Rev. Mr. Wright of England will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist church next Sunday at the usual hour of service.

Miss Ruth Burgenstock was successfully surprised Wednesday afternoon, April 20, by a number of her little girl friends and schoolmates, chaperoned by their teacher, Miss Elizabeth Bowness, the occasion being Miss Ruth's seventh birthday. The little people left for home in the early evening having had a very enjoyable time.

The funeral of Miss Altheda Smith, whose death occurred last Friday, was largely attended at her late home this afternoon. Rev. Thomas Packard officiated, speaking from the text: "O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory?" He also sang two touching solos accompanying himself on the autoharp. The bearers were: John Snyder, Robert Eaker, George Wood, F. H. Barnes and L. H. Smith. Burial was made in the family lot in the Scipio Rural cemetery. Miss Smith was born in Greene county, N. Y., August 24, 1831, but soon after her birth the family moved to Scipio. She is survived by one brother, Newman Smith of Fleming, and one sister, Miss Adeline Smith, who shared the family home with her and who is now left alone. She has the sympathy of her many friends in her loneliness.

Among those in attendance at the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred V. Sisson of East Venice.

That "Wonderful Eclipse."

An article headed "Wonderful Eclipse in June" is going the rounds of the press, and it appeared in last week's TRIBUNE. The Ithacan of April 23 calls the attention of its readers to the fact that no such eclipse will take place this year and says that the item evidently refers to an eclipse on June 17 of last year. By consulting an almanac it may be seen that the following eclipses will take place in 1910:

A total eclipse of the sun May 8, invisible in America; visible in Australia, Tasmania, New Guinea, Java and the southern portions of Sumatra, Borneo and Celebes.

A total eclipse of the moon May 23-24, visible in the United States.

A partial eclipse of the sun November 1, invisible in the United States. Visible in Siberia, northern Japan and the western portion of Alaska and in the Sandwich Islands.

A total eclipse of the moon November 16, visible in the United States.

Brazil's Great Salt Works. A single great salt works in Brazil covers an area of almost twenty-four square miles.

Once Lived in Genoa.

Emory Cobb, a prominent resident of Kankakee, Illinois, died at his home in that place on April 14, 1910, as the result of injuries received by being kicked in the head by his old family horse. Mr. Cobb spent part of his boyhood in the town of Genoa. He is survived by a wife and three sons. The Kankakee Gazette said of him:

"In the death of Mr. Cobb Kankakee loses one of its foremost citizens and one whose place can never be replaced. Vitally interested in the city which he adopted when a village, he had allied himself with its progress from year to year. He was one of the few men who, possessing the means, was willing to devote his resources to the moral and material advancement of the city with which he was identified, without thought of financial returns.

"To enumerate the good works of Mr. Cobb in all the various fields of activity in Kankakee would be to write a history of the city's development, so intimately has he been connected with all movements towards making it a larger and better place.

"Emory Cobb was born August 29, 1831, in Dryden, Tompkins county, and was the son of William and Achsah Cobb. When 11 years old his father died and he went to Northville, Cayuga county, to live with his grandfather, Lem Bradley. After receiving a common school education he learned telegraphy at Ithaca and was later assigned as operator at Fredonia. By 1851 he had been promoted to bookkeeper for the company at Cleveland, and the following year was made manager of the company, the Erie & Michigan telegraph line. On the day that he was 21 years of age, while he was a passenger on the steamer Atlantic, the boat took fire and he was one of the few passengers who survived after the boat went to the bottom. Being an expert swimmer he managed to cling to floating wreckage until rescued. He was on his way from Cleveland to Chicago. Once in the western metropolis his rise was rapid, and he became superintendent of the western division of the Western Union Telegraph Company. On resigning from that company he retired to Kankakee and became an agriculturist and stock raiser. He was for years a member of the State Board of Agriculture and from 1873 to 1883 was president of the Board of Trustees of the University of Illinois."

Interlaken Teachers.

The Interlaken Review has the following to say regarding the teachers of the High school for the coming year:

"The board have engaged the faculty for the ensuing year as follows: Principal, Prof. G. B. Springer, of Genoa; preceptress, Miss Elizabeth A. Jeffers; assistant teacher, Miss Alice Owen, of Lodi; intermediate, Miss Henrietta Wheeler; primary, Miss Agnes L. Peck.

Prof Springer has had considerable experience at the head of various schools, and is well known as a disciplinarian. For a time he was in charge of the schools of the George Junior Republic. He is not a stranger to Seneca county, having formerly been in business in Romulus. Miss Owen is a daughter of Rev. M. J. Owen, of Lodi, and has been teaching this year at Watkins, resigning there to accept the position offered here."

The ninetieth commencement of Auburn Theological Seminary will be observed at Auburn, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 3, 4, and 5. On Tuesday evening there will be an address by Rev. Charles L. Thompson, D. D., New York City.

Wednesday is Alumni day and there will be four notable addresses. Rev. Herrick Johnson, D. D., class of '60, St. Louis, Mo., will speak on The True Evangelism; Rev. Silas E. Persons, class of '85, Cazenovia, N. Y., will speak on the Opportunity of the Village Church; The Hon. John W. Foster, Secretary of State during President Harrison's administration, will speak on An Appeal to the Clergy to Aid the Peace Propaganda; and the Rev. Alexander G. Cameron, class of '88, Sylvania, Pa., will preach the sermon. The first two addresses will be in the morning, General Foster's address in the afternoon, and the sermon in the evening. Following the sermon there will be a reception given by the Middle class.

The Commencement exercises will take place on Thursday at 12 o'clock and will consist of an address by President Stewart and the presentation of diplomas. At 1:30 o'clock the ladies of the Central Presbyterian church will give a dinner to the Alumni and visiting friends.

Impressions of America.

The America I have discovered is so different from the America that my fancy painted that I find it extremely difficult to keep my enthusiasm about the country within reasonable limits of restraint. From what I had read about the United States, and from what others had told me, I imagined it to be a land to which no artist—especially a vocal artist—would go of his own volition. The New York successes of other singers were frequently talked of, but when an American engagement was suggested to me, I invariably said it was the last country in the world to which I desired to go.

The trouble was that, in some way, I had gained the idea that the climate was next to impossible; that singers were especially subject to all sorts of serious illnesses, and that, to make matters still worse, the people were unduly exacting and the critics un-necessarily severe. Naturally, these preconceived opinions had a tendency to delay my coming to America, although when the first definite proposition was made to me, some two years ago, in Vienna, there were several other reasons why it seemed wise to decline. In reality, I was scarcely free, my engagements compelling me to remain in Austria for some time longer. Then, I also wanted to improve my Italian and French repertoire by studying with Jean de Rezske. Fortunately for me the American managers were not as willing to take my excuses as I was to make them, so, when they followed me to England and repeated their proposition in May 1909, they found that my London experiences had made me more amenable to their arguments.—The Ladies' World for May.

Prisoner Captured.

James A. Cole, the trusty who escaped from Auburn prison early Sunday morning, was taken back to prison Monday evening, having been captured near Cayuga Lake Park. Cole had started for Owego, he said, to see his wife, and made good progress on Sunday, but in the darkness of night he lost his way and when morning came he was but two miles from where he started. Turning back, he traveled to Cayuga and across the railroad bridge to the west side of the lake. He then turned to the left and continued until he reached a barn near Cayuga Lake Park. At this point he was noticed, and the Chief of Police of Seneca Falls was notified. He was soon overtaken and taken back to Auburn. Inside the prison, he collapsed. He had nothing to eat while on his long tramp and was out in all the rain of Sunday. To pay for his short vacation, Cole will have to serve 13 months and 16 days longer than his original sentence.

Without an Enemy.

Heaven help the man who imagines he can dodge enemies by trying to please everybody! If such an individual ever succeeded we should be glad of it—not that we believe in a man going through the world trying to find beams to knock and thump his poor head against, disputing every man's opinion, fighting and elbowing, and crowding all who differ with him. That again is another extreme. Other people have a right to their opinion, so have you; don't fall into the error of supposing they will respect you less for maintaining it or respect you more for turning your coat every day to match the color of theirs. Wear your own colors in spite of wind or weather, storm or sunshine. It costs the vacillating and irresolute ten times the trouble to wind, and shuffle and twist, that it does honest and manly independence to stand its ground.—Exchange.

CHAPTER XIX. THE RETURN.

FROM the highlands below the Monastery Captain Haas and his men were able to study the situation in the city. The impracticability of an assault on any one of the stubborn, well guarded gates was at once recognized. A force of 700 men, no matter how well trained or how determined, could not be expected to surmount walls that had often withstood the attack of as many thousands. The wisdom of delaying until a few thousand loyal though poorly armed countrymen could be brought into play against the city appealed at once to Prince Dautan and John Tullis.

