Snapshots At People In the News

NORMAN HAPGOOD. editor of Collier's Weekly, who was sued for libel by Justice Joseph M. Dewey of New York because of things he said in his journal about the judge's connection with Town Topics and was pronounced "not guilty" by the jury after ten minutes' deliberation, was a reporter in charge of the educational department of a New York afternoon newspaper a few years ago. He reported the doings of the board of education and gathered news of the public schools. One day he asked the editor what was the best review in England.

"Why do you want to know?" asked the editor.

"I have something about Salisbury I'd like to submit."

The editor gave him the names of three or four leading periodicals, mentioning one in particular as being the easiest to "break into."

"I want the best," returned Hapgood. "I don't care what it pays or how critical it is."

Receiving the information, he sent his copy over the sea, and in less than ten days he got by cable not only an acceptance of his offering, but an order for three more articles of the same sort. That was the beginning of his literary career.

The Rev. Dr. Frank M. Clendenin does not care whether any one thinks he is a crank on the subject of fresh air or not. He has found by experience that fresh air is to him the elixir of life and knows that he must have it, night as well as day. To have it at night he sleeps out of doors—that is, he sleeps on a cot on a balcony of his home. Dr. Clendenin is the rector of St. Peter's Episcopal church, Westchester, N. Y., but he has been away from his parish for six months and staying on his farm at Chappaqua on account of being threatened with tuberculosis. Last September he was thin and emaciated and suffered from a constant hacking cough. Now he looks and feels like a different man and expects soon to be active in church work again. He keeps out of doors most of the time. At night if it is stormy he draws an awning over his cot bed, but otherwise sleeps under the open sky. His wife occupies a room adjoining the balcony. She is a daughter of Horace Greeley and often entertains her friends with reminiscences of her distinguished father. In illustrating his kindness of heart she once told how he brought home an umbrella with a wooden dog's head as a handle. The little daughter took a great fancy to that dog's head and begged for it. Mr. Greeley offered her a whole dog instead, but that would not do, so at last he sawed off the head and went to town with a handleless umbrella.

Congressman Sydney Mudd of Maryland is said to have told this story about an old negro who by some peculiar election twist was elected a justice of the peace in the backwoods of Georgia. His first case happened to be one in which the defendant asked for a trial by jury. When the testimony was all in one of the lawyers whispered to him that it was time to charge the jury.

"Looking at the jury with a grim, judicial air, the judge said:

"Gentlemen ob de jury, sense dis is a very small case, I'll jes' charge y'all a dollar an' a half apiece."

Luke E. Wright, who has resigned the post of governor general of the Philippines in order to be the first ambassador of the United States to Japan, is one of Tennessee's most distinguished sons. He enlisted in the Confederate army at the age of fourteen, served through the war and was wounded in one engagement. He was a lieutenant at fifteen. Two years later he commanded a battery at the battle of Chickamauga, where in an action lasting twenty minutes fifty out of the seventy men of the battery were killed or wounded. After the war he married a daughter of Admiral Raphael Semmes of the Confederate navy and became a noted lawyer. He was appointed a member of the Philippine commission by President McKinley and succeeded William H. Taft as governor general. In a recent letter Governor Wright described a native servant who was very stupid.

"I told him at luncheon to fill an empty pepper cruet, and I waited for the pepper, but it was a long time coming."

"I looked him up impatiently. He sat back over the crust, with the upper teeth in him."

"How long is it going to take you that b---- I asked."

"I must have been answered,

"but you must remember that it is no small task to force the pepper through these little holes." He was filling the cruet, you see, without removing the perforated lid."

Jacob A. Riis and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge do not agree on the question whether their mutual friend, President Roosevelt, will run for another term of office. The author and sociologist declared in a recent address the belief that Mr. Roosevelt would be a candidate for president again under certain circumstances, while Mr. Lodge in the senate stated positively that the president would never run again.

Mr. Riis was not always a friend of statesmen. He knows by experience "how the other half lives." He once related how in 1870 he found himself in New York without friends or work.

"I had no money at all," he said, "and had to sleep in the street. I spent one night of my life in a police station. That night I had picked up near the North river a little black and tan dog and carried it into the police station. I had one thing of value, and that was a little gold locket I wore inside my shirt. It had a lock of hair in it. That night some of those lodgers stole it from me while I was sleeping in there, and when I came out and found it was stolen—the one thing that connected me with home—I made a complaint to the sergeant, who ordered the doorman to kick me out. 'Do you come in here?' cried he, 'and sleep and yet tell me that you had a gold locket on your neck?' It did sound ridiculous."

