They returned last night bringing the body, and funeral services will be held this afternoon at the home of his parents. The deceased had been employed during the past year in the Eastman Kodak works at Rochester. He was 23 years of age. No particulars have yet been learned.

Doane-Gonnell.
 A wedding of much interest to many people of this vicinity took place at St. Patrick's church, Moravia, on Wednesday, June 10, at 10 o'clock, when Mary Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Connell of East Venice, became the bride of Alanson W. Doane of Moravia. The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. C. A. Silke, assisted by Rev. J. B. Doran of Groton, Rev. J. F. Nolligan of Aurora and Joseph Curtin of Rochester. Miss Augusta Connell, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Thomas E. Young of Moravia acted as best man. The bride was attired in changeable blue silk, with white trimmings, and hat to match, and was a most charming bride. The bridesmaid wore brown silk and hat to match.
 Following the ceremony at the church, a reception was held at the bride's home, near East Venice, at which one hundred and fifty relatives and friends were present. The house was beautifully decorated with ferns and roses. Miss Maude Duryea of Moravia gave piano solos and Mr. Clinton Davenport sang "O Promise Me" and other solos. Bountiful refreshments were served to the large company of guests.
 The young couple left on the evening train for a trip to Pennsylvania. The bride's traveling gown was blue broadcloth trimmed with blue silk.

Mr. and Mrs. Doane are popular and highly esteemed young people, and received many beautiful and costly presents.
 Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Ford Sherman of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Brennan of Aurora, Miss Sarah Redmond of Syracuse, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Young, Miss Myra Chandler, Miss Olga Haskell, of Moravia.

Nettleton-Bothwell.
 The marriage of Miss Belle Bothwell and Mr. David R. Nettleton took place at the pleasant home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bothwell, at East Genoa, on Wednesday.

The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion, the color scheme being red and white. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock, the bridal party standing under a red bell and festoons of red and white, and before a bank of white blossoms. Rev. Edward Cullinan of Locke officiated and Mrs. E. C. Starner played the wedding march. The bride was becomingly attired in white silk batiste with lace trimmings and carried a bouquet of white roses. She was attended by Miss Ruby Tift of Ithaca who wore a gown of green silk. Fred Bothwell, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

After congratulations, an elaborate course dinner was served, the guests being seated at small tables throughout the rooms and on the porch. The serving was very nicely done by several of the bride's friends.
 About 150 guests were present, including a number from Auburn, Ithaca, Moravia, Groton, Sempronius and Genoa. The bride received many beautiful and useful gifts.
 After experiencing considerable difficulty with the horses and carriage with which they intended to take their departure, the happy couple finally took possession of the rig and drove to Ithaca. They returned next day and will leave to-day for Rifton, N. Y., where they will reside. The groom is a graduate of the dairy school at Cornell University, and will have charge of a private creamery. The bride has been a teacher for several years. They go to their new home accompanied by the best wishes of many friends.

Lawrence-Whipple.
 Miss Florence Whipple, daughter of Emmet Whipple, a well known and popular young lady of Locke, was united in marriage, with Mr. Burdette Lawrence, of Sempronius, at the M. E. parsonage in Moravia, Wednesday afternoon, the pastor, Rev. W. S. Lyon, officiating. Following the ceremony a very pretty reception was tendered the happy couple at the home of the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Aldrich, at which guests from Locke, Genoa, Moravia, Syracuse and other places attended. They were also the recipients of many handsome presents.

In the evening the bride and groom left for a short trip to Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Erie, Pa., and upon their return will reside in Sempronius.—Locke Courier.

 The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Genoa Fair.
 The annual fair of the Genoa Agricultural society will be held at Genoa on August 26, 27 and 28 and every effort is being made to make the fair one of the largest and best in the history of the society. The officers of the society are: President, D. W. Smith; vice president, Fay Teeter; secretary, A. L. Loomis; treasurer, F. Sullivan. The following prospectus has been sent out by the officers:
 Arrangements have been made with the New York, Auburn and Lansing R. R. to run special trains to accommodate the people on the whole three days of the fair. If you wish to take a trip through the most beautiful and picturesque section of Central New York—which rivals the scenery of many noted places—just take a ride over the N. Y., A. & L. R. R., for it traverses a portion of the state which is unexcelled for the beauty of its landscape. Leaving Auburn, "the loveliest village," notable for its wide streets, fine residences—among them the famous old Seward mansion—its Theological Seminary, its extensive manufacturing concerns, and its State prison, one is soon in the midst of the country and is impressed with the fine farms stretching in every direction, with an occasional strip of woodland, the thrifty orchards with their weight of fruits, the luxuriant vegetation of every kind, the sheep and cattle grazing in the beautiful meadows, and the pleasant and well-kept homes of the residents. An occasional glimpse of a small stream, winding in and out, with rustic bridges and over-hanging trees, gives an additional attractiveness to the view. "The road winds onward white and long and the best of earth is here."
 Genoa is situated just half way between Auburn and Ithaca in a straight line, and it is indicated by the biggest dot on the map between these two cities. It is the largest and most important station on the N. Y., A. & L. R. R. excepting of course the termini of the road—Auburn and Ithaca. It is a pretty little village, snugly encoached between the hills of the Salmon river, amid pleasant surroundings.
 Plans are being made to make the Genoa Fair, Aug. 26-27-28 a big success with good clean honest racing events, good attractions and fine exhibits. Gambling schemes and the sale of intoxicating drinks are absolutely barred.
 Privilege men and exhibitors should write at once to Beautiful Frocks in Silk and Voile—Latest Styles of Gowns for Weddings—Net Fabrics Which Are a Joy Forever—Charming Styles in Women's Dress.

BY JULES THEROW.

The season has brought forth nothing more charming than the demure frock shown here, embodying the latest details of fashion, yet expressing the extreme simplicity. The semi-Empire skirt is of tawny pink voile, mounted over silk of the same shade and with the skirt is worn a stunning cutaway coat of dark toned taffetas silk, stitched with bands of its own material and trimmed with self-covered buttons.

The skirt is pain fitting about the hips and finished with an odd effect of stitching about the hem and lower front panel. The stitching, which is pyramided at the front, is done in the darker tone produced in the coat.

Although it is loose-fitting, the coat follows the lines of the figure about the sides, and at the front it is drawn into closely stitched revers that extend to the waistline.

The skirt is supported by bretelles of voile, bound with silk and the toilette is finished with a jaunty flower toque trimmed with ostrich tips in two of three shades of pink.

Bathing suits are shown in the most attractive mode in their history, this summer. All of the essential features of other models are reproduced upon sea-frocks and they are the acme of smartness.

Color-dotted pongee is used for the costume illustrated, the skirt being laid in scant side plaits stitched down several inches below the hips.

A MODE FOR THE SEASHORE.

At the bottom there are three wide tucks, overatched with very narrow bands of silk soutache braid.

The blouse is very attractive with broad tucks on either side, lending the fashionable long effect to the shoulders. The puffed sleeves are finished with poncee decorated with Frederic Anglaise and the same trimming in more elaborate design forms the collar finishing the low-cut neck. A tie of dark blue silk and two large buttons of the same on the collar are extra details that enhance the jaunty of the costume.

Two styles of dress that will be popular for weddings, are depicted here, and while they are exceedingly lovely, they are also practical for general afternoon wear, bridge parties, etc.

Copenhagen blue crepe de Chine is used for the toilette in the background and the soft silk material is glorified with a trimming of filet et lace darned with Oriental silks in odd designs. The skirt is trimmed in tunic effect with the filet and laid in soft plaits about the elevated waistline, above a narrow girdele of blue silk stitched top and bottom with soutache braid.

The bodice is formed principally of blue chiffon cloth, with a yoke of lace bordered with tucked bands of crepe de Chine. Beyond the tucks are bands of filet net, and finally finishing the borders are facings of crepe de Chine.

Twilled foulard is used for the costume whose distinguishing feature is a tunic skirt, bound with satin moire and just escaping the ground all around about an inch.

With it is worn a jacket, semi-fitting and trimmed with an Empire vest of embroidered silk. The sleeves are elbow length with self-stitchings and fancy buttons.

The net fabrics are a joy forever because of their beauty and a blessing to the average woman because they can be fashioned into such handsome frocks at comparatively little expense. Nets are favorite mate-

A SMART FROCK IN DOTTED NET. rial for smart frocks for young girls and a charming example is given of the French way of using them in the model illustrated here.

White net embroidered with polka dots of delicate blue contrives the dress and this is mounted over white silk veiled with delicate blue silk muslin. The skirt is gauged about the waistline and finished at the bottom in tunic effect with a frill of its own material, edged with Valenciennes lace and ruchings of satin ribbon. This trimming is frequently interrupted by insets of embroidered gauze, outlined with applique of Chinese ribbon embroidery.