Squads of men were sent without delay into the hills and valleys to call the panic stricken, wavering farmers into the fold. John Tullis beaded the company that struck off into the well populated Ganlook district.

Marianx, as if realizing the nature of the movement in the hills, began a furious assault on the gates leading to the castle. The watchers in the hills could see as well as hear the conflict that raged almost at their feet, so to speak.

The next morning Captain Haas announced to his followers that Marianx had begun to shell the castle. Big guns in the fortress were hurling great shells over the city, dropping them in the park. On the other hand, Colonel Quinnox during the night had swung three Gatling guns to the top of the wall; they were stationed at intervals along the wall, commanding every point from which an assault might be expected.

That night recruits from the farms and villages began to straggle into the camp. They were armed with rifles, ordinary shotguns and unique blunderbusses, swords, staves and aged lances. All were willing to die in the service of the little prince. By the close of the second day nearly 3,000 men were encamped above the city. Late that night John Tullis rode into camp at the head of a great company from the Ganlook province. He had retaken the town of Ganlook, seized the fortress and recruited the entire fighting strength of the neighborhood. More than that, he had unlimbered and conveyed to the provisional camp two of the big guns that stood above the gates at the fortress.

Marianx trained two of his big guns on the camp in the hills. From the fortress he threw many futile shells toward their place of shelter. They did no damage; instead of death, they brought only laughter to the scornful camp. Under cover of night the two Ganlook cannons were planted in a position commanding the southeastern city gate. It was the plan of the new besiegers to bombard this gate, tearing it to pieces with shot.

The knowledge that Marianx had no big guns except those stationed in the fortress was most consoling to Tullis and his friends. He could not destroy the castle gates with shells, except by pure chance. He could drop shells into the castle, but to hit a gate twenty feet wide? Never!

Truxton King was growing haggard from worry and loss of sleep. He could not understand the abominable, criminal procrastination. He was of a race that did things with a dash and on the spur of the moment. His soul sickened day by day. John Tullis, equally unhappy, but more philosophical, often found him seated upon a rock at the top of the ravine, an unlighted pipe in his fingers, his eyes intent upon the hazy castle.

"Cheer up, King. Our time will come," he was wont to say.

Then came the night before the proposed assault on the gates. The guns were in position, and the cannonading was to begin at daybreak. Truxton was full of the bitterness of doubt and misgiving. Was she in love with Vos Engo? Was the count's suit progressing favorably under the fire of the enemy? Was his undoubted bravery having its effect upon the wavering susceptibilities of the distressed Lorraine?

The sound of a voice in sharp command attracted his attention. There was a bright moon, and Truxton could see other pickets hurrying to join the first. A few moments later several trespassers were escorted through the lines and taken directly to headquarters--a man and two women. King observed.

John Tullis was staring hard at the group approaching from the roadway. One woman walked ahead of her companions. Suddenly he sprang forward with a cry of amazement.

It was the Countess Ingomede.

Her arrival created a sensation. In a moment she was in the center of an amazed circle of men. Tullis, after his first low, eager greeting at the edge of the fire circle, drew her near to the warmth giving flames. Prince Dautan and Captain Haas threw rugs and blankets in a great heap for her to sit upon. Every one was talking at once. The countess was smiling through her tears. "Make room for my maid and her father. They are colder and more fatigued than I," she said, lifting her tired, glorious eyes to John Tullis, who stood beside her. "We have come from Galak. They suffered much that I might enjoy the slender comforts I was so ready to share with them."

"Thank God, you are here!" he said in low, intense tones. She could not mistake the fervor in his voice nor the glow in his eyes.

"I knew you were here, John. I am not going back to Count Marianx. It is ended."

"I knew it would come, Ingomede. You will let me tell you how glad I am some day."

"Some day, when I am truly, wholly free from him, John. I know what you will say, and I think you know what I shall say in reply." Both understood and were exalted. No other word passed between them touching upon the thing that was uppermost in their minds.

Food was provided for the wayfarers, and Tullis' tent was made ready for the countess and her maid.

The countess' story was soon told. Sitting before the great fire, surrounded by eager listeners, she related her experiences.

She had been seized on the night of the ball as she started across her father's garden, and escape had become possible only through the aid of Josepha and the girl's father. Farmers' wives told them of the newly formed army and of its leaders. She determined to make her way to the camp of those who would destroy her husband, eager to give them any assistance that her own knowledge of Marianx's plans might provide.

One bit of information she gave created no end of consternation among the would be deliverers of the city. It had the effect of making them all the more resolute; the absolute necessity for immediately regaining control in the city was forced upon them. She told them that Count Marianx had lately received word that the Grand Duke Paulus was likely to intervene before many days, acting on his own initiative, in the belief that he could force the government of Graustark to grant the railway privileges so much desired by his country. Marianx realized that he would have to forestall the wily grand duke. If he were in absolute control of the Graustark government when the Russian appeared he, and he alone, would be in a position to deal with the situation.

"The grand duke may send a large force of men across the border at any time," said the countess in conclusion. "Count Marianx is sure to make a decisive assault as soon as he hears that the movement has begun. He had hopes of starving them out, thus saving the castle from destruction, but as that seems unlikely his shells will soon begin to rain in earnest upon the dear old pile."

Truxton King was listening with wide open ears. As she finished this dreary prediction he silently arose to his feet and, without a word to any one, stalked off in the darkness. Tullis looked after him and shook his head sadly.

"I'll be happy on that fellow's account when daybreak comes and we are really at it," he said to Prince Dautan, who knew something of King's affliction.

But Truxton King was not there at daybreak. When he strode out of the camp that night he left it behind forever.

The unfortunate lack of means to communicate with the occupants of the castle had been the source of great distress to Captain Haas. If the defenders could be informed as to the exact hour of the assault from the outside they could do much toward its speedy success by making a fierce sortie from behind their own walls. A quick dash from the castle grounds would serve to draw Marianx's attention in that direction, diminishing the force that he would send to check the onslaught at the gates.

Truxton King had all this in mind as he swung off down the mountain road, having stolen past the sentries with comparative ease. The danger from Marianx's scouts outside the city was not great; they had been scattered and beaten by Haas' recruiting parties. He stood in more danger from the men he would help, they who were the watchful defenders of the castle.

It must have been 2 o'clock when he crossed the king's highway, a mile or more above the northern gates, and struck down into the same thick undergrowth that had protected him and Hobbs on a memorable night not long before.

At 3 o'clock a dripping figure threw up his hands obligingly and laughed with exultation when confronted by a startled guardsman inside the castle walls and not more than fifty yards from the water gate. He shouted a friendly cry as he advanced toward the man, calling out his own name.

Ten minutes later he was standing in the presence of the haggard, nerve racked Quinnox, pouring into his astonished ears the news of the coming attack. The colonel lost no time in routing out the sleeping guardsmen and reserves and in sending commands to those already on duty at the gates.

When the sun peeped over the lofty hills he saw inside the gates a restless, waiting company of dragoons ready for the command to ride forth.

Meantime King had crossed the grounds with Colonel Quinnox on the way to the castle. He was amazed, almost stupefied, by the devastation that already had been wrought. A dozen or

GOOD ADVICE TO ROAD BUILDERS

Simple Methods For Keeping Highways In Repair.

GOOD DRAINAGE IMPORTANT.

"Don't Leave the Work For Others; Supervise It All Yourself and You Will Meet With Success," Says Donald McCooney—Well Constructed Roadways Tend to Increase Business.

A prominent physician who is an enthusiastic road builder makes the following suggestions, which those interested in the cause will find very valuable:

First go to work; talk afterward. Make up your mind at the start what kind of road you are going to build. Then when you begin work on the road give it your full attention.

If you do this much yourself you will learn more about how to make country roads better in two hours than I could tell you in print in fourteen weeks. Again, I repeat, go to work; talk afterward.

The second thing is study the needs of the little stretch of road upon which you actually do your work. Make that stretch of road a model of good roadway in every particular. See to it that every individual who drives over your road becomes a talking advertisement for highway improvement. If you must blast out rock to afford good drainage for the side gutters along your road, why, blast them out. Don't wait to talk about it.

Earth and water spell mud, and a muddy road is not a good road, and

A CONCRETE CULVERT.

(From Good Roads Magazine, New York.) You cannot get rid of water until the water has the right slope of a drainage channel to carry it off.

Culverts constructed out of concrete are believed by many authorities to be the best means of carrying the water from a well built road.

Third, if you can, do it yourself, or, if you must, have some one else do it for you, but be sure to get good, live photographs of your road before you start to work upon it, after several hours' work has been done and again at the conclusion as the final exhibition test of your work. Get as many good, live people as you can to travel over your road with the specific purpose of examining it in comparison with other roads neglected in your immediate neighborhood.

Get your newspaper men there. Get the members of your automobile club there. Get prominent members of your local board of trade there, for every business man in every town realizes that the better the roads which lead from the country to his town the more farmers there are who will travel to town and the more business he can secure.

