A Real Catastrophe.

Philip, aged four, was in the habit of going across the street to a neighbor's house for milk. One day in December he returned home with an empty bucket and a grave face. "We can't get any more milk," he announced in a tone weighty with the importance of his message. "The cow's dried up." And as we stared in surprise at him he suddenly clinched the matter with an observation, evidently of his own, "They don't think that she'll thaw out till spring."—Delineator.

A Story of ....Graustark

CHAPTER XVI.

THE THROWING OF THE BOMB.

THE scene that followed beggars all description. A score of men and horses lay writhing in the street; others crept away screaming with pain; human flesh and that of animals lay in the path of the frenzied, panic stricken holiday crowd; blood mingled with the soft mud of Regengetz circus, slimy, slippery, ugly!

Olga Platanova—there was nothing left of her! We draw a veil across the picture of Olga Platanova after the bomb left her hand. No one may look upon the quivering, shattered thing that was once a living, beautiful woman.

Down in an alley below the tower a trembling, worn team of oxen stood for a day and night, awaiting the return of a master who was never to come back to them. God rest his simple soul!

Truxton King picked himself up from the street, dazed, bewildered, but unhurt. The revolutionists had begun the assault on the paralyzed minions of the government.

He looked back toward the gory entrance to the circus. There was Marlanx, mounted and swinging a saber on high. Ahead was a mass of carriages, filled with the white faced, palsied prey from the court of Graustark From somewhere near the spot where Olga Platanova fell came a harsh, penetrating command:

"Cut them off! Cut them off from the castle!"

It was his cue. He dashed into the street and ran toward the carriages, shouting with all his strength:

"Turn back! It is Marlanx! To the castle!"

Then it was that he saw the prince The boy was standing on a seat on the royal coach of state, holding out his eager little hands to some one in the thick of the crowd that surged about him. He was calling some one's name, but no one could have heard him.

Truxton's straining eyes caught sight of the figure in gray that struggled forward in response to the cries and the extended hand.

"Aunt Loraine! Aunt Loraine!" He now heard the name the boy cried with all his little heart.

Two officers struck at the uncouth, desperate American as he lifted the girl from the ground and deliberately tossed her into the coach.

"Turn back!" he shouted. A horseman rode him down. He looked up as the plunging animal's hoofs clattered about his head. Vos Engo, with drawn sword, was crowding up to the carriage door, shouting words of rejoicing at sight of the girl he loved.

He caught a glimpse of her, holding the prince in her arms, her white, agonized face turned toward the mob. Distinctly he heard her cry:

"Save him! Save Truxton King!"

From the sidewalks swarmed well armed hordes of desperadoes, firing wildly into the ranks of devoted guardsmen. Truxton fled from the danger zone as fast as his strained ankle would permit him. Bullets were striking all about him.

Some one was shouting his name behind in the scurrying crowd. He turned for a single glance backward. Little Mr. Hobbs, pale as a ghost, his cap gone, his clothing torn, was panting at his elbow.

Soldiers came riding up from behind, turning to fire from their saddles into the throng of cutthroats, led by the grim old man with the bloody saber. In the center of the troop there was a flying carriage. The Duke of Perse was lying back in the seat, his face like that of a dead man.

"The prince is safe!" shouted King joyously. "They'll make it! Thank God!"

Colonel Quinnox turned in his saddle and searched out the owner of that stirring voice.

"Come!" he called.

Even as King rushed out into the roadway a horseman galloped up from the direction of the castle. He pulled his horse to his haunches almost as he was riding over the dodging American.

"Here!" shouted the newcomer, scowling down upon the young man. "Swing up here! Quick, you fool!"

It was Vos Engo, his face black with fury. Quinnox had seized the hand of Mr. Hobbs on seeing help for King and was pulling him up before him. There was nothing for Truxton to do but to accept the timely help of his rival. An instant later he was up behind him and they were off after the last of the dragoons.

"If you don't mind, count, I'll try my luck," grated the American. Holding on with one arm, he turned and fired repeatedly in the direction of the howling crowd of rascals.

"Ride to the barracks gates, Vos Engo!" commanded Colonel Quinnox. "Be prepared to admit none but the royal reserves, who are under standing orders to report there in time of need."

Over his shoulder Vos Engo hissed to his companion: "It was not idle heroics, my friend, nor philanthropy on my part. I was commanded to come and fetch you. She would never have spoken to me again if I had refused."

"She! Ah, yes, I see! She did not forget me!" cried Truxton.

"Understand, it is not for you that I risk my life."

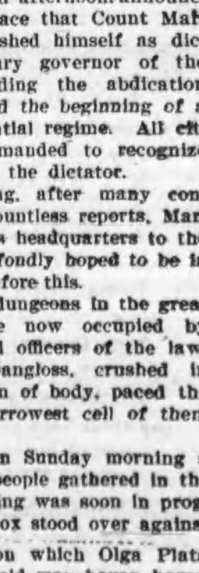
"I understand," murmured Truxton, a wry smile on his pale lips. "You mean, she is going to pay you in some way for picking me up, eh? Well, I'll put an end to that. I'll drop off again. Then you can ride on and tell her—I wouldn't be a party to the game. Do you catch my meaning?"

"You would, eh?" said the count angrily. "I'd like to see you drop off while we're going at this"—

"I've got my pistol in the middle of your back," grated Truxton. "Slow up a bit or I'll scatter your vertebrae all over your system. Pull up!"

"As you like," cried Vos Engo. "I've done my part. Colonel Quinnox will bear witness." He began pulling his horse down. "Now you are quite free to drop off."

Less than a hundred yards behind loped a riderless horse. The dragoon who had sat the saddle was lying far back in the avenue, a bullet in his head. Hobbling to the middle of the road, the American threw up his hands and shouted briskly to the bewildered animal. Five seconds later King was in the saddle and tearing along in the wake of the retreating guard.



KING WAS IN THE SADDLE.

"We need such men as King!" cried Colonel Quinnox as he waited inside the gates for the wild rider.

General Braze, with a few of his men, bloody and heartsick, was the last of the little army to reach safety in the castle grounds.

The fortress, with all guns, stores and ammunition, was in the hands of the Iron Count and his cohorts.

Baron Dangloss had been taken prisoner with a whole platoon of fighting constables. This was the last appalling bit of news to reach the horrified, disorganized forces in the castle grounds.

A wise as well as a cruel man was Marlanx. He lost no time in issuing a manifesto to the stunned, demoralized citizens of Edelweiss. Scores of criers went through the streets during the long, wretched afternoon, announcing to the populace that Count Marlanx had established himself as dictator and military governor of the principality pending the abdication of the prince and the beginning of a new and substantial regime. All citizens were commanded to recognize the authority of the dictator.

Toward evening, after many consultations and countless reports, Marlanx removed his headquarters to the tower. He had fondly hoped to be in the castle long before this.

The cells and dungeons in the great old tower were now occupied by bruised, defeated officers of the law. Baron Jasto Dangloss, crushed in spirit and broken of body, paced the blackest and narrowest cell of them all.

At 9 o'clock on Sunday morning a small group of people gathered in the square. A meeting was soon in progress. A goods box stood over against the very spot on which Olga Platanova died. An old man began haranguing the constantly growing crowd. In the group might have been seen most members of the committee of ten.

In the midst of his harangue the hand of William Spantz was arrested in one of its most emphatic gestures.

Peter Brutus was approaching at the head of a group of aliens, all armed.

"One moment!" called out Peter Brutus, lifting his hand imperatively. The speaker ceased his mouthings. "Count Marianx desires the immediate

In Perfect Accord.

Some years ago there came to an American city a delightful German, Herr von Blitz, who intended to support himself by giving lessons in his native tongue. When he had been here several months and had secured a moderate number of pupils he went one day to the mother of one of them and to her great surprise asked for her daughter's hand in marriage.