The blouse has the short sleeves cut in one with the front and back while the neck is hollowed out in a deep square and filled in with lace.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl.

A man always considers himself mighty clever when he can glide through the shallows of love-making without floundering on the rocks of matrimony.

Choosing a husband is like picking out the combination on a lottery ticket; your first guess is apt to be as good as your last.

A girl who has a brother has a great advantage over one who hasn't; she gets a working knowledge of men without having to go through the matrimonial inquisition in order to acquire it.

To a man love is only a side dish; to a woman it's the whole feast. It is easy for a man to love his neighbor as himself, when his neighbor is a rich and pretty widow.

Worth Knowing.

A few drops of lemon juice in plain water is an excellent tooth wash. It not only removes the tartar but sweetens the breath.

Double chins are sometimes caused by resting the head on a very high pillow.

To prevent dampness on the hair use flaxseed tonic.

Well-kept gray hair is much more attractive than dyed hair.

To relieve the pain of a badly pinched or bruised finger, plunge it immediately into very hot water.

ANTIQUITY OF GLASS.

Made in Egypt Thousands of Years Before the Christian Era.

Though the art of making glass of certain kinds is very old, spectacles had to wait on the discovery or invention of some method that would produce it perfectly transparent. Specimens of glass have been found in the Egyptian tombs that are more than 4,000 years old, and glass bottles are represented on tombs at least 1,500 years earlier.

In Mesopotamia the art of making glass has been traced for at least 2,000 years B. C. But all the glass of antiquity was of inferior quality, and was almost useless for purposes where the rays of light were to be transmitted unbroken and with undiminished energy.

Mirrors were also made in Egypt thousands of years before the Christian era. The materials used were obsidian, zinc, and silver. Glass mirrors are mentioned by Pliny, but they gave back a very imperfect image and were not much esteemed.

That window glass, such as is now in current use, was slow to gain currency is shown by the little panes in many old buildings in Europe. They are usually round, or nearly so, and so small that one of them can easily be held between the tips of the fingers and the thumb.

Cards for Everything.

So thoroughly has the card index or catalogue become a part of modern business that practically no activity is without it. Brides keep the list of presents on cards. Pastors are adopting the card index to keep the name and addresses of their parishioners. Not long ago the complete list of members of the Grand Lodge of Masons of New York was transferred to cards. There are a million names. Owners of stables and kennels keep the records of their animals on cards instead of in books. Writers now keep cards on which they put down "experiences" or "episodes" to be filed away and to be used for material when they get down to writing.—Sat. Evg. Post.

The latest addition to the fresh air blends seems to be included in the young ambulance surgeons. In spite of near-to-zero weather it is common to see one of these young men responding to a hurry call without a hat, and it is quite as common a sight to see them, even at night time, when it always seems colder than in the day time, seated on the rear seat of the ambulance, attired in white duck trousers. Doubtless it is only a part of the exuberance of youth, but duck trousers, on a night when the mercury is trying to push the bottom out of the thermometer do seem a trifle out of place.

Saving Paper.

The price of paper has increased so much in the last few years that we may have to do our writing on bark or celluloid. But here is a pointer: One of the big firms in New York, employing 7,000 people, has a way of assisting you to save letter paper, and at the same time serves itself in a matter of file and record. In writing to a customer, for instance, only one side of the sheet is used. Sheets are made of many sizes, to fit the length of all correspondence. At the bottom is printed in blue ink: "If necessary to reply, please do so on the back of this letter. This is a clever idea.

Good Sentries.

"Silly goose" is an expression which should be used by the extremely ignorant alone. No bird requires more patience to shoot with gun or camera, especially the latter. When feeding you will find flocks varying in size on open ground, and nearly always on such ground that a stalk is impossible. On the outskirts of these flocks you will always find sentries with heads erect, eyes and ears alert, the slightest sound or movement and you are detected—true descendants from the ancient preservers of Rome.—Country Life.

Prince Bismarck.

Bismarck himself, was a tremendous smoker, eater, and drinker, and would stride about the house followed by his dogs. The pipes and long cigars which he smoked in a day would have killed an ordinary man. He loved to pour into a huge stein a bottle of champagne and then a bottle of porter, and drink the whole mixture off at a single draft. Bismarck said of himself: "If there were many eaters like me in Prussia the state could not exist. I should have to emigrate."—P. T. O.

World's Greatest Wonder.

"What is really the greatest natural wonder on earth?" It is easy to answer now, says the Travel Magazine, since the stupendous falls of the Zambesi River have been discovered; one of the world's mightiest rivers, two miles wide, falling a sheer 420 feet. Niagara is only half a mile wide and 153 feet high, so that it figures as a mere cascade in comparison.

Another Way to Put It.

It might not be incorrect to say that the man who was smothered in a bin of oats, died from an overdose of breakfast food.

The Man With the Gun.

Trouble is always waiting round the corner for the man who has a gun in his pocket.

DRUGS.

(June 21, '08.)

A man once possessed a valuable collection of medicines. The collection contained drugs from every clime, elixirs of powerful virtue, liquids of priceless worth. The owner of this noble possession often congratulated himself in the presence of his friends upon his good fortune.

"But you can't read," objected his friends.

"Nevertheless," he replied, "the collection is unequalled in the world.

"But you don't know one medicine from the other," they answered, "and if you were sick, you would only stumble in profitless search among all these glass bottles."

"But, don't you see," he said, "it is mine. I own the whole matchless collection."

"No," they replied, "we don't see. You do not actually own it, though you may keep it in the house forever. No one would really own it except a skillful physician, who could read the labels and understand the directions."

All this is a fable by which to emphasize the fact that the mere possession of a Bible does not in itself guarantee spiritual health. Many a profane man, drunken man, licentious man, thief, liar and hypocrite, owns a Bible. Some men have been known to possess the book and use it only for the purpose of mixing some of its ingredients into a devil's drug to poison the unsuspecting with. You can take the most harmless things in nature and combine them so as to make a deadly poison. So you can take some portions of the Scriptures and prepare a potion that will destroy men in perdition. Satan himself is a most eloquent and apt quoter of Scripture. He has it on his tongue's end. He tried it on Jesus of Nazareth and would have been successful in his design had his victim not been too well posted to be deluded. Yet many men will swallow the devil's sugar-coated pills and give him a testimonial like a patent medicine fraud that it has done them good. Poor fools, they do not realize that even now they are struck with death.

To possess a Bible is not enough. You must know how to use it. When you want the camphor-bottle you don't want to make the mistake of uncorking ammonia. To think that you are taking soothing syrup only to find that you have swallowed laudanum is not conducive to longevity. For your own sake and those of others who may come to you for relief, learn your book. Do not be as heedless as was the tract-distributor who piously gave a legless man in the hospital a treatise on the sin of dancing. You will have occasion in your life to turn to the book for consolation, for advice, for guidance, for encouragement, for strength. Where will you look for the particular portion needed? As for the man who knows its contents so little that he can only find a stimulant when he needs a sedative, who cannot distinguish digitalis from belladonna.

This great medicine chest of the Bible contains ingredients enough to cure all the ills of the world. The medicines are infallible, the directions explicit. But most people think it sufficient if they keep the chest in the house, and the more costly it is the prouder they are of its possession. Yet many a household owning a sumptuous volume has no more idea of where to find anything between its covers than they would have to find a lotion in a drug store if told to help themselves.

This is one reason why the Sunday schools of our land and world go through the book in study once in every seven years. If you have been a regular attendant at Sunday school for 14 years you have been led through this volume twice. You ought by this time to be able to find the 23rd Psalm without hunting all through the New Testament, and the 14th Chapter of John ought not to send you looking through the books of Moses. Ames was never in the New Testament and the story of the Prodigal Son never yet was bound up in the book of Zechariah.

This is a pretty serious question after all. Can you find what you want to find, after all these years? If not, who is to blame for it? Have you paid attention to the instruction that has been given? Do you use the book for any high and holy purpose? There are plenty of helps for those who really want to be instructed. Better a five-cent Testament and knowledge of its contents, than the most expensive family Bible, kept under glass on the parlor table, a drug store locked up and the key lost.

Within this ample volume lies the mystery of mysteries. Happiest they of human race To whom their God has given the grace

To read, to fear, to hope, to pray, To lift the latch and force the way, And better had they ne'er been born Than read to doubt or read to scorn.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

DIABOLO AND THE DUKE.

