FEB. 15—It seemed strange not to hear the church bell ring for two Sundays. The weather being so bad, there has been no church services. We hope there will be a change in the weather for next Sunday. J. D. Todd and wife made a business trip to Ithaca last Thursday. Frank Bingham and daughter Effie of Summerhill are this week guests of John Palmer and wife. Mrs. E. B. Stewart and son John went to Trumansburg last week to spend a few days with relatives. Miss Myrtle Orego has returned to Batavia. Mrs. Elmer Close was called to Auburn Saturday on account of the serious illness of her husband, Elmer Close, who is being treated in the hospital. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery. S. B. Mead is suffering from the prevalent disease, grip, also Andrew Chaffee. Albert Ferris is slowly recovering from his severe illness of pneumonia. C. E. Bidwell was called to New York City Monday of this week on account of the serious illness of his mother. Mrs. Walter Hunt still grasps the grip. She does not seem to improve very fast. Herman Ferris has returned to Auburn to remain with his sister, Mrs. J. Barnes, for a few weeks. Mrs. Chas. Barger spent last Friday and Saturday with Mrs. Chas. Davis, and her son, Henry Barger and family, all of Ludlowville. Mrs. S. S. Goodyear and daughter Cora spent last Thursday and Friday with relatives in Ithaca. George Hunt and family of Good-years spent last Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hunt. Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Bailey are spending some time in Syracuse. An error in last week's items. Miss Eliza Clark of King Ferry was one of the guests at Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hunt's a week ago last Saturday at the 43d marriage anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Hunt. Remember the George Washington social which is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Todd next week Tuesday evening, Feb. 22. A ten cent supper will be served from 5 o'clock until 9. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Young and little son visited last week with Mr. and Mrs. Jay Roa Grant at Cincinnati, returning home Monday of this week. About sixty-five friends by invitation of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Stoughton assembled at their home this week Monday evening for a reception in honor of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Cheesman, who arrived home from their visit to Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Shangle at Sabot, Va. It was a genuine surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Cheesman. When the company heard the jingling of their bells, the lights were all turned down and the company were as quiet as a mouse. When Mr. and Mrs. Cheesman entered they did not suspect that the sitting room and parlor were filled with so many of their friends, but when Mr. Stoughton said to them, "Come in and see what our Christmas presents were," they were perfectly astonished and surprised. Mr. and Mrs. Cheesman have been away from home since early last fall. Mr. Cheesman had a bad cough and his friends hope the climate down there has improved his health. The evening was very pleasantly spent and an elegant supper was served. Much praise is due the daughter, Mrs. Stoughton, for the management of the affair. We are glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Cheesman back to their home.

We forgot to mention that more of the invited guests started to go and found the roads so bad they were obliged to turn back home again. The gentleman forgot how he used to go to see his best girl when the roads now were nothing to what they were then and old Salmon creek so high, but he waded through just the same. The regular business meeting of the Five Corners and West Genoa W. C. T. U. will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 23rd. A good attendance is desired.

FEB. 14—The recent blizzard left us with the deepest snow of the season. The King Ferry stage failed to make its regular trip on Saturday on account of the drifted roads. A poverty social was held on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Kirkland and, despite the stormy night, there was a good attendance and a pleasant evening was enjoyed. Some of the costumes caused much merriment. Mrs. Fred Avery has a young lady friend from Binghamton visiting her. H. M. Purdy and wife returned from their Rochester trip on Saturday. Miss Abbie Main was home from Ithaca over Sunday. Miss Anna Lisk is taking a much needed rest from her school duties. She has a four weeks' vacation and is spending a week with friends in Ithaca. Mrs. Haines spent a few days recently with her son, W. A. Haines and family. We are glad to note that Horace Avery is on the speedy road to recovery. Mrs. Kirkland and family entertained Herbert Brewster, also a young lady from Skaneateles over Sunday.

A Story of Graustark
By
GEORGE BARR M'UTCHEON

Truxton King, a millionaire's son, sets out in search of adventure. Where better could he look for stirring events than in faroff Graustark, where the age of chivalry yet survives in all its romantic opportunity; where rules Prince Robin, the most precocious boy monarch in the realm of fiction; where the reds of Europe plot his murder in mysterious underground retreats; where gallant Truxton King and brave "Uncle Jack" fight valiantly for the preservation of the prince and the love of beautiful princesses; where American pluck and manhood are pitted against foreign intriguers, and where honesty and courage are mightier than the sword? Read of Prince Robin, son of an American princess; of Olga Platanova, the girl with the dread mission; of Marlanx, the Iron Count; of John Tullis, the American bulwark of a foreign throne; of lovely Loraine and of daredevil Truxton King, and then you will understand why an American lad is Prince of Graustark and an American author prince of story tellers.

CHAPTER I.
TRUXTON KING.

HE was a tall, rawboned, rangy young fellow with a face so tanned by wind and sun you had the impression that his skin would feel like leather if you could affect the impertinence to test it by the sense of touch. His clothes fitted him loosely and yet were graciously devoid of the bagginess which characterizes the appearance of extremely young men whose frames are not fully set and whose joints are still parading through the last stages of college development.

This tall young man in the panama hat and gray flannels was Truxton King, embryo globe trotter and searcher after the treasures of romance. Somewhere up near Central park, in one of the fashionable cross streets, was the home of his father and his father's father before him—a home which Truxton had not seen in two years or more. It is worthy of passing notice, and that is all, that his father was a manufacturer; more than that, he was something of a power in the financial world. His mother was not strictly a social queen in the great metropolis, but she was what we might safely call one of the first "ladies in waiting," which is quite good enough for the wife of a manufacturer, especially when one records that her husband was a manufacturer of steel. It is also a matter of no little consequence that Truxton's mother was more or less averse to the steel business as a heritage for her son. Be it understood here and now that she intended Truxton for the diplomatic service.

