A Boy's Answer.

An inspector was examining a class of school children in religious knowledge, and among other things asked for was a definition of a lie. Immediately up shot a boy's hand and in a piping treble came the reply, "A lie is an abomination to the Lord, but a very pleasant help in time of trouble."

PATRIOTISM.

Breathes there the man with soul so dead Who never to himself hath said, "This is my own, my native land?" Whose heart hath not within him burned As home his footsteps he hath turned From wandering on a foreign strand? If such there breathe, go, mark him well! For him no minstrel raptures swell. High though his titles, proud his name, Boundless his wealth as wish can claim—Despite those titles, power and pelf, The wretch, concentrated all in self, Living shall forfeit fair renown And, doubly dying, shall go down To the vile dust from whence he sprung Unwept, unloved and unremembered.

—Sir Walter Scott.

Had 'Em Again.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell tells with keen enjoyment of the experience of a medical friend of his who engaged a nurse, recently graduated, for a case of delirium tremens. The physician succeeded in quieting his patient and left some medicine, instructing the nurse to administer it to him if he "began to see snakes again." At the next call the physician found the patient again raving. To his puzzled inquiry the nurse replied that the man had been going on that way for several hours and that she had not given him any medicine. "But didn't I tell you to give it to him if he began to see snakes again?" demanded the physician. "But he didn't see snakes this time," replied the nurse confidently. "He saw red, white and blue turkeys with straw hats on."—Lippincott's.

Not Enough Children.

She asked him if he was the photographer. He said he was. She asked him if he took children's pictures. He said he did. She asked him how much he charged. He said, "Four dollars a dozen." "Then I'll have to go somewhere else," she replied. "I only have eleven."—Success Magazine.

Taking Care of Papa.

Rev. A. C. Dixon of Chicago, upon leaving home for a long journey, kissed his four-year-old boy goodby, saying, "I want you to be a little man while father is away, and I want you to be sure to take care of mamma." The boy looked at his father with his big eyes very gravely. "Yes, papa," he answered, "I will take care of mamma."

That night the boy knelt and prayed: "Please, Lord, take care of papa, who has gone away. Please take care of grandfather. Please take care of auntie. Please take care of Mary. But, Lord, you needn't take care of mamma. I'm going to take care of her myself."

Doubly Blessed.

It was sentence day in the city court. A man in the prisoners' pen, who had been sentenced to two years for larceny, began to cry softly. The big man next to him, who was going to serve seven years for bigamy, said: "Aw, wotcher sniffin' about?" "I'm—I'm—th-th-thinkin' 'bout leavin' [sob] my—my—family—lea-leavin' my wife!"

Presence of Mind.

Two Irishmen, having a grievance against a farmer, decided to rob him one night. In order to reach the place where the valuables were kept, they had to pass the bedroom of the farmer and his wife.

Pat told Mike to remain where he was until he had passed the bedroom, when Mike was to follow. As Pat crept forward the floor creaked loudly, and the farmer's wife, being awakened by the noise, immediately awoke her husband and told him that there was somebody in the other room.

Pat heard this and began meowing like a cat, when the farmer said, "Oh, it's only the cat," and turned over to sleep again. Mike now followed, and the floor creaked as before. The farmer's wife again told her husband that there was somebody in the next room and told him to investigate.

"Never mind," cried Mike; "it's only another cat!"—Judge's Library.

When You're Safe.

"Hinessey," said Mr. Dooley, "this is great talkin' about Christian Science, hey?"

"Yes," said Mr. Hinessey, "and what do you think about it?"

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "I think that if the Christian Scientists had a little more science and the doctors had a little more Christianity it wouldn't make any difference which you called in—if you had a good nurse."—Finley Peter Dunne.

The Benevolent Peddler.

"I have told you a dozen times I don't want the machine! Sick him, Tige!" said the exasperated woman of the house.

Peddler (while the dog is gnawing his leg)—Don't want the machine, ma'am? Pardon me, you haven't yet seen half its good points. It washes the clothes cleaner than any other and in less than half the time. It never tears off a button. It—

"Good heavens! Don't you see what the dog is doing?"

"Yes. Quite a playful animal. This machine, ma'am, uses less soap, takes up less room—"

"He'll tear you to pieces if you don't go! Run, for mercy's sake! He's tasted blood, and I'm afraid I can't make him stop now!"

"I have to put up with such things, ma'am, and it's in a good cause. This machine is the best one that ever was invented. If I can succeed in introducing one into a family I always feel that I have done a benevolent act. You can use any kind of water, hard or soft, hot or—"

"Oh, oh, oh! He'll kill you! What is the machine worth?"

"It's worth a million dollars in any family, but I'm selling it for only $5, and—"

"Here's your money. I'll take it. Tige, Tige, let go!"

"Let him chew, ma'am; let him chew. It's a wooden leg. I've got another one at home all ready for use when this one is worn out. Looks as if we were going to have rain. Remember you can use any kind of water, and if your soap is all right you can— There! He's got tired of it. Good dog, Tige; good dog! Well, I must be going. Afternoon, ma'am."

Woman—a Mystery.

You gaze at a star for two motives, because it is luminous and because it is impenetrable. You have by your side a sweeter radiance and greater mystery—woman.—Victor Hugo.

A Gambler on Gambling.

We live in this world where nearly everybody is a gambler. Hence it is but natural that there should be gambling.

There are only three things you don't gamble for—your room, clothes and food. Everything else connected with life is gambling.

You seek employment; you gamble for a better place.

You go to an insurance company and have your property insured against fire. Well, don't you gamble there? Don't you bet the company that you may have a fire, and they bet you you may not? Your premium is the odds you get.

You have your life insured; you enter into a gamble with the insurance company.

You invest your money; you gamble there again, and so on all along the line.—Richard Canfield.

Curious of the Future.

"Have you fixed up my will just the way I told you?" asked the sick man, who was the possessor of many needy relatives and some well to do but grasping ones.

