Watched Fifteen Years.
"For fifteen years I have watched the working of Bucklen's Arnica Salve; and it has never failed to cure any sore, boil, ulcer or burn to which it was applied. It has saved us many a doctor bill." says A. F. Hardy, of East Wilton, Maine. 25c. at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry, drug stores.

Consumption
is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be in the beginning. It can always be stopped in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous. Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home. Take SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil and live carefully every way. This is sound doctrine, whatever you may think or be told; and, if heeded, will save life. Send this advertisement, together with name of paper in which it appears, your address and four cents to cover postage, and we will send you a "Complete Handy Atlas of the World." S. O. Bradley, author, who is having his book published in New York, has received one copy from the publisher and pronounces it a very beautiful book. He expects another consignment soon. The social held Friday evening for the benefit of the organ fund in the Franklin school district was a success financially and socially. The amount received in the evening exceeded $10 and the kind friends in the district who were not able to attend sent in generous contributions which augmented the amount to nearly $13. The pleasure of the evening was marred for those who had made an effort to entertain the young people, when it was discovered the next morning that the young men had appropriated it to the extent of injuring the property of those who had tried to make them have a pleasant evening, and had the owner of the mail box, which was carried away, notified the authorities and had the government detectives found the guilty ones and fined them heavily, the "fun" would have not been so enjoyable to them.

Injuries Prove Fatal.
Miss Minnie M. Palmer, a trained nurse, died at the Cortland hospital Friday morning last as the result of injuries received in jumping from a moving cab to the pavement the Saturday evening previous. She was just returning to Cortland after an absence of two years during which she had been ill and had been with relatives at Bellevue, Ont. The cabman, who was taking her to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Potter in East Main St., left the cab to find if he had reached the right place, and the horse started upon a run. After going some distance, the nurse became alarmed and, opening the door, jumped out. She missed her footing and fell, striking the back of her head. She was carried to the hospital in an unconscious condition. For several days she seemed to improve, but severe pains in her head set in on Thursday and increased until her death. Her sister, Mrs. Morden, of Bellevue was with her, and the remains were taken to her home for interment.

Nov. 10—The remains of "Aunt Mina" Miller, widow of Marvin Miller were brought to our rural cemetery last Saturday. J. Morton spent Sunday visiting here. His wife, Mrs. Ruth Lobdell Morton and son Russell, are spending some time here. A goodly shower of fruit and vegetables accompanied the reception at the parsonage last Friday evening. Then she was taken to her sister's, Mrs. Fred Gallagher. The ladies served chicken pie dinner on election day at the home of Mrs. Benton Brown and supper also to members of the "Board." It was hurriedly gotten up with little time for circulation, but they realized $11.75 and hope to do better next year. Rev. K. F. Richardson, who so recently moved from here to Savannah, has written to several of the friends here of their experience during the fire which swept their town. The church and parsonage were for several hours under a shower of sparks and three times the church caught, but was finally saved. The Epworth League convention held here on Monday was very interesting. Rev. E. G. Evans preached in the afternoon and Rev. Mr. Smith of Ludlowville in the evening.

Nearing Completion.
If the weather does not grow any colder for a few weeks the New York, Auburn & Lansing railroad will complete its road to Ithaca this fall and passenger service will be established by Thanksgiving, so Superintendent Clarke declares. "Passenger service between Auburn and Ithaca will be in operation by Thanksgiving day" said Mr. Clarke, "if the present weather conditions hold out for three weeks. All the grading for the laying of rails on the New York, Auburn & Lansing line will be completed by to-morrow night. There is yet a mile of rails to be laid but it will take only three days to finish the job after the rails arrive. They are expected by the first of next week." When asked if the road would be ready for train service before winter sets in, Engineer Clarke replied, "We have great hopes of completing the line for steam train service by Thanksgiving day. It all depends on the weather, however. If the cold does not increase, we shall be able to finish our ballast. Then the train service can begin. The ground is frozen only about an inch and that does not materially affect our work," he said. "Our train service will run to the Remington salt plant and at that point passengers will be transferred to the trolley lines and carried into Ithaca."—Auburn Advertiser, Nov. 7.

Brooks—Warner. Mr. Ransom J. Brooks and Miss Lorena J. Warner of Cortland were married Wednesday evening, Nov. 4, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Cornell, 72½ Groton Ave., in that city. Rev. F. H. Cooper performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends. The bride's gown was white crepe de chene over pink silk and she carried white carnations. Following the ceremony, a fine supper was served and Mr. and Mrs. Brooks left for Binghamton on the 11:48 train. On Saturday they left for California to spend the winter and may decide to reside there permanently. The bride had been a clerk in M. A. Case's store in Cortland several years. During her childhood she lived in Genoa, and friends here wish her happiness and prosperity. There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

The Scrap Book

Interpreting a Prescription.

A lady one day in July visited her physician.

"Madam," said the physician, "you are only a little run down. You need frequent baths and plenty of fresh air, and I advise you to dress in the coolest, most comfortable clothes—nothing stiff or formal."

When she got home her husband asked what the physician had said.

"He said I must go to the seashore, do plenty of automobile and get some new summer gowns."

THE PENALTY.

Pleasure has bounds. Too greedily pursued.
Enjoyment ceases and disgust ensues. Thus, at first glance, some recent painting viewed.

The verdant landscape smiles in all its brightest hues.
But stand and gaze awhile, and by degrees
The eye grows tired, the colors cease to please;
Its beauties vanish, and its faults arise;
You think of other times and criticize.
—Scoundius.

Where She Was Needed.

At a Sunday school convention at Louisville, Ky., in answer to the roll call of states reports were verbally given by the various state chairmen. When the Lone Star State was called a brawny specimen of southern manhood stepped out into the aisle and with strident voice exclaimed: "We represent the great state of Texas. The first white woman born in Texas is still living. She now has a population of over 3,000,000."

There was a pause for a moment, and then a voice from the gallery rang out clear and distinct:

"Send that woman to Wyoming. We need her."—Everybody's.

He Should Learn to Sew.

"My husband annoys me very much," said the clubwoman. "He is so slipshod. His buttons are forever coming off."

"Perhaps," said an old fashioned woman gently, "they are not sewed on properly in the first place."

"That's just it. My husband is one of the most careless sewers I ever saw."

The Burglar's Meal.

Charles Lamb was awakened early one morning by a noise in his kitchen and on going downstairs found a burglar doing his spoons up in a bundle.

"Why d-do you s-s-st-t-teal?" he asked.

"Because I'm starving," returned the housebreaker sullenly.

"Pup-pup-poor fuf-fuf-fellow!" said the essayist. "H-here's a l-l-leg of L-L-Lamb for you."

And, with a dexterous movement of his right leg, he ejected the marauder into the street and, locking the door securely, went back to bed.

Riding a Chautauqua.

The citizens of a thriving town of about 6,000 people arranged for a Chautauqua assembly. They held the meetings in a big tent about a mile from the town, and the attendance was large from the first day. An enterprising circus man landed in the town on the second day of the Chautauqua with a steam merry-go-round, which he located about halfway between the town and the Chautauqua grounds.

