REMEMBER THE DATE.

A Fine Number.
Herman Pfeifer's beautiful prize cover gives much distinction to the May Woman's Home Companion. Another notable art feature of this magazine is a full-page reproduction of William Balfour Ker's painting, "Memories." An aged Civil War veteran is carrying his company's colors in a Decoration Day parade, his eyes almost closed in reverie. Behind him crowd the vague, shadowy forms of the gallant youths who followed the colors with him nearly half a century ago.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale gives some good advice to young married folk. In "Are We Ready for Our Children?" Christine Torhune Herick approaches the problem of the child in the family from an actually new point of view. "Europe on Five Dollars a Day" is the first of a series of articles on the best way to travel abroad.

The May issue is rich in fiction—"Dog-in-the-Manger," "A Heart Specialist," "Pancake Neighbors," "The Gentle Highwayman," are titles which will give some idea of the entertainment this magazine contains.

Alcohol not needed

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a strong drink. As now made, there is not a drop of alcohol in it. It is a non-alcoholic tonic and alterative. Ask your own doctor about your taking this medicine for thin, impure blood. Follow his advice every time. He knows.

We publish our formulas
Ayer's
We banish alcohol from our medicines
We urge you to consult your doctor

Ask your doctor, "What is the first great rule of health?" Nine doctors out of ten will quickly reply, "Keep the bowels regular." Then ask him another question, "What do you think of Ayer's Pills for constipation?"

The Scrap Book

Would Give Him Another Chance.
A young lady had thrust upon her the disagreeable duty of refusing a poor young man, a hopeless young man, an eight dollar a week clerk in a dry goods store.
"You spurn me," he cried bitterly, "but you will live to rue this day. I will go out into the great marts. I will strive; I will win. My name shall be known, my millions envied."
"Then come and try me again," the young lady calmly interposed.

THE BRAVE AT HOME.
The maid who binds her warrior's sash.
With smile that well her pain dissembles.
The while beneath her drooping lash
One starry teardrop hangs and trembles.
Though heaven alone records the tear
And fame shall never know her story,
Her heart has shed a drop as dear
As e'er bedewed the field of glory.

The wife who girds her husband's sword
Mid little ones who weep or wonder
And bravely speaks the cheering word.
What though her heart be rent asunder,
Doomed nightly in her dreams to hear
The bolts of death around him rattle,
Hath shed as sacred blood as e'er
Was poured upon the field of battle.

The Sad Lawyer.
"People seem very suspicious of me," said a lawyer to his wife on his return home at evening. "You know old Jones? Well, I did some work for him last month, and when he asked me for the bill this morning I told him out of friendship that I wouldn't charge him anything. He thanked me cordially, but said he'd like a receipt."

A Lost Opportunity.
Dr. Burton and Dr. Gage were ministers of two Congregational churches in Hartford and excellent friends. Dr. Gage had traveled abroad and since his return had been delivering a course of lectures upon old world subjects. One of the lectures—on Palestine—had been thought not so interesting as the others, and on its second delivery many of the auditors withdrew before it was finished. Not long afterward Dr. Gage's house was entered by a burglar. Dr. Gage was giving Dr. Burton an account of the affair. "Why, doctor, I had him down flat on his back. I held him there. He couldn't move a inch."
"Good!" said Dr. Burton. "But what a splendid opportunity that was to have delivered to him your lecture on Palestine!"

Emotional.
"Oh, Lord," prayed the old colored deacon, "gib dis pore brudder de eye de de eagle, dat he spy out sin afar off! Gibe his hands to de gospel plow. Tie his tongue to de line of truf. Nail his yere to de gospel pole. Bow his head way down between his knees, O Lord, an' fix his knees way down in some lonesome, dark and narrer valley, where prayer is much wanted to be made. 'Nolnt him wif de kerosene ole of salvashun, an' set him on fire!"

Charmed With Venice.
A young lady who had returned from a tour through Italy with her father remarked that her father had liked all the Italian cities, but especially did he like Venice.
"Ah, Venice, to be sure," said the friend to whom she was relating some of the adventures of their trip. "I can readily understand that your father would prefer Venice, with its gondolas and St. Mark's and Michael Angelos."
"Oh, no," said the young lady. "It isn't that. But he could sit in the gondola, you know, and fish out of the bowl."
"Price of Peas."
William J. Bryan was advertised to deliver a lecture before the Y. M. C. A. in Washington, and a Maryland farmer went to hear him. Afterward the farmer met him and said:
"Mr. Bryan, I came in twenty miles to hear you talk. I heard you was going to speak on 'The Price of Peas,' and you never said a word about the price of anything."
The address delivered was "The Price of Peace."

The Woman He Wanted.
Senator James A. Hemenway of Indiana once delivered an address before an audience of farmers in a country schoolhouse and as an illustration told a story of a poor farmer who had died, leaving to his wife the farm, heavily mortgaged. He said that the widow set to work with a will and succeeded upon one year's wheat crop in paying off the entire mortgage.
When the senator completed his speech, a middle aged farmer approached and asked, "Senator, you told a story 'bout the widow raising a mortgage on one year's crop?"
"Yes, my friend, that was a true story. It happened only last year."
"Senator, could you tell me who that widow is? She's jist the kind of woman I've ben lookin' for all the time."
Lippincott's.

Going Egypt.
First Tourist—Isn't this lovely? Just think, Pharaoh lived here and—Change and—
Second Tourist—I guess it's the bad air. It hurts my nose too. Is that the Nile over there?
"I suppose so. It doesn't seem as if Cleopatra could have ridden in her barge to meet Marc Antony down that stream, does it?"
"No. But that was a long time ago."
"Mercy, there's the Sphinx!"
"What's the Sphinx?"
"Why, it's a thing that asks you riddles, you know. Dear me, I'm not sure whether that's the Sphinx or one of the pyramids."
"Look there! That must be the desert. But I can't see any caravans."
"My, isn't it nice to travel on a railroad where they don't have smoke or cinders?"
"Yes, and do you notice what a balmy odor comes in the window?"
"Yes. Isn't it fragrant? So spicy. Ah-a-a, I like to breathe it in."
"So do I. I'll ask the conductor what it is. There he is. Conductor, please. Where does that spicy smell come from?"
"From the locomotive, ma'am. We use nothing but mummies for fuel on this line."

