$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by all Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

REPUBLICANS CELEBRATE THEIR VICTORY

Testimonial Dinner by the Republican Club to Charles E. Hughes, Governor Elect.

Chairman Woodruff Outlines the Nature of Recent Battle and Pledges Support to Administration.

Mr. Hughes Declares Laws Must Be Enforced and Government Must Be For the People.

The Republican club of New York gave a testimonial dinner to Governor Elect Charles E. Hughes at the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of Nov. 23. It was a large affair, attended by about 700 well known Republicans from all sections of the state, who greeted Mr. Hughes and his associates on the ticket with tremendous enthusiasm.

The dinner was notable because it was the first appearance in public of Mr. Hughes since his election and because Chairman Woodruff of the Republican state committee, who conducted the campaign, was the presiding officer.

Mr. Woodruff took occasion to make a most emphatic declaration, in which he pledged the support of the Republican organization to Mr. Hughes in whatever efforts he may make to so conduct the office of chief executive as to give an administration which will meet the wishes and wants of all the people of the state. Mr. Hughes' reply was also of moment, inasmuch as it was his first public utterance as governor elect.

Ex-Governor Frank S. Black, Herbert Parsons, the chairman of the Republican county committee of New York; General Horace Porter and Job Hedges, who accompanied Mr. Hughes the greater portion of his campaign trip, also made speeches.

General Henry E. Tremain, the president of the club, in opening the speeches introduced Chairman Woodruff, who said:

Mr. President of the Republican Club, Fellow Members, Ladies and Gentlemen—The Republican club honors itself in honoring one who, a member of it for nearly twenty years, has recently rendered such conspicuous services to the American people as to be the recipient of this complimentary dinner in the capacity of governor elect of the Empire State. For the inception of this dinner, to which must be given first rank among the many notable functions under the auspices of this club, and for the perfection of its arrangements both members and guests are indebted to the club's loyal and able president, General Henry E. Tremain, and to the indefatigable chairman, Assemblyman Edward R. Finch, who was so afraid that the Republican club wouldn't have the credit of being the first to honor the governor elect that he made all the arrangements to give this dinner the night after election, before all the ballot clerks could possibly get through counting the votes and certifying to the count.

No Man's Funeral.
This occasion is no one's funeral. It is every Republican's feast. On our side it is no man's finish. Many a man has failed of election or re-election to a great public office and yet has contributed so much of value to the cause for which he stood as to increase rather than decrease his influence and the effectiveness of his leadership. This was especially true in the recent campaign, when every one of our candidates subordinated all personal interest to accomplish the defeat of Hearst and insure the election of our candidate for governor. Our unsuccessful candidates, by their records in public and private life and by their utterances on the platform in this and previous campaigns, have come to be most favorably known and esteemed by all the citizens of our Commonwealth. Their defeat cannot be attributed to lack of confidence in them or in that for which they stood, but conditions conspired toward the election of a ticket combining the strength of the Democratic party and the party of discontent, two forces and two columns against our one. Where is the man who will say he thought before the Buffalo convention that such a combination could be beaten? We were only saved from the defeat of our entire ticket by the ebullitions of Hearst and the most fortunate and opportune evolution of Hughes.

Hearst Looks to 1908.
What a splendid illustration of the alertness, wisdom and patriotism of the Republican party in ignoring political precedents and even in opposing powerful political influences when it nominated, with unanimous voice, the one man whom the state and nation were acclaiming as most successful in his achievements in the interest of the people rather than of the politicians, thus meeting, as our party has met in every crisis since it nominated Lincoln to save the Union, the necessities of the hour and playing the people's, not the politicians', part. Yes, a Lincoln in 1860, a McKinley in 1896, a Roosevelt in 1904, and in this year of grace a Charles E. Hughes!

What of 1908? With his eyes fixed on that presidential election at a dinner tendered to him the other evening by his less unfortunate associates, Willam Also-ran-dolph Hearst addressed them in these words: "I am just as sure that this partial victory foretells the greater victory as I am that the first faint flush of dawn foretells the full glory of the coming day." I will ask Job Hedges whether this is His-brains or Brisbane's. I thought when I read it that his reference to having held a flush might justify him in the belief that two years from now he would hold a full, until I recalled that the general impression prevailed that it was a four flush. If he had a flush, we must have had a full. Hence if "the first faint flush of 1906 should foretell for him a full in 1908" we will then show four of a kind—a Roosevelt, a Root, a Taft and a Hughes—such a four of a kind of stalwart and patriotic Americans as can't be beaten.

Humors of the Campaign.

If Hearst's flowery prophecy should materialize, his managers should see to it that he does not again vote in an undertaker's shop. To be sure, Mr. Hughes voted in a barber shop; but, as the returns demonstrate and his appearance indicates, it wasn't a close shave. You know what the bootblack said when he was asked who he thought was going to be elected—"I thinka de whisik." This story Mr. Hughes delights to tell on himself, showing his appreciation of the humors of a political campaign, of which there were many. He was introduced by one man who said, "Mr. Hughes knows how to shake hands better than to make speeches, and he will now step down and greet you;" by another who said, "The candidate will now show he is human by shaking hands with you," and by being on another occasion saluted by a female auditor with, "I wanted to meet you for a long time; you look so much like our Dr. Miller," and by having a band play, as it did at a Long Island town, when he had finished his speech, "If You Don't Love Me, Why Don't You Try?" One of the interesting phases of the campaign to those who traveled with the gubernatorial candidate was the fact that he seemed to have lived in every place he visited and therefore to be at home everywhere. He also seemed to have attended or taught in every institution of learning in the land. It is said that this so aroused Job Hedges' jealousy that when man after man saluted Mr. Hughes as a member of his college fraternity, the D. U. Job insisted that they must be D. F.'s. At all events, the residence of Mr. Hughes in Glens Falls, Sandy Hill, Delhi, Hamilton, Oswego, Ithaca, Brooklyn and New York, his work as a teacher in Delaware county and at Cornell university, as a student at Hamilton and Brown, seems to have endeared him to so many people that it is no wonder he exhibited extraordinary personal strength as a candidate. I have heard many a student of law at Cornell say that he had never gone to New York without calling upon his preceptor for inspiration. When added to these earlier impressions we bear in mind that every life insurance policy holder and every gas consumer looked upon him as his personal friend and benefactor, can there be any doubt that he proved to be by far the strongest candidate to fight the battle of plain principles and red schoolhouse ideas against the self advertised fanaticism and red fire stage play of his opponent?

How the Battle Was Fought.

Certainly Mr. Hughes and his associates on the ticket conducted a remarkably effective campaign in what proved to be one of the fiercest political battles in the history of the state. We of the working staff of the Republican state committee spared neither time nor effort in employing all previous proper plans and devising new ones to bring the party machinery to the highest point of efficiency and in carrying out, when crystallized into concrete form, all practical suggestions that came to us from the many groups of people who were supporting our cause. The campaign was the people's rather than the politicians'. The financial contributions came from the people rather than from corporations and large moneyed interests. The contending forces did not divide on party lines, but, rather, between those who were deluded by the professions of Hearst and those who opposed his doctrines, between those who were befuddled by frenzied head-knocks and those who kept their senses. The conduct of a campaign with conditions as chaotic as these was one neither of precedent nor of preference. In the effort to dispel the feeling of over-confidence, which was so persistent, and to arouse everybody's earnest effort to get the voters registered and the vote cast, the Republican organization of the state and of very nearly every county of the state did its level best. We must not fail to give a considerable share of the credit for Mr.

