democratic opponent.

Weaver Smashes the Gang.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Mayor Weaver has won out in his fight against the Durham-McNichol machine. The City party, composed of Democrats, Prohibitionists and Republicans, has triumphed over the organization. By a majority of 25,000 the City party carried the election. Every one of its candidates was elected, Wilson H. Brown, Sheriff; John M. Rush Permon, Coroner; and Edward A. Anderson and Rudolph Blackenberg, County Commissioners. The two Judges of the Common Pleas Court, Morris Dallet and Craig Biddle, were on both City party and Republican tickets. There was no fight upon them.

It is believed that the full returns will show 125,000 plurality for William H. Berry, independent, for State Treasurer, over J. Lee Plummer, the organization candidate.

Massachusetts.

Boston, Nov. 14.—Massachusetts elected a complete Republican State ticket, giving Gen. Curtis Guild, Jr., the candidate for Governor, a plurality of 29,425 over Gen. Charles W. Bartlett, and apparently electing Eben S. Draper as Lieutenant-Governor by 3,942 votes over Henry M. Whitney, the Democratic reciprocity candidate.

Rhode Island Republican.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 14.—Republicans are rejoicing over the biggest victory in fifteen years. The election of the whole Republican State ticket and of Dyer, the Republican candidate for Mayor of Providence, is assured. Robert C. Cottrell, Republican, has defeated P. J. Boyle, Democrat, by a majority of 93. Boyle has been Mayor of Newport for thirteen terms and was considered invincible.

Maryland.

Baltimore, Nov. 14.—That the Poe disfranchisement amendment is beaten throughout the State is almost without doubt. Baltimore City polled a heavy vote against it, approximating 20,000 votes. All in all the Republicans have the State with them as far as returns show.

Joe Blackburn Defeated.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 14.—The managers of Judge Paynter's Senatorial race, after a meeting at the old Inn, announced that Judge Paynter was sure of 81 out of 110 Democratic votes in the next Kentucky Legislature, assuring the defeat of United States Senator Joe Blackburn.

Ohio.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 14.—Full returns from all parts of the State gave Pattison, Democrat, 40,000 plurality over Herrick, Republican.

THE DOUBLE PRAYER.

To-night we've scanned the pictured page And I have given fancy rein...

The light on her forehead and slight, Is like a fairy tale to me.

And I would stay a dragon, too, For her dear sake, and mount and ride...

Should know to rush through all her days, Should walk where birds swing in the trees...

For she's the world and more to me, My dreams come true, my bunch of bliss...

And daddy adds a word or two, "Oh, God, do as you will with me..."

She said: "I say me down to sleep— And heavy dropped her golden head..."

To the summons "Come in," Stewart entered the apartment and stood in the presence of his employer.

your fader's name, too. To-morrow, when de sun hab reached dat place in de sky...

"Yes, and be thrown out of de office for my audacity."

"Nobody frow you outen de office, You do what de Obeah-man of Legunlia mountain tell you..."

"I'm afraid I should feel myself a greater fool should I follow your instructions..."

Consequently, ere the last stroke of twelve had died away he tapped upon the door of Mr. McEnery's private office.

"Ah, Robert!" began the rich man, pleasantly. "What can I do for you?"

"I have come, sir, to ask you a question which you may consider impertinent in the extreme..."

"Why, sir, you must have lost your senses before you found your love! What! You, a poor clerk, aspire to wed the richest maiden in Jamaica..."

"Where am de man in de whole Island of Jamaica dat dare tell Castroni, de Obeah-man, to him face dat he can't go where him please!"

And with that the fantastically attired negro burst into the office, confronting the millionaire and the crestfallen clerk...

"Misser Emery, I know ebry word dat you done gone say to dat poo' boy, do I ain't heered a bref ob it..."

"Why, you miserable villain!" exclaimed Emery; "how dare you thus address me? I will call the police and have you arrested."

"Where am de p'lice in Kingston dat dare rest de Obeah-man? Open dat box afore you say anoder word..."

"De Obeah-man can't read de writing on all dem papers, but I spees de banker must be able to. Don't you see Robert Stewart somewhere dere?"

"As I live, it is true!" replied the surprised financier, as he read the signature at the bottom of a legal-looking document...

"Part ob it were him fader's an' part ob it were mine," broke in the negro, not giving the young man time to answer...