But neither Truxton's father, who wanted him to be a manufacturing Croesus, nor Truxton's mother, who expected him to become a social Solomon, appears to have taken the young man's private inclinations into consideration. Young Mr. King believed in romance. He grew up with an ever increasing bump of imagination, contiguous to which, strange to relate, there was a properly developed bump of industry and application; hence it is not surprising that he was willing to go far afield in search of the things that seemed more or less worth while to a young gentleman who had suffered the ill fortune to be born in the nineteenth century instead of the seventeenth.

We come upon him at last—luckily for us we were not actually following him—after two years of wonderful but father disillusioning adventure in mid-Asia and all Africa. He had seen the Congo and the Euphrates, the Ganges and the Nile, the Yangtze-kiang and the Yenisei; he had climbed mountains in Abyssinia, in Slam, in Tibet and Afghanistan; he had shot big game in more than one jungle and had been shot at by small brown men in more than one forest, to say nothing of the little encounters he had had in most unaccidental towns and cities.

For twenty days he had traveled by caravan across the Persian uplands, through Herat and Meshhed and Bokhara, striking off with his guide alone toward the sea of Aral and the eastern shores of the Caspian, thence through the Ural foothills to the old Roman highway that led down into the sweet green valleys of a land he had thought of as nothing more than the creation of a harebrained fictionist. Somewhere out in the shimmering east he had learned, to his honest amazement, that there was such a land as Graustark. At first he would not believe, but the English bank in Meshhed assured him that he would come to it if he traveled long enough and far enough into the north and west and if he were not afraid of the hardships that most men abhor. The dying spirit of romance flamed up in his heart. His blood grew quick again and eager. He would not go home until he had sought out this land of fair women and sweet tradition. And so he traversed the wild and dangerous Tartar roads for days and days, like the knights of Scheherazade in the times of old, and came at last to the gates of Edelweiss.

Not until he sat down to a rare dinner in the historic Hotel Regenetz was he able to realize that he was truly in that fabled, mythical land of Graustark, a quaint, grim little principality in the most secret pocket of the earth's great mantle. This was the land of his dreams, the land of his fancy. He had not even dared to hope that it actually existed.

And now it becomes my deplorable duty to divulge the fact that Truxton King, after two full days and nights in the city of Edelweiss, was quite ready to pass on to other fields, completely disillusioned in his own mind and not a little disgusted with himself for having gone to the trouble to visit the place.

Where were the beautiful women he had read about and dreamed of ever since he left Teheran? On his soul, he had not seen half a dozen women in Edelweiss who were more than passably fair to look upon. True, he had to admit, the people he had seen were of the lower and middle classes—the shopkeepers and the shop-girls, the hucksters and the fruit vendors. What he wanted to know was this: What had become of the royalty and the nobility of Graustark? Where were the princes, the dukes and the barons, to say nothing of the feminine concomitants to these excellent gentlemen?

One dingy little shop in the square interested him. It was directly opposite the Royal Cafe, with American bars attached, and the contents of its grimy little windows presented a peculiarly fascinating interest to him. They were packed with weapons and firearms of ancient design. Once he ventured inside the little shop. Finding no attendant, he put aside his suddenly formed impulse to purchase a mighty broadsword.

On several occasions he had seen a grim, sharp featured old man in the doorway of the shop, but it was not until after he had missed the Thursday train that he made up his mind to accost him and to have the broadsword at any price. With this object in view, he inserted his tall frame into the narrow doorway, calling out lustily for attention.

"What is it?" demanded a sharp, angry voice at his elbow. He found himself looking into the wizened, parchment-like face of the little old man.

"That broadsword—say you speak English, don't you?"
"Certainly," snapped the old man. "Why shouldn't I? I can't afford an interpreter. You'll find plenty of English used here in Edelweiss since the Americans and British came. They won't learn our language, so we must learn theirs."
"What's the price of that old sword you have in the window?"
"Three hundred gnyvos."
"What's that in dollars?"
"Four hundred and twenty. It is genuine, sir, and 300 years old. Old Prince Boris carried it. It's most rare."
"I'll give you a hundred dollars for it, Mr.—er—looked at the sign on the open door—"Mr. Spantz."
"I don't want your money. Good day."
Truxton King felt his chin in perplexity. "It's too much. I can't afford it," he said, disappointment in his eyes.

"good," ventured the excellent Mr. Spantz.
"You make 'em?" in surprise.
"The old man straightened his bent figure with sudden pride. "I am armorer to the crown, sir. My blades are my pride and joy. I am happy to say."
"I say, Herr Spantz, or monsieur, I'd like to have a good long chat with you. What do you say to a mug of that excellent beer over in the cafe garden? Business seems to be a little dull. Can't you—er—lock up?"
Spantz looked at him keenly.
"May I ask what brings you to Edelweiss?" he asked abruptly.
"I don't mind telling you, Mr. Spantz, that I'm here because I'm somewhat of a fool. False hopes led me astray. I came here looking for romance—for adventure."
"I see," cackled Spantz, his eyes twinkling with mirth. "You thought you could capture wild and beautiful princesses here just as you pleased, eh? Let me tell you, young man, only one American—only one foreigner, in fact—has accomplished that miracle. Mr. Lorry came here ten years ago and won the fairest flower Graustark ever produced—the beautiful Yetive—but he was the only one."
"No. I'm not looking for princesses. I've seen hundreds of 'em in all parts of the world."
"You should see Prince Robin," went on the armorer.

"I've heard of nothing but him, my good Mr. Spantz. He's seven years old, and he looks like his mother, and he's got a jeweled sword and all that sort of thing. I darsay he's a nice little chap. Got American blood in him, you see."
The old man retired to the rear of the shop and called out to some one upstairs. A woman's voice answered.
"My niece will keep shop, sir, while I am out," Spantz explained.

They paused near the door until the old man's niece appeared at the back of the shop. King's glance became more or less in the nature of a stare of amazement.