"I have," asserted the lawyer.

"Just as strong and tight as you can make it, eh?" asked the client.

The lawyer nodded.

"All right," said the sick man. "Now I want to ask you one thing—not professionally—who do you think stands the best chance of getting the property when I'm gone?"—Youth's Companion.

By F. E. DAVIDSON — RUTLAND Vt

FROM SHEFFOLD TO THRONE.
Aug. 2, '08.—(I. Sam. 16:1-13.)

It is a remarkable fact that the world's greatest heroes and heroines have come from the common walks of life. Like the great rivers of the continents, when traced to their source, their birthplace is usually in some secluded dell or on some barren mountain side.

In the long catalogue of deathless names there are but few who have not risen from obscurity and fought their way to prominence by desperate efforts. Those who are born with a silver spoon in their mouth, soon lose the spoon. They who start at the top of the ladder usually spend their lives coming down.

But the children of poverty are hardy. If they don't have much to eat, what they do have is wholesome. Knowing nothing of coddling, they do not miss it, and they are in no danger of being killed by kindness. Obligated to toil they keep their blood in circulation, and having weary limbs at the close of the day they have no inclination for dissipation. And knowing the value of money they spend little foolishly. When they have a chance to learn they improve the opportunity, and by faithfulness in small duties they prove themselves worthy of advancement.

Christopher Columbus was the son of a poor weaver. Martin Luther was an obscure monk. Hugh Miller was a stone mason. Joan of Arc was a poor peasant girl. Galileo was cradled in poverty. Homer begged his bread from city to city. Paul was a tentmaker. Jesus was a carpenter. The apostles were fishermen. Or to come down to modern times, Benjamin Franklin was a tanner, Ulysses S. Grant was a tanner and Abraham Lincoln was a rail splitter.

It is no disgrace to be poor, and it is not necessarily disastrous. The men who are occupying the places of influence and power in the state and the nation, in the political, educational, commercial, literary, financial and ecclesiastical world have come in vast majority from the homes of the poor.

Appearances ought to count for something, they ought to mean something. Nobleness of form ought to be synonymous with nobleness of soul. Yet what contradictions there are in this respect. Noble heads with nothing in them, great physical power with the intelligence of an ox, fair countenances carried with the heart of a hypocrite or the soul of a villain are the daily discrepancy between appearance and reality. Kingly exterior and peasant interior, dwarfs living in palaces, and giants occupying hovels, what a horrible contradiction is man! Young men fascinated by outward appearance infer that it is safe to follow the lead of such a noble life and are led like sheep to the slaughter. The man who weighs less than 100 pounds stands a poor show with the crowd. Ponderosity makes up for lack of wit.

The prophet Samuel in selecting the first King of Israel made the mistake of thinking that brawn was the same as brain. Saul was chosen because of his physique, and he proved to be a conceited, brainless nonentity. But when Samuel came to pick out the successor of the king who had been overthrown he came near making the same mistake. He thought they must have avordupois anyhow, and was for selecting Eliab the eldest son of Jesse, because he was of kingly size. But the Almighty passed them all by and laid his providential hand upon the youngest son, the shepherd boy David.

So there is a higher law than the scales of the haymarket. That law takes us clear out of the realm of appearances. All men have not Eliab's kingliness of image and majesty of bearing. There are dwarfs, cripples, deformed men, men whose figure is against them, whose outward appearance may lead people to form the most erroneous conclusions regarding the quality and temper of their souls. Stephen A. Douglas was a handsomer man than Abraham Lincoln; but the one has left no impress on the nation, and the other was never so much alive as today. True beauty is beauty of the heart; true greatness is greatness of the mind; abiding majesty is moral majesty; what you are in reality you are in soul. The heroic in size will lose their strength, the knees will tremble, the hands will falter, the eyes grow dim and all the sacred quality of life will pass away, but moral elements, spiritual qualities, beauties of character, will survive all wrecks, growing, increasing, developing and abiding forever.

The unlikely are being constantly called to the chief work of society. God has a world full of "dark horses" to bring out when the squabbling, contending, self-seeking politicians have become irremediably mixed up. And they who yesterday were out in the fields, "far from the madding crowd," quietly tending sheep today are called, commissioned, empowered to sit upon the pinnacle of the social fabric and sway the destinies of to-morrow. The Eternal has not gone out of His world.

THE HIGHER LIFE

Selected Cases of Thought from Pious and Prolific of All Ages.

Root of Folly.

The root of folly is self-will, which is but another name for sin. God has a plan for every man, and our unwisdom is measured by our unwillingness to fall in with it.

The case of King Saul is in evidence. He insisted all his life long on having his own way. He had it; and the result is expressed in his confession, repeated again and again, "I have played the fool."

Attaining the Highest Type.

The highest type of life cannot be reached without effort and struggle and therefore the soul demands the right to struggle and the chance to overcome. The soul's imperative is that it must be loyal to the best, and there is a vacuum in the soul, says Romans, that none can fill but God, and it is the greatest proofs of the being of God that the soul thirsts for Him and will not be content till it finds Him.—Rev. Fred Smith, Reform.

Man's Helplessness.

The natural world of night and day and summer and winter does little for man. We do not get much inspiration out of soil and sun and clouds. Left to mere physical forces for companionship, man is desolate, solitary and lifeless, for he is impotent for creative achievements and inspirational victories as some creature in the Arctic night, amidst his ice house, blubber and ignorant sleep. The seed in the frozen clod waits for the sun to release it. And the soul waits for its Saviour, for wing power, uplift and outreach.

Reward of Suffering.

Life is a school, work offers the arena, happiness is the graduating point, but joy and suffering toil together as teachers. In general, man was built for happiness, and the world gratifies the instinct. Man laughs a thousand times where he weeps once. Blessed is the martyr, the patriot, the poet and the hero who grows richer and richer, taught in the school of adversity and of suffering. The heroes of eternity are the warriors of time who have come out of the great tribulation and stained their banners crimson with their heart's blood.—Rev. Alexander Dawson, Baptist.

