An Unfair Advantage.

Peter and Paul were on a journey. The day was hot. The saints were dry and parched. Nearing a wayside tavern, it was agreed that they throw dice for the refreshments so much needed. Paul threw double sixes and turned to Peter and smiled. Peter, nothing daunted, threw and showed double sevens. With a look of reproach upon his face Paul turned upon Peter and exclaimed, "Now, Peter, Peter; no miracles between friends."

The Banker and the Poet.

"This minor poetry seems futlle to me," the banker said, sneering, "Anybody can turn it out. A lunatic can write minor poetry. It's only a question of rhymes.'

"You sneer at rhymes," interjected the fat and bald poet. "Give me a rhyme for 'lounge.'

The banker thought for three minutes, but in vain. He was stumped. "Try me again," he said.

"A rhyme for 'sylph.' " Again the banker failed. "A rhyme for 'wasp.' "

"Nothing doing," said the banker after a long pause. " 'Gulf.' 'mouth,' 'hemp,' 'pint,

"By jingo," said the banker, "I can't think of a rhyme for any of those words!" The minor poet tried him with "bl!ge," "depth," "wolf," "with," "volt," "scarf," "sauce," "fugue," "bulb" and bourn.

'I'm stuck," confessed the banker. "Minor poetry is harder than I thought. It's a wonder to me you fellows are not paid more."

"We don't care anything about the pay. It's the glory we are after," the answered, with dignity. "But I have been tricking you. For the words that I gave you there isn't a rhyme in the English tongue."-Philadelphia Bul-wrote to Mark Twain; "I picked up your last volume. I read it clear through from cover to cover. It was like a bobtailed flush-I could not lay it down." Mr. Clemens answered as follows:

A Mark of Respect.

Andrew Carnegie was entertaining a Montenegrin prince at Skibo castle. The morning after the prince's arrival a party of guests set out in a huge motor car for a long run, and as they whizzed past an inn a great crowd of highlanders rose from the benches before the inn and saluted.

The prince seemed amazed at the highland dress.

"Why," he asked, "do these men go bare legged?"

"It is a local custom," said Mr. Carnegle, "a mark of respect for you, sir. In some places people take off their hats to show honor to distinguished visitors; here they take off their trou-

Going to the house, the vender said "Your husband, madam, sent me from the cafe with this calendar, which he wishes you to buy for his desk." The woman paid a quarter for the calendar, and the vender returned to the cafe where her husband sat. While he was trying to make more sales there the husband went home, heard of the trick that had been played on his wife and him and, ringing up his butler, said furiously: "Go down to the cafe at once and bring up the calendar vender you'll find there."

The butler found the vender busy with a customer and delivered his message. But the vender, handing out another calendar, said:

"Oh, I know what your boss wants. He wants a calendar. Have you got a quarter? It will save me the trip up. Taking the calendar with one hand and extending a quarter with the other, he hurried back home, Heredity.

"Your daughter plays well," a woman said to the mother,

"Yes," was the reply. "She does have a fine touch, and it's no wonder, for she loves the piano and never tires of it. Ye see, she's a great taste for music; but, then, that's only natural, for her grandfather had his skull fractured with a cornet at a picnic."

Conducting by Illustration.

Once Dr. Hans Richter, the famous London orchestral conductor, not satisfied with the rendering of a scene from "Tristan and Isolde," stopped the rehearsal and asked for more dignity in the playing, adding that Isolde was the daughter of a king, not of a cook.

On another occasion, while rehearsing Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" music, Richter was by no means satisfied that the needful warmth of expression had been obtained. "Gentlemen, gentlemen," said he, "you all play like married men, not like lovers." The other day, while rehearsing a Mozart symphony in which the first violins had a number of delicate trills and turns to perform, these were played too heavily for Richter, and he exclaimed: "Please, gentlemen, pianissi-Queen Mab-not suffragettes.'

Mrs. Grant once asked the general to discharge their old coachman, who had made a botch of some simple errand. "Well, mother," replied the hero of Appomattox, "If John could do everything you wanted him to do and do it right he would not have to be our coachman."

40.ALS VS. MUSCLE.

Aug. 9, '08.—(I. Sam. 17:1-'8.)

In the early ages brute force ruled the world. Might made right and authority was seated in "the big stick." The club, the bludgeon, the tist enforced obedience. There was a word and a blow and the blow came first. Fear was the motive that drove men to action, and men held their position not by morals but by

Hence, men came to venerate size, and bow down in submission at the feet of ponderous bulk. The man of superior biceps ruled over the weakling. Brobdignag stalked derisively and contemptuously through a world o" Liliputians. That is the way it was in the ages when men were coming up from the cave dwellings. For many generations the man who could outrun, outjump, outwrestle, outstrike his fellows was crowned with

It was so even down to the days of David whose battle with Gollath forms a spectacular and dramatic incident in bibiical history. For days the giant of Gath had sent consternation through a whole army. Single handed he had held all the fighting erce of the Hebrews at bay. He was undoubtedly a terror. He towered above all ordinary men I ke an oak among saplings. His legs were pillars, his arms were columns, his voice was thunder, his tread shook the earth. Clothed in armor, his shield borne by an attendant, his apear the size of a weaver's beam, he struck consternation into every heart, as he strutted up and down the battlefield and challenged any man to mortal combat. That is the way he impressed the cowering Hebrews.