A young woman of the most astounding beauty, attired in the black and red of the Graustark middle classes, was slowly approaching from the shadowy recesses at the end of the shop. His heart enjoyed a lively thump. Truxton King, you may be sure, did not precede the old man into the street. He deliberately removed his hat and waited most politely for age to go before youth, in the meantime blandly gazing upon the face of this amazing niece.

Across the square, at one of the tables, the old man, over his huge mug of beer, became properly grateful. He was willing to repay King for his little attention by giving him a careful history of Graustark, past, present and future.

The old man was rambling on. "The young prince has lived most of his life in Washington and London and Paris, sir. He's only seven, sir. Of course you remember the dreadful accident that made him an orphan and put him on the throne with the three 'wise men of the east' as regents or governors—the train wreck near Brussels, sir. His mother, the glorious Princess Yetive, was killed and his father, Mr. Lorry, died the next day from his injuries. That, sir, was a most appalling blow to the people of Graustark. There never will be another pair like them, sir. God alone preserved the little prince. The collision was from the rear, a broken rail throwing a locomotive into the prince's coach. This providential escape of the young prince preserved the unbroken line of the present royal family."
"I say, Mr. Spantz, I don't believe I've told you that your niece is a most remarkably beautiful woman."
"As I was saying, sir," interrupted Spantz so pointedly that Truxton flushed. "the little prince is the idol of all the people. Under the present regency he is obliged to reside in the principality until his fifteenth year, after which he may be permitted to travel abroad."

Spantz was eyeing him narrowly. "You do not appear interested in our royal family," he ventured coldly.
Truxton hastened to assure him that he was keenly interested. "Especially so now that I appreciate that the little prince is the last of his race."
"There are three regents, sir, in charge of the affairs of state—Count Halfont, the Duke of Perse and Baron Jasto Dangloss, who is minister of police. Count Halfont is a granduncle of the prince by marriage. The Duke of Perse is the father of the unhappy Countess Ingomede, the young and beautiful wife of the exiled Iron Count Marlanx. No doubt you've heard of him."

"I remember that he was banished from the principality."
"Quite true, sir. He was banished in 1901 and now resides on his estates in Austria. Three years ago in Budapest he was married to Ingomede, the daughter of the duke. Count Marlanx has great influence at the Austrian court. The Duke of Perse realized this when he compelled his daughter to accept him as her husband. The fair Ingomede is less than twenty-five years of age. The Iron Count is fully sixty-five."
"I'd like to see if she's really beautiful. I've seen but one pretty woman in this whole blamed town, your niece, Herr Spantz. I've looked 'em over pretty carefully too. She is exceedingly attractive."
"You will not find the beautiful women of Edelweiss in the streets, sir," snapped Spantz.

"Don't they ever go out shopping?"
"Hardly. The merchants, if you will but notice, carry their wares to the houses of the noble and the rich. But tomorrow the garrison at the fortress marches in review before the prince. If you should happen to be on the avenue near the castle gate at 12 o'clock you will see the beauty and chivalry of Graustark. The soldiers are not the only ones who are on parade."
There was an unmistakable sneer in his tone.
"You don't care much for society, I'd say," observed Truxton, with a smile.
Spantz's eyes flamed for an instant and then subtly resumed their most ingratiating twinkle. "We cannot all be peacocks," he said quietly. "You will also see that the man who rides beside the prince's carriage wheel is an American, while Graustark nobles take less exalted places."
"An American, eh?"
"Yes. Have you not heard of John Tullis, the prince's friend? He, your countryman, is the real power behind our throne. On his deathbed the prince's father placed his son in this charge and begged him to stand by him through thick and thin until the lad is able to take care of himself. As if there were not loyal men in Graustark who might have done as much for their prince!"

King looked interested. "I see. The people, no doubt, resent this espionage. Is that it?"
Spantz gave him a withering look, as much as to say that he was a fool to ask such a question in a place so public. Without replying, he got to his feet.
"I must return. I have been away too long."
The American sank back in his chair. Suddenly he became conscious of a disquieting feeling that some one was looking at him intently from behind. He turned in his chair and found himself meeting the gaze of a ferocious looking, military appearing little man at a table near by. His waiter appeared at his elbow with the change.
"Who the devil is that old man at the table there?" demanded young Mr. King loudly.

The waiter assumed a look of extreme insolence. "That is Baron Dangloss, minister of police. Anything more, sir?"
"Yes. What's he looking so hard at me for? Does he think I'm a pick-pocket?"
"You know as much as I, sir," was all that the waiter said in reply. King pocketed the coin he had intended for the fellow and deliberately left the place. As he sauntered across the little square his gaze suddenly shifted to a second story window above the gunshop.

The interesting young woman had cautiously pushed open one of the shutters and was peering down upon a trio of red coated guardsmen. Almost at the same instant her quick, eager gaze fell upon the tall American, now quite close to the horsemen. He saw her dark eyes expand as if with surprise. The next instant he caught his breath and almost stopped in his tracks.
A shy, impulsive smile played about her red lips for a second, lighting up the delicate face with a radiance that amazed him. Then the shutter was closed gently, quickly. He felt his ears burn as he abruptly turned away.
In the meantime Baron Dangloss was watching him covertly from the edge of the cafe garden across the square.

President Helps Orphans.
Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: We have used Electric Bitters in this institution for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth. It invigorates all vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. To strengthen and build up pale, thin, weak children or rundown people it has no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry.

Not Coughing Today?
Yet you may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says. He knows. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Scrap Book

Five to the Good.
"When Mr. Frith," a millionaire art collector said, "sold me my picture of a child feeding white rabbits he told me an amusing story connected therewith."

"He purchased for models, he said, a dozen white rabbits from a dealer and ordered them sent home. The man who brought them to him foolishly left them in the garden—Mr. Frith lived in the country at the time—and naturally the little animals all got away through the fence. Well, when Mr. Frith returned and found his rabbits gone he searched the neighborhood for them manfully. He got most of them back, but not all. And, meeting the dealer next day, he said angrily: "What did you mean by leaving the rabbits loose on my lawn, as you did? I had a frightful task to capture them, and as it was I got only eleven." "The dealer scratched his ear: "But eleven was pretty good, governor," he said. "I'd left only six, you know. The rest was comin' on tomorrow."