Health and Religion.

If religion is a matter of doing good we ought to remember that we cannot do good work with broken, blunted tools. A heart consecrated to heaven's work will endeavor to bring the body up to its highest efficiency as an instrument for doing good. You can glorify the Most High more by the health that imparts cheer, the strong hand that lifts big bundles for poor old ladies, the abounding vigor that helps to spell virtue in your own life, than by a year's prayer meeting whines or by the most pious wishes for the eternal welfare of your neighbors.

The Power of God.

God can raise up men of genius out of the stones of the street. A new enthusiasm stirred in the heart of a young merchant in Assisi gave us the world's St. Francis, who saved Italy; gave the world Xavier, who journeyed like a summer's day over a winter clad earth named the Far East; gave us Paul, who overthrew three heathen religions. When Christ enters the heart, the intellect glows. Then the ideals are rekindled, the will bestirs itself, the coward becomes a hero, the selfish man a patriot, enemies become apostles, and a sinner named Saul becomes one of the saviours of the world.—Rep. Edw. Wilson.

Dr. Frank Crane's Epigrams.

The heart that is not hopeful is not Christian.

Only a life that feels the power of the infinite is proof against despair.

It is with God as with the sun; to most persons the one and the other are pleasant and beautiful, to a few rare souls they are the sources of power.

How few well-fed souls!

A Christian is one who sees the invisible, hears the inaudible, obeys the impossible, knows the unknowable and clasps hands with the omnipotent.

You can distinguish between true and false success when you can distinguish between aspiration and ambition.

Foundation of Prayer.

The proper foundation of prayer is praise and thanksgiving. Jesus puts the thought of God's character first then of His Glory and His purpose. Most of us I dare to say, in our private devotions think first of our sins and then of what we want for ourselves and our family. We go to a concert and are uplifted by the music, and then come home and utter a prayer which has no relation to that feeling of exaltation. We are deeply impressed by a gorgeous sunset, but see no angle standing in the sun as did St. John. We pray for a safe passage across the sea and then forget to thank God when we reach the land in safety.

But Daniel, exiled, persecuted, about to be thrown to the lions, knelt at the open window and gave thanks to God.—Rev. W. H. Wilson, Presbyterian.

New York, Auburn & Lansing.

Says the Auburn correspondent to the Syracuse Post-Standard of July 26:

"Auburnians will be able to go to Ithaca over the New York, Auburn & Lansing Railroad by September 15. This is the date on which the New York Central expects to put in operation the service south of Genoa. Three or four trains a day will leave Auburn over this branch, the first one departing about 7:30 o'clock in the morning. The trip to the university town will take one hour.

"Steam cars will be used on the road for about one year. Afterward electric cars will be put in operation. Stops will be made at Genoa and other intervening towns. At the present time the cars on this road run only to Genoa, trains arriving and departing from Auburn at Wright avenue, west of Division street.

"Only four more miles of track will have to be laid to complete the road. This stretch is between Ithaca and South Lansing. The latter place is seven miles from Ithaca, and there are three miles of the road already completed north of Ithaca. On the remaining four miles considerable work has been done in the way of ballasting and preparing the road.

"Within the past few days a government mail inspector has been over the proposed route of the road with a view to getting information for the Postoffice Department. The contract for the mail between Auburn and Genoa has been made, and as soon as the road is completed to Ithaca mail service will be installed. The contract with the American Express Company has been made for this branch."

"Colonel, who was the very bravest man you ever knew?" asked the beautiful girl.

"He was a cook in my regiment."

Sent Dog's Head to Cornell.

On Thursday of last week a pet dog belonging to Daniel Bacon of Genoa, began acting strangely while in this village with its master. The canine was taken to the residence of Arthur Aspell, where a gun was procured and the animal was shot. The body was buried but the matter was brought to the attention of Dr. S. N. Thomas, health officer of this town, who examined the carcass and sent the head to Cornell University for examination. So far no report has been received as to whether the animal was infected with rabies.—Moravia Register.

A Novel Rudder.

During the Abyssinian war a company of the naval brigade assisted the troops in transport work. The sailors had great difficulty in managing the mules, and George A. Henty, the author, who acted as a correspondent during the war, relates that he saw a mule being led by a sailor with another sailor walking behind holding the animal by its tail.

"Hello, Jack!" cried a sailor. "Where are you going?"

"Don't know," replied Jack. "I'm only towing this 'ere craft. Ask my mate behind; he's doing the steering!"

Arriving on the early morning train from Auburn, they spent the morning calling on old friends and acquaintances, and viewing the old landmarks about town. Many were the expressions of sympathy and sorrow for the terrible devastation caused by the recent fire. After a delightful morning they returned to the home of Mrs. Thome, where a most bountiful repast awaited them, which was enjoyed in true picnic fashion. The afternoon was most socially passed on the shady porch, and after a delicious luncheon the congenial party of old friends returned to Auburn on the evening train bearing pleasant memories of a most delightful day.

Death of Mrs. George Erb.

Mrs. Lulu Haskell Erb passed away at her home on Spring street, Groton, N. Y., Saturday, July 25, after an illness of only a few days, aged 19 years.

The funeral services were largely attended at her late home Monday at 1 o'clock. The sorrowing friends have the sympathy of the community in their great loss. The services were conducted by Rev. S. A. Brown, of the M. E. church, of which the deceased was a member. He was assisted by Rev. Mr. Lyon, of Moravia, and Rev. Mr. Cullihan, of Locke. Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Moe sang. Many beautiful flowers were presented. Besides those given by friends, were those by the Groton Bridge Company, Conger Hose, Maccabees, and Sunday School class.