Hughes' election to the unselfish efforts of those patriotic Democrats who saw in Hearst's election a menace to the prosperity we are now enjoying and to the stability of our form of government. The greatest praise is also due to the press of the state, which regarded Hearst's methods as an offense against decent journalism and his professions an open threat against everything that the American people and the American press stand for.

Republican Record to Be the Issue.

While we as Republicans take profound pleasure in recognizing the value of Democratic, independent and journalistic support, we are prouder than ever of our party and our party leaders in the state and in the nation. The glorious records of unbroken achievement in the state during the past twelve years and in the nation during the past ten years shine with undimmed luster. They may not have played a commanding part in the recent campaign, when all sane and rational issues were beclouded and befogged by the Hearst propaganda; but, now that the clouds and fogs have been dispelled, who is there to say that the superb administration of President McKinley and the unparalleled administration of Theodore Roosevelt and the economical and statesmanlike administrations of our Republican governors from Levi P. Morton to Frank W. Higgins will not play a decisive part in determining the political contests of the future?

Sound Sense Returning.

After every swing of the pendulum of public feeling toward a fanatical and fantastical craze the public mind has speedily steadied itself and reverted to its normal path. After the civil war, in which brother fought against brother, it was not long before the bloody shirt was buried and hands were clasped across the bloody chasm—a return to the normal path. The greenback craze split parties asunder but, before any serious mischief had been done the common sense of the people asserted itself and came back to the dollar of our daddies and the resumption of specie payments—a return to the normal path. Free trade and tariff for revenue only at times taught the public mind and pleased the public fancy. But the last short trial of this policy, under a Democratic administration, resulted in the overwhelming election of the great champion of protection to American industries and American labor, William McKinley—a return to the normal path. Then came free silver, with the angle of 16 to 1 to catch the ear, please the senses and delude the uninformed. But even the most ardent advocates of this financial heresy have now withdrawn it from the political arena—a return to the normal path. After our enforced war with Spain, with its consequent assumption of irrevocable responsibility, anti-imperialism was the jargon with which it was sought to unsettle the steady swing of the American pendulum. But American principles and patriotism prevailed in the overwhelming election of that typical American, the central figure of the civilized world today, Theodore Roosevelt—a return to the normal path. And now the last is Hearst, who has through two consecutive campaigns taught un-American ideas. Where first he ran best, last he ran worst, showing that the good sense of the people of New York has already asserted itself and leading us to believe that long before the campaign of 1908, to the "full glory of which, in the first faint flush of the recent partial victory," Hearst is looking, the pendulum of American sentiment will have resumed, as in all the previous crises of our nation's history, its natural swing, and the American people, of whom Lincoln said, "You can't fool all of them all of the time," will have returned to the normal path.

Organization Will Support Hughes.

If the aroused public sentiment, for which Mr. Hughes more perhaps than any other man except President Roosevelt deserves the credit, demands changes which it is believed will further improve the condition of any class of the people of the state, I want to say right here that the Republican organization, of which I now have the distinguished honor to be the official head, will give him its earnest, loyal support in everything he undertakes to do. Organization is a necessity to the success of any cause. In political affairs it is relatively more potent than in any other field of human activity. Without the organization of the Republican party, whose duly elected delegates to the number of a thousand met at Saratoga to nominate a ticket and to elect a state committee, Mr. Hughes would not be here tonight as governor elect. I repeat that organization is absolutely essential to success, but it is only when an organization conducts itself honestly, fearlessly and in conformity with what is for the public good that it merits approval and support. I pledge to Governor Hughes the unqualified, undivided support of what may be termed the Republican political machine in his efforts to carry out the wishes of the people of the state, so that when his administration is ended and the acclaim is, "Well done, good and faithful servant," there will be no note of discord in the bosanna because the party which presented him to the people fails to do its duty.

MR. HUGHES' SPEECH.

Forebode Declaration of Principles by the Governor Elect.

Fellow members of the Republican club, ladies and gentlemen, I thank you for this cordial expression of your good will. It is pleasant to recall that you invited me to this dinner before the election. Whatever the result of the count, I felt sure of the friendship which would find equal expression, whether in joy or in grief, in condolence or in congratulation. And, as it turns out, I presume you are dilating with both emotions.

My relations with this club date back to a time very shortly after I had decided as a young voter to cast my lot with the Republican party. I believe I have maintained good and regular standing, although I did not expect, as a familiar ritual puts it, to "grow up" to be such a "lively member of the same." As I look into your faces I see those of friends of many years, of proved fidelity and of known public spirit. I know I can count upon your support. I rely with confidence upon your co-operation, and I regard this meeting as a happy augury for the new administration.

Opportunity and Responsibility.

Since the election I have been overwhelmed with messages of felicitation, of sympathy, of anxiety and of premonition. I have been congratulated, counseled and abjured. Optimist and pessimist, the timid and the courageous, the sanguine and the bilious, have made me the repository of their hopes and their fears, their gloomy forebodings and their triumphant exultations. Out of it all I spell opportunity, responsibility and godspeed. It is not well that we should give

TITLES OF NO USE IN BUSINESS.

Foreigners in America Soon Learn to Assume Plebeian Names.

"Apropos of the society woman who recently eloped with a European nobleman concealed by fate as a riding master," said a German baron, whose New York name is plain Mr. Smith, "you have no idea what a drawback a title is in business in this country, and what trouble the owner has to go to conceal it. They talk about Americans worshipping titles. It is certainly not the case in the business world. For altogether justifiable reasons, perhaps, your Yankee newspapers and fiction writers are accustomed to describe the European nobleman, whatever his fatherland, as spineless, dissipated, and generally no good. This creates a prejudice which the titled foreigner immediately becomes acquainted with when he comes here for the purpose of making a living.

"I had been but three days in New York when I learned to discard the honored name I was born to. During those three days, although an expert engineer with a special field, I could obtain work nowhere. On the fourth day I became Mr. Carl Smith and got a job. It's all nonsense to say that the representative American worships titles. He doesn't. Plain Carl Smith has better chances any day than the foreigner with three hinges to his name."—N. Y. Press.

Mark Twain on Etiquette.

"Mark Twain" at a dinner in New York talked on etiquette.

"I once read a book of etiquette," he said, "and I still remember many of the rules. The most important rules were these:

"How to accept a proffered cigar—Slip the right hand into the box, draw forth two, place one absently in the upper pocket of the vest, insert the other between the lips and look inquiringly around for a light.

"How to leave a room properly—Open the door, place one foot over the sill, follow it up closely with the other and then, turning slightly, shut the door.

"How to accept a dinner invitation—Eat a light breakfast and no lunch. "How to accept an invitation to drink—Look careless. Say, 'Don't care if I do,' and fix the gaze on the other side of the room while the liquor is being poured into the glass. This will assure you a full portion."

Home of the Coccoanut.