Miss van Busker stood poised on the doorstep.
"Is that how you play the thing anyway?" she said, holding the diabolo sticks awkwardly but with an indescribably bewitching air.
"We were all a little bit jealous of Miss van Busker, I think. She had arrived last night before with three monster trunks, four large hat boxes, a poodle and a very French maid.
An extremely smart "shoot" was assembled at the Towers, but Miss van Busker seemed to take the shine out of the rest of us when she came down to dinner in pale pink velvet and not an ornament of any description on her alabaster neck and shoulders.
However, as I was saying, Miss van Busker stood on the doorstep with diabolo sticks in her hand.
The guns were going to shoot at ten, and everyone knows how fussy men are just before they start, but three of them actually responded to Miss van Busker's challenge.
"I'll show you," they exclaimed, but the Duke of Derry didn't pretend to hear and went on wiping his gun or whatever it is men do.
"I won't bother now," Miss van Busker said slowly, and presently the guns drove away in the big brake to the home cover.
We all knitted stocks by the fire in the morning and exchanged confidences in our rooms after luncheon. Miss van Busker was as bright as well as as bright as one can be all day, though Lady Jane said it was much too damp for us to lunch "They Were Playing Diabolo in the Hall."
Guns, and we stayed in until tea time. Miss van Busker came down to tea in a clinging white crepe de chine and looked quite lovely.
"She's beautifully turned-out and all that," pretty little Lady Hildegard St. Helens said to me as she landed me the toast, "but she's no charm, has she?"
"Oh, I don't know," I said doubtfully. "I think she has."
The men came in just then, and first one and then the other went over and talked to Miss van Busker, except the duke, who sat by his sister and told us of the day's sport.
The Duke of Derry was young, not married, and as everyone knows, quite poor; "stony" is his own expression, so most of the girls treated him as a sort of brother.
After tea, I don't know how it happened, but Miss van Busker sat reading a paper, and when the men went off into the smoking room, the duke, who had to pass her chair, stopped and presently sat down by her side.
"No; I'm not a whale at games," I heard her say, and a little later she and the duke disappeared. When I went up shortly afterwards to get a book that I had left in my room and that I really wanted, they were playing diabolo in the hall, or rather Miss van Busker was looking on and the duke was holding the sticks.
"This way, d'you see?" he was saying very earnestly, as I passed.
"My now if that ain't too cunning!" Miss van Busker said in her pretty nasal twang that seems to get worse the longer she stays in England. (She'd hardly any accent when Lady Bulstrode began taking her out last season.)
That evening when we had been given our candlesticks and were going to our rooms, Miss van Busker followed me.
"Now, may I come in a moment?" she said in her girlish way that is very appealing.
"Oh, do," I said, though I was very sleepy.
Miss van Busker went over to the fire and placed a marvellously small foot on the fender.
"My! ain't this the room Henry III. slept in before the battle of Lewes?"
"Oh, is it?" I said with some confusion, "perhaps it is."
Miss van Busker looked at me meditatively. "You British are queer," she said. "But if you will pardon me I don't think you're one mite British. No," she continued, "I kind of feel confidence in you; the others here are what I call pretty nosy."
I had known Miss van Busker all the summer, and I gathered her now to mean that the house party struck her as "stuck up."
"They don't mean anything," I murmured.
But Miss van Busker was not listening, she was gazing into the coals.
"I got to get engaged to a dook," she said suddenly; "all my girl friends were when they came home from Europe, and I don't intend to be left on the mat."
"Indeed," I murmured rather lamely.
"I don't know about marrying."

"Diabolo's a great game," Miss van Busker added, irrelevantly.
"You're learning it, aren't you?" I asked, beginning to take the diamonds out of my hair.
"Yes; I'm learning," Miss van Busker laughed, and when she laughs in the frelight there is a gleam of what looks like fine pearls.
Miss van Busker said some very pretty things to me; she's certainly very attractive and we said good night in the friendliest way.
The next day the men were to shoot the great spinney; it was the big day of the week, and every one was what Miss van Busker called well on time, every one except the duke.
"We can't wait for old Stony," the men agreed after breakfast, and various expeditions to the bachelor quarters drew blank; the duke sent down to say he had strained a muscle and couldn't go out.
A big oak gallery runs round the hall at the Towers, and my room was off the gallery. I do not know that I was surprised when I opened my door to see a diabolo spool shoot up past me and fall back with a loud crash to the hall floor.
"My! a babe in arms would do it better," I heard Miss van Busker say with great apparent vexation.
When I descended the big staircase a moment later Miss van Busker, and, of course, the duke, who seemed quite well, were resting on the big oak seat with the high back. Miss van Busker held the diabolo sticks and the duke was twirling the spool in his hands and looking at Miss van Busker.
All that day and the next Miss van Busker learned diabolo.
"I don't get on one mite," she would answer when questioned; and the other men gave up all claim to teaching her.
Our main staple of conversation became Miss van Busker's progress in the game.
On the fourth day she had improved slightly; the duke had declared the long gallery a better place for learning, and the duke, who seemed quite well, were resting on the big oak seat with the high back. Miss van Busker held the diabolo sticks and the duke was twirling the spool in his hands and looking at Miss van Busker.

"I've got a lot of snapshots from Greenhays," Lady Hildegard said suddenly, and looked at Miss van Busker.
Coralie flushed the slightest, prettiest pink, but she finished her tea, and then got up and went into the hall.
Little Lady Hildegard handed me the snapshots. "Bertie sent them," she said briefly. "Miss van Busker was staying there. She seems to forget—games," she added wickedly.
In quite six out of the dozen or more photographs, Miss van Busker, I regret to say, appeared playing diabolo with the most finished grace. She was depicted in the act of catching and throwing the spool with the precision of an expert.
Lady Hildegard laughed. "What would Stony say?" she murmured.
But her brother had followed Miss van Busker from the room.
I happened to pass through the hall not long after. Two people occupied the tall oak seat under the palms.
"Why, yes," I couldn't help hearing a drawling murmur as I hurried by. "I guess I knew it all the time pretty well. But I kind of thought 'oud' like to teach me—didn't you?"
"But I shut my door upstairs upon the answer."
East and West of Fiji.

East and West of Fiji.
East of Fiji life is one long, lotus eating dream, stirred only by occasional parties of pleasure, feasting, love making, dancing and a very little gardening work. Music is the soul of the people, beauty of face and movement is more the rule than the exception, and friendliness to strangers is carried almost to excess. Westward of the Fijis lie the dark, wicked cannibal groups of the Solomons, Banks and New Hebrides, where life is more like a nightmare than a dream; murder stalks openly in broad daylight, people are nearer to monkeys than human beings in aspect, and music and dancing are little practiced and in the rudest possible state.—National Geographic Magazine.

High heels, it is said, owe their origin to Persia, where they were introduced to raise the feet from the burning sands.

DEVELOPING THE ARM
HOW THE SLIM ONES CAN BE MADE ROUND AND PRETTY.

The Proper Exercise to Develop Muscles in Forearms, Fingers and Hands Which will do Much to Beautify Them.

There is really no excuse for having thin and scrawny arms, unless one has a natural deformity, for thinness of the fore and upper arms may be overcome by exercise and massage.
In making thin arms round exercise is the best treatment for proper development of the muscles, and results in roundness and strength, and cannot fail to benefit the entire system unless carried to the extremes. Of this there is not the least danger, for no normal exercise will bring abnormal development. What it will do, however, is to strengthen cords as well as muscles, and as this proper growth of structure goes on under the skin the covering or outside takes on shapeliness and grace.
This change, however, does not come in a week, nor in a month, but if the effort is made persistently and intelligently the desired object is bound to be achieved.
In treating the forearm finger work will be beneficial. For this the sleeves should be rolled up to leave the arms free, and the hands are then closed tightly, curving the fingers under well into the palm. This done, the person tries to hold the fingers tighter, to squeeze them in, as it were, at the same time pressing the thumb tightly over the fingers. If the hand is held flat up, the squeezing will show directly to the centre of the forearm, where roundness is needed. There is no danger of doing this exercise too much or too often, and at first a woman whose arms are not strong will be obliged to stop the movement after a moment. With repetition the squeezing becomes less painful to the muscles and will not hurt as strength is acquired.
Pulling of any kind is desirable for shaping the arms. As long as the article which is grasped is so firm as not to give, the strain on the arms becomes developing. The difficulty, however, lies in finding the stationary object. For this purpose a bath tub would be available, for a woman could grasp the edge firmly and then pull with all her strength. Care must be given to this work that it is the arms and not the fingers which do the pulling, for the natural inclination is to let the hands do all this exercise.
Lifting any weight sufficiently heavy to require what strength one has is the best treatment for the upper arms. Any kind of housework is perfect suited to this although the fact is slighted by the inexperienced. Sweeping is one of the best exercises for making the arms pretty, the grasp of the broom being reinforced by the stroking motion necessary to accumulate dust on the floor. Gardening is helpful; so is hammering, although in the latter the hammer should be more than ordinarily heavy.

