Interesting Items That Our Correspondents Have Gathered For TRIBUNE Readers.

Sherwood.

Oct. 5—Work began at the evaporator last Thursday. Nearly all the help came from Sodus.

The neighbors and friends of Mrs. George Brewster gave her a canned-fruit shower last Friday evening. One day last week she heard a terrible crash in the cellar and upon investigation it was found that the swing shelf containing her fruit had fallen and about seventy-five cans were broken.

Louis Hopkins of Mottville was a caller in town last Sunday.

Eugene Brewster, wife and son Karl and Samuel Bowen of Geneva and Miss Cora Bullock of Oswego were visiting friends in town last week.

Wesley Georgia has gone to Cortland for the winter. Mrs. Georgia is visiting friends in Auburn.

Mrs. D. Hawley and daughters of Aurora were guests at George Brewster's last Friday and Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Ward were over-Sunday guests at his mother's. Miss Lydia King of Philadelphia arrived last week at her sister's, Mrs. John Morrison. She will spend some time here.

Mrs. Eva Slocum spent last week with Mrs. Fred Slocum.

Pierre Bran of San Francisco, Cal., and Dr. Susan G. Otis of Auburn were guests at the home of Stephen Otis last week.

East Venice.

Oct. 6—John Smith and wife of East Genoa visited at Frank Young's Sunday.

J. A. Mack is painting at Earl McAllister's.

Fay Teeter drove to Union Springs Saturday last.

Mrs. Wm. Bill and children, Clayton and Rachel, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Whitten.

Perry Hodge, who has been quite sick with the grip, is improving.

Mrs. Seymour Weaver of Genoa and Mrs. Fred Reeve of Auburn called at Fay Teeter's Saturday afternoon.

Frank Huff and wife spent Sunday at Casper Nettleton's.

Louis Lester and wife drove to Cayuga lake Sunday.

Miss Lena Teeter spent Saturday night and Sunday with Miss Anna Breen.

A pain prescription is printed upon each 25c. box of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. Ask your Doctor or Druggist if this formula is not complete. Head pains, womanly pains, pains anywhere get instant relief from a Pink Pain Tablet. J. S. Banker, Genoa.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites should always be kept in the house for the following reasons:

First—Because, if any member of the family has a hard cold, it will cure it.

Second—Because, if the children are delicate and sickly, it will make them strong and well.

Third—Because, if the father or mother is losing flesh and becoming thin and emaciated, it will build them up and give them flesh and strength.

Fourth—Because it is the standard remedy in all throat and lung affections.

No household should be without it.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl St., New York

Venice.

SEPT. 30—Robert Armstrong and wife were in Auburn last Thursday. Willis Hoskins and wife of Ensenore visited at C. D. Divine's last Thursday.

J. C. Misher and family and Mrs. W. Boothe spent Sunday with friends in Ledyard.

J. L. Manchester, who has been under the doctor's care for some time, is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Divine and Mr. and Mrs. Penn Purdy visited at Austin Tabor's Saturday.

Mrs. John Taylor is spending a few weeks with Mrs. Boothe. Mr. Taylor was here for an over-Sunday visit.

Seymour Parks was in Auburn over Sunday, also John O'Hara.

Henry Purdy and wife visited at Edwin Fessenden's in King Ferry recently.

Oct. 6—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mann of Moravia visited at Robert Armstrong's Sunday.

Miss Bonker spent Sunday at her home in Auburn.

Mrs. Seymour Parks of Auburn is with her mother, Mrs. Boothe for a time. Wm. Parks was here over Sunday.

Chas. Bardeen remains quite poorly.

Mr. and Mrs. Hicks were in Auburn Saturday to attend the funeral of the latter's grandmother, Mrs. Fassett, Mrs. Hicks remaining until Sunday.

North Lansing.

Oct. 6—Mrs. May Pierce Darling and little son DeForest started from Ithaca last Thursday evening for their new home in the state of Washington, 3,500 miles away. Two cards have been received from her on the way. They expected to reach the end of the long journey on Monday night, where Mr. Darling will meet them.

Last Sunday evening the Rev. K. F. Richardson preached the last of a series of four sermons on the intermediate state.

Andrew Brink is still very sick.

Miss Laura Teeter has been quite sick since she returned from Auburn.

There will be Sabbath school at the usual time at the M. E. church next Sunday, but no preaching service, it being Conference Sunday.

We wonder where the stuff comes from that intoxicates. We are in a no-license town. There is no open hotel and still men are seen on the streets reeling. There are some things disgraceful and some places where men gather that should be "cleaned out."

Quite a number of friends are expected soon from Michigan, children and grandchildren of Dana Bower and wife.

Ledyard.

Oct. 5—Jack Frost visited us for the first time on Friday night. A number of farmers have fitted their ground and sowed their wheat since the rain of Monday night.

Both evaporators are running, each operating three machines. Charles Veley has two young ladies from Wayne county assisting him and Mr. Lamb brought two young gentlemen from the same place.

George and Fannie Kirkland, who have been under the doctor's care, are able to be out again.

Charles Avery and family returned from Spokane on Saturday. Charles says New York state is hard to beat. All are glad to welcome them back.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Horace Avery, an eleven pound boy.

Mr. Annable preached his last sermon here on Sunday, as he does not expect to return. His parishioners wish him success wherever he may locate.

Five Corners.

Oct. 6—The much needed rain came after awhile, but not enough to replenish the wells and cisterns.

Dr. A. Rosecrans has not been as well for a few days past.

Harry Curtis is spending some time at the home of his uncle, Andrew Brink, at North Lansing.

John Rosecrans of Auburn recently visited his brother, Dr. A. Rosecrans.

Miss Florence Todd of the Union Springs high school was home from Friday night until Monday morning with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Todd.

We are glad to note that DeAlton, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hunt, who has been critically ill with the whooping cough is recovering nicely.

Mrs. Wm. Stanton and daughter Ruth were last Sunday guests of her mother, Mrs. Hannah Stevenson, and sister, Mrs. Lillian McBride.

Myrtle, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Snushall, is under the care of Dr. Hatch of King Ferry.

The Sunday School association is to be held at the Presbyterian church here next week Wednesday, Oct. 14. There will be afternoon and evening services.

Henry Barger and daughter Iva of Ludlowville were last Sunday guests of his parents, C. G. Barger and wife. They made the trip with Iva's little pony and cart which has been presented to her.

James Curtis and wife of Groton were last Sunday guests of his parents, George Curtis and wife.

Louis Barger, wife and two daughters, Lula and Mary of Geneva and Mrs. Reuben Gee of Ithaca are spending this week with C. G. Barger and wife.

C. G. Barger had the misfortune to fall from the store steps last week Tuesday and dislocated his shoulder. Dr. Hatch of King Ferry and Dr. Cuddeback of Aurora soon replaced it.

Floyd Young and wife are occupying the rooms back of the McBride store.

Clyde Mead and Harry Mallison are working at the salt plant.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Shangle leave to-day (Tuesday) for their new home in Virginia. Their many friends regret their leaving and they will be greatly missed in society and in the neighborhood. They were always ready and willing to assist in church work and in sickness none are better. We wish them success and hope some day to have them return to their place here. Perhaps they may send a letter to THE TRIBUNE so that their friends may hear from them.

Couldn't Expect More.