But the little stripling David sized him up and estimated him at his real value as an "uncircumcised Philistine." He said in effect: You do not estimate Goliath properly. You estimate nim with the yard stick and the tape line and that is not the proper standard to use on him. I do not look upon his height; I ask no questions respecting the strength of his muscles, the length of his staff, the circumference of his chest, the swing of his arm; he is an uncircumcised Philistine and is by that very David was no match for the Philistine in bulk, but he was more than his equal in science and skill. . He could not lift the giant's spear, but he knew how to swing a .. ing at a hair's breadth and not miss.

He did not know al. Goliath's strong points but he knew his weak point. As in so many other cases he knew that Goliath was weakest right behind his forehead, and he sent a new idea into it in the shape of a stone from his sling before the glant could bring his artillery into action. Goliath never got over hig surprise

So now, everything depends on the way you look at things. David saw "Remove the lid from that pail," he things in their moral bearing. The others looked only on the outward appearance. They saw the size of the staff, the bunching muscles, the haughty stride. David saw that the conflict was a contention between light and darkness, between right and wrong, between God and the devil, and he knew there could be only "Disgraceful!" he exclaimed. "Call one ovicome in that battle.

It is written in the stars that sooner or later what is right must slay what is wrong. The only standard of measurement is the moral standard. Viewed materially, the Philistine was perfectly right in scornfully laughing at the weapons which the stripling produced. It was a most unequal contest from the standpoint of military equipment. But no sympathy need be wasted on the man who attacks matter wit. mind. Goliath in David's hands was as helpless as an elephant in front of a hunter armed with a repeating rifle loaded with explosive bullets. The sportsman has only to crook his finger to lay the glant of the forest low.

Every gigantic evil that bostrides the path of the world's progress has its death warrant already signed. In the most inexpected moment, and from the most unexpected quarter the champion will step forth who has been raised up to give it its quietus. To doubt that is to be blind to the facts of history. To doubt that is to put the 20th century back into the stone age. To doubt that is to crawl back into the dens with the cave men. To doubt that is to banish God from venient for you to settle that little ac-His world.

These are the maxims with which he doubting and fearful of hearlave been consoled in all ages. Evil men are always just going to devous he good, but somehow just before he cruel teeth bite they get the lockaw. Goliath struts and frightens he timid with his braggadocio, but n the end little David decapitates the boaster. The ammunition of truth is more than sufficient. David chose five smooth stones from the

THE HIGHER LIFE

Core of Christianity.

The very core of Christianity lies in the text, "Whosoever willeth to save his soul shall lose it, and whosoever is willing to lose his soul for My sake shall find it," and presentations of Christianity which ignore or repudiate this law are not only defective but radically faise. They are built on another foundation and not on the Christ crucified .- Rev. James Peterson, Episcopal.

Selecting a Standard.

When we seek an example of absolute purity of character we are compelled to turn to Jesus. When we desire an example of complete self-sacrificing service we remember the matchless story of the life of Jesus. And whenever we would have an example of strength of character in majestic perfection we look admiringly at the strong Son of God.

In the Game of Life.

With the unyielding diligence of parental love our Father watches His children at play here below, and His desire and purpose is that we shall win in the game of life. To bring about that divine result G. N. STUPP. "toward which the whole creation moves," we must do our part as brave and true sons and daughters of God. Boys and girls, men and women, let us play fair, play hard and "place premium upon character."-Rev. Chas. Boynton, Episco-

Power of Riches.

It has been said that a rich man, though he be a sinner, can do more good in two minutes by the mere signing of a bit of paper than many isfy you in quality and price. faithful souls can accomplish in a life-time of faithful service in the Master's Vineyard. Can it be, therefore, that the rich man can receive the greater reward? Not so, else were the saints less pleasing in the sight of God than many pagan princes and heathern philanthropists. Charity is the gague of merit, and a man is rewarded in proportion as he gives lovingly .. - Rev. Thos. Dixon Episcopal.

Teachings of Jesus.

teachings of Jesus are designed to provide foundations for practical systems of business and industry, as well as of religion. They are so definite and so comprehensive that an industrial system adapted to present day conditions can easily be constructed from them, such a system would, of course be first Christian. But it would be intensely practical as a business proposition. It would be adapted to the task of taking men as they are, and conditions as they are, and operating the system for results as they ought to be.—Rev. Frank Case, Presbyterian.

Incentive to Progress.

Let us not forget the real meaning of the phrase. "It is expedient for you that I go away." God's withdrawals are essential to progress, that is what it means, and no exception is made to the general rule. It is a curious thing, says a recent writer, that men do not seem to understand this great fact when they come to talk of pain and sorrow and death. Undoubtedly there is less of disease and pain in the world than there once was, an probably a great deal that is preventable, but that pain and disease and sorrow can be en-Urely removed from the world, or that they are wholly and essentially evil is a very misleading doctrin. -Rev. Chas. Parkhurst, Presbyter-

The Power of Evil.