Along in the afternoon a young man from the country districts was accosted by a citizen of the town.

"Well, Ezry, I suppose you are in to the Chautauqua?"

"I shore am. Jist come from that now."

"How'd you like it?"

"Fine ez a fiddle! I rode on the duru thing nine times!"—Lippincott's.

The Thoughtful Employer.

"Are you aware, sir?" said the faithful bookkeeper, "that today is the fiftieth anniversary of my service with you?"

The employer took a square box neatly wrapped in white paper from his desk.

"I know it, Mr. Quille," he said, "and I have prepared a little surprise for you. Pray accept this alarm clock with my best wishes for your continued punctuality."

He Couldn't Oblige.

Curate's Wife (given to nerves)—Hoppit, would you mind seeing me as far as my house? The lane is so dark.

Cherry Clothopper—Well, I'd rather not, mum, I promised my young woman I'd chuck that all up.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Took No Chances.

A Scotch farmer went to town to have a tooth extracted.

"I would advise you to have it out by the painless system. It is only a shilling extra," said the dentist.

He showed the apparatus for administering gas, remarking that it would cause him to fall asleep, and before he awoke the tooth would be out.

After reluctantly consenting, the customer proceeded to open his purse.

"Oh, never mind paying now!"

"Hoos! I wisna thinkin' o' that, but if I'm gone the sleep I thought I wike to count ma silver first."

Toasting a Deaf Miser.

A deaf man—let us call him Brown—was disposed to stinginess and to getting every dollar he could out of everybody and everything. He never married, but he was very fond of society. So one day he felt compelled to give a banquet to the many ladies and gentlemen whose guest he had been.

They were amazed that his purse strings had been unloosed so far, and they thought he deserved encouragement, so it was arranged that he should be toasted. One of the most daring young men of the company was selected, for it took nerve to propose a toast to so unpopular a man. But the young man rose, and Brown, who had been notified of what was to occur, fixed his face in the customary manner of a man about to be toasted. And this is what was heard by every one except Brown, who never heard anything that was not roared into his ear:

"Here's to you, Miser Brown. You are no better than a tramp, and it is suspected that you got most of your money dishonestly. We trust that you may get your just deserts yet and land in the penitentiary."

Visible evidences of applause made Brown smile with gratification. He got upon his feet, raised his glass to his lips and said, "The same to you, sir."

Did He See the Point?

A young woman of the official set in Washington at a public function found herself bored by the attentions of a fresh young man, the son of a senator.

Soon after his introduction he proceeded to regale her with a story of some adventure in which he had figured as hero.

"Did you really do that?" she asked, not knowing what else to say.

"I done it!" was the proud response, and he began forthwith another lengthy narrative, more startling even than the first. The young woman again politely expressed her surprise.

"Yes," said the hero, "that's what I done!"

A third story followed, with another "I done it!" whereupon the girl remarked:

"Do you know, you remind me so strongly of Banquo's ghost in the play?"

"Why?"

"Don't you remember that Macbeth said to the ghost, 'Thou canst not say I did it!'—Lippincott's."

Men Don't Change.

Dad (severely)—And look here, Ethel, you musn't encourage that young man to stay so late every night. It's disgraceful. What does your mother say about it?

Ethel—She says men haven't altered a bit, dad.

A Loet Apology.

"What a beautiful woman Mrs. Raymond is!" he exclaimed as he entered the sitting room. "I have just had such a pleasant talk with her in the bookstore."

His wife looked up from her sewing.

"John," she exclaimed, "where is your collar?"

He put his hand to his throat. "I must have left it at the barber shop. Yes, that's it. I went to the barber shop, then to the bookstore. Why," he ended lamely, "Mrs. Raymond would think it very careless of me to appear in public without my collar, wouldn't she?"

"Rather," said his wife. "Perhaps you'd better call her up and tell her just how it happened."

He went to the telephone.

"Hello, central; hello! Hello! Is this Mrs. Raymond? Yes? Well, really, it was very stupid of me, Mrs. Raymond; but, you know, I had been thinking of something very important, and I quite forgot to put on my collar. I—oh—ah—goodbye!"

He suddenly hung up the receiver and gave utterance to a mild exclamation.

"John!" exclaimed his wife.

"She says she hasn't been out of the house today," he groaned.—Harper's Magazine.

Woman's Wit.

A man found that his wife had drawn a few puffs of false hair. This displeased him. So one day he hid in the hall outside of her room, and just as the lady was adjusting the false puffs he darted in upon her.

"Mary," he said reproachfully, "why do you put the hair of another woman upon your head?"

"John," retorted Mary, with a glance at her husband's shoes, "why do you put the skin of another calf upon your feet?"—Everybody's.

Norve.

A lady sent her cook to buy the Christmas turkey, but when the cook returned she had two chickens.

"Mirtha," the lady said, "I told you to get turkey, not chicken."

"I know, muma, but I don't like turkey."

A Competent Witness.

A friend of the family had been summoned to testify, much against his will, as to certain domestic disturbances in a Chicago household.

"You saw these blows administered?" asked counsel.

"Yes, sir."

"Did you see the beginning of the quarrel between this man and his wife?"

"I did."

"When was it?"

"Six years ago."

"Six years ago! How is that possible?"

"I was a guest at their wedding," said the witness.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Lincoln's Way.

Lincoln at the commencement of the war was much abused by one of his generals. He was even openly insulted by this man. In his splendid way he put up with that mistreatment imperturbably. But when the thing kept getting more and more flagrant his friends told him he was suffering more than was reasonable or right. But Lincoln only smiled his odd, sad, humorous smile.

"I'll hold his horse for him," he said, "if he will only bring us success."

SHORT SERMON FOR A SUNDAY HALF-HOUR

By Rev. John Triplett.

The Hope That Sustains Christians.

I know when I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day.—II. Timothy, I., 12.

If Paul had been a millionaire these words would not appeal to the great mass of Christian people. The average Christian earns his bread by toiling amid privations and temptations. In this fierce struggle for existence he is often crucified on unseen crosses and caused to fight many a silent battle. Hence the faith of the average Christian is often temporarily eclipsed by his trials and then it is hard for him to say, "I know whom I have believed."

Now Paul was a penniless, hard working Christian, and he uttered these words under the most trying circumstances. After enduring the hardships of three missionary journeys, he was now in a dismal Roman dungeon awaiting his execution! If he had been like many brethren of to-day we should find him complaining about the unjustness of his lot, and this comforting text would not have been. But Paul forgot his suffering, in his sympathy for Timothy. He wrote the last letter of his life to comfort a sorrowful heart. Such was the faith of Paul; he trusted Christ until that day when the sea shall give up its dead and every man shall receive his reward.