Fourth, adopt the platform of P. B. Shaw of Williamsport, Pa., one of the "livest wires" for good roads improvement in the United States. Mr. Shaw's platform is "work and talk."

New Dust Layer.

Vice Consul W. Washington Bruns- wick furnishes the following information concerning experiments made in Chemnitz with a German anti-dust sprinkler:

During the last summer extensive experiments were made with "anti-staubit" to prevent dusty roads in Chemnitz. The material was bought by the city from potash works at Aschersleben and cost $26.18 per metric ton of 2204.6 pounds. The anti-staubit is sprinkled over the road by means of the ordinary street sprinkling cart. After carefully cleaning the street and moistening the material with water it is thus strewn when first applied, and for each square meter about one kilo (2.2 pounds per 10.8 square feet) is required. All subsequent sprinkling is done with a solution of 50 per cent water. According to the experience of the Chemnitz street cleaning department, the dust preventing effect of anti-staubit lasted from twelve to twenty-four days, according to the amount of traffic and the general condition of the streets.

To Build Road of Slag.

At Colfax, Ia., steps have been taken to improve one of the roads leading out of the city with slag. The material to be used is not blast furnace slag, but the refuse from a coal mine in the neighborhood. It consists principally of slate particles mixed with coarse fire clay and is said to make an excellent roadway.

CARE OF ROADWAYS.

They Should Always Be Dustless to Be Considered Ideal.

The good roads era has begun in many states, and already the steam roller, the piles of crushed rock along the roadside and the digging out of the original roadway are familiar sights in many of the eastern states. The roads built are generally of approved macadam construction, which, completed, are perfect strips of white ribbon running through the green fields and hills of the rural sections.

These roads are perfectly built, and as soon as completed the farmers and other ratepayers contentedly sit back and feel contented. This is a serious error and one being made in many states.

Many fail to realize that whenever dust is raised a road is being destroyed. This is particularly the case on smooth macadam surfaces, where there is nothing to hold the dust on the road and where every cross wind blows off any loose material.

As soon as roads are built arrangements should be made to keep them in repair. Some dust preventive should be used immediately macadam roads are completed in order to prevent dust.

Oil, tar and many special preparations are now on the market, and the communities should be educated to look upon these additions as a legitimate part of the road maintenance. California has its oiled roads, over which motoring is a pleasure to the motorist and not a dust path to the citizen who happens to be on the road the same day or who has the misfortune to reside along a well traveled highway.

Massachusetts has proved that road treatments are a success and more economical than continuous applications of water, and in England dust preventing is always considered a part of the road problem.

HIGHWAY OF THE FUTURE.

One Constructed of a Material Durable For Heavy Motor Traffic.

All road builders are now engaged in trying to devise a road which will stand motor traffic. Many new methods have been tried with varying degrees of success, but none of them seems to be perfectly satisfactory.

If broken stone is to form the wearing surface, then some means must be found to hold the binding particles so firmly that they cannot be sucked out, and sufficient strength must be given to the mass to enable it to withstand the sliding action of the wheels at bends and turns. Several kinds of tar macadam answer fairly well, but they are expensive.

It would seem that the most promising kind of road for heavy automobile traffic is what is called durax in England. It is a pavement of three inch irregular cubes of hard stone laid in small segments of circles.

These stones can be cut by machinery and are comparatively inexpensive. They are laid without grout, but there seems to be no reason for its omission except the cost. Great quantities of this kind of pavement have been laid in Germany.

Unique Roadmaking Plan.

Judge William E. Porter of Lawrence county, Pa., has a unique idea for improving the roads. His plan is a jail on wheels—that is, a place where prisoners can be locked up at night and transported from place to place and employed in roadmaking during the day. He put his idea to a test, and the results were eminently satisfactory. The prisoners graded away a high hill on the West Pittsburg road near Newcastle and constructed a cement bridge over a culvert eighty feet long. The only expense to the county from this bridge that would ordinarily have cost thousands of dollars was for the material and the services of an engineer. The men employed were sentenced from ten to ninety days and were informed that the sentence would be materially lessened if they would work on the roads and not attempt to escape, and they worked.

Good Road Maxims.

A good road affords an excellent way to church.

A dollar spent on the road is as good as two spent on the farm.

A community is known by the roads it keeps.

Better go two miles on a good road than half a mile on a bad one.

The wide tire maketh the glad path master.

A bad road and its travel are soon parted.

Many path masters spoil the roads.

A little gravel is a dangerous thing.

Sow deep or sow shallow and spring.

The horse knoweth the bad road and ketteth his ears drop.

Many country roads are paved—with good intentions, but for the most part with lumps of sod, stones, roots and rubbish.

Improvement Mottoes.

If an embargo of the same force were laid on the ports that is laid on farm traffic by bad roads the noise that would follow could be heard around the world.

If the money is expended wisely and honestly a people can tax themselves rich for the construction of good roads.

Road repairs to be effective must be continuous.

"Push! If you can't push, pull. If you can't pull, please get out of the way."

Caused by Lack of Good Roads.

The lack of good roads to remote regions is held to be one of the chief causes of the decline of British agriculture.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Joy is always more joyous when underneath it is a foundation of thoughtfulness.—Rev. E. M. McGuffey, Episcopalian, Elmhurst, N. Y.

Power of the Little Sin.

A little sin is the thin edge of the wedge, and when once inserted it can be driven home till it splits and ruins the life.—Rev. Dr. A. H. C. Morse, Baptist, Brooklyn.

Easy to Convert.

The easiest person in the world to reach with the gospel is not a woman, not a girl, not a boy, but the man. To get a person to accept the gospel you must first make him think, and then think.—Rev. J. W. Chapman, Evangelist, Philadelphia.

Christianity's Real Test.

The real test of Christianity is in its uplifting power. It is solving social problems. It is providing the purest life we know. It is unselfishly bringing more tangible comfort to the human race than all the other means combined.—Rev. Johnston Myers, Baptist, Chicago.

Religion.

What the homing instinct is to the bird, religion ought to be to a man. Reason, guided if by no more than probability, dictates a degree of religiousness in a man. A little religiousness of the right kind always argues for more.—Rev. E. H. Pence, Presbyterian, Detroit, Mich.

A Town's Valuable Assets.

Good men and good women are the most valuable assets in any community. We must drive out all agencies which destroy manhood and cultivate all forces which make for the moral training of our citizenship. People make the town, and no town is good whose bad people run it.—Rev. Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, Methodist, Chicago.

Reward For Duty Deers.

No man need fear death in doing his duty, because when the time comes for him to be taken away the Master will see to it. The man who is filling his place in this world fully will burst through into better things, for it is impossible for a man who is doing his level best to remain in the same position forever.—Rev. Robert Watson, Presbyterian, Cincinnati.

Danger of Prosperity.

What we want today is that our public men, our business and professional men, shall be not less but more religious than ever before. They should be not less, but more intellectual, more earnest and more honest. The greater our material prosperity the greater the danger that stares us in the face if we ignore the higher and better and nobler things.—Rev. John G. Scott, Episcopalian, Hot Springs, Va.

The Ideal Religion.

The only religion that is ideal is certainly one wherein the religious impulses work spontaneously, one wherein in their working they move harmoniously with all the other energies of our life, one wherein we love without having to try to love and so without being acutely conscious of the fact that we do love, one wherein we do right instinctively without realization of effort and without effort, one wherein our heart beats sympathetically with the heart of God without need of quickening its pulse, without particular realization that there is any pulse there—a religion, in a word, that so inheres in our life as not to be in any way distinct from life.—Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York.

Value of Good Cheer.

Good cheer you will find to be the groundwork of almost all lives of strong endurance and power. When you reflect upon the spirit or disposition that is here included you are face to face with some things more than the mere popular idea of cheerfulness. It is a spirit that will permeate all the conditions of being. God's pure sunshine let into the soul will affect all other powers. It involves the power to look upon life ever on the rosy side—to see the best that is in nature, to think the best of your fellows—and when you cannot so think to dismiss them from your mind, to crush any, even the slightest, tendency to think bitterly of another; to be kind and loving, to see the bright side in everything.—Rev. Dr. F. W. Clappett, Episcopalian, San Francisco.

How We May See Jesus.

If we would see Jesus we must make much of his book. If we would know a person we must understand him. If we would trust a person then our trust must be based on knowledge. Jesus cannot be seen, will not be graciously real to the man who neglects the Bible. It is true that "the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork." But, left to nature, the Bible taken away, man cannot know of God's tenderness and love, cannot know how to love and trust and obey him properly. Though man might name every star that blazes in the eternal depths; though he might map the heavens and tell the constellations as his familiar friends; though he might understand the voice of the fowers; though he might catch the monologues of the mountains, the dirges of the oceans, the symphonies of the spheres; though all nature might speak to him the mighty secrets of its origin and maker. In all this man would see only the majesty and mightiness of God. In God's hand would be the sword of justice, on his lips the word of wisdom and around him the resplendent robe of righteousness, at once man's envy and despair. Only in the Bible may man find out the mercy of God in the forgiveness of sins through Jesus Christ.—Rev. Dr. George W. Truett, Baptist, Dallas, Tex.

