A Mark of Genius.

"Good morning," the architect said. "Are you thinking of building again?" "No; I stopped you to inquire if you could take my son into your office as an appretice. With training I think he would some day prove a magnificent architect."

"He has shown some talent, has he?" "Talent? Genius, sir-positive genius! He designed a garden for our Christmas tree."

"Well, what is there remarkable about it?" said the architect impatiently.

"Why, sir, he designed that garden for $3, and it cost $37!"

"Then go to Mrs. Harding, on the other side; then bring the bishop the dish quickly."

The hostess kept up a rapid fire of bright talk to cover the hiatus in the service until the maid appeared with the desired dish.

"What an addition is a little sprinkle of nutmeg!" said the bishop "What a fine relish it gives!"

He Guessed Right.

A one armed man entered a restaurant and seated himself next to a dapper little other-people's-business man. The latter noticed his neighbor's left sleeve hanging loose and kept eying it in a how-did-it-happen sort of a way. Finally the inquisitive one could stand ft no longer. He changed his position a little, cleared his throat and said, "I beg pardon, sir, but I see you have lost an arm."

The one armed man picked up his sleeve with his right hand and peered anxiously into it. "Bless my soul!" he exclaimed, looking up with great surprise. "I do believe you're right!"-Everybody's.

to a Bad Way.

On his trip to Europe Johnson cellapsed the first day out. All remedies were resorted to, but without avail. All he would mutter was: "I'm so ill! I'm so ill!"

"Can't you keep anything on your stomach?" asked a sympathizing friend. "Only my hands! Only my hands!" Johnson groaned.

Varieties of Handshaking.

The pump handle shake is executed by taking a friend's hand and working it up and down through an arc of fifty degrees for about a minute and a half. To have its nature, force and character this shake should be performed with a fair and steady motion. No attempt should be made to give it grace and variety, as it may result in dislocating the shoulder of the victim. On no account should it be continued aftor perspiration on the part of your friend has commenced.

The pendulum shake is similar in character, but moving, as the name in-ficates, in horizontal instead of a perpendicular direction. It is executed by sweeping your hand horizontally toward your friend's and after the junction is effected rowing with it from one side to the other.

The tourniquet shake derives its name from the instrument made use of by surgeons to stop the circulation of the blood in the limb about to be amputated. It is performed by clasping the hand of your friend as far as you can in your own and then contracting the muscles of your thumb, fingers and palm till you have induced any degree of compression you may purpose in the hand of your friend. Particular care ought to be taken not to make use of the tourniquet shake to a degree that it will shake the small bones of the wrist out of their places. It is seldom safe to apply it to gouty

The cordial grapple is a hearty, boisterous shake of your friend's hand, accompanied with moderate pressure and loud acclamations of welcome.

The Peter grievous touch is a pensive, tranquil junction, followed by a mild subsultory motion, a cast down look and an inarticulate inquiry after your friend's health.

An uncle of mine has a peacock, and last fall it got into a neighbor's garden and laid an egg there. How a German Housemaid Made

The snowdrop, the violet,

Whole Family Happy. A German housemaid, very fond of her mistress' little children and wishing to add a bit of homely cheer to their Eastertide, decided to follow a quaint and pretty custom observed in many of the provinces of Germany. Early on Easter morning, before one of the family was astir, she stole out on the lawn and hid little nests, which she had secretly made during her spare hours, under shrubs, trees, behind vines to see her. Have you done anything and flowerpots and in every conceivable corner of the yard. In these nests, fashioned of straw, twigs and twine. she placed the freshest of eggs, which were to be cooked for Easter breakfast, and the cooking was to be done out of doors in a kettle placed over a rude campfire for the purpose.

When the family came downstairs the German maid told them that the Easter rabbits had been in the grounds the previous night and that if the children would hunt about the yard they would find fresh eggs for breakfast left there for them by the snow white

Eagerly the little ones, accompanied by their parents, who were as full of happy anticipation as the children, ran into the grounds about the house hunting for the eggs the rabbits had brought. Screams of delight and joyous laughter followed the finding of the nests, which were quickly robbed ing big kettle they all hurried, carrying eggs in hats and aprons, and the German maid, no less happy than the children, superintended the boiling of the eggs, which were taken piping hot to the dining room, where the rest of the breakfast awaited the family .-Chicago Record-Herald.

EASTER, THE GREAT SUNRISE

The Resurrection of Jesus Daybreak of Immortality.

Seek him who maketh the seven stars and Orion and turneth the shadow of death into morning.-Amos. The words of the poet-prophet, written 3,000 years ago, span like an arch of light our great festival. They unseal the lips of song and hearts of worship. The pageantry of an oriental morning prefigures the splendor of the great sunrise that comes forth from the shadows. The daybreak in the east finds its historical analogue in the dawn of eternal life out of the night of death on the first Easter morning. The resurrection of Jesus from the grave is held before us like the panels of a spring dawn. Nature is God's great workshop overhung with pat terns. The sculptor carries the fashion of his work in the model to completion in polished granite or murble. With the dawn and attending stars for a model the infinite artist carries the art of life up into the matchless glory of the morning. In earlier days there had been glimpses of the great thought of immortality, faint gleams on the far borizon of the night. When Christ arose, the day broke over the whole world and upon men of every time, race and condition. That sublime awakening gave a new meaning to history, a new value to life, a new vision of the future. The first Easter morning was the daybreak of immortality, the dawning of the light of hope and faith and joy, never again to fade out of the skies,-Rev. D. H. Muller, D. D.

Via Crucis. One of the most peculiar of continental celebrations of Easter is that which for centuries has been practiced by the monks of Ronoevaux. As day breaks on the morning of Good Friday a long procession of the monks files out through the gateway of the abbey, each bearing on his back an enormous and heavy cross by way of annual penance and in imitation of what they consider to have been one of the severest forms of Christ's physical suffering. Through hamlets and villages this pathetic procession makes its way in spite of the trembling knees and aching muscles, while the villagers, with bare and bowed heads, do homage to the cross. That their penance may lack nothing of severity, these monks strike into the country, choosing the steepest and roughest paths. - Metropolitan Magazine.

Easter Eggs In Ancient Rome. The ancient Romans indulged in various games with eggs in honor of Castor and Pollux, who were said to have been hatched from an egg of the swan wwwetheast of Jupiter.

EASTER SUNDAY IN ROME.

Magnificent Ceremonies In St. Peter's Commemorate the Risen Christ. In Rome, as might be expected, Easter

Sunday is celebrated with elaborate ceremonies. The day is ushered in by the firing of cannon from the castle of St. Angelo, and about 7 o'clock carriages with ladies and gentlemen are beginning to pour toward St. Peter's. That magnificent basilica is richly decorated for the occasion, the altars are freshly ornamented, and the lights around the tomb and figure of St. Peter are blazing after their temporary extinction.