But Timothy was like many Christians of the past and present. For instance, the prophet Elijah, after fleeing eighty miles to escape the wrath of Jezebel, flung himself beneath a juniper and sobbed to God to let him die. Then John the Baptist, while languishing in the prison of Herod, began to wonder why God should treat him so. Had his ministry been false? And so he sent his disciples to the Master to ask, "Art thou the Messiah that was to come, or do we look for another?" And these dark days of doubt and uncertainty are common to every Christian. Sometimes temptations entice us; we fall and with bitterness we cry, "The good that I would do, I do not; and the evil that I would not do, that I do."

Now the anguish and doubt suffered by so many Christians are occasioned by failing to distinguish between the questions, "Are you saved?" and "Are you free from hardships?" "Are you sinless?" and "Are you as good as Paul (or someone else)?"

Once a man said to me, "Well, I can't believe that if I were a Christian that God would treat me so." He has lost his wife and only child. I replied, "Don't you know that these trials are necessary to develop the Christian grace? Is it not the night—the dark night—that brings out the stars? Now how could you manifest that sweet grace of forgiveness unless the Lord first permitted an enemy to do you some injustice?" Hence it is self-evident that the question "Are you a Christian?" does not mean "Are you free from hardships?" For God gives every Christian some cross to bear. That is the Father's way of conforming the Christian to the image of His Son—by following "in His steps."

Nor does the question "Are you a Christian?" mean "Are you sinless?" For Paul sinned, and "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." "None are righteous—no, not one." To be saved from the guilt and power of sin does not mean to be proof against sinning.

And lastly, "Are you a Christian?" does not mean, "Are you as good as some one else?" Salvation is not sanctification. One is an act, the other is a process. We are saved from the guilt of sin, as soon as we put our trust in Christ; but it requires a lifetime to become sanctified—i. e., to become holy, to get the blemish out and the goodness into us. In other words, becoming "good" is a development, a slow, gradual, imperceptible process, like a brook gradually becoming a mighty Hudson, a grain of corn bringing forth a full era at harvest, or the lump of leaven that gradually permeated the whole bowl of meat. Therefore, Christians should mourn because they are not as good as some one else. God is not through with them yet!

Hence, when Christians like Elijah, John the Baptist and Timothy, lack the assurance that they are God's children, the fault is not with God, but with them. They have lost sight of His promises as they grope among life's tribulations. They look down when they ought to look up!

THE SHEPHERD PSALM.

Nov. 15, '08—(Psalm 23.)

If an audience of a thousand people was asked to mention the most beautiful portion of the entire Bible, the vast majority would name the 23rd Psalm. Probably this psalm and the Lord's Prayer are known by heart to more people than any other section of the Scriptures. This shepherd psalm has a grip on the heart of the race. It is equally appropriate at the cradle and the grave; it falls in inspiring accents from the lips of childhood, it trembles triumphantly on the lips of old age. There is no rank or condition in life to which it does not appeal. All will agree that if language was ever inspired, the 23rd psalm is inspired. Criticism devout, and criticism demonic never assaulted this great psalm. It is pre-eminent among the poetic gems of all ages.

Notice the position of the psalm. It follows the 22nd and it precedes the 24th and if you will take the trouble to look it up, you will find that it bears a relation to both. For the 22nd psalm is the psalm of the cross, and the 24th psalm is the psalm of the throne; the one speaks of crucifixion and the other of coronation. It is appropriate therefore that the 23rd psalm should picture a holy life, following soul crucifixion and antedating glory.

Does Not Mean Death.

Do not make the mistake of thinking that the valley of the shadow of death refers to the exit out of life. For you observe that on the other side of that experience, tables are spread in the presence of enemies, the head is anointed with oil, the cup runneth over, and goodness and mercy follow "all the days of my life."

Many a soul passes through the valley and shadow of death a good many years before he dies. If you have never had an experience compared with which death would be welcome, you have something before you that will test every faculty of your mind, every power of your soul. John Bunyan was a good interpreter of the 23rd psalm. In his Pilgrim's Progress he makes Christian walk through the valley of the shadow of death, very soon after he starts upon his pilgrimage. It was a terrific experience, but he came out of the darkness to live among men for many years. "The valley of the shadow of death" far behind. When Christian went out of earthly life there was no gloom nor shadow, but a shining pathway and choir of welcoming angels. No, David does not refer to the change which men call death in this psalm. He calls it the "shadow" of death and a shadow never harmed anyone. The shadow of a serpent never bit anyone. The shadow death may be dark and portentous, ghosts and hobgoblins to the terrified fancy may crowd the gloom, but they are shadows that dissolve like the baseless fabric of a dream—in the morning.

True View of Life.

It seems a little singular that right into the heart of this wonderful psalm such a gloomy picture should be projected. Here we have green pastures, still waters, paths of righteousness, prepared tables, anointing with oil, cups running over, goodness and mercy all the days of life. And we have also "the valley and the shadow of death." But is not that after all, a true view of life? Men are not altogether like sheep, lying down in a fat pasture, getting ready for slaughter. If you look carefully you will find in this psalm, not a sheep at all, but David, (v. 1 & 2) "I—My—Me." You will find the backslider (v. 3). "He restoreth my soul." You will find the traveler, (v. 4) "Thy rod and staff." You will find the warrior, (v. 5) "Mine enemies." You will find the priest, (v. 5) "Anointest my head with oil." You will find the permanent resident "dwell in the house of the Lord forever." In other words, the Shepherd leads us, green pastures are beneath us, still waters are beside us, a prepared table is before us, enemies are around us, goodness and mercy are following us, the house of the Lord is awaiting us, but to reach it somewhere on the journey we shall have to pass through the valley of the shadow of death. Where there is so much brightness there must of necessity be deep shadows.

Best Things Come Afterwards.

And lest anyone should shrink and hesitate about that experience, observe that the best things in life come afterwards. On this side of the valley are green pastures and still waters, experiences of comfort and undisturbed, untried repose; on the other side are banquets and anointings and feasting, right in the presence of conquered foes, cups running over, eternal habitations occupied. Jesus Christ himself had His Gethsemane on the way to the throne, and no man is prepared to look with a level head and a correct judgment at life until he has passed through a midnight struggle with Jacob or a Gethsemane struggle with Christ. Christ went to the cross as a conqueror, but in Gethsemane he sweat blood.

He was the true shepherd of the sheep.

Design for a Smart Skeleton Bodice With High Collar—A Stylish Little Dress For Best Wear That is Easy to Make—A Graceful Directoire Negligee.

BY JULES THEROW.
The newest models ring in a variation upon the skeleton blouse that is as unusual as it is attractive. There is no cut-out at the neck to accommodate the customary yoke, and the collar is high. The sleeves, however, are ended as soon as possible, after accentuating the shoulder line, requiring therefore, an under-sleeve of some sheer dainty material. An underblouse is also necessary, as the side fronts of the blouse are cut away and replaced by little bands of silk, velvet ribbon or fancy braid. In the design pictured the skeleton of crisp grass linen embroidered with silk threads and inset with star-shaped medallions of fillet lace. This trimming is put on to simulate the outline of a V-shaped fish. Little ruchings of fine ecru lace finish the wide-armholes, while the underblouse and sleeves are of fine wash neck. The sleeves are shirred both around the arm and down the centre of the upper part.