"But, my dear sir," said she, "my daughter has no fortune."

The suitor smiled upon her in an expansive generosity.

"Me, too," said he reassuringly.

"And, although we are not rich, we have thus far been able to give her every comfort. She is indeed used to luxury."

"Me, too," was the smiling rejoinder.

"But, Herr von Blitz, she will never be able to manage affairs."

"Me, too," rejoiced the lover.

"And I feel obliged to tell you that my daughter has a very high temper."

"Me too—me too."

That was enough. The mother retired from the contest, and the professor won his suit.

Quick Justice at Ascot.

Not only the horses, but the powers of the law, says the London Chronicle, are swift at Ascot, for the course has a special tribunal for the punishment of evildoers. No sooner is the pickpocket, welsher or ticket snatcher arrested than he is standing in a little room in the royal stand, where the evidence is heard and the verdict and sentence pronounced before the offender fully realizes that he is caught. Nowhere else does punishment so swiftly follow crime as at this court, which is decreed by clause 31 of the indictable offenses act of 1848. This race course tribunal arose curiously in the eighteenth century from an assault upon a royal personage. In his indignation at the impossibility of instant punishment of the assailant he ordered that in future a magistrate should always attend the royal race meeting. This has ever since been done, and by the above mentioned act the chief magistrate of Bow street was constituted ex officio a justice of the peace of the county of Berks in order to enable him to hold this court at Ascot.

Natural Age of Man.

The question as to what is the natural age of man is by no means settled, of course, but many are of the opinion that the Frenchman Flourens was not far out of the way in his estimate of the time a man should live. Taking his observations from the group mammalia, of the class vertebrata, as having the closest resemblance to man and such species as are permitted to live the full term of their natural life under circumstances not admitting of error or doubt, Flourens found that their natural life extended to about five times the period of their lives from birth up to maturity. Applying the rule thus obtained to human life and taking the age at which the body is fully matured to be twenty years, he concluded the natural duration of the life of man to be 100 years.—New York American.

The Word "Canvassing."

How "canvassing" got its election significance is one of the unsolved puzzles of etymology. The word appears originally to have meant tossing in a canvas or blanket and thence generally mishandling or assaulting. "I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat," is the Duke of Gloucester's threat to the bishop of Winchester in "King Henry VI." The next stage of meaning was that of destructive criticism, from which to thorough discussion—"canvassing" a subject—was simple enough. But how exactly did it arrive at the election sense? Dr. Johnson explained that the term meant "trying votes previously to the decision" and derived it from "canvas, as it signifies a sieve." The Oxford Dictionary, however, is unable to find this use of the word.

Jerusalem.

Old Uncle Jasper was buying a postcard in a New Orleans postoffice when a gentleman approaching the next window had a small parcel weighed and stamped for Jerusalem. On this gentleman's departure Uncle Jasper chuckled and said:

"My, oh, my!" cried Uncle Jasper in an awed tone. "Is it possible ye take letters to Jerusalem? I thought it was above!"

NOVEL ADVERTISING SCHEME

Camera Contests Among Amateur Photographers to Attract Trade.

There is scarcely a "cameraless" village in the United States, no matter how limited it may be in population, while in the towns and cities the folding kodaks and other kinds are almost as common as flies around a molasses hogshead. And because they are so common their enthusiastic users may be drafted into service as advertising assistants who can render valuable aid.

For instance, suppose you used a portion of your window display space each week for exhibition purposes, the "art gallery" being the product of local amateurs. People would stop and look, wouldn't they? They surely would. There isn't any question about that.

But, says Mr. Inquisitive, "How are we going to enlist the snapshotters?"

And the answer is that you can get people to do most anything within reason if there is any inducement for them to do it. Well, there is nothing better than a cash inducement, and if you should let the amateur photographers know that you wanted to secure attractive local views from which to make a cut to use on that calender that you are going to give away next Christmas and that the desire on your part was so great that you would be willing to give the successful contestant a ten dollar gold piece you would not have to go around asking people to get busy.

The pictures would be all displayed in your shop windows, and the name of the photographer would be printed on the entry. Besides attracting an immense amount of attention to your window and drawing customers to your store, you would get the subject for a calendar that would be just about a million per cent better than the ordinary angel-on-the-moon or cupid fancy designs, which are only a little better than no calender at all.

In any event it is a good scheme well worth trying. But don't try it unless you are going at it enthusiastically. That is the one and only way to properly utilize a merchandising or advertising scheme.

DISTRIBUTING CIRCULARS.

Get Them Into Every Home and Quick Trade Results Will Be Realized.

Merchants who are traveling along the line of least resistance are looking carefully to their advertising in newspapers. In this they call particular attention to the things which will create a buying interest in the reader. The first place for a merchant to attract widespread attention of a community is through the newspaper. Now, if you will supplement this form of advertising with good circular matter, giving a more detailed description, and see that a circular finds its way into every home in your territory you will quickly see noticeable results.

Many times a merchant makes the right resolve and even goes so far as to make a trial run, as it were, but does not keep the good work up. To be successful in business means a survival of the fittest, for it is only the ones who try and keep on trying who succeed. It is a familiar axiom which reads, "Plan your work, then work your plan," but, after all, that is the only way to succeed. Neither is it so hard as a first glance would show.

Every article was made to sell and must be sold at a profit if business is to continue. Study conditions at close range, know your customers' needs, their likes and dislikes, if possible. Keep uppermost in your mind a reasonable profit on your sales. There are enough talking points about the entire line of the store's merchandise to keep a healthy flow of store facts flowing out through the buying channel.

A brief analysis of slow selling stocks often reveals a lack of activity at the fountainhead—to be more clear and forceful, a "tiredness" of the merchant himself.

VALUE OF AGRICULTURE.

The Backbone of Any Community, Says Congressman Champ Clark.

Agriculture is the backbone of any community. One may go further and say it is the backbone of civilization. The world travels on its stomach, just as an army does, and if the world is to be fed there must be farmers to grow the produce. In view of this vital fact and the present tendency of farm people to flock to the cities and quit farming these words of Congressman Champ Clark, minority leader in the national house of representatives, are worthy of serious notice:

"The present high prices for farm products have come to stay. The rural population is playing out. The present census, if it classes the unincorporated villages as towns, will show between 60 and 65 per cent of the population as living in towns.

"At the present rate in twenty years the United States will cease to be an exporting nation for agricultural products except as to cotton. One of the principal causes of the high prices of farm products is the world movement of people toward the towns and cities. While a few people in towns and cities have barns and raise chickens and occasionally pigs, practically the entire town and city population are nonproducers of anything to eat, but are consumers only.

Already "Dead Ones."

A Missouri editor refuses to publish obituary notices of people who while living failed to subscribe for his paper and gives this pointed reason: People who do not take their local paper are already dead, and their passing away has no news value.

Spiritual Discernment.

Needed Doctrines.

In the school, as in the home, God, Christ, heaven, hell, faith, hope, charity, duty—all these doctrines and more are needed.—Cardinal Gibbons, Roman Catholic, Baltimore.

Ally of Domestic Happiness.

The greatest determining factor in domestic happiness is lov d with out love in the heart there can be no happiness in the home.—Rev. W. W Bustard, Baptist, Boston.

A Great Factor.

Faith in God is the opposing factor in the great problems of life. Faith in God is the determining factor in the development of man's character.—Rev F. W. Hinnitt, Presbyterian, Danville, Ky.

Woman's Strength.

The strongest woman in the world is not the richest, the best educated, the most graceful nor the one endowed with the greatest physical beauty, but the purest woman.—Rev. P. W. Snyder, Presbyterian, Pittsburg.

Need of Spiritual Life.

The full tides of spiritual life within the soul will neutralize the force of temptation without. A man in the midst of the burden bearing of middle life is more in need of divine grace and strength than at any other period—Rev. Dr. John Thompson, Methodist Episcopal, Wheaton, Ill.