Wanted to Tell All About It.
"At a funeral in Nebraska," says William J. Bryan, "the preacher who had been asked to deliver the funeral oration was a stranger in town and didn't know the departed sister very well. After he had said all that he could add a few words about the dear departed would be heard gladly.
"Three or four arose in turn and paid tribute to the memory of the woman who had passed beyond. Then there was a pause. Finally one old brother arose and said:
"Well, if we're all through speaking about the departed sister I will now make a few brief remarks on the tariff."
A Good Joke.
A Baltimore physician boarded a crowded car. A woman was standing, and a big German was sprawling over twice the seat area that was necessary to him. Indignantly the physician said to him:
"See here! Why don't you move a little so that this tired woman may have a seat?"
"Say, dot's a joke on you, all right! Dot's my wife!"—Harper's.

The Mississippi Way.
John Allen was defending in the house with unusual warmth and vigor the manner of conducting elections in his own state, Mississippi. He waxed eloquent on the subject and was in the midst of a most forceful argument when, noticing looks of incredulity and amusement on the faces of some of his colleagues, John stammered, halted and closed with:
"Well—well, it is true that we have fair elections in Mississippi, but every election morning just before the polls open we fire off a few guns and cannon, just to let the negroes know that it is to be a fair election."

Her Top Note.
During an operatic performance a well known prima donna burst into her dressing room and flung herself sobbing on the lounge. Her maid begged to know what was the matter. After a few incoherent ejaculations the singer told her awful story. She was approaching the end of an aria and was exceeding herself when all of a sudden a horrid mouse ran right in front of her.
"Ah, madam, and you screamed?" asked the maid.
"Yes, yes! My prospects are forever blighted!"
Just then the maid answered a call bell and reported that the manager's assistant wished to see her.
"Let him come," said the singer.
"The manager," said the young man, "wants to know whether you ran away from the curtain call because you were sick?"
"No, I am well. It was only—"
"And he wants me to tell you that high C you let out at the end was the finest he has heard in years and that the audience is crazy over you. You must give a repeat."
"I can't! I can't!" wailed the prima donna, "unless you get another mouse."

The Only Way.
Little Ruth had been quietly listening to her mother's description of heaven as she patted her big doll's golden head and affectionately pressed it to her breast. Suddenly she turned to her mother and said, "Mother, can dolls go to heaven?"
"No, Ruth. Heaven is for people, not for dolls."
"Would I have to leave dollie here if I went to heaven?"
"I'm afraid you would, Ruth."
"Well, then, mother, when they come for me I'll be very perlitte an' say: 'No, thanks, Mr. Angel. An' then I'll take dollie an' my rockin' chair an' go an' sit by th' fire.'"—Lippincott's.

The Real Miracle.
A negro preacher addressed his flock with great earnestness on the subject of "Miracles," as follows: "My beloved friends, de greatest of all miracles was 'bout de loaves and fishes. Dey was 5,000 loaves and 2,000 fishes, and de twelve apostles had to eat 'em all. De miracle is, dey didn't bust."
A Child's Advice.
The Sunday school was about to be dismissed when the superintendent arose to the disgust of nearly all the children, who thought the session had been long enough, and announced, "And now, children, let me introduce Mr. Smith, who will give us a short talk."
Mr. Smith smilingly arose and after gazing impressively around the classroom began with, "I hardly know what to say," when the whole school was convulsed to hear a small, thin voice back in the rear lip:
"They axen and thit down?"—Lippincott's Home Journal.

OUR FUTURE HOME.

May 3, '08.—(John: 14:1-14.)

There is a general agreement among men that if this life is all there is to the human existence it is not worth living. Whether we accept the teachings of revelation and the theories of the philosophers or reject them, we are all satisfied that life as we see and experience it is a most incomplete and unsatisfactory thing. We are building structures upon the sand to be washed out by the next flood tide, we are ever learning only to be mocked by the hemispheres of unattainable wisdom, we are building towers of Babel only to come inevitably to confusion and distraction we are lifting cups of sweetest water to our lips only to have them dashed from our grasp just as we are about to quench deathless thirst, we are inventing and discovering only to add to our burdens and our wants, the fountain of youth forever flies from our approach, we never can quite get the discord out of the instrument, nor reach the Ultima Thula of our desires.

Happiness; it is never complete. Health; it is never perfect. Comfort; there is always some lack. Gold does not satisfy, we struggle for more. Position does not gratify, there are others more fortunate. Location is no recompense, we read and dream of more favored sections. The aged envy the young, the poor covet the possessions of the rich. The laborer would fain be the employer, everybody would like to change places with everybody else. Beneath the whole heavens, nobody is satisfied. And the more truly a man is a man, the less he can find beneath the canopy a place of rest for his heart or repose for his head. He takes his place by the side of the Son of Man who said, "The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." He did not mean that there was no home open to him and no one would give him welcome. He simply meant what all great souls felt that the animals of the field and the birds of the air have abiding places where they are perfectly satisfied and content, but that there is no such place of absolute rest and satisfaction for the human heart.

This is the reason and explanation for the universal belief in a future home for the soul. The incompleteness of this life presupposes another. When we find a half hinge, it is presumptive evidence that the other half is located somewhere. Chaos and confusion runs through the universe unless there is time and place where all wrongs are righted, all oppressions brought to an end, all hindering influences removed, all clouds swept away, all fetters stricken off from body, soul and spirit, and man, redeemed, regenerated and disenthralled permitted to reach the goal of his ceaseless ambitions in whatever direction they may tend.

He who came out of eternity and went back to eternity, has assured us that this conception of humanity is not a dream but a reality. Such a world exists. All nations have given it their own peculiar designation. The Christian calls it heaven. The Bible is full of the most wonderful descriptions of that land that is fairer than day. Metaphor is piled upon metaphor, figure of speech upon figure of speech in the attempt to set forth its glory.