HOME COOKING.
Boston Brown Bread.
Mix: cup yellow corn meal, 1 cup graham flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 cup rye meal and two teaspoons baking powder well together; then add 1-2 cup of molasses, then 1 well-beaten egg into which put 1 pint of milk. Mix thoroughly to form a batter. Pour into well greased moulds and steam four hours.
Apple Sauce Cake.
One cup apple sauce, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup raisins, 1-2 cup butter melted, 1 teaspoonful of soda put into the apple sauce, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, pinch of salt, 1 3-4 cups flour. Frost with orange frosting: 1 cup powdered sugar, 2 tablespoons of milk, 1 teaspoon of orange flavoring.
Baked Codfish and Egg.
Make some rich creamed codfish, using about 3-4 pound of fish. Have 4 eggs boiled hard and chopped fine. Put in a baking dish alternate layers of creamed fish and egg, having fish for bottom and top layers. Sprinkle grated cheese thickly over the top and bake half an hour.
Potato Biscuit.
Sift together 2 cups of flour, 1 teaspoon salt and 3 teaspoons of baking powder; rub in three tablespoons of lard or butter; then add 2 cups of mashed potatoes; lastly about 2 cups of milk. Mix as ordinary biscuits and roll rather thin and bake in a quick oven.
Not for the Poor Man.
The girl who doesn't take care of her clothes is no wife for the poor man; she needs some one who can give her an unlimited dress allowance and a maid to look after her, says Home Chat.
There is another point. If it is too much trouble to take care of her clothes before, it will be too much trouble to take care of her house-keeping stores after marriage, with the result that a large part of them are wasted.
Woman's Idea of an Angel.
A man's idea of an angel is a woman who doesn't talk about her neighbors. A woman's idea of a male angel is a man who does not talk about himself.

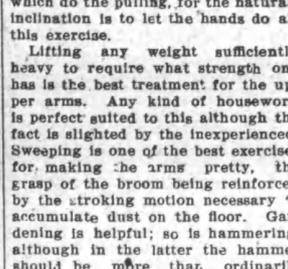

High heels, it is said, owe their origin to Persia, where they were introduced to raise the feet from the burning sands.

Nurses Receive Diplomas.

Exercises held yesterday at the Lee Private Hospital Training School for Nurses marked the close of the tenth year of that institution's existence. For the first time the class day program was given at the hospital, instead of at the Park Avenue Baptist church and the innovation was regarded as a great success. Last night the graduating exercises were held, followed by the annual reception in the parlors of Dr. Lee's home.

An address on "The Trained Nurse," by Dr. J. W. LaSeur of Batavia was well received. Dr. Clarence A. Barbour offered prayer, and the diplomas were presented by Mrs. Charles S. Baker, president of the board of directors. Under the supervision of Miss Frances S. Eddy, the parlors were beautifully decorated, roses and peonies being everywhere in evidence, and the hospital school pennant occupying a conspicuous place. Many friends of the school were present.

This afternoon at 1 o'clock, the alumnae including the class of 1908, will be entertained at luncheon by the officers of the hospital, at the restaurant of the Duffy Mc-Innerney Co.

A program including readings, vocal, violin and piano solos and the usual class history, prophecy and "roasts" were given yesterday afternoon. The members of the graduating class are: Jean Helen Summers, Bertha Gay Birticel, F. Grace Townsend, May H. Smith, Nellie Louise Korn, May Violet Baldwin, DeAnna Sloane, Kathryn Estelle Lacy, Madalene Newman Gilkey, Kathryn Pauline Hesley, Mrs. Margaret Phillips Church and Miss Isabelle Underwood Norman—Democrat and Chronicle, June 12.

A Young Traveler.

The Syracuse Post Standard of June 16 says:

"Little Miss Mary Bliss of Sumnerhill was the center of attraction at the New York Central station yesterday when she stopped over for a few hours on her way to Riverside, Cal., to visit her father.

"Mary is only 7 years old and she is traveling alone. She did not care for a berth in the sleeping car from Syracuse to Chicago, but consented to take a sleeper west of Chicago. Mary was accompanied to Syracuse by her grandfather who returned home before the little girl's train left at 3:45, declaring to Miss Majel M. Gates, in whose charge he placed Mary, that it was easier to say goodbye before she left.

"Mary said she did not dread the trip but that she disliked to leave her grandfather, and when he started for his train she shed a few big tears that aroused sympathy. Mary had plenty of money and a nice basket of lunch. She was instructed to patronize the dining car as soon as the food in the basket became the least bit stale.

"Miss Gates put the little traveler on the fast mail at 3:45; as she seated herself she remarked: 'I know I will get through all right, because the men are always good to little girls.' Miss Gates telegraphed to the station master of the Lake Shore road at La Salle street station in Chicago requesting that the little girl have assistance in transferring to the Santa Fe station. This was her first trip unattended."

Changes in Liquor Tax Law.

Several important changes were made in the liquor tax law of this state at the session of the legislature last winter.

Among other things the new law gives the right of search and seizure to special excise agents, and forfeits to the state all liquors seized by such officers. Liquor so seized cannot be taken from the custody of the officer by a civil writ during the proceeding or trial. The law also prohibits the use of a saloon as means of exit or egress to a gambling room.

The beginning of the fiscal year is changed from May 1, to October 1. By the terms of the new law the status existing at the time the liquor propositions are submitted to a vote of the electors of a town must continue until October 1, following.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Anna Harris Mead died May 26, 1908, aged nearly 88 years. She was born in the town of Locke June 24, 1825, and was the fourth daughter of Henry and Sophia Harris. A sister, Mrs. Elihu Slocum of Moravia, is the sole surviving member of a family of eleven children.

In December, 1856, Anna Harris was married to Stephen Mead of Genoa, and her home since that time—nearly 52 years—was in the same house where she died.

Mrs. Mead was known in the community where she had lived so many years as a woman of fine character, quiet and home-loving, and devoted to her family and its needs, as long as health permitted. She suffered from heart trouble for many years, and had been ill for a long time before her death.

Of her three children, one died in infancy, and two sons are living—Henry of Ault, Colo., and Arthur S. of Genoa, with whom she made her home. She also leaves a stepson, A. E. Mead of Greeley, Colo.

The funeral was held at her late home on Friday, May 29, at 2 p. m., Rev. E. L. Dresser of Genoa officiating. Mrs. D. W. Smith, Mrs. Chas. Gibson, Mrs. Herbert Roe and E. H. Sharp sang three selections. Burial was made in Genoa cemetery.

AUBURN TRUST COMPANY.

3 1/2 Per Cent. Interest on All Deposits.

The Delight of Saving.

In fostering the growth of a Trust Company account, you experience the delight of both anticipation and realization. Nothing gives so bright a prospect to the future or such a sense of satisfaction to the present, as your own money saved.

Your idle money whether it be much or little might better be growing than lying still. If you are planning a vacation, why not make a deposit now, as your money will then be safer than in your purse and will be earning more money for you day after day.

This Company solicits your account, and its officers will be very glad to talk over banking matters and discuss the special advantages offered by this institution whether an account is opened or not.

—Mrs. Percy Hiles of Dryden celebrated her one hundredth birthday last Friday. She has lived all of the one hundred years in the town of Dryden. Although totally blind for a number of years, her hearing and memory are still good and until recently she has been able to sit up in her chair most of the day. She talks very intelligently and entertainingly about old times, and like most very old people she has a more vivid recollection of her childhood days than of the latter periods of her life.

Oh, there's no breeze like the June breeze
That has swept the rosy clover,
That has blown across the meadows
And the daisies' drifted snow;
That has played among the treetops,
That has strayed the woodland over,
Oh, there's no breeze like the June breeze,
Sweet though all the breezes blow!

—By the resignation of Christopher Morgan as postmaster at Aurora, that village has been thrown into a state of excitement as to who his successor will be. It is reported that there are three candidates for the position—Henry Morgan, son of the present postmaster, Walter A. Bartlett and Henry N. Gifford. Many hold the opinion that Morgan should receive the appointment, as he has been connected with the work of the office for several years, and is the proprietor of the store where the postoffice is now located. It is said that Christopher Morgan favors the appointment of Bartlett.

The ROMANCE of K. 374.

Francis Maria Joseph, from Oberdorfer, was the most jolly and light-hearted of all cavaliers, but to-day he was in the most abominable humor. Inside his head something was beating a drum, and there was a noise as if the whole brass band was practicing—reminiscences of the night before.

To get over this attack he decided to look up his intimate friend and former fellow officer Huber. Planhoefer. Hubert possessed the talent of having a few thousand marks more left than he, a good humor, which nothing could disturb, and credit everywhere, although his whole capital at the time consisted in half a bottle of sherry, and an unopened bottle of Pomery, extra dry, which he said he always kept on hand in case he ever made up his mind to commit suicide.

Besides this Planhoefer possessed the love of a charming blond girl, Kate, whom he would marry, if it wasn't for the fact that he didn't have a few thousand marks, absolutely necessary to an army officer to be allowed to enter the state of matrimony.