There is nothing like a full equipment for any great and good task. Banker Building. Time, spent in preparation for any great work is rarely if ever wasted. Many fall and fail in life beause they are so poorly prepared. So is it in the Christian life. The Christian art is the highest art in the world-the art of right living. To live aright, to make the most of life -to make this life the fittest beginning of the endless life, the Christian needs the best preparation, the fullest equipment. Many fall in the Christian life because they do not make use of the infinite resources that a divine Master and a loving Father wait and wish to give them. They do not take on the whole armor of God, but only some little part of it, and so the powers of evil plerce them hrough.-Rev. Chas. Anderson, Baptist.

Breadth of Thinking. Some men are broad because they have no depth; some men are so broad because they are so deep. This is real breadth. It is conditioned by depth. Breadth does not mean that and man or anything is good enough-Mark his: No man can be broad who has not agonized about truth. To be broad means to look through another's eyes, and then be sympathetic. It does not mean to be false to principal, and disloyal to conviction. Jesus Christ was the broadest man because His sympathy was unlimited. He loved the Samaritan as well as the Jew. His heart went out to all the weak, the sick, the sinful. His breadth found its climax in the prayer on the cross: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." That is breadth; a love for all, even your enemies; a desire to serve all.

COURT RULES WEARY QUEEN.

Alfonso's Bride Finds Spanish Cus toms Very Trying.

Before the marriage of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria many people prophesied that she with her fresh, simple unconventionality would be too much for the stiff convention of the Spanish court. More, however, considered that the conventions would be too much for her, says the New York Sun.

Accordingly, the latter case appears to be coming true. The young woman's appearance. For instance, Queen is said to be particularly an- one whose hair is unmanageble will noyed at the obstacles put in the way of inviting old friends to stay one teaspoonfu. of glycerine to with her. her side, but the ladies of the court remained unmoved. So the young Queen wrote to King Edward for advice, which came in the form of a recommendation to be sensible and respect the people's stupidity when necessary and in time, if you are wise, you will have everything your own way."

Another court custom which tries the patience of the young Queen is that she must appear at dinner every evening in full State evening dress. If she appeared at a quiet dinner in the simple evening gown which is favored by all the royal ladies of England at such domestic gatherings the Spanish court would be dumbfounded.

One should never go to bed hungry. Morpheus prefers to be treated more hospitably, and objects to that 'gone feeling." A cracker or a cup of hot bouillon is a splendid antidote for sleepiness.

Sleep is one of the strongest foundation boards of health and a magic aid to beauty and happiness, and a little attention to the pros and cons will prove well worth while.

Tucked Blouse With Yoke. Every variation of the tucked blouse finds its place. It not alone is a favorite for lingerie materials and for the thin silks that are similarly treated, but for all materials of sufficiently light weight to allow of tucking. This one includes a yoke of unusual shape and can be treated after a number of ways. In the illustration Persian lawn is combined with yoke of inserted tucking and trimming of embroidery and fancy stitches. The walst is made with a fitted lining, which can be used or omitted as material renders desirable, and itself consists of front backs and yoke. The fronts are tucked and joined to the yoke and the closing is made invisibly at the back. The sleeves are comfortably full, tucked at their lower edges, and can be finished at the elbows with straight cuffs or continued to the wrists and finished with deep ones that match the yoke.

Pallid Faces Made Red by Applying Iced Pads After Washing Flesh in Hot Water-Lotions of Water and Zinc for Noses.

Sometimes the implest little aids will make a marked difference in a find that by applying a mixture of ends of tresses these short strands stay neatly in place. In putting on the mixture it should be well shaken and then applied to the hair with a soft brush just before the dressing.

When short hairs are obdurate the the best me:h ds of training is to put them on curlers. Afterward they should be combed out until soft and fuffy.

Another simple aid to peauty is the ce bath that makes pallid cheeks ced. To pring color into use two round pads a trifle larger than a silver dollar. They should be made from thick flannes covered smoothly with linea.

While these are soaking in iced water wash the face gently with warm, not really hot water.

Then as soon as the skin is dried, which should be done immediately after the laving, the pads are taken from their bath, shaken to throw off superfluous wet and placed directly on that part of each cheek where color is desired. The secret of success with this lies in the washing being done with really warm water and the compresses being icy cold.

As simple remedies will help to beautify shiny noses that have such an annoying habit of refusing to be modified by powders, it is well to apply one of these liquid balms that may be made at home. A lotion that is said to effect a cure of the trouble is made of one ounce of distilled water, eight minims of distilled tincture of lavencer and two grains of sulphate of zinc.

This should be well mixed and applied about four times a day, never allowing it to remain on over night. Put it on with a piece of soft musgood dancer," declared Edward M. Greenway, leader of cotillons. "But I'll tell you a compliment a young woman did pay me once. She said: You took me through that crowd without a collision and without any one treading on my skirt.

"Well, I never had a dancing lesson in my life. But I used to practice dancing in the days when women wore those great long trains, and it was not considered good form to pick them up. They trailed along behind several yards. Those were the days when you had to guide and keeping moving with your partner so as to keep that train following gracefully."

"But how did you practice?" "Used to tie two sheets to an ordinary chair and then dance in and out among a dozen chairs scattered over a dance floor."-San Francisco Chronicle.

Why Women Ride Astride.