According to usage, the pope officiates this day at mass in St. Peter's, and he does so with every imposing accessory that can be devised. From a hall in the adjoining palace of the Vatican he is borne into the church under circumstances of the utmost splendor. Seated in his sedia gestatoria, his vestments blaze with gold. On his head he wears the tiara, a tall, round gilded cap representing a triple crown, which is understood to signify spiritual power, temporal power and the union of both. Beside him are borne the flabelli, or large fans, composed of ostrich feathers, in which are set the eye-like parts of peacocks' feathers, to signify the eyes of vigilance of the church. Over him is borne a silk canopy richly fringed. After officiating at mass at the high altar the pope is, with the same ceremony and to the sound of music, borne back through the crowded church to the balcony over the central doorway. There, rising from his chair of state and environed by his principal officers, he pronounces a benediction, with indulgence and absolution. This is the most imposing of all the ceremonies at Rome at this season. On the evening of Easter Sunday the dome and other exterior parts of St. Peter's are beautifully illuminated with lamps.—New York

BAD BUNNY'S PUNISHMENT. African Legend Tells Why the Rabbit

Has a Hare Lip. The erabbit, which, as every one knows, lays beautiful colored candy eggs at Eastertime, does not do so in America alone, but all over the world. Bunny has been associated with Easter, the resurrection and spring feasts from time immemorial.

Several well authenticated stories are extant to account for this. One halls from South Africa. According to African legend, many centuries old, the rabbit once lived in the moon. You can see his shape on its surface still if you use enough imagination. The

"Our lord the moon sends you word that even as I die each month and rise again, so shall they die and rise again." Now, bunny was possessed of a somewhat weird sense of humor, combined with a leaning toward atheism, so he gave the earth folk the following message: "Our lord the moon sends you word that even as he shall die and shall not rise again, so shall you die and rise no more." The rabbit went back to the moon after delivering this word of hope and repeated the joke. The moon, in anger at such disobedience, snatched up a hatchet and cut the rabbit's lip open. Bunny fled in fear to the earth and hid in a hole. He has been timid ever

Rabbits and Chickens Easily Made Out of Peanuts: Do you want to make peanut rabbits or chicks for Easter greetings? If so, it is very easily done. For the rabbit's ears and tail use little pointed bits of paper, which can be glued on. Sometimes you will find the rabbit already has a tall, and you will not need to supply one. The rabbit will stand up very easily after you have given him his feet because there are four of them. The feet and the eyes are made just as they are made for peanut people.

The little chicks need only feet and eyes, but as they have only two feet they will not stand as easily as the rabbits. To make them stand take a small square piece of a visiting card an inch or less square, and when you give the chick his feet push them up first through the card. This will give him a firm foundation to stand upon, and you can either send him this way, or, if you wish, you can paste this piece our own establishment. of card to a larger piece or to the bottom of the box you send him in. If you are careful you can put him inside of an eggshell.-New York Herald.

"Easter Hare Pie Scramble."

In Leicestershire, in England, there is a custom still in vogue called "the Easter hare pie scramble." So many years ago that everybody has forgotten it a certain plat of ground was given to the rector of the parish perpetually on the condition that each year on Easter Monday he and his successors should contribute two hare or rabbit pies and a quantity of ale to be scrambled for by the villagers. As late as 1892 the "hare pie scramble" was observed as a great festival, all the villagers turning out to march in procession behind the men carrying the hare ples, cut up into fragments. When they reached a spot known traditionally as "Hare Ple bank" the sacks were emptied and all the crowd engaged in a fight or acramble for the pies, which were supposed to guarantee good luck to the possessor for the ensuing year.-Denver Republican.

A POWERFUL RIVAL

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the senior partner of the firm handed Esther another cylinder. "It's only a little letter," he said, "and I should like to have you tran c ibe it before you 'go home."

"Certainly, Mr. Hargraves," she returned, but the face she taked clouded slightly. Past experience had taught Esther what Mr. Hargraves meant by a "little letter," and it was not a hand of gentleness that plac d the cylinder on the mandre' and closed the swing gate.

"I sup ose after I get all through I'll hear, 'Make an extra carbon copy," she muttered to herself as she put the reproducer in position and the hearing tubes in her ears; but as she listened the frown aisapreared and a smile took its place. for all she could hear at first was a confused jumbling of words. Sae was not much surprised, for many amesing things had happened in connection with the busi ess phonograph since Hargra es & Blake hid installed it in their office some two months before.

Ater puzzling over the matter for while she came to the conclusion that the jargon which met her ears was due to the fact that Mr. Hargraves had dictated over another

BESIDE HERSELF WITH JOY. letter, which was already recorded on the cylinder. "That's just like him," she told herself in disgust,

'Now, Mr. Blake would never think of doing such a thing." With difficulty Esther transcribed the letter which Mr. Hargraves had dictated. Then she replaced the tubes in her ears, not that it was necessary, but for the simple reason that she was curlous to know what else was on the cylinder. When transcribing Mr. Hargraves' letter she had followed his voice, paying no attention to the superfluous words in another's voice. For the time being Esther was oblivious to teh fact that the hands on her watch were fast approaching 5:30. When she had finished her task, which caused her not a little astonishment in the performing, the following broken sentences glowed from the sheet of paper: "I love you, Esther-I've always loved you. I think, but I haven't dared to hope that you returned my love-I'm dictating this on the end of a cylinder and nobody'll ever know what nonsense I'm saying-I want to hear how my own voice sounds when I tell you that I love you, Esther."

The girl took the paper from the typewriter rather guiltily, folded it and put it in her bag. "I know I shouldn't be glad," she whispered to herself, "but somehow I can't help feeling pleased that he cares for me." Esther had recognized the voice that dictated those fervid sen-

Just then Mr. Hargraves entered the office, and coming over to her desk he asked, "Have you finished the letter, Miss Stanley?"

"Yes," she answered briefly, conscious that her face was nunaturally flushed, and feeling very uncomfortshe in consequence. "Here it is," she returned, "and I hope it's cor-

"The letter is all right," Mr. Hargraves said, after reading it through, 'And that's all there is tonight, Miss

All the way home on the cars Esther's thoughts centered upon the occurrence of the afternoon she was beside herself with joy and went far out of her way to stop at a certain old rickety house to have her fortune told. In her room that evening she was unable to banish it from her mind. Finally she went over to the mantel and took down a photograph of a young man. "Do you know you have a rival," she said, "and a powerful rival, too?" Was it her fancy, or did the honest eyes which met hers hold a look of reproach? "But I won't forget," she went on.

from our dear old home to where there were only strangers. How glad we were to find an old friend here! And I'll not forget either when mother was taken ill, and after a few days I was left alone, how you comforted me in my sorrow. No, Dick,- I'll not forget, a thousand times no. When he tells me what's in this paper, then I'll tell him of the good kind man I'm to marry, pr soon as we get enough saved for a home, and I'm sure he won't feel bad if he knows I'm happy." Esther dashed away a tear. "Yes, I'm happy; of course, I'm happy, for Dick loves me; but I wish I didn't have to tell Mr. Blake-I love Dick; of course I do-dear old Dick-and I'll be true to him through every-

Slowly she crossed to the other side of the room, and with a gentle hand replaced the photograph.