The Tiny Vine.

Many a noble character has yielded to the tiny climbing of the vine of a sinful habit and practice. At first it was a small thing, but by tolerance it grew and became stronger and stronger as the years passed by, and, alas, the sad end has come.—Rev. Dr. Len G. Broughton, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

Opportunity and Responsibility.

When a man undertakes to discharge his responsibility he should not stand by waiting for some great opportunity or some unusually favorable occasion Tremendous results are often rooted in commonplace chances and in what seem to be unimportant incidents There is great danger of our making too much of the "great opportunity" or the "splendid chance." We should pay more attention to the commonplace things of life.—Rev. Dr. Charles E. Guthrie, Methodist Episcopal, Washington.

Test of Complete Success.

Mere money making is not an index to complete success. The knave and the fool may often do that. Nor is it the test of a man's success that many fawn upon him and flatter him while his money bags are full, that offices of honor are thrust upon him in the day of his prosperity, but this is the test—that his friends will be stanch and loyal to him in the time of his failure, that many helping hands will be reached out to him when his plans miscarry and that even through his poverty the esteem and respect of his associates will be his and that their confidence in his integrity and uprightness will not be lessened.—Rev Leo M. Franklin, Hebrew, Detroit, Mich.

Religion as an Economic Instrument.

Prominent among the subjects of today which are agitating all the people of the land is the question of the cost of living. There is no doubt that a large part of this question is economic and must find its solution through economic channels The economic remedy must of necessity take a long time in getting itself adopted. But the individual always has within himself undeveloped resources of power of utility and capacity, which with greater effort and greater skill he can bring to the market and which will enable him to meet the fresh demands which a more highly organized society forces upon him. Among such instruments religion is probably one of the most useful and the most serviceable. There is nothing more remarkable than the way in which a truly religious man cuts off sources of waste. The terms of his life are such that he must to be a religious man cut off associations, interests and habits, all of which are costly and useless and lessen his productive power. But religion as an economic instrument does more than stop waste. It creates new power. It conserves strength. It saves brains for legitimate uses and gives them force which without such a stimulus they would never develop.—Rev. Dr. A. A Berle, Congregationalist, Boston.

He Could Not Recommend It.

The editor was seated at his desk, busily engaged in writing a fervid editorial on the necessity of building a new walk to the cemetery, when a battered specimen of the tramp printer entered the office.

"Mornin', boss," said the caller. "Got any work for a print?"

"I have," answered the editor. "You happened in just right this time. I've got only a boy to help me in the office, and I need a man to set type for about a week. I have to make a trip out west. You can take off your coat and begin right now. I start tomorrow morning."

"All right," said the typographical tourist, removing his coat. "What road are you going to travel on?"

"The X., Y. and Z. mostly. I've never been on it. Know anything about it?"

"I know all about it. I've traveled it from one end to the other."

"What kind of road is it?"

"Bum!" said the printer in a tone indicative of strong disgust. "The ties are too far apart!"—Youth's Companion.

The Artistic Japanese.

Artistic impulses govern even the ordinary artisan in Japan. This, from an article in the Craftsman by Mr. L. Wakeman Curtis, illustrates the fact: "In so commercial and nonartistic a porcelain district as Nagoya I saw a big room full of men working in clay, hastily copying in quantities pieces that were to go, in a shipload, to fill an order in England. I paused beside a man who was finishing soap dishes. On each cover, before it went to be baked, he was adding the knob by which it could be lifted. That on the European model before him was utterly without sentiment, less gracious of shape than a freshly digged onion or potato. With a few slight, quick touches, seemingly as unthinking as a machine, he was yet doing more than was required—he was causing each knob as it passed under his hands to take the look of a half opened bud, a faint hint of a leaf being also quickly modeled in the 'biscuit' beneath it."

Paris' Worst Flood.

In the year 1296 rose the greatest flood of which history makes any record in Paris. "Men went in boats over the wall of the king's garden." All the island was covered, and from the foot of the hill of the university to the rising ground beyond the Marrais the upper stories of the houses rose out of a lake a mile wide. In that flood was swept away the old stone bridge that Charles the Bald had built centuries earlier, before even the Normans besieged the town, and in that flood the Petit Chatelet was destroyed. The Petit Pont fell into the river also, but that was nothing wonderful, for it was the most unfortunate of bridges and never stood firmly for fifty years at a stretch, but was forever being destroyed and regularly rebuilt. The waste of this flood was the signal for Philippe le Bel's rebuilding.—Hilaire Belloc's "Paris."

Points About a Good Horse.

There are some points which are valuable in horses of every description. The head should be proportionately large and well set on. The lower jawbones should be sufficiently far apart to enable the head to form an angle with the neck, which gives it free motion and a graceful carriage and prevents it bearing too heavily on the hand. The eye should be large, a little prominent, and the eyelids fine and thin. The ear should be small and erect and quick in motion. The lop ear indicates dullness and stubbornness. When too far back there is a disposition to mischief.

An Odd Gypsy Custom.

In Hungary, when the question of the baby's future comes up for discussion among the gypsies, there is no time wasted in argument. A blanket is held by the four corners, and the baby is thrown into the air. If it comes down on its little stomach it is a sign that it is going to be a musician; if it falls on its back it is to be a thief, and the education of the child is begun as soon as possible in one of these two time honored professions.

Painfully Frank.

"Mr. Coldcash, I have come to ask for the hand of your daughter."

"My daughter, sir?"

"Yes, I can't live without her."

"Well, sir, finish your sentence."

"Finish my sentence?"

"Yes, you were about to say you could not live without her income. Let us be candid."

How She Got the Job.

"The one thing we demand from our employees," said the head of the office force, "is correctness in figures."

The applicant smoothed her hipless skirt complacently.

"I have never had any complaints on that score," she replied, with a glance of assurance.—Bystander.

Pigeon Whistles of Pekin.

The smallest musical instruments in the world are the pigeon whistles of Pekin. They are made of thinnest bamboo and tiny gourds scraped to paper-like delicacy and fastened beneath the tail feathers of the carrier pigeons. As the birds fly through the air these instruments emit a weird aeolian melody like the harps of fairyland. Every morning and afternoon the vault of Pekin's sky is swept by these sweet, mournful notes as the birds fly to and fro, carrying messages to the bankers, the merchants, the lawyers, invitations, letters, stock quotations, a system older than the telegraph or telephone or the oldest letter service, as old as time itself. There are some twenty different kinds of pigeon whistles, some of them simple bamboo tubes with but one top and some as elaborately constructed as miniature organ pipes. They are all of featherweight lightness and when held in the hand and swept through the air emit the same delicate whistling notes as when borne through the upper atmosphere by the carrier pigeons.

A Diplomatic Official.

During the reign of Emperor Napoleon III. he and the empress visited Normandy and had arranged to spend a couple of days at Evreux. M. Janvier de la Monte, who was the prefect, learned that the revolutionaries intended to hiss the sovereigns as they passed, and so he summoned the leaders of the movement and told them that he knew of their plot. "If you carry out your plan," said he to them, "you will get six months in prison. If you do not your friends will accuse you of cowardice and treason. As a way out of the difficulty I propose to lock you up at once until the emperor has gone." The conspirators accepted the terms offered them, and so the emperor was greeted only by cheers, as the revolutionaries, frightened at the arrest of their chiefs, had not dared to utter a sound. After the emperor and empress had gone the prefect went in person to release his prisoners, who had had such a pleasant time that they greeted him with cries of "Long live the prefect!" to which M. Janvier de la Monte, who was a man of wit, replied, "My friends, do not overdo it."

Settling a Matrimonial Dispute.