Edyth—"He is just too handsome for anything, but they say he drinks and gambles terribly and has been divorced three times."

Mayme—"Oh well, you can't expect all the virtues in one man."

Lewis Atwater and wife of Scipioville spent Sunday with his brother, A. W. Atwater and family.

Mrs. C. F. Weyant of Cortland visited her son, Fred Weyant, and family last week.

W. A. Counsell and family are moving in with Mr. A. H. Smith.

Miss Dill of Union Springs was the guest of Miss Antoinette Bradley over Sunday.

Moses Tilton and wife are visiting their son at Ellsworth.

Mrs. Clark of Ithaca is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Birmingham.

Miss Elizabeth Stephenson has returned to Ithaca.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson and daughter of Interlaken called on Miss M. E. Lewis on Sunday last.

Venice Center.

Oct. 5—It is expected there will soon be a new enterprise started in town. Mosher and Tuttle are preparing to put up a cider mill.

Frank Tuttle went to Belltown Sunday.

Peter Whitbeck of Savannah made a flying trip through this vicinity recently. He was looking after apples.

Warren Beardsley and wife visited friends in Summerhill recently, also at Five Corners on Sunday last.

Carroll Brightman and wife of Auburn were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Horton, on Sunday.

West Venice.

Oct. 6—This is fine weather for the farmers to get their fall work done. The threshing machines are busy threshing buckwheat.

Mr. and Mrs. John King of Webster City, Iowa, and Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Cook of Poplar Ridge were Sunday guests of J. W. Cook and family.

Mr. and Mrs. King expect to start for their Western home Thursday.

J. W. Cook has been a sufferer from rheumatism for the past two months.

The teacher had, as she thought, fully explained the importance of perspiration to the juvenile class. "Now, Clarence," she queried, "if the pores of your skin got filled up what would happen?"

"I'd bust," answered Clarence. Exchange.

Lansingville.

A chicken-pie social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bissell Friday night. The proceeds were $12.

Charles Quigley and family of Syracuse visited his mother, Mrs. Cyrenus Reynolds, this week. They came in their automobile. Lizzie Quigley, who has been visiting her brother returned with them.

James Castelin's children have the whooping cough.

An Important Meeting

Of the lecturers and Grange workers of New York state has been called by A. B. Kattamier, president of the Ontario County Grange Lecturers' association, which will be held in Atwater hall, Canandaigua, N. Y., Tuesday, Oct. 20.

The object of the meeting is to increase the efficiency of the Grange lecturer's programs for 1909. Hints and plans will be presented and discussed and the following officers of the State Grange will be present and give short addresses: Master F. N. Godfrey, Olean; Secretary W. N. Giles, Skaneateles; Lecturer S. J. Lowell, Fredonia; Flora Mrs. P. S. Aldrich, Palmyra; Ceres Miss Eva Pingar, Germantown; Pomona Mrs. Rice McCauley, Stanley. Mr. W. A. Miller of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle will also give an address.

There is concerted action all along the line to make this meeting of lasting benefit to the Grange.

Married on the Quiet.

The Lehigh Valley railroad office force is smoking cigars this morning on the recent marriage of W. D. Andrews, a former Auburn operator, who was married in Groton Saturday night, to Miss Bertha Morgan of that town. The arrival of the cigars this morning was the first that the railway men knew of their comrade's marriage. Andrews went to Ithaca by train Saturday, drove to Groton by motor car, was married and returned by motor car the same evening without saying a word to his friends about it. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews will reside at King Ferry, where Mr. Andrews has charge of the railway station.—Advertiser, Oct. 6.

The Last Place.

Bobby is the son of a Methodist minister and has had the experience of "moving" four times in the space of eight years' life. He disapproves strongly of the itinerant system which is the bane of the Methodist clergy. Some time ago an elderly minister was visiting Bobby's father and directed his attention to the small boy, asking him many questions of a semi-theological nature. Finally the course of the conversation turned to heaven, and Bobby was asked concerning the abode of the blest. "Yes," said the youngster, with a sigh of deep weariness, "I know. It's the last place we're going to move to."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Great Convention.

The New York State Christian Endeavor convention is to be held in Albany, October 13, 14, 15 at the Emmanuel Baptist church, State Street above Swan.

This promises to be the greatest state convention held in years. The State committee have succeeded in arranging the strongest program ever placed before the young people, while the local committee have been busy for months perfecting plans and making ready to give the visitors the best time possible.

Among the many speakers on the program are the following: Gov. Charles E. Hughes, Prof. Amos R. Wells, Mr. Von Ogden Vogt, Dr. Howard B. Grose, Dr. John M. MacInnis, Dr. James I. Vance, Dr. Parks Cadman, S. D. Gordan, Don O. Shelton and Gypsy Smith, the noted evangelist. The large chorus is to be led by Rev. F. H. Jacobs of New York.

The theme of the convention is "The utmost for the highest." Tuesday morning and afternoon will be devoted to Junior and Intermediate work. Many helpful conferences will be held during the convention.

The many attractions of Albany and vicinity, the program, the entertainment provided together with reduced fare to the convention city, will be inducements for Endeavorers to swell the number of those attending.

Mrs. L. S. Gale.

Mrs. L. S. Gale, aged 49 years, died at the Cortland hospital Thursday afternoon, Oct. 1, following an operation for the removal of a cancer.

Mrs. Gale had known that she was suffering from a cancer only a week.

The deceased was a native of Moravia and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jehial Perkins. She was married to L. Scott Gale thirty-one years ago. She is survived by her husband and four children, Mrs. G. G. Stillman, Harry A. Gale, Arden and Helen Gale of this city, her father, Jehial Perkins, who is in North Dakota, four brothers, Alpheus Perkins of Venice Center, William of Lake View, Ia., Walter and Jerod of Wilton, North Dakota, and a sister in the state of Washington.

Mrs. Gale was a faithful member of the First Baptist church, of the W. O. T. U. and of the Bright Light lodge, No. 121, Daughters of Rebekah. The funeral was held from her late home, 16 North Greenbush St., Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock and from the First Baptist church at 2 o'clock.—Cortland Standard.

Mrs. Gale was a cousin of Jo n Hutchison of Genoa.

Who Had the Best Show?

During a session of the Pennsylvania legislature a well known member was made head of a state department. As there were a large number of lucrative positions in his department he was besieged by congressmen on behalf of their friends who wanted good, fat jobs.

Messrs. Jones, Smith and Brown were all applicants for the same position, and their claims were equally pushed. Finally two representatives who were for Brown went to the new executive and asked how the contestants stood.

"It's this way," was the reply. "Jones is a good man, and the corporations and the judiciary are with him; Smith is a fine fellow and is backed by the newspapers and the people generally, and your friend Brown is an excellent young man, who is being pushed by the politicians and the members of the legislature."

"Well, but who has the best show?" asked one of the friends.

"If you won't repeat it," was the answer, "I will tell you."

Both promised.

FRIEND DEATH.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay
Till I have finished my score with life,
Who has fooled and cheated me all the way
With a witless strife.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
I have a duty yet to do.
There is the devil still to pay—
A good, stiff reckoning too.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
What of my wife and little one?
I must warn them well while yet it is day
Of the setting sun.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
A drink and a kiss for luck at the last.
I was ever one for a daring play,
Staked all on a cast.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
I must have time to think on God.
Surely you give one time to pray—
So soon a nod.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "a moment stay.
It will all be over so soon, so soon.
I hear the pipes of my boyhood play
An old, old tune.