The milk in the water coccoanut is a food as well as a beverage. The cart driven through the streets of Jamaica by the quaint old darky urging along his rebellious steed in the form of a native donkey is an interesting sight. One is amazed at the dexterous manner in which the vender takes the unripe coccoanut in his hand and deftly cuts a hole in the top, from which you drink the milk. Then you return the nut to the man and with his machete he cracks it into three pieces and cuts a spoon-shaped silver from one side, from which you eat the white, jelly-like substance scraped from the inside. These are the unripe coccoanuts. When ripe the jelly hardens into the hard white substance to which we are accustomed.

When the Dead Helped Trade.

A Capt. Taylor, his wife and daughter, of old Brig house, England, were buried side by side, standing up in their graves.

Two hundred years ago it was the custom in England to keep an open coffin or chest in the parish church, for common use, to carry the dead to the graveyard. The body was wrapped in coarse linen, and held together with bone pins.

A few years later an act was passed by parliament ordering that all bodies be wrapped in woollens instead of linens, in order to build up or foster the woolen industry, which was then in its infancy. The parish vicar was required to report that the burial took place in woolen according to the act.—The Sunday Magazine.

Derivation of "Spelling."

There is some doubt as to the derivation of the word "spelling." It is believed to be from the Anglo-Saxon word "spel," meaning discourse or story, and the verb "spellian," to declare, relate, tell, as in "spell," a charm, and "gospel." However, there may have been some confusion with "spell," a slip of wood, since such a slip was used in old-time schools to point to the letters of a word, one after another, in spelling them out.

Natural Inference.

"Last night, when I accepted George," said Miss Roxley, who was suspicious as she was homely, "he kissed me on the forehead."
"You don't say?" replied Miss Knox.
"Yes; now I wonder why he didn't salute my lips. O! horrors! probably he had been drinking!"
"Very likely. You say he proposed last night!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

SOME ONE HAD BLUNDERED.

Information and Postmark in No Way in Accord.

An editor said of the late Mrs. Craigie, or John Oliver Hobbes, as the brilliant "American novelist was known:

"I had the honor of dining with Mrs. Craigie during the London season at her beautiful house in Lancaster Gate. She lived there in great luxury with her father, who is a millionaire chemist. Across the street dwells the earl of Meath, the marquis of Ailsa lives a few doors above, while next door is the mansion of the earl of Dunmore, a Scottish peer whose servants all wear the highlander costume, with the kilts, plaid and bare knees.

"Mrs. Craigie was a superb mimic. Mimicry, as she had mastered it, is one of the fine arts. I remember well, that night at dinner, how she mimicked a silly, empty-headed little lady whose husband, a lover of gayety, was inclined to neglect his wife.

"Mrs. Craigie told us that this lady, while spending the winter in the country, said one day at the country post office:

"Dear me, what a silly mistake you post office people have made."
"How, madam?" asked the clerk.

"Why," she explained, with a titter, "here I have just gotten a letter from my husband, who is working hard in London, and the envelope is post-marked Monte Carlo."

GROWTH OF THE DICTIONARY.

Twenty Years of Work Before Book is Completed.

What would the wise men of Nineveh, who, 700 years before Christ, wrote down the words of their language on small tablets of clay, think could they come to earth and see, after its completion, the master dictionary which is now under process of making in Philadelphia.

Those wise men of so many centuries ago were the infant beginners in the business of lexicography. One set of cuneiform tablets for the Assyrian king's library was all that they were required to furnish.

Not so easy is the job of dictionary making in these advanced times. The Philadelphia publisher above referred to has kept a large staff at work on his new dictionary for 14 years, expending $400,000, and has just completed for printing the matter from "A" to two-thirds of "E." It is estimated that $250,000 more will be required to complete the work, which will consume at least five years in accomplishment.

Hitting Back.

The suburban trolley was tied up and they had been walking toward home for an hour.

"John," she ventured after a long silence, "how far have we walked?"

"Dunno," growled John, as he felt his melting collar. "You didn't take a pedometer for a husband."

She said nothing. The next morning John was going fishing and instead of awakening at four he slept till seven.

"Great Scott!" he exclaimed, searching for his shoes. "Why didn't you arouse me earlier?"

"Arouse you?" she said, sweetly. "Why, my dear, because you didn't take an alarm clock for a wife."—Chicago Daily News.

His Motive Misunderstood.

A cashier of the financial district, says the New York Sun, on being advised by his physician to take a vacation not long ago, wrote the agent of a South American steamship line as follows:

"As I am thinking of taking a trip to South America, please advise me immediately with particulars relative to rates, accommodations and so on, to and from the various ports usually visited by tourists at this season of the year."

The answer came by special delivery, marked private and confidential: "One of our steamers will sail for Valparaiso next Wednesday. Shortest and quickest way out of the country."

"Picnic Suppers."

"Picnic suppers" were described in 1802 as a new fashionable craze in England. A list was compiled of the various dishes, each with a number against it. Then lots were drawn by the party, and each person had to provide the dish marked with the number he drew. Such suppers were known in the time of James I. and the word "picnic" was known to Lord Chesterfield. It is supposed to come from "pick," to eat, and "nick," a trifle. Foote calls picnics "nick-nacks."

Hardly the Name for It.

"Isn't it a singular career that Mr. Buxton has had?"

REQUEST FOR PRAYERS.

What He Asked for and How It Was Interpreted.

In a village on the eastern coast of Massachusetts it is the custom for the minister to read in church the requests of members for the prayers of the congregation on special occasions.

One Sunday, relates Everybody's Magazine, the regular minister had exchanged pulpits with a clergyman from the interior of the state to whom the custom was new.

The deacon, at the usual time in the service, ascended the pulpit stair and gave the minister the written requests for prayers, explaining what was to be done with them.

A few minutes later the congregation was puzzled and not a little amused to hear in a slow and deliberate voice:

"A man going to see his wife desires the prayers of the congregation for his safe return."
The notice was:

"A man going to sea, his wife desires the prayers of the congregation for his safe return."

Counting Boys Into a Circus.
One of the leading lawyers of New Hampshire, who was noted for his jokes, was at a circus one day, and as he stood by the entrance to the tent a crowd of small boys came along and peeped in, with longing eyes. Suddenly a smile came over the face of the lawyer, and he stepped up to the man at the entrance and said: "Let those boys in, and count them as they pass."

Of course the ticket taker did as he was told, and when the last boy was in, turned to the lawyer and said, "Thirty-six, sir."

The lawyer looked up with a smile, and said, "Thanks. I guessed there were about that many," then turned and walked away.—Boston Herald.

With reference to the humors of country "society" reporting, Mr. Melville Stone, of the Associated Press, tells of the account of a wedding published in a Kansas paper.

The story, which described the marriage in the usual flowery adjectives, concluded with this surprising announcement:

"The bridegroom's present to the bride was a handsome diamond brooch, together with many other beautiful things in cut glass."—Harper's Weekly.

The Jew and Others.