Mme. Sada Yacco, the famous Japanese actress, who had been a friend of the assassinated Prince Ito from her childhood, told the following amusing anecdote:

"In my frequent quarrels with my husband we sometimes asked Prince Ito to judge between us. One day when we had had a more than usually violent dispute at Chigasaki the prince came in unexpectedly, and I asked him to decide the question. But he declined, while proposing the following solution:

"'Go down into the garden, both of you, and fight it out like sumo tori (wrestlers). The one that wins will naturally be the one who is in the right.'

"No sooner said than done! In a trice Kawakami and I were in wrestling trim. By good luck my husband was just recovering from a serious illness, and as he was very weak I soon threw him to the ground. This amused the prince enormously, who, of course, had foreseen the end of the unequal match."

Cemeteries Where Women Gossip.

Friday, the Sabbath of the Moslems, when all true believers of the masculine gender make a point of going to church, their wives, sisters and daughters resort to the cemeteries and wail for the dead. But all their time is not spent in weeping, and sorrow is not the only emotion they display, on these occasions. They take with them bunches and garlands of flowers and decorate the graves of their relatives and pray and weep over the dead for a time. Then when this pious duty is performed they gather in little groups and have a good time gossiping about the living. Thus the day of mourning is very popular among the Moslem women. It gives them almost the only opportunity they have of cultivating the acquaintance of their neighbors.

The Lion and the Unicorn.

The unicorn came into the royal arms with James I. It belongs to the royal arms of Scotland. The signet ring of Mary, mother of James, is in existence, having a unicorn on it. In the royal arms, therefore, one supporter represents England, the other Scotland.

The lion and the unicorn occur also in ancient Buddhist scriptures, placed together as supporters. Both of these animals also are seen playing draughts together in the well known Egyptian painting. But the oldest connection of the two is in the blessing of Jacob and of Moses. — London Notes and Queries.

Second Thought.

"Dear Mr. Hicks," she wrote, "I am very sorry that what you ask I cannot grant. I cannot become your wife. Yours sincerely, Ethel Barrows." Then she added: "P. S.—On second thoughts, dear George, I think I will marry you. Do come up tonight and see your own true Ethel."

A Subtle Difference.

"And so," began the browbeating attorney to the shabby witness, "you live by your wits, do you?"

"No, sir; by other folks' lack of them," corrected the witness modestly.

He Knew.

TO CATCH HOME TRADE

Team Work on Part of Local Merchants Necessary.

STRIKE OUT CATALOGUE MEN

Tradesmen, Instead of Fighting Each Other, Might Co-operate in a Campaign Against the Mail Order People and Profit Thereby.

Team work—did you ever hear of that? It is team work that wins. In sports and in business it is team work that takes the pennant, knocks the persimmon, bags the game.

The baseball teams of the big leagues have gone south to practice team work. By the time the ball season opens every team will have become a unit of efficiency. Every man on the team will have studied thoroughly and conscientiously every other man. All will have come to a mutual understanding. The catchers will know the kinks and curves of the pitchers, the shortstop will know how to co-operate with the basemen, and the basemen and the outfielders will be in complete articulation for skillful plays.

It is just the same in football. Every man on the eleven must be thoroughly drilled in team work before going on to the gridiron for a big game. If any man is found deficient in his ability to co-operate with the rest of the team he goes off the eleven in a jiffy. So it is with the members of the varsity eights who row for college honors. If No. 4 can't hit it off with the stroke oar, out of the boat he goes. A long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together—and it's the pull altogether that shows proficiency in team work.

Co-operation—team work—ought to be the watchword in any line of human endeavor where it is desirous that community results be achieved. No man lives for himself alone, we are told. If he tries it he is not likely to live to old age or to be very happy while he does live.

All this little preliminary preachment I wish to apply to the problem of town improvement. Every citizen in the town should be a member of the team and should study assiduously to develop team work to its highest efficiency. In too many towns there is no organization whatever, and even where there is organization of some sort there is too often a lack of harmony between individuals.

The merchants of every town ought to get together and do some team work against the greatest menace to their prosperity—the mail order trust. The mail order people are fully organized. They have their employees trained to do fine team work in advertising and exploiting goods. The home merchants, instead of fighting each other, might pull together in a campaign against the mail order people and profit thereby.

This is a world in which system rules. The stars in the heavens do splendid team work. Each keeps to its appointed orbit, so that it will not interfere with the progress of any other star or of the system; otherwise there would be collisions and chaos. The difference between civilization and anarchy is a mere matter of system—team work, co-operation, organization. The wisdom of the ages has developed certain laws. We must obey the laws if we belong to the team. If we don't we'll belong to the lock step procession or the chain gang.

System runs through the whole gamut of human institutions. No man or firm can build up a successful business without insisting upon team work on the part of the employees. And no town can make any definite progress under average conditions unless the individuals comprising its citizenship are willing to sink their individuality to a certain extent and work with the team—trot right along in harness.

I know towns which are a delight to the eye—well kept streets, well built houses, up to date public buildings, tidy stores, and all that. They possess an air of general prosperity and pride. I find that in most of such towns there is a considerable amount of preliminary team practice on the part of the citizens before anything definite is achieved in the town improvement line. On the other hand, I know towns just as advantageously located and as promisingly environed which give an outsider the impression of a shoe run down at the heel or a last year's birds' nest.

Upon investigation I discover that in the towns of this latter class there is no community organization whatever, except in some instances where there exists a dormant "commercial club," or something of the sort, whose members have put it to sleep by bickering among themselves. In other words, they never learned team work. As a consequence the town creeps along in the same old dusty ruts.

Those American cities which in the past quarter of a century have made the most surprising development are the ones in which co-operation has been uppermost. Their citizens have pulled together.

Any person who does not take pride in the place where he lives should move elsewhere. Perhaps he can find a place to be proud of. But in all probability if he would only put on his thinking cap and look around him, with an eye open to advantages and opportunities, he would discover things within eyeshot in which he could take real pride.

Let's try to develop the community feeling and get in the harness to do good team work.

ROBERTUS LOVE.

Meeting of Presbytery.

The meeting of Cayuga Presbytery at Union Springs on Monday and Tuesday was largely attended and the sessions very interesting. The first day was devoted to a conference on the "Problems of the Country Church."

Dr. Hoyt of the Seminary spoke on the The Country Church as a Social Force. Among other things he said that a broader community life, intellectually and morally, and a stable ministry would be the leading features in building up our waning churches.

Mr. Emerson Webster of Sennett spoke on The Financial Problems of the Country Church. Mr. Webster made a plea for the building up of the spiritual life of the churches, holding that the money problem disappears in a church that is strong in spiritual work.

The conference was continued in the evening, Rev. T. Maxwell Morrison speaking on The Call of the Country Church. He emphasized the need of the minister and the church becoming interested in the whole life of the community—touching its business methods, its social features and its moral issues.

The second speaker of the evening was Dr. Geo. B. Stewart of the seminary. He said that the country minister does not fail because he is in the country, nor the city pastor succeed because he is in the city, but that in either case success depends largely on the man. The man who is "on his job" succeeds whether he be in the country or in the city.

The conference was an unusually interteresting feature and, it is hoped, will stimulate the churches to better things.

Old Resident Gone.

Mary J. VanDeMark, widow of the late Orlando Sellen, died at her home in Genoa village on Saturday last, after a week's illness of pneumonia.

The deceased was a daughter of Jacob and Susan Kimbark VanDeMark and was born Sept. 30, 1830, in the town of Scipio. She was the only remaining one of the family of eleven children, a brother—George VanDeMark—having died only two weeks before her.

In her younger days, she taught school and nearly her whole life was spent in or near Genoa village. She was married to Orlando Sellen about thirty-five years ago, and they resided on the Sellen farm, east of the village, until their removal some years ago to their late home in Genoa. Surviving are six step-children, and several nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held in the Baptist church, of which the deceased was a member, on Monday at 2 o'clock. Rev. T. J. Searls conducted the services and three selections were sung by the following quartet: Mrs. Robt. Mastin, Miss Ida Mastin, Messrs. Foster and Springer. Among those present at the funeral were Arthur Sellen and son Arvid, and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Sellen of Moravia, Dey Sellen and daughter of Homer, and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Young of Cortland.