Besides her husband she is survived by her mother, Mrs. E. Haskell, two sisters, Mrs. W. R. Mosher and Mrs. Geo. Doan, and two brothers, Charles and John Lane. The remains were taken to Moravia and interment made in Indian Mound cemetery.

A precious one from us has gone, A voice we loved is stilled; A place is vacant in our home, Which never can be filled. God in His wisdom has recalled, The boon his love had given, And though the body slumbers here, The soul is safe in Heaven.

Dearest sister, thou has left us, And our loss we deeply feel, But 'tis God that has bereft us He can all our sorrows heal. Yet again we hope to meet thee, When the day of life is fled, When in Heaven in joy to greet thee Where no farewell tear is shed.

Assessors' Notice.

Notice of completion of assessment roll. Notice is hereby given that the assessors of the town of Genoa have completed their assessment roll for the current year, that a copy thereof has been left with the undersigned, Herbert Gay, where it may be seen and examined by any person interested therein until the third Tuesday in August next, and that on such day at 10 o'clock in the forenoon said assessors will meet at the Carson hotel in said town to here and examine all complaints in relation to such assessment on the application of any person conceiving himself aggrieved.

Dated July 31, 1908.

To The Women.

Will you not vote at the school meeting this year? Remember the date, the evening of Tuesday, Aug. 4.

If you live in a Union Free School District, numbering 300 pupils or more, the time for election of trustees will be Wednesday, the 5th of August, from 12 to 4 o'clock, and for tax appropriations on Tuesday evening, August 4th.

You are entitled to vote for trustees and tax propositions.

1st. If you are the parent or guardian of children who have attended the school for eight weeks in the year preceding.

2d. If you pay taxes on $50.00 personal, or own or rent taxable property.

No other public work is of greater importance than the education of our future citizens. Will you not give your vote to help the schools and the children, by choosing the best trustees for the coming year? Every vote counts. Will you not urge your friends and neighbors, who are eligible, to go with you to the school meeting and thus show that the mothers are anxious to do their part toward making our schools the best in the world? Chairman of School Suffrage Committee, N. Y. W. S. A.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given to the electors of school district No. 6, town of Genoa, that the annual school meeting, for the purpose of electing school officers for the ensuing year and transacting any other business that may legally come before the meeting, will be held in the school building in said district, on the 4th day of August, 1908, at 8:30 p. m.

Dated, Genoa, N. Y., July 31, 1908.

JEWELS OF ROYALTY.

AMERICANS COMING TO FRONT WITH COLLECTIONS.

Mrs. Mackey's 4,000 Pearls—The Duchess of Marlborough's Collection—Queen Alexandra's Three Favorite Jewels.

Of her personal jewels, next to her wedding ring, the late Queen Victoria most valued an insignificant enamel ring, set with a single diamond, given to her by Prince Albert when she was yet a child, and his betrothal ring, a snake set with the finest emeralds.

These three rings were never removed from her hand and were buried with her. Much treasured, too, was the bracelet she always wore, composed of a numerous array of small golden hearts, each with a minute miniature of one of her grandchildren or great-grandchildren.

Queen Alexandra, in addition to a beautiful diamond and pearls, owns some wonderful gems—rubies, sapphires and emeralds—which, however, she rarely wears. The only colored stones she really likes are amethysts, and these she has given, at Christmas and on their fete days, to her friends and relatives in such numbers, set in scarf pins, bangles, chains, hat pins and sunshade tops, that she has quite popularized the stone, hitherto little valued in England. With dresses of her favorite color, mauve, the Queen always wears amethysts.

The jewels she values above all are her engagement ring, set with a beryl, emerald, ruby, topaz, jacinth, emerald—the first letters of which spell out the name by which she has always called her husband, "Bertie," the beautiful diamond cross given to her by the women of Denmark on her marriage, and the crown of brilliants, set in silver, bestowed by the women of England on her silver wedding day.

The most splendid jewels Queen Alexandra possesses are undoubtedly her pearls. She has ropes and ropes of them, high dog collars and pearls set in trimmings for the carriage of her ball dresses. These have been collected and given to her by the Czar and her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia, as well as by members of the English, Danish and German royal families, many being old heirlooms.

The Queen's pearls are surpassed only by the young Duchess of Marlborough's historic collection. This includes some of the most interesting pearls in existence—the pearls that belonged to the ill-fated Marie Antoinette, which were bought by Mr. Vanderbilt for his daughter as a marriage gift. Each pearl in the young Duchess's necklace—it is immensely long one—is valued at £1,000, and she sometimes wears the ropes wound twice around her neck and twice around her waist.

I hope I am divulging no state secret, says a writer in the Grand Magazine, if I state that before Queen Alexandra went last season to dine with the Duchess at Sutherland House, the beautiful home of the Marlboroughs in Curzon Street, she asked her youthful Grace to "put on all her pearls," just for once, "for then I will wear mine," laughed the Queen. "After dinner we will count which has the larger number." And they did, like two schoolgirls. The Duchess was the winner by two!

Among the finest black pearls known are those worn by Lady Ilchester of Holland House, which it took Napoleon III. ten years to collect in all parts of the world for the Empress Eugenie.

What is said to be the most valuable single necklace of pearls is owned by Countess Henckel of Paris. She has also a triple necklace of pearls of especial interest.

The first string was the so-called "Necklace of the Virgin of Atokha;" the second was once the property of the ex-Queen of Naples; the third was worn by the Empress Eugenie on state occasions.

This last string contains the great pearl found in Paterson forty-eight years ago. This pearl, if it had not been somewhat injured by the moisture being boiled before the shell was opened, would be the finest and largest gem of modern times.

Mrs. Mackey is said to have the largest number of pearls of any living woman. There are almost 4,000 of them. One pearl rope belonging to her measures 9 feet in length, each pearl being the size of a pea and perfectly matched.

Do You Know?

Do you know that six or eight stewed prunes eaten half an hour before breakfast will act as a laxative, whereas double the number eaten with or after a meal may have no aperient effect at all?