Kate's virtue was above suspicion, and as regards her love she was faithful, almost faithful enough to be old-fashioned.

The handsome Planhoefer resided in a fashionable cottage in the most aristocratic neighborhood of the city. The cottage belonged to some old baroness who spent all of her time at the Riviera, and who, because she was always afraid of burglars, had asked him to live in her cottage while she was away.

"Kate threw her arms around his neck," Oberdorfer entered the cottage the light almost dazzled him. Every light in the house was turned on full and the dining room was decorated with flowers. The couple sat at the table, a bottle of champagne in front of them.

As soon as Kate saw him she came rushing toward him and threw her arms around his neck, and squeezed him until he nearly lost his breath. It took some time until he had recovered sufficiently to ask his friend what in the world was the matter.

"Oh, we're going to marry in four weeks; we have the money now," they both cried.

"You have the money?"

And Kate, blushing and smiling, whispered into his ears the mysterious words "K 374."

"But really, I don't understand you."

Planhoefer drew a deep sigh and said, "That is the license number of my former automobile."

He filled up the glasses and after they had all congratulated each other he began: "Well, I had an automobile, how I came into possession of it is another story, which it is not necessary to take up here, but I will say this much, that it was closely connected with an affair of business with a certain Nathaniel Buckenleander from Kraykau or Lemberg."

"The question was to get rid of it without losing too much, and without getting yourself into trouble. But how? There was an American, a tall, crazy individual who was enormously rich, and who was the owner of some oil wells somewhere. He had come to Munich to see the carnival and to get rid of as much of his money as possible in the shortest possible time."

"He fell in love with Kate. I had to laugh at him. He wanted to make her oil queen right away. That I was engaged to her didn't bother him for a moment; he simply overlooked me as would a man who considers himself vastly superior to any human being of his acquaintance."

"Now listen. Kate let the American elope with her in my own automobile."

"What do you say?" Frank Oberdorfer exclaimed.

"I mean just what I say. She eloped with him, and that in spite of the fact that the Yankee was a God-fearing and pious man. At a hall he proposed to her to take her to an old aunt living somewhere in the suburbs to get her out of my influence. And then he simply took my automobile which Kate had already arranged for him to use."

"I followed on my wheel. In the auto was sitting my fiancée in pink domino a little nervous and scared, and next to her the lone American with his expressionless face."

"They started out on second speed and it was a surprise to me to see how fine the thing could run. Nevertheless I did not worry for a minute, for I knew my car, K 374, roared along the road with a terrible speed for a considerable distance, but at last near Biedling, the inevitable happened. K. 374 became unmanageable and ran into a ditch.

"I was soon upon them with my wheel and succeeded in extricating Kate. I appeared furious with rage, and the Yankee trembled with fear lest I should deal to him summary justice. He pleaded for mercy as he gazed upon the broken machinery and was anxious for his liberty at any price."

"Turning to my fiancée, I said: 'May I offer you my check for 40,000 marks?' 'Kate, can you forgive this poor sinner?' And like the good girl she is, she said, with tears in her eyes: 'Yes, I forgive him, because he regrets.'

"The American turned quite red in the face with happiness, kissed her hand, shook my hand, and then said, very embarrassed: 'I have something to ask you, and I sincerely hope that you will not refuse. Will you sell the car to me? It is a wonderful machine.'

"He produced his check book and fountain pen. 'May I offer you my check for 40,000 marks?' 'I was so dumbfounded that I simply couldn't say a word, and the man, of course, thought that he had offered me too little, and added: 'I mean fifty thousand marks.'

"This time I hesitated no longer and when I started to walk toward the city with Kate, the American stood beaming with happiness, looking over what was left of K 374. He was convinced that he had made a splendid bargain."

"On the way back Kate's conscience began to trouble her, and she said something about going back and telling the man that we had cheated him, but I succeeded in persuading her to leave him alone."

"It was a carnival joke which made it possible for us to become perfectly happy, and I am sure that there are to-day in all Munich, no happier people than Kate and I, unless it should be the owned of K 374."

"The Rooster Muzzle."

They were like fairy helmets—little wire helmets no bigger than a walnut.

"They are rooster muzzles," said the city farmer, as he led the way past the pea beds on the window sills, the potato field on the back porch, and the flourishing mushroom crop under the outhouse.

"Rooster muzzles!"

"Even so. Muzzles, not to prevent roosters from biting—for even the gamiest fowl has never been known to snap—but to prevent them from crowing. See here."

They had reached the tiny chicken run. The city farmer caught a rooster and gently slipped a muzzle over its fierce head.

"Now," said he, "it can't crow. It can't wake the neighbors with its crows at daybreak. Hence, thanks to the muzzle, it is at last possible to keep chickens in the most crowded city quarters."

"Harrison Weir invented the rooster muzzle. A rooster, to crow, you see, stands erect, flaps his wings, throws back his head and opens his beak wide. If he can't open his little red throat.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Animals and Rain.

Lions, tigers and all the cat tribe dread rain," said a zoo keeper. "On a rainy day they tear nervously up and down their cages, growling and trembling. We usually give them an extra ration of hot milk. That puts them to sleep."

"Wolves love a gray day of rain. They are then very cheery. Treacherous as the wolf is, no keeper need fear him on a rainy day. He is too happy to harm a fly."

"Snakes, too, like rain. They perk up wonderfully as the barometer falls and the damp makes itself felt in their warm cases."

"Rain makes monkeys glum. They are apt from instinct when they see it through the window, to clasp their hands above their heads and sit so for hours. That attitude, you know, makes a kind of shelter. It is the primitive umbrella."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Watched Her Plumes.

A woman who was perfectly well, but fancied she was suffering from fever, called on an old and experienced physician to consult him. She described her symptoms at some length, and he listened patiently. At last he said: "I think I understand your case, madam. Sit perfectly still a few moments and let me look at you." She complied and he eyed her attentively for nearly a minute, glancing at his watch once or twice in the meantime. "There is nothing the matter with you, madam," he said. "You haven't the slightest indication of fever. Your heart beat is perfectly normal." "Why, how do you know doctor?" she asked in surprise. "You didn't feel my pulse," "I didn't need to," he answered. "I counted the vibrations of the ostrich feather on your hat." And he bowed her out.—Kansas City Star.

When a man never did any of the things when he was young that boy-to-day do either he was a fool then or he is a liar now.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

Lead Not Into Temptation.

The Prayer, "Lead us not into temptation," many Legislatures have altered into the law, "You shall not lead others into temptation."

The present effort of the world and of this country especially, is to make men strong by taking away the opportunity for self abasement, to replace the ages of struggle of the will by act of Congress or State Legislature. Men are to be made temperate and good by law. Misery is to be fought in the statute-books.

This interesting experiment is not entirely new to the world. Law protects the gambling-fiend and the drug-fiend against himself. It protects with laws of usury the reckless borrower. It protects the child against the ignorance of youth, and woman against the brutal selfishness of man.

Can law protect man against himself, against the vice that he has been painfully fighting and slowly conquering through the long centuries, in which drunkenness has steadily decreased as knowledge and prosperity have grown?

Prohibition laws in 1870 affected three millions and a half of our population.

Now the figures have grown to more than thirty-three millions.

Thirty-three millions of American citizens to-day live under prohibition laws, these taking chiefly the form of local option. It appears to be the growing will of the people that each community shall decide for itself whether or not alcoholic drinks shall be publicly sold within its territory. While our population has been multiplied by two and a half, the number affected by prohibition has been multiplied by ten. At that rate enforced temperance for the nation seems not far off—if indeed it be within the power of man to enforce temperance.

The fight against drink has made its appearance all over the Union. An effort is made to show that prohibition in the South is intended to make alcohol inaccessible to the negro without taking it away from the more resourceful white man; but no facts are offered in support of this idea. The widespread nature of the movement seems to prove that it is deeper than any local feeling.

A Public Nuisance.

Is not the beer drinker, the whiskey drinker, or the drinker of other alcoholic drinks a public nuisance as he travels about in everyday life? He may not realize the fact himself. He probably does not know that alcohol is repulsive to the stomach and will not be digested. Much of it is thrown off at once with the breath, which is extremely offensive to those who are near enough to inhale it, particularly if they are not constant drinkers themselves. At the hours when men are going to and from their business it is hardly possible to enter a trolley or elevated car, a stage or a public carriage, when the windows are closed, without being forced to breathe these most disagreeable and most unhealthy fumes from the drinker's breath. The writer has noticed at times that he has been obliged to inhale these most obnoxious fumes many mornings in succession. Quite recently he made three shifts while riding in an elevated railroad car, to find relief, but without success. Fine clothes and gentlemanly appearance do not insure one against this great annoyance. The above question does not look for an answer from those who pollute the air with their foul breath, but to the many we constantly meet that are more or less under the influence of alcoholic drinks. Yes, we must say that the drinker of alcoholic drinks that we meet in everyday life is, in a greater or less degree, a public nuisance. He should not be so. It is his duty to respect the comfort of his fellow travelers.