There are some people who claim to believe that this earth is to be fixed up for our future residence. But He who spoke as never man spoke did not think so. Without doubt He did imply that in process of time the earth would be purged of much of the evil that now exists upon it, and a reign of universal righteousness and peace should be established here. But it is not to be supposed for a moment that this little insignificant ball in the limitless creation is the best that the Almighty can do for the future and eternal residence of all the intelligences He has brought into existence. He will not elevate His mere "footstool" into a throne. It is unthinkable that man as we know him is the highest and completest work of the Creator of this universe. The Home of the soul must of necessity be the Capitol of the Universe, the place of residence of the Sons of God, fitted and equipped in every way for such royal personages.

But after all, only one thing is necessary, and that one thing is—complete rest. A place where nothing is lacking to satisfy the cravings of the soul. A place where the child and the philosopher, the prince and the pauper, the highest and the lowest shall be ushered into an existence in the harmony of which there shall not be one discordant note or unattainable desire. Such a world is necessary to complete this; and such a world exists. That which we call "heaven" is but the gate of entrance.

TRINIDAD'S ASPHALT LAKE.

Queer Mining Carried on in West Indian Island.

This Trinidad lake of pitch and the Bermudez lake in Venezuela supply the bulk of the asphalt of commerce, says a writer in the New York Sun.

Brighton has no claim to existence aside from the bituminous pitch that nature here sends bubbling up from the bowels of the earth. The lake is about a quarter of a mile from the steamship pier. Nearby are quarters for two hundred native workmen, a refining plant, offices and quarters for the half dozen Americans representing the company, and that is all, except for the fierce tropical sun eternally beating down, and the sharks that play in the harbor.

It is necessary to shift the scene of operation only along the line, never toward the center, as in two days time the slowly moving viscous mass of pitch continually flowing from the center has refilled the excavations and made them ready for the workmen again. Every day the rails of the little tramway are lifted and the slowly sinking ties moved a few inches one way or the other in order that the railway may not entirely disappear in the bottomless ooze.

Bottomless it may well be called, for soundings have been made until with no bottom at 140 feet the pipes and sounding apparatus have been crushed and swallowed up, to be disgorged months later. The mining of the product is lowering the level of the lake at the rate of about six inches a year.

The center of this huge volcanic crater is the source of supply. Here we see the pitch, boiling up in almost a purely liquid state, spreading out over the lake in dozens of streams, gradually hardening and imperceptibly flowing, toward the boundaries in an attempt to find a level.

It is horrible to contemplate the thought of being caught by this awful black quicksand and relentlessly entombed in its depths. Not long ago a negro workman heroically offered himself for an experiment designed to ascertain how long it would take for a man to become engulfed in the pitch. For more than an hour he slowly sank until only the upper part of his body remained in sight and then his companions, in a burst of cruel humor, made as if to leave him to his fate. His vociferous appeals for mercy melted their hearts. Planks were thrown out over the pitch, as they are used in rescuing a skater who has broken through the ice, and after an hour's hard work the victim was once more free and happy.

The lake is a valuable source of revenue to the island government. An export duty of $1.25 a ton and a royalty of 40 cents a ton, by the terms of the concession, put nearly a quarter of a million dollars a year into the island treasury. The entire concession is about 2,000 acres, and asphalt is found throughout the whole locality. The land is fertile and some of it is now being used with success for the cultivation of fruit.

The possibility of exhaustion seems remote—the Venezuelan lake, although ten times the area, is but thirty feet deep. Its surface is submerged in water, rendering the extraction of the product more difficult, and a forty mile haul to the seacoast adds much to its cost.

THE . . . CAPTAIN'S . . . BRIDE

"It's awkward! Shiver my timbers! I've spiked my own guns." Captain Fairbreeze, late owner and skipper of the Saucy Lucy, but now retired, did not exactly tear his hair. He had little to spare, and merely went through the pantomime of tearing it.
And really the position was awkward, not to say ludicrous.
For months past, he had been trying to convince his son, Frank, that to marry Madge Thornton, a mere farmer's daughter, and her very small fortune, would be the act of a fool.

Captain Fairbreeze was not a poor man, but he rarely gave anything away. He considered that he had worked hard for what he possessed, and he let Frank know with considerable emphasis, that he would "walk the plank" before he would share his savings with a couple of cooing and starving turtle doves!
"Would you compel me to marry for money, sir?" Frank had asked.
"No!" was the blunt reply. "But I'd bet you a battleship to a belying pin you don't marry on mine."
Then—how he could kick himself for it now!—Captain Fairbreeze had introduced the name of the Widow Lavelle.
Mrs. Lavelle had lately come to reside in the village, and had jumped into popularity at once.
"More, my boy," the old salt had added, "I've heard of a reliable source that she has two thousand pounds of her own! Now, Frank, go and find a quiet corner—and think!"

And Frank, like a dutiful son, obeyed. For days he seemed to do nothing else but think!
Then the result was seen. He talked less of Madge and more of the widow.
Captain Fairbreeze had just begun to flatter himself that he had at last succeeded in "driving sense into the boy's head," when he made a startling discovery—a discovery that simply took his breath away!
He had studied the lady so closely and had sounded her praises so constantly, that now he could not bear the idea of parting with her, even to his own son!

With something more than a shock Captain Fairbreeze discovered that he loved her! And now he had a rival—a serious rival of his own making!
"I've a surprise for you my boy—a great surprise!"
II.
Captain Fairbreeze had been to the village, and had come back looking ten years younger.
"Perhaps it isn't such a surprise as you think, sir!" returned Frank. "I might guess its nature."
"Can you?"
"You are going to marry Mrs. Lavelle."
"Hit it first time!" laughed Captain Fairbreeze, bringing his hand down on his son's shoulder. "Have you nothing to say, Frank?"
Frank offered his congratulations with a warmth and sincerity for which the father was scarcely prepared.