Living.
A wearied pilgrim, I have wandered here Twice five-and-twenty, bated me but one year. Long have I lasted in this world, 'tis true, But yet those years that I have lived are few. Who by his gray hairs doth his lusters tell Lives not those years but he that lives them well. One man has reached his sixty years, but he Of all those threescore has not lived half three. He lives who lives to virtue. Men who cast Their ends for pleasure do not live, but last. —Herrick.

His Bitter Rebuke.
The dinner had not gone at all well. The waiter was slow, the food was cold, and the cooking was bad. The guest in the German restaurant was of a naturally peevish disposition, anyhow, and he complained vigorously to the head waiter, and especially complained of the waiter at his table. As he was leaving the waiter said humbly: "If you only knew what a hard time us waiters had you would not be so hard."

"But," said the guest, "why be a waiter?" "You else couldst I do?" asked the waiter.

"Well," said the guest, "up at the Metropolitan Opera House they pay a man $5 a night to play the oboe. You might try that."

"But," said the waiter, "I don't know how to play dot oboe." "What is the difference?" observed the guest as he turned away, leaving a much mystified waiter. "You don't know how to waiter either. You might scatter your incompetence."—Cosmopolitan.

On Safe Ground.
A young clergyman who had been appointed to a curacy in one of the parishes of an English university town was embarrassed by the thought of criticism in his cultivated congregation. He sought counsel from his father, an old and sagacious vicar, saying:

"Father, I am hampered in my ministry in the pulpit I am now serving. If I cite anything from geology there is Professor A., the eminent expert in this science, right before me. If I use an illustration in Roman mythology, then there is Professor B. ready to trip me up for my inaccuracy. If I instance something in English literature that pleases me, I am cowed by the presence of the learned doctor who holds the chair of English literature here. What shall I do?"

The old man replied: "Do not be discouraged. I'll give you safe advice. Preach the gospel. They probably know very little of that."

Impertinent.
Sarah, duchess of Marlborough, one day remarked to her grandson, Jack Spencer, "Jack, you must marry, and I will give you a list of the ladies you may propose to."

"Very well, grannie," he said, and he proposed to the first on the list. When he came back with his wife from their wedding tour they went to pay their respects to the old lady.

"Well, now," she said, "I am the root, and you are only the branches, and therefore you must always pay me a great deal of deference."

"That is all very well," said Jack impertinently, "but I think the branches would flourish a great deal better if the root was underground."

Greeley's Awful Writing.
Horace Greeley left behind him a very frank criticism of the legibility of his own chirography. Being uptown in New York one day and wishing to send a telegram and also to get shaved, he entered a hotel and sent his dispatch. Then, passing into the barber shop, he sat down in a chair and, according to custom, was soon sound asleep.

Meantime the telegram had created a decided sensation, Mr. Greeley having thrown it down hastily on the desk and neglected to translate it. Nobody, from the manager down, being able to supply a legible equivalent for the mysterious characters, a messenger was sent into the barber shop with the scroll.

Waking with a start and supposing that the boy had brought an answer to his dispatch, Mr. Greeley took the paper, scanned it for a moment and then, with a look of deep disgust, piped out, "What blamed idiot wrote this?"

THE FAVORITE WON.

A Prizefight Referee Who "Seen His Duty and Done It."

In a sporting resort in the east end of London a popular Irish pugilist was matched against a burly and clever negro. The Irishman was a hot favorite, and his friends bet heavily that he would whip his colored opponent. The referee was also an Irishman, and when in the first round the negro reached the Irish fighter's jaw and the latter's head thumped the boards with a crash that seemed to prelude further contest the following monologue by the referee as he stood over the fallen favorite, counting the seconds, took place:

"One!" (In an undertone to his gasping compatriot: "Come on, man; get up

"Two!" (Wurrah, man, can't yez raise yourself and listen to what I'm tellin' yez? Come on; get up!)

"Three!" (For the sake of yer fathers that bled on many a field get up and wipe up the floor with this black smoke that's grinnin' at yez!)

"Four!" (An' sure are yez goin' to lie there slavin' while this limb of Satan takes all the money? Get up, I say, afore I pull yez up!)

This sort of entreaty continued until, as the disgusted referee lingered on the final count, the badly dazed Irish pugilist staggered to his feet, swung wildly at the unguarded negro and bowled him over unexpectedly.

Quick as a flash the ever ready referee sprang to the prostrate colored man, who, though dazed and weak, was wildly struggling to regain his feet, and counted:

"One, two, three, four, five and five is ten! You're out, you naggur!"

Why He Didn't Go to Church.
A Scottish minister who was indefatigable in looking up his folk one day called upon a parishioner. "Richard," he said, "I have na seen ye at the kirk for some time and wad like to know the reason."

"Weel, sir," answered Richard, "I hae three decided objections to goin'—firstly, I dinna believe in bein' whaur ye does a' the talkin'; secondly, I dinna believe in st' muckle singin', an', thirdly an' in conclusion, 'twas there I got my wife."

Friendship.
They seem to take away the sun from the world who withdraw friendship from life, for we have nothing better from the immortal gods, nothing more delightful.—Cicero.

Not a Suffragist Yet.
During a presidential campaign the question of woman suffrage was much discussed among women pro and con, and at an afternoon tea the conversation turned that way among the women guests.

"Are you a woman suffragist?" asked the one who was most interested. "Indeed, I am not," replied the other most emphatically.

"Oh, that's too bad! But just supposing you were, whom would you support in the present campaign?" "The same man I've always supported, of course," was the apt reply—"my husband."—Ladies' Home Journal.