The Rebellion Against Alcohol.

Men have seemed helpless against the enemy so bitterly hated by its victims, so cunning in destroying first of all that will power which alone could save them. But, very suddenly a change has come. There is on foot a rebellion against alcohol as powerful, vindictive and thorough as any that ever dethroned a king of flesh and blood. The broken-hearted woman and child who thought their lot beyond hope and their cries unheard, find whole populations, cities and states coming over to their side, making of their enemy the common enemy.

Alcohol through the ages has destroyed men one at a time, in safe and leisurely fashion, and now he finds millions united against him, opposing him with a power that seems greater than his own. It is a sudden, surprising change that has come over the country. Yesterday's ranting of prohibitionists, has become the deliberate action of lawmakers and of entire populations. The Utopian dream is to be fact—if law can make it so.

Taxation on Drink.

Taxation has fallen upon drink more heavily than upon any other of man's necessities, pleasures, or vices. The tax that would have been refused on bread—even at risk of life—has been paid on drink willingly.

Birth of Crystals.

The microscope is proving itself to be an instrument of some value in scientific investigation.

At Washington certain scientists have made a series of instantaneous microphotographs of growing crystals, their object being to determine the manner in which crystallization begins.

With high microscopic powers some observers have thought that they could detect the formation of minute globules immediately preceding the appearance of crystal forms.

But the new bioscopic pictures of forming and growing crystals show only crystalline shapes from the beginning. They also reveal the fact that the growth in diameter in the first second of a crystal's existence is vastly more rapid than during the subsequent period, and it is thought that this swift growth at the start is the cause of a lack of definition which deceives the eye, but not the photographic film.

Transparent Eels.

There are not very many transparent animals, but recent studies of two larval eels which possess this peculiarity, and which belong to the National Museum, seem to show that among the possible advantages of being transparent is economy in personal decoration.

In ordinary opaque animals the color markings are symmetrical on the two sides of the body, but this is not the case with the transparent eels. Each of them, who looked at from one side, appears to have seven large black spots arranged at nearly regular intervals along the length of the body, but closer examination shows that in each case three of the spots are on the left side and four on the right, and irregularly spaced, but in such a manner that on looking through the body, all seven appear in a symmetrical row.

Chance For a Laborer.

Wiltshire (England) advertisement: "Man wanted as laborer on a private estate, to see to the ducks, chickens and ferrets; hours, 8 to 5, with two hours for dinner; wages, £1 a week, with occasional presents of money, eggs, cigars, rabbits, milk, whiskey and firewood; no work on Sundays, bank holidays, Saturday afternoons, or wet days, but for which wages are always paid in full; one thing required will be not to worry about others employed on the property, but to make himself happy."

Wage of Workers in China.

In China wages of women operatives are nearly at the vanishing point. It is said that in the silk mills at Shanghai there are 20,000 workers, among whom are children that work at 3 cents a day and women at 5 cents. The highest paid get 26 cents for a 13-hour day. In the Shanghai cotton mills the best women workers get 14 cents a day, the poorest 5 cents, the hours being from 6 to 6, with 30 minutes at noon for dinner.

Translating the Bible.

As an instance of the tragedy of foreign missions Dr. Hoskins of Beirut, Syria, referred to the fact that four of the members of that mission gave four years of devoted work to preparing an Arabic translation of the Bible and then found all their labor lost because the American Bible Society could not provide the necessary $10,000 for the publication.

Beneficial in Tuberculosis.

It is estimated that last year Paris ate altogether 40,000 horses, or more than 22,000,000 pounds of horseflesh. In 1899 the consumption was less than 10,000,000 pounds. Besides the low price there has been a demand for the meat because it is supposed to be wholesome in cases of tuberculosis and tuberculosis tendency. Many people regard it more healthful than beef.

Fist Fights in India.

In the kingdom of Barots, India, a favorite sport is a fist fight in which the fighters wear a steel cestus which has formidable claws. The combatants, who have been crazed with a drink of liquid opium mixed with an infusion of hemp, enter the arena singing. One of them is certain to be killed.

Progress of Trade.

The fact that a man today can sit down in a restaurant overlooking the Thames embankment, or at a table under the trees at the edge of the Thiergarten and dine on fresh salmon brought from the waters of California, Oregon and Alaska, shows graphically how industrial efficiency has given romance to modern trade.

Argentina's Wheat Export.

Argentina now seems fixed at the top of the list in exports of wheat to Great Britain. It has held that post for three years, with steadily increasing figures, while the British imports from every other country have either declined or fluctuated. The United States is second at present.

Philippines Valuable Crop.

The most valuable crop in the Philippines is hemp; rice comes next, followed by tobacco. The export of Manila cigars amounts to nearly $1,000,000 a year, and the home consumption is probably larger.

THE WONDERFUL BEAUTIFIER.

Rest Will Do More to Restore Jaded Nature Than Anything Else.

The modern woman is wise. She knows that all the cosmetics, all the massage, all the beauty baths and physical culture in the world can not do for faded cheeks, hollow eyes and fatigued, blanched face what rest will accomplish. She does not go to a rest cure, because there is something suggestive of invalidism in such a course and the very thought makes one a trifle blue; she takes the rest cure as she goes along. She rests when she reads, when she sews, when she makes her toilet; indeed she has intermittent attacks of resting at any and all times.

A whole train of evils follow in the wake of fatigue. When a woman is tired she usually worries, and no mental attitude is more disastrous to personal appearance, personal happiness and personal achievement than worry and its twin brother—despondency. It is true that one may fret for many months without visible effects, but it is only a question of time when the dominating idea, the cause of the worry, will master first the will, then brain and finally the body. Ponder upon this, ye maids and matrons, and in appeal to your complexion and its preservation in a state of pristine freshness does not move you, think of the ignominy of being voted a person of limited power as one certainly is who feazes over the minor grievances of life. Besides the brain, heart and muscle which share the benefits of the rest cure, there is the origin of one-half, perhaps relaxation. "Give thy tongue rest occasionally" is wholesome advice.

Fatigue is one of the greatest enemies of the human race, because it is the origin of one-half, perhaps more of the hundred catagued diseases that prey upon women and men. Indigestion is sure to follow a meal taken when one is over fatigued. Five minutes complete rest of body and mind are none too much for the person of average health, taken if possible, just before the midday meal. Do not eat when tired nor work when weary. It is a mistake to labor in unfit condition; it is an error to rise at daybreak and imagine that every hour taken from sleep is an hour gained. It is foolish to give unnecessary time to an established routine of housekeeping when it would be much more profitable spent in rest and recreation. Hearty laughter is relaxation, so are elevated thoughts, those of hope, trust and love.

Dressy Draped Blouse.

The problem of an evening toilette is being solved to a great extent by the use of the separate blouse of dressy design. An attractive model is shown here carried out in palest blue chiffon, having the front and back draped across the figure in fashion.

DRESSY DRAPED BLOUSE.

bu effect and filled in with an under-blouse of fine all-over lace. In addition to the lace, the model is trimmed with smart little ribbon velvet bows.

The armholes are large and formed by an artistic draping of the chiffon. As a matter of fact the sleeves are long and close-fitting, being made of lace.

The Picture.

Choose it carefully as you would friend or book.

Subject and mounting suit the destined niche.

The framing makes or mars the picture.

Pictures should never be crowded. Frames in a room should conform to one type.

This type must harmonize with other furnishings.

Large pictures should not be hung in small rooms.

Color of picture molding matches woodwork.

If not, it contrasts with it.

Dull or finished woods are used for etchings.

They also look well on prints or water colors.

Gold frames are now used sparingly.

Dull brown, gray or green are for library frames.

French prints are favorite pictures for bedrooms.

Photographs now hang only in bedroom or boudoir.

Hunting scenes or quaint prints look well in halls.

Dainty scenes must be picked for the dining room.

Economy in Cookery.

Flour thrown upon burning oil will extinguish it, while water will only spread the flames.

Flour will lose its goodness if kept in a damp place.

Don't try to save coal at the expense of the viands; always have a steady and sufficient fire for cooking.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD.

A President of the United States will be elected this year. Who is he and who is the man whom he will beat? Nobody yet knows, but the Thrice-A-Week edition of the New York World will tell you every step and every detail of what promises to be a campaign of the most absorbing interest. It may not tell you what you hope, but it will tell you what is. The Thrice-A-Week World long ago established a character for impartiality and fearlessness in the publication of news, and this it will maintain. If you want the news as it really is subscribe to the Thrice-A-Week edition of the New York World, which comes to you every other day except Sunday, and is thus practically a daily at the price of a weekly.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and THE GENOA TRIBUNE together for one year for $1.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00.