Many observers have noted the large number of Jews in the colleges and professional schools of America, and have prophesied that in time a large proportion of the members of the learned professions will be men of Jewish descent. Sometimes they have talked about the superiority of the Jewish intellect. One of the most noted Jews in America has lately denied that the men of his race are superior to the men of other races. He says that every one desires the things that are withheld, and that the way to make the family live is to confront it with hardships and persecutions. The hardships develop the powers and the withholding of opportunity makes opportunity highly prized. The development of the Jews in America proves the truth of these generalizations. The race has suffered persecution and is hardy. It has not enjoyed freedom of opportunity in the old world. When it comes here it rushes for the free schools, the law and the medical books, as a thirsty animal plunges into a stream and revels in the cooling waters. One does not need to look to the Jew alone for proof that early denial of opportunity makes it prized, remarks the Youth's Companion. It is the country boy, spending his youth where the field is limited, and dreaming of wider worlds to conquer, who rises to the top in the city. The city is to him not a place for amusement, but a place for work; and he concentrates his mind on his business when he secures employment in town, while his city-bred competitor too often dissipates his energies by the amusements that are at hand for the distraction of the indifferer as well as for the relaxation of the industries. The surest way to make a boy prize things is to deny them to him until he has earned them. Circumstances train men by denying to them various privileges till they wrest them from an unwilling fate.

By recent legislation France takes the lead of all countries in the protection which it affords to working men and the provision which it makes for their families. A workman in the discharge of his duty does not now have to prove negligence on the part of his employer in order to recover damages. The government guarantees the laborer against loss through his employer becoming bankrupt, and in some cases an annuity of a value as high as 60 per cent. of the workman's wages goes to his family in case he is killed. The employers, in order to protect themselves, insure against all kinds of liabilities, and the companies which do this insurance are, in turn, investigated by the government. Other countries in which various plans for the better protection of working men have been advanced will watch with much interest the progress of the French methods.

"One reason why New York women are the neatest in the world," said the buyer for a Pittsburg notion and dry goods house, "is the fact that they use fewest pins. Apparently buttons, hooks and eyes, and tape performs the job of fastening their garments pretty thoroughly. Strange to say, it is in Boston that the pin trade flourishes most abundantly. Women buy more pins there, according to the population, than any other city in the country. That habit does not speak well for Boston, remarks the Pittsburg Dispatch. The pin habit is inimical to tidiness. That is the reason that New York women are so spick and span—they use few pins. They have not, to be sure, reached the state of excellence attained by the Chinese, who taboo pins altogether, but they are nearer that standard than any other community."

A record time for converting grain into bread has been established by a Canadian farmer. Wheat which was in the sheaf at three o'clock in the afternoon was made into scones before six o'clock. When operations began a wagon stood in the barn with about half a load of grain in the sheaf. Beside it was a thresher; connected with this was a gasoline engine. The engine was started, the sheaves were fed into the thresher and the grain was deposited in a bin. The power was then transferred to the cleaner and the work of changing the newly threshed wheat into flour was quickly carried through.

Oklahoma's corn crop this year will reach 125,000,000 bushels. That is an increase of 35 per cent. Indian Territory will produce 100,000,000 bushels. If it is true that corn and statesmen are found together, the new state won't have to hunger for either.

Nevertheless, there is a strong suspicion that China's edict prohibiting opium smoking will act a good deal like our own prohibition laws.

A famous medical specialist announces that headaches are often caused by high collars. Why not high collars as well as high balls?

Naturally, educated persons are provoked by an attempt to make them unlearn their spelling.

Queer Foods of New York Epicures.

History tells us that Confucius liked sharks' fins and sea slugs and birds' nests. Well and good. If a man with an intellect like that of the great Chinese philosopher found these, to us, unusual foods, palatable, they must be worth trying. Then there are the preserved grape leaves, the pickled squash, and the dried okra of the Syrians. These people of the orient were civilized long before America was even thought of being discovered, so there is no reason, argues the epicure, why their knowledge and choice of foods should not be well worth investigating. The other countries have their special delicacies which, if they are sought out, appeal to the universal taste and form an agreeable and inexpensive addition to the daily menu of the average mortal who must eat. Bear steak from the west, kangaroo tails pickled, which come from Australia; preserved goldfish from the Nile; canned abalone from California and dried goose from Sweden are only a few of the queer foods kept for sale in the New York markets and sold in quantities every day. Until recently, says Harriet Quimby in Leslie's Weekly, people who relished snails were regarded with sentiments which savored of disgust, but that notion has changed, and at the present time that delicacy can be procured in almost any of the first-class hotels and cafes in New York. In order to meet the growing demand, one of the largest caterers in the city imports 25,000 snails every week from Brittany, where the best snails are grown.

A notable fact about the vision of insects and one which it may be supposed must largely influence their view of the external world is the number of facets or lenses in compound eyes. A German naturalist, K. Linemann, has been painstaking enough to count the number of facets in the eyes of no fewer than 150 species of beetle. He finds that in the same species and sex the number increases with the size of the body. There is usually no permanent difference between the sexes as to the number of facets. Occasionally, however, the difference is marked, as in the case of lampyris splendula, in which the male has 2,500 and the female 300. One species, says the Philadelphia Record, is noted which has the extraordinary number of 24,000 facets in its eye. The number of facets is greater in the rapidly moving active forms than in the more sluggish species.

Of late the Buddhists in India are trying their best to bring under their control and management all those shrines relating to their own religion which are at present wholly in the hands of the Hindu priests, says the Lahore Tribune. The society has very recently submitted a memorial to the government of Bengal to the effect that the Hindus have acquired a complete right both territorial and religious over their shrines and that they (the Buddhists) "have no custodian of their own; they have no right to burn lamps constantly before the image of the sacred Bo-tree; they cannot place any fresh image of Buddha within the temple; they cannot claim as their own or as the temple's any offering made by Buddhist pilgrims; the sacred image of Buddha himself, within the shrine, is defaced by Hindu robes and marks."

Benjamin Penhallow Shillaber (Mrs. Partington) used to turn John Billings' humorous writings into the accepted orthographical form of his day, because he thought they contained a world of homely wisdom that the reading public should have without wading through a mass of misspelled words. Now, however, Josh Billings in the original would please Andrew Carnegie, no doubt. By the way, we used to have a local distorter of words called Job Sass, says the Boston Budget, who put forth solid chunks of political wisdom. These men were apparently ahead of their time. If they were living now they might dine with the Scotch millionaire or with President Roosevelt.

Down in Pennsylvania the other day a trunk exploded and nearly killed a railroad baggageman who was handling it roughly. That settles it! The man with a weak and wobbly old trunk may help it out some by marking it plainly: "Explosive! Handle with Care!"

A citizen of Kansas City writes that natural gas has cut down his annual fuel and gas bill from $175 a year to $74, to say nothing of freedom from tending a furnace. Better look over the Iceman's account before announcing the millennium.

Over-populated China is not yet sufficiently civilized to understand why foreigners insist on regarding the destruction of 5,000 people at Hongkong as a calamity.

The Crying Need.

The horseless cart pervades the land, The wireless telegram; We have the seedless apple, and The boneless ham. These are to me of small portent. But, oh, my need is sore! If only some one would invent A wolfless door! —Carolyn Wells.

He Couldn't Wait.