"It is the general opinion among the physicians with whom I associate," writes a correspondent of the New York Medical Journal, "that the fashion or women riding astride has not had its origin in fad so much as it has in the advice of physicians of our modern type.

"The fact that a person riding astride can have more freedo a from jar and jolt than one riding on a side saddle, should be a point in favor of the astride method, aside from the fact of it being safer and easier for the rider.

"The fact that it might be considered immodest by those who are not familiar with the astride method of riding is no reason why it should be condemned. The man reason why it is becoming more popular is beause that phys.cians in general see its good points over the old method and are thus advisin- it."

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

They Had Many Curious and Interesting Origins.

The little customs that have come to be a part of the marriage ceremony have had diverse and interesting origins. The ring has played an important part.

With the coming in of Christianity it was no longer placed on the right forefinger but on the left third finger. The priest, or in some cases the groom, first put it on the thumb, saying, "In the name of the Father:" on the torefinger, adding. "In the name of the Son;" on the second finger, continuing, "in the name of the Holy Ghost:" then on the third finger with "Amen"-and there it re-

The bridal veil originated in Bible times and was worn until all the public ceremonies were over, so it can readily be understood how Jacob was deceived into marrying Leah instead of her sister Rachel. In the Anglo-Saxon wedding ceremeny a square piece of veiling was held over the head of the bride to conceal her embarrassment.

In the later Bible days, during the period between the betrothal and the wedding, the bride remained with her friends and could communicate with her affianced only through "the friend of the bridegroom," as mentioned in John III, 29, who also performed other services for the groom. Throwing shoes originated in the old Jewish custom of handing to the purchaser of land an old shoe as a token of surrender or renunciation (see Ruth iv, 7). The bride's father gave a shoe to the husband or threw it after him to signify they surrendered to him all authority over their daughter.

Throwing rice symbolized fruitfulness and plenty from its general distribution over the world.

Taking the husband's name originated in Roman times, though the date is not known. . When Julia married Pompey her name became Julia of Pompey. Modern women omit the "of" in the name .- Deline-

Dashing Hat in Black Lezhorn.

The "Merry Winow" hat has carried all before it and been the foundation for no end of charming modeis for spring and summer wear. The last word in elegance is this design

Wings of great sweep pointing starply upward, aihrettes of great roses or other flowers nodding high at front or side, pheasant plumes, gourah feathers, &c., extending to an astonishing point beyond the the hat and head lines—all have grown familiar, and yet, as has been said, the rank and file of the new hats are celightful and every woman can surely find something becoming provided she has the taste to know what L becoming to her and is not led away solely by love of the prevailing mode.

Don't Live in New Houses.

Why is a new house unhealthful? That is a question that has been asked by many and been answered by few. And yet the reason is obvious. In the construction of just one medulm sized nouse it is estimated that over thirty thousand gallons of water is used.

This water does not evaporate as quickly as it would in the air and sunlight, but lies near the surface of the earth under the house and in the walls of the cellar. Hence, the bouse is damp, and damp houses foster illness. A house that has been standing for a year or so, is much more healthful than a new one.

Cause for Alarm.

They were about to entertain a few friends, and her husband suddenly busied himself with the umbrellas, carrying them upstairs. When he had taken up the last one, she said to him, somewhat amazed: 'Why, dear, why do you hide the umbrellas like that? Are you afraid

ORIGIN OF MOVING PICTURES.

Result of an Experiment to Show

Both Sides of a Coin at Once. The beginning of the moving ploture was in this wise: Sir John Herschel after dinner in 1826 asked his friend Charles Babbage, how he would show both sides of a shilling at once. Babbage replied by taking a shilling from his pocket and hold ing it to a mirror.

This did not satisfy Sir John, who set the shilling spinning upon the table, at the same time pointing out th if the eye is placed on a level with the rotating coin both sides can be seen at once. Babbage was so struck by the experiment that the next day he described it to a friend. Dr. Fitton, who immediately made a working model.

On one side of a disk was drawn a bird, on the other side an empty bird cage. This model showed he persistence of vision on which all moving pictures depend for their effect. The eye retains the image of the object seen for a fraction of a second after the object has been removed. This model was called the thaumotrope. .

Next came the zoetrope or wheel of life. A cylinder was perforated with a series of slots and within the cy inder was placed a band of drawings or dancing men. On the apparbeing slowly rotated the figures seen through the slots appeared to be in motion. The first systematic photographs taken at regular intervals of men and animals were made by Muybridge in 1877.

Early Wireless Experiments.

I 1842 Prof. Morse sent signals across the Susquehanna River without metallic connections by means of wires stretched along the bank.

.1859-James Lindsay, of Dundee, read a paper before the British Society stating that if wires were run along the coast of America and Great Britain and charged with electricity, he could send messages from Britain to America.

1864- (December)-Clerk Maxwell defined at the Royal Society to a certain extent ether waves, and showed that wireless telegraphy would be possible by means of electro-magnetic waves.

1879-Prof. D. Hughes found that a microphone in connection with the telephone produced sounds in the latter when the microphone was at a distance of several feet from coils through which a currentwas passing 1885-Sir William Preece of the General Post-Office, London, sent currents between wires a quarter of a mile apart.