"De Obeah-man can't read de writing on all dem papers, but I spees de banker must be able to. Don't you see Robert Stewart somewhere dere?"

"Why, Castroni!" said Emery, "to whom belongs all this wealth?"

History Repeats Itself.

Because divorces are increasing and the trusts are still unbusted, and grafters are wallowing in every public trough, a great many melancholy Americans have come to the conclusion that the country is going to the dogs. In a year or so, they say, the trusts will own everything; in five years the grafters will be in the majority in congress, and in a decade home and family and love and honor will be meaningless words. The same prophecies were made in Egypt, in Greece, in Rome, in Carthage, and in the holy Roman empire. They were silly then, says the Baltimore Herald. They are balderdash now. In the third century before Christ Rome wrestled with a trust problem much like that engaging the American people to-day. Beginning as mere fraternal associations, the corporations of that day had become vast leagues for law-breaking and extortion. They controlled elections, they bribed senators, they laughed at laws; they even meddled in emperor-making. And yet, when the time came, Rome found that they were not so powerful, after all. A few drastic laws rigidly enforced; an honest man or two at the helm—and the trusts of the day went crashing down, busted forevermore.

They cut the pants of brother Jim To fit the legs of little Tim. Ah, me! 'twas years ago when Bill And I would chase and race and run To reach the schoolhouse 'neath the hill To pick out seats ere school begun.

Poor little Tim! he had to pose Upon the low front seat; his toes Were then two inches from the floor. His brother Jim and Bill and I Picked out our seats behind the door— For reasons that were smooth and sly.

One day yet, a grim, sedate, Staid personage, who sat in state Upon the little platform where She ruled with ruler, and with grim Determination she would stare Into the eyes of little Tim.

Poor little Tim! he seemed to grow In wisdom on the front seat row; But us big fellows by the door Were satisfied to peg away And learn a little or no more Than just enough to keep from play.

Upon the farm is brother Jim— He wears the castoff pants of Tim. Bill runs a rural barter store. Yours truly's on a saffry small— The chap who couldn't reach the foot Will run for county judge this fall. —Horace Seymour Keller, in N. Y. Sun.

The Boy Who Got His Wish

A HOMEMADE FAIRY TALE

By S. E. KISER

ONCE there was a boy who thought his parents were very cruel to him. He had to go to school regularly and his mother had an idea that she loved him best when he was clean. He would poke the soap down the drain so that he would not have to be scrubbed with it. And he would try to steal away somewhere and hide till school time so that to prevent him from being late his mother might let him go without being washed.

One day when the boy was going home from school, wishing that he could think of some way to escape from his cruel parents so that he would not have to be washed when he didn't feel like it, or have to study when he would rather play, he heard a squeaky little voice in a tree, under which he had paused to reflect.

Looking up, he saw an old man about the size of a turnip. His face was wrinkled like a dried apple and he had a little bunch of gray whiskers that he pulled in a funny way while he talked.

"You look unhappy," said the little old man.

"I am," the boy answered. "Are your parents dead, and do the people with whom you live beat you and make you sleep on the floor?"

"No, my parents are both alive, and I have a nice bed with brass posts to sleep in."

"Do you have to work hard while all the rest of the boys are out playing?"

"N—no, but my mother is cruel to me. She never lets me stay out of school when I would rather not go, and she's always wanting to wash me. I hate soap and I hate school."

"What's your name?" the little old man asked.

"Emory."

"Emory what?" "Emory Wheeler." "You ought to be a pretty sharp boy with that name. But no matter. I am always sorry to see boys unhappy. Now I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll give you a lucky stone. I got it out of the head of a whitefish that was caught while it was trying to climb a blackberry bush. You will see that it has the letter L on it. This L is for luck. If you will rub this stone behind your left ear and make a wish it will come true. But, mind you, it is only good for one wish, and when you get the wish you never can change it till you get another lucky stone just like this one and wish again."

Emory was very grateful to the little old man, and as soon as the stone had been tossed down to him he rubbed it behind his left ear and said: "I wish my mother would not make me wash any more and I wouldn't have to go to school again."

He had no sooner got the words out of his mouth than a rough-looking man jumped out from behind the tree, put a bag over Emory's head and carried him away.