"Friend Death," quoth he, "Oh, friendly Death,
The music is calling and I am faint—
Faint for the home where I first drew breath
And my mother again."
—R. W. Gilbert in "Goldenrod and Lilies."

He Was Dipped.

Charles Lamb had been told by his physician to take a course of sea bathing. As he descended the steps of the bathing machine in the shallow water the cold increased his natural stammer, and it took him a long while to inform two stout attendants that he was to be "di-di-di-dipped."

Impatiently they ducked him, and coming up spluttering in their embrace, he began, "Once more I tell you I am to be di-di-di— and down he went again. The third time he stormed: "Is it mum-murder you me-me-mean? I tell you I'm to be di-di—"

And then, after the third ducking: "Oh, limbs of Satan! It's now too late! I tell you that I am—no, that I was—to be di-di-di-dipped only once!"

Voluntarily.

"Did I understand you to say that this boy voluntarily confessed to running away?" asked a truant officer, addressing the determined looking female parent of a small and dirty boy.

"Yes, sir, he did," the woman responded. "I just had to persuade him a little, and then he told me the whole thing voluntarily."

"How did you persuade him?" queried his worship.

"Well, first I gave him a good licking," said the firm parent, "and then I put him to bed without supper, and I took his clothes away and told him he'd stay in bed till he confessed what he'd done, if 'twas the rest of his days, and I should lick him again in the morning. And in less than half an hour he told me the whole story voluntarily!"

Respectability.

Respectability is a very good thing in its way, but it does not rise superior to all considerations. I would not for a moment venture to hint that it was a matter of taste. But I think I will go as far as this—that if a position is admittedly unkind, uncomfortable, unnecessary and superfluous unless, although it were as respectable as the Church of England, the sooner a man is out of it the better for himself and all concerned.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Saving the Landlord.

Joseph Jefferson was playing a one night engagement in a small town, appearing in the part Rip Van Winkle, which he had so often and ably impersonated. At the hotel where he stayed there was an Irishman who acted as general assistant. Judged by the great interest he manifested in the hotel, he might have been taken to be the proprietor. At about a quarter to 6 in the morning Mr. Jefferson was startled, not to say alarmed, by a violent thumping on his door. When he recollected that he had left no orders to be called so early, he was naturally indignant. His sleep was banished for that morning, however, so he arose and soon made his appearance before the clerk.

"Look here, I say," he demanded of this functionary, "why was I called at this unearthly hour?"

"I don't know, sir," replied the clerk, "but I'll ask Pat. Pat was summoned. Said the clerk: 'Pat, there was no call for this gentleman. Why did you waken him?'"

Pat led the clerk to one side and said in a mysterious whisper: "He wor smorin' loike a horse, sor, an' Ol'd heerd the bhoy's sayin' somethin' about how he wor wanst after shlapin' for twenty years, so Ol says to meself, 'It's a-comin' unto 'im ag'in, an' it's yer juty to git the crayther out o' yer house at wanst.'"

A Legal Opinion.

Roscoe Conkling came into Charles O'Connor's office one day in a nervous state.

"You seem to be very much excited, Mr. Conkling," said Mr. O'Connor as Roscoe walked up and down the room.

"Yes, I'm provoked—I am provoked," said Mr. Conkling. "I never had a client dissatisfied about my fee before."

"Well, what's the matter?"

"Why, I defended Gibbons for arson, you know. He was convicted, but I did hard work for him. I took him to the superior court, and he was convicted; then to the supreme court, and the supreme court confirmed the judgment and gave him ten years. I charged him $600, and Gibbons is grumbling about it; says it is too much. Now, Mr. O'Connor, I ask you was that too much?"

"Well," said O'Connor very deliberately, "of course you did a great deal of work, and $600 is not a big fee; but, to be frank with you, Mr. Conkling, my deliberate opinion is that he might have been convicted for less money."

Equal to the Occasion.

In 1840 a great convention was held in Baltimore by the young men of what was then known as the Whig party for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of General William Henry Harrison for the presidency. There was no hall in the city large enough to hold the crowd of delegates who attended. The convention accordingly met on the Canton race track, and when the great Whig orator of Maryland, who was chairman of the young men's national committee, arose to call the meeting to order he was so impressed by the vastness of the assemblage before him that instead of the usual formula he exclaimed, "The nation will please come to order!"

Her Age at Monte Carlo.

A fashionable French lady who had lost heavily at Monte Carlo entered the gaming saloon while a former friend of hers was winning in a sweeping style that seemed destined to break the bank.

"I am so glad to see you here, prince, and in such luck, too!" she exclaimed. "Do tell me a lucky number. It is sure to win, for you are now in the vein."

The prince generously placed a pile of gold louis before the vivacious lady, whose beauty had successfully defied the effects of thirty-six winters, and said:

"Put it all on the number of your years and reap a golden harvest."

The lady reflected, hesitated and then placed the pile on twenty-seven.

An instant later the croupier sang out:

"Thirty-six red wins!"

"Heavens!" muttered the lady as she faintly. "Thirty-six is exactly my age!"

Fixity of Purpose.

The man who succeeds above his fellow is the one who early in life clearly discerns his object and toward that object habitually directs his powers. Even genius itself is but fine observation strengthened by fixity of purpose. Every man who observes vigilantly and resolves steadfastly grows unconsciously into genius.—Bulwer-Lytton.

An Effective Role.

A farmer was anxious that his son should become a minister, and for this laudable end he sent him to college for four years, but to his great disappointment the youth balked at the ministry and set himself up as a horse trader. The old farmer told his grief to a neighbor, who, however, took a more optimistic view of the matter.

"Oh, I wouldn't feel so badly about that," he said. "As a horse trader Bill will probably lead more men to repentance than he ever would have done as a preacher."

No Sentiment.

One day in Geneva Ira D. Sankey entered a music box shop and asked to see some music boxes. The salesman graciously showed him a number, but none was what he wanted.

"Have you none that play sacred music?" he asked.

"Why," answered the salesman, "we have some that play a kind of half-way sacred music."

"What?" inquired Mr. Sankey.

"Oh, these Moody and Sankey hymns. I can't imagine what the people see in them, but we sell thousands of the boxes that play them. We have enormous orders for these boxes," continued the salesman, "from every part of Europe," and then he added apologetically, "it's a matter of business, you know, with us."

Compliments.

Judge Story and Edward Everett were once the guests of honor at a banquet. The former as a voluntary toast gave the following:

"Fame follows merit where Everett goes!"

The gentleman thus delicately complimented at once arose and replied with equally felicitous impromptu:

"To whatever height judicial learning may attain in this country there will always be one Story higher."

SHORT SERMON FOR A SUNDAY HALF-FOUR

By Rev. Earnest A. Edghill.

There Is a Lad Here.

"There is a lad here, which hath five barley-loaves and two small fishes but what are they among so many?"—John vi., 9.