Impossible to be Well

It is impossible to be well, simply impossible, if the bowels are constipated. You must pay attention to the laws of nature, or suffer the consequences. Undigested material, waste products, poisonous substances, must be removed from the body at least once each day, or there will be trouble. A sluggish liver is responsible for an immense amount of suffering and serious disease. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills. He knows why they act directly on the liver. Trust him. J. C. ## The Solid Hoofed Hog.

There are some solid hoofed hogs in the world, but they are few and far between. Darwin has a great deal to say about such pigs in his "Origin of Species," as there were only three in England at the time he wrote this book. The solid hoofed hog is not a freak of nature, as many suppose, but a genuine case of reversion to a primitive or ancestral type. It seems that, unlike the prehistoric ancestor of the modern horse, which has four toes or hoofs, the old cloverleaf, from which animal all members of the swine family are descended, had a solid hoof and in the course of ages, as the old parent form died out and the modern wild boar, domestic hog, peccary, etc., were evolved this solid hoof became through what Darwin calls "adaptation" and "natural selection" divided up into two parts, so that all modern hogs are cloven hoofed. Occasionally, however, a hog is born with the old original solid hoof of the primitive hog ancestor, thus demonstrating the tendency in all animals to revert now and then to the parent form.

Votes in Pawn.

In the delightful days of yore a vote frequently fetched hundreds of pounds. Poor electors would not wait for an election, but would borrow from the candidate sums of money, for which they would give promissory notes. And when the reform bill was spoken of to some electors in Stafford they expressed their pleasure at it and hoped that there would be introduced into the bill some plan for the better payment of poor voters! For the convenience of would be M. P.'s seats used to be procurable for £5,000 or £6,000 cash down, while toward the close of the eighteenth century the borough of Gatton and many others were actually publicly advertised for sale by auction. The sales were not for a single parliament, but the fee simple included the power of nominating the two representatives forever.—London Globe.

Chinese Names of Places.

Chinese names of places often define their character. Thus the terminal "yang" means fortress, Pingyang the "fortress of peace." "Cheng" means a walled city, as Fenghuangcheng the "Phoenix walled city." "Shan" is a mountain, "hai" the sea, "kuan" is a camp; thus Shangkuan is the "mountain sea camp." A "ling" is a mountain pass; Motienling, near Mukden, is the "heaven scraping pass."

The suffixes "tao" and "to" indicate islands; "po" or "pho," a harbor; "wan," a bay; "kiang" and "ho," a river; "kow," a port; "fu," a first class city; "ju," a provincial capital. "Pei" is north, "nan" is south, "king" is capital. These suffixes help to explain such familiar names in these days as Sanshantaio, Chemulpo, Tientsin, Yangtsi-kiang, Hoangho, Yinkow, Chefoo, Anju, Peking and Nanking.—New York Tribune.

The Suspect's Declaration.

Parson White's precautionary measure of projecting his chicken coop with chilled steel bars was futile, for that very night four more of his choice Leghorns disappeared, leaving the severed and twisted bars as the only visible evidence of the theft. However, his suspicions pointed toward his next door neighbor, whom he had seen prowling around his yard that day, and accordingly he had this suspect in police court the next morning. "If the prisoner can file an alibi I'll let him off with a suspended sentence," announced the judge at the end of the evidence. "Can you file an alibi, Ham?"

"Ah guess Ah kin," eagerly rejoined the suspect, "if it ain't any badder den Fashon White's chicken coop bahs!"—London Life.

Thinking One's Own Pulse.

Being able to "take" one's own pulse is a doubtful accomplishment, because the heart has some peculiarities the importance of which are sure to be overestimated except by physicians and much needless occasion is in consequence. Irregularity of the pulse is natural to no small number of people without other signs of disease. It may also be simply a transient symptom, due to errors of habit or other causes which, disappearing leave no trace behind them.

Misleading.

"That is a fat, prosperous looking envelope. Does our salesman send in a big bunch of orders?"

"Not exactly. That envelope contains a receipt for his last check, his expense account for this week, a request for a salary raise and a requisition for some more expense account blanks."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Couldn't Walk.

Wife—You told me the other day we must avoid all luxuries and confine ourselves to absolute necessities only. Hubby—That's so, my dear Wife—Well, last night you came home from the club in a cab. Hubby—Yes, but that was an absolute necessity.—Fleegende Blatter.

Not an Earthquake.

Mrs. Houser (hearing tremendous noise in the kitchen)—Great goodness, Jane, what was that, an earthquake shock? Jane (calmly picking up the pieces of glass)—No, mum; only a little jar.

The Two Pies.

Ruth, who has been married just two weeks, lives in a little flat and there keeps house for her lord and master. She has read a little and is wise beyond her nineteen years. On Sunday after their dinner had been served by the wife she went to the kitchen and returned with a pumpkin pie.

"What's that?" asked the L. and M. "I made a pumpkin pie yesterday," his wife answered timidly.

He attacked the confection with a knife and fork, but could not make much headway and was about to desist himself when Ruth announced:

"I have another in the pantry, dear. Your mother sent one over yesterday." She then produced the second pie, which was as tender and appetizing as the first had been tough and unsavory.

"That's something like it," he said patronizingly. "Of course you couldn't expect to become expert at once, my dear."

The girl laughed. "You're eating the one I made now," she said. And in her diary for the day is written: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."—Portland (Me.) Express.

The Hip Joints.

The cup and ball socket and the air tight valve were first used in the human body. If our hip joints and arms were not provided with air tight sockets we should get too tired to continue our work for any length of time in just holding these limbs together by muscles. It is the pressure of the air which holds them in place, and thus all physical effort is avoided. In the various air tight joints and sockets found in the human body one may find nearly all the mechanical principles involved in the air brake or the use of compressed air for a thousand different things. Some may aver that nature did not discover ball bearings, a mechanical device which has revolutionized the vehicular world. But the principle is almost developed in the ball of the leg bone and the socket of the hip, which are made so smooth and are so well oiled that they slide backward and forward with practically no friction.

Marrying For Votes.

Marrying for votes was a device of old time British election agents. As the law stood before the reform act of 1832 widows of freemen on marrying again made their second husbands freemen and therefore voters. At election times widows were consequently paid handsomely to go through a formal marriage with a voteless bachelor, who, for a consideration, similarly agreed to support the candidate. The pair were married, the man voted according to instructions, and then he and his wife, standing on either side of a tombstone, said, "Death us do part." With this literal fulfillment of the matrimonial vow they regarded their marriage dissolved. At the last election in Bristol before 1832 a hundred women gave votes to men.

A Literary Light.

A short time ago a well known writer of London, remembering that he had never read the non-canonical books, went out in search of a copy and in one bookshop after another drew blank. At last he went to his own particular newspaper shop, which also dealt in Bibles and light literature. "Have you the Apocrypha?" he asked. For a moment the young woman behind the counter was puzzled; then, brightening, she said, "Is it a weekly or a monthly?"

Acres and Bible Letters.

It has sometimes been stated that there are more acres in Yorkshire than there are letters in the Bible. A person hearing the statement for the first time is inclined to doubt it, but it is true, all the same. Authorities differ as to the exact acreage of the county, one giving it as 3,882,848 and another as 3,771,843. But the number of letters in the Bible is said to be 3,566,480, so the acres beat the letters, with something to spare.—London Notes and Queries.

On the Wrong Side.

A temperance missionary in Glasgow left a few tracts with a young woman one morning. Calling at the same house a few days after, he was rather disconcerted to find the tracts doing duty as curl papers on the head of the damsel to whom he had given them. "Well, my lassie," he remarked, "I see ye have used the tracts I left w' ye, but," he added in time to turn confusion into merriment, "ye ha' putten them outside instead of inside your head."

The French Horn.

The French horn, or cor de chasse, is regarded by some musicians as the sweetest and mellowest of all the wind instruments. In Beethoven's time it was little else than the old hunting horn, which for the convenience of the mounted hunter was arranged in spiral convolutions to be slipped over the head and carried resting on one shoulder and under the opposite arm. The Germans still call it the waldhorn—that is, "forest horn."

No Occasion For Alarm.

Said a nervous lady to another lady, at whose house she was making a call, "Are you not afraid that some of your children will fall into that cistern in your yard?" "Oh, no," was the complacent reply. "Anyhow, that's not the cistern we got our drinking water from."

He Didn't.

"Do you believe in signs?" "No. A dentist's sign reading 'Teeth Extracted Without Pain' fell the other day just as I went under it and knocked out two teeth of mine."