"I want the best," returned Hapgood. "I don't care what it pays or how critical it is."

Receiving the information, he sent his copy over the sea, and in less than ten days he got by cable not only an acceptance of his offering, but an order for three more articles of the same sort. That was the beginning of his literary career.

Representative Champ Clark of Missouri attended exercises in a kindergarten the other day.

"Have any of you children ever seen an elephant's skin?" Mr. Clark asked the youngsters.

"I have!" shouted one little fellow.

"Where?" asked Mr. Clark, impressed with the youngster's earnestness.

"On the elephant," he answered.

Mayor Mark M. Fagan of Jersey City, who was a dinner guest of President Roosevelt recently, was an undertaker's assistant on a salary of $75 a month half a dozen years ago. In 1901 he was nominated by the Republicans and fusionists for mayor and, though opposed by a candidate who represented powerful corporate and political interests, was elected by about 5,000 majority. Mayor Fagan is thirty-seven years of age and in his youth enjoyed few educational opportunities, but he improved himself by home study.

REV. DR. FRANK M. CLENDENIN. He is self made in more ways than one, for he has built up his body as well as his character and his mind. At one time he was told by his doctor that he could not live; that he had run himself down from overwork and that he would have to spend a year or more in the mountains. The young man went to work in a gymnasium and slowly developed the muscular frame which he now possesses. He still keeps up his physical exercise.

In his mayoralty campaign in 1901 he would start out early in the morning and, mapping out a section of the city, would canvass it systematically and talk with as many men as he could meet. He would enter stores, workshops and factories and talk with the men. He asked no man to vote for him, but he talked to all on the issues at stake in the campaign.

Young Quentin Roosevelt had a chance staying at the White House with him. Both youngsters were put to bed in Quentin's room.

"I know he's entitled to half the bed,"

Quentin said complaisantly the next morning, "but his half doesn't include all the soft part. I have to sleep on both sides of him."

Oliver Hazard Perry Belmont, the millionaire and society man, was a witness in the libel suit of Judge Dewey against the editor of Collier's Weekly. It developed in the course of the proceedings that most of the rich men whom the proprietor of Town Topics had approached on the subject had readily consented either to buy stock in his paper or lend him money. Mr. Belmont did neither, but refused to aid the proprietor of the enterprise in any way. He stated in the course of his testimony that at one time he had been criticised in the columns of the paper, while his brother Perry, who lent the proprietor money, was praised.

Mr. Belmont is a member of the transaction magnate, August Belmont, and youngest son of the great banker, the late August Belmont.

He attended the Naval Academy at Annapolis, intending to follow the occupation of his grandfather, Commodore Perry, the naval hero, for whom he was named. He decided, however, that such a life would not suit his tastes; was for a time a member of congress from New York and has been twice married. His second wife was formerly the wife of William K. Vanderbilt.

"WHISTLING DICK."

A Reminiscence as Told by Rear Admiral James A. Greer, United States Navy.

One day in May, 1863, while Gen. Grant was completing the investment of Vicksburg, the Benton, an ironclad gunboat belonging to the Mississippi squadron, was lying at the bank of the river on the Louisiana side. An army officer was ushered into the cabin of the commanding officer of the vessel, and after a courteous reception stated that he was a member of the staff of Maj. Gen. —, whose division was en route to the crossing point of the river; that several hours would elapse before the crossing could be effected, and that the general, being very much fatigued, had sent him with his compliments to ask if he could come on board and have a few hours' rest. Reply was made that the commanding officer would very gladly receive him and such officers as he chose to bring, and would do all in his power to make them comfortable, but he was about to start up the river to ascertain the position of confederate batteries.

The aid replied that he was sure the general would like to see how they did things in the navy. Shortly afterwards the general, with one or two other officers, went on board. The vessel immediately proceeded up the river, all hands being at quarters. There was no one on the upper deck but the commanding officer, his two aids, a quartermaster and the army officers.