Every miracle of our Lord Jesus Christ is a parable. His wondrous works is also a wondrous lesson, a wondrous revelation of love and power. And of all the wonderful works that he did, none is more rich in spiritual teaching than this feeding of the five thousand. The Lord Himself took it as a text for his great sermon on the Bread of Heaven, wherein He showed that He could strengthen and refresh our souls by His Body and Blood, no less than that through His power He could supply our physical necessities and wants. Alone of all the miracles, it is recorded that by all four Evangelists who felt, as men who had been prominent in that crowning exhibition of love and power, the depth, the majesty, the awe of its teaching. Here it stands recorded in the centre of our Lord's ministry as the unique revelation of His sacred character, of His relation to mankind, of the means by which that relation is to be realized.

The disciples are the Church; the multitude is mankind, for whom Christ died. The Church must not live for herself. Christ is not the private possession of a select community, but the common inheritance of mankind.

Woe to the Church that will not interest herself in the work of evangelizing the world, or will not bestir herself about social problems. Such things do no doubt make a real demand upon her energy, her time, her thought. But she cannot refuse the responsibility of dealing with such matters. Give ye them to eat, says the Lord. The Church must not, cannot, ignore the existence of the many problems which press for solution; nor can she be ignorant of her own duty in the matter.

At first she merely tries to shift the responsibility of these great questions from her shoulders to those of her Lord. . . . Is there no other method? Has the Church no other plan? A last thought occurs: "There is a lad here!" His loaves are not even of wheat, merely of coarse barley; his fishes ludicrously small; it is a counsel of despair; of course, no good is to be looked for in that quarter, but still there he is. "Make the men sit down," says Christ. In the discovery of that lad you have the solution of the problem. . . . The disciples were utterly powerless to bring Christ's blessing to that hungry multitude, until they had realized that there was a common lad there with five barley loaves and two small fishes. And to us, the disciples of these latter days, the message is no less clear. It comes as a warning and an encouragement.

What is our attitude to the boys and the girls of the Churches? As year by year fresh members are added to the Church or are promoted, as it were, to the full privileges of Christian citizenship, they are brought prominently to our notice—for a season. A Confirmation is announced; a day of first communion is appointed. But do we ever pray that they may continue to be earnest and loyal communicants? Do we ever encourage by a single word, by a smile of recognition those whom we find still regular at God's board? Do we ever attempt to show our active sympathy with them by making an effort to attend those services to which they are specially invited?

Christ who took that poor lad's scanty store, says to us: There is a lad here. There is, there is; it is for you to see that his gifts, his powers, his desires, are so used, developed and sanctified that Christ may take them and bless them, and give them to the Church, and the Church distribute to the great multitude of hungry souls that look to Him for support and strength. And to our dear lads and girls whose sinful bodies have been cleansed by His Body, whose souls have been washed by His most precious Blood—what a world of comfort and encouragement does this message bring! Christ needs you. He wants you. "But what can I bring? What have I got which can be of use?" Give what thou hast, give it to Him who takes the desire for the deed. Don't despair because you have not much to offer.

BUILDING FOR ETERNITY.

Oct. 11, '08.—(I. Chron. 17:1, 14.)

We are building every day. A temple the world may not see. Building, building, every day, Building for eternity.

No sooner was King David firmly established on his throne than his thoughts turned toward municipal and national improvements. His first great conception in that direction was the erection of a permanent and glorious temple in Jerusalem, to be the center of worship, the seat of the Skekinah dwelling for all ages. He would rear a stupendous pile upon the summit of one of the hills of the Holy City, which should endure forever.

House of Living Men.

But that honor was not to be. The Almighty, by the mouth of his prophets, and by visions of the night, countermanded the order of the king, transferring the building operations to David's son and successor. But to cheer the disappointed monarch he was given to see that he should establish a royal house of living men upon the earth which should consist of many brilliant beings and head up at last in the distant ages in the person of the Jewish Messiah, the world's redeemer.

This theme bears a most impressive lesson to all men everywhere. David was not permitted to rear a temple, but he was a builder nevertheless. And all men are builders. Some build with gold, silver, precious stones, some with wood, hay and stubble, but all are builders. Some construct palaces, some throw together huts; some do their work carefully, some do it shiftlessly; some put into their structure granite, some put in gravel; some work steadily, some by odd jobs; some never have to do their work over again, some spend half their days undoing what they have done.

Punk and Putty.

If that young man realized that the house he is building he will occupy forever, he would be more particular about his building materials. He would not put in so many cigarette stubs, so many cheap novels, so many livery stable bills, so many base ball bats, so many theatre checks, so many beer bottles. He would look for sound virtues instead of punk and putty. Varnish would not take the place of grain. He would have less gimcrackery and more stability. Painted canvas would not be made to represent marble, pine furniture would not appear mahogany.

If life were all a summer day, and existence only a butterfly flight, it would not so much matter, but experience testifies that the rains descend, and the floods come, and the winds blow and beat upon every house. Happy the man in that hour who can defy the storm, sheltered and defended from the blast.

Varnish and Veneer.

If that young woman realized that she is building a structure of character that will be hers to inhabit through the ages to come she would reject fast company, late hours, French novels, frivolity, frippery, giggling flirtations with brainless duds. The pictures she is hanging in memories' halls would not have to be turned toward the wall in old age, the veneer would not wear off so soon leaving the fraud so conspicuous. If that slipshod happy-go-lucky girl who allows her old mother to wait on her, whose hands are too nice for household duties, who prefers a ball game to an interesting book, and who can play rag-time on the piano, while her mother washes the dishes, knew that she would grow up to be a slattern, a burden, a nonentity, or a nuisance, she would come to her senses and begin to put some timber into her moral nature that would endure when form and feature had lost their charm. What is more pitiful than to see an old man or an old woman, conscious of their absolute lack of moral character, vainly trying to cover up their defects with feathers and furbelows, paint and varnish, gems and gewgaws, smirks and smiles. Propping up a house that is tumbling about their heads, everything coming down with a crash.

No Second Chance.

So far as we know this is the only chance we have to build for eternity. There is no hint in revelation that mankind may begin all over again in another world. But if it were certain that such was the fact who would want to stand at the end of life self-confessed and self-convicted, a shiftless ne'er-do-well! What can be said in extenuation for him who has lived a butterfly existence indifferent to the coming winter! How much more satisfying to the immortal to stand at last, when about to vacate this earthly house of our tabernacles profoundly impressed with the fact that the dweller there has built for eternity. That from foundation to capstone there is not a rotten timber in the structure, not a piece of cheap work anywhere, nothing that will not stand the investigation of the architect of the universe.

Business and Sentiment.

They sat at the end table drinking tea—a man and a maid. The time was Saturday afternoon and the city cafe was nearly empty. Only one other customer was visible, a pale, middle-aged dyspeptic who sat munching a rusk like a cow chewing the cud.

It was because of its quietude that Fred Moore and Etta Bemrose had come so far from the big store where they worked.

The human chawer-of-the-cud presently rose, wiped his moustache, whisked a crumb from his waistcoat, and went out. The man and the maid were alone. They looked at one another and smiled.

Fred edged perceptibly nearer, and drew out something from his pocket. "I've bought it, Etta. Try it on, darling; the waitress can't see and there's no one else about."

A pretty blush colored the girl's cheeks and her eyelids drooped and she shyly drew off her glove.

Fred took the small hand, and over the third finger slipped a ring—a plain gold band.

The blush upon her face deepened. Love shone in her eyes. Yet a tear began to gather there.

Fred saw it and gulped back a sigh.