Do you know that many people who try the experiment of dining on fruit alone have, after a few weeks, to consult the doctor as to how to cure their dyspepsia?

Care of Matting.

Matting never should be subjected to an oversupply of water. Care should be exercised toward keeping it unstained. When it becomes soiled, however, use a soft cloth well wrung out in a suds made of borax soap and water, and air thoroughly by leaving a window open until the spot is dried. Dampness must be removed from matting as speedily as possible. Use a pliable, not too stiff, broom for matting. Always sweep well first any flooring or floor covering which may be spotted or soiled and needs a damp application.

LATEST IN TOOTHBRUSHES.

Arranged to Clean Both Sides of the Teeth at Once.

It is a well known fact that it is an easy matter to keep the outside of the teeth clean, but not so the inside. They are never touched by the toothbrush; in fact, are seldom thought of. Naturally, the inside of the teeth should receive as much care and attention as the outside, and to accomplish this there has been designed the toothbrush shown in the accompanying illustration. It is very peculiar in shape, and would hardly be recognized as a toothbrush. It is made of a hollow tube, having attachments at each end for holding the brushes. Two small brushes are placed at each end of the tube and attached to tapes, which connect with a lever. At each end of the tube are arms, which support the brushes and also small cups for holding a tooth dentifrice. The brush is held in an upright position, with a cup on each side of the teeth. By operating the lever the brushes are moved back and forth across the teeth, cleaning both the inside and the outside. With each movement of the lever the brushes are brought into contact with the cup holding the tooth-wash, and thence transferred to the teeth.

The Evolution of Woman.

At the beginning of time Twashtri, the vulcan of Hindu mythology, created the world. But when he wished to create a woman he found that he had employed all his materials in the creation of man. There did not remain one solid element. Then Twashtri, perplexed, fell into a profound meditation. He acquitted himself as follows:

He took the roundness of the moon, the undulations of the serpent, the entwining of the climbing plants, the trembling of the grass, the slenderness of the rose vine and the velvet of the flowers, the lightness of the leaf and the glance of the fawn; the gayety of the sun's rays and the tears of the mist; the inconsistency of the wind and timidity of the hare; the vanity of the peacock and the softness of the down on the throat of the swallow, the hardness of the diamond, the sweet flavor of honey, the cruelty of the tiger, the warmth of the fire, the chill of snow, the chatter of the jay and the cooling of the turtle dove. He united all these and formed woman. Then of her he made a present unto man.

Eight days later the man came to Twashtri and said: "My lord, the creature you gave me poisons my existence. She chatters without rest, she takes all my time, she laments for nothing at all and is ill all the time."

And Twashtri received the woman again.

But eight days later the man came again to Twashtri and said: "My lord, my life is very solitary since I returned you this creature. I remember she danced before me slinging. I recall how she glanced at me from the corner of her eye and she played with me, clung to me."

And Twashtri returned to him the woman.

Three days only passed and Twashtri saw the man coming again.

"My lord," said he, "I do not understand exactly how, but I am sure the woman causes me more annoyance than pleasure. I beg of you to relieve me of her."

But Twashtri said, "Go your way and do your best."

And the man cried: "I cannot live with her."

"Neither can you live without her," replied Twashtri.

And the man was sorrowful murmuring: "Woe is me! I can neither live with or without her."

Woman's Deterioration.

Most of us will be inclined to say woman has deteriorated physically. Her contour is now found to be very much out of drawing, her limbs and joints being far from strictly knit together and lacking grace in their movements. Unlike her progenitors, she has to disguise herself in such ugly and unsuitable clothes that most of her defects are fortunately hidden from the gaze of people with common artistic and discriminating experience.

Scratches on Mahogany.

If one's solid mahogany furniture becomes scratched rub the marred places with butter. This darkens the bruise instantly, and after a good hard rubbing the mar is about obliterated. A woman who is rich in the possession of antique mahogany always washes it with soap and water, dyes with a chamois skin, and never uses a bit of furniture polish.

MEN AND WOMEN IN STATISTICS.

Save in Europe Most of the Nations Have an Excess of Male Population.

The Statistische Jahrbuch published by the German Government, contains every year about fifty pages of comparative statistics of the world. This is a source to which writers on the comparative statistics of nations very often go for information.

In the Jahrbuch for this year the statistics of population as to sex are collated. Some countries, as France and China, give only the total population without distinguishing the sexes and they have to be left out of the calculation.

In Europe, the only countries in which the number of males is given as exceeding that of females are Servia, Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece, all of which are Balkan States. The Teutonic, Latin and Slav nations have a slight excess of females, which is often only a few thousands and rarely as much as 800,000.

In every other continent, most of the nations have an excess of male population; thus in the western world, Jamaica, Mexico and Venezuela alone have an excess of females. The United States, Canada, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and other countries have an excess of males.

So far as accurate statistics have been obtained in Africa, only the French possessions and the Gold Coast Colony, have an excess of females, while in Egypt, the French possessions, the Transvaal, Orange River Colony and Cape Colony, males are the more numerous.

In none of the Asiatic countries are females in excess of males, according to the statistics. In the Philippines the males are in excess of the females.

HOME COOKERY.

Peach Pudding.

Chop the peaches into a bowl add a generous quantity of sugar; then set away until a thick syrup has been drawn. To this add beaten eggs in the proportion of two eggs to a pint of fruit, preserving the whites of two eggs for meringue. Add half the quantity of milk there is of fruit, and two rolled crackers for each pint of the mixture. Mix, pour into an earthen dish and slip into a quick oven. Rapidly beat the whites with a heaping teaspoonful of soft white sugar to each, put at once on pudding and return to oven until the meringue is a delicate brown. Serve cold.

Banana Fritters.