A. Greenfield, auctioneer.

An Incorrigible.

"If there ever was a terrible child in this world," remarked the worried mother, "he's one."

"What's his particular fault?"

"Do what I will, I can't break him of the habit of telling the truth right out when we have company."

The Scrap Book

A Writer in the Wrong Pew.

When James Payn was editor of the Cornhill Magazine his private office was invaded one day by an unannounced visitor who had managed to evade the porter downstairs. The caller's hair was long, and his clothes were shabby and untidy. He had a roll of paper in his hand. Payn, surmising a poet and an epic several thousand lines long, looked up.

"Well, sir?"

"I've brought you something about sarcoma and carcinoma."

"We are overcrowded with poetry—couldn't accept another line, not if it were by Milton."

"Poetry!" the caller flashed. "Do you know anything about sarcoma and carcinoma?"

"Italian lovers, aren't they?" said Payn imperturbably.

The caller retreated with a withering glance at the editor. Under the same roof as the Cornhill was the office of a medical and surgical journal, and it was this that the caller sought for the disposal of a treatise on those cancerous growths with the euphonious names which, with a layman's ignorance, Payn ascribed to poetry.—McClure's.

Things to Forget.

If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,
A leader of men, marching fearless and proud,
And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud
Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away
In a closet and guarded and kept from the day
In the dark and whose showing, whose sudden display,
Would cause grief and sorrow and life-long dismay,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing that will darken the joy
Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That will wipe out a smile or the least way annoy
A fellow or cause any gladness to cloy,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

Hoist With His Own Petard.

The girl with the soft, appealing eyes looked up at the tall, broad shouldered young man who was hovering about her with a protecting air, having just won her from a hated rival.

"Jim," she murmured, "now that we've been engaged ever since last night, and you won't ever need to be jealous again, I've brought you to select a tie for—for—anyway, you will, won't you? A man's taste is so correct in such things."

"For Phil, you mean? Of course I will," Jim replied with a magnanimous air. "This green tie with the yellow stripes is fine and dandy. Get him that."

"Are you sure it is quite your choice," the girl asked anxiously. "Usually you select such quiet ties."

"That is precisely my taste," the young man said glibly.

The girl exchanged a two dollar bill for the gaudy necktie and a moment later slipped it into her companion's hand.

"Jim," she said, "I can't just keep it secret an instant longer. It's really for you—the first gift I've ever given you—so I wanted it be exactly what you liked. You must wear it always when you come to see me," added the possessor of the soft, appealing eyes, with an adorable blush.—Kansas City Times.

An Eye Out.

Dispute over a cab fare in London gave Henry Herman, the dramatist, opportunity for playing a grim joke at the driver's expense. Herman was the unfortunate possessor of a glass eye, which, on Jehu's waxing demonstrative with his whip, whereof the lash passed perilously near, he suddenly pulled out and thrust in cabby's face. "You rascal," he vociferated, "look what you've done! You've cut my eye out!" Without waiting for the money in dispute the driver lashed his horse and fled aghast.

A Sad Experience.

C. K. G. Billings, the famous horseman, had a sad, heartbreaking experience with the first horse he ever owned.

When quite a young man Mr. Billings fancied a fast trotting mare priced to him at $2,000; but, not having more than $500 to his name, he persuaded his mother to advance him the balance, which she did after much coaxing and begging. In due time his father heard of the fast trotter his son had bought and expressed a desire to try her.

The request was complied with, and after a few spins on the road the old gentleman asked how much he had paid for her.

"Six hundred dollars, father," was the answer.

"Well, Charley, the mare is not worth it," said the governor, "but I rather like the way she steps, so I will take her from you, and you can have your $600."

The deal had to be closed.

Real Economy.

"Martha," said old Silas Long to his wife, "I think I'll go and get a few apples from the orchard."

He looked at her timidly. She said: "Well, be careful now, Si, only to pick the bad ones."

"Suppose there ain't no bad ones, Martha."

"Then ye'll have to wait till some are bad, of course," the old lady snapped. "We can't afford to eat good, sound fruit with 8 cents a bushel."

THOUGHT HE HAD 'EM.

The Surprise That Greeted Him After His Debauch.

A millionaire who had queer ideas of humor and the means to carry them into effect lived in great style near Monte Carlo. This man had an ivory white villa on a gray crag in a garden of palms and roses, fronting the sun and sunlit sea. Here he would entertain his friends with practical jokes.

One night, after roulette at the casino and supper at Ciro's, a party of young men were taken to the villa. A certain young man had drunk a little too much vintage champagne at the elegant restaurant, and him the host resolved to play one of his jokes upon. So when the young man fell asleep in the billiard room two servants, repressing their smiles, carried him away.

The other guests were awakened the next morning by the host in person. He led them through sunlit marble corridors, through rooms whose walls of glass gave views of the blue Mediterranean, of sailing ships, rose gardens and the faroff maritime Alps, with their pale snow caps. Finally he brought them to a peephole.

The scene they saw through their peephole was absurd. A dazed man in evening dress, slowly waking to consciousness, lay on a white plastered floor and looked up in horror at a carpeted ceiling. A massive bed, a bureau, washstands and armchairs, all securely fastened, stared down at him from above. His eyes rested on a huge tub directly over his head, in which a fine palm was growing downwards. He gave a yell of terror, rolled over and clutched with frenzied hands the stem of the chandelier, which came up through the plastered floor.

Thereupon the practical joker of a host burst, with a loud laugh, into the the room.

"They all do it!" he cried. "They all without exception grab the chandelier for fear they will fall up to the ceiling!"

Be Considerate.

We lose trust in each other not through the faults of our neighbors, but because of our own exactions. We expect too much from others, too little from ourselves, always viewing our friends from our standpoint, forgetful of the suffering, the worry and the toil which demand attention on our right and left.

Patriotic.

That Kentuckians have a very high regard for their native state is illustrated by this anecdote told by one of them:

Once a Kentuckian died, so a near relative went to the local tombstone artist to arrange about an inscription on the deceased's tombstone.

After due cogitation the near relative said:

"Carve on it, 'He's gone to a better place.'

"I'll carve, 'He's gone to heaven,' if you want me to," remarked the tombstone artist, "but, as for that other inscription, there's no better place than Kentucky."

Couldn't Ruin Their Eyes.

Sir Henry Holland, the noted English physician, had his studies interrupted by a youth who wanted advice. The young man, with considerable swagger, said he proposed locating in some town as an oculist. A city in which a large number of students were located was preferred. "There," he continued, "I would have unlimited opportunities of treating the eyes of overstudious scholars."

Dr. Holland was reluctant to have a community's eyes endangered because of his indorsement of a doubtful practitioner. He thought a few moments and then advised the ambitious oculist to locate in a small town near Liverpool, stating that a large school was located there.

The young man thanked the doctor. In a few days he reached the suggested field for his experiments. The large buildings in the distance indicated a magnificent school and splendid opportunities.

He investigated and collapsed. The school was one for the hopelessly blind.

Lively Cheese.

A young lady entered a grocer's shop in London and asked for some good cheese. The grocer showed her an assortment which did not please her. She wanted some particularly "lively" cheese. He then showed her the remainder of his stock, amounting to some half dozen samples. No, she wanted it still more "lively." At last the grocer, losing all patience, sarcastically called to his assistant:

"John, unchain No. 7 and let it walk in."

Peach Leaf Curl.