"And now, sir," he went on, "I have a surprise, perhaps two, maybe three, to spring upon you."
"So many?" laughed Captain Fairbreeze, who was in excellent humor. "Steady with 'em, my boy. One at a time. The first—well, I dare say I could guess the first."
"Easily," smiled Frank. "I have proposed to Madge and have been accepted."
"Good!" ejaculated Captain Fairbreeze heartily. "Surprise number two?"
"Madge Thornton has an aunt Mary!"
Captain Fairbreeze, more puzzled than surprised, leaned forward in his chair.
"Indeed!" he remarked. "Lots of people have aunt Marys. True, I was not aware that Madge Thornton had one, but—where's the surprise come in?"
"In what Aunt Mary proposed to do," replied Frank. "She is Madge's only aunt, and Madge is her only niece. Aunt Mary, it seems, is wealthy!"
"Excellent Aunt Mary!" cried Captain Fairbreeze. "She—er—didn't mention the amount?"
"Four thousand pounds!"
For some seconds Captain Fairbreeze could only sit and stare. Then he bounded to his feet and brought his big palm down between Frank's shoulders with a force that made the young man stagger.
"Glorious!" he roared. "Four thousand pounds! Frank, I'm proud of you," added Captain Fair-breeze, gripping his son's hand and wringing it warmly. "You'll rub along now."

III.
Captain Fairbreeze had the reputation of being a man of the world. He was wont to boast of the fact. But—4,000 pounds! It was a big sum and one not to be lost without an effort.

On the day before the wedding, which at Mrs. Lavelle's suggestion was to be a double one, Captain Fairbreeze favored the son with a little lecture, frugality being the text.
And on the following day Captain Fairbreeze kept his eyes open for Aunt Mary.

The double ceremony was over and they had returned for the wedding breakfast, and still the captain's curiosity was left unsatisfied.
"I say, Frank!" he blurted out at length. "This mysterious Aunt Mary! Where is she? I've seen nothing of her!"

"Nonsense dad!" laughed Frank. "You married the lady an hour ago!"
Captain Fairbreeze could not dispute it, and he let Frank know with considerable emphasis, that he would "walk the plank" before he would share his savings with a couple of cooing and starving turtle doves!

"Yes, John, it is perfectly true," she said. "Madge is my niece. Hearing how matters stood between the young lovers, I came down quietly, determining to bring about one wedding, though I did not expect to become involved in another."
"Frank told me of your generous resolve to double what Madge brought him, and I determined that between us we could give them a right good send-off. And I think we have done so. What do you think, John?"
John thought a great deal more than he ventured to say at the moment. Indeed, he was in a thoughtful mood for an hour or two.
Among other things he thought of was the proposed wager, "a battleship to a belying pin," that Frank didn't marry on his father's money.
Captain Fairbreeze soon got over it, however, for he had found a treasure in his domestic bride.

Those Petty Expenses.
Speaking of starting things and not finishing them," said a business man, "did I ever tell you of the curious habit that an uncle of mine had? He used to carry a memorandum book around with him and whenever he spent any money he would jot down the figures. We always looked upon him as a model in keeping accounts. One day I got talking to him about it and he pulled the book out of his pocket to show me. What was my amazement on looking at it to discover that not one of the pages was a totaled up. I asked him, naturally, whether he never added the columns to find out how much he was spending. He told me that he did not and never had; the practice was too discouraging. A sense of duty impelled him to put down the items, but there he stopped. An interesting man, my uncle, although a trifle eccentric."
"Not so very unlike the majority of humankind," said the business man's friend, "unless perhaps, in his honesty of avowal. I think there are mighty few people who keep the record of their personal expenses in shipshape fashion. Lots of us start out with the best of intentions, say at the beginning of a year, but its a good deal like keeping up a diary. And just where nine out of ten fall down is the matter of totaling. It takes but an infinitesimal amount of time to run up a column, but somehow we don't like the operation; it's too much like bringing a charge against ourselves. So we save our consciences by jotting down items—when we think of them—and let them go at that. Pretty soon the account or memorandum book becomes hopelessly in arrears and it is put away where it will not be an irritation. The next January another beginning may be made, but unless the conscience is in very good working order there will be the same result."

Here's a Simile.
What would our language be without a simile? No one can forget George Aubrey's remark that an acquaintance had invested about everything he had in an ochre mine, "You've got about as much use for that mine as a cow has for a side pocket." Dr. Smeizer was trying to tell the Merry Sixty Club about a certain prominent financier who is noted for his longness and leanness, "Is he so very thin?" asked a listener. "Thin! Why, he looks as if he could go an excursion up a gas pipe."

WHAT FLOWERS MEAN

ALSO THE SUPERSTITIONS ABOUT MINT AND CATNIP.

It Is Considered Unlucky to Gather Flowers Out of Season—They Belong to the Fairies Then—Spear-mint Will Prevent Illness.

There is nothing which grows around which there is more superstition woven than the homely mint. Not only is mint the crowning enticement of a julep, and a thing which makes sedate tabbies gambol and roll like 6-months-old kittens, but, according to tradition, the different mints have supernatural properties, and there are good and bad mints. Pennyroyal, aside from its qualifications as a flea-discourager, is said to make a quarrelsome husband and wife stop bickering, if it is given to them by some friend. Catnip, on the other hand, when chewed creates quarrelsomeness and is said to make even mild and gentle people fierce. If catnip is held in the hand until heated and then put into the hand of another it will, so goes the superstition, so control that person that he or she cannot leave you so long as the catnip is retained in the hand. Spear-mint will prevent illness, so long as it is worn about the wrist. If spear-mint is mixed with salt and applied to the bite of a mad dog the wound will heal, it is said. In the olden days the children used to put a bit of spear-mint in the coats on Christmas day, believing that at the exact time when the Saviour was born the mint would blossom.

The superstitions which cluster around flowers are as many as there are different flowers, says The New York Tribune. It is considered unlucky to gather flowers out of season, as before and after the season they are said to belong to the fairies. The first wild flowers which are gathered by a young woman in the spring should spell the initials of her future husband, if the superstition holds true.