"Of course, darling, I know what you're thinking of," he said tenderly. "It won't be the kind of wedding you've hoped for. No church, no presents, no bridesmaids, no honeymoon. Only just making an excuse to get an hour off, so that we can slip round to the register's, and then back again to the shop without anyone knowing. Poor little Etta. It seems very unromantic, but it isn't really, dear. After all, we shall be husband and wife then, so what does anything else matter?"

"No, Fred dear," she whispered with a happy smile; "nothing will matter then."

"We shall, of course, have to keep it a profound secret," the man went on thoughtfully; "but perhaps later on I may be able to get hold of a little capital to start a small shop of our own. That's the thing we've got to work for, Etta, dear."

Despite his hopeful words there was a touch of bitterness in him as he lapsed into silence.

They were assistants at Jarbury's. Ordinary civilization demands obedience to ten commandments, which embody a perfect moral code. Jarbury's made commandments of their own, which entailed fines and penalties on those who dared to break them. One commandment—none the less stringent because unwritten—was, "Thou shalt not marry."

Jarbury's paid wages on which a man can't support a wife. If he tries he quickly recognizes the difficulty, and clamors for a "rise." Jarbury's didn't believe in giving "rises."

So, because Benjamin Jarbury—and his fellow directors—liked motor-cars and grouse shooting, and wished no unnecessary curb to be placed on their hobby of share collecting, they desired that none of their men should marry, lest in a fit of husbandly duty, he might demand more pay.

To make their marriage known, would mean the "sack" for both, while their references would be marked, "Married without permission," and their chances of employment elsewhere greatly lessened.

Whatever bitterness the reflection caused him, he quickly chased it away, consoled by the thought that, at all events, Etta would be his wife.

"Do you know, dear," he said to her in a low tone, presently, "I used to think that I stood no chance of winning you? I always thought you preferred that chap Manders of the carpet department."

A little furore came into being, just over the girl's eyes.

"Richard Manders?" she said gravely. "Oh, Fred, how could you think I could like him? He's a man I detest. He's mean and underhanded, a man not to be trusted. But don't let's talk of him."

"Very well then, dear little wife that is to be. Let's go out and take a walk."

They rose and left the place. A minute later from behind a partition on the smoking room side, a coarse faced man with red hair, also rose.

"So it's come to this, has it?" he muttered. "They're going to be married and they flatter themselves they'll keep it a secret from the firm. Well, we'll see. Perhaps, my beauty, you'll be sorry one of these days that you ever preferred that fellow Moore to me."

With which words and a flush of hot and bitter anger upon his face, the man went out. It was Richard Manders.

It was done. The most important step in their lives had been taken. Fred Moore had placed the ring upon Etta's finger in earnest now; they had made the solemn vows that bound them together until death should part them.

Fred drew the pale and trembling girl aside and folded her to his breast.

"Etta, my darling—my wife for evermore."

"My dear, dear husband."

Their lips met in a loving kiss.

Another moment and they were in the passage looking through the open door into the street. Etta paused there a second and unpinning a flower she was wearing. Fred had given it to her.

"I mustn't wear this back to the shop, dear husband," she said, "or they'll!"

"Fine you for breaking the rule, Etta. Yes, darling, it's beastly hard, but there's no hope for it. There's that, too." He touched the wedding ring reverently.

"I'll wear it for a few minutes," Etta said hastily. "No one will see it with my glove on. Then I'll slip it off just before I go into the shop."

Fred's face clouded and his lips compressed.

"It's an awful shame, Etta, dear," he began, but she interrupted him with a blush and a smile.

"Never mind, Fred. I can always wear it when we are alone. But we must be getting back. We've only leave for an hour, you know."

"One kiss then, my sweet wife." He bent down and folded her once again in his arms.

Then they went out to find themselves face to face with Manders. He stood upon the other side of the road, but hurried away directly he saw that he was observed.

They were all smiles and happiness in a moment, and by the time they reached the great shop separately, they had almost forgotten Manders's existence.

But they were very soon to be reminded of it. It was barely an hour more when Fred Moore received a peremptory notice that he was wanted in Mr. Benjamin Jarbury's private room.

Fred went wondering. The head of the firm was seated at his desk, while by his side with an ugly look on his sallow face stood Manders. An instant later the door opened again and Etta entered. She too, had been sent for.

"Ha!" said Benjamin Jarbury. "I understand that you and—and—Miss Bemrose were both absent from duty for an hour this morning. What was the reason for that?"

Fred flushed to the roots of his hair. Then he replied calmly: "We—we were married to-day, sir."

The chief jerked his head. "I thought as much," he said angrily. "Are you aware that to marry without permission is a gross violation of our rules?"

"Yes, sir; I am aware of it."

"Oh, you are! Then you will be good enough to go and pack your things at once. You are discharged, you understand." And turning to the pale and trembling Etta: "So, my young lady, are you?"

The poor girl hid her face in her hands. Fred turned to go to her but at that moment he once more caught sight of Manders's face. What he saw there angered him.

In a moment he had the red haired fellow by the collar, and in another he was laying Mr. Jarbury's walking stick, which he hurriedly snatched up, about the chief's shoulders.

All was excitement in a moment. In the midst of this scene the door suddenly opened and there entered a jangling vision in frills and furbelows—no other than Miss Jennie Jarbury, the pretty daughter of the head of the firm.

"Why, whatever's the matter, papa?" she exclaimed in amazement. "Go out—go out!" cried Mr. Jarbury; "this is no place for you. Come back presently."

Miss Jennie withdrew, her pretty face all perplexity. The chief looked at Etta and pointed to the door.

She looked at Fred for guidance. He nodded and whispered that he would see her presently. She went out, weeping anew.

No sooner was she out of the room than someone touched her arm. It was Miss Jennie Jarbury. She knew Etta well by sight, having seen her often at the lace counter. Moreover she liked her.

"What is the matter, Miss Bemrose?" she asked kindly. "You are crying. What has been happening?"

Etta shook her head, saying no word. But Miss Jennie would not be denied. She took Etta aside and then and there made her tell everything that had happened.

A week had passed. It was evening. Fred and his young wife Etta, sat in their humble lodgings, whither they had repaired upon that day they had been discharged.

"Hello, dear, the postman!" exclaimed Fred, as he heard a sharp rat-tat at the door.

"Why Etta, exclaimed the astonished Fred as he read it. "It's from a firm of lawyers. Listen to this: 'Dear Sir—On behalf of our client, Miss Jarbury, we are desirous of discussing a scheme which we understand you have had in contemplation for some time, in regard to the starting of a general dry goods business. Conditionally on your satisfying us as to the soundness of the scheme, we are instructed to say that our client will furnish capital up to five thousand dollars, on terms of partnership to be hereafter agreed on. Perhaps you will favor us with a call tomorrow at twelve noon. Yours faithfully, Cartford, Pax and Free-worthy.'"

"Call!" cried Fred ecstatically, "I should rather think I will!"

And he did—taking Etta with him in the world.

Ancient Japanese Iron Making.