Cut peeled bananas into halves lengthwise, then across, and dip in fritter batter. Fry in deep hot fat and serve with a lemon sauce. The sauce for fritters should always be clear, and generally no thickening is used, or else a little arrowroot is taken, which makes transparent thickening. Make a syrup by cooking one cup of sugar with five tablespoons of water for eight minutes, and be sure not to cook it longer, for ten or twelve minutes will make it thread. Add one and one-half tablespoons of lemon juice and a rounding teaspoon of butter.

Bolled Apples.

Place a layer or two, if necessary, of rather tart apples in a saucepan, cover with cold water, let come quickly to the boiling point, then cook slowly till tender. Remove to dish, sprinkle thickly with sugar, and pour over them the liquid remaining in the saucepan. It is especially convenient to prepare apples in this way when a very hot fire is not required, or when the oven is otherwise occupied.

Peach Pie.

Line a plate with rich paste and build a narrow rim around the edge. Fill with ripe peaches and cut in quarters. Scatter sugar over as needed by the quality of the fruit and bake. Serve cool, covered with a thick meringue of sweetened and beaten cream.

Beauty Don'ts.

Don't have outstanding ears when you can wear an ear harness at night.

Don't have aches and pains when you can keep well. Remember that carelessness makes more invalids than hard work.

Don't overdress, but try to suit your style, and remember that dress makes or mars the woman.

Don't be sloppy in your style and don't wear clothes that are shabby. Remember that a rundown heel spoils a foot and that a bad skirt braid is a social sin.

Don't wear a big hat if you are a little woman; don't try to dress out of proportion to your stature.

Don't imagine that you are prettier than you are.

Don't walk too rapidly for it destroys grace.

Don't hurry and don't worry. Don't, if you are a woman with a bad face, try to look still sadder; chirp up; smile; make your mouth into a Cupid's bow; force yourself to look animated; try to be expressive with your eyes.

Whisk Broom Sprinklers.

A whisk broom makes the best of sprinklers for the house plants, the fine spray that it sheds when dipped in water and shaking over them coming in contact with all the foliage and overcoming in part the dry heat of the house. If the table and other small ferns are sprinkled in this way every night their gardeners will have to be replenished less frequently.

THE GOOD COW.

Truth Not Always at the Bottom of a Big Milk Well.

The average dairyman is not as smart as he thinks he is and cannot tell a good cow or a bad one under all circumstances by looking at her, by pinching her hide, pulling her teats and with his hand following the tortuous course of her milk veins to their end in the milk well.

It is possible for a well bred cow to inherit a great many of the points that we have come to look for in a good dairy cow and still fail in her performance. I think I state a fact that experienced breeders of cows will concede as beyond controversy that into no breed of cows has man yet been able to so perpetually fix the habit of proper milk giving that the tendency to the exercise of the habit may not be perverted or permanently arrested by the early injudicious care of the offspring as a calf and as a heifer and even up into her cowhood—that is to say, a calf may be from an excellent dam and a great sire and be seriously spoiled in the making of her into a cow. Such a one might carry many marks which the judges of cows would look upon with favor and she still be a failure.

Having got good cows we need to keep them good and as far as possible make them better.

There are many so called dairy-men who keep their cows just as we work with a gasoline engine. They think as the cow is a machine she needs to have the current on only when she is working. When the cow is at rest she is at her best and one may save feed on her, as at that time she will do well any way. When this period of natural activity begins to wane and the flow of milk, reduces itself to the level of its source, there isn't much use of feeding heavily then, for a cow that doesn't pay for generous feeding, should not have it. In consequence of such mechanical dairying, when milk is high the cow is kept by sufferance and mighty cheap feed against the coming of pasture.

Why does this cow fill her udder and the milk's pail when the sun shines and the breeze is soft and the clear waters run and the grass is green and plentiful in the pasture? Simply because the cow is comfortable, has sun and air to make her good red blood, has all the pure water she wants to drink and all the rich, nutritious grass she can eat. Her nutrition is both balanced and abundant and her environment such that the wonderful functions of her organism are in perfect normal operation.

If my cows are to carry on through the fall the good work they inaugurated in the spring pasture there must be no diminution in feed or attention. If they are to keep at it all winter and spring and even do their best at early pasture there must be always the full and sufficient feed and unremittent care.—By W. M. Sparran, before Connecticut Dairy-men's Association.

Cost of Keeps.

Cows vary in their cost of keep as well as in their ability to use economically the food consumed. Those of a decided dairy type will return the greatest profit when fed to full capacity. The average cost of feeding a dairy cow in this western country, as shown by recent records, is about $20 a year and the total value of butter fat is about $70, leaving an average of about $40 for labor and profit, in addition to the value of the skim milk, the calf and the manure. It is fair to presume that the calf, skim milk and manure will balance the labor required to care for the cow so that the net earnings therefore, would be $40 a year.

This ratio should be maintained for forty or fifty cows with the ordinary help on a ranch and the profits can be figured proportionately. If the right kind of stock is kept. The trouble, however, is that we do not keep the right kind of stock and our methods are not always the most praiseworthy.

Feeding Dairy Stock.

Our dry farming settlers will in time get along all right when they shall have learned the utility of a few forage crops fed to dairy stock. They can grow kafir corn, dwarf broom corn, milo maize and sorghum as forage for winter and if they can add some alfalfa, and the tops and pods of sugar beets so much the better. In this connection we would like to add that kafir corn causes the butter to come in small particles which are very difficult to press together. This is a characteristic of the feed and is not due to any bitter flavor that it might cause but the feeding of alfalfa will overcome the difficulty.

To Remove Obstruction.

One part tincture of iodine and eight parts sweet oil or vaseline, applied externally, will sometimes remove obstructions in the cow's teat. Make the application once each day directly over the obstruction and massage well to rub the mixture into the pores.

It is estimated that the Kafirs in the diamond mines at Kimberly, South Africa, steal $11,250,000 worth of diamonds in a year.

NATIONAL FUND FOR HIGHWAYS.