The next morning when Esther entered the office Mr. Hargraves was sitting at his desk busily engaged with the morning's mail, b t Mr. Blake was not there. A little later she learned that he had been called away on business for a few days.

Esther set about her duties at once, but all that day and the days that followed while Mr. Blake was away, a certain wonder was ever present in her mind. And when the junior partner, after being absent five days, returned to the office one afternoon just as Mr. Hargraves was going out, Esther told herself that something would surely happen. Well, something did happen.

Presently a young lady, who Esther decided at once was the most beautiful girl she had ever seen called and inquired for Mr. Blake. At t e sound of the young lady's voice he sprang from his chair and was beside her in a moment. There was something in his manner as he greeted her and showed her into the private office that puzzled Esther not a little, and the way he took both her hands in his own when she departed did not tend to diminish the girl's perplexity.

"Miss Stanley!" Esther tooked up, and Mr. Blake was standing beside her desk. His voice was vibrant with joy, and a great happiness shone in his face. "I've just got to tell you something!" he exclaimed in a burst of happy confidence. "She, the young lady who was just here, is my promised wife, and her name is Esther, the same as yours."

Surprise, compounded with a feeling which Esther could not define, held her under their power for an instant. Then she said quietly: "I hope you'll acept my congratulations. Mr. Blake."

"Thank you, Miss Stanley," eturned with a bright smile. A few hours later Esther stood once more before the photograph on the mantle. "I'm g'ad he's happy," she murmured, "And I'm happy, too, because I've got you, dear old Dick," she added, as she bent forward and kissed the picture.

Birds' Power in Flight. What is the difference between a butterfly and a balloon? Not so much as we might think. Prof. G. H. Byran of the University Collegof North Wales says they are about aqual in efficiency. They both can make headway in the still air. If it were not for the wind we might have aerial regattas with boats sispended from balloons using wings instead of oars.

A pigeon descending shows the great work of the wings in resisting the downward and forward movement of the body, and this is difficelt to imitate in a machine flight. Gulls are about the best aerial gymnasts known. They utilize the little eddles of wind thrown up by the cresis and throughs of the waves, and know exactly where to go to get a lift from the wind.

All so-called sailing birds secure air currents. They have to go to where the wind takes them to a certain extent and must rely upon the use of their wings if going in a particular direction. Birds possess much greater horse-power in proportion to their weight than man or

At the government house in Foona, India, every cat which may happen to pass out of the front door after dark is saluted by the sentry who presents arms to pussy. Tra dition relates that in 1838 Sir Rob ert Grant, governor of Bombay, died in the government house. On the evening of the day of his death a cat was seen to leave the house by the front door and to walk up and down a particular path where the late governor had been in the habit of strolling after sunset. A Hindoo sentry observed this, and told a priest, who declared that in the cal was Governor Grant's soul, and it should be saluted. As the particular cat could not be identified by the sentry it was decided to present arms to all the cats.

Peace-Destroying Swage Hammer. It is a distressing fact that some of our most efficient labor-saving devices are peace-destroying and nervedestroying because of the infernal racket they create. The pneumatic hammer, swaging machine, swaging hammer and most percussive tools are capable of much greater usefulness than they have yet attained. but, remarks the editor of Machinery, one cannot consistently wish them to come into general use until some means is invented to mitigate the noise nuisance.

NOT DEATH, BUT SLEEP.

April 19, '08.—(Luke 24:1-12.)

In A. D. 33, a great battle was frught outside the gates of Jerusalem, which culminated one Friday afternoon, and which was victoriously proclaimed and celebrated the followin sunday morning. Death was slain on Cavalry; the Mighty Victor led him forth in triumph from the broken tomb in the Garden. then, as was His right. He said, Henceforth you shall be shorn of you terror. Let your name be sleep, rather than death, forevermore." And so it comes to pass that death is no longer taken into account whe men are wise. We have to do not with him, but with his conqueror. And thus we write upon the tombs of our loved ones, not that heart-breaking word-dead; but, rather, the beautiful, peaceful, suggestive word,

Not smitten with the spear of death, Are those who lie in slumber sweet, Free from all pain, though void of breath, Soon to awake, their own to greet.

Sleep, what a beautiful substitute that word is! When the man of Gali.ee was ushered into the room where the little maiden lay, surrounded by the weeping family, he said to the heart-broken parents, "She is not dead, but sleepeth." David in prophe'ic language said, "He giveth His Beloved, sleep.' Writing of the assassination of Stephen. the first Christian martyr, the sacred writer puts it this way, "And when he had said this he fell asleep." When Paul was ziving the list of those who had seen the risen Lord he said: "Of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep. And in the great resurrection chapter he says: "We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an ere at the last trump."

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, From which none ever wake to weep; A calm, and indisturbed repose, Unbroken by the last of foes."

In human language, the first sleep for the night is called the "beauty because it is supposed that the mystic fingers of Morpheus smooth out "e wrinkles, and erase the furrows of care during the first lours of repose. But the true beauty sleep is the sleep which men misname death. Bathed in that deep and quiet slumber the furrows which have been sub-soiled by the ploughshare of sorrow, will be eliminated, the scars of many a hard-fought battle field will be smoothed out, and the mutilations of the body, the soul ard the spirit, will be repaired and rectified. And when we awake in the morning, it will be "in His likeness. The evening of life and the evening of a summer's day have much in common. The laborers have come from the field, the day's work is done. The heavens are glowing with an indescribable effulgence, as though the sun in departing had forgotter to shut the gate after it. All the beauty of cloud and leaf reflectec in the lake. Not a leaf rustling. or a bee humming, or a bird caroling. Silence in the meadow; silence in the orchard; silence among the hills. All nature quietly preparing for a night of sweet repose.

Thus bright and beautiful, natural and glorious, should be our departure. The heats of earthly conflict cooled. The sleeves of toil rolled all the assistance they can from the down. Weariness preparing for its last, long, refreshing repose. Or as Longfellow put it:

> "Approach thy grave as one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Some writer describes that day in the following beautiful language: "The gladdest morning of your life will not be the day of your graduation, in white muslin and pink ribbons; or the day of your betrothal. when all the world seems to be caroling love songs; or the rare June day on which you a.e we amidst bowers of roses; or the day your child lies soft and warm against your yearning mother-heart; or the day when you were promoted to a partnership, or selected to a high office, or start for Europe: nor yet the day when you find the Bridegroom and put on the Wedding Garment of your soul.