The Japanese were acquainted with iron from very early times. A sword that was used by one of the ancestors of the present emperor about 800 B. C. is still in existence. Later, when the great civil war broke out in the sixth century, sword smiths and armor smiths came to occupy a prominent place. Many interesting stories are connected with sword smiths, although this is no place to go into these. From this time on down to about 300 years ago no noticeable progress had been made. At the beginning of the seventeenth century, when the Tokugawa dynasty came into possession of the political power and peace was restored, all branches of industry began to prosper. The demand for iron implements increased, and the scarcity of iron supply began to be felt.—M. Kawara in Engineering Magazine.

The Mad Parliament.

The name "mad parliament" was given to the parliament which assembled in the year 1258 and broke out into open rebellion against Henry III. The king was declared deposed, and the government was vested in the hands of twenty-four councilors, with Simon de Montfort at their head. To De Montfort belongs the honor of having started what might be called popular government in Great Britain.

Where Bullets Flow.

David Parker, of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the civil war, who lost a foot at Gettysburg, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done me worth more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters, and they cured me. I now take them as a tonic, and they keep me strong and well." 50c. at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry, drug stores.

Martin's Way.

Irishmen are inclined to word perversion; but, says a writer, the following description of slow speech which often degenerated into a stammer shows that occasionally they use the best words possible in explaining a thing:

"It's a quare sort uv way Martin talks," said Pat. "It's as if he tuk the words out uv his mou't an' loked at 'em before he gives 'em to yez."

Little as you would think, the warlike ancient Briton and the peaceful policeman have at least one extraordinary thing in common. The former clothed his nakedness with the blue juice of the woad plant, and the latter proudly parades himself in a uniform of woaded cloth.—London Express.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by J. S. Banker, Genoa.

Auburn's Masonic Temple.

Auburn's New Masonic Temple will soon be an accomplished fact. Plans are all completed, and the contracts ready to be let. The money for the work is all in hand with the exception of a few thousand dollars, and this amount is to be raised by a series of events which the fraternity has announced for this month.

To begin with, Tag day will be celebrated next Saturday, Oct. 10. The ladies of the fraternity will patrol the city, tagging the populace for a donation, the size of which is to be determined by the good will of each person tagged. It is thought that a great many people from the vicinity outside of Auburn will take this opportunity of helping along the good work. The ladies—and all who are authorized to do this work will wear a handsome badge indicating that fact—will accept any amount in payment for a tag, but probably very few will offer less than ten cents, because every tag will be good for one admission to the bazaar.

The bazaar will be open Thursday evening, Oct. 15, and will continue for one week. Every Mason in Cayuga county has a personal interest in the proposed magnificent structure which is to be the home of Masonry in the county seat, and probably every member of the fraternity will be glad to patronize the bazaar. Season tickets are on sale at fifty cents each, which entitles the holder to a chance on a grand door prize of one hundred dollars in gold.

There are a number of novelties announced for the bazaar. One of these is the poultry show. A number of well known breeders of the county are submitting trios—a cock and two hens—of the finest blooded stock raised in the state. The management under the head of Mr. E. R. Carpenter, asks members and friends of the fraternity, throughout the county to contribute to the bazaar. Articles of every description will be welcome at the headquarters in the Masonic club—furniture, clothing, books, household goods—everything will have its value.

Progress in Iron and Steel.

That there is nothing decisive in the progress toward improvement in the iron and steel industry is the opinion of the Iron Trade Review. Progress is being made of the slow and sure order, this paper declares, and adds:

It is now manifesting itself in a small but regular gain in orders and specifications which, though gratifying in itself, will mean the lapse of a number of months before full recovery is reached even if the gain is maintained. Manufacturers are finding their main source for encouragement in the regularity of the advance of the market week in and week out, for, though the changes are not large, they are usually to be found upon the right side of the ledger when the balance has been struck.

Edgar W. Howe of the Atchison Globe, who is a romancer at heart as well as an editor, names his new country home "Potato Hill," an indication that the life he will lead there is to be simplicity itself and without frills.

That Yellowstone park highwayman really ought to be prosecuted for carrying weapons in the government's famous reservation. Perhaps one of the looted tourists can be persuaded to make a complaint.

It is all very well for a man to say he would rather be right than president, but if he were president he would stand a better chance of making right look right to his fellow men.

No wonder that Plunger John W. Gates is going back to Wall street. That's about the only place left in the country where you can bet a million any day and no questions asked.

An easy way out for the Atlantic City authorities is to indict the Sunday law breakers, then run up to New York and learn how to let it go at that.

World's Food Supply.

Sir William Crookes, the eminent British scientist, has proved, to his own satisfaction at least, that in a score of years the entire population of the world will be on short rations through the inability of the wheat fields to keep pace with the growth of the human race. The people of the United States, at the instigation of President Roosevelt and certain far-seeing governors, are already viewing with apprehension the exhaustion of national resources and planning to preserve great forest areas and replant denuded tracts. Between 1860 and 1906 the wheat production of the United States increased from 173,000,000 to 735,000,000 bushels. The world's wheat crop in 1906 was 3,423,000,000 bushels, an increase of nearly 100,000,000 bushels over the previous year. Anything Sir William says is certainly entitled to respectful attention, but what if the vast granaries of the United States, Canada, Argentina, Russia and India cease producing sufficient wheat in twenty years? Why should the world starve? In 1906 the United States produced more oats than wheat, and her output of corn was nearly 3,000,000,000 bushels.

Furthermore, Abraham Adams of Jullaetta, Ida., has an "Alaska" wheat which, he declares, will yield 100 bushels to the acre. That this is "going some" will be seen when it is recalled that the world's average wheat yield is only 12.7 bushels per acre.

Those who see trouble ahead in providing food for the man of the future have not taken into account the productivity of the sea, which has fields and forests twice as great as those on land and which grows single plants several times as tall as terra firma's tallest trees. Bird's nest soup, a familiar Chinese dish, is largely composed of edible seaweed of a gelatinous nature. Seaweed is already an article of diet in China, Japan and certain Pacific islands. Dulse, a species of seaweed, is eaten by the Scotch. "Not long ago," says a writer in the Technical World, "an average of 5,000 barrels of a seaweed known as Irish moss were shipped annually from the coast of Massachusetts to New York and Philadelphia for use in the manufacture of blancmange and other delicacies." Tons upon tons of seaweed are cast up on the shores of the United States every year. It is life supporting, for it is the food of countless fishes and marine mammals. The Sargasso sea, graveyard of the derelict and realm of mystery, is said to produce vegetation sufficient to support all Europe if it were harvested and properly prepared for the world's cooks. If the champions of a seaweed diet are correct, more than a score of years must pass before the world feels the pinch of hunger. How does it happen that the enterprising manufacturers of new breakfast foods have overlooked seaweed?

Barbarisms in Speech.

Crimes against purity in our use of English consist chiefly in coining words and phrases or snatching up slang when neither new thoughts nor new facts demand new forms of expression. Americans are prone to vagaries of this kind and thus frequently lay themselves open to the charge of lacking in reverence for the mother tongue. Bad models and bad examples right at hand are the cause of this abuse of the noble vehicle of speech, according to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, which says:

Our schools are in large degree responsible for a slovenliness of style which is fast becoming a second nature. There are few teachers who set a good example in this regard. A solecism is bad enough when it falls from uneducated lips, but is simply vile when uttered by man or woman who should be "nothing if not critical." Unhappily our stage does not perform its function as it should do in a civilized land, for some of the greatest actors are guilty of mortal sin against the declogue of elocution and syntax. From the pulpit, too, one too frequently hears barbarisms for which schoolboys of former generations would have been well berthed. And yet there are standards which cannot fail. Cranmer has long been in his grave, but still speaks with authority through the splendid cadences of the Book of Common Prayer. The translators who gave us the King James version were perfect masters of English, whatever their faults as theologians may have been. Every sentence is terse and lucid, every idiom accent in the ear. Each nice shade of idea finds its reflex in the written word.