The time to spray for Peach Leaf Curl is at hand. The warm days of the past weeks have started the buds in some sections. If the weather should come off wet and cold heavy losses from the curl may be expected. Spray thoroughly and spray at once. Be especially thorough on your Elbertas. They are very susceptible to the curl. To be effective every bud clear out to the tip of the twig should be coated. The spores of the fungus winter on the bud scales. Spray the trees from both sides. Use a power sprayer if possible and put on the pressure. What material you use is less important than when and how you put it on. Bordeaux 5 5-50, Copper sulfate 2 pounds to 50 gallons of water or Lime Sulfur will give equally good results if properly applied. Concentrated (commercial or home boiled) lime sulfur testing around 32 Baume will control curl at dilutions of from 1-9 to 1-15. Use the stronger (1-9) if you have scale to control.

A bulletin on Peach Leaf Curl and its control is now in press. It should be ready for distribution soon. If you desire a copy send your name and address to the undersigned.

Pear Blight.

Fire Blight or Pear Blight as it is frequently called will soon be making its appearance. It first shows itself in the blossoms causing the blossoms and leaves on the fruit spur to turn black and shrivel. In this form it is known as "blossom blight." This is often overlooked by the growers yet it is imperative that these blighted spurs be detected and removed if your pear and young apple trees are to be saved from serious injury or even death. That young Bartlett Pear orchard of yours just nicely coming into bearing is especially in danger. You can't afford to lose many limbs out of those trees. No need of it. You can save the trees if you will. Write at once for bulletin No. 272 on Fire Blight and Howto Control it. This bulletin has just been issued. It is written especially for the grower. Free to all growers in the State of New York who ask for it.

The fitting up of the new polo grounds of the Point Judith Polo Club, of Narragansett Pier, has been entrusted to G. W Richardson & Son of Auburn, who are to equip the grounds in a manner following the style of some of the famous grounds in France. This firm is now working on contracts also for the new Aero Club of America, of New York City, the Dauntless Boat Club, of Essex, Conn., whose Club house is on Long Island Sound, and for the famous Rockaway Hunt Club at Cedarhurst, L. I., one of the oldest and most prosperous country clubs in America.

The Auburn firm has long specialized in Clubs, and has probably furnished more club houses than any other house in America.

The Ingenious Magpie.

The magpie is nothing if not ingenious. He always barricades his bulky nest with thorn branches, so that to plunder it is by no means an easy matter, but when circumstances oblige the "pie" to build in a low bush or hedge an absence of lofty trees being a marked feature of some northern localities, he not only interlaces his home, but also the entire bush, in a most formidable manner. Nor does he stop here. To "make assurance double sure" he fashions a means of exit as well as an entrance to the castle, so that if disturbed he can slip out by his back door, as it were.—London Graphic.

John and the Franchise.

A woman suffrage lecturer in England recently brought down the house with the following argument: "I have no vote, but my groom has. I have a great respect for that man in the stables, but I am sure if I were to go to him and say, 'John, will you exercise the franchise?' he would reply, 'Please, mum, which horse be that?'"

WATCHES AND Cream Separators

There are some sensible dairy farmers who buy $1.–, $5.– and $10.– watches, because they serve the purpose of a watch and waste nothing while they last.

But would any of these sensible dairy farmers put their money into and carry a $1.–, $5.– or $10.– watch if it cost them from 25 cents to $1.– that they might otherwise save EVERY DAY to do so?

Most assuredly they would not.

Then why should any dairy farmer buy a cream separator of the $1.–, $5.– or $10.– watch kind where its use DOES mean a WASTE of from 25 cents to $1.– every day, in quantity and quality of product, that a DE LAVAL cream separator would SAVE?

THAT'S the all-important DIFFERENCE between POOR SEPARATORS and POOR WATCHES, —one's good enough while it lasts but the other wastes twice a day from the time its use begins.

A De Laval catalogue is a separator education to be had for the asking.

Temperance Topics

I WOULD ABOLISH THE SALE OF LIQUOR

By R. B. Glenn.

If I had the power to give this country the one thing that I think it most truly needs next to the religion of Jesus Christ, and which in my judgment would be most conducive to the industrial education and moral upbuilding of the nation, I would unhesitatingly give it a strong National temperance law, and compel its enforcement by the proper officers.

I here assert that all the wrongs and iniquities of privilege and all the robberies, oppression and greed of monopolies do not compare with the sorrow, the ruin, the misery, the crime, the poverty, the madness, the vice, the degradation, the death and damnation produced by strong drink. It destroys home life; breaks the hearts of mothers and wives; takes the clothes off the backs of little children and substitutes rags; degrades manhood; makes lewd women out of virtuous maidens; stifles ambition, destroys hope, weakens the body, blights the mind and blackens the soul until it turns this earth, made for man's happiness and use, into a hell for his ruin and misery.

In the interest, therefore, of business! for the protection of helpless women and children; for the suppression of crime; the amelioration of want and poverty; the prevention of disease; the preservation of life, the salvation of human souls, and for the sake of more than eighty-six millions of true, brave and noble American men, women and children, I would bestow this gift of national temperance, thus destroying a fearful curse, and restoring man to the God-like image in which he was created.

I would offer this gift to the American people.

Sensible Germany.

The heads of the chemical industry in Germany have come to the conclusion that the following circular is the proper thing to place in the hands of their constituencies:

"We urge our members to use every opportunity to set before their workmen the disadvantages of the use of alcohol. Among these are the useless expenditure of money, the weakening of their own health and that of their children, and the consequent diminished resistance to disease; the greater liability to accidents among men who are not total abstainers, particularly among machines; the earlier invalidism and the diminished income.

"We urge our members to oppose the use of alcohol by all means, by providing non-alcoholic drinks, such as cold coffee and mineral water in summer and hot drinks in winter, also by the dissemination of popular literature, by the erection of proper places of amusement for the hands in large factories, of reading-rooms, workmen's homes, or rather homes in which alcohol is excluded, by young people's societies which will keep young people off the streets and away from the drinking places.

"No alcohol should be allowed in factories, particularly on account of the danger from accidents. Infringements of the order should be punished. Any who appear on the premises under the influence of liquor should be discharged."

Sentiment Crystalizing.

The Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, as well as the wholesale organizations, with the brewers and distillers, are becoming frightened at the rising wave of intelligent thinking that is manifesting itself, not only in our Southland, but throughout the length and breadth of our country. Anyone who has an eye to see and who is willing to exercise his powers of vision, cannot fail, in the exercise of even the most casual glance, to discover that the sentiment of the American people is crystalizing with tremendous force to the conviction that our honored Union must be delivered without delay against not only the abuse, but the use in any quantity, of that which never aids but always injures.

Student Protest Against Alcohol.

A movement is progressing in Germany which indicates that there will be in that country a young German whose watchword will be "alcohol-free." As described in Die Enthaltsamkeit, the organ of the German abstaining teachers, it is a movement among the students in the universities to shake off the bondage of the old drinking customs, and retaining the spirit of comradeship which the komers are supposed to promote, to direct it in better channels.

Has No Physical Use.

It is an error to say that alcohol is necessary to laborers occupied with fatiguing work, that it gives heart for work or renews their strength; the artificial excitement produced by it rapidly gives place to nervous depression and weakness. In reality alcohol has no actual use for anyone.

Abolition Must Come.

Human evolution has now reached the stage when the abolition of the use of alcohol as a beverage is expected and required. Abstinence is one of the principles of human eugenics, that new science that is just being born.

Man and Labor.

Lady Russell in her volume "Swallowfield and Its Owners" points out that in 1820 the Berkshire estate came into the hands of Sir Henry Russell, who had been a friend of Dr. Johnson. It was at Russell's table that one day the doctor maintained that "no man loved labor; no man would work if he could help it." Reynolds objected and gave Pope for instance. But Pope's inspiration, said the doctor, "was the love of fame and not the love of labor. Leander swam the Hellespont, but that doesn't prove that he loved swimming."