A natural straw mushroom sailor accompanies the blouse, this being decorated with bows of Alice blue silk ribbon and silk roses.

Sheer lawn and very fine machine made embroidery could not be more effectively combined than in this smart little dress for best wear. This skirt is laid in rather broad box plaits and these are run with bands of insertion from the waistline to the top of the hem, or rather a dainty ruffle of embroidered linen which takes the place of a hem and is stitched on under a heading of embroidery insertion to match.

Each row of the trimming, both upon the skirt and blouse had the lawn cut out from underneath tempting one to use a slip of delicate color under the design.

The blouse has the sleeves cut in with it and these are laid in a series of inch-wide tucks from shoulder to elbow where there are rows of embroidery and a tiny ruching of the same. Quite a deep yoke of plain tucked lawn is given a fanciful shape by an artistic arrangement of the broderie and a tiny ruching of the outlining band of insertion overrunning the shoulders down the centre of the sleeves. This is further embellished with little bows of white satin or black velvet ribbon.

The belt is made of white satin ribbon, very wide, and knotted in a plain sailor bow at the back. The ends may be fringed or finished with silk fringe the color of the slip upon which the latter dress is mounted.

However uncertain may be the status of the Directoire gown for street wear, certainly this mode in negligees has the fullest approval of Dame Fashion. The Directoire negligee is a most capricious little garment, and indescribably simple in effect.

Delicate corn colored silk crepe is employed for the model illustrated and the yoke and sleeves are trimmed with an embroidery of very fine soutache braid in the same shade. Outlining the whole are bands of heavy guipure lace.

The neck is cut round and very low. This is the only trying feature about the negligee, far though it is the neck finish most affected by French women, who employ all sorts of devices to make it becoming, it is difficult for the 'average woman to essay.

Fillet laces have assumed quite an important place in the world of lingerie, many of the latest dressing saques and tea gowns combining these decorations with softer Valenciennes and exquisite hand embroideries. They are all right for the non-washable garments but even their infinite variety does not render them wholly desirable for other materials.

With the fillets and Valenciennes insertions are combined bebe crochet galons and Cluny, while used to some extent, is not popular upon strictly house gowns as in times gone by.

Cat Breeding as a Business.

Many instances illustrating the possibilities of cat breeding as a business for women could be given but I shall confine myself to briefly reciting the experience of one lady in New Jersey as showing what intelligent breeding, hard work and fair dealing will accomplish. When but a girl in her teens this young lady made up her mind to take up long-haired Persians, but was not in a position to put up the necessary money to start, so keeping her own counsel and biding her time she patiently waited for an opportunity to present itself. Finally in looking over the "For Sale" "ads" in a New York paper she saw a little one of long haired Persian kittens advertised at a very low price, and noting the name and address she started for New York the next morning, ostensibly for the purpose of purchasing a spring hat with certain money her father had given her. That evening she returned home with a kitten but without the hat. Her next step was to sell a finely educated parrot which she had raised and invest the proceeds in a female cat or two. This gave her a start, from which, unaided, she has built up a reputation second to that of no other fancier of America or England, and now sole owner of a large and successful cattery.

Some Hints for Women Folks.

If you want to find out if the lemon, vanilla and other extracts you use are pure or not, just pour out about a teaspoonful in a small dish. Then strike a match and see if it will burn. If it all burns up clean, it is pure, but if it does not it is adulterated and takes a good deal more when you use it.

If you use a dash churn to churn with and the cream splashes out around the handles, take a piece of 2x4 about four inches long and bore a hole in it, just a little larger than the handle of the dash. Then on one side bevel the edge of the hole just bored and leave this side up on lid of churn. Try it and see how much cream splashes out now.

To fry or stew sliced potatoes, take two tablespoonfuls of lard and put in skillet. When hot put in your potatoes and for a skillet full, add one-half to three-fourths pint of boiling water. Cover them up and let cook awhile, then stir and season and when done you will have nicer and healthier potatoes to eat, than if cooked with lard alone. It also saves lard.—F. B. Adair

Boarding House Philosophy.

General Dabney H. Maury tells in his "Recollections of a Virginian," of an old lady in Fredericksburg who was reduced to taking in boarders in order to make both ends meet. On one occasion of peculiar stress, the larder was so empty that the good lady took to her bed and summoned her servant, "Nancy," she said, "there's nothing in the house for my boarders to eat except mush. But give them that. If they are Christians they will accept it in resignation and thankfulness. And if they are not Christians it is a deal too good for them."

A Cook-Book Mark.

To keep the cook book open at the right place, a band made of elastic, one inch wide, will be found useful. When not in use it may be strapped across the closed book.

Desperate Coughs

Dangerous coughs. Extremely perilous coughs. Coughs that rasp and tear the throat and lungs. Coughs that shake the whole body. You need a regular medicine, a doctor's medicine, for such a cough. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Any good doctor will tell you that a medicine like Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cannot do its best work if the bowels are constipated. Ask your doctor if he knows anything better than Ayer's Pills for correcting this sluggishness of the liver.

Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Tickling, tight Coughs, can be surely and quickly loosened with a prescription druggists are dispensing everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so very, very different than common cough medicines. No Opium, no Chloroform, absolutely nothing harsh or unsafe. The tender leaves of a harmless, lung healing mountainous shrub gives the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. These leaves have the power to calm the most distressing Cough and to soothe and heal the most sensitive bronchial membrane. Mothers should for safety's sake alone, always demand Dr. Shoop's. It can with perfect freedom be given to the youngest babes. Test it yourself! and see. Sold by J. S. Banker, Genoa.

The battles of liberty and of right are not all fought with the sword, and the noblest victories are oftentimes peaceful and bloodless ones, but the same heroic attributes are required to win peaceful victories that sustain the soldier in the hour of battle.—Matthew Arnold.

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the Stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve." When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by J. S. Banker, Genoa.

In an address at Yassar college Joseph Jefferson once said that a national theater in this country is an impossibility. Politics, said he, would sooner or later get into it and ruin it. "They would have a Republican tragedian and a Democratic comedian," he added.

Here is Relief for Women.

If you have pains in the back, Urinary, Bladder or Kidney trouble, and want a certain pleasant herb cure for woman's ills, try Mother Gray's Australian-Leaf. It is a safe and never-failing regulator. At Druggists or by mail 50 cents. Sample package free. Address, The Mother-Gray Co., LeRoy, N. Y.

He is doubtless the same man who struck Genoa one day last week, attracting attention by his costume of kilts and plaid, and Highlander cap, and carrying bagpipes surmounted with a small American flag.

Apple Evaporator Burned.

The apple evaporator in Genoa, owned and operated by C. J. Wheeler, was destroyed by fire Saturday evening at about 6 o'clock. The building part of which had been built a long time, was situated near the railroad station and stood close to the tracks of the N. Y., A. & L.