When All Mydville played Little Sploton, both elevens were doing their level best for their respective villages. Mydville surpassed all previous records. Nine men had been sent from the wicket, but they were still hopeful, for they only needed 321 runs to win the match when Podgers went in. Only the umpire looked uneasy. A swift ball from the bowler flew past Podgers, struck the ground, and was caught by the wicket-keeper.

"How's that?" yelled the opposition team.

"Out!" said the umpire.

"Out—how out?" protested Podgers.

"I don't know how; but it's out," shouted the umpire, with a glowing face. "All I know is that my house has been on fire for the last 'alf-hour, and I'm going to see if that's out. Good-day, gentlemen!"

The Irishman and the Mule. General Phil Sheridan was at one time asked at what little incident did he laugh the most.

"Well," he said, "I do not know, but I always laugh when I think of the Irishman and the army mule. I was riding down the line one day when I saw an Irishman mounted on a mule which was kicking its legs rather freely. The mule finally got its hoof caught in the stirrup, when, in the excitement, the Irishman remarked, 'Well, begorra, if you're goin' to git on I'll git off.'"—Home Chat.

Shocking. "She suffers a mysterious pain, and the doctors are going to operate."

"What do you suspect?"

"Why, the symptoms seem to indicate that the coats of her stomach are out of style. Of course, they indicate nothing of this to her, for fear of the shock it might give her." —Puck.

His Sincere. The Farmer—My son Reuben, who's in New York, tells me there's a bank down there that keeps open day and night.

The Storekeeper (turning to his clerk)—Hear that, Jason? An' sometimes yew growl becuz yew have tew work only from 6 A. M. tew 10 P. M.—Puck.

Get Busy, Young Man. Miss Yerner—Mr. Hussel was going to call on me this evening, but he heard you were to be here.

Mr. Stoman—Ah! perhaps you would have found more pleasure in his visit.

Miss Yerner—Well, I don't know that his visit would mean so much pleasure, but I'm sure it would mean business.

Inclusive. Miss Coldart—No, I can never marry you. All our family is opposed to you.

Mr. Norway—But, if you are not—Miss Coldart—I said all our family.

Expect Testimony. Dottie—I wonder if a blonde is more attractive to men than a brunette?

Lotie—Ask Dottie—she's been both.—Cleveland Leader.

The Taking Cold Habit

The old cold goes; a new one quickly comes. It's the story of a weak throat, weak lungs, a tendency to consumption. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral breaks up the taking-cold habit. It strengthens, soothes, heals. Ask your doctor about it.

"I had a terrible cold, and nothing relieved me. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it promptly broke up my cold, stopped my cough and eased every part of my body. It did wonderful work for me."—Mr. J. F. LUTZ, Toledo, Ohio.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass. Also manufacturers of Ayer's SARSAPARILLA PILLS. HAIR VIGOR.

Keep the bowels regular with Ayer's PILLS, just one pill each night.

Coming Events. The subject of the sermon in the Presbyterian church, Genoa, Sunday morning will be "The Universal If"—Mark ix:22. You are cordially invited.

A meeting of the Workers' Society of the Presbyterian church, Genoa, will be held at the home of Mrs. F. O. Hagin on Saturday, Dec. 8, at 2:30 o'clock. A large attendance is requested.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Belltown will hold a fair at the church Tuesday afternoon and evening, Dec. 11. An oyster supper will be served followed by a short program. All are very cordially invited.

Photographic Information. This being the season most appropriate for having your photograph made, you should improve the opportunity and be able to present your friends with one as a Christmas gift. There is nothing that is more pleasing or more acceptable than a good photograph, and we are prepared to serve you at DeWitt's studio in quality and price that will please you. We have made some improvements in our studio and have some of the most competent assistants that the profession claims and our lenses and instruments are of the highest quality, all of which make it possible for us to furnish the finest class of work.

AN IMPORTED CHASER.

Was Designed to Send the Young Man On His Way.

In South Africa candles are used for lighting purposes in the homes, and when a young Boer maiden has gentlemen visitors the mother sticks a pin in the candle, and when it has burned to the pin the callers understand that it is time for their departure.

Mrs. Early, a society matron of Washington, recently made a visit to the Transvaal, and was so impressed with the custom of the Boers that she determined to introduce it into her own home. Consequently the electric lights were removed and candles substituted in the drawing room.

Mr. Stavate, a frequent though not always welcome caller, was one of the first visitors to call after the inauguration of the new custom. He witnessed the placing of the pin in the candle by Mrs. Early, and as she had gone venturing to inquire:

"Why, Miss Early, does your mother stick a pin in the candle?"

"Oh," responded the young woman with an air of apparent innocence, "mother learned that in South Africa as a way of sending home the Boers."—Harper's Weekly.

Don'ts For Babies.

Never hold a baby by the foot, allowing its head to hang down, while dressing it.

Give the baby plenty of good, healthful exercise. Mowing the lawn or sawing wood is considered good.

Strong drink for babies should be avoided.

Spanking is not now in vogue. The baby should be severely reprimanded, but not spanked.

Never leave a baby alone in the bathtub full of water. It's a bad sign.

Babies should not be allowed on the streets alone after 12 o'clock at night. The police are not respecters of persons after that hour.—Allwaukee Sentinel.

Provoking.

Daughter—My husband is so provoking.

Mother—Indeed?

Daughter—Yes; he never loses his temper.—Illustrated Bits.

It.

If every heart were quickened To feel another's wrong, Then living would be loving And life would be a song.

—Baltimore American.

Overheard in Dublin.

Pat—These are terrible times, Mike.

Mike—Bedad, they are, Pat; it's a wonder if we'll get out of the world alive, what with exars and Poles and bombs and tinned mutes, and one thing and another.

Pat (despondently)—I'm afear'd we won't even if we had as many lives as Plutarch.—London Tribune.

Coached by Mamma.

"What's the matter, darling?" asked her anxious mother.

"George went away this mornin' and forgot to kiss me," sobbed Mrs. Newly-wed.

"Never mind. Now you'll have a chance to strike him for something he mightn't have wanted to get if he hadn't been so thoughtless."—Chicago Record-Herald.

She Got Even.

Mrs. Rapps—My husband says he wouldn't give two cents for your husband's opinion of him.

Mrs. Scrapps—Of course he wouldn't. In my husband's opinion he isn't worth two cents.—Detroit Free Press.

Quite Enough.

Mistress—But, Kathi, that clock goes for a week; you must wind up more than that.

Maid—Yes, ma'am, but you know, I am leaving to-morrow, and I won't do the new cook's work.—Meggen-dorfer Blatter.

Not Literary.

"That man may seem to you somewhat uneducated, and yet he makes a fine living by his pen."

"Why, I would never take him for a writer."

"He isn't, he raises pigs."—Baltimore American.

Impudence.

Peggy—Only to think of it, my dear, we were entirely alone, and he had the audacity to kiss me.

Lucy—I suppose you were furious; weren't you?

Peggy—I should say so! I was furious every single time he did it.

CATCHES DEER AND TROUT.

Fisherman Breaks the Record for One Line in a Day's Sport.

To kill a deer and catch a trout at the same time out-Nirmoda and out-Luaka Walton. A fisherman has just done the trick on the Arrow lakes, says the Toronto Globe. The deer weighed 200 pounds and the trout ten. The fisherman was trolling for trout when several deer swam past his boat. One was an old buck and the man managed to catch hold of him as he was going by.