"The happiest morning of your life will be that morn on which Jesus calls, "Awake, beloved!" and from every narrow, grass-blanketed bed His redeemed shall come forth in His likeness.

Then take the tonic of the resurrection hope to yourselves. And rise out of your hopeless grief into the highlands of sweet service of others for the sake of Him who died and rose again.

How wonderful is Drath! Death and his brother, sleep! One, pale as yonder maon. With lips of lurid blue:

The other, rosy as the morn, Wnen, through on ocean's wave, It blushes o'er the worl1; Yet, both surpassing wonderful!

"We are such ctuff as dreams are made of, and our little life is rounded with a sleep."

A Story by ESTHER JOYCE.

Copyright, 1907, by Mary McKeon. ***********

ISS AMY CARTER leaned back in the dull shadows of the boarding house parlor and watched the girl at the plano. The girl had a true but quite untrained voice, and she sang in commonplace, soulless fashion the air of a four part

"Wasn't it shivery and grand where the bass took up the tune?"

The girl's hands came down on the keys with a crash. She had not dreamed that Miss Amy had come into the room. Most of the boarders did not come downstairs until the tea bell had rung. Miss Amy was almost as startled as the girl. She had been in the house five weeks and never exchanged a word with any one save the land-

"Were you at St. Augustine's this afternoon?" inquired the girl, swinging around on the piano stool.

"Oh, yes," replied Miss Amy simply. "I've been there every Sunday since I beard you sang

"I'm sure it is awfully kind of you to say so. I don't do much, you know, just one of the chobut it's $1.50 per, and you meet realnice people too. I'd have joined the Musical league, too, only you've got to report for every rehearsal or lose your tickets for the last con-

MR. WESTON STUDIED HER CURIOUSLY. Miss Amy sat like one entranced. Here was a girl who did not simply buy admission tickets and listen to others. She was in it all, in the world of music from which Miss Amy had always been exluded by the iron key, marked duty,

"How-how do you manage to get into a choir or a league or anything of that sort?"

The girl felt flattered as she looked into Miss Amy's kindling face.

"Oh, they're always looking for good in the big choirs. Sometimes you get paid-sometimes you don't. I didn't get anything last year. But the easiest way to get in is to take lessons from the choirmaster-private lessons. Then Mr. Weston will put you in the choir to jolly you along, whether you can sing or not. You're new to New York, and you wouldn't believe the graft"-

The clang of the supper bell drowned the latter part of the sentence, and the girl rose abruptly. Miss Amy followed her down to the dining room, but scarcely knew what was spread before them. What mattered food or drink or sordid landladies or gossiping boarders when she had found the key to her paradise at last? Perhaps it was graft -perhaps the girl spoke thoughtlessly.

The next morning very early Miss Amy went shopping. She told the mil-Mner she wanted a brown hat to match her suit. "No, not a toque like she had on; something younger," and she described quite accurately the hat which the girl had worn to church the afternoon before.

"I'll wear this," she said, "and you can send the old one home.'

Next she went to the nearest drug store and studied the directory. "Weston, Albert, singing teacher, 421 West - street."

And as she left the drug store she spied a florist's window, and she stopped for a bouquet of violets. Then again she hesitated. The crisis of this her new life was at hand. She allowed three cars to pass, and then, with firmly compressed lips, she signaled for a hansom. At the boarding house every one said that in New York one must keep up appearances. Perhaps if he thought she could afford to ride in hansoms he would overlook her vocal deficiencies.

Albert Weston, worn by his struggles with an indifferent pupil, was standing at the window of his studio when the hansom drew up before the building and the brown, wrenlike figure stepped cautiously from the vehiele and shot a questioning glance up the brownstone front.

"I'm glad I took the hansom," commented Miss Amy as she mounted the steps. This was life! An absurd thrill swept over her and brought a delicate and most becoming blush to her face.

Mr. Weston studied her curiously, hands deep in his pockets, when she asked almost timidly the privilege of studying with him. Prices, hours, everything seemed secondary to the fear that he might not accept her as a pupil. He tried her voice, paced the room a few moments and then said gravely:

"Yes, I will take you as a pupil, but I want to be quite frank with you. You will never be a great singer. You have a sweet, harmless, drawing room | borhood. A little rabbit perceived the voice, but I don't want you to go into the work with any idea of being a said: grand opera singer in time. You have begun-too late for that."

Again the delicate flush mounted to

"I understand all that-it is just for my own pleasure, I-I could not study sooner. It is just for the joy of being able to sing for myself."

He stopped short in his nervous walk and looked at her. Such simplicity, image of a rabbit.

such humflity, such lack of ambition almost staggered him.

"Perhaps some time-when my voice is a little stronger-you might, that is, if it would be quite right, you might let me join your choir at St. Augus-

"First vacancy there is," he assented heartily. "What our congregation likes is a number of sweet, correct voices. By the time some one gets tired of rehearsals or marries or moves away I'll have your voice placed and be glad to take you on."

And so commenced the musical career of Miss Amy Carter, aged thirtyone, residence a second class boarding house; occupation, spending the small inheritance which had come to her suddenly after a life of narrow drudgery and unrelieved sacrifice. At first her lessons opened and closed with almost monosyllabic conversation, but in time the musician delved beneath the surface and found the heart which for years had almost starved for music. It had been born in her, she thought, but there had been work to do, so heavy that her hands had grown too rough and stiff to play the old fashioned organ. There were two invalids to nurse when the village choir would have been glad of her services. And so she counted her love as dead and buried until the inheritance had come, and then-

"Well," she said, with a whimsical smile, "I thought I'd come to New York and hear the best of music while the money lasted. I would have a taste of real life-what I have heard people call the joy of living."

Weston smiled to himself. She called this seeing life! And, indeed, these days she was quite in a flutter of excitement all the time. Weston had tickets he could not use for this concert and that, Matinees came just when he had pupils, and it was a shame to waste the tickets. He was tremendously diverted by this delicate, flower-like woman, who felt that she was indulging in a mad orgy of music. He learned to look forward with keen interest to her comments on the concerts she attended. Self played so small a part in her enjoyment. It was always not how she felt, but how the music affected the audience, and gradually he discovered that she had a decided gift of criticism which was developing under his guidance.