Manager Frank Gillespie and his force of helpers had finished the work for the season at 5:30 o'clock, excepting the last of the apples which had to be put through the bleachers. The storage tank of the gasoline engine was empty, and as the work would require but a very few minutes to finish it, Mr. Gillespie thought he would simply fill the small cup of the engine with gasoline. He had turned some from the large can into a bottle and was pouring it from the bottle into the engine cup, when suddenly the stuff ignited, and the room seemed to be filled with flames. Mr. Gillespie's clothing caught fire and his hands and arms were quite badly burned. That he was not very seriously burned was due to the prompt action of Wm. Warren who seized a large canvas sack and smothered the fire in his clothing. A lighted lantern which had been in use about the building stood not far from the engine.

Twenty people were employed in the evaporator and they had all left except four. The building was soon blazing and in a short time had burned to the ground. A large crowd soon gathered, but they could only keep the fire from spreading to other buildings. Fortunately there was only a light breeze. The house and barn of Mrs. Ellen Rundell caught fire two or three times but it was soon extinguished. The roofs of nearby houses were damp from the recent storm, thus lessening the danger.

Mr. Wheeler was sick Saturday and was in bed when the fire broke out. Had he been at the evaporator, he feels that he could have kept it from burning. There is a large water tank in his residence, which is on the hill just above the burned building, and a pipe connection extends from this to the evaporator, where there was an attachment of 50 feet of 1/2 inch hose. It seems probable that had this been used on the start the fire could have been checked.

Mr. Wheeler came to Genoa nine years ago and had conducted business in this building during that time, having built a large addition and made many improvements in the last few years. He estimates his loss at about $3,000. Besides the building and equipments, there were three tons of evaporated apples and one ton of jelly destroyed. A shipment of several tons of apples was made on Saturday.

Call at Mrs. Wright's millinery, Genoa, and inspect her line of hats, feathers, pins, etc.

How Saving Leads to Success

Saving is the first principle of all success. It creates independence, gives a young man standing, fills him with vigorous purpose, stimulates him to do his best and be somebody in the world.

A bank deposit represents more than money saved. It stands for character, purpose, achievement, ambition. It is the best passport a young man can have to the good will of those who can help him a long in the world.

If you haven't already started to save your money, begin now. With one dollar and a determination to succeed, you can lay a sure foundation for future prosperity. Let us help you.

President Treasurer.

A Different Man

Grucher was not over-dropping. He was sitting in his own particular chair in his own library reading the newspaper, when the young people came into the next room. If they supposed that a few Spanish leather strings and fringes in the way of portieres were going to prevent their voices from being heard, that was their affair.

It was young Brophie, and he was calling on Annette Grucher. Annette had a good many callers, but young Brophie was about the worst of the lot, according to the old man. His collars got on Grucher's nerves, and his hostility was an abomination in his sight. The creases in young Brophie's trousers made Grucher's brow crease and his nose to wrinkle, and as for his conversation—

"Mush, slush and drivel," said Grucher, when he got Mrs. Grucher alone that evening. "I never heard anything like it in my life. Anything more maudlin, insane and idiotic you can't conceive. I could hardly keep from breaking out and telling him my candid opinion of him. If I thought Annette hadn't any more sense than to pick out a pinhead young snipe like that I'd—I'd—" Grucher clinched his fists and gurgled.

"You mustn't be so hard on him, my dear," said Mrs. Grucher. "I think he's a very nice young man, and I'm glad that you didn't hurt his feelings. Annette would have been so mortified, poor child."

"I don't call him a young man," growled Grucher. "He's a young whifet. He hasn't an idea in his head beyond dressing himself up like a tailor's dummy. They're all alike for that matter. There isn't a sensible one in the lot. It makes me sick to see them, and crazy mad to hear them. It's nearly twelve o'clock now and he's still there. I'm going down to turn him out."

"You're not going to do anything of the kind," said Mrs. Grucher. "And Grucher don't."

The next morning as Grucher was sitting in his office, grinding as he loved to grind, the boy brought a slip of paper and laid it on his desk. Grucher picked it up and scowled at it. Then he said, "Show him in."

"Good morning, sir," said young Brophie, pleasantly.

"Good morning," returned Grucher, unpleasantly. "Who told you to come in here? You're not from Cull & Fisher, are you?"

"Yes, sir," replied young Brophie. "They sent me over here to see if this little matter in dispute could be arranged. I think it can. Can you spare me a few minutes?"

Grucher nodded. The young man seated himself and whisked some papers from the breast pocket of his coat and snapped one from the encircling rubber band with an admirable certainty of motion. Grucher watching him, noticed that the young man's collar was at least an inch lower than he had ever seen it before, and that the young man's dress while neat and well fitting was not conspicuously in the height of fashion. Nor were the trousers' creases as aggressive as usual. In fact, the young man's clothes were those of a person of action. So was his manner.

He was unfolding the paper when Grucher waved it aside. "How do you think it's going to be arranged?" he asked in an ominous tone.

"By a check," said young Brophie with a smile.

"For what amount?"

"For the amount in full," replied the young man.

"Mr. Brophie," said the old man, "if you can be of any service to your firm outside of this office I'd advise you to get busy. I shall not pay one cent of your claim. Not one cent. Do you understand that?"

"I understand what you say, of course," said young Brophie, "but you promised to spare me a few minutes, and I'm going to prove to you that you can't in fairness do anything else than I propose. I understand your view of the matter and I see clearly that it is based on an imperfect understanding of the facts in the case. To begin with, your order. Do you care to look it over?"

"I know what it is," said Grucher. "And I know what you people furnished. I think, too, that if Cull & Fisher have any proposition to make to me they might send a representative—" He was going to say something offensive, but meeting young Brophie's steady gaze he thought better of it and said instead, "Well, go ahead."

Young Brophie laid down his papers and entered into an explanation of the misunderstanding. He talked for about five minutes, verifying his points by references to certain schedules and correspondence and a blue print. When he had finished Grucher reflected a minute or two.

"Then the engineer was at fault?" he asked.

"Most certainly," replied young Brophie. "He miscalculated the expansion of the trusses. I figured that the only possible explanation was an error of that nature, so I went out there this morning to make sure. There you have the measurements. You can hold your clients accountable for the loss, but we must look to you, don't you see?"

"I see," said Grucher. "So you dug this up, did you?"

It occurred to me said the young man, modestly.

"You must have got up pretty early to be out here this morning," said Grucher.

"Not very," replied young Brophie. "I caught a freight out to Battenberg at 4.35, and walked over to the bridge."

"You couldn't have got much sleep then, judging from the time you left my house," observed Grucher with a smile. "Well," he continued, "I suppose I'll have to pay up. I may not be able to get it back, but I'll have to take chances on that. So your with Cull & Fisher? Well, I think Cull & Fisher have got a pretty good man."

To Mrs. Grucher that evening Grucher said: "I guess I was mistaken in sizing up that young Brophie. He was in the office to-day on a matter of business and I think he's got a considerable amount of sense and energy about him. But why does he want to talk such rot to Annette? And why does he wear such foolish clothes when he comes around here?"

"My dear," said Mrs. Grucher. "I suppose you've forgot how silly you appeared when you were calling on me."