1886-Sir William Preece sent currents between parallel wires four and one-half miles apart. 1892-Sir William Preece established regular connection between Flatholm, an island fort in the British Channel, and Lavernock, on the Welsh coast, three and one-half miles distant.

1897-Marconi sent signals from Lavernock to Flatholm and introduced the high or aerial wire.

Naval Practice.

Breakfast is the only meal aboard shir when guests are not expected; for much of the real ship work of the day is between that time and luncheon hour. Most of the large social affairs are of the nature of afternoon teas and receptions from 3 unti! 6 o'clock. These are really afternoon balls. Tae decks of the warships are enclosed in canvas and draped with flags of the United States and foreign nations. The admiral of the fleet and the captain of the ship as assisted in receiving by their wives and daughters and those of the officers. After the guest pays his respects to those receiving, dancing is the order of the afternoon and refreshments are served at a buffet in the wardroom or cabin The uniform worn on such occasions, is the frock coat -the afternoon dress of our navy. All the officers dance, for they have been required to pass in this science at the Naval Academy as in higher mathematics. It is part of their duty. When Admiral Higginson was commander of the North Atlantic Squadron midshipmen were made to understand that dancing and the performance of other polite acts on socia occasions were necessary; when th: admiral entertained some of the younger officers were detailed for dancing duty.

Grecian Breadmaking Modernized. The ancient custom of baking bread in Greece is being changed. The lung is the favority kind, however, and has "the head of a care el, the horns of a deer, the sys of a rabbit, ears of a cow, neck of a snake, belly of a frog, scales of a caro, class of a hawk and palm of a tiger." Easy Marriage, Too.

It may be unfair to charge upon easy divorce all the ills of the marriage state which lead to scandal. With divorce possible some couples may be less tolerant and even less discreet than they would if the tie were very difficult to sever. But the evil of too easy marriage appears to be a prime cause for many cases of ill mating. Young people do not take thought and face the requirement that the union is to be "for better, for worse." The many secret marriages and the occasional mock marriages indicate in a degree how the sacrednes of the tie is trifled with.

Checks have been devised to make marriage a serious and more or less difficult affair. The taking out of a license brings the candidates into wholesome contact with the laws of Great Britain and Ireland, Drawing, His- the state. Where a notice is required in advance of the issue of the license the importance of the step is still further emphasized. In this way the very examinations only the following classes of young candidates are reminded that marriage is a social regulation and not merely a trifling formality to cover the indulgence of a whim or a fancy.

The new marriage regulations recently promulgated by the Roman Catholic church are especially directed against the growing tendency toward easy marriage. When promulgating them in the archdiocese of New York Archbishop Farley said, "The unchecked and ever growing evil of divorce is but a symptom of the malignity of the disease that is undermining the moral strength, the virile character and the rugged decency we look for in our national life." In the same connection he declared that marriage is no mere contract entered into for temporary advantages. The regulations referred to are designed to make young persons of marriageable age who are contemplating matrimony act with caution. The ceremony must be performed by the priest of the bride or by some other make the marriage valid in the eyes of the church. Practically the Roman Catholic marriage must be known to the whole parish and to the relatives and friends of the contracting parties, and publicity cannot be avoided without difficulty. Most young people of character are impressed with the solemnity of the actual ceremony of marriage, and it would be well if all were equally impressed with the importance and the solemnity of the life relation straighten up. All sizes for children "I have found Bucklen's Arnica which opens out beyond and for which and adults. Sagar Drug Store, Au. Fourth of July Waste.

The money spent for firecrackers, parades and ceremonies this year may be regretted by some who come out short in pocket and think they have had little in the way of entertainment. It will also furnish texts for philesophers who hold it could be spent in a way to make the result happier for all concerned. But perhaps the devotion of so much money to a celebration the very thought of which is inspiring is not really a waste. People work hard because they wish to do with their own as they like, and human character and civilization do not depend wholly upon meat, drink, shelter and clothes. If the Fourth is only a day for working off superfluous steam perhaps it is worth all it costs. But there is a waste on every Fourth which is not alone irreparable, but useless, waste due to the casualties, the maiming, the blinding, the loss of life, incident to the celebration. Last year 102 deaths and 1,489 injuries were placed on record. It might be said that the injured are in the same boat with the money spenders. They dance and must pay the fiddler. But often the injured are not the dancers at all, only innocent bystanders and maybe those who would be out of danger if they could. And where the funmakers are the victims it often happens that older and cooler, yet perhaps thoughtless or indifferent heads are responsible. Here at least waste might be curtailed with out curtailing the real fun and all round liberty which give the Fourth its unique character.

Soldiering for the Frenchmen in Africa is not a picnic at the present time. The tribesmen in Morocco and Algeria keep things hot the most of the time, and even in the intervals of truce The People's Clothier, Hatter & Furnisher, there is no real peace because of that scary feeling when an alert enemy is just across the line. Probably the fate of the native there will be like that of, the American Indian before the man with the shotgun, most honored when

THE ALEXANDER FEEDER.

It is Simply a Wire-Cloth Cover Over the Cuter End.