Something he knew, too, that his pupil of thirty-one had not discovered. Under the magic of indulging the one great longing of her lifetime she was cheating old Father Time, turning pages back and not forward. The faint color was always in her cheeks these days, and the voice, rising in her birdlike throat, was fresh as a girl's, lilting like a lark's in flowered meadows. And, watching her development, the tired man began to wonder what had come over him. He saw his work in a new light. The weight of drudgery slipped from his shoulders. The sense of wasted effort yielded to the infectious happiness of his buoyant pupil. And so dawned Easter morning over

St. Augustine's. Outside the doors the mob of sightseers swayed while the regular parishioners claimed first right to pews. Then came the inrush of strangers; the organist took his place. Mr. Weston raised his hand, and the band of white robed men and women filed into the choir loft. Out to the waiting multitude rolled the waves of perfectly balanced harmonies-a hundred voices admirably selected, thought the congregation, and yet to the man who had trained them there came but a single voice. Her face was uplifted, her eyes dewy and tender, as with flutelike clearness the wonderful words reached him above the heads of the other singers:

"The strife is o'er, the battle done; The victory of life is won; The song of triumph has begun-Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia!"

To the man it came not as a paean of triumph, but a message of peace, and she had shown him the way! He wanted to tell her now-this minute! The service stretched ahead of him interminably. "Alleluia, alleluia!" His glance caught and held hers. A startled expression flashed over her face. The flutelike tones faltered and died away. The absorbed hand trembled, and her face, ther side did not note that her paling, turned HER VOICE FLOATED China's Easter Rabbit. One day, says a Chinese legend, the great god Buddha was very hungry. There were no restaurants in the neighgod's plight and, hopping up to him,

"Eat me, O Buddha!"

Touched by such unselfish devotion, the god transported bunny to the moon, where he still sits in the top of a tree pounding in a mortar the herbs that go to make up the water of life.

Senator Wilcox's Vote. to the Editor:

The anti-gambling bills offered by the Republican party to comply with the plain mandate of the constitution of this state, carnestly ad vocated by Governor Hughes and supported as a party measure by our Republican legislators, failed of passage yesterday by a tie vote. The vote stood, ayes, Republicans, 23; Democrate, 2; noes, Republicans, 8; Democrats, 17. I feel sure that the citizens of Auburn and of the Cayuga district have not failed to notice the vote of Senator Wilcox, their representative, on this issue. He voted against his party, against the gov ernor elected by his party, against the mandate of the constitution and I believe, against the wishes of a large majority of the people of the district he purports to represent.

This proposed legislation has at tracted widespread attention. Dis cussion of it has been frequent. Public sentiment regarding it had become more than usually crystallized before the time of the vote. constitution adopted by the people in all other places but legalized in a race track; the "improvement" of the breed of horses or the improvement of the breed of men; these were some of the issues.

Just before these measures came up Senator Wilcox was in Auburn. He was asked by a newspaper man to state his views. His constituents wanted much to know where he stood on this matter. He declined to talk. He refused to give an inkling to the people he was elected to represent of how he should vote. Yet the news items say: "Until the vote of Senator Wilcox, last on the list, was cast against the bills, the result was apparently in doubt, though the opposition for three days has ex pressed confidence that he would vote as he actually did."

Why this confidence? Senator Wilcox, then, by his vote defeated this legislation. He knew he could save it; he knew a great majority of his district and of his party wanted it, but he voted against his party and with the Democrats and beat it by his vote.

Now, Senator Wilcox owes his seat in the senate very much to party regularity. The party lash has brought him the vote of many a Re publican who held his nose when he voted for Wilcox, Yet Wilcox betrays his partylwhen he sees fit. He refuses to say how he will vote, but Newton Reynolds, Stephen Henry Reythe gamblers put him down on their side and he votes on their side. What have his constituents to say to individually and as administratrix of &c. of

Some people are still old-fashioned enough to" think that a legislator stands as the mouthpiece of the sentiment of his district. Is it not about time for the Republicans of Cayuga to wake up and ask themselves these questions: "Do we stand for the things which Wilcox stands for at Albany? Do we know what he really stands for there? Can we afford as Republicans and as men to to petitioner, and if any person above have it go forth through the Empire named, either by his or her name, or as unstate that Wilcox represents and known, be dead, then to his executors, adstands for the men, and the real sentiment of Cayuga? It seems to me estate, whose names and places of residence, that those who have cried out in if any such there be, are unknown to the shame as the vote of the senator from petitioner. The wrath of the day of May, 1908, at 10 o'clock in the forepeople will not always abide. Let us hope that the time has come when the people "Allelula" he knew that his heart's shall say to him in no uncertain tones: "This is too much; no longer message had reached her, and that was shall you misrepresent us, no longer in the legislative halls at Albany shall you bring the name of old Cayuga into ridicule and contempt."

990000000000000000000000 S Easter day approaches Jesus, whose resurrection and ascension this day commemorates, is drawn to our attention, and the question is asked, "Did the Saviour leave his likeness on earth while among

This question is best answered by referring to the remarkable consistency with which Christ has been pictured all through the ages by the world's gréatest painters.

Many able and profound students of Christian art have brought forward positive arguments to show that this portraiture did exist in the early decades of the Christian era at the time of Christ and that its history and characteristics fully supply the requisite element of authenticity.

Of the typical portraiture of Jesus, transmitted to us from an age in which the productions of pictorial art were either venal to inanity or utterly debased, it stands entirely by itself for purity, for power of conception and for a style of art not belonging and related to none other.

Archaic in its grand simplicity, it is bt distinctly individual and portraitlike in its type. Whether portrayed in humility, in suffering or in triumph, though sometimes severe and rugged, it is still always dignified and majestic. It addresses itself by its infinite tenderness and at the same time by its strength of character so directly to the higher sympathies and aspirations of our nature that it is accepted at once with undoubting, almost instinctive, faith as the veritable counterpart of the divine original.

Investigation as to the authenticity of the most valuable representations of

Christ, because admittedly the oldest, has been beset with very great difficulties. The Church of Rome, in whose possession most of them are, has guarded them with extreme care, and, considering their sanctity, no one can wonder at this or even complain of It.

There is in the basilica of St. Peter's, at Rome, in the sacristy over the gigantle statue of St. Veronica, a picture accounted so holy and priceless that no layman may ever behold it, and it is on the authority of Fathers Garucci and Tebay, who were famous as Roman antiquarians in the reign of Pius IX., that even the supreme pontiff looked upon it only once a year, and then only after communion.

It consists of a life size head of the Saviour represented as lying in the sepulcher. The ascertained history of the picture reaches to the second century.

Second only to this work is the picture in the sacristy of the Church of St. Bartolomeo, in Genoa. The hair is wet and matted; tears and the blood drops from the crown of thorns, so expressive of the stern reality of death, mark the face, but the calm features and nearly closed eyes, the gently parted lips, speak not of corruption, but of the spirit at that moment in paradise and of the shortly to be accomplished resurrection. This portrait is positively known to be 1,800 years old, and tradition says it was painted by St.