Roads Should Remain Forever Open to the People as a Whole.

National moneys were used once for building in the United States an important wagon road. No more appropriations were made for such purpose. Possibly they who held toll roads and they who owned railroad franchises saw in such use of public funds a menace to vested interests. It may be that they saw that one could easily monopolize the wagon roads of the whole people. Whatever may have been the true reason, great and continued efforts were made to induce the people to consent to the use of their land and their credit to help construct railroads and waterways that could be made to fill private purses to repletion.

Hundreds of millions of dollars of the nation and of state, of counties and of townships, of municipalities and of individuals were given to build railroads that became the property of a few individuals or corporations; for in those days it was easy for the "interests" to lead the masses to believe almost any tale told by those whom they thought were great captains of industry. So the people accepted as true assertions that their great need was railroads, and that such roads could not or would not be built without most generous gifts from the people.

Through all these years demands have been made on the nation for enormous sums to pay for river and harbor improvement, and of late for giant subsidies for ships; and now the call sounds for a rally to the support of claims for appropriations of scores of millions of the money of the people to pay for making canals.

For each and every one of these great enterprises good and sound reasons are set forth. I know of no reason for supposing that they will only yield a fair cash return on their cost, but give other valuable returns by adding to the value of many thousands of farms and of factories, of mines and of homes near their lines.

And I know that each sound reason offered in support of these enterprises can easily be matched by one at least as sound and strong in favor of using the money of the nation to help the several states make good their wagon roads. And in addition to all the good reasons which may be put forward in favor of using national powers to make waterways may be advanced the reason which is finding welcome from millions of taxpayers of this country—that roads so made would remain forever open to the people as a whole, as the waterways will not be in fact, although they may be in theory.—Good Roads Magazine.

Economy in Good Roads.

Governor Warfield of Maryland, has during his administration, stood firmly for road improvement, and is one of the most ardent advocates of adopting measures to carry on the work in his State.

The Governor recently said: "Good roads cost money but they are far less expensive to the public than bad roads. The roads which the State Geological Survey Commission are constructing cost no more than similar roads north and south, and will prove a permanent investment for the people of the State. It is far more economical in the long run to build highways that require but a small amount of maintenance than to construct cheap, temporary structures that will constantly require repair, to say nothing of the comfort and pleasure to be derived from smooth, dry roads."

France's Roads Best in the World.

Among the reasons which make the highways in France the best in the world is the requirement that all preliminary road-making operations shall be thoroughly performed. When embankments are made, the earth-work is built up only a few inches at a time and the successive strata are leveled and, in the neighborhood of masonry, rammed. Every ditch is carefully cut at a proper angle, paved with stones. Dangerous turns are protected by stone parapets; at each cross-road there are sign posts, always in order, and the Touring Club of France has established indicators to remind the tourist of dangerous curves, rapid descents, etc. Every railroad crossing is protected by a gate, which has a watchman in charge day and night.—Leslie's Weekly.

Cost of Hauling Products.

Frank Andrews of the United States Agricultural Department writes: In hauling products from farms in wagons there is an opportunity for saving in cost. In many regions in the United States the improvement of a road, or a short rough section of a road, would allow much larger loads to be hauled.

It is stated that the city of Chicago estimates that by placing a tax upon vehicles $706,000 can annually be raised for the maintenance of her streets. The proposed tax is graded as follows: 1-horse, vehicle, $5; 3 horses, $10; 5 horses, $15; 4 horses, $25; 6 horses, $35. On automobiles: runabouts, $15; touring cars, $25; trucks, coaches or buses, $20.

Dainty Summer Frocks—Modes for the Little Folks—Cool and Dainty Blouses—Triumph of the Milliner's Art in Bridesmaids' Hats—Sleeves and Model for Tub Frock.

BY JULES THEROW.

After all much of the smartness of summer frocks is embodied in the little details. They are the elements that qualify a frock for the supreme place in the ranks of fashion. This charming summer confection developed in sheer silky batiste is beautifully trimmed with embroidery garlands and valenciennes lace and insertion. It is a close fitting princess with tucks about the waist and running down below the belt line to the hips.

DAINTY SUMMER GOWN.

At the bottom of the skirt there is a deep flounce, shirred rather full and stitched on under a heading of insertion, edging and the embroidery medallions.

A most charming bertha arrangement glorifies the waist, being composed of the lace insertion and embroidery. It is brought over the shoulders and down to the bust-line where it is knotted carelessly and the ends allowed to hang down.

The sleeves are formed entirely of insertion, connected with bias folds of the batiste, hand embroidered and ruchings of Valenciennes edges finish them at the elbows.

Summer modes for little folks are of especial interest to mothers at this season, for it is well to have the children's summer outfits ready as early as possible.

Two dainty examples of the house dress are illustrated, the first being of plain dotted cotton material, trimmed with hand embroidery. The bottom of the skirt and front of the blouse are ornamented with the hand-work. The frock is cut in one piece, including even the double sleeves, also finished with embroidery.

The second model is a slip of white linen with gumpes or figured dainty worn underneath. The sleeves and bottom of the skirt are trimmed with self-tucked bands, making a simple, yet effective finish.

One-piece and straight little yoke dresses play an important part in the little women's summer wardrobe. They are made elaborate by the use of fine materials and quantities of lace and hand-work, but the models with flat work and no other decoration, save tiny frills of lace at the wrists and a few tucks above the hem are much worn, besides being inexpensive and easy to fashion by the home dressmaker.

For coolness and daintiness nothing excels a blouse of seeded muslin, such as is pictured here. It is rather more close-fitting than the average lingerie blouse and the tucked trimming and yoke of hand embroidery give it an air of dressiness more generally associated with lace chiffon or silk waists.

The yoke is formed of heavy embroidery, with medallions of the same trimming around it in the form of flat revers. For the medallions is a heading of embroidery and the combined trimmings reappear in the high, well-fitted collar.