HOME THE PLACE TO SPEND MONEY

If You Are Seeking Greatest Gain,

DO NOT SEND IT TO THE CITY.

Whence It Comes Back Ne'er Again. Help Your Neighbor In His Striving. Boost Your Town and Do Your Best. Life Will Take on Brighter Colors. Living Have a Higher Zest.

If Jim Billson is your neighbor and a good, hardworking man; if he does his best to live here on an honest, upright plan; if his wife and yours are friendly and his lads play with your boys, don't you think you ought to help him through the world's turmoil and noise?

If he's fixed it up to serve you with the goods that you require; if his prices are but fair ones and are not a penny higher than the prices in the city, do you think it's fair to him, to be sending out of town for goods instead of helping Jim?

Don't you know the trade that stays here is the thing that helps the town, pays the taxes and expenses, keeps the cost of living down? Think it over, turn it over in your own fair reasoning mind, and if tempted to trade elsewhere, why, just put the thought behind!

Help the town that you reside in; thus is your plain duty shown. The big city doesn't need you half as much as does your own. Join the boosters club and help us build it up and make it grow. All it needs is 10- of workers who will give it half a snow.

Keep your cash a-circulating where it brings the best return (that's unless you have enough of it to throw away or burn), for the dollar in the home town is the one that does the work, while the one that's sent away from there is nothing but a shirk.

Yes, the catalogue's enticing that all order houses send, but you'll find there's nothing really cheap about it in the end. The closer that the dollar sticks the farther will it go. Just try spending it at home and give your merchant friend a show.

Every bit you help your neighbor takes the burden off your back, for it helps him to repay in kind, when your affairs are slack. It's a mighty sorry business saying "howdy do" by mail to the man who can't repay you with a smile for every sale.

When you're tempted by the bargains that are spread out to your view, and it seems so very easy just to "send your order through," take a minute to consider if your neighbor cannot sell the same goods or just as good ones for a price that suits as well.

"Boosters' clubs" are all the "go" now in the towns throughout the land, and there's praise for the uplifting for the willing, working hand. Why, there's nothing half so lifting, half so helpful or so strong, as the hand of him who's willing to assist his town along!

CHARLES N. LURIE.

ARE YOU A "CIVICIDE"?

Or Do You Work For the Growth and Development of Your Home Town?

Close on the heels of "oppidism," the word suggested by a correspondent of a New York paper to express the idea of civic pride, enthusiasm for one's home town, comes "civicism," a word coined by Mayor Brand Whitlock of Toledo.

Mayor Whitlock used the word to express the love a citizen bears or should bear to his city, just as patriotism means the love a man bears for his country or fatherland. Mayor Whitlock's neo-Latinism is derived from the Latin word "civis," which means a citizen, or "civitas," meaning citizenship.

In his message to the city council in which the word "civicism" occurred Toledo's chief magistrate used another word of his own manufacture. It was "civicides," by which term he characterized those persons who for selfish motives obstruct public works and thereby hinder the growth and development of a city.

JUST READ 'EM OVER.

A Couple of Queries and Answers of Interest to Many People.

Q. When you buy in your home town the goods you need, whom do you help? A. Yourself and your neighbor—yourself because part of the money spent at home is likely to find its way back into your own pocket, your neighbor because he has to rely upon home trade for a livelihood for himself and his family.

Q. When you send your money to the city, to the mail order houses, whom do you benefit and whom do you harm? A. You benefit a man who cares only for your money and nothing about yourself. You are likely to harm yourself because you have to take the word of a stranger that the goods which he will send you are the same as those he advertises.

Uniformity in Sidewalks.

In some towns the excellent custom is practiced of securing uniformity of sidewalks by having all the work of repairing old and laying new walks done under the supervision of a sidewalk committee.

How to Control Apple Scab

The abnormally warm weather of April has started the apple buds much sooner than we had expected. If this continues it means that you must be ready to give the first application of spray very soon. The most important things to know are: First, the proper time for each application. This must be determined by watching the fruit buds and the weather. Dates cannot be given. The first application should be made before the first rain after the blossom buds have been exposed, but before they have opened; the second, after two-thirds of the petals have fallen, being sure to get the mixture on ahead of the rain, and the third about two weeks later. A fourth may sometimes be necessary, nine weeks after blossoms fall. Watch the fruit buds and the weather; spray before rain, not after.

Second in importance is thoroughness. Remember that fungous infection can be prevented only where the surface of the young forming fruit and leaves are actually coated with the spray. Spraying from one side with the wind can therefore, at best, only protect one side of each apple.

Third, the spray used has in the past, almost universally been Bordeaux mixture for the fungi, combined with an arsenical for the codling moth and other insects. A 3-4-50 formula with two pounds of Bordeaux to lead to each 50 gallons of Bordeaux is efficient. Concentrated lime sulfur solution (properly diluted) with arsenate of lead added has been used very successfully during the past season by a number of investigators and the spray injury or russetting of fruit which frequently follows the application of Bordeaux was in all cases entirely avoided. A concentrate testing about 32° Baume should be diluted about 1-30 or 1-35 according to our present knowledge and two pounds of lead arsenate should be added to each 50 gallons. Do not use lime sulfur stronger than indicated above on the foliage. Do not use arsenite of lime, paris green or any other poison except arsenate of lead with lime sulfur solution on foliage, since there is danger of burning with the former while the arsenate of lead has been safely used in this way during the past three seasons.

To the Apple Grower:—These spraying directions have been prepared by Mr. Wallace, the expert in our Department who is conducting the investigations on lime sulfur as a summer spray. These directions are, we believe, the most accurate and up to date that can be given for the control of apple scab. We shall be glad to answer any questions we can on this subject. Address all inquiries to:

PHYSICIAN'S PLEA FOR CHILDREN

Dr. Wheeler Urges Medical Inspection of Schools.

CLASS ROOMS UNHEALTHFUL.

They Are Poorly Lighted and Heated, Badly Ventilated and Seldom Fumigated—Medical Profession Must Take the Initiative in the Cause, He Says. Teachers Must Become Interested.

In a paper read before the Black Hills District Medical Society of Hot Springs, S. D., Dr. R. M. Wheeler made a strong appeal for the medical inspection of schools and urged that the move be made nation wide and started immediately. Dr. Wheeler said in part:

The sacred duty of the medical profession lies in alleviating physical and mental suffering and in bettering the type of the human race. If, then, this is in part the province of the physician's work, the enormity of his responsibilities in this particular cannot fail to impress him.

The debt which every state or nation owes every newborn child is a course of systematic training which shall enable him to make the greatest possible use of his individual powers, thereby ultimately making him an infinitely small yet incalculably valuable factor in the development of the nation as a whole.

It requires but the mention of a few well known existing evils and conditions to prove conclusively that immediate improvement is imperative.

Schoolrooms are poorly lighted, insufficiently heated, badly ventilated, seldom fumigated—in general, school sanitation has only comparatively recently been made the subject of thought or study.

School children are every day being admitted into school when they are either entirely unfit or only partially fit to gain any benefit from the course of instruction presented to them.

Among the defects and diseases which seem particularly pronounced and prevalent among all classes of school children may be mentioned visual, aural and throat defects, mental incapacity or backwardness, chorea, nervousness, curvature of the spine, anaemia, diabetes, tuberculosis in its various forms, skin diseases, pediculosis, malnutrition, headaches, indigestion, cardiac difficulties and dermatitis, to say nothing of such contagious diseases as scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles and whooping cough, which at times make the closing of entire schools necessary.

Numerous teachers with dangerous or uncertain health are employed. Few if any teachers have knowledge of or instruction in even the most rudimentary laws of hygiene and sanitation. Parents are ignorant of the fundamental rules which govern the physical well being of their children. Boards of education have little or no knowledge concerning the proper environment of children in the schoolroom.

It seems that by no other means can the proper education of the child be so quickly arrived at as by a compulsory system of medical inspection. When once medical inspection for schools shall have become established we shall not need to fear for the degeneration of the human race.

The general plan and scope of a system which appears entirely tangible and practicable may here be briefly outlined:

First.—Each pupil should be examined as to his physical and mental condition upon first enrollment in school and several times subsequently by a physician appointed according to state laws.

Second.—On the first few opening days this physician should be in attendance at the school and make a report as to each child's condition, which report should then be kept on record at the school.

Third.—The above report should be used in excluding from school children who are physically unable to endure the routine of school life. It should be used for singling out those who are partially defective physically, as, for example, those suffering from eye, ear or throat trouble, that they may receive special consideration at the hands of the teacher. It should be used for determining those who are mentally so defective as to be absolutely refused admittance into school or so defective as to be placed in a class by themselves where they may not feel any sense of shame or disgrace on account of unfavorable comparison.

Fourth.—The physician may reserve after the term enrollment only certain days or hours at his office, where at the discretion of the teacher children may be sent to him for special examination.