A picture in the library of the Vatican at Rome is of a date probably contemporary with the two just mentioned. Legend declares that this also was a production of St. Luke. It is executed in thick water color on a panel of cyprus wood, now almost wholly decayed.

Many of the portraits of Christ found In the catacombs afford sufficient evidence that the familiar traits of the hair parted in the middle, flowing to the shoulders and beginning to curl or wave from the ears downward; the thin of the latter were "boot-leggers," in beard, the mustache and the oval face were recognized as the distinguishing characteristic and true likeness even at the early period.

This type has been followed by all the great painters of Christendom down to the present day. It satisfied Michelangelo. In painting his last picture of Christ he followed the Veronica portrait line for line, as if he had traced it.

This likeness of Christ is universally recognized, so that now in every country where we see it painted it is well known who it represents. - New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Graduation of Penalties for Drunk

The following graduation of penales of a "plain drink" seems to indiate that higher civilization is more olerant of intoxication than benighted ommunities or communities so condered:

Among the mountaineers of Albania and Montenegro drunkenness is regarded as a political offence and for bat reason is considered more serious than if it were a moral one.

Among the mountaineers fighting and drinking are not considered to go together, and to be able to fight is the first duty of a citizen. Therefore the drunkard is harshly dealt with. At first they try moral suasion with the festive tippler, but when that fails and he persists in making the mountain peaks ring to his Montenegrin substitute for "We don't go home till morning!" he is declared to be a danger and a disgrace to his tribe and his country and is quietly assassinated by order of the local chief.

TROUBLE BLAMED TO DRINK. Evangelist and Street Preacher Sentenced to Jail.

"I have investigated your case, and find that your sole trouble is drink. You seem a bright and intelligent man, but for some reason I can't understand you spend all of your money in saloons. I warn you to keep away from the saloon and to stop drinking, and will let you off with a light sentence. You will go to jail for twentynine days."

Thus spoke Judge Crane in the ounty Court this morning in sentencing a man who was formerly postmester at Paducah, Ky., and later evangelist and street preacher. Upon his investigation of the case he was led to believe that drink was mainly responsible for the appearance of the evangelist before the court.

The prisoner, who is a middle-aged man, well dressed, and of fine appearance, was indicted with another for heft of about $1,000 worth of stamps from the Blue Trading Stamp Company of Broadway, and when arraigned pleaded guilty to grand lareny in the second degree.

When pleading guilty, he alleged that his partner stole the stamps and paid him $25 to dispose of them, which money he spent in drink and was an inmate of the alcoholic ward it Bellevue in consequence.-New

Another Woe for Mankind. A story comes from Western New bork, which, if true, indicates the disry of a new poison by the side of bich whisky suffers in comparison. told that a certain farmer, named Thomas Warren, living near Geneva, low York, noticed that his hogs apeared to be dazed, or, to quote his "n language "seemed to have a jag "pard," whatever that expression by mean. Fearing lest they had een poisoned, he inquired into the ause and found that two tramp farm ands had been pounding potatoes nd turnips into a mash, squeezing out all the juice they could by the aid of a cider press, drinking the villairous compound and throwing the mach to the pigs. The farmer remembered that the two hands had ften been in the condition of the logs and, stimulated by curiosity, himself tried the drink. He said that the first sensation was that of going up in a balloon, the exhilaration lasting for many hours, with corresponding depression as a sequel. Not long ago it was discovered in another state that farm hands were tapping siloes and extracting juice which acted as a mild intoxicant.

Drink, Crime and Pauperism.

The statistics obtained from the replies of over 1,000 prison governors in the United States to a circular addressed to them, and a summary shows that the general average of 909 replies received from the license states gives the proportion of crime due to drink at no less than 72 per cent., the average from 108 officials in prohibition states giving the percentage at 37. A considerable number jail for selling whiskey. Out of the 1,017 jailers, anly 181 placed their estimate below 25 per cent., and 55 per cent, of these were empty jails in prohibition territory. The relation of drink to pauperism is much the same as that of drink to crime. Of 73,045 paupers in all almshouses of the country, 37,254 are there through drink.

Cause of Drunkenness.

It is alleged as a chief reason for the excessive drinking indulged in by our countrymen that life is monotonous, and men drink to obtain excite ment. Doubtless there is much in this remon. It does not apply to all cases, ha it does to many. But that very craving for excitement is itself in symptom of something unnatural.

VEGETARIAN SETTLEMENT.

Nothing Remains But the Stream Where They Once Lived.

The faddists got to Kansas rather early. The first thing in that line seems to have been a vegetarian colony organized in the East for the purpose of establishing a settlement in Kansas Territory. C. H. DeWolf of Philadelphia was elected president, D. McLauren treasurer, and H. S. Clubb of New York secretary. The place chosen was on a small creek about siz miles south of Humboldt, Allen county. About 100 persons located there in 1856. This colony refused to indulge in the use of meat tea, coffee, tobacco or other stimulant and lived only on vegetables and fruits.. Though each colonist was to own his own property, the colony was o be to a certain extent, co-opoperative. During the summer and fall of 1856 there was much sickness and the greater part of the colonisis left the country. The only reminder of the colony which now remains is the fact that the stream on which they settled is still known as Vegetarian Creek .- Kansas City Star.

Lights on the Great Reform. The healing above is the title of report by the Wisconsin Bureau of Labor and Industrial Statistics,, J. D. Beck, Commissioner. This report is interesting on several accounts. Remembering the large brewing interests in Milwaukee one would hardly expect Wisconsin to be one of the first states to investigate through official channels this important question. The act of the legislature empowered the Commission to obtain any information desired and made it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment, for any person or firm to refuse to give any information sought. The introduction opens with the statement that "the use of alcoholic liquors is quite generally recognized to be detrimental to the best interests of society. Notwithstanding the prevlence of this belief surprisingly little Las been done towards gathering a body of definite information concerning the magnitude of the interests involved in the manufacture and retail of liquors, the effect of their use on the public and the relative merits of the various plans looking toward the discontinuance of such use. The starting point of effective regulation must be based upon an accurate, scientific knowledge of the nditions that create and maintain the traffic in liquors." The first chapter deals with the magnitude of the liquor traffic in th United States and otes freely from the well-known Federal _abor Report of '97-'98 bringing many of its statistics down to date The second chapter deals with the effects of the liquor traffic using for its data the 26th report of the Massachusetts Bureau of Labor, also well-known to investigators of the loguor traffic evils. The third chapter has for its title "A Few Facts Bearing on the Question of Further Regulation or Restriction." Chapter IV is a summary of the preceding chapters, and closes with the statement: "Statistics, common observation and the history of political parties all seem to emphasize that prohibitory legislation is not suited to the present temper of the American people. The best thought of the time is beginning to unite in the belief that the solution of the liquor problem doe not lie in either high license or Prohibition or goveramental dispensary. The liquor intien: study and careful thought must devise some means which will more effectively satisfy the want which the saloon at present supplies."