In action no one should have been exposed on that deck, but sometimes, when at long range and with the firing slow, risks were taken. There was a good (for those times) pilot-house, very solidly built and sheathed with iron. In shape nearly a truncated cone. The outside was thoroughly greased, as an idea prevailed that it might cause shot to deflect. Presently the pilot called out to the captain "to look out," as the vessel would soon be abreast of a large tree, which on former visits up the river had been found to be a range mark for a heavy gun in the confederate works to which had been given the name of "Whistling Dick." Those on deck belonging to the vessel immediately placed themselves on the lee or off-side of the pilot-house, ready, when they should see the flash of the gun, to stoop down and find at least some protection. There were pieces of canvas handy for use in protecting one's clothes from the grease, which was black with coal dust.

The captain told the army officers what his custom was, and advised them to follow his example. Upon this there was a deal of snickering and nudging among the guests, but not in an offensive manner. One remarked in a somewhat facetious tone that "they did not dodge in the army." "This is something new," and so forth.

No reply was made. Soon the quartermaster called out: "There she comes," and the captain said: "Down." Quickly those belonging to the vessel took canvas and crouched down behind and close to the pilot-house. In a few moments was heard the whirr-plunk of the heavy long seven-inch shell from Whistling Dick, as it came toward and passed over the vessel, striking the water not more than 60 feet beyond. Glancing up, the captain observed that there was an addition to the number of those seeking protection behind the pilot-house. In fact, so rapidly did the army officers join their naval friends there that they neglected to protect themselves from the grease, but crouched down so closely that some of them bore the marks upon their foreheads, noses and chins, not to count their clothes. As all rose, the captain, laughing a little spitefully, said: "Well, general, what do you think now of the way they do these things in the navy?" to which reply was made with a Scottish accent: "I didn't know the — things made such a noise."

It is proper to state that the general had probably never heard anything heavier than a 12-pounder shot coming toward him, and he before, as he did frequently after this incident, proved himself to be one of the bravest of men. The next time "Whistling Dick" was fired the army gentlemen were very prompt in seeking the same shelter as their friends of the navy.

THE SOLDIER'S WIFE.

He offered himself for the land he loved. But what shall we say of her?

He gave to his country a soldier's life;

Twas dearer by far to the soldier's wife.

All honor is due to her.

He went to the war while his blood was hot.

But what shall we say of her?

He saw for himself through the battle's flame.

A hero reward on the scroll of fame;

What honor is due to her?

He offered himself, but his wife did more,

All honor to-day to her.

Far dearer than life was the gift she gave;

In giving the life she would die to save,

What honor is due to her?

He gave his life at his country's call,

But what shall we say of her?

He offered himself as a sacrifice;

But she is the one who pays the price,

All honor we owe to her.

SOVEREIGNTY OF THE SULTAN.

American Delegates Oppose Retention of Percentage of Taxation.

Algeciras, Feb. 6.—Moorish delegates here are showing signs of disavowing a leading part in the plan for the administration of their country, but thus far their influence has counted for little, and they are only passive listeners to the plans formulated by the Powers. This was noticeable in the discussion of the internal tax system, to which they withheld their assent, while the delegates of the other Powers unanimously assented.

That feature of the tax system by which the foreign ministers and consuls retain considerable control is construed as indicating the tendency of the conference toward the establishment of international authority, which is one of the main Franco-German issues. This was adopted without modification.

Participation of the American delegates in the debate was useful in the strengthening of the friendly ties between them and the other delegates.

Insurance Value of the Eyes.

The accident insurance policy that yields $5000 in case of death provides an indemnity of $2,500 for the loss of both eyes.

This means that a blind man is practically half dead. Guard your eyes with due care. Too many have put off giving them attention—or having them improperly fitted by incompetent persons until it was too late to be benefitted. —The printers' strike in New York and other cities has depleted the supply of types in Madison county, several printers having gone to the metropolis to work. The fact was brought out at a recent meeting of the newspaper publishers that at present not one boy is learning the printers' trade in any of the offices in Madison county. Are the boys looking for the easier jobs?—Brookfield Courier. The same condition exists throughout the country. We doubt that there is a boy learning the printers' trade in Cayuga county outside the city of Auburn. It is a good trade but, of course, requires hard work and steady hours. Wages run from $7 per week in small offices up to $21 in large ones. We know of several young men who have learned no trade and don't want to learn any. In later years they must depend upon day labor for a living and with the constant and increasing introduction of labor-saving machinery, day labor is becoming more exacting, more difficult and more scarce.

NATIONAL GRANGE.

ITS ANNUAL SESSION HELD AT ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Matters of Importance Considered and a Summary Given of Resolutions Adopted—Marked Increase in Membership Indicated—The Grange Strong Financially.