It is good practice for persons whose speech needs correcting to read often and read out loud specimens of the very best English which express thought intelligible to this generation.

Tests of treating roads with tar to lay the dust stirred up by autos recently made in Belgium demonstrated that the beneficial effects of the tar treatment were not lasting enough to warrant its general use throughout the country.

A meteorite narrowly missed hitting the president's house at Oyster Bay. Can it be that Leo, Taurus, Ursa Major, Lynx and Camelopardus have heard about that big game hunt and have begun throwing things?

It costs New Yorkers a dollar less now to get into the horse races, but the greatest saving under the anti-betting law is in what it costs to get out.

The surest germ killer is a state of general good health.

The Sagar Drug Store

Sagar Drug Store. You have absolute faith in the knowledge and ability of your physician. If there were any doubt you would promptly dismiss him and procure another in whom you believe implicitly. You should use the same care and judgment in selecting the pharmacy to compound your prescriptions. Careless or inefficient druggists are a greater menace than incompetent physicians. They can nullify the work of the best doctor.

The Sagar Drug Store is recommended by physicians of Auburn who know that every prescription compounded here is exactly as they intended it to be. It is patronized by a great and growing multitude who know from experience the many advantages of dealing with this absolutely reliable pharmacy.

Dr. J. W. Whitbeck, dentist, Genoa, N. Y., is prepared to do painless extracting of teeth by the use of Sleep Vapor or Somnoform, the latest and safest anesthetic known, which can be had at his office administered by a physician. He also has for extracting the best preparation for hypodermic; and also a local application for extracting children's teeth, perfectly harmless. In fact, everything in the dental line can be found at his office. Charges as reasonable as in the city or elsewhere, consistent with first-class work.

—If you think you are wise and well informed, just see if you can answer these questions: You have seen hundreds of white horses why did you never see a white colt? Why does a horse eat grass backward and a cow forward? Why does a hop twine to the left and a bean to the right? Why does a horse when staked out by a rope unwind the rope, while a cow winds it up into hard kinks? Why does a horse get up on his front feet and a cow on her hind feet? And why does a dog always turn around three times before lying down?

Back to School.

She's back again—she came the other day—

And she will teach our school once more this fall; I only wish that I was young and small

And unto her the alphabet could say; It's good to know she's with us, anyway;

There's heaps more music in the liquid call Of them there friendly meddler-lark and all The sagebrush seems a brighter, silvery gray.

The stage that brung her here just seemed to shed A radiance (our sky pilot for to quote)

There's glad songs kind of millin' through my head, While my old bronk don't run but seems to float;

—The brutal "rushes" at Cornell are now said to be a thing of the past. Two thousand students gathered last week one evening and held an enthusiastic meeting at which was sounded the death knell to the barbarous affairs which have been a dread to Ithacans and a disgrace to Cornell.

—A telephone line extending through Summerhill to McLean was added to the Farm and Village Telephone system Oct. 1. The new line was brought by the Miller system last January, but it was under contract with the Bell line to October 1. The line has been connected with the Groton exchange and adds about thirty new patrons.

Senatorial Convention.

The Senatorial convention at Cortland was brought to a close on Monday just in time to send the nomination to Albany to be filed. After a deadlock lasting a week, State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff arrived on the scene, and a compromise was effected, Senator Wilcox and Judge Davis of Cortland withdrawing from the race. Former Assemblyman Charles J. Hewitt of Locke, who is a business partner of Senator Wilcox, received the nomination. The apportionment of delegates is to remain the same, Cayuga 12, Seneca 6 and Cortland 6, and in the future disagreements as to the time and place of calling conventions will be referred to the executive committee of the state committee.

WHAT CHINESE DO FOR HAWAII.

They Produce Practically All the Vegetables Grown on the Islands.

Wherever there is a rice field of any size water buffaloes are to be found. Their owners take excellent care of them and are usually proud of their condition. On one plantation I found a stable in which six of these animals were feeding. The buffalo whose chief delight is wading through mud seems to have an instinctive dislike for the white race, and often refuses to work under their control, and in one or two instances white men have been obliged to seek safety in flight from the rebellious disposition of these beasts. They seem to understand the Chinese language, and know instantly when Chinamen are holding the reins, and under their guidance are perfectly gentle and obedient to every command. I saw an example of their antipathy for our race, when a Chinaman allowed a white boy to make an attempt to drive one of his animals. The buffalo at first refused to move, and then, stamping his foot he started off in the wrong direction and was wholly unmanageable. A few moments later his master took up the reins and he became as docile as a pet dog. These animals are healthy and strong and one working well before the plow is worth $200.

Birds are a pest in rice culture, and all sorts of means are adopted to keep them off the fields. A Chinaman's idea of a scarecrow, is a pole with a white flag on the top, and hundreds of these are planted in the fields. Another mode of getting rid of these pests is by beating on tin cans to frighten them away and often men will shoot and eat them out of sheer revenge. The grass hopper is also an enemy to be dealt with, as it attacks the crop while yet in flower. Every plantation has a large concrete floor in the open air, on which to dry the crop. After thrashing the rice from the straw it is gathered into rows and dried while still in the hull, and here the water buffalo is used again, by being hitched to a wooden shovel and driven about the floor until the rice is piled up ready for bagging.

At least five thousand Chinese are employed in the production of rice in Hawaii. They also control the taro patches from which poi, the principal Hawaiian food is made. Many Chinese are engaged in raising ducks, while the sole occupation of others is the raising of chickens. As eggs retail from twenty-five to sixty cents per dozen, and live chickens from ten to twelve dollars per dozen, this business should be profitable; but there is sometimes considerable loss due to the ravages of a peculiar tropical disease, which is fatal to young chickens. The Chinese produce practically all of the vegetables grown in the islands and sell them from door to door.

The Chinese are by far the best workers in the cane fields, are quiet and peaceable in manner and attentive to duty, giving the overseers little or no trouble. Less than two thousands, however, are to be found on the sugar plantations at present, as the Chinese Exclusion act settled coolie immigration. A number of the "native born" have become stenographers and are employed by Americans. A professional man of Honolulu told me that his secretary, a Chinese youth whom he paid thirty-five dollars per month, was "simply perfect."—Mrs. C. R. Miller in Leslie's Weekly.

All the Same.

The bachelor uncle had been left in charge of his little niece and, although he had accepted the charge in an easy, off hand manner, he soon realized that he had a contract on his hands.

The first drink of water he carried up to her with the evening paper in his other hand and his pipe in his mouth. On the third trip he laid his paper down with a sigh and he also put his pipe aside thinking that the smoke might be the cause of such loud infantile distress. He sang dirges, laughed bitterly, pulled faces and performed all the antics that occur to bachelor uncles in such emergencies, but whenever he was in the room his little niece cried for him to go out, and whenever he went out she cried for him to come in.