Fifth.—The physician should perform or confirm all vaccinations.

Sixth.—The physician to whom work has been entrusted should make to the educational authorities a written report as to what he considers the existing evils of the schoolroom and building and make suggestions as to how this part of school sanitation may be improved. Poor lighting, bad ventilation, defective plumbing, dangerous stairways, insufficient heating, might all be considered matters which would come within his sphere of supervision.

Seventh.—Every school physician so employed should receive a fixed remuneration for his time and services.

A few additional remarks may now be given as throwing light upon and as helping to solve the problem of school hygiene.

The over-crowding made on both body and brain of even the youngest and most delicate pupil immediately upon entrance into school cannot fail to quickly bring about an overwrought condition of the physical and mental functions of the child, only to be closely followed by the most disastrous consequences to his future health.

Among the chief causes that produce mentally deficient or backward children may be named fatigue or chronic exhaustion, malnutrition or starvation, toxemia, adenoids, nervousness, defective vision or hearing. Yet it is remarkable that some of these defects, so seriously interfering with the child's chance of a normal education, are easily corrected at the outset.

Again, medical inspection means the sorting out of children, so that they shall fall into lines of school work which shall mean their best development. It is, however, a well known fact that just those children who are most handicapped by physical and mental defects are the ones who are most sensitive when these defects are discovered.

Lack of time, religious desire to do his best by the greatest number of pupils, overburdening and excessive demands on the teacher, ignorance as to the actual state of the child's health, are some of the reasons why less capable children have been objects of derision, neglect and discouragement on the part of the teacher into whose hands they have fallen.

Here we clearly see the necessity of doing our duty by the backward child, so that he shall be able to become a useful citizen. Yet many abnormal or defective children have either voluntarily left or have been withdrawn from school on account of the disheartening attitude of the teacher or on account of an environment where they were fast losing the small amount of self respect and self confidence which they possessed and have been returned to homes where parents have not been sufficiently tolerant of or sympathetic with their incapacities and defects, and they have consequently been forced out into the world utterly untrained and undeveloped in some of the powers which were only latent in them.

Right here should be emphasized that in small town or country schools more attention should be given to the "personal element" in teaching, which, in other words, means individual assistance. In large cities there are always several if not many of the same kind of physically and mentally constituted pupils who fall easily into groups where they receive instruction commensurate with their progress and ability, whereas in small schools the lines of demarcation into classes cannot be so easily drawn on account of the small number of children in attendance and the great diversity of their ages.

In a small school a teacher must become more impressed with the individual needs of the child, and most educators agree that the efficiency and personal popularity of a teacher which latter, by the way, is a factor in instruction that cannot be too highly estimated, are largely due to his ability to adjust his teachings so as to reach all pupils, notwithstanding their widely differing mentalities and health.

To repeat, the medical profession by reason of its duty to humanity and by reason of its scientific knowledge must take the initiative in an attempt to establish medical inspection in schools.

As a final word, may I not make the appeal a personal one and say, Are we going to do it?

MAKING SPOKANE SPOTLESS.

Washington City Receiving Overhaul by Men, Women and Children.

A valuable movement for making Spokane, Wash., a city beautiful is under way and has at the head former Mayor C. Herbert Moore, now president of the One Hundred and Fifty Thousand club. He says that more than 50,000 men, women and children took part the first four days of the cleaning.

The municipality took care of the business thoroughfares, the residents devoting their energies to their own lawns and back yards, also assisting others in beautifying the vacant lots and grass plots in their blocks. Mayor Nelson S. Pratt has set aside two days for bonfires, at which debris not taken to the city incinerating plant will be destroyed under the direction of the fire department.

Pupils in the public schools are devoting several hours daily to planting trees and flower seeds and setting trees and shrubs.

This is a grand example for towns or smaller towns to follow where the main streets leading from the railroad stations to the heart of their villages are in a very bad condition.

Let the natives get together and organize an improvement club and give their respective towns a thorough overhauling and make it one to be proud of instead of one that is really an eyesore to the state in which it is located.

An Enterprising Town. The enterprise of a town may be gauged by the appearance of its streets, its public buildings and its parks.

WATCHES AND Cream Separators

There are some sensible dairy farmers who buy $1.-, $5.- and $10.- watches, because they serve the purpose of a watch and waste nothing while they last.

But would any of these sensible dairy farmers put their money into and carry a $1.-, $5.- or $10.- watch if it cost them from 25 cents to $1.- that they might otherwise save EVERY DAY to do so?

Most assuredly they would not.

Then why should any dairy farmer buy a cream separator of the $1.-, $5.- or $10.- watch kind where its use DOES mean a WASTE of from 25 cents to $1.- every day, in quantity and quality of product, that a DE LAVAL cream separator would SAVE?

THAT'S the all-important DIFFERENCE BETWEEN POOR SEPARATORS AND POOR WATCHES,—one's good enough while it lasts but the other wastes twice a day from the time its use begins.

A De Laval catalogue is a separator education to be had for the asking.

STRONG DRINK.

By B. F. M. Sours.

In a glass engraved with the most delicate tracery and beauty is offered to a young man a drink of wine. His mother taught him, "Touch not, taste not, handle not." He is worried. He is with new friends. He does not like to refuse their courtesies, nor to seem to be an odd one. He drinks; he drinks again; it is done! The teaching of his mother has been baffled, and now he is at the mercy of every tempter. The simple cutting of the influence of the mother in the taking of that first glass is the taking up anchor for other ports. Mother is not in other ports. Oh, no! Mother is not there. Mother isn't wanted there. The devil's toboggan is smooth—yes, it is oiled. He is started; he doesn't stop. Now, boy, do you know that it is easy to start? Are you aware, young man, that stopping is not easy? "Going—going—gone!"—that is the motto. You are not supposed to stop. According to all analogy or symmetry, or proportion, or propriety, according to all common sense, according to all human experience, no young man who takes the first glass has any rational ground of expectation ever to stop. It isn't natural, or normal to stop. The natural thing for a fellow who has fooled with the current over Niagara is to go over the falls. Over the falls! Oh, alas! Over the falls! He sobers. He becomes a clean man. He marries. The little arms are clinging around his neck. What puny little arms! What nervous sickly children! Poor little weaklings! They came into this world inheritors of a reformed man's wreck. You're man, do you know that 82 1/2 per cent. of all children born into the homes of inebriates, if they live at all, live only to become diseased, or hereditary drunkards, or natural criminals, or epileptic, or feeble-minded, or insane? Isn't the price of a drink a little high? But the chances are that your children will not even be the children of a reformed inebriate. The risk is fearful. Is your will-power stronger than that of Patrick Henry? He cried to the colonies, regarding the intrusion of English tyranny, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death!" and then, we are told, he went to the grave a slave to strong drink! If you look over the annals of this country, you will see that the victims of the drink-demon are among the great and among the small, and are absolutely without reference to their power of will. When once the drink disease has gotten hold of the gray centers of the brain, drink has become the adopted normal habit, and will tyrannize the will or destroy it. The will is then on the side of drink. There is no earthly power of heart or of science that can resist the craving for drink after it has passed a given point. The victim is doomed. There is one escape. Scientifically there is none other known. That is, a sound conversion. In that case, if tobacco is given up, so as not to fire the physical organism with the constant temptation for the stronger stimulant, there is hope. As a rule, all reformed drunkards who hold on to their tobacco are said to relapse. The only hope for a man, be he a victim or not, is to cling close to the hand reached down from the skies, and "Keep thyself pure."

Urge a Sober Germany. A call has recently been sent out to German college students generally, urging them to free themselves from the unworthy drink coercion and to spend their strength for honorable pleasures, excursions, traveling, rowing, winter sports, tennis and such. "Consider the prominent place you will occupy in public life and go forward to it with a good example for others. Make yourself familiar with all the problems of civilization and employ the glorious years of student life in strengthening yourself for the great tasks that await you. Use the years of your youth not as a period of brief intoxication to be followed by a humdrum struggle for existence, but make your heart and mind strong so that your freshness and vigor will hold out until old age."

The Case Proved. It is proved beyond dispute and is now accepted by every unprejudiced man that an employer does not get out of an employee value received if he is allowed to use the alcoholic beverages even when outside the hours of labor.

Medical science has proved that alcohol is a poison and only a poison; that there is really no nutritive whatever in it and that a litia action is injurious in every sense of the term.

Immoderate Moderates. The habit of drinking strong liquors leads rapidly to alcoholism. The man who drinks daily an immoderate quantity of wine, cider or beer becomes alcoholic also, as well as he who drinks the stronger liquors.

Denmark's Rotten Record. It is estimated that Denmark spends almost four times as much money for alcoholic liquors each year as the entire amount of money expended on the army and navy.

There were four times as many murders in Rochester in 1907 with 600 saloons as in the whole State of Maine, under Prohibition.