This is my second season in the use of the Alexander feeder. I have just added a device to it that pleases me greatly. It is simply a wire cloth e ver over the outer end of the feeder, cepressed into a saucer-shaped receptacle to receive the feed. To fix the feeder cut away the bars with a chisel so the centre of the depression will be 5-8 inch in depth. The wire cloth is held in shape by two small tacks driven through it into the end corners of the trough, and one tack driven down into the center of the depression. For handling the feed, I use a two-gallon sprinkler with the Enemies of Bees.

One of the interesting facts of nature is that of mimicry for protection. In one case our bees are victims to this law of mimicry. This comes through one of our little bugs, which, in my "Bee-keeper's Guide," I call the "stinging bug." This insect is known to science as Phymata erosa. This little bug is a good illustration of this law of mimicry. It is of a dull obscure yellow; and as it hides among the stamens of the goldenrod it is so concealed that it is difficult even for the human eye, sharpened by close scientific observation to discover it. What wonder, then, that the industrious honey-bee all unsuspecting, should come fearlessly into the very clutch of this cruel stinging b.g" I gave the name "stinging bug to this little stabber, as it often punctures man himself so as to cause a severe smart. There is another curious feature about this little murderer that is not specially joyous to the bee- seper. It has its front legs curiously fashioned so as to grasp with them; and as it lies snugly in its floral retreat it can, as bee or other coveted insect comes to it, grasp its luckless prey with one of these strong leg jaws, and, with the other, h d firmly to the flower, and then with its strong beak can pierce and suck its victim bloodless and fifeless. The pymata is widely distributer in our country, and destroys many thousands of bees annually. It is fortunate that our bees are so prolific, as we know of no way to get rid of these bugs, and we may not suffer very serious loss, for the 'ncrease in the hive with a good queen is striking that the loss from the winging bug is not seriously felt.

Feed Under.

i don't believe in feeding in winter, but another Straw will show that I have tried it on a small scale by was of experiment, and after reading "What to Feed Bees in Cold Warther." p. 1556, I am moved to P Je you very strongly, Mr. Editor, to 'av putting the feed under instead or on top. Of course, with a weak er one clustered high up it is not practicable; but where the bees can b induced to come down, as a fair colony will on any mild day in winter, and on any day in the cellar, feeding below has real advantages. It doesn't disturb the bees by uncovering them. A brood-comb can be put te, or Good candy in any dish, wonden or earthen; and if the candy is too soft it can make no trouble below as it can on top. "There isn't room below?" With a 2-inch bottom-board there's plenty of room, and you ought to have nothing else in e hottom-bars for other purposts. But in any case can't you make room below as well as above.

Best Time to Requeen.

Upon further experimenting with a view to determine when is the best time to requeen an aplary I am led to change my views and with my present fight upon the subject, I now consider the latter part of the season, and In the incubator. after the close of the honey-flow from basswood, which in my location, is shout July 20, is the best time to requeen an aplary. One reason for this is we have found that queens reared at this time will keep up brood-rearing late in the season, and will have stronger colonies the next the time of our cell-building colonies is not worth anything at this time, and therefore it costs less to rear queens, since we are out only a very tittle isbor.

Toulouse, Embden and Chints Most Popular at Poultry Shows.

diana Farmer readers what varieties of geese are most popular. We find the Toulouse, Embden and Chints most numerous at the poultry shows. This however, is the strongest proof of their popularity we could possibly produce. The Toulouse and Embden are the two largest varieties that we have. It is not uncommon for a pair of these geese to weigh 58 or 59 pounds. They are great layers and will 'y on an average about 40 eggs a season. They will lay about 17 eggs and then become broody, but if "broken up" from setting they will begin laying again in about a week's time, and lay another clutch of 15 or 17 eggs. Very often they will lay as high as 20 eggs before becoming broody Geese lay every other day generally, and early in the morning. If you wish to use common chicken hens for incubating goose eggs select your largest hens and place not more than six eggs under them; four or five will be a sufficient number if the hen is only of medium size. It is best, however, to help the hen turn the eggs, i. e., about every third or fourth day after they have been in incubation, for at least ten days turn the eggs and sprinkle them with warm water. Goose eggs are very 'bunglesome' for chicken hens, and unless they are assisted in this manner they are not apt to bring off a good hatch. It requires about 30 days' time to incubate geese eggs. Very often you will be required to assist the goslings in getting out of the shell. The first feed for goslings should be corn meal dough; a few inches of black pepper added make it more strengthening for the goslings. Never allow young goslings to run where there is a large body of water. Provide them drinking water in large quantities but avoir running streams or large ponds. They must have water when fed, as it will be noticed they drink water with almost every nouthful of food they take. After goslings begin feathering they can be turned out on grass and live sumptuously. THE HIGHER LIFE

The Law of Heredity.

The law of heredity is a most marvelons law. Thereby the race weeds out ugliness and disease and constantly strengthens health and beauty and virtue. No father liveth unto himself. Family traits flow on through the generations, as the Mississippi flows on through different states. Some of you have been blessed beyond all words, in that gifts many and rich have united in you.-Rev. James Wilson, Unitarian-

How We Will Know God.

How shall we know God? By being like Him. My bretheren, get sin under your feet to-day. Let the blood of Calvary pour into your soul. Then will your whole being be in rapture because of the revelation of God to you and you will exclaim: "I have heard of Thee for years, but now I see Thee." "Now we see through a glass darkly;" but the time is coming when "we shall know even as we are known.'-Rev Dwight Hillis, Baptist.