"Hang them anyway!" he was heard to grumble as he fretfully played this exhausting game of peek-a-boo. "One or forty-one; they're all alike!"

As to Fiction.

There's no doubt, of course, as to the superiority of fiction which pictures life as it should be over fiction which merely pictures life as it is. The rub comes in the unfortunate circumstance of there being so few of us who really know what life should be—too few, indeed, to fill up the blanks in the advertising pages, not to mention the body of the magazine.

A Conditional Gift.

The gods knew what they were about when they made health a conditional gift to mankind. For if it were absolute and inalienable, human folly would have a distinguished opportunity the less, and by that much be hampered in its appointed work of fostering and promoting trade and industry.

The man who can sculpture a stumbling block into a stepping stone has done more than most sculptors ever accomplish.

CARE OF THE HAIR

CLEANSERS SHOULD BE CHOSEN WITH REGARD TO COLOR.

The Necessity of Care in Selecting a Cleansing Agent—Amount of Natural Chemicals is not the Same in Any Two Heads.

While it is true that a few shampoo mixtures are efficacious for all conditions of scalp and hair, it is equally beyond doubt that the majority of cleansers, to be of real benefit, should be chosen with regard to the color of the tresses and the state of the scalp.

The necessity of selecting a cleansing agent that agrees with both hair follicles and the scalp will be readily understood when it is realized that the color of the locks is governed entirely by natural chemicals, and when hair begins to turn gray it is because these shades, either from age or illness, fade. If it were possible to know precisely to what degree the fading exists, then there might be made most perfect hair restorers, but unfortunately this information cannot be given.

Parentetically, it may be said that the amount of natural chemicals is not the same in any two heads, and this accounts for the fact that a dye that is so-called "perfect" for one, may make practically no impression on the other.

For instance, the colors that would harmonize with blond hair should contain a large percentage of sulphur. Brown has much carbon, red contains iron and sulphur and black has oxygen and sulphur.

That shampoos containing these various elements for the different shades of tresses will help to maintain the color, if not to increase the natural shades, is therefore a logical conclusion.

For the average blonde the whites of raw eggs are best. They contain no coloring matter and are softening and cleansing.

In making the whites into a shampoo use a tablespoonful of warm water for each white, and the two should be beaten together before being rubbed into the scalp and over the hair. No soap is required.

A cleansing mixture for red or brown hair is made from the yolks or the whole egg. The yolks contain sulphur and become a natural coloring agent.

For black and dark brown hair a combination of claret is an excellent one. To half a pint of it a raw egg is added. The two are well beaten and rubbed thoroughly over the hair and head before rinsing in clean water. This is not a mixture to be used by pronounced blondes.

Any of these is simple to use and, if persistently applied, the hair, after years, will show the benefit derived. All are soap substitutes. No soap should ever be rubbed directly upon the hair, but must be dissolved first and applied in jelly or liquid form.

In Soft Silk Crepe.

None of the fashionable silk materials is shown in a greater variety of colorings than crepe de Chine. A semi-formal gown is this one in pale yellow, mounted over silk of the same shade and trimmed with bands of Venise insertion. The skirt has a tunic arrangement but fits without fullness over the hips. Nothing could be simpler than the girle of crepe de Chine laced at the back.

IN SOFT SILK CREPE.

with silk cords at the ends of which are gold tassels.

The bodice has a round yoke of fllet net embroidered with flowers in heavy silk and below this is a square fish of crepe de Chine inset with Venise lace and trimmed with hand-embroidery.

Crepe de Chine and crepe de Luze are exquisite in their softness and lustrous effect, lending themselves perfectly even to the delicate models usually reserved for the sheerest of linens and silk trills.

Instead of a Brush.

A piece of velvet made into a pad with a strap across, in which to slip the hand, is an excellent thing for polishing a stove after blackleading instead of using a brush, and gives a brilliant gloss.

HOW WOMAN WAS MADE.

The Hindu Theory a Pretty Substitute for the Rib Theory.

The poor Hindu was sadly put to it to account for woman, but no more so than many wiser ones since his time. According to the legend, Twashtri, the Vulcan of Hindu mythology, created the world, but when he arrived at the final object which was to be his chef d'oeuvre he found to his annoyance that he had run out of materials. He had not a single chunk of solid matter left.

With a mental exorcism upon his carelessness he fell into a profound meditation, the result of which was that he took "the roundness of the moon, the undulating curves of the serpent, the graceful twist of the creeping plant, the light shivering of the grass blade and the slenderness of the willow, the velvety softness of the flowers, the lightness of the feather, the gentle gaze of the doe, the frolicsomeness of the sunbeam, the tears of the cloud, the inconsistency of the wind, the timidity of the hare the vanity of the peacock, the hardness of the diamond, the cruelty of the tiger, the heat of the fire, the chill of the snow, the cackling of the parrot and the cooling of the turtle dove."

He mixed these together in equal portions and the result was woman. After all, demands the Kansas City Journal, isn't this an advance upon the rib theory?

Tabloids for the Auto.

It is for the woman who motors that most time and thought have been expended this season in getting up conveniences as well as luxuries. It seems as if there was scarcely a thing lacking in the equipment of the up to date auto which can contribute to the comfort of the motorist.

One of the new outfits for touring is a medicine case in which many common remedies are put up in tabloid form and which altogether takes up no more space than the smallest make-up box.

In the way of drugs, there are quinine, bismuth, borax and other remedies, not to mention a first aid outfit consisting of bandages, borie lint, cotton wool and plasters; plus scissors and sponge, oils for burns castor oil, &c.

More than this, there is a photographic outfit in tabloid form, with all the necessary chemicals for developing, toning and fixing photographs.

About Smart Hats.

The fitting complement of the tailor made gown is the medium sized hat following rather closely the lines of the head, yet glorified with the curves and graceful lines of the more pretentious models. Floral effects were never more in demand for hat decorations but there are lovely effects in wings and feathered trimmings for millinery adornments. In the upper illustration a serviceable fine braid can be effectively trimmed with two American beauty roses in harmonious shades of red, the trimmings arranged at the back of the hat to lend height.

The crown of the second hat is not as high as some of the newest crowns, but it is a fashionable height. At the base is a bar of black velvet ribbon finished with a flamingo pink wing dashed with black.

Mexican Cook's Method.

A good Mexican cook relieves the mistress of the house of worry and responsibility in a manner that is almost unknown in the United States.

The cook is given so much every day, and with this amount she will purchase each morning all the provisions for the day, including ever the staples that are usually bought in large quantities in other countries. On $1 a day a cook will provide a very good table for a family of three or four and get enough beans and tortillas and chile to set the servants table besides.

They can really do better than their mistresses, because they can usually drive sharper bargains with the marketmen of their own class, and they have more patience to haggle over the last penny.—San Antonio Express.

Paying Dog Rent.

"You may not believe it," said a young woman to her friend, "but we pay exactly five dollars a month rent for the privilege of keeping our dog in the apartment. He's a Great Dane and as we live on the top floor and take him down the stairs three times a day for fresh air, the agent contends that there is five dollars' worth of wear and tear extra on his hall carpets. It's expensive but we think it's worth it to have Dane in the flat. We are four sisters, you know, and he is no more expensive than a brother or father would be," she finished. "And he's just as much protection and more company than some brothers."—N. Y. World.

THIS IS NO IDLE TALK.