Having no gun, he tried to kill the animal with a claspknife. The buck objected so strenuously that he got away, swimming off with the fishing line upon his horns. The fisherman bailed out his boat and started in pursuit. After two hours' rowing he caught up with the deer and with oars and knife succeeded in slaying it. While the chase was proceeding a big trout got on the hook and after the deer was safely landed the fish was secured. It is quite a common occurrence to see deer swimming in the lakes of British Columbia, but to capture one and a trout at the same time is infrequent.

PENS TO LAST FOREVER.

Made of New Metal. They Are Practically Indestructible.

One of the properties of tantalite, a new metal discovered in Germany not long ago, is that it can be utilized in the manufacture of a pen which will be practically everlasting. The metal is so hard that a diamond drill working at the rate of 5,000 revolutions per minute, hardly makes an impression upon its surface, and it can be rolled so thin that the pen will have all the desired resiliency.

This pen will therefore withstand a great amount of hard usage. It will really be a difficult thing to put it out of business. No character of ink will affect it; in fact, it will resist all chemicals to a very deep degree.

A company has been formed in Germany to make these pens and to engage in the manufacture of tools of different kinds. The process of producing this metal in a perfectly pure state was discovered by Dr. Werner von Bolton, and his invention has made the material available.

The Spreading Beech Tree.

As ornamental trees the beeches attract attention primarily on account of their dignity of form and peculiarly "clean" appearance. They give ample and spreading shade, the leaves are remarkably free from the insect pests, and they can generally be readily transplanted. They thrive best in a rich, deep, sandy loam, but will grow well in any ordinary soil. The trees attain a height of 80 to 100 feet. In the different seasons the beech presents totally different pictures. In summer it is a broad dome of grateful shade, in winter a glory of dazzling light gray, in spring it floats out its soft velvety gold-green leaves, and in autumn it is a rich and mellow mingling of subdued yellow-brown and grays.—Garden Magazine.

One Kind of Man.

At a dinner in Newport Rear Admiral Evans spoke with scorn of a young man who had married an old woman for her money.

"That chap calls himself a man, I suppose," said the great sea fighter, "but there are various definitions of the word man, and the definition that Pebles one.

"A Scot of Pebles said to his friend MacAndrew:

"Mac, I hear ye have fallen in love wi' bonny Kate McAllister."

"Weel, Sanders," Mac replied, "I was near—verra near—dooin' it; but the bit lassie had nae siller, so I said to myself, 'Mac, me mon.' And I was a mon, and noo I pass her by wi' silent contempt!"

A Flower Clock.

There was a queer gardener who thought of making a timepiece of a flower bed. Whether he ever did it or not, he said it could be done. He declared that the time is known at which more than 50 kinds of flowers open and shut. "For instance, a bed of common dandelions would show it was 5:30 in the morning, and at 8:30 at night, respectively, for these flowers open and shut at the times named, frequently to the minute. The common, hawkweed opens at eight in the morning, and may be depended upon to close within a few minutes of two in the afternoon."

Seems Reasonable.

"It's dreadful queer," said the housewife, "that the potatoes you bring me should be so much bigger at the top of the sack than they are at the bottom."

"Not at all, mem," said the honest farmer; "it's jest this a-way. Potatoes is growin' so fast jest now that by the time I dig a sackful the last ones dug is ever so much bigger'n the first ones."—Harper's Weekly.

Would Risk It Once.

"George," said the dear girl, "papa says if I can get you to go to church he won't oppose our marriage."

"All right," said George. "Tell the old gentleman it doesn't matter to me whether it's a home wedding or a church wedding."

His Sympathizer.

"She said I was a perfect fool!"

"She did?"

"Yes; what do you think of that?"

"Why ask me such a question when you know I dislike to hurt anyone's feelings?"

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS
Our Short Lived Pets.

Considering the vast amount of pleasure that we derive from the animals and birds brought into our homes, the question of the length of time they are likely to live is one of much importance. The great enemy to the attainment of old age, particularly in the case of the pet held in the greatest esteem—the dog—is overfeeding. This practice of killing by kindness undoubtedly takes several years off the lives of many of our canine friends, and subjects them, besides, to a good deal of discomfort and misery.

Unfortunately, the dog, even when not overfed and properly treated, is short lived compared with man. From twelve to fifteen years is as long as we can expect him to live. Though there are instances recorded of dogs that have attained upward of twenty years. Another most familiar pet, the cat, has about the same average existence as the dog, but as it is a less gluttonous animal it suffers less frequently from overeating. One cat belonging to a woman at Forest Hill, Kent, attained its majority, dying when it was nearly twenty-two years old.

Domestic rabbits are not long lived, perhaps because they seldom have any exercise, and pass their lives in closely cramped hatches. From seven to ten years is about the usual duration. In the poet Cowper's account of his three tame hares, one died young after it was full grown, another lived to be 9, and the third died apparently of old age when it was 11 years and 11 months. Squirrels are seldom known to live in confinement more than five years. Guinea pigs have lived ten years, but very mice usually die in three or four years. Silkworms have the shortest existence of all the pets, somewhere about a couple of months being the length of time from the egg to the grave.

The parrot and the raven, among wild pets, are both likely to live as long as their owners. The age of 80 is known to have been reached by a grey parrot, and there are many specimens of birds of that family having lived for over a century. The raven, too, is credited with having reached a hundred years. Most of the smaller cage birds are short lived. Canaries have been known to live for over twenty years, but many die before they are twelve, particularly the German trained songsters, which are not so hardy as those bred and reared in England.

Pete Toddle's Upsitting.

What have we here? I do declare, something is raising Peter's hair! Can it be he sees something fearful that makes him look so far from cheerful? Peter's upset. If you'd discover what did it, just turn Peter over. At first it may perplex your mind how any one so soft and kind as Mr. Luvly here appears,

Henry's Cure for Perry's Snore.

Henry and Penrick called by their playmates "Henry and Perry," were twin brothers and slept together in a trundle bed. They were exactly alike in every respect except that Perry would sleep with his mouth open. Owing to this, Henry had the bad habit of snoring and kept Henry awake.

Henry tried every plan that he could devise to break Perry from snoring. He used to wake him up to make him close his mouth, but Perry would simply turn sleepily over and begin snoring again.

Perry's snoring became worse and worse, and Henry was almost in despair. He could not sleep at all with his brother's awful noises going on.

At last one night as Perry lay upon his back snoring loudly, through a wide-open mouth, Henry had an idea.

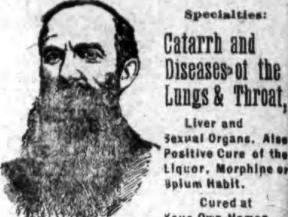

He leaned over the side of the bed, picked up Perry's buckled garter that lay upon the floor, pulled it around under Perry's chin and over the top of his head, and then drew the cover up to sleep in peace.

The mother of the twins was greatly surprised next morning to find both boys sound asleep, Henry with a piece of elastic around his head which kept his face tightly closed.

And the best of it is, that it did really and truly cure Perry of snoring.