The Sailors Tobacco.

Three hundred tons of tobacco are distributed annually among the sailors of the British navy. It is sold to them at cost.

Postal Service in the Desert.

A new monthly postal service across the Sahara has just been established. The messengers are mounted on camels.

A Big Sawmill.

Louisiana has a steel sawmill with a capacity of 800,000 feet a day, which is said to be the largest in the country.

When terrified the patriarch will travel 25 miles an hour.

The Philippines have about 200 miles of railroads.

The LADY CLERK

By Douglas Walsh.

There weren't many prettier lady clerks than Lucy Raindom to be seen in the city. Lucy, neatly and tastefully dressed, with gold-brown hair, a pair of pathetic blue eyes, and the daintiest little square-set chin that ever hinted that it was not advisable to stir her anger.

As for Donald Hayes, he fell madly in love with her almost at sight, and from the first constituted himself her humble slave, sheltering her as much as possible and telling her all those little things and putting her up to all those little office wrinkles the ignorance of which makes a new place so uncomfortable at the beginning.

Now, in that office, as in most offices, there was a manager—Mr. Maynard—an evil-tempered man who knew his work, but who, unfortunately had the notion that the only way to make people efficient was to bully them. Even Lucy's big blue eyes could not control him to keep his tongue; time and again he spoke to her in a way that galled her proud spirit almost beyond endurance, and caused Master Donald at his desk near by, to clench his hands and bite his lips.

And one morning he turned up in an even worse temper than usual, called Donald a "lazy brute," and then began to dictate his letters to Lucy at a furious pace.

"I beg your pardon," she said at last, having struggled vainly to keep up.

"Go on!" he cried. "Don't interrupt."

"But I cannot get it down. You are going too fast for me."

"Confound it all!" he blurted out. "What kind of a short-hand clerk do you call yourself?"

"You impudent little minx," your business to get it down!

"I was doing my best, Mr. Maynard," she answered meekly.

"Rubbish," he snorted. "You're incompetent—that's what it is."

"It isn't," said Lucy defiantly, nettled by his tone. "I can do a hundred and ten words a minute, as I told you when I came."

"You impudent little minx," bustered the manager, getting up angrily from his chair. "Don't back answer me. If you do, you'll precious soon find yourself outside!"

"That's where you ought to be, you bully," came in hard, stern tones from the neighborhood of Donald's desk.

"What?" cried the manager, swinging round in furious surprise.

"I said that's where you ought to be, you bully," repeated Donald, calmly. "You've no right to talk to a lady like that," he went on, while the manager struggled in vain for speech. "I'm sure the governor would not stand it, if he knew. It's a pity Mr. Cartwright is so old. He can't come here more often and look after you!"

"Are you mad or drunk—you fool!" Maynard stormed, "to talk to me like this?"

"Neither," said Donald, still in the same low voice, "only utterly disgusted with your ungentlemanly behavior!"

The manager looked at him, controlled himself with a mighty effort and said thickly, "Very well. Take a week's notice," and turned on his heel.

"Come along, Miss Raindom," he added. "Get on with your work. Don't sit there staring like a little fool!"

But Lucy, who had sat dumfounded through this scene made no effort to take up her pencil again. Proud as she was of Donald for championing her cause, nevertheless the little heart was heavy. Had he not lost his place?

"Mr. Maynard," she said conciliatingly, "are we not all rather cross and hasty this morning? Won't you take back the notice you have given Mr. Hayes?"

"Confound your impudence, not!" the manager snapped.

The little square chin shot forward a bit, and a sudden gleam came into the big blue eyes.

"Mr. Maynard," she said firmly, "I really think you ought to, you know!"

"Do you? And what right have you to dictate to me, miss? Take a week's notice yourself!"

The gleam in the big blue eyes became a blaze, the lion's tail was twisted now and the lion was awake.

"Mr. Maynard," said Lucy, rising and facing him, "you have been abominably rude to me, and you've had your chance to make amends and thrown it away."

And hastily pinning on her hat—while the manager watching her vaguely, frightened in spite of himself—she walked out of the office.

boast that what they say they stick to. In a week's time he would be scanning the advertisements and tramping all London in search of a place.

But it was not that which caused his step to lag. He had no regrets; to him it seemed impossible that any one worthy of the name of a man could have acted otherwise.

His only trouble was that he greatly feared he had lost Lucy. She had walked out of the office in righteous wrath—and he did not know her address. So far their intercourse had been confined wholly to office life; he had not dared to speak the words that for weeks had been trembling on his lips.

And now she was gone—gone for good—and since it was not to be expected that she would write to him first his only hope of ever seeing her again was to meet her by chance.

But as he entered the restaurant at which they often lunched together his eyes brightened and the wrinkles fled from his brows as if by magic. There was Lucy sitting at the usual table—waiting for him.

"I came in here to cool down, and as it was nearly lunch time I thought I would wait to thank you," she explained. "I'm awfully glad you did," he cried. "I was in a most dreadful stew because I did not know your address, and thought I should never see you again."

"Did you want to see me again, then?" she asked innocently.

A blush was upon her dainty cheeks, and her eyes cast down on her plate.

"You know I did," he answered feverishly.

"Oh, Lucy, I love you!" and then the waitress came up and asked for his order.

"I ought not to have spoken," he went on when the girl had gone. "I know I shall be out of a place next week, but I must say it! I must say it! Lucy, I love you!"

"And I love you, Donald," she whispered back so low that a waitress who passed quite close to them just then never caught the words. But Donald did.

There was no Lucy for whom he could lift the cover of the typewriter next morning or at whom he could smile furtively as the bad-tempered Mr. Maynard hurried in, but Donald had his compensations. He had his memories—memories of five sweet whispered words, of a hastily snatched kiss a little later.

The manager had no time to bully that morning; he had hardly taken off his coat and hat before the bell rang twice from the principal's room—once ring for Mr. Maynard, two rings for Mr. Hayes.

Both men were astonished, for neither had known that anybody was in the private office, and "the governor" had never arrived so early before in all their experience. However, the summons was unmistakable, so both went in together.

And on the threshold both paused amazed. Seated at the governor's desk was not the white-haired, infirm old Mr. Cartwright, but Lucy Raindom, the clerk who had walked out of the office yesterday morning.

"Lucy," cried Donald, hardly able to believe his eyes.

"What is the meaning of this, madam," began the manager in his customary hectoring manner, but Lucy cut him short.

"Listen and I will tell you," she said calmly. "My father, Mr. Cartwright, is very old and very ill. For a long time it had been a dream of mine to learn all about his business and relieve him from the worry of it, so I came here under my mother's name, to be—"

"I sack you to-day, gin at the bottom. Here is a check," he said, and got a thorough grounding in all the details from the lowest to the highest. And that, Mr. Maynard, is how I found you out. Not knowing who I was you bullied me as you have bullied my father's employes for years, and you forced me by your disgraceful conduct to reveal myself earlier than I intended.

"My father has now placed his business entirely in my hands, and I certainly cannot on any account keep such a bully as you in my employ. You sacked me yesterday, I sack you to-day. Here is a check—you will see that my father has treated you most generously—and my orders to you are that you leave the office for good in five minutes time."

"As for you, Donald," she went on when the deposed manager, after having vainly tried to find words to meet this unexpected situation, had slunk silently out of the room. "You, of course, as we arranged last night, will be my partner."

"But—but—that, Lucy," he stammered, "that was another kind of partnership. Our positions are very different now. I am only a humble clerk and you—you—"

"Poor Donald," she laughed tenderly. "Love levels everything. You loved me as a clerk and you'll have to go on loving me, so there!"

If only millionaires could afford to ride in street cars everybody would prefer them to automobiles.

A pleasant thing about a man who is really smart is he doesn't have to show off to prove it.

A PINEAPPLE FARM

A WOMAN IS GROWING RICH.

A New Hampshire School Teacher Ordered South for Her Health Not Only Recovers It, But Has Built Up a Fine Business.

Three thousand dollars a year is the amount which Miss Christobelle Macy has cleared on her pineapple farm in the south of Florida for the past five years. The farm comprises four acres, and less than three is planted in pineapples.

"Ten years ago I was teaching school in New Hampshire, when the physicians told me that the one chance for prolonging my life lay in going South below the frost line, and living out doors," said Miss Macy, when describing her success as a pineapple farmer. "I had been teaching 15 years and had saved $1,000."

"After the first shock was over I made up my mind to fight for my health, just as I had had to fight for my education and as the family of a New England farmer have to fight for everything they get. I packed my few clothes and set out for Miami, Fla., because it seemed a bit nearer home than Mexico.

"The second day after my arrival I began to look around to see what sort of outdoor work I could find that would pay me enough to live on. I soon found that all the out of doors work was done by negroes.