Atlantic City, N. J., proved to be an ideal place for the meeting of the national grange. The weather was all that could be desired, and all the surroundings were such as to conduce to the pleasure and convenience of visiting Patrons. The famous steel pier was headquarters for delegates and visitors and was a most delightful meeting place for them. The sessions were held in Casino hall. An immense display of farm products of rare quality attracted the attention of visitors on passing on to the pier and was an "eye opener" to many as to what New Jersey farmers were able to produce in the line of fruits and vegetables.

The public session was held in the great ballroom on the pier and was honored with the presence of at least three governors or ex-governors. The chief speakers of the occasion were Governor Stokes of New Jersey, Governor Bell of Vermont, ex-Governor Bachelder of New Hampshire, Hon. Aaron Jones, master of the national grange, and representatives of the city government. Governor Stokes set forth the claims of New Jersey to a place in the Union, viewing her right to the title from an agricultural and commercial standpoint, and his appreciative audience granted all he claimed.

The registered attendance during the best days of the session was about 2,000. Those who took the seventh degree number 1,112. Never was it more impressively rendered and never were the accessaries for staging the work more fitting and convenient.

While there was much to be seen at Atlantic City in November, the delegates were not inclined to sacrifice business to pleasure. It was pre-eminently a business session. The national secretary reported 208 new granges organized during the year ending Oct. 1, 1905, and 65 reorganized, making a total of 274. Michigan leads with 47 new granges, Vermont reports 22, Ohio and Maryland 22 each, Pennsylvania 17, New York 18, Maine 14, Massachusetts 11 and the other states less than 10 each.

The report of the treasurer showed a balance in the treasury Oct. 1, 1904, of $20,490.92. The amount received during the year from state granges for dues was $14,882.28. The total receipts from all sources were $52,514.81.

The expenses of the thirty-eighth annual session were $11,194.77 for per diem and mileage. The total resources of the national grange Oct. 1, 1905, were $87,788.28.

In the brief space at command we can only hint at some of the resolutions adopted, but of matters of wide public interest passed upon favorably those quoted below will serve to show the sentiment of the body. The resolution first named was adopted by a rising vote and later was transmitted by telegraph to President Roosevelt:

That the farmers of this country want neither more nor less than a "square deal," and we unanimously and heartily endorse the many efforts President Roosevelt is making to secure equal opportunity for the individual and the common people against the arrogant power of aggregated wealth and, irrespective of party, pledge ourselves to support his efforts in that direction in every way possible.

That the national grange condemns and brands as criminal any attempt to influence legislation or control the vote of legislators by the use of money; that all officers or others who use the funds of the insurance companies for personal gain are embezzlers and should be punished under the laws; that any contribution by the officers of the company to further the interests of any political party is a corrupt use of the money of the company.

That the national grange uses its efforts in a quiet and law through the several state organizations to secure recognition by our several state governments in placing the sciences directly relating to agriculture upon the curriculum of our common and secondary schools.

That the saloon ought to be carefully and rigorously guarded until it can be abolished, and that it be held to a strict responsibility for the harm it does and that every community should be empowered by law to veto every saloon from its borders.

Favorable action was taken on the following among other important matters: Pledging encouragement to all movements to restore political and personal purity and to minimize corruption of every sort; prohibiting the manufacture, sale or use of cigarettes; removing the internal revenue tax of $2.08 per gallon on alcohol rendered unfit for use as a beverage, for commercial purposes; increasing the efficiency of the anti-oico laws; urging congress to consider a modification of the immigration laws to relieve the scarcity of farm laborers; favoring "farm forestry" as a help to the reforestation of cut over lands; seeking national aid to control or exterminate the gray and brown tailed moths; favoring a further extension and improvement of the rural mail service and opposing any legislation or rulings to curtail the service; endorsing the course of the secretary of agriculture in his attempt to keep crop statistics free from improper influences; favoring the introduction of the sciences directly relating to agriculture into our common and secondary schools; seeking laws against feed adulteration; supporting the laws against the importation of tobacco in the department.

of agriculture at Washington; urging congress not to remove the tax of 10 cents a pound on colored oleo; favoring the parcels post; asking support for the Adams bill now before congress relative to appropriations for experimental stations.

The reports from state masters show that there has been progress all along the line during the past year. The largest gains in membership have been made in New York and Maine, about 4,000 each. Maine has one grange with a membership of 904. Of the 389 subordinate granges in that state 80 per cent own their own grange halls, which are valued at $800,000. Grange fire insurance in that state totals $30,000,000. In Michigan the work has made good progress, and Ohio reports a wide interest in their new educational movement.