"The number of cities and villages having the various rates for saloon licenses are as follows: Minimum rate, 187 cities and villages, or 63.2 per cent of all; medium rate 14 citiand villages, of 4.7 per cent of all; and maximum rate, 95 cities and villages, or 32.1 per cent of all cities and villages granting licenses."

"The total population of the cities ard, villages reporting licenses in force was 990,031, or 95 percent of the population of all cities and villages reporting. The total population of all towns reporting licenses in force was 551,923, or 52.6 per cent of the population of all towns. The total population of all licensing towns, cities and villages was 1,541,-954, or 74.8 per cent of the popuiation of all towns, cities and villages eporting."

EASTER LOVE FEAST.

Quaint Custom of the Moravians of Lancaster County, Pa.

It is a great privilege to witness the Easter observances at the old Moravian town of Lititz, Lancaster county, Pa. In churches of this denomination the men and women sit on the opposite sides of the "meeting house," as do the Shakers and Quakers and the Harmonyites of Economy. During the love feast a number of men servers come in at the door on one side of the house and a like number of women enter from the opposite side. They carry wooden trays piled high with sweetened bread, and after they have passed this all around, the men serving the men and the women serving the women, they bring in enormous cups of steaming hot coffee. The feast is partaken of in silence on the part of the feasters, but the preacher exhorts all the while, and the band plays without ceasing. Every Moravian church has its brass band.

The love feast is held the Saturday morning preceding Easter Sunday. But in the afternoon of that day these people have a pretty custom of decorating the graves of their dead, which seems to be particularly appropriate at the Easter season since done in the faith that the dead "will rise again and live forever."-

Later on in the day the mothers of the little Moravians prepare the nests of what is known to these small people as "the good rabbit." How they do shout and rejoice on Easter morning when they discover the nests all filled with colored eggs laid by the good rabbit in nests hidden in dense grass, straw piles and other hard to find places!

At 5 o'clock Easter morning the Moravian minister takes his stand on the church steps and reads a litany and the verse of a hymn, which the congregation, standing around him in the chilling dawn, take up and sing to masic furnished by the church band. After this they make a second pilgrimage to the graveyard. This service is to commemorate the visit of the holy women to the tomb of Jesus. The minister bares his head and reads the Easter litany.

By this time the sun has risen, and its light gleams across graves that were yesterday strewn with flowers that are now beaded with diamond dew. It would be hard to imagine a more impressive ceremony than this. All that would seem to you and to me grewsome now dies out of the hymn, and a song full of joy and triumph, derise to the very heavens, and the people smile and shake hands and rejoice. The Moravians share the belief of the Irish peasantry that the sun dances on Easter morning.-Washington Post.

PIGEONS OF ST. MARK'S.

Why Venice Venerates Them, Particularly on Easter Day.

There is a tradition, now generally accepted in Venice, which tells how the great doge made a formal and ceremonious visit to the Piazza San Marco one Palm Sunday centuries ago. With him went his entire suit of officials, including the foreign ambassadors residing in Venice. The presence of this host of dignitaries, the blare of the silver trumpets that announced their coming and the magnificence of the processions greatly impressed the people of the city, who were gathered, as many as could be accommodated, on the edges of the plazza and in nearby

The doge was moved to show his bounty to his subjects, so he had a number of pigeons, each one weighted by having a piece of paper tied to one of its legs, released from the gallery of St. Mark above the portico where the bronze horses rear their gigantic 27m3 bodies. The pigeons thus hampered were easily caught by the greedy crowd waiting in the square below, and those who were lucky enough to capture these sacred birds took them home and fatted them up for their Easter dinner. A few of the pigeons escaped and sought refuge high up in the domes of the church, where the hand of man could not reach them. The fact that the pigeons found safety in the very dome of the tomb of St. Mark worked on the superstitious natures of the multitude, and they at once believed that the good saint had given the birds protection and had thus signified his wish that the pigeons should be regarded as sacred creatures henceforth.

From that time until the present day the pigeons of St. Mark's have been safe from the sacrllegious hand of man, and ever since it has been the custom to give them extra attention and food on the anniversary of their being taken under the protection of the saint of the church. That is why everybody who is in Venice on Easter Sunday provides an extra supply of food for the pigeons of St. Mark's,-New York Herald.

Strange Good Friday Custom. In Munich and Vienna the churches on Good Friday are the scene of a very striking picture of the burial of Christ. A figure of the Saviour is carried in state around the church to the altar, where is a sepulcher, to which access through an opening formed by artificial rocks awaits it. The windows are darkened, and through the gloom the eyes of thousands of awed worshipers are drawn to the tomb. where a solitary light illumines the white palled figure of the crucified Christ. In some parts of Austria large processions parade the streets, headed by priests riding on horses and bearing banners, with an escort of white robed choristers chanting hymns, and in Bavaria the peasants form processions, hundreds, sometimes thousands, strong, heralded by a man bearing a gigantic candle.

TRADE UNIONS AND SALOONS.

Important English Labor Movement.

Strenuous efforts are now being nade in England to divorce meetings i workingmen altogether from public uses (saloons).

It will doubtless surprise the workng men of America to learn that out f 2,393 local branches of nine imortant trade unions in the United Kingdom, having a total membership of 352,816, no less than 1,716 branches, or 72 per cent. of the whole, hold their neetings in public houses The case is ast serious in larger unions. The imalgamated Society of Engineers, vith a membership of 94,157, has 73 of its branches meeting in drink hops. The Amalgamated Society of arpenters and Joiners, with a memership of 62,000, has 68 per cent., and hat of the railway servants, with a embership of 55,000, 73 per cent. of peir branches meeting in public ouses. In the case of the Friendly ociety of Ironfounders the percentre is 92, and in the boilermakers, n and steel shipbuilders, it is 83. in Grant Britain a number of leaders workingmen's organizations are

o leaders in temperance work. 1 Burns is an example who stands which the estimation of the commuas a labor leader, a temperance "ocate and a progressive legislator. nother of the prominent English rades unionists is Mr. Isaac Mitchell, who is the labor candidate for Darington, and is secretary for the General Federation of Trades Unions.

Mr. Mitchell is about to initiate a emperance movement inside the la-or movement. He is seeking to induce trade unions sever entirely their conection with he drink shops, thus at once to save heir weaker members from continual mptation, and to terminate all comlicity with the discreditable traffic. The work of temperance is carried n in connection with almost all other eganizations, why not with labor oranizations?