"There may be something in that," admitted Grucher.

The Fisherman's Paradise.

The fisherman's paradise in the United States is found at Miami, Fla. There are other tarpon grounds than Biscayne Bay, but anglers who have found their way to the southernmost point of Florida year after year with flattering regularity, and some of whom have landed from five to ten huge 150 or 200 pounders in one day contend that no such angling sport can be found elsewhere in the world, nor so many fish as in the waters which lap the shores of the various keys which dot the bay and the Gulf Stream. There are over 600 kinds of fish between Miami and Key West, and 150 of them are known as game fish. One of the fascinations of the gamey tarpon is that he is mysterious. He comes in schools whence no one seems to know. He is sighted sometimes as early as January, but, although he jumps and mockingly lashes his six feet or so of shining, silvery body in the eyes of the eager sportsman he refuses to notice the most tempting bait. In February he begins to take the hook, and in this month anglers begin to arrive on the scene and to engage their boats and guides for the season.

Home of the Cornocob Pipe.

Franklin county, Mo., is the birthplace of the "Missouri meersch-schaum," as those persons who desire to give it a more aristocratic name, have christened the cornocob pipe. Of cornocob pipes during the year 1907, the country exported 22,608,488. Besides these she sent out 912,000 pipe stems, 29,808 "cleaners," and 105,992 wooden pipes. In value, more than half as much as was realized from live stock or her grain exportations. Gasconade county shipped cob pipes to the number of 1,856,640, valued at $26,890, and showing a total shipment for the two counties of 24,465,125 such pipes.

John Milton's Cottage.

One of the best preserved historic country houses in all England is John Milton's cottage at Chalfont, St. Giles, to which the blind and ageing poet fled when the great plague swooped down on London. That was in July, 1665, and Milton had just finished "Paradise Lost" and received a five-pound note for it, with a promise of three more five-pound notes if the poem sold for editions of 1,300 copies each. The cottage stands at the top of the village, and it is in practically the same condition as when Milton left it. Here the poet received his distinguished guests during the latter part of his life.

Twilight.

The twilight is merely the top of the atmosphere tinged with the rays of the horizon-ridden sun. Small as the air-particles are in their isolated state, they cluster around the earth in such overwhelming abundance and crowd one another in such densely serried ranks that they shine through their depths under the far-reaching rays as an impenetrable solid surface might do. Illuminated by the direct beams of the rising or setting sun, it is seen from the regions below, this upper atmosphere gives us the phenomenon of twilight.

Green Hands.

Simply green—unripe—the most natural designation in the world. It was originally a nautical phrase, meaning the inferior sailors, or "boys" as they were called, the crew being divided into able seamen, ordinary seamen and "green" hands, or boys. The term had no reference to age, but referred merely to the skill or knowledge of the particular party.

Disastrous Reaction.

"I was awfully worried about Johnny when he had that last sick spell," said Mrs. Lapsing, "and when the doctor told me he was going to get well I went fairly delirious with joy."

ON THE IDEAL GUEST

RULES FOR BEHAVIOR WHICH WILL MAKE YOU WELCOME.

Etiquette Demands Consideration for the Hostess as Well as Pleasure for the Visitor—Do Not Make Demand of Servants.

There are rules for your behavior as a guest which the girl who goes a-visiting will do well to consider, says the Delineator.

Suppose we begin at the very beginning. You have been asked by letter for a short visit of a week or two. Be sure in answering it to repeat the days for which your hostess has asked you. This is the first rule on your part. Also state in your acceptance the train on which you arrive and, if you wish, add the train on which you will depart.

Whether or not you do the latter, never fail to do the former. Don't miss that train or change your mind and take another one.

See that your baggage gets on the train with you.

Attend to your baggage checks at the station yourself, unless you are met by a man of the family or a competent man servant who insists upon taking this duty upon himself.

It is best to give your checks to the baggage expressman who comes through the train, pay him and get a receipt.

Have the change in your pocket-book to pay for the trunk when it arrives at the house. Never borrow the money from someone in the house or let your hostess pay for it. There is no intimacy or even relationship between friends that will allow this.

From the moment you set foot in the house, whether the visit be for days or weeks, remind yourself over and over that all the things in it, from the telephone to the chambermaid are another person's property, and that you must ask permission for their use.

Do not make demands on the servants in the house. They have other duties. When they offer their services to you accept them graciously, but do not call the maid to fasten your gown fifteen minutes before dinner is served when she has to wait on the table.

Ask the hours of meals and be punctual. Write that in your mind in letters of fire. It makes no difference whether you are hungry or not, at the appointed hour, be at the table.

Do not bother your hostess by remaining at her side all the time. Let her go about her household duties or to her room for a brief rest, without following her around.

If you are visiting in a house where there are no servants, and where the house work is done by the family, then you should try in every way to be of help. It takes but a little tact to find out whether you are in the way or not, but you can at least make up your room and put away your clothes.

Wives of Stingy Husbands.

I wonder in how many households this scene takes place as "he" is leaving the breakfast table.

She—"I'll have to ask you for a little money before you go, dear. There are some things I've got to buy to-day."

He—"Why didn't you speak about it before? You know I'm always short at the end of the month."

She (tearfully)—"I put off asking you just as long as I could, Henry, but now I really can't wait any longer."

He (looking at the clock and pulling out his pocketbook)—"How much do you want?"

She (nervously)—"I—I don't exactly know. I have to get a pair of shoes—my feet are on the ground—and a hat for Mary and a toothbrush."

He (on edge)—"I've got to work. How much do you want? Five dollars?"

She (hastily)—"Oh, more than that."

He (savagely)—"Fifty?"

She (flushing and confused)—"Oh, no, no!"

He (taking a bill from his pocketbook)—"Well, here's ten; you'll have to make that do this time."

He grabs his hat and goes while she sits there trying to overcome the trembling that always makes her feel sick after she has nerved herself up to ask Henry for money. She really needed twenty-five but she could not have said it if her life had depended on it. She will go still longer before she asks for money again, because he always acts as if he hated to give it to her.—Harper's Bazar.

THE HIGHER LIFE

Selected Gems of Thought from Pious and Profane of All Ages.

The Word of the Gospel.

If we are to understand any given word of the gospel which Christ preached, it is imperative that we go back to Christ and find how He used it and what He meant by it as He spoke it to men. The result of such a study will almost invariably be a delicious and delightful surprise.—Rev. Edw. Smith, Methodist.

Our Holiest Hopes.

Oh, it means so much to be a man of faith! With faith, the power of God rushes in upon you! Whatever else you lose, do not lose faith! Keep on believing. Maintain this temper of confidence in the Unseen. Your best inspirations are there! Your holiest hopes are there.—Rev. H. P. Dewey, Presbyterian.

Mental Inheritance.

Our habits of thought are marked out by those who have gone before us. The brand of the skylark sings; so do the children of the poets. It was vain for the father of Blaise Pascal to lock up his mathematical instruments; nature had pointed the lad's eyes toward the stars.—Rev. Wallace Smith, Episcopal.

Focusing Our Powers.