TRUXTON KING

more balls had crashed into the facade. Yawning fissures, gigantic holes, marked the path of the ugly messengers from Marlanx. Nearly all of the windows had been wrecked by riflemen who shot from the roofs of palaces in and about the avenue. Two of the smaller minarets were in ruins. A huge pillar in the lower balcony was gone. The terrace had been plowed up by a single ricocheting shell.

"Great God!" gasped King. "It is frightful!"
"They began bombarding yesterday afternoon. We were asked to surrender at 3 o'clock. Our reply brought the shells. Mr. King. It was terrible. After the first two or three shells we found places of shelter for the prince and his friends. They are in the stone tower beyond the castle. The most glorious courage is shown. Count Vos Engo guards the prince and the ladies of the household. Alas, it was hunger that we feared the most. Today we should have resorted to horse's flesh. There was no other way. We knew that relief would come some day. John Tullis was there. And now it is today! This shall be our day, thank God!"

Attendants sped to the tower, shouting the battle tidings.

The prince came tumbling down the narrow iron stairs from his room above, shouting joyously to Truxton King. No man was ever so welcome. He was besieged with questions, handshakings and praises. Even the Duke of Perse, hobbling on crutches, had a kindly greeting for him. Tears streamed down the old man's cheeks when King told him of his daughter's safe arrival in the friendly camp.

But just now Truxton was staring at the narrow staircase. Vos Engo and Lorraine were descending slowly. The former was white and evidently very weak. He leaned on the girl for support.

Count Halfont offered the explanation. "Vos Engo was shot last week through the shoulder. He is too brave to give up, as you may see. It happened on the terrace. There was an unexpected fusillade from the house-tops. Eric placed himself between the marksmen and Miss Tullis. A bullet that might have killed her instantly struck him in the shoulder."

King never forgot the look in Lorraine's eyes as she came down the steps. Joy and anguish seemed to combine themselves in that long, intense look.

She gave him her hands. The look in her tired eyes went straight to his heart. Vos Engo drew back, his face set in a frown of displeasure.

"My brother?" she asked, without taking her gaze from his eyes.

"He is well. He will see you today."

"And you, Truxton?" was her next question, low and quavering.

"Unharmed and unchanged, Lorraine," he said softly. "Tell me, did Vos Engo stand between you and the fire from the—"

"Yes, Truxton," she said, dropping her eyes as if in deep pain.

"And you have not—broken your promise to him?"

"No; nor have I broken my promises to you."

"He is a brave man. I can't help saying it," said the American, deep lines suddenly appearing in his face. Swiftly he turned to Vos Engo, extending his hand. "My hand."

"FOR HAVE I BROKEN MY PROMISE TO YOU?" Vos Engo stared at him for a moment and then turned away, ignoring the friendly hand. A hot flush mounted to Lorraine's brow.

Vos Engo's response was a short, bitter laugh.

CHAPTER XX. THE LAST STAND.

SOON after 5 o'clock a man in the topmost window of the tower called down that the forces in the hills were moving in a compact body toward the ridges below the southern gates.

One hundred picked men were to be left inside the castle gates with Vos Engo, prepared to meet any flank movement that might be attempted. Three hundred mounted men were selected to make the dash down Castle avenue straight into the camp of the sharpshooters. It was the purpose of the house guards to wage a fierce and noisy conflict on the avenue and then retire to the castle as abruptly as they left it, to be ready for Marlanx should he decide to make a final desperate effort to seize their stronghold.

The dash of the 300 through the gates and down the avenue was the most spectacular experience in Truxton's life. He was up with Quinnox and General Braze, galloping well in front of the yelling troops. These mounted carabineers, riding as Bedouins, swept like thunder down the street, whirled into the broad, open arena beyond the duke's palace and were upon the surprised ruffians before they were fully awake to the situation.

They came tumbling out of barns and sheds, clutching their rifles in nerveless hands, aghast in the face of absolute destruction. The enemy, craven at the outset, threw down their guns and tried to escape through the alleys and side streets at the end of the common. Firing all the time, the attacking force rode them down as if they were so many dogs.

After ten or fifteen minutes of this desultory carnage it was reported that a large force of men were entering the avenue from Regengetz circus. Quinnox sent his chargers toward this great horde of foot soldiers, but they did not falter, as he had expected. On they swept, 2,000 or 3,000 of them. At their head rode five or six officers. The foremost was Count Marlanx.

Quinnox saw now that the Iron Count was determined to storm the gates and gave the command to retreat. Waving their rifles and shouting defiance over their shoulders, the dragons drew up, wheeled and galloped toward the gates.

Scarcely were the massive portals closed and the great steel bars dropped into place by the men who attended them when a low, dull explosion shook the earth as if by volcanic force. Then came the crashing of timbers, the cracking of masonry, the whirling of a thousand missiles through the air. Before the very eyes of the stunned, bewildered defenders, dismounting near the parade ground, the huge gates and pillars fell to the ground.

The gates had been dynamited.

Then it was that Truxton King remembered. Marlanx's sappers had been quietly at work for days drilling from the common to the gates. It was a strange coincidence that Marlanx should have chosen this day for his culminating assault on the castle. The skirmish at daybreak had hurried his arrangements no doubt, but none the less were his plans complete. The explosives had been laid during the night. The fuses reached to the mouth of the tunnel across the common. As he swept up the avenue at the head of his command, hawk faced and with glittering eyes, he snarled the command that put fire to the fuses.

A moment later his vanguard streamed through the aperture and faced the deadly fire from the driveway.

At last they began to advance across the grassy meadow. When one man fell under the fire of the guardsmen another rushed into his place. Three times the indomitable Graustarkians drove them back and as often did Marlanx drag them up again, exalted by the example he set.

"Gad, he is a soldier!" cried Truxton. "Hello! There's my friend Brutus. He's no coward either. Here's a try for you, Brutus."

He dropped to his knee and took deliberate aim at the frenzied beuchman. The discovery that there were three bullets in Brutus' breast when he was picked up long afterward did not affect the young man's contention that his was the one that had found the heart.

The fall of Brutus urged the Iron Count to greater fury. His horse had been shot from under him. He was on his feet, calling to his men to follow him as he moved toward the stubborn row of green and red. Bullets hissed about his ears, but he gave no heed to them.

The commander of the guard gave the command to fall back slowly toward the castle.

Firing at every step, they crossed the parade ground and then made a quick dash for the shelter of the long balconies. Marlanx, down in the parade ground, was fairly pushing his men into the jaws of death.

Truxton King's chance to pay his debt to Vos Engo came after one of the fiercest, most determined charges. The young count had been fighting desperately for some time. His weakness seemed to have disappeared. As the foe fell back in the face of desperate resistance Vos Engo sprang down the steps and rushed after them, calling others to join him in the attempt to complete the rout. Near the edge of the terrace he stopped. His leg gave way under him, and he fell to the ground. Truxton saw him fall.

He leaped over the low balustrade, dropping his hot rifle, and dashed across the terrace to his rival's assistance. A hundred men shot at him.

"It's my turn!" shouted the American. "I'll square it up if I can. Then we're even!"

He seized the wounded man in his strong arms, threw him over his shoulder and staggered toward the steps.

"Release me, curse you!" shrieked Vos Engo, striking his rescuer in the face with his fist.

"I'm saving you for another day," said King as he dropped behind the balustrade with his burden safe.

There were other witnesses to Truxton's rash act. In a lofty window of the north wing crouched a white faced girl and a grim old man. The latter held a rifle in his tense though feeble old hands. Now and then the old man would sight his rifle and fire. The girl who crouched beside him was there to designate a certain figure in the ever changing mass of humanity on the bloody parade ground. Her clear eyes sought for and found Marlanx; her unwavering finger pointed him out to the old marksman.

She saw Vos Engo fall. Then a tall, well known figure sprang into view, dashing toward her wounded lover. Her heart stopped beating. With her hands to her temples she leaned far over the window ledge and screamed—screamed words that would have filled Truxton King with an endless joy could he have heard them above the rattle of the rifles.

The corner of the building had shut out the picture. It was impossible for her to know that the man and his burden had reached the balcony in safety. Even now they might be lying on the terrace, riddled by bullets.

"YOU ARE SHOT!" SHE CRIED. "TRUXTON! TRUXTON!"

The old man roused her from the stupor of dread. He called her name. Dully she responded. Standing bolt upright in the window, she sought out the figure of Marlanx and pointed rigidly.

"Ah," growled the old man, "they will not be driven back this time!"

APRIL RAIN.

The earth lies dripping with sweetness.—
We've just had an April rain.
The grass—you can see it grow greener—
And the maple is budding again.

The storm-clouds have broken their friendship
And parted in proud disdain!
And the sunlight laughs on the meadow
Just after our April rain.
By Eleanor C. Hull.