Here is a schedule of superstitions about finding the first flower of the season:

If found on Monday, good luck all the year.
If found on Tuesday, large undertakings which will be successful.
If found on Wednesday, a wedding in the family.
If found on Thursday, hard work with little profit.
If found on Friday, unexpected wealth.
If found on Saturday, misfortunes.
If found on Sunday, best luck of all.

Some of the numberless flower superstitions are:
If any one asks for the flowers pinned on your dress and you refuse you will have immediate ill-luck.
To burn faded flowers is a sign of coming sorrows.
To plant a flower hedge is to bring good luck.
If you point at buds they will blight.
To hand a flower reversed to any one is to bring bad luck.
If a person wears flowers with the stems upward it is a sign that he or she is in love, but does not know it.
If you pull a flower to pieces, you will die of consumption.
If a person smells flowers gathered from the cemetery he will lose his sense of smell.
To have flowers wilt quickly in the hands denotes ill-health.
If some one gives you a yellow flower you are going to have money.
If some one gives you a purple flower you are going to have tears and trouble.

Portrait of a Queen.

In analyzing the secret of King Edward's popularity among his subjects a French writer recalls a story which is worthy retelling.
He relates how, when his majesty was driving along a country road in Scotland one day, he came upon an old market woman struggling under a load which was more than she could manage.
"You might take part of this in your carriage," said the old woman to the king, whom she did not recognize.
"Alas, my good woman," replied his majesty, "I'm very sorry, but I'm not going the same way. However, let me give you the portrait of my mother."
"A lot of good that'll do me," was the reply.
"Take it all the same," said the king, smiling, and he put a sovereign bearing Queen Victoria's effigy in the palm of the astonished old peasant.—Detroit Free Press.

Oranges for Children.

Oranges for children or invalids should be cut in half and the juice squeezed from them on a lemon-squeezer into a glass. Thus the fruit may be drunk instead of eaten, but with far less trouble and no waste. The remaining peels may be dried and, from the oil they contain, form capital kindling, useful with sticks for lighting a fresh fire or by themselves for reviving a dull one.

Boiling Eggs.

When boiling eggs for a salad, or to be used as a garnish, always put them on in cold water. Let them come to a boil and cook 15 minutes. The whites will then be evenly cooked through and the yolks will be exactly in the middle.

The Ladies' World

For May has a very interesting article by Charles M. Alexander, the singing evangelist, on The Power of the Gospel Hymn. The author tells the story of the most popular of the songs sung at the revival meetings, and gives incidents where they have touched the hearts of hardened sinners. As Mr. Alexander and the Rev. Wilbur Chapman have just held a very successful meeting in Philadelphia, the article is most timely. The fiction in the number is high class and varied enough to suit all tastes. Elliott Flower describes the painting of a porch in a way that keeps the reader quietly chuckling when not laughing outright, while Susie Bouchelle Wight tells with tender pathos a love story which centers about a musical composition. The Romance of Washington Irving, the Legend of the Flying Dutchman and the continuation of The Captain and the Maid are all good, while the children have a special treat in the opening chapters of Elsie and the Arkansas Bear—a fine combination of Albert Bigelow Paine and Frank Verbeck. The fashions for the month will appeal strongly to the ladies for themselves and the children, and the dressmaking lesson will be appreciated. Household matters are fully considered, and in a very sensible kind of way, and in addition there is Fancy Work, Music, contributions on Health, The Children, Good Looks and many other things. [New York: Fifty Cents a Year.]

Former Fleming Resident.

David B. Post, formerly of Fleming, died at his home, 144 Seward Ave., Auburn, on Thursday afternoon, April 23, at the age of 71 years. He had been ill with a heart difficulty for a long time and seriously so for the past two weeks. Mr. Post was born on the farm on the west shore of Owasco lake where he resided until moving to Auburn about 18 months ago. For many years he was town assessor and justice of the peace of the town of Fleming. He was highly respected by all who knew him and was a member of the M. E. church.

He was a son of the late John G. Post and Catherine Welty. Besides his wife, Sarah E. Post, he is survived by two sons and three daughters, Clarence S. Post of Fleming, Homer Lockwood Post of Clarkston, Washington, Miss Laura and Miss Emily Post of Auburn, and Mrs. B. A. Wyckoff of the town of Fleming. Funeral services were held at his late home Monday afternoon and burial was made in the family lot in Sand Beach cemetery.

Many friends of Miss Laura Post, who is so well known throughout the county as County President of the W. C. T. U., will extend sympathy to her and the members of her family in their bereavement.

In fact, everything in the dental line can be found at his office. Charges as reasonable as in the city or elsewhere, consistent with first-class work.

—Encouraging reports concerning the progress of the railroad continue to come from Ithaca, where most of our railroad news has originated for some time. The Ithaca Journal recently said: "A force of men is at work near McKinney's making the last 'fill' on the N. Y., A. & L. railroad and another gang of men is employed at the other end of the line, finishing the ballasting of the track. It will take but a short time to lay the last four miles of track at this end of the line and at the completion of this work, Ithacans will see the first inter-urban trolley road connecting Ithaca with another city. The road to McKinney's will be finished within a few weeks and trolley cars will run to that point at the opening of the season." Meanwhile, residents of Genoa and other towns from here to Auburn are getting impatient to have some kind of passenger service.

—A western philanthropist, of an inventive turn of mind, has patented a tender, or scoop-net, to be adjusted to the front of an automobile. Autos so provided do not have to turn aside for wayfarers on the highway; they are just picked up, given free transit, and a passing view of the landscape without solicitation. This bruises the dignity of the wayfarer, but as his life is spared, he gets off uncommonly well.

Country Club of Cleveland.

About five hundred alumni of Yale are expected at the annual meeting of the Western Association at Cleveland, on May 14. On this occasion, and for the first time, the new Country Club of Cleveland will be opened to guests.

This club, just completed, occupies the site on Lake Erie of the two club houses that have been destroyed by fire. It is the largest and handsomest country club in America, designed by Abram Garfield, son of the late President Garfield, following French models and occupying a notable site at the edge of the water.