A Great Army.

According to official statistics, as hered by Commissioner Carroll D. ght, of the Bureau of Labor, there + 140 cities in the country having a rulation of 30,000 and upwards. in these cities there were, in 1898, 1.820 people arrested for drunkenpas, almost ten times as many as ow comprise our army in the Philip-

If this great army of drunkards were arshaled for a parade, marching wenty abreast, it would require four nd one-half days, marching ten hours a day, for them to pass a given point. And these 295,000 drunks do not inclirde the arrests for "disorderly conluct," "assault" and a dozen other offences which grow out of the legalzed rum business. The total arrests for all causes in these cities was 915,-167. Counting the moderate estimate of three-fourths of these as being the victims of lawful saloons, it would require more than a week's marching, twenty abreast, for the great procession to stagger past a reviewing stand -and the rum product of only 140 cities heard from.

A WORTHY OBJECT.

Temperance Work Among American Seamen.

Miss Emma Alexander who is in harge of the W. C. T. U. for work mong seamen for New York State

"We have many bright, clean young men, in the navy,-total abstainers -who want to uphold the flag and he uniform, and feel keenly the concuousness of their uniform, and ant anything being done that would I to make the sailor disgrace it.

"The life of the sailor is unique in mrny respects. He is kept aboard ships for days, and sometimes weeks nd months, and when he has his librty he must give vent to pent-up er' 's, and unless good influence is brought to bear upon him when on the outside, he is received with open arms by the saloon element.

"I meet many boys whose mothers are members of the W. C. T. U., and in my experience aboard ship and in the hospitals, it is a real pleasure to meet them, and have them tell me about the "home folks."

"Recently two fine looking young fellows called at my home in uniform, one from St. Paul, and one from Austin, Tex., and after sitting for a little while in the parlor and taking in the surroundings one of them said: Well, doesn't it seem good to get in a home." And in a moment or two more said, "would you mind if I played on the piano?" I said, "Certainly not, I would be glad to have you." He proved to be quite a musician, and was simply homesick and hungry for the sight of a home and for home influence. This is what our men need and want and not a Government Saloon.-Emma Alexander.

17 Beers on Wager Fatal.

After drinking 17 glasses of beer in wick succession, "Joe" Richardson, a porter, dropped dead in a saloon at Colfax recently. He had made a bet that he could drink 25 glasses of the beverage.

Richardson's beer drinking contest gainst time was widely advertised ports for many miles around drove to colfax. Several hundred spectators cheered him as he poured down 10 glasses. He then took a short rest, while great beads of perspiration burst out on his forehead. He supported his heart with one hand, showing that organ was weak. Richardson had scarcely emptied the 17th glass when he gave an exclamation of pain and fell over or the platform dead

tle Does Very Well There, is an Efficient Planter and Miner. "I am very much interested in the cucation of the negro. In the colmy which I am the Governor, we ve a population of 5,000,000 neoes and 1,500 white people, 504 whom are officials, and the rest --chants and people connected th and interested in the mining "stries," said Sir John Rodger. evernor of the Gold Coast, West virica. "It seems to me that our degro problem is of a less complicated nature than that of the United States. I dont know whether the act that the Gold Coast negro is a full blood, no mixture with white blood, has anything to do with it or not The full blood negro seems to be more amenable, more simple minded possibly, and is therefore more apt to follow the instructions of his white teacher. We have made considerable progress with their education, which is naturally of the primary character. We also teach ther to be agriculturists and artisan., and they are making wonderul progress in those directions. The cocoa plantations are almost entirein the hands of negroes, who cultivate them to the highest degree of efficiency; making the article the greatest and most important item of export of the colony. Gold mining is raother great industry of the colon. In this work the negro also is doing the work. He is invaluable in the mines.

Banana Tree a Wonderful Thing.

"The banana furnishes us with n. with handkerchiefs, with wax, with blacking, with excelsior, with oi!, with flour, with window cord. and with brishes."

The speaker, a bananc planter from Jamaica, paused and smiled.

· You don't believe me, do you? h said "Yet, truly, the banana tree is a wonderful thing. part of it serves some good use. Thus the long leaves make a fine excelsior. The juice being rich in tannin, furnishes a good indelible ink and a good shoe polish. The stems yield a fine quality of hemp, and from this homy there are made lace handkerinlefs, cords, and ropes of all kinds, na and brushes. The oil is used in gilding. Of banana flour, the flour ground from the dried fruit, there on use speaking-you are too familiar with it.

"Run down to Jamaica this winter, he concluded. "You couldn't nave a finer winter trip. Bathe in the sea on Christmas Day, and buy, it you are wise, a small banana plantation for there is one other thing that the banana yields, and that is -wealth."-Philadelphia Bulletin.

THOSE WHO SEEK REAL VALUES

In high grade clothing have learned to look to THE MODEL for the simple solution of this apparently complex problem-the securing of correct attire at a fair price.--THE MODEL is indeed a store for all the people--a store whose success has been achieved simply by giving the public what it wants, when it wants it, at the price it wants to pay--and that price we add is invariably the lowest consistent with quality. This season more than ever, we were extremely particular in selecting clothes of quality, style, fit and workmanship that lasts--and every garment is a splendid example of the highest attainment in the tailoring art.

'Gream Separator Patents."

The suit commenced in November, 1906, by the Vermont Farm Machine Company and the Empire Cream Separator Company, jointly, against the Chicago mail-order house of Sears, Roebuck & Co., has been decided against the latter, and a sweeping injunction has been issued by the United States Court against all users of the infringement.

In the development of this suit it was made clear that the cream rator made by the house was identical with the one made by the Iowa Dairy Separator Company, of Waterloo, Iowa, and so under the law the injunction is against them as that suits will result from the sale or use of any separators involved in the decision.

This suit and decision are of par ticular interest to dealers every where, from the fact that the compe tition on cream separators by Sears, Roebuck & Co., has been very active, and while on a separator of construction similar to the standard makes they could not undersell the regular dealer, yet their advertising has been of such a deceptive nature as to fool and confuse the buyer, to the great annovance of the dealer.

In this connection we will say that a grand jury in Iowa has recently indicted Sears, Roebuck & Co. for fraudulent use of the mail, by illustrating and describing things that they did not supply, when money was paid for articles describ-

come up that demands the attention

The injunction and decree has, of course, been appealed to the Court of Appeals, for it is to be expected that firms like the Iowa one, who have lived by imitation and waxed rich, and then houses like the cata logue one mentioned, will fight to the accomplish delay.

The Vermont Farm Machine Company and the Empire Cream Separator Company mean business, as may be seen from the attached announceand injunction.