His Son Andy.
Dr. Andrew J. McCosh was in his college days a famous athlete. He could run faster, kick a football farther and jump higher than any man in Princeton. Publicly his father, President McCosh, took no notice of Andy's achievements. That he privately rejoiced in his son's prowess the students learned in this way:

"Jimmy, as the president was familiarly called, though exceedingly courteous, was given to fits of abstraction in which he entirely forgot his surroundings.

Once at a reception in his home, apparently forgetful of all the world, he was pacing up and down the room with head bent and hands interlocked behind his back. Suddenly he walked up before a young lady and asked: "How tall are ye?"

In an embarrassed way she replied, "Why, doctor, I'm—I'm five feet two inches." "Me son Andy could jump over yer head," said the doctor and immediately resumed his walk.

An Aid to Digestion.
The Blanks had invited a guest to dinner. As the last course was reached little Willie, who had been closely watching the great almost continually during the meal, looked over at him once more and said,

"You haven't changed a bit since you starting eating, have you, Mr. Curtis?" "Why, no," laughed the visitor. "Why do you ask that question?" "Because," blurted out Willie, confused by the pair of eyes focused on him—"because I heard pa say you'd make a big hog of yourself as soon as you got your eyes on this feed."

PAVED THE WAY FOR LINCOLN.

By WILLARD JAMES.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

ABOUT the time that Abraham Lincoln began to lip his earliest words in the humble home in Kentucky in 1811 there was born in the old Bay State an individual who was destined to become a powerful molder of the nation.

CHARLES SUMNER, 1860.

al sentiment which bore the great war president into the White House. He was Charles Sumner, whose mission it was to become the successor of Daniel Webster in the United States senate and the uncompromising foe of slavery and disunion. He pitted himself against the advocates of the fugitive slave law in the senate and made a speech which upset all the specious theories of those who were its champions. In the famous debate on the Kansas-Nebraska bill in 1854 he directed all the keenest shafts of his wit and logic against the measure, and he won. Two years later he made the famous speech on the contest in Kansas which so excited the ire of the bellicose Preston Brooks that he sought fistie satisfaction. His speech entitled "The Barbarism of Slavery" was read all over the country and produced a tremendous effect.

Gerrit Smith was a pioneer in the dissemination of anti-slavery doctrine. As early as 1835 he practically withdrew from all other enterprises and devoted himself and his substance to the spread of anti-slavery principles.

GERRIT SMITH, 1861.

He inherited one of the largest landed estates in the country, and as an earnest of his devotion to the cause he proceeded to distribute 200,000 acres of it among the needy without distinction of color, which was a daring deed for that time. He was more censured than commended for his indiscriminate generosity, but he met the criticisms of his opponents with a dignity of speech and manner that won him hosts of friends. In those days the term "abolitionist" was used only as an expression of reproach, but Smith assumed it boldly and was prepared to defend it on all occasions. He was pre-eminently one of those who made it possible to elect Abraham Lincoln.

Edward Everett was by temperament firmly conservative. He was first of all a scholar, and his tastes and his principles made him the foe of all discord and violence. He had a profound distaste for the storm which was brewing, and his love of concord inspired him to work for conciliation rather than to take sides with those who regarded the struggle as inevitable. It was his very hesitation in avowing himself an abolitionist that contributed to the growth of Lincoln and his principles.

Getting Away From Land.

The question has been asked, is it possible to sail 1,000 miles from land? This can be done at several points. By leaving San Francisco and sailing northwestward into the north Pacific a spot is reached where there is no land, not even an islet, for 1,000 miles in any direction. So, too, sailing from the southern point of Kamchatka southeastward ships reach a point equally distant from land of any kind, the nearest to the north being the Aleutian islands and to the south the outlying members of the Sandwich group. In the southern Indian ocean it is possible to sail 1,000 miles out from the southern points of Australia and New Zealand and still be as far from any other land, and the same may be done in a westerly direction from Cape Horn. Indeed, from this point a much longer distance might be reached, for the southern Pacific between the Horn and New Zealand covers a space of 80 degrees of longitude and 40 of latitude of absolutely unbroken sea, making its central point over 1,200 miles from anywhere.

How Every Man Should Vote.

"Anybody who doesn't vote my way is a darned fool!" exclaimed a little man on an outboard trolley car. "What's that?" asked a big man, turning around in his seat and looking back. "Anybody who doesn't vote my way is a darned fool!" repeated the little man. "Did I understand you aright?" asked the big man, rising from his seat and coming back to the rear of the car where the little man was seated. The little man looked the big man over, but he was game and said once more, "Anybody who doesn't vote my way is a darned fool!" "Hold on a minute said the big man, who seemed on the point of starting something. "First tell me which way you are going to vote." A foxy gleam shot into the eyes of the little man, and he piped as dauntlessly as ever, "I'm going to vote any way I darned please!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Trapping Baboons.

Hagenbeck in his book says that baboons are caught in traps made much like the huts of savages. Food is put into the huts, and once the baboons go inside a trapdoor closes behind them. Outside baboons make a great to do and urge the prisoners to escape. When the trappers come the captured baboons are terror stricken and try to force their heads through the walls of the huts. One baboon was caught three times in the same trap, and several when turned loose got back into the same trap a second time. When the baboons are carried away all their comrades thereabout climb into trees and scream out to the prisoners, who answer in sad, mournful voices. On one occasion some big Arabian baboons were trapped, when 2,000 or 3,000 baboons buried themselves upon the trappers, who had hard work to save themselves with firearms and clubs. As the trappers were forced back the victorious baboons tore up the trap and turned loose the captured baboons.

Ink at $100 a Pound.