The building is being furnished and decorated by G. W. Richardson & Son of Auburn, who have probably furnished more club houses in various states than any other furnishers and decorators in this country.

A Thorough Optical Training is required for scientific eye testing. Anyone can give you glasses that will enable you to see better at first. An optician must use the retinoscope and ophthalmoscope and understand the principles upon which the instrument is based or the eyes are not correctly fitted even if you do see better for a time. It is far better to investigate and be sure you are going to the right optician than spend a life time of regret by going to the wrong one.

A. T. HOYT can show diplomas of graduation from the best and largest optical college in the United States, that is all the necessary proof.

FARMING AT A DISCOUNT.

No Class of People Think It an Honor to be Farmers.

However much we may admire American and American methods, it is a fact that in the matter of a proper agricultural sentiment we fall short of the reverence with which the soil is held in the more progressive of the old countries.

"No one who has traveled in Europe and has observed even casually can have failed to note the superiority of agricultural processes there.

"Perhaps the most convincing evidence supporting the charge of lightness with which we hold agriculture in this country is furnished by the scramble of young men and women during the past twenty years to get to the city and away from the farm.

Agriculturally this country has grown too fast, land has been too cheap, and a systematic soil robbery has seemingly been considered a quicker road to success and fortune than systematic tillage and a studied conservation of the soil's inherent fertility.—The Prairie Farmer.

Fighting the Pear Blight.

Hon. Jas. Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, in his forthcoming Year Book, says on the subject of "Eradication of "Pear Blight": It was pointed out in my last book now important work had been inaugurated on the Pacific coast with a view to preventing the destruction of the extensive pear orchards, valued at many millions of dollars.

ON THE BRIDAL DAY

HERE ARE SOME GERMAN THEORIES ABOUT BAD LUCK.

Trying on the Wedding Ring Before the Ceremony, Tearing the Wedding Dress, and Many Other Things Bring Dire Misfortune.

Germany seems to be especially prolific of bridal superstitions. A German writer has just offered these comments on the bridal day, by which it may be seen that bad luck rather than good luck has the point of emphasis.

According to the Germans the bride must be especially careful on her wedding day not to put the left foot out of bed first—for that would mean perpetual strife.

It is most necessary to see that thirteen persons do not sit down to breakfast together that day. Many misfortunes will befall that bride who tries the wedding ring on the proper finger before the wedding; this is considered an anticipation of fate and fate is not to be caught.

When the bride puts on the wedding dress she must be very careful not to rip or tear it—not even a bit of lace, nor should she pick up anything on it—for this, too, is a bad sign.

It is an awful sign for the bride to look back over her shoulder, for this is a sign that she looks back to the past with a heavy heart, and does not look to the future with joy.

This refers of course, to an accidental look backward. If the bride is in her carriage and any one calls to her, she must on no condition look backward.

It is remarkable how far bridal superstition goes. It extends even to the wedding presents. Some think it ill luck to receive any presents that cut, and yet many send fish knives, fruit and dinner knives.

Under no circumstances should the bridal bouquet be forgotten, for this is of evil omen. It is a bad sign too if the bridegroom is late.

MAKES BEAUTIFUL FIGURES.

More Than Cleanliness and Neatness to be Gained in Doing Housework.

There is more than cleanliness and neatness to the home to be gained in doing housework, for a woman who wishes to may turn the daily drudgery into exercise for physical development, thus improving her figure and complexion.

The beauty part of the routine begins with protection. The hair and hands should be saved from dust, for the latter is most detrimental in its drying effect, quite apart from the dirt it makes.

As to the physical development gained by housework, sweeping, if a woman will not stoop over the broom, is one of the best exercises for chest expansion.

When washing the tendency is to stoop from the shoulders, rather than from the small of the back.

Even the numerous times of going up and down stairs will be turned to account by holding the figure erect and walking on the toes instead of flat of the foot.

It is a wise woman who, before sweeping, protects her face with a rubbing of cold cream to prevent dust working into the pores.

In Lettuce Green Velling.

This dainty frock is one of the most successful models of the season and its decorative scheme is charmingly unique.

The blouse is trimmed with bands of braid drooping over the sleeves to give the long shoulder effect and

PROCKS WITH SMART COATS.

Tailored Elegance is Indicated in These Two Costumes.

The very last word in tailored elegance is indicated in these two costumes, and the styles stand out boldly among a season of unusually pretty frocks.

The cutaway coat is almost as long as the skirt which, by the way, is even ankle length.

WITH SMART COATS.

soutache and soutache stitcheings about the front and sleeves.

The vest is an oddly shaped little affair of the silk with strappings of plain pongee.

In the background is a costume in pale yellow face cloth having the skirted skirt trimmed with a border of changeable silk and coarse flet lace.

The Key to Married Happiness.

If all people could but marry for genuine permanent love, love of the kind which counts its joys to endure hardship for the sake of the beloved, the "marriage question" would be practically at an end.

But genuine, permanent love which changes not, seems to be rare, and there is not enough of it to go round.

Household Suggestions.

To prevent those awful holes in the heels of stockings, try pasting a piece of velvet around the heel of the boot.

To freshen and brighten old faded carpets brush them to remove dust, dip broom in a pail of hot water to which has been added a little turpentine.

When anything needs overcasting, like towels, which are fringed, instead of doing it by hand take it on machine and stitch just a little above the fringe and it will wear much longer.

Boiling water for drinking purposes can be greatly improved by heating rapidly. Do this with an egg-beater just before using.

The Rainy Day Girl.

She is extra sunny, as if to shame the gloomy day. She comes down to breakfast with a smile and soon her sunshine lifts the family downcastness.

What though her pet plan for the day is shattered, that is no reason for her to shatter the happiness of everyone within hearing or sight.

But she goes out if she can, for the real rainy day girl revels in being in the midst of a downpour.

She loves a rainy day, but even if she didn't she would pretend to just by way of keeping cheerful.

HOME COOKING.

Cheese Omelet.

Three eggs, 3 desertspoons of flour, 1 ounce of grated cheese, pepper, salt and 1-2 ounce of butter.

Graham Bread.