TRUXTON KING

presence of the following citizens at his office in the tower. I shall call off the names." He began with William Spantz. The name of each of his associates in the committee of ten followed.

Ten minutes later every member of the committee of ten, except Peter Brutus, was behind lock and bar, together with their shivering associates, all of them dumbly muttering to themselves the awful sentence that Marlanx had passed upon them.

"You are to die at sunset. Graustark still knows how to punish assassins. There is no room in Graustark for anarchy. I shall wipe it out today."

"Sir, your promise!" gasped William Spantz. "We are your friends—the true party of"—

"Enough! Do not speak again! Captain Brutus, you will send criers abroad to notify the citizens that I, Count Marlanx, have ordered the execution of the ringleaders in the plot to dynamite the prince, at sunset in the square. Away with the carrion!"

Then it was, and not till then, that the committee of ten found him out! Then it was that they came to know Peter Brutus!

The unrecognizable corpse of Olga Platanova had been buried in quicklime outside the city walls. There was something distinctly grewsome in the fact that half a dozen deep graves were dug alongside hers hours before death came to the wretches who were to occupy them.

At 3 o'clock the Iron Count coolly sent messengers to the homes of the leading merchants and bankers of the city. They, with the priests, the doctors, the municipal officers and the manufacturers, were commanded to appear before him at 5 o'clock for the purpose of discussing the welfare of the city and its people.

Marlanx stated his position clearly. He left no room for doubt in their minds. The strings were in his hands. Without hesitation he informed the leading men of the city that he was to be the Prince of Graustark.

"I will rule Graustark or destroy her. Those of you who do not expect or desire to live under my rule, which, I promise you, shall be a wise one, may leave the city for other lands," he said calmly, "just as soon as my deputies have completed the formal transfer of all your belongings to the crown treasury—all, I say, even to the minutest trifle. Permit me to add in that connection, gentlemen, the transfer will not be a prolonged affair."

They glared back at him and subsided into bitter silence.

"I am well aware that you love little Prince Robin. Now, respecting young master Robin, I have no great desire to kill him."

He waited to see the effect of this brutal announcement. His hearers stiffened, and—yes, they held their breath.

"He has one alternative—he and his lords. I trust that you, as sensible gentlemen, will find the means to convey to him your advice that he seize the opportunity I shall offer him to escape with his life. Let me interrupt myself to call to your attention the fact that I am punishing the anarchists at sunset. To resume, the boy may return to America, where he belongs. I will give him free and safe escort to the United States. If he chooses to accept my kindly terms, all well and good; if not, gentlemen, I shall starve him out or blow the castle down. It may interest you to hear that I expect to establish a new nobility in Graustark. I trust I may now be addressing at least a few of the future noble lords of Graustark. Good day, gentlemen."

At the castle the deepest gloom prevailed. It was like a nightmare to the beleaguered household, a dream from which there seemed to be no awakening. Colonel Quinnox as commander of the royal guard ruled supreme. General Braze tore off his own epaulets and presented himself to Quinnox as a soldier of the file.

Prince Robin, quite recovered from his fright, donned the uniform of a colonel of the royal dragoons, buckled on his jeweled sword and, with boyish zeal, demanded at a council of war Colonel Quinnox's reasons for not going forth to slay the rioters.

"Your highness," said the colonel bitterly, "the real army is outside the walls, not inside. We are a pitiful handful, less than 300 men all told, counting the wounded. Count Marlanx heads an army of several thousand. He"—

"He wants to get in here so's he can kill me. Is that so, Colonel Quinnox?" The prince was very pale, but quite calm.

"Oh, I wouldn't put it just that way, your"—

"Oh, I know! You can't fool me. I've always known that he wants to kill me. But how can he? Nobody can. He ought to know that. He must be awful stupid."

"We must get word to Tullis!" cried several in a breath. A dozen men volunteered to risk their lives in the attempt to find the American in the hills. Two men were chosen—by lot. They were to venture forth that very night.

"HE'S SAFE, YOUR HIGHNESS."

"My lords," said the prince as the council was on the point of dissolving, "is it all right for me to ask a question now?"

"Certainly, Robin," said the prime minister.

"Well, I'd like to know where Mr. King is."

"He's safe, your highness," said Quinnox.

"Well, you run in and tell Aunt Loraine this minute that Mr. King sends his love to her and begs her to rest easy. See if it doesn't cheer her up a bit."

At night two attempts were made by Haddan and another subaltern to leave the castle to reach Tullis, but both sorties proved failures. A day later Marlanx sent two men under a flag of truce to offer his infamous ultimatum. His offer of a safe conduct of the prince to America was refused, for the inmates of the castle knew full well the count would doom the lad to instant death if he should get him in his possession.

A single distant volley at sunset had puzzled the men on guard at the castle. They had no means of knowing that the committee of ten and its wretched friends had been shot down like dogs in the public square. Peter Brutus was in charge of the squad of executioners.

CHAPTER XVII.

TRUXTON EXACTS A PROMISE.

TRUXTON KING had been in a resentful frame of mind for nearly forty-eight hours. In the first place, he had not had so much as a single glimpse of the girl he now worshiped with all his heart. In the second place, he had learned, with unpleasant promptness, that Count Vos Engo was the officer in command of the house guard, a position as gravely responsible as it was honorable.

He had, of course, proffered his services to Colonel Quinnox. The colonel, who admired the Americans, gravely informed him that there was no regular duty to which he could be assigned, but that he would expect him to hold himself ready for any emergency. In case of an assault he was to report to Count Vos Engo.

But he was not satisfied. Loraine had not come forward with a word of greeting or relief—in fact, she had not appeared outside the castle doors.

Toward dusk on Monday, long after the arrival of the refugees, he sat in gloomy contemplation of his own unhappiness, darkly glowering upon the unfriendly portals from a distant stone bench.

A brisk guardsman separated himself from the knot of men at the castle doors and crossed the plaza toward him.

Judge the dismay and anger when the soldier, a bit shamefaced himself, briefly announced that Count Vos Engo had issued an order against loitering in close proximity to the castle.

Truxton's cheek burned. He saw in an instant that the order was meant for him and for no one else, he being the only outsider likely to come under the head of "loiterer."

Truxton turned to him with a frank smile. "Please tell Count Vos Engo that I am the last person in the world to disregard discipline at a time like this."

His glance swept the balcony, suddenly becoming fixed on a couple near the third column. Count Vos Engo and Loraine Tullis were standing there together, unmistakably watching his humiliating departure.

The next morning he encountered Vos Engo near the grotto.

Catching sight of Vos Engo, he hastened across the avenue and caught up to him.

"Good morning," said Truxton. Vos Engo did not smile as he eyed the tall American. "I haven't had a chance to thank you for coming back for me last Saturday. Allow me to say that it was a very brave thing to do."

"I do not like your words, Mr. King, nor the way in which you glare at me."

"I'm making it easier to tell you the agreeable news, Count Vos Engo; that's all. Take your hand off your sword, please—some other time perhaps, but not in these days, when we need men, not cripples. I'll tell you what I have discovered, and then we'll drop the matter until some other time. Frankly, count, I have made the gratifying discovery that you are a miserable cur."

Count Vos Engo went very white.

"As you say, there is another and a better time. We need dogs as well as men in these days."

Truxton strolled off to the stables, picking up Mr. Hobbs on the way.

"Hobbs," he said, "we've got to find John Tullis; that's all there is to it."

"I dare say, sir," said Mr. Hobbs, with sprightly decisiveness. "He's very much needed."

"I'm going to need him before long as my second."

Later on much of Truxton's good humor was restored and his vanity pleased by a polite request from Count Halfont to attend an important council in the "room of wrangles" that evening at 9.

Very boldly he advanced upon the castle a few minutes before the appointed hour.