For the autumn season now at hand the most valuable paper to you will be the New York Thrice-a-week World, because it offers you more at the price than any other paper published anywhere in the world.

This is a time of great events. We are having great wars, and other changes of a stirring kind are occurring both at home and abroad. The Thrice-a-Week World comes to you every other day except Sunday with all the news fully, accurately and promptly told.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns whether you are a Republican or a Democrat, and that is what you want.

The Thrice-a-Week World always has a serial story running and it is always a first-class story by a first-class author. It publishes better fiction than any other newspaper in the United States. Special attention is also given to markets and there are many other valuable features. The regular subscription price is only $1, and that pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and THE GENOA TRIBUNE together one year for only $1.65. The regular price for the two papers is $2.

Other oak stoves are simply direct draft, allowing much heat to go wasted up chimney. The Oakvale Andes has a full return-flue, so that all the heat produced is radiated into the room.

Made of cast iron, and so more durable than oak stoves with steel drums. The joints are perfectly fitted and cemented with asbestos; the dampers ground in emery, making a really air-tight stove. All nicked parts are detachable.

This stove will be found a more powerful, economical and easily controlled heater than any ordinary Oak Stove can possibly be.

We will be glad to exhibit this stove and other Andes Ranges, to you at our store. Chas. Pyle, Poplar Ridge.

2741 R. W. Armstrong, Genoa, N. Y.
Is this your neighbor's TRIBUNE?

ourselves over to this jurisdiction on one hand or that on the other we should permit our resolution to be sapped by nervous dread and vague alarms. We may not be able completely to agree as to the causes of the existing uneasiness and discontent, but we must agree as to our immediate duty. We should meet the conditions, so far as they lie within our province, squarely, not grudgingly or with hesitation, but candidly and with readiness to serve the public.

If there are those who are alarmed at discontent as such and who, satisfied with their lot, view with ill concealed impatience and disgust efforts at improvement, I am not one of them. I should be more alarmed at smug indifference. We have no reason to fear, but rather should we welcome honest criticism, the exposure of wrongs and the frank discussion of remedies. But we should visit with swift condemnation every effort to substitute vituperation for argument, to create a false perspective and to give rein to the passions of the thoughtless. We may well be concerned at indications of impatience with law and with the orderly processes of government. And it should be our aim, so far as possible, to remove the causes of irritation by insistence upon just and impartial administration. We desire sober earnestness. We demand jealous regard for facts. We want a spirit of fair play toward individuals, toward institutions, toward the public. We desire the rule of the judgment of a free people alive to the responsibilities of citizenship, and in order to maintain it we set ourselves against any attempt to evoke the monster of unreason, the common enemy of all, which would threaten society itself.

Public Welfare First.
The people expect and are entitled to have the government administered for their benefit. They will not tolerate leadership which serves self interest or connives at the sacrifice of the public welfare to private advantage. They insist upon disinterested and intelligent service in every department. In all efforts to promote the success of the Republican party let it be remembered that public service is the best politics. It is a short sighted policy which would regard offices as strongholds by the possession of which through clever tactics popular assault may be resisted. Rather should they be regarded as opportunities to win the public confidence through the efficient performance of duty. I do not believe that it is necessary that I should say, but I do say, that in the case of every appointment I shall require, apart from other evidence of fitness, satisfactory assurances of complete devotion to the public interest. This is the just demand of the people. It is the demand of the Republican party. And I may add that, while I hope to have the cordial co-operation of all who share in the work of administration, I shall be solicitous that every man who does his duty by the people shall receive the credit to which he is individually entitled. He should be held in honor by the party as a worthy representative of its aims and should enjoy the popular esteem which is the unfailing reward of recognized fidelity.

Law Must Be Enforced.
It is a healthy sentiment which demands the rigorous enforcement of the law. It is not for the public good that legal processes should be used to compass sensational ends or that the law should be strained to meet cases not fairly within its purview. We do not want surries in legal procedure, but dignified, sustained, impartial and fearless enforcement of the provisions of our statutes upholding the rights of the public and a terror to all wrongdoers great and small. Where the law is deficient and needful powers of supervision and regulation have not been conferred, let the matters be frankly discussed, the mischief defined and the remedy provided. But we cannot afford to permit our institutions to be discredited by the spectacle of wrong condoned and of the evasion and disregard of restrictions which have been imposed in the public interest. Particularly is this true in relation to corporate activities which are carried on by the consent of the state and are subject to well defined conditions. It is easy when personal comfort and convenience suffer to overlook the difficulties in the way of the speedy solution of our problems, particularly with reference to transportation. But what the people want and rightly expect is to have these matters taken up in an intelligent and direct effort, with public spirit and recognition of public needs, to achieve the desired result. They do not want injustice done to any legitimate interest, but they do want justice to the community.

Abuses Must Be Removed.
It is not my purpose at this time to formulate a policy. I shall not anticipate the submission to the legislature in the appropriate manner of such matters as may form the subject of recommendation. Nor shall I deal in advance with the specific questions which will be presented for executive action. I simply desire to indicate to you what I am sure is in the mind of all, that the people are in no mood to tolerate indifference to the public interests, and we must in an orderly way, as behooves those who believe in constitutional government, but none the less effectively, address ourselves to the removal of abuses which have vexed the public patience.

In the work before us I invite and, as I have said, I rely upon your co-operation. You may give this by your advice and by your candid criticism. I do not ask you to withhold censure of what you do not approve, but I hope you will find no occasion to impugn my motives or to ascribe to me any desire other than to be an efficient instrument of good government.

It may be proper to add that I shall be my own spokesman, pleasant as have been the intimate relations which I have sustained with many of you and desirous as I am at all times to have the full benefit of your friendship. It is proper and necessary that I should reserve for myself the privilege and the duty of stating my personal views.

Hard Campaign Work.
It is a pleasure to express appreciation of the hard work which was done in the campaign. At last I have found out what a political campaign is like. I desire to extend to the state chairman, to the members of the state committee, to the officers and assistants at headquarters, to the county chairmen and to the district workers, to the orators and spellbinders, to those who prepared and to those who circulated argument, to the great number who attended to the minor but important details of management, to all who labored for the success of the ticket, my hearty thanks. I say this not simply as a personal tribute, but in grateful recognition of service to a common cause.

Nor should we forget the men of proved independence who voted with us and against their party, refusing for the sake of party loyalty to sanction the betrayal of Democratic principle. It is not a pleasant duty to vote against a party with which one has long been connected, and we who have benefited from their action should gladly give them the honor that is their due. Let us see to it that in administering the affairs of the state in a just and honorable manner we may not only invite but shall command their continued confidence.

We should also recognize the fact that we may count upon the support of many of those who voted against us if we establish by our deeds the sincerity of our words. For many of our fellow citizens party lines have but small significance. They are anxious for results and care but little for the banner under which they are achieved. They are not moved by partisan appeal, but they are prepared to endorse and support an administration of proved integrity and capacity. We should not proceed upon the assumption that we have implacable enemies, but rather in the belief that by meeting the obvious and reasonable demands of the people we may greatly enlarge our support.

I enter upon the task to which I have been assigned without illusion. I know its difficulties. I am fully aware of the opportunities which will be presented for divergence of view and misconception of intention. But I propose, with your help, to go forward and discharge to the best of my ability the obligations which I shall assume on taking the oath of office.