One cup water, 1 cup milk, 1 cup molasses, 1 teaspoon soda, pinch of salt, 3 cups of graham flour.

Orange Fritters.

Divide the oranges into quarters, removing all the pith carefully; dip each piece into sifted sugar, then into good frying batter and fry in deep fat until a golden color.

Mock Indian Pudding.

Two slices bread buttered put in dish, just cover with boiling water, soak a few minutes until soft; add 1 egg (beaten), 1 quart milk, 3-4 cup molasses and bake 1 hour.

Onion Rings.

Peel and slice, not too thin, several large Spanish onions. Dip each ring first into sweet milk and then into flour.

Cheese Pudding.

Cover bottom of pudding pan with piecrust dough rolled thin, scatter lumps of butter and cheese to make thin layer, season with salt and pepper, another layer of dough, cheese, butter, seasoning, then another; beat yolk of egg in cup of milk and pour over, bake thirty minutes.

IN LETTUCE GREEN.

ending at the top of the girdle in very narrow points which are taken up by intertwined rings of green silk embroidery.

Underleeves of grass linen match the yoke and are inset with lace insertion and finished with cuffs of the same.

The Wedding Ring Finger.

The tradition is that because a nerve is supposed to run straight from that finger to the heart it was chosen as the one consecrated to bear the wedding ring.

No marrying parson has yet been brave enough to advertise "Money back if not satisfied."

SEED TESTER.

ized wires about an inch longer than the width of the pan were inserted through these tucks and gathered together, thus forming the cotton strips into numerous folds or loops which were suspended in the pan above the water by means of the supporting wires.

The ends of the strips being left sufficiently long to touch the water in the pan, the entire piece of cloth composing the loops, in which the seeds were placed, was kept uniformly moist.

Benefits of Government Control.

That Government control of the range lands of the National Forests is beneficial to the stock men in the West is evidenced by the increase in sentiment in favor of the present system of administration.

Stockmen say that the prevention of over-grazing and over-crowding which has been possible by regulation has resulted in improved stock and therefore larger profits.

ROADS AND ROAD MAKING

ROAD DRAGS IN McLEAN CO.

This Cheap, Simple Implement Is Working Itself Into Favor.

Forty-three reports from McLean county rural mail carriers, to the Bloomington Pantagraph, show that the King road drag had been used on 212 miles of road in the latter part of November and that there were 364 road drags owned upon these routes. These reports represent two-thirds of the rural routes of this county.

Every carrier who in any way indicated the results of road dragging—forty out of forty-three—gave a good recommendation of the drag, many of them in strong terms, and not one of them had a word of failure to report when the drag had been properly used.

While the report shows that one-third of all the drags were not in use, there was a special reason for this condition; this was in the rush of corn-husking time, and no doubt many of these drags will be put to work now that husking is finished.

This report from a limited territory shows as much road dragging and more than twice as many drags as were reported for this county a year ago by the Illinois highway commission.

An examination of the forty-three reports shows that some dragging was done upon thirty-one routes, the smallest amount being 1-2 mile, and the largest 18 miles, the latter being the route of Covell.

Nine reports had each 10 or more miles of dragged road and the average number of miles dragged upon the thirty-one routes was 6 1-4. In Normal and Dry Grove townships all the roads of principal travel are to be dragged, and Hudson township is seeking to do the same thing.

Very significant is the many times repeated remark of these carriers that the road drag is a good thing "if used" or "if properly used." Several of these reports show that winter and spring use of the drag, especially when the roads are wet enough for the mud to smear, bake, and harden, is much better than dragging when the roads are dry enough for the dirt to roll up or crumble.

One of the lessons that has been learned in this county is that the road should be dragged when the surface is in a paste like condition.

The most progressive of our road draggers are learning the exceeding value of dragging the road just before a freeze, and during the winter whenever it thaws enough.

Good Roads Work in New York.

The good roads microbes are multiplied rapidly in New York. The sale of an issue of $50,000,000 worth year out of money realized from the sale of an issue of $50,000,000 worth of bonds is authorized by an amendment to the state constitution. This is going some.

For this good road construction the state pays one-half the cost, the county 35 per cent and the township or property owners, 15 per cent, or property owners, 15 per cent. The bonds run for fifty years and pay 3 1-2 per cent interest. An annual tax of .0055 mill upon each dollar's worth of property for every million dollars' worth of bonds outstanding is provided to pay the interest and create a sinking fund with which to redeem one-half of the bonds.

The rest of the bonds are to be paid in fifty equal annual installments by the county and townships wherein the proceeds have been applied to the improvement of highways.

The result is that New York promises to become the good roads state of the union, even vying with Massachusetts, where miles and miles of splendid state boulevards have been constructed within the past few years.

The old days of plowing up the sides of the road and throwing the sod into the middle—when there is no other work upon the farm which can be done, and thus working out the road tax—promises to become a thing of the past in the empire state, or at least, relegated to the remote corners.

Prizes for Road Building.

A prize of $150 was awarded recently by the board of directors of the Ontario Motor League to the Township of Etobicoke, Ont., for improvements on a mile of road extending west from the Humber River to Mimico Creek. A second prize of $100 was also awarded to the township of Markham for the improvement of a mile of road running from the village of Markham. Additional prizes of $50 and $25 were also awarded to the supervisors in charge of the work on these roads. The awards were made on the recommendation of A. W. Campbell, chairman of the Committee of Judges.—Good Roads Magazine.

A feeder asks if soft ears should be sorted out and fed to the cattle now. For fattening cattle we would not feed soft, unmaturing corn exclusively, but would prefer to leave the soft ears in with the sound ones. For feeding stock, a few soft ears fed daily to their roughage,

HANGER AND LOCK.

Articles Safely Clamped to Prevent Removal by the Unauthorized.