How We Serve God.

There is a tendency to allow the very things that are supposed to aid us in our realization of God to obscure Him. We shut Him up in the very Book whose open pages are the chart of eternal life. We leave Him behind in the pew where we tried to worship Him on Lord's Day. We say good-by to Him at the family altar where we asked His help for the busy day. That is not as it should be. He has promised to be with us always and nothing less than that is our exalted privelege.

Choice of the Spirit Life.

Our choices in regard to the spirit life will grow strong or weak, according to the prayerful and thought ful attention we pay to spiritual things. If you desire your will to grow strong for the accomplishment of spiritual deeds, daily study God's Word diligently; be much and belevingly in prayer and communion with God; go out with an earnest and loving purpose to win souls for Christ, and "your peace will be like a river, and your righteodeness like the waves of the sea." You will secure and enjoy the abundant life."

Working Our Salvation. Paul resolves a difficulty in these words: "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure." That is, we are to do our best o make our lives he e and now everything they ought to be, physically, mentally, morally, socially, spirituallv' we are to believe that God will empower us in our efforts, so that what He desires shall be accomplish. ed, and we are to rest assured that the net result will be God's plan for us. CHILDREN TO AID THE BIRDS.

A School Army Enlisting to Save the Juardians of Crops.

On the millions of school children in this country final hope of averting the extinction of the valuable insectivorous birds has been rested.

What the Federal Government, the State Legislatures, and even the granges, women's clubs or national commercial organizations have failed to accomplish completely, the National Association of Audubon societies have announced will be now givnomesteaded the tableland had a en to the children of the land to bring about. With these as nucleus, the children are to push the fight until the members of each school in every neighborhood are enlisted in the work of building bird houses and "restaurants" to sustain the sadly thinned ranks of the Minnie Aron.

TO EXTERMINATE THE RAT.

50 Cents a Head for Female Rats Killed and 25 Cents for Males-

In the Middle Ages with their Pied ripers of Hamlin and other wizards who relieved rat-ridden communities of their scourge through the pleasing agency of music, which has charms for the rodent as well as for the human ear, they managed things better and certainly more picturesquely, but for present day condition little Denmark is acquitting itself with honor and efficiency in the campaign against rats, by which the kingdom where once there was "something to has been convulsed for the last four or five years.

San Francisco has also entered on battle royal against the pests. Since the devastating earthquake of April, 1907, the city has been fairly overrun by rats, and so unbearable has the situation become in its menace to healt', chiefly because of the spread of bi bonic plague, that the municipal authorities recently offered a bounty f 0 cents a head for female rats killed and 25 cents a head for males.

It was Mr. Zuschlag, a distinguished civil engineer c. Copenhagen, who first descried the rat peril and in eloquent accents warned his fellow countrymen against the danger to their pockets and their persons of longer supinely submitting to pay the onerous rat tribute He pointed out that the rat kingdom yearly raised a a tax of two million dollars upon the industries of the country, while the indirect losses, the exact figures of which cannot be ascertained, are, as he demonstrated, clearly enormous.

It is no longer as it once was, a crusade of individuals, but one which has received the sanction of law and of parliament. A State grant for a large sum was voted out of which two cents is paid for every rattail produced. An extra levy of about a dollar upon every community of one hundred inhabitants has also been ordered to enrich the cruin Auburn. I grind all my own sade, and this they will each and lenses and can replace broken lenses every one have to pay until the head inspector of the rat control service declares the neighborhood free of rod-

The figures by which Mr. Zuschlag has at last proved to the satisfaction of his countrymen and the law makers of his native land that the loss by rate in Denmark alone amounts to over two million dollars should prove mighty interesting reading in thes days of hard times and urgent retrenchment. To begin with... Mr. Zuschlag makes no attempt to estimate the damage to the field crops, but merely seeks to find out the damago done to the grain after it is housed in the granaries and man calls it his own. .

If the same depredations obtain in America, and Mr. Zuschlag thinks they do, the American rat is not eating us out of house and home, but he is costing us a sum of sixty million dollars a year, which might to better advantage be diverted into other and more profitable channels.

Insects that Eat Lead Pipe.

The astonishing fact that in the Vienna mint the leaden walls, of reservoir containing sulphuric acid, although about 1.7 inches thick, were eaten through by an insect; that the leaden gas pipe in the cafe was also damaged in a like manner, and that also in the sulphuric acid factory in Nussdorf the wall of the lead chamber was found to contain defects from the same cause, has recently attracted attention to the damages done by insects both to wood and to metal, says a writer in the scientific American. Such damages are due to a so of wood wasp, of which there ers many sorts in central Europe. The largest of these, the black and yellow giant wood wasp, resembles the true wasp, which is so feared because of its sting; but close observation shows it to be very different. Its breast and belly are joined by a wide connecting piece, whereas in the rase of the real wasp the "walst" is proverbially small. On the under sile of the elongated belly, the female has a very hard boring device, abou three-fourths of an inch long. Ordinarily this borer is directed backward; but when in use it is turned about its base, so as to make a considerable angle with the axis of the body and is used like a rat-tall file until it makes a hole about seventenths of an inch deep in the wood which it usually chooses to perforate. The egg which the female lays in the wood develops into a caterpillarlike creature with six short legs, and without eyes.