"The best India ink—it should really be called China ink—never leaves China," said a missionary. "It costs $100 a pound, and the scribes use it in writing the correspondence of the royal family and the mandarins. India ink is made of the oil of poisonous seeds of the sesamum or colza tree. Varnish and pork fat are added to the oil, and then, by means of combustion, all is changed to lampblack. The lampblack paste mixed with glue is beaten for days on an anvil, and musk is gradually mixed in to give perfume and the purest gold leaf to give a rich luster. Finally the ink is dried in molds for about a month. What makes the best India ink so costly is its purity and, above all, the long time given to its combustion and subsequent beating. If you saw its beauty you wouldn't think it dear at $100 a pound."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Salesman.

Young man, I had decided upon your immediate discharge. One big redeeming trait of your character as just now revealed restrains me. Your loyalty is all that saves you. Stick up for your house every time. A salesman's five cardinal points are loyalty, enthusiasm, hard work, persistence and tact. You have much of the first four and none of the last. Smooth yourself down. You talked to the lumber company man at the wrong time. When he said he was too busy you should have smiled and got out. You can only sell to a man when he is in the right mood.—Book-keeper.

The Alternative.

A tramp went into a farmhouse recently, and, seeing no one but an old woman, he said in very fierce tones, "Give me a drink of milk or else." But a man came behind him suddenly and, catching him by the neck, said, "Else what?" "Else water," said the tramp humbly.—London Tatler.

Got the Train Stopped.

When the late Robert Bonner purchased Maud S. he sent her to Charter Oak park to be trained. One day a friend of Mr. Bonner left New York to visit him at the park, but found that the train did not stop at that station. The conductor was polite, but said that he could not go against orders. At New Haven a halt was made, and Mr. Bonner's friend tried to bribe the engineer with a ten dollar bill, but in vain. He was then told that Charles P. Clark, the president of the road, was on the train, and he went to him.

"Why don't you see the conductor?" asked Mr. Clark.

"I have, but he will not disobey orders."

"Why not then go forward and bribe the engineer?"

"I tried bribery at New Haven, but it would not work."

The absence of evasion was the best policy. Mr. Clark not only gave orders to have the train stopped at Charter Oak, but promised some day to see Maud S. He had witnessed the attempt at bribery, and the frank confession of the offense seemed to please him.

Preparing For a Journey.

Jerome K. Jerome recalled with reverence a habit of his methodical uncle, who, before packing for a journey, always "made a list." This was the system which he followed, gathered from his uncle's own lips:

Take a piece of paper and put down on it everything you can possibly require. Then go over it and see that it contains nothing you can possibly do without.

Imagine yourself in bed. What have you got on? Very well; put it down together with a change. You get up. What do you do? Wash yourself! What do you wash yourself with? Soap. Put down soap. Go on till you have finished. Then take your clothes. Begin at your feet. What do you wear on your feet? Boots, shoes, socks. Put them down. Work up till you get to your head. What do you want besides clothes? Put down everything.

This is the plan the old gentleman always pursued. The list made, he would go over it carefully to see that he had forgotten nothing. Then he would go over it again and strike out everything it was possible to dispense with. Then he would lose the list.

Chicago the Danger Line.

"Speaking of fishballs," remarked an ardent New England admirer of that form of food who was eating in a Dearborn street restaurant the other day, "I will tell you a sad, sad truth about them.

"If you order them in Boston they are practically all fish. Yes, sir—solid, bona fide fish. Move west a bit—to Albany, say. What happens? The amount of fish in each fishball has dwindled. Proceed to Buffalo. A certain self assertiveness begins to be apparent with the fish. On to Cleveland! Fishballs there are half potato, half fish, with the accent on potato. On to Chicago! There potato has the upper hand!"

He groaned. "How is it in the far west?" "I've never dared travel farther west than Chicago!" he whispered hoarsely.—Chicago Tribune.

Golf in the Old Days.

Centuries back golf was a pastime of the royal family, though then usually played in Scotland. The Stuart family was very fond of the game, and the first English club was established at Blackheath in 1608 by James I. His eldest son, Henry, frequently played and on one occasion nearly struck by accident his tutor with a club, whereupon he coolly remarked, "Had I done so I had but paid my debts." Charles I. was playing golf when he received the news of the Irish rebellion. James, duke of York, afterward James II., was another ardent player. Golf is frequently mentioned in ancient Scottish records and in the fifteenth century was prohibited because it interfered with the practice of archery. Strutt considered it the most ancient game at ball requiring a bat.—London Standard.

Vegetable Chat.

"I see that some college professor has been saying that he believes that vegetables can see and hear while growing in the garden." "Is that so?" "Yes; not only that, but he believes that ages hence they will be able to converse with one another." "Oh, that's old!" "What's old?" "Vegetables conversing. I've often heard 'Jack and the Beans-talk'."

Maid Worth Having.

The Mistress (entering the kitchen)—Jane, didn't I hear a dish break a minute ago. The Maid—I hope you did, mem. It made noise enough. If you hadn't heard it I should have thought you were getting deaf, and that, you know, would be awful.—Boston Transcript.

—Mrs. James Myer was called to Ovid Center last Friday by the death of her mother, Mrs. B. C. Wright, which occurred suddenly on Thursday, from heart trouble. The funeral was held on Sunday and burial was made at Marcellus, N. Y., on Monday. Mr. Myer went to attend the funeral and returned with his wife on Monday.

—Truman A. De Weese of Buffalo said while addressing the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia: "There is no advertising value in one-time insertions. It is the keeping everlastingly at it which brings results in advertising. It is the consecutive, persistent pounding away that does the trick in advertising, and the advertiser that does this year after year is the man who knows that advertising pays. With him it is not an experiment; neither is it an experiment. It is a part of his investment, the same as the cost of raw material and the cost of production."

—Robert Mastin has been suffering with the grip for a few days.

—The heaviest fall of snow came Friday night last, and still there's more to follow.

—J. H. Rease of Ithaca and H. L. Bronson of Cortland were in town Monday.

—A letter from Mrs. E. H. Shangle announces that they have moved on their own plantation, "Belmont," at Irwin, Va., ten miles up the river from Sabot, where they have lived since going to Virginia. The weather there is cool, but the sun shines and the birds sing. Mr. and Mrs. Cheesman, who have been spending some time with them, left there last week for their home near Five Corners.