The biennial election of officers resulted as follows:

Master, N. J. Bachelder, New Hampshire; overseer, T. C. Atkinson, West Virginia; lecturer, George W. Gaunt, New Jersey; steward, J. A. Newcomb, Colorado; assistant steward, F. E. Marchant, Rhode Island; chaplain, W. K. Thompson, South Carolina; treasurer, Mrs. Eva S. McDowell, New York; secretary, C. M. Freeman, Ohio; gatekeeper, A. C. Powers, Wisconsin; Ceres, Mrs. Charlotte R. F. Ladd, Massachusetts; Flora, Mrs. Amanda M. Horton, Michigan; Pomona, Mrs. Sarah G. Baird, Minnesota; lady assistant steward, Mrs. Joanna M. Walker, Delaware; member executive committee (for three years), F. A. Dethick, Ohio; legislative committee, E. B. Norris, New York; N. J. Bachelder, Aaron Jones, Indiana.

One of the pleasant features of the session was the adoption of a resolution awarding to O. H. Kelley, the founder of the Order, an annual pension of $1,200 during the remainder of his life.

The next session of the national grange will be held in Colorado, probably at Denver.

OHIO'S EDUCATIONAL PLAN.

Granges Are Pursuing a Systematic Course of Study in Agriculture.

At the last annual session of the Ohio state grange it was ordered that the master appoint a committee of three, one of whom should be the superintendent, under adequate pay, to introduce into the subordinate granges of Ohio a systematic study of the elements of agriculture and domestic science, to be carried on under the general direction of the College Agriculture in the State university. The committee was appointed and consists of Dr. W. O. Thompson, president of the State university; Professor Homer C. Price, dean of the College Agriculture, and Mrs. Mary E. Lee of the Ohio university as superintendent of the work.

The outline of the work was sent to all granges and comprises a study of the soil and of sanitation in and around the home. Classes have been organized in many granges and have taken up the work in connection with the outlines prepared by the state and national lecturers. Recitations and papers are given at the lecture hour, and all members are invited to participate in the discussions. Other lessons will follow on practical divisions of the great subject of agriculture and domestic science. Seeds, crops, breeds, feeds and rural economics will follow, while ventilation, decoration and the art of "home making" will be given due attention. It is the hope and purpose to bring to the farmers of Ohio, in so far as may be, full information in conducting their farm operations and to the farm wife a wider outlook.

State Grange Meetings.

Attend them! Go miles out of your way to do it, if need be! You will get not only information, but new views of the work and broader conceptions of what the Order is doing for the farmer and the farmer's family. You will feel honored to belong to such an organization. You will get new inspiration for the work. Go!

An Educational Force.

Ohio is taking the lead in the establishment of traveling libraries, and the granges are active in furthering the cause. There are 500 traveling libraries issuing from the Ohio State library, and the farmers are by far the largest users of these volumes.

Financially Sound.

With $87,000 in good securities, the national grange is in position to do things. Conservation, however, should be and will be the policy in the use of these funds.

National Grange Personals.

National Master Jones and wife were presented with a beautiful silver tea service on his retirement from the chief office in the order.

In view of the fact that O. H. Kelley is to draw $1,200 a year for life from the treasury of the national grange on account of "meritorious service," he says he hopes to live to be 100. He is now about eighty.

J. A. Newcomb, master of the Colorado state grange, is already getting things in shape for the next annual session of the national grange, which will be held in Denver.

National Master Bachelder comes well equipped to the duties of his important office. He has a broad grasp of the public questions with which the grange will have to deal in the future.

State Master Geant of New Jersey won high encomiums for the work which he did to make the national grange feel at home in his state. He was elected to the office of national lecturer.

The Order is in safe hands with such men as Governor C. J. Ball of Vermont, Hon. E. R. Morris of Indiana, N. Y., and Hon. F. A. Dethick of Ohio on its executive committee.

Luckiest Man in Arkansas.

"I'm the luckiest man in Arkansas," writes H. L. Stanley of Bruno, "since the restoration of my wife's health after five years of continuous coughing and bleeding from the lungs; and I owe my good fortune to the world's greatest medicine, Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which I know from experience will cure consumption if taken in time. TO BREAK GRIP OF BEEF TRUST.