—Strawberries were in market
here last week at 18 cents a quart —Attorney L. K. R Laird of Auburn was in town Tuesday, on business.

—Attorney Amasa J. Parker and wife left yesterday for Grand Rapids, Mich., where Mr. Parker will be busy with legal matters for the balance of the week.—Auburn Citizen, April 21.

Bring the little ones to see the Happy Family, monkeys, dogs, cats, and rabbits with the tent show all

—The sixteenth annual meeting of the Mohonk Peace conference will be held at Mohonk lake on May 18, 19 and 20. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University will preside, and more than 300 distinguished men of different nations will be present.

—This section was visited by severe thunder showers last Saturday evening, followed by a steady rain nearly all day Sunday. The rain was much needed, and vegetation is now coming on fast. Fruit trees are full of blossoms, giving promise of a large yield, if not injured by frost

A Useful Reminder.

An M. P. who in his magisterial capacity periodically visited a private lunatic asylum told the story of a man of some position in the legal world who went to see a patient who had occasional lapses into sanity. The patient made a great impression on his visitor as a well informed, healthy minded gentleman and was assured that his case should be inquired into.
On leaving, the grateful patient courteously conducted the morning caller to the front door, affectionately pressing his hand at parting.

"You won't forget what I've told you," he pleaded, with tears in his voice.

"No," responded the visitor, turning round to descend the rather long flight of steps.

"I don't think you will," said the patient dreamily, "but test you should you know?"

And, lifting up his foot, he gave the unsuspecting, defenseless visitor a kick behind that sent him spinning down the stairway and sprawling on the gravel.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Bird's White Feathers.

The occurrence of white feathers in a bird's plumage is very common. It is, of course, due to lack of coloring matter and is liable to appear in both young and old birds. I have known of several old birds to exhibit this peculiarity (mostly in the wing feathers, however), and it may be due to imperfect nutrition and circulation as the bird ages. I have also noticed it in young birds in a number of instances.
The phenomenon thus cannot be said
to occur simply as a result of old age, but is rather one of those slight changes in the bird's system the causes of which we do not know.
There is this much more to be said,
however—when a young bird starts out with a few white feathers they are usually retained throughout life, mottling each time in a similar manner. Old birds may exhibit this loss of coloring at any time.—St. Nicholas

Patrick Henry's Fee.

It is said of Patrick Henry that during his practice of law in the Virginia courts and when he was familiarly addressed as "governor" a man who had been arrested for stealing a hog and who was out on bail went to the governor to have him defend him.

The governor said, "Did you walk away with that hog?"

"I don't like to say."

"Out with it."

"Yes, sir."

"Have you got the carcass?"

"Yes, sir."

"You go home, you wretch, cut the pig lengthwise in half and hang as much of it in my smokehouse as you keep in yours."

At court the governor said, "Your honor, this man has no more of that stolen hog than I have."

The man was cleared.—National Monthly.

A Lincoln Story.

When Lincoln, a struggling lawyer, was doing circuit duty in Ohio he once visited a country town where the general storekeeper had the reputation of adulterating, even to the danger point, his cider. In the midst of a general condemnation of this storekeeper Lincoln rose one night from his seat by the hotel stove.

"Come on, boys," he said.

And he led a party of a half dozen lawyers and judges to the general store.

"Let me have a quart of cider," he said to the storekeeper.

"Yes, sir," was the cordial reply.

"And which grade, sir—the ripe, at 3 cents; the mellow, at 2, or the new, at 1?"

"It doesn't matter which grade, mister," Lincoln drawled. "I only want to poison a dog."

Tribute of Appreciation.

At the funeral of Miss Victoria Bradley at King Ferry on April 17, one of her most intimate friends, as a part of the service, sang "Lay Her Low," of which the deceased had been fond.

The following tribute was also given
by another friend:

In behalf of Miss Bradley's friends and neighbors at Sherwood, I offer a little tribute of appreciation this afternoon.

She belonged to you here, but for many years she had also been one of us and we have loved her. We shall miss her.
From day to day we shall miss her. She was one of the valiant souls who lifted us to higher levels and at the same time walked with us simply and earnestly on the lower plane of every day interests.

She made herself one of us. Year after year, as president of our Political Equality Club, she planned for its meetings with an untiring enthusiasm that only her earnest belief in the principles for which it stood could explain.

At the meetings of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union she rarely failed to be present and take some part.
Her recitations there of favorite poems
I think none of us will forget.

Actively interested in education she always attended and participated in the annual business meeting of our district school and followed closely the program of our larger select school.

Whatever effort might be made for the good of humanity, either for the people about here or those farther away, it had her sympathy.

And she was always on the side of the oppressed whether it was a question of Capital and Labor or Slavery in the Congo.

Miss Bradley was not a strong woman physically. Her's was a strong spirit, in a frail, delicate body, but the spirit was ever triumphant over the body. It made itself master. Suffering was calmly endured as something that must be.
She bore her pain so cheerfully, so courageously, that often we did not know it was there. We marveled, and I marvel still in thinking yet, how she could keep up such courage.

Aside from her public interests she lived largely in her books, in her reading.
She liked to keep abreast of the times.
The Harper's Weekly she always read;
the Springfield Republican and other high class journals. She has had much satisfaction lately in reading the Survey which gives matters of sociologic nature.
Always saying that she could not read much because of her poor eyesight—how much she read! Her tables were covered with books, papers and magazines.
Her brain was always absorbing, as it was always ready to give out, of its richness.

Men liked to talk to Miss Bradley because she understood politics and questions of business and finance. But she was just as ready to discuss the flower or vegetable garden, or Halley's comet, or some neighborhood doings. The welcome to her home was unfailingly cordial and most of us found our way there sooner or later.

Miss Bradley was always herself. We always knew where to find her. Sincerity was the key-note of her existence.

Another feature of her strong character was decision. Right was right; wrong was wrong. There was no middle ground. Earnest, sincere and decided; intelligent, intellectual and public spirited; friendly, sympathetic and loyal —these are the adjectives that describe our friend as we knew her, as she went her way with us.

Her religious views were not the prevailing ones. She made no public profession. Her life was founded upon a deep, abiding trust, that did not seek expression in words.

She has gone quietly and gently out from among us. She has found the peace that passeth understanding. The memory and the influence of her life remain to inspire us.

Force of Habit.

"Why did you break your engagement with that school-teacher?" asked the friend.

"If I failed to show up at her house every evening, she expected me to bring a written excuse signed by my mother."—E. I. Horton in Woman's Home Companion for May.

trict, will meet in Port Byron, Fri-

The Dum Dum Bullet.

The dum dum bullet is named after the place, near Calcutta, where it was first made.

Gumption on the Farm.

Cold wet May—barn full of hay.
Don't slight the corn—corn is king.
A field is not fenced when the bars are down.

Lift up your eyes occasionally. All good things aren't in the furrows.
A level-headed man avoids many ups and downs in life.

The evils of riches are seldom manifest to those who possess them.

Many stories are like ashes: when thoroughly sifted there is not much left.

It keeps the society doctors busy nowadays hunting up new diseases that the common people do not have.

The young fellow who told his best girl that she was the apple of his eye, doubtless meant that she was a "Seek-no-further."

Always stand up for the right, but do not wear yourself out with worry because you can not turn the world and make it over in a day.

Many a woman as sharp as a brier at the bargain counter, has been obliged to confess that she was fooled in the selection of a husband.

Don't see why the oven doesn't bake good? Just scrape the soot and ashes out from under it and you will get an eye-opener on that subject.

After all it is the producing power of the farm that determines the boy in his going or staying. Show him that there's money in it, and he will stick to the old farm like a sand-bur to a sheep's tail.

Don't let the back step be unsightly with swill pails, cat dishes and hen food, thus strewing food and attracting flies,
and disease. Cart away all the old cans, broken dishes, old coats and boots, from back places and yards.

If fowls must run at large on range
over farm, by all means keep one breed, and give them all the time, knowledge and attention possible. You will have something of which you may be proud, and that will profit you financially as well.

When hens begin to lay soft-shelled eggs it is time to ask yourself, "Where am I failing to give them the food they need?" Don't be satisfied until you can answer that question. Almost always it is due to a lack of shell-making material.
Wheat bran, crushed egg-shells, cut bone, broken mortar and oyster-shells are fine
for making eggs with good solid shells.

Probably not one farmer in a thousand ever took his mowing machine guards out and ground them on the cutting edge. Look at them and see how dull they are. Some day before haying, when you have a little time, just take them all out and sharpen them. You have no idea how much better they will work.
The machine will cut almost like a new one.

Sometimes folks get a good many irons in the fire at the same time in spite of themselves. Jobs come thick and fast some days. The best way to do, then, is to keep calm and go straight ahead,— doing all the little things that lie in one part of the farm when you are in that locality, and then go on to something else. Finish what you have on hand.
Time brings all out right to the man who works this way.—May Farm Journal.