Dr. J. W. Whitbeck, dentist, Genoa, N. Y., is prepared to do painless extracting of teeth by the use of Sleep Vapor or Somnoform, the latest and safest anaesthetic known, which can be had at his office administered by a physician. He also has for extracting the best preparation for hypodermic; and also a local application for extracting children's teeth, perfectly harmless. In fact, everything in the dental line can be found at his office. Charges as reasonable as in the city or elsewhere, consistent with first-class work.

—The editor of a newspaper is often accused of leaving out certain items of news purposely, because of a dislike of the person to be mentioned, or from prejudice or another cause. This is all bosh. The editor has something like a thousand different things to think of in connection with the issue of one paper, and it is not surprising if he misses an item occasionally or sometimes forgets one which has been called to his attention. Nine out of ten people you ask for news items, tell you they can't think of any. But in most cases they expect the editor to think of them all and criticise him if he fails in a single item. The best way is to give the editor credit for what he does find and mention, and for some things that he finds and does not mention.—Ex.

—Mrs. Mary Connell has sold her farm, north of the village, to Frank Gunn of Merrifield.

—Cyrus Pratt, who suffered a slight apoplectic shock last week, is reported as improving.

WHAT PHYSICIANS SAY OF BEER.

Some years ago the "Toledo Blade" sent out a representative to ascertain what the physicians thought of beer-drinking...

Dr. S. H. Burgen, a practitioner thirty-five years, twenty-eight in Toledo, says: "I think beer kills quicker than other liquor..."

Dr. J. T. Woods: "That beer is foreign to nature's demand is plainly evident. The whole organism at once sets about its removal..."

Dr. S. S. Lungren a leading homeopathic physician and surgeon who has practiced in Toledo twenty-five years says: "It is difficult to find any part of the confirmed beer-drinker's machinery that is doing its work as it should..."

Dr. W. T. Ridenour: "I have no doubt the rapid spread of Bright's disease is largely due to beer-drinking. I have always believed that Bayard Taylor fell a victim to the German beer that he praised so highly..."

Dr. C. A. Kirkley: "I believe that forty-nine out of fifty cases of chronic Bright's disease are directly produced by it. I have never met with a case in which the patient has not been intemperate to a greater or less degree..."

Poor Old John! But poor old John Barleycorn! He has fallen on evil days. His friends are few and half-hearted...

A Despoiler of Youth. The saloon is a despoiler of our youth. Our young men are sacrificed in hetaeromachs to the vile god of ruin...

Rather illogical. Remarkable, isn't it, that after the innumerable license laws that were going to "eliminate the low dives," etc., etc., the liquor men themselves are now aroused to the necessity of getting rid of those same "low dives," etc.?...

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

How She Helped Lincoln With "Uncle Tom's Cabin." In that little heroic advance guard of men and women who battled valiantly for the spread of anti-slavery sentiment in this republic Harriet Beecher Stowe was most conspicuous.

Nor did it matter much that it was a work which, measured even by the standards of the time, was not esteemed a notable example of literary handicraft. That it was never accepted by those whose opinion should have been final as a true picture of conditions...

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, 1854.

less of the protests that there were no Legrees or Markses, that the slave-market scene was the product of a diseased imagination and that half the horrors revealed in its pages were nonexistent.

It was an avant-courier of Abraham Lincoln and his mission, and the great emancipator always regarded it as such. For its author he had the most appreciative admiration, and she was always welcomed at the White House.

Why Lincoln Told Stories. Lincoln undoubtedly appropriated all the stories he could acquaint himself with, regardless of their antiquity, and often, no doubt, he adapted their point to the conditions of the people he lived among.

"I believe I have the popular reputation of being a story teller, but I do not deserve the name in its general sense, for it is not the story itself, but its purpose or effect, that interests me. I often avoid a long and useless discussion by others or a laborious explanation on my own part by a short story that illustrates my point of view."

It may be added that this accords with the view which most students of Lincoln's character had reached.

Lincoln's Cabinet. Lincoln hated to dictate. He shrank from assuming to control the members of his cabinet until forced by circumstances to take upon himself the responsibility. His natural preference was to work with rather than to lead men.

When the members of Lincoln's cabinet first met probably no one among them suspected that their counsels would be ruled by the man who sat at the head of the table. None of them knew him, and most of them felt they were the superiors of the untried and untrained president.

Lincoln's Odd Appearance. Lincoln's favorite outer garb as he sallied forth in winter for his office was an ancient gray shawl. He took particular pains never to have his hat brushed or his shoes blacked. His carpetbag threatened at the seams to disgorge its burden of legal documents.

The office was in character with the notorious indifference to appearances of the senior partner of the firm. Once a young law student attempted to blaze a trail through the accumulated rubbish and found that some seeds given by a congressman had taken root and sprouted in the dirt.

WOMEN WHO KNEW LINCOLN.

By GERALD PRIME.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

DESPITE his rather gloomy temperament and always present realization of the fearful responsibility which the civil war had fastened upon him, Mr. Lincoln never held himself aloof from the various forms of popular amusement prevalent in the early sixties. Although they had found little opportunity in early life to cultivate a taste for the theater, both the president and his wife were especially fond of the play and were familiar figures at the capital's rather primitive places of amusement. Although his musical appreciation did not extend beyond a hearty enjoyment of the homely singing of the Hutchinson family, whose ballads had contributed so powerfully to the spread of anti-slavery sentiment throughout the Union, Mr. Lincoln sometimes went to the opera. On one of these occasions he heard Adeline Patti, then in the first flush of her fame as a prima donna. The opera was "Marta," and the diva sang "The Last Rose of Summer" in English. The president was delighted with the song, sought an introduction to the singer and invited her to come to the White House.