The higher and more unselfish the end toward which we direct our lives the greater is the demand for intense and ceaseless concentration of our noblest powers. Focus your best powers upon the details of your life work. These may seem to be trifles; but remember the wise words of the painstaking artist, "Trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle."—Rev. M. Strykes, Methodist.

How to Obtain Faith.

The best way to get faith is through Christianity. Although salvation is not within the limits of any single creed or church, the easiest path to faith is Christianity. Philosophy, appealing only to the intellect, reaches but few; whereas, Christianity, appealing to the soul and the heart, reaches many. Moreover, it furnishes a grand leader, and people will always follow a leader.—Rev. Wallace Smith, Episcopal.

Cultivating Our Faith.

Maintain an uncompromising enmity toward the false, an inviolable friendship toward the true. Cultivate a practical faith in the living God. Accept Christ as your ideal and Redeemer. This is the hidden spring of self-heroism. It crowns a man's life with the truest success; and when the veil is lifted he shall stand erect in the light of a glorified manhood.—C. S. Patton, Presbyterian.

Relation of Love and Duty.

The phrase "love and duty" has become a proverb. In truth, though, the two are not widely separated from each other. "Duty is really only the expression of love. When we do our duty we are showing our love. A husband best manifests his love for his wife by living a life of loyalty to duty. If he failed to provide for her needs, all the words of love in the world could not atone for his neglect.—Rev. D. Burrell, Reformed.

Reaching out His Hand.

It is recorded that, when he healed the demoniac youth at the Mount of Transfiguration, "he took him by the hand and lifted him up." That hand of Christ's has raised many a drunkard and Magdelene out of the mire, has helped many a struggling and discouraged soul over the rough places of life, has opened the gate of heaven to a great multitude which no man can number. That hand is stretched out still. It is proffered to you. Will you have it?—Rev. Dr. Cadman, Congregationalist.

Where We find Beauty.

Beauty lies in symmetry and completeness; He is perfectly holy, without spot and blameless. Beauty Christ's justice, love and wisdom were all united in one. Beauty lies in conformity with moral law; He was holy, harmless and undefiled. Great is man's dignity, glorious his destiny! Bearing the image and superscription of the King, man may look with rapture upon His beautiful face and become consciously like God.—Rev. Ralph Tompkins, Unitarian.

What the World Thinks.

The world is heavy with its weight of woe, bleeding with its crushing burden of suffering and sorrow, and dying with grief because the "consolations of God" seem all but "too small." The problem of suffering is universal, and of vital concern to "laid and boor." The armies are legion, that find all the "uses of this world weary, stale, flat and unprofitable." Sick and weary, impatient and tired, unrefreshed and overburdened, lagging, and stumbling, goes this world with its increasing burden.—Rev. E. Lovett, Baptist.

Living in Harmony.

We find it impossible to comprehend the essential harmony between the purpose of God and the will of man. We can comfort ourselves that with the secret will of God we have nothing to do, with the revealed will of God we have much to do. We may rely upon it that every man forms a part in the Divine purpose. Life is a mystery, but life is not chaos. All true success lies in co-operating with God's revealed will. Doing this, we shall find at the last that we have helped to accomplish the architect's design, though we never have seen the complete plan.—Rev. E. M. Sovitt, Baptist.

Hands Age Rapidly.

A horrible revelation is made in a publication devoted to scientific matters. It is that hands age even more rapidly than faces. So where women make every effort to preserve the youthful aspect of their faces, they foolishly allow their hands to give them away. It is extremely disconcerting to think that the observant eye is not fixed on the face, or even on the telltale chin, but on the hands. There are ways, fortunately, by which their treachery can be circumvented, but precautions are more likely to be neglected in their case than in that of the face.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

Rum Victory in the Orient.

While the white races are humbly recognizing that they must learn over again the very thing they thought they knew best, the art of drinking, from Oriental Arabia and also learn from Oriental Arabia and Oriental India, how to make effective warfare against the worst foe of civilization, the drink curse, says Wilbur H. Craft in the New Voice. Let us contrast the wise adoption of total abstinence and Prohibition long since by these Oriental countries with the foolish and long-continued blundering of England and the United States under the mistaken policies of moderation and license. Hundreds of years ago, when drunkenness in England grew to be alarming, Christians and moralists cried out for the preaching of moderation as a cure, but the sermons and exhortations on this subject had no more effect on the rising tide of drink than the cry of a child on the beach would have on the incoming wave. Then the reformers organized moderation societies to aid the preachers, and fined members twenty-five cents whenever they got drunk, except on a holiday or at a wedding or a funeral or at the dedication of a church for the ordination of a preacher, or on some such occasion when a high degree of intoxication was considered not only permissible, but almost obligatory. These fines had no more effect on the rising tide than a pebble tossed on the beach by a band of children. Then the reformers said we must restrict the drinking by taxing it. They put on a low license, and it no more checked the rising tide than a mimic fort of sand thrown up by the children on the shore. Then they adopted high license, and this never decreased the consumption or the consequence of drink, although it sometimes consolidated, after the fashion of trusts, the smaller saloons. Such consolidation should no more be counted as a reduction than the consolidation of small shops in modern monopolies. Instead of learning Prohibition from these failures, new blunders in the permissive policy were perpetrated. Government ownership was tried centuries ago in England, and in vain. Whenever I think of Government ownership of the liquor traffic, I recall that King Canute, to teach a lesson to his flatterer courtiers, who talked to him as he were almost a God, had his throne placed upon the beach at low tide, and drawing a line with his scepter on the sand, exclaimed to the breakers, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther," but the waves paid no heed to his word, and swept in upon his throne until his courtiers found it necessary to lift it and run with the king for their lives. So Government ownership has never checked the mighty rising tide of drink in any country, and South Carolina, where it has had a most recent trial, is making desperate efforts to be rid of it as a curse which is dragging the Government into guilt without any compensating reduction of the evil. When all these things had failed in old England and New England, it was suggested, centuries before Bishop Potter's fizzled-out doxology saloon, that drunkenness of Church members was becoming so alarming and disgraceful that "the preachers should take charge of the taverns," and they did so, with the result that the laymen got as drunk as ever and the preachers got drunk, too. And so for centuries we have gone on pottering with ineffective experiments in moderation and license with the result that even in the United States, where these experiments have been most faithfully and abundantly tried, the consumption of liquors is now twenty gallons per capita greater than ever before, and in England, in many respects the foremost country of the world, the consumption and consequence of drink are unequalled save by France and Germany.

What was the course of Arabia and India when anciently confronted with the same problem? The increase of drunkenness? The leaders of religion and the leaders of Government said unitedly, "The way to stop it is to stop it. In the name of religion, in the name of Government, stop selling and stop drinking." And they stopped it, with no speak-easies or drug-stores left in the rear, and as a result to-day seven hundred million adherents of the Hindoo and Buddhist Mohammedan faiths are Prohibitionists and total abstainers, except a few thousand who have been corrupted by the white man's example as they come in contact with him in military and civil service, and in institutions of education. As Japan's unprecedented progress is due to her willingness to learn from other lands and even from other continents and races, so we may make great strides of social progress if we will learn from India and Arabia and other Orientals to prohibit the cursed drink traffic.