Cattle Men in League with Union Butchers and Federation of Labor, New York City, Feb. 6.—Western farmers and cattle raisers co-operating with union butchers and the American Federation of Labor are laying plans to break the grip of the Beef Trust in New York and other Eastern cities by establishing slaughter houses in the West and shipping dressed beef direct to retail stores in the East which are to be controlled by union men and independents.

William C. Wellman, representing the Amalgamated association, said yesterday:—"The Western farmers are deeply interested in the project and say they can raise $2,000,000 to put into the business right away. It has been shown that through this cooperation we will be able to reduce the price of beef five or six cents a pound in New York city, and in time the Beef Trust can be put out of business."

We estimate that two thousand stores could be opened in New York within a year. By giving the union voice in the control of the thing all union consumers would patronize the business and independent dealers not of the union would gladly co-operate with us against the Trust.

Within the next week a conference will be held with several influential members of the Farmers' Alliance, together with officers of the American Federation of Labor, and after that we shall be ready to make public details of the undertaking and give out much of the correspondence, which will show how the plan has developed. Just now there is a strong anti-trust sentiment in the East and it is a good time for the butchers and farmers to issue their declaration of independence."

Grover Cleveland in Albany.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Former President Grover Cleveland was the lion in Albany Tuesday. The Republican Legislature met in special joint session in the Capitol to do him honor and to listen to an address in which he expressed confidence that the Legislature would satisfy in a worthy way the demand of the people for reform and set an example to legislators throughout the land.

Addressing the State Medical Society in the evening, Mr. Cleveland made a playful speech in which he embodied a plea for less mystery in the relation between physician and patient. In revisiting the Capitol which he left more than twenty years ago to become President of the United States, Mr. Cleveland alluded to the absence of the faces which had become familiar to him when he was Governor.

Green Christmas No Grave Filler.

New York, Feb. 7.—Facts have destroyed more than one theory, and now a popular belief that "a green Christmas makes a fat graveyard," or that an open winter such as New York has had this year is a special cause of illness, has received a hard blow. Not only was the last week in January this year the healthiest for that time of year in the history of the city, but the death rate for the last two months has taken a decided drop as compared with the record of a year ago.

To Protect Niagara Falls.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Measures to protect the Niagara Falls were introduced by Assemblyman Foelker and Shanahan, of Brooklyn. In a resolution by the former Attorney General Mayer is called upon to inform the Legislature as to what steps, if any, he has taken to comply with the Governor's recommendations to annual charters of any power companies violating franchise rights.

Morocco Ruler Is Part German.

Berlin, Feb. 6.—The peculiar confidence generally expressed in the German tendencies of the young Sultan of Morocco, particularly since the conference of the Powers at Algiers over the Moroccan question, has been accentuated by the publication of statements, with circumstantial proof, that the Sultan has German blood in his veins.

A Greater Newspaper.

The Syracuse Herald has the largest circulation of any 2 cent evening newspaper in a city of 110,000 in the United States.

For years The Herald has enjoyed the distinction of being one of the best newspapers in the country; it is represented in its parish of over 450 cities, towns and villages with trained newspaper representatives and it is the only evening newspaper in Syracuse a member of The Associate Press.

In addition to the service of this world's news gathering association The Sunday Herald has added the unsurpassed cable service of the New York Sun.

The Herald has the largest staff of city reporters—illustrating all the important events of the day—authority on sporting events—women's doings told by a woman—local and New York markets—fiction by the writers of the day. It carries more classified liners, wants, etc., than all its competitors combined. The Magazine section is one of the strong features of the Sunday edition—the color comic page pleases the youngsters—"The Marathon Mystery," a serial story by Burton E. Stevenson, and one of the best, if not the best, of the late dollar and a half books, is published in a tabloid form and given away with The Sunday Herald; it is in four installments and began Feb. 4th. The subscription of The Evening Herald is 10c a week, $1.25 for three months; Sunday, 5c a copy, $1.25 for six months, delivered by carrier or postage paid. A letter addressed to the Circulation Department, The Herald, Syracuse, will bring a special subscription price to R. F. D.s during this month.

After- Inventory SALE

Began Saturday, February 3,
Ends Saturday, March 3.

Just finished our inventory, and still find that in certain lines we have too much stock. This means that people who have profited before by our inventory sales will not be disappointed this time in the values offered. For bona-fide bargains this sale will discount all others. To any one who is skeptical, we say investigate.

20 Per Cent. Reduction in Overcoats