No Time For Animosities.
There are here the veterans of many campaigns. Many of you have given the best part of your lives to the service of the party. You are all loyal Republicans. You know the demand of the hour. Division and discord mean disaster. It is not a time for finesse. It is a time for candor and direct dealing. It is a time when animosities should be forgotten and good feeling and mutual respect should be promoted. Of chief importance and of greatest possible consequence to the party is the recognition of the most simple and fundamental principles of government. Let us rise to the opportunity. Let loyalty to party be demonstrated by cordial co-operation. We are on trial, but if we do our duty there will be no doubt as to the verdict. The people are not to be fooled. No one is astute enough by intrigue and strategy to thwart the popular demand for honest government and worthy representation. Instead of viewing the situation with apprehension we should courageously, though with solemn sense of its import, address ourselves to our task.

Let us together resolve as Republicans and as citizens that through united effort and patriotic zeal we shall have an administration which will strengthen the party, serve the people and honor the state.

EX-GOV. BLACK'S SPEECH.

Grave Problems and Duties Ahead of the Republican Party.
Ex-Governor Frank S. Black was the third speaker. His speech was brief and in his usual epigrammatic style. He was received with great enthusiasm and devoted most of his remarks to sound discussion of the Republican party, its past and its present conditions. He said:

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Republicans—I rejoice to participate in this occasion intended to express our respect for the next governor of New York from my own knowledge of his character and attainments I expect that administration of the public interests which will place him among the ablest chief executives of the state.

But events have given this occasion an aspect which it is not wise wholly to ignore. There is, or ought to be, a unanimous sentiment that it is time for us to initiate the prudence of a distinguished statesman long since dead and call for the reading of the resolution. We are not drifting on the waves of debate, as he then was, but on other waves more tempestuous and uncertain. The precise figures of our latitude and longitude no man is able to determine. We have lately landed from a voyage over the political seas in a somewhat damaged condition. And while we have saved a part of our cargo, there is grave and general apprehension that we have nearly lost the ship. I do not disguise the fact that a voyage with such a consummation does not fill me with unmixed confidence or delight. We have saved a part of our candidates, but what has become of the Republican party?

I should not view our present state with so little satisfaction if I felt that the vessel, now in too apparent trouble, was not seaworthy or had been supplanted by a safer and a better model. But I entertain no such conviction. I go so far as to believe that the political craft on which we all embarked so long ago has never had her equal in all the annals of the seas.

Grave Problems Ahead.
The Republican ship is still afloat and as good for another fifty years as for the last unless mismanaged or abandoned. It will pay to consider for one moment now whether that ought to be done. The history of this country is not yet written. The career of the American Union is forward, with an ever broadening sweep. We have pushed out and stuck our flag on shores which in infancy were known only to our dreams. We have entered upon projects so gigantic as to stagger the imagination, and our possessions reach half around the world. We have assumed a course whose wisdom is yet doubted by many whose sagacity and patriotism are the highest in the land, but which places on our shoulders the responsibility and its attendant dangers of one contesting for the supremacy of the world. You have not yet seen the questions that will arise from these adventures. You do not even know the policies you must adopt, and if you did you could not tell their scope. What lies hidden in the bowels of American ambition no sage has yet foretold.

Today is no more the child of ten years ago than the breath of an infant is the parent of the whirlwind. But this at least we know, that the problems of the future must be colossal and far reaching and that the best the American character affords will not be too strong for their solution. Even those questions I have named, of worldwide import, do not summarize the whole of our responsibility. No government can live without encountering from day to day problems of vast significance. Even at this hour and at home there rises one whose end no man can see. It is the negro problem in the south. It springs from race hostility, the most savage root the human soil produces. Will there be no answer to the old petition?

Defines Nation's Duty.
A nation that turns its face away while its helpless people suffer is no better than a father who deserts a stricken child.

These are grave problems, my fellow citizens, and they must be solved. Do you think if all the burning questions of the next twenty years were here the American people would vote to take them from the hands of the Republican party? That result would be as impossible as the retirement of Grant before the war was over when his superb powers had been established.

I do not prophesy the dissolution of that party. The sentiments I utter are not based upon that fear. They spring rather from the conviction which grows upon me that the party spirit is falling off and the party faith is growing drowsy. We magnify our men and minimize our party. When a cause seeks support because of its candidates and not because of its principles it is not far to the rocks. Men will change, but principles never, and if they are great enough to die for they are honorable enough to proclaim. No man who is not ashamed of his party should be ashamed of being an intense partisan in its cause. Its achievements should never grow old. The deeds of the Republican party are among the things already numbered, but they still inspire and renew the country's hope. I would not fight for a party whose history I did not approve and whose virtues I could not declare.

The Republicans in New York state elected thirty-one members of the next senate, the Democrats nineteen, and one Independent was elected. This was Francis H. Gates of the district which includes Oswego and Madison counties. Under the reapportionment the number of senators is fifty-one, the majority of which is twenty-six, the same as under the old apportionment.

Of the 150 members of the lower house of the legislature the Republicans elected ninety-seven, the Democrats fifty-two, and one Independent was successful. This was Charles A. Newton of Cortland. Of the thirty members of congress from this state the Republicans elected twenty-six.

For the first time in many years Tim Sullivan will be neither in Washington nor Albany as a legislator, but he will be "on the works" just the same in Tammany Hall.

Girl's Tucked Night Gown.

5449 Girl's Tucked Night Gown, 8 to 14 years.

Such a pretty little night gown as this one is sure to please the girl wearer, while it is so simple that no matter how busy the mother may be she need not hesitate to undertake its making. In the illustration the material is nainsook with trimming of embroidered banding, and little frills, but lawn, longcloth and also the heavier muslin can be utilized.

We long ago discovered that the gown with the slightly open throat is the best and most healthful for all seasons of the year and the model is therefore appropriate for cold weather, as well as for warm. The trimming can, of course, be almost anything that the individual may like.

The gown is made with the fronts and back which are tucked and joined to the little yoke. The front edge is finished with an over-lap and buttonholes are worked in the center of this to effect a closing. The sleeves are comfortably full, gathered into straight bands.

The quantity of material required for the medium size (12 years) is 3 yards 27, 4 1/4 yards 36 inches wide with 1 1/4 yards of insertion 2 inches wide.

The pattern 5449 is cut in sizes for girls of 8, 10, 12 and 14 years of age.

Long or Short Kimono.

5448 Long or Short Kimono, 32 to 42 inch bust.

The simple kimono made in this style is one of the best liked, as well as most graceful. It can be made long, serving as a wrapper or room gown, or short, serving as a negligee jacket, as liked and is so simple that little labor is involved in the making.

The gown is made with fronts and backs and with the sleeves that are pointed at their lower edges, gathered at the upper.

The quantity of material required for the long kimono 8 1/2 yards 27, 5 1/4 36, or 6 1/4 yards 44 inches wide for the short kimono 4 1/2 yards 27, 3 yards 36 or 2 3/4 yards 44 inches wide with 6 yards for the sort.

The pattern 5448 is cut in sizes for a 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 bust measure.