"Watch your hat and coat," is a sign that adorns the walls of all restaurants and quick lunch cafes. The owner of the garments can generally do the watching in the smaller restaurants, but in the larger cafes the garments are entrusted to an attendant. In a great many cases he finds it impossible to guard them all and some marauder gets off with a few. To prevent such thefts a Philadelphia has invented a garment hanger and lock that insures the safe delivery of all articles entrusted to his care. It comprises a plate on which are mounted a hook to hold a coat and hat, together with a chain whereby to hang a bag. Also a clamping device for umbrellas and canes. By means of a locking mechanism all the articles can be simultaneously clamped to the plate. The key is then delivered to the owner of the articles and the latter returned on delivery of the key. A peculiar feature of the mechanism is that when the receivers are unlocked the key cannot be withdrawn.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Ink spots should be soaked in warm milk.

Milk spots disappear when cold water is used. Hot water fixes the stain.

Tea spots can be removed if you pour boiling water on them from a height.

Paint stains vanish when rubbed with clean fannel dipped in benzine or turpentine.

Perspiration stains are treated the same as for scorchs: Warm soapsuds and sunshine.

Wine stains must be thickly covered with salt, then rinsed in boiling water, salted and rinsed again.

Women Successful Explorers.

That at least seven out of ten women have the ability to become explorers, and that practically all women, even chorus girls, have a latent love of the wilderness stored away somewhere in their consciousness, is the rather startling theory of Dr. Charles H. Shaw, the biologist, who has recently returned from an exploring expedition into the Spelkirk Mountains of Canada.

Dr. Shaw went into the mountains at the head of a large party, which included four women, and he asserts that practically every one of them did a man's work and withstood the hardships splendidly. And they were totally untrained women, too, so far as woods life goes; notably one of them, and she distinguished herself by spending a whole night trying to kill a bear. This is not the only occasion on which Dr. Shaw has observed how well women withstand woods life, for he has conducted many parties and says he has found the members of the so-called weaker sex equally as intrepid as the men.

"It is my experience," said the doctor, "that the average woman can tramp as far in the course of a day as a man. She cannot, of course, carry as heavy a pack, but she can carry a light one, and when she gets into camp, no matter what the weather conditions may be, she is apt to be in far better spirits than the men.

"To cite a concrete illustration of a woman's pluck and endurance," he continued, "Miss Charlotte Walker, a University of Michigan girl stayed out of camp all of one night last summer simply to get a shot at a bear. She tramped all day, and just at nightfall, when she was about seven miles from camp, she came upon a bear. The animal disappeared, but she had an idea that he had not gone far and that she would be able to kill him the next day, so she remained on the spot.

"Those of us in camp were well nigh crazy with anxiety throughout the night, and in the morning prepared to search for her. But before we started she came wearily into camp and told us the story of the bear.

"Now, the chances are that a man would have had better judgment with regard to the bear's habits, but no man could have been pluckier than she."

Dr. Shaw's 4-year-old son, Harland, went a part of the way on the last trip, and at one time the child was 50 miles from the railroad. "We carried the little chap through his paces," said his father proudly.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA

ENGLAND'S FIRST LADY FEMINE IN HER CHARM.

Still Delights in Dress Even if She Has Many Grandchildren—Has Magnificent Jewels and Likes to Wear Them.

The greatest appeal that Queen Alexandra makes to her immediate household as well as to her subjects is the appeal of perfect womanliness. She has all the feminine weaknesses which are said to be fast disappearing in her sex—a desire to keep young, a love of dress and jewels, a vanity which prompts her to read all that is written about her in England at any rate, a tender heart and boundless sympathy.

An American who was summoned to a private audience at the palace said that the thing which most impressed him about the Queen was her air of motherliness, a sort of gentle protecting manner with also a tacit appeal to chivalry in it.

There is no more devoted mother in all the country than Queen Alexandra has been, no more tender caugther than she was to Queen Victoria, and no more loyal and (so rumor has it) long suffering wife. Besides these characteristics her desire is to bestow an almost universal charity, which has to be modified by those who take charge of the money she wishes to distribute.

The love of what is beautiful in art makes the Queen choose her gowns and those of her only unmarried daughter with more than the usual woman's interest in dresses and dresses. To the first lady in the land, soft fabrics, dainty laces and rich furs all possess an artistic value aside from their charm as adornments.

Queen Alexandra sometimes spends half a morning choosing a combination of colors for a reception gown and the jewels which shall help to set it off. All of which seems rather strange when one stops to consider the extreme simplicity of her life and dress in her girlhood days in Denmark.

Diamonds and pearls are the Queen's favorite jewels, and her most prized brooch is one that was given her by the late Lady Cadogan. It is formed of a single pearl of great size and wonderful lustre which was found in an oyster taken from the oyster beds in Clifden, Ireland.

Besides all her dog collars, ropes, rings and earrings of precious stones the Queen possesses many jewelled orders which serve to enhance the beauty of her gowns when worn on state occasions, since she always is careful to wear the order which will harmonize with the color of her dress.

No woman in the world has her vanity more assiduously administered than England's Queen. The papers vie with one another in serving her with accounts of her beauty, her taste, her grace &c., which must pall a little sometimes even on the recipient of these rhapsodies.

But she never disappoints those who admire her charms, for at each public function she always appears in a gown which is a marvel of skill and beauty, and always she preserves a girlish figure, blond hair and a youthful face though her children are reaching middle age and her grandchildren are multiplying fast.

Current Cleans House.

Electricity is now being used to operate carpet cleaners. A Pittsburg man recently patented the apparatus shown in the accompanying illustration, which is more serviceable than the pneumatic cleaner for small houses. It resembles the family carpet cleaner in appearance. A motor operates a turbine and brush, the revolutions of the latter agitating the nap of the carpet and loosening the dirt. The turbine creates a suction, drawing up all dust and depositing it in a dust receiver provided for the purpose. It is claimed that carpets can be thoroughly cleaned on the floor and every corner can be reached. Nothing need be moved. Attachable appliances are also provided for treating walls, ceiling, cornices, chandeliers, curtains, etc. Mattresses, cushions, upholstered furniture and pillows can also be aerated as well as cleaned by this appliance. The machine works noiselessly and quickly. Power to operate the apparatus can be obtained from the ordinary incandescent socket.

OPERATED BY ELECTRICITY.