With its sharp, hard jaws, it bites into the trunk of a tree tubular chanhels, which increase in diameter as the wasp grows larger. It swallows 'le wood which it gnaws off, digesting the nutritious portions and discharging the rest in a meal-like form. For two years it eats its way forward in this manner. In the third year the insect creeps out, biting with its jaws through the thin wall which separates it from the outer world, leaving the home of its childhood to enter upon a short life in freedom. Should a tree trunk which has been perforated by such a wasp. and in which ar egg has been laid, be employed when insufficiently seasoned for building purposes, it may happen that some day the Insect, which has been two years working its way through the piece, will suddenly appear in the building. If a piece of such timber which contains a I va. is surrounded by a leaden plate, the insect will not stop at this, but will hite its way through just as though it were of wood.

TAG WITH A FLOATING MINE.

& Norwegian Vessel's Dire Peril in a Typhoon.

Capt. Larz Anderson of the Norwegian tramp steamer Eklund put into the port of Chefoo on the north China coast a while ago, with a tale about how his ship had played tag with a floating mine and a typhoon out of the arm of the Liaotung penin-

The experience of the Norwegian captain was novel only because it combined the typhoon and the floating mine. Other ships in the China sea up between Shantung and Korea have struck the deadly engines so vn by the Russians and Japanese alike during the war. Although the wa has been over some years, floating mines are still bobbing up in the paths of ships.

According to Capt. Anderson the Ekl nd was out of Chinnampo, Korea, bound for Taku, when about 2 o'cloc. on the first afternoon, the lookout on the bridge sighted the floating mine off to the starboard about half a mile ahead. The glass had been falling rapidly all afterngon and Capt, Anderson knew that a typhoon was coming up out of the southeast.

The roaring column of wind struck the Eklund within ten minutes after the mine had been sighted. For the next three hours Capt. Anderson and his crew of twenty-six were casting dice with death every minute. If the typhoon didn't sink them they were certain that the mine would, only one death would be quicker than the other.

It was inky black all about and the rain fell in torrents. Capt. Anderson and two sailors lashed themselves to the rigging way up near the nose of the boat to keep an eye open for the mine. The rest of the crew simply went below and, and waited to hear the crack of doom.

The captain tled himself to the stanchions of the bridge where his hands could reach the engine room signals. He could not hear the voices of the lookouts at the bow, for the wind blew their words out to sea, but he could plainly distinguish the two figures between the whips of spray and the murk of the clouds.

Before the storm had been on for an hour Capt. Anderson saw both lookouts at the bow turn in their place and frantically signal, holding up their hands and pushing them away from them with the violence of desperation. Anderson promptly pulled the signal for reversed engines and although the boat was orly going at half speed it slackened so suddenly that It began to

The bow slewed, and then a great alongside and comber rose up crinkled high over the starboard rail. The captain cast one hasty glance at the wave and tried to right his bow so as to meet it. He wasn't quick enough, the wave came and with it the mine.

"There the thing sat on the top of the wave," said Captain Anderson in detailing the adventure afterward. "It looked like a hedgehog all curled up and asleep, with the glass prickles sticking out in all directions. To break one of those tubes of glass would be set off enough gun cotton to blow the ship to slivers.

"I saw the wave curl with the mina right at the crest, then it broke and came down over the starboard rail. About forty tons of water more or less, hit the bow and shoved our nose under water until the water came up to the bridge.

"I thought we were never going to come up. And, sir, that mine went right over the boat on the top of the wave, passing so near the bridge that I could have reached out and touched it. It slewed off over the port rail and disappeared behind the ship."

That was all the captain of the Eklund saw of the floating mine. When the typhoon passed he found the two lookouts still lashed to their posts dead. Otherwise the ship and the crew were unhurt.

What Happens in a Forest Fire.

The tragedies of the wild are brought home to the human beings of this world when the fires occur in forest that extend close to settlements. Many litt'e farm shacks located in clearings of the Western woods, are completely wiped out by Les fires, and many are the tales of heroism told by frontiersmen whose fellows have fought for their homes and sometimes for the lives of themselves and their families. The pproach of a forest fire is usually heralded by great flocks of birds that fly overhead going with the wind and away from the fire. Soon after a migration of crawling and creeping and run 'ng things is noticed, and this is followed by a smell of smoke. The atmosphere seems to become saturate with the odor of barned wood and grass, and sometimes when the fire is still a mile away the air becomes heated a. from a turnace. If the frontiersman has a large enough clearing surrounding his home he is frequently able, by the use of switches and wet blankets, to stop the fire and let it burn around his home without destroying it. If the clearing is small, however, the cinders and flames carried by the wind, leap the clearing space and lick up the buildings, the cattle, and the people themselves.

Forest fires are sometimes started by hunters, who are careless in throwing away matches after they have lighted their pipes, by woodchoppers, who leave fires after cooking their meals, by the sparks from stacks of locomotives, and by hundreds of other ways .- Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

English capitalists and Japanese manufacturers have organized a trust te control the Japanese match output. One of the aims of the trust will be to exto a the market for Japanese matches into Europe and Australia.