Bridesmaid's hats are triumphs of the milliner's art and there is literally no limit to their trimming and cost. A French firm designed this hat for a smart American heiress attendant and is a delightful innovation from the accustomed models for wedding ceremonies.

Very fine satin straw is used and the inside of the wide brim has frills of pale yellow point lace "leaking" down to rest against the hair.

The crown is rather high, bound with three or four bias folds of pink or blue satin according to the color scheme of the wedding. The plumes, which are arranged at the back to fall in the same direction also combine the colors selected by the bride of this occasion.

There are also very picturesque models of Louis seize calots order, with soft draped crowns of net or lace and falling platings of the same trimming. Some of these rise to great height through the airy drapery of the net in the crown or great bows of net or lace in front. Others are fairly high and are trimmed with plumes or flowers at any angle to please the taste of the bride.

Although much has been said of the long, close-fitting sleeves the majority of models for summer gowns are elbow length only and fashioned in the loose, generous way that provides comfort as well as chic.

In the group of sleeves pictured here, the most novel, perhaps, is the centre one, trimmed of frills of two different kinds of lace, above which are folds of the dress material trimmed with small, fancy buttons.

The others, with one exception, all show the fancy for draped effects which are always graceful and lend themselves to manipulation in the fashionable fabrics of the season.

Draperies of all kinds disclose borders of bindings of satin lace or ribbon velvet, the latter being more in demand than ever, even as embellishment for the sheerest lawns and "nergetic" materials.

Lace, of all quantities and designs, combined with buttons of all sizes and patterns, is a highly fashionable trimming, but when a severe effect is desired this cannot be gained better than by the use of plain folds of silk or cloth finished with buttons of unpretentious design.

So much work is put upon sleeves that they can be made to form a considerable item in ones expense account. Upon so detail, however, does a frock depend more strongly, as upon the sleeves.

BRITISH NAVY MYSTERY.

Traditions Regarding the Death of Sir Cloudeley Shovel.

Of the almost complete wreck of a squadron under Sir Cloudeley Shovel on the rocks off the Scilly Isles, together with the death of its gallant commander, the greatest seaman of the age, a number of curious traditions are associated both with the events leading up to the catastrophe and the fate of the celebrated Admiral.

The outstanding feature of the catastrophe is the mystery of Shovel's death, which will probably never be solved, and the latter turns upon the Admiral's emerald ring. One story goes that the body was picked up on the shore by a soldier and his wife, and buried by them on Porth Hellick sands. A spot is still shown at Porth Hellick as being the burial place of the Admiral, and according to tradition grass has never grown upon it. Subsequently the identity of the corpse was discovered. The remains were exhumed and conveyed to London, via Plymouth, where they were embalmed. Lady Shovel rewarded the soldier with a pension for life, and received from him the ring found on Sir Cloudeley's finger.

Another story is that Paxton, the purser of the Arundel, discovered two St. Mary men quarrelling over the possession of the ring. He at once recognized it as Shovel's ring, and inquired from which body it had been taken and when that was found he knew and claimed the body. Lastly, there is the startling narrative of foul play, viz., that many years after the wreck an aged woman confessed to the parish minister on her death bed that, exhausted with fatigue, one man, who had been washed ashore on a hatch, reached her hut, and that she had murdered him to secure the valuable property on his person. She then produced a splendid emerald ring, taken from the finger of her victim, and identified as the gift of Lord Berkeley to Shovel.

The responsibility for this story rests upon the Admiral's grandson, the Earl of Romney. Modern research reports rather in favor of the murder theory. The ring was eventually recovered, and altered into the form of a locket and set with diamonds. It is a precious relic of the Berkeley family.

The theory as to how it passed into the possession of the family of the original donor is that Lady Shovel received it from the murderer as stated and bequeathed it at her death to Lord Berkeley. Several old works of reference contain the baseless story that Lady Shovel was aboard the Association and was drowned along with her husband. By the way, her ladyship's ghost is supposed to walk at midnight in the avenue of May Place, Dartford, Kent, once the home of the Shovels.

Tabulated Wedded Life.

If any of the 100 residents of Chicago recently invited to an anniversary party on November 7 hesitate to accept it will not be because they are unsupplied with information on the condition of servitude, past and present, of the hosts.

Frank Baum, well known to the young citizens as Father Goose, and Mrs. Baum will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, for which they have issued invitations in booklet form. It contains, in addition to the information that the party is going to be a record of the marriage life of the hosts, which is excellent.

The marriage certificate is reproduced in full, signed by the 162 guests at the wedding, and is re-enforced by the following record of their married life:

Resided in Syracuse, N. Y., Aberdeen, S. Dak., and Chicago—the latter for sixteen years.

Raised four boys, smart as the average.

Quarreled just a few.

Wife in tears three times. (a) When cat died. (b) When bonnet was spoiled. (c) When she had sore toe.

Husband swore 167 times.

Wife swore none.

The swearing of the husband is accounted for on the grounds that he was notary public for four years.

Causes of jealousy—none.

Broke occasionally.

Bent often.

Unhappy none.

Future prospects good.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Honor Among Thieves."

I have often been asked as to whether "honor among thieves" is fact or fiction. The question is not easy to answer. In the first place, honor is a relative term, its interpretation, so it seems to me, depending on place person and circumstance.

Those casuists of the cynical sort who affirm that all human motive is based on selfishness, will hardly except the attribute in question from their generalization.

However open to criticism this same generalization is as far as it applies to the average citizen, I am certainly inclined to accept it where the crook is concerned. The business of attaching to yourself things that don't belong to you, is plainly of a very selfish nature.

It has its inception as well as its execution in a desire to get as much possible pleasure with as little possible trouble as may be, and that, too, while ignoring the incidental rights of anybody and everybody; this statement, as I take it, is a pretty fair definition of selfishness of any and every description.—Success Magazine.