License on Condition.
Sheffield, England, has a saloon, one of the oldest in England, which received its original license on condition that for one week in each year its owner supply medicine free to any customer who may demand it. As a matter of fact, while the condition still stands, it has never been enforced.

Twenty-five thousand persons are annually arrested for drunkenness in London.

PIGMY CLIFF DWELLERS.

Tiny Roomed Houses Found by Explorer on Mexican Mountains.

Henry O. Flipper, an American archaeologist who has been searching in the Sierra Madres in the western part of the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, for homes of cliff dwellers, has found a house on Carabato Creek, a tributary of the Rio Chico, containing eighty-two rooms.

There are two or three houses on the Rio Chico and two near Guaynopa. Flipper says all are typical cliff dwellings similar to those in the United States. They are made of stone with mud cement and plastering of mud. The roof is the overhanging cliff.

The houses are from one to three stories in height, with walls about five inches thick. Mr. Flipper says the most remarkable thing was the thinness of the rooms, which were about five by five feet, with doors about 21 inches high by 12 inches wide. He believes that the cliff dwellers were a very small people.

The Pygmy Cattle of Samoa.

The Samoan Islands are the natural habitat of the most diminutive species of the variety of the genus bos now known to the naturalist. The average weight of the male of these hillputian cattle seldom exceeds 200 pounds, the average being not greater than 150 pounds. The females usually average about a hundred pounds larger and are very "stocky" built, seldom being taller than a Mexican sheep. These dwarf cattle are nearly all of the same color—reddish mouse color marked with white. They have very large heads as compared with their bodies, and their horns are of exceptional length.

King Cotton.

According to the common understanding, the expression "King Cotton," or "Cotton is King," was first used by the Hon. James H. Hammond in the year 1858. Hammond was from the State of South Carolina, the chief product of which Commonwealth was cotton. Mr. Hammond's idea was that cotton being the great commercial export of this country and the chief article of manufacture in Great Britain, was "King," and that no politics were allowable that crossed the grain of the "King's" interest.

Mary and the Kitten.

Little Mary was playing with her pet kitten. The kitten scratched her and she exclaimed: "You is a darned old kitty."

Her mother told her she must never utter such a naughty word again; and to be sure to impress it on her mind, washed her mouth out with soap and water.

The next day Mary was again playing with the kitten and again trouble arose, when she was heard to remark:

"You is just 'the same kind of a kitten you was yesterday!"

Rats Grind Of Their Teeth.

A curiously marked stone has been found at Colebrook, Devonshire, England, in the middle of a wheat rick, and geologists who have seen it express the opinion that the markings on the stone were caused by rats using it to grind their teeth, which otherwise grew to an inordinate length. Some rats have been known to starve owing to their teeth getting too long.

What He Could Have Done.

"Remember, witness," sharply exclaimed the attorney for the defense, "you are on oath!"

"There ain't no danger of my forgettin' it," replied the witness solemnly. "I'm tellin' the truth for nothin', when I could have made five dollars for lyin' for your side of the case, an' you know it."

"Please, Ma'am," replied Tommy, "they tumbled to the racket."

Dogs Give Valuable Service.

In the dog tests recently held at Nanterre, France, the dispatch-bearing competition was won by a Swiss dog and the searching for the wounded prize was awarded to a German dog. Thirty German police dogs have been ordered for St. Petersburg to guard the palaces against assassins.

The Largest Submarine.

According to a report from Paris, the largest submarine yet built will shortly be launched at Cherbourg. The vessel will be 200 feet long, with 625 tons displacement, and she will develop a mean speed of fifteen knots. She will probably, adds the report, have a crew equal in strength to that of a destroyer.

Shrinkage of Wood.

The shrinkage of wood from loss of moisture has been found by the United States forest service to range from seven to 26 per cent. of the dry volume in different species.

One of Dickens' Truths.

Throughout life our worst weaknesses and meannesses are usually committed for the sake of the people whom we most despise.—Charles Dickens.

All Keystones.

Every stone in an arch is a keystone, though the name is usually applied to the center one.

THE WOMAN WHO MAKES GOOD.

She Possesses Many Things, But Most of All, Common Sense.

The woman who makes good must be blessed with strength and health and an ambition to learn and take advantage of every opportunity that comes her way.

She must work with all her heart; play with all her heart; above all things avoiding indifference and the enemy to all progress—apathy.

She must elect the pleasure that will bring her the greatest joy, choose the work she is best fitted for.

Ordinary hard luck never ruins people. It puts them in a mood to learn a thing or two. Everybody makes mistakes. With some it is a regular occupation; but to make a mistake and wall about it is to make two.

Women often speak of their talents not being appreciated. "A talent is next to worthless unless one has the ability to get down to hard, plain, every-day grind.

Then, too, the woman who wins must learn to talk, but not to tell. There is an art—the most consummate art—in appearing absolutely frank to the butcher, the baker and the family cat and yet not reveal any of one's business affairs.

The woman who wins must be able to hold all and hear all, yet betray it by neither word nor look; by injudicious defense no more than by overt treachery; by anger at a malicious accusation no more than by a smile at an egregious mistake. To be able to do this requires a rare combination of tact and self-respect. One cannot just slide along in business and win promotion and more salary. A knowledge of the business is necessary to show results.

QUEEN HAS UNIQUE BUNGALOW.

Gothic Door of Alexandra's Residence Is Half of a Rowboat.

London.—Queen Alexandra has a unique bungalow. It is in Norfolk down by the beach of Snettisham, a quaint watering place of 15,000 people. The beach, a favorite with the queen, is crowded in the summer season with holidaymakers, tourists and others. The Gothic door or main entrance to the bungalow is nothing else than a row boat cut in half. The outer walls are of bright yellow cast stones brought from the Snettisham pits and the blocks are laid in the rough with numerous projections.

There are two main rooms, one for the queen and another for the attendants, and between them is a small lobby, which also gives access to the office. Around the queen's apartment runs a five-foot high dado of dark stained vertical boards and above the cemented walls are encrusted with stones of various hues and mussel, cockle and other shells from the beach.

Concerning Manners.

One of the worst faults to which young children are liable consists in interrupting the conversation of older people. Another tendency which brings the blush of shame to a mother's brow is that which children have of contradicting the statements of their elders. This is so strong a habit with many children that it is only necessary for a mother to make a statement involving statistics to elicit the ever ready "Oh, no; it was only three times," or "only two miles." Nor is it confined to young children, but is quite as common, and much more shameful among grown boys and girls. If taken in time, this should not be difficult to correct, but the first step must be on the part of the parent, who must take the greatest care to be truthful.

She Taught a King.

Miss Mary Woodman of Woburn, Mass., was instructor to the late King Carlos of Portugal, in English, history and painting. She has in her possession of a number of mementoes given her by the family and when she left Portugal she was promised a title of nobility should she ever return.