The boy was so frightened that he fainted, and when he came to his senses again he was in a strange place that at first seemed very dark. When his eyes became accustomed to the gloom he could see that he was in a cave. The rough-looking man was sitting near him and an old woman with an ugly face was cooking his supper.

"Now go to work," the man said. "You will have to earn your living here. But you needn't cry or feel sad. We won't make you wash, and you'll not have to go to school."

Emory was badly frightened at the man's gruff tones and the dismal look of the place.

"You will find an ax and some boards over in that corner," the man said, pointing toward a dark hole. "Go and chop them up."

the cook, made to eat and of his little sister who slept with her doll in her arms, and he was sorry he had stopped to talk to the little old man in the tree.

For a long time he was kept shut up in the cave where he had to chop wood for the old woman and dig in the mire day after day, and if he didn't work fast enough to suit the man and his wife they would beat him. He longed for a bath, but there was no water even to wash his hands or face, and he felt miserable indeed.

He would often beg the man and his cruel wife to set him free, but they only laughed at his pleas or would beat him for wanting to leave them.

"You ought to be happy here," the man was in the habit of saying. "You never have to be washed and you needn't go to school." Poor Emory got thin and weak. He couldn't eat the stuff the ugly old woman cooked and he had such terrible dreams at night that he would often wake up so badly frightened that he could only lie and tremble and wonder if morning would ever come again. Very often, too, he would think of some verses he had read one day in one of his father's books. As he remembered them, they were something like this:

"The things that ought to make us glad We never half appreciate Till they are blessings we have had, And then we value them too late."

"Man sighs for things that are denied And deems them rich or thinks them grand."

And puts them down, unsatisfied, When Fortune lays them in his hand."

He had never known before what the lines meant. Now he understood them, and he knew very well what he should wish if he ever found that other lucky stone. But he was afraid that he would never have a chance to wish again. He knew that he could not live much longer in that dreadful place. If only he might find a pool of water in the cavern where he could wash his face and bathe his smarting eyes he felt that it would not be so bad. He often tried to imagine how refreshing it would be to again feel the clean, cool water upon his cheeks. Even his tongue was dry, and his lips clung to his teeth, for he never had anything but the disgusting broth to drink.

One day when Emory thought it would be a welcome relief if he could die, the man took him out of the cave into some woods to help gather limbs to be cut up for the old woman's fire. While they were out there the man left him alone for a moment, and the boy heard a squeaky voice saying: "Emory Wheeler! Emory Wheeler!" Emory looked up, and there on a branch above his head was the little old man again.

"Are you happy now?" the old fellow asked, giving his whiskers a funny twist.

"No," said Emory, "I'm not happy." "If I should toss down another lucky stone do you think you could make a wish that would bring you happiness?"

Emory said he thought he could, and the stone fell at his feet. Rubbing it behind his left ear, Emory said:

"I wish I could be back where I was before and have to be washed whenever my mother thought I needed it and be sent to school, even if I didn't want to go, and be satisfied."

When he opened his eyes he heard his mother calling: "Emory! Emory! Come in now and get washed. It's time for you to go to school."

After that Emory was inclined to believe when he heard people complaining that they merely didn't know when they were well off.—Chicago Record-Herald.

ENGLISH OF THE SWISS.

An Announcement Made to Alpine Hotel Guests Is Somewhat Startling.

"Mistress the venerable voyagers and mesdames are requested earnestly not to take the clothes of the bed to see the sun rise, for the color changes."

Recently the following advertisement appeared in an "English" guide book published at Berne: "The — hotel is a very favorite resort of people fond of solitude and rest. Those who are in search of loneliness are, in veritable fact, constantly flocking to the hotel from the fore quarters of this globe."

"Strange gentlemen will to please not to dress for dinner, etc., as this costume flutters the souls of the maid folk and no work is resulted. Humbly asked." Such is the announcement posted in the bedrooms of an inn in the Jura mountains.—London Chronicle.

Live in Covered Boats.

In the archipelago of Mergui, off the coast of lower Burmah, live the "sea" gypsies. Instead of carts they own covered boats, in which, with their families, dogs, cats, chickens and pigs, they float about on the sea and wander from island to island. By day they fish on harpoon turtles or dive for oysters, but every night they put back to the shore. In the case of bad weather at sea they