He came upon Loraine Tullis at the edge of the terrace. She was walking slowly in the soft shadows beyond the row of lights on the lower gallery. He knew her at a glance, this slim girl in spotless white.

"Loraine!" he whispered, reaching her side in two bounds. She put out her hands, and he clasped them. Plainly she was confused. "I've been dying

Points on the Census.

The census begins April 15 and must be completed in thirty days.

The enumerators will wear a badge inscribed "United States Census, 1910."

The law requires every person to furnish the prescribed information, but also provides that it shall be treated confidentially, so that no injury can come to any person from answering the questions.

The Census Bureau, prior to April 15, will distribute to every farm owner and tenant in this state a blank or schedule containing the Census questions relative to farm operations and equipment. This should be filled up, if possible, not later than the morning of April 15, but if any one has been unable to fill it up by that time, he should do it as soon afterwards as he can.

People who do not speak English or who do not understand the schedule completely should get help from others, if possible, in filling it up.

The President has issued a proclamation, calling on all citizens to co-operate with the Census and assuring them that it has nothing to do with taxation, army or jury service, compulsory school attendance, regulation of immigration, or enforcement of any law, and that no one can be injured by answering the inquiries.

It is of the utmost importance that the farm census of this state be complete and correct.

Therefore every farm owner and tenant should promptly, fully and accurately fill up the "Advance Farm Schedule" and carefully preserve it for the enumerator when he calls.

Picture-Making in Soudan.

The natives in the Soudan have a great fear of the camera. It is their belief that when a photographer takes a picture of one of them, he takes away the shadow, or perhaps it is the astral body of that person. They feel that in having their picture taken they are losing something of their individuality which they can never regain. The consequence is that the photographer is anything but welcome among them, and the leveling of a photographic machine, especially in the out-of-the-way parts of the country, will cause every native in sight to fall flat on his face. And he will remain in that posture until quite sure the danger, as he regards it, is past.

It required subterfuge to meet with the situation in the Soudan, for I soon saw that if I was to get any pictures worth while I would have to do so surreptitiously, The moving-picture machine seemed to be especially detested by the natives, and it was the machine, of course, that I especially wanted to use. I hit upon the plan of passing myself off for a surveyor, and was eminently successful. They are quite used to surveyors out there, and it may be recalled that the instruments used by surveyors are similar, to a degree at least, to the moving picture machines, that is, to the untrained mind. With one of my porters spreading the word that I was a surveyor, and aided by the natural curiosity of the people I found that my way was made quite smooth.—The Ladies' World for April

Old Steamboat Days.

Steamboat men of the old days were regarded with envy by the landsmen of river towns, and rated in proportion to the importance and grandeur of the boat on which they ran, says Raymond Lee Hill in The Travel Magazine for April. A proud thing it was for a chap to be employed on such steamers as the Grand Turk, the Alex. Scott or the Robert E. Lee, especially for the negro barbers and deckhands. Mark Twain tells of a husky darky who with his pompous airs kept offending the guests at a colored ball in New Orleans until finally one of the managers approached him and demanded:

"Who is you, anyway? Who is you? dat's what I wants to know!"

"Who is I?" retorted the latter, in nowise discomfited, and bristling with importance. "Who is I?" I let you know mighty quick who I is! I want you niggers to understan' dat I fires de middle do' on de Aleck Scott!"

On another occasion the daughter of a middle aged negro woman was following the usual custom of her colored friends—enjoying a twilight flirtation—when her mother stuck her head through a broken window pane and called out in a proud voice, loud enough for all her neighbors to hear:

"You Mary Ann, come in de house dis minute! Stannin' out dah foolin' 'long wid dat low trash, an heah's de barber off'n de Gran' Turk wants to conwerse wid you!"

Pilots at this time were of special consequence. Every courtesy was shown them by captain and crews, and extreme deference by the negro barbers, waiters and roustabouts. The wages were high. As a general rule, the scale was about $400 per month, but during the flush Kansas trade on the Missouri River, a good pilot received as much as $900 a trip, which amounted to $1,800 a month But a pilot only mastered his trade after long experience and close application. And he had to be well versed in his vocation, for in those days there were no snag and dredge boats, beacon lamps, or powerful searchlights to play ahead of the vessel. The pilot must have a mental map of the river, remembering the location of every snag, sand bar, shallow and other danger, not only on clear days and nights, but also in the darkness, fog, sleet and snow. No danger must be considered. In fact many of the steamboat disasters were due to sheer foolhardiness.

BACK YARD BEAUTY.

Suggestion For Transforming Rear of Homes.

THE LESSON OF ONE WOMAN

How Yard in Back of the House of Mrs. Dennison in Scranton, Pa., Is Utilized During All the Seasons of the Year.

There is a study in contrasts in back yards, and it demonstrates what may be accomplished by the expenditure of some effort and a little skill in floriculture. Anybody with a back yard, no matter how liliputian in size or how steep, may have a pretty little flower or vegetable garden. In many large towns and cities there has long been a successful movement for the beautifying of that traditional eyesore, the back yard, where most people appear to think all kinds of rubbish and debris should be piled up and displayed in a conspicuous manner. Flowers and vegetables in the back yards keep the young folks—and the older ones, too—out of mischief, and a housewife who has to care for a few plants has not much time for gossiping and conferring with gossipy neighbors over the rear fence. Aside from having this highly beneficial effect a yard full of nice things is most instructive. It takes people back to the soil and gives them something more to think about than the ordinary workaday matters of prosaic life. As a rule, those interested in land culture not only take their work seriously, but find in it one of the greatest pleasures of life. During an investigation of towns and cities for the betterment of back yards one that was a pleasure to the eye and a credit to the city of Scranton, Pa., was the rear yard of Mrs. F. E. Dennison. There is quite a plot of ground in the rear of her house which was a sight to make the spirit rise up and rebel when she first saw it. There were old tin cans and boots, and weeds sprouted in much confusion. But she soon changed all this.

Purchasing some seed, she fell to, and in a very short time that unsightly back yard blossomed like the proverbial rose garden. Now she has ever so many kinds of plants. She has made it a practice in the morning before attending to her household duties to take hold of hoe and spade and to work in her garden. The rest of the family lend their assistance also. She has a procession of flowers. Before the snow leaves the ground in the late winter the snowdrops appear in the beds; then when March winds blow and bluster pretty crocuses peep out, followed by jonquils and bleeding hearts; then as summer rolls round her garden is a mass of beautiful flowers and a variety of vegetables. Now, this little sermon is preached to ruralites not to tell them of the pretty yard of this industrious woman, but only to demonstrate just what can be done with that small space in the rear of their homes. So let those that are not affected with hookworm and interested in the improvement of their towns band together to see that the small piece of ground back of their houses is tilled and made beautiful and useful.

A WELL ARRANGED BACK YARD.
[From American City Magazine, New York.]

Helpful Hints For Playgrounds.

The universal impulse to play is a divinely ordered thing. If God gives the instinct man ought to provide the playground.

Man plays only where he is a human being in the fullest sense of the word, and he has reached full humanity only when he plays.

It would be difficult to find any point at which in our large cities a dollar will go further in the making of those things for which the city exists than in the provision and maintenance of playgrounds.

In these playgrounds and in their work lie the beginning of social redemption of the people in large cities. They furnish the spectacle of a city saving itself; of the people of a great city finding nature and God by finding their neighbors and themselves.

Here lies the function of the playground. It gives the individual the opportunity for mastery of his body under conditions of increasing difficulties in its varied physical activities. It also gives the opportunity for the social experiences of democracy of self and group government. It is the school for physical and social self discovery and self direction.

There is another point of view which maintains that no matter how great the cost the value of the boy saved is inestimably beyond it. This point of view is suggested by that Master of practical life who knew full well the value of money, even the widow's mite. For what shall it profit a city if it gain the whole world and lose the souls of its children?