"I talked the matter over with the woman in whose house I was boarding, and she explained to me that if I wanted to work out of doors she would advise me to rent a garden.

"I followed her advice but later I decided to try pineapple farming.

"When I found some land to suit the owner was quite willing to sell me four acres for $10 an acre, with the promise of as much more as I wanted at the same price, provided a body came along and offered to pay more for it in the meantime.

"It cost me $200 merely to have that land cleared and to build a four roomed log house with a little log kitchen at the back. Of course the logs used in building the house were all cut from the land.

"As soon as work was well under way on the place I wrote for my younger sister and a cousin, young boys who had always been delicate, to come on, and as soon as the house was finished, we moved in. That year from the first of July to the first of November, the three of us set out 12,000 pineapple suckers that cost me $6 a thousand. Eighteen months later I harvested 220 crates of pineapples averaging about 30 to the crate.

"This crop sold for an average of $2.50 a crate, making the gross receipts for the year's crop $800. Deducting the cost of the four acres of land, the clearing and the building of the house, besides the railroad and other expenses of getting my sister and cousin to Florida and our living expenses, we calculated that we had cleared about $250. Not so bad for the first eighteen months of a farm worked by two women and a boy, at least, it didn't seem so to us, who had been accustomed to farming in New Hampshire.

"That same year we set out suckers from my own plants and also suckers of the Abakka pineapple. Besides the fruit of that first crop I sold several thousand suckers, but as the money went to buy the suckers of the Abakka we never counted that in the amount saved.

"Now that pineapple growing has become such a popular industry, there is always a ready sale for both suckers and slips from healthy plants. Mine are always spoken for months ahead. Suckers I sell for $10 a thousand, and slips for half that amount. I can now clear $3,000 a year and my health is excellent."

HOME COOKING.

Baked Ham.

Soak a ham in cold water overnight; trim it neatly and cover all over with a thick crust of flour and water; bake slowly 8 hours; remove the crust and skin; cover the top with fine cracker crumbs; place in the oven until the crumbs are brown. When cold cut in very thin slices.

Breakfast Muffins.

One egg beaten light, pinch of salt, 1 tablespoon of sugar, 1 cup of sweet milk, 2 even cups of sifted flour, with 2 teaspoons of baking powder, 1 tablespoon of melted butter. Have muffin pans well greased and hot. Pour in mixture and bake.

Cabbage Salad.

One teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon of each of pepper and of mustard, 1-2 cup vinegar, 1 egg, 6 tablespoons of sweet cream. Let it thicken on stove, and when cold pour over cabbage chopped fine.

Boiled Cider Pie.

One cup brown sugar, 2 table-spoons flour mixed with sugar, 1 egg; beat all together; 6 table-spoons boiled cider, 2-3 cup boiling hot water; mix thoroughly and bake in 2 crusts.

What Does Appear?

POULTRY

KILLING POULTRY.

Some Safe and Sanitary ways of Doing the Work.

The first essential is that the fowl shall have absolutely no food for thirty-six hours, so that its crop, gizzard and intestines shall be empty.

First-class dressing demands that the fowl be dry plucked—not scalded. This makes the French method of killing very essential. By this method the fowl is suspended by a loop around its legs to a hook on the wall. With a quick thrust through the roof of the mouth to the brain the operator kills the bird and severs the main arteries. At that instant he begins plucking the feathers. They pull easily then—a minute later they come hard, but in that one minute the worst of his task is done. The carcass is then cooled, formed in the forming troughs, so as to pack nicely and is then ready for shipment. No incision is made in the skin of the fowl. None of the interior organs were removed. The moment the interior organs of a fowl are exposed to the air, decomposition sets in. Packed or handled as described, the fowl will keep perfectly for days, or if in cold storage, for weeks or months.

The English method differs only in the killing. No knife is used, no bleeding is done. The vertebra next to the skull is severed from the head by a strong quick jerk of the operator; this causes instant death and a looseness of the feathers; as in the French method. The head is drawn out from the neck an inch or two, and in this space the blood drains and forms a clot as the bird hangs by its feet. This method shuts out the air from the interior of the carcass even more effectually than does the French method.

A serious onslaught has been made on these methods of dressing poultry in several States recently, but it is hoped that they may not prevail but rather that they may grow in favor. They are safer for the consumer; they are simpler and better for the producer.—T. E. Orr, in bulletin Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Toulouse Gander.

Few if any birds exhibited at poultry shows and fairs can present a record equal to that of the gander whose pen portrait here appears. For eight years he has maintained the right to his name, Madison Boy, by winning first premium at Madison square Garden, New York, every season—eight first premiums at America's greatest poultry show! Besides these prizes he has won first in other large shows and is pronounced by breeders and judges to be a remarkable bird. He was bred by Clarence W. King, president of the Water Fowl Club of America, and is a native of the Empire State.

Rack for Feeding Roughage.

A design of a cattle rack for feeding roughage is furnished by one of the readers of The Prairie Farmer. A reasonably clear idea is given in the accompanying sketch.

Rack for Feeding Roughage.

Posts are driven in the ground to form a center and extend about a foot clear of the surface. Cross-pieces are nailed to these to which the flat work forming the rack is nailed. A platform is placed around the bottom as indicated to prevent unnecessary waste of feed.

Count the Eggs.

Are you keeping a strict count of the eggs you gather each year, and giving Biddy full credit for all she lays at the prevailing market price? The only fair way is to count all eggs gathered and if you are doing this, will wager that you will find out that hens pay and you will soon be eating fine young fry.

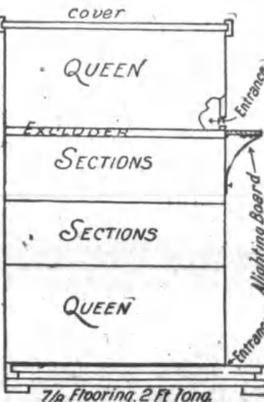

Sow the poultry yards to Russian sunflowers and you will have an abundance of shade and produce lots of good feed. Wheat is also good.

BEES AND BEE KEEPING

TWO QUEENS IN A HIVE.

A Clever Device for Housing Two Colonies of Bees.

In reference to the two-queen system of managing bees I will say that I divide the hives with a thin division-board, bee-tight, from top to bottom. In this way we have the two queens in the spring; and if a queen is needed for another colony, one queen can be removed and the division-board taken out. I take two colonies and put them in two divided bodies, one on top of the other, so that each colony occupies half of both bodies. In this way the heat of both colonies is in one hive.

It always has been next to impossible for me to get my colonies built up in time for the white-clover honey-flow. Now when the flow begins, I put the two colonies, each with its queen, in two undivided bodies, both of which are on the same bottom-board. Two section-supers and an excluder are between the two colonies. Besides the regular entrance there is an entrance above the supers, as shown in the diagram. The bees keep right on rearing brood; and when they get too numerous for two hives and three or four supers remove the top colony to another stand.—R. H. Hall, Royal, Ill.

As To Swarming.

We have had it proven to our own satisfaction many times that bees often select a location before swarming. Away back in the 80's we were in the woods and saw bees going in and out of a knot-hole some 15 feet up in a tree. My first thought was that I had found a bee-tree. After observing more closely I discovered that it was only bees out selecting a place for their future home, for there were more or less bees around all the trees except that one mentioned. Around this they greatly increased in numbers until it almost seemed as if a small swarm were in and around this tree. During the time I went to the house and told my wife to keep a close watch on a certain colony I knew was preparing to swarm. I was sure they were my bees that were so busily engaged at the tree. Pretty soon I heard my wife calling, "The bees are swarming!" I noticed, however, the bees about the tree had become very much less in numbers. A very few were to be seen at the tree just then.

I hastened to the house to watch the swarm to see what the result would be. They were pretty well out of the hive when I reached the house and had started to cluster. Not over two-thirds of the swarm ever clustered at all when they broke cluster and made a direct line for the tree where I had been watching them for hours, and went directly into it.

At another time a neighbor called on me, saying he had found a bee tree, and wanted to save the bees. They were working strong, as he thought. After a good many hard blows with his axe, he felled the tree, and to his utter astonishment, no bees were in it, and no signs of comb or anything that showed that bees had ever occupied the tree. Before long he saw a big negro coming on a dead run through the brush rattling a bell for all it was worth; and about the same time he heard the roaring of a swarm of bees, and very soon they were hovering about the spot where the tree had stood. After circling around for a short time the bees clustered on a bush near where the tree stood, perhaps much astonished because their new-found home was destroyed.

These with many other instances I could relate, convince me that bees often select a home before they swarm.—L. B. Smith, Rescue, Texas.

Handling Combs

The handling of combs individually, and brushing off the bees, is a thing of the past with me. You can accomplish ten times more in a given time by using shallow supers when removing honey from the hives than by taking out and brushing each comb.