The following day when the wonderful young song bird arrived at the executive mansion Mr. Lincoln was deep in the discussion of some perplexing war problem with the members of his cabinet. When he entered the parlor in which the singer was waiting rather impatiently his solemn countenance was almost convulsed with anxiety and apprehension. At sight of the diva his drawn features lightened perceptibly, and he greeted her warmly and told her of the pleasure her singing had given him.

"I hope to hear you sing 'The Last Rose of Summer' again," he said. "I'll sing it now," said Patti impulsively, drawing off her gloves and seating herself at the piano.

She was in fine voice, and the inspiration of her distinguished and highly appreciative audience of one made her singing especially effective. Despite the fact that on that very evening she was billed to sing a most exacting role in opera, she poured forth a wealth of melody with unstinted generosity, "Home, Sweet Home." "Suwanee River," "Old Kentucky Home," "Comin' Thro' the Rye" and half a dozen other folk songs following in quick succession.

Throughout this impromptu concert Mr. Lincoln sat motionless with his long arms folded and his eyes half closed. When Patti had finished she turned on the piano stool with a naive "Mr. President, is that enough for today?"

The tired, homely face of the great president relaxed into a smile which the Baroness Cederstrom has not forgotten to this day, so kindly was it and so expressive of wonder and admiration for the singer's art.

"I look upon your visit to me as a special providence," he said. "I shall always remember it."

Another woman whose talent afforded Mr. Lincoln many moments of respite from his arduous and soul racking labors was Charlotte Crabtree, who under the stage name of Little Lotta was the favorite American comedienne of that period. Although Miss Crabtree was still in her teens, she had already achieved a national reputation as a brilliant impersonator of light comedy roles and had sung and danced herself into the affections of the theater going public with a cleverness that speedily brought her fame and fortune. Not long before the dreadful tragedy in Ford's theater she played an engagement in Washington, and the president and his family were among her most appreciative admirers.

TERESA CARRENO, 1861.

A famous woman whose intellectuality and remarkable oratorical power made her a person of remarkable interest to the Lincoln family was Anna E. Dickinson, who at that time was at the zenith of her fame as a lecturer against slavery and disunion and kindred topics. Miss Dickinson was an early advocate of emancipation and was accustomed to make frequent visits to the White House to urge Mr. Lincoln to take the step. On these occasions Miss Dickinson was received with the most generous hospitality, and her ultra radical views were given respectful consideration.

A fourth woman who has carried with her during her long and successful professional career the happy memory of once having been the means of contributing to the entertainment of Abraham Lincoln is Teresa Carreno, now the most distinguished female piano artist of the day. In those days she was being exploited as a "musical prodigy," and even at that early age she was the mistress of a wonderful technique. The Lincolns went to hear the little Venezuelan maiden play and were delighted with her. She was invited to the White House and played for the president.

All of these women of genius whose blessed privilege it was to dispel a little of the gloom which was even then enshrouding the personality of the greatest man of his age are still in the flesh. Adeline Patti, now the Baroness Cederstrom, is growing old gracefully in her castle in Wales; Lotta, who is as thrifty as she is mentally alert, lives in New York city in a beautiful home of her own; Mme. Carreno, whose art has developed into splendid fulfillment of her youthful promise, is still America's premiere pianist, and Anna Dickinson, broken physically and mentally wrecked, is living in retirement in New York city.

Lincoln's Favorite Poem.
According to those who knew him most intimately, Mr. Lincoln was never again the same man after the death of Ann Rutledge, the "best beloved" of his early manhood. He had always been subject to attacks of mental depression, but after her death they became more frequent and alarming. It was about that time that he came across some verses in the "Poets' Corner" of a rural newspaper which made a strong impression on him. This was the poem beginning "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" None who ever heard him repeat these wonderfully plaintive yet curiously empty lines in after life realized that they served to keep in his memory a grief which remained with perpetual insistence in his heart, to which he could not with becoming delicacy allude directly, but there is little doubt that Lincoln never recovered wholly from the loss of his youthful fiancée.

For many months after the passing of this beautiful young woman Lincoln was utterly desolate and made no secret of the fact. It was then that these ultra somber lines seemed to furnish him with a vehicle by means of which he might give expression to some of the sadness of soul which overshadowed him. In the words of one who knew him at the time: "He was heard to murmur them to himself as he slipped into the village at nightfall after an evening visit to the cemetery, and he would suddenly break out with them in little social assemblies after periods of silent gloom. They seemed to come unbidden to his lips."

That poem is now Lincoln's very own. The name of the obscure poet is lost to posterity, but his unpretentious work is associated imperishably with the memory of one of the world's greatest men and interwoven with the history of his supreme sorrow.

Saved From Awful Peril.

"I never felt so near my grave," writes Lewis Chamblin, of Manchester, Ohio, R. D. No. 3, "as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 115 pounds in spite of many remedies and the best doctors. And that I am alive to-day is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I weigh 160 pounds and can work hard. It also cured my four children of croup." Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it's the most certain remedy for LaGrippe, Asthma, desperate lung trouble and all bronchial affections. 50c and $1.00. A trial bottle free. Guaranteed by J. S. Banker, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater, King Ferry.

"She Who Dreams."
A Maori's idea of a woman is expressed in the phrase "she who dreams," which means that her thoughts are on a higher plane than his. He allows her absolute freedom of speech and manner, for he is sure that if there is anything to be said or done a woman's refinement and sincerity will exceed his own.—Ladies' Field.

Better Than Fresh.
"Are you sure these eggs are fresh?" "Positive! They were really not due until tomorrow."—Fliegende Blatter.

A Big Baby Farm.
What has been called the biggest baby farm in the world is situated at Moscow, and it is claimed that this institution shows an annual crop of some 14,000 babies, not to speak of that put out by a branch at St. Petersburg, which numbers 8,000. The Moscow Foundling asylum was founded by Empress Catherine II., and it is maintained, oddly enough, by a tax on playing cards. Servants in the red livery of the royal family guard its doors, and its accounts are carefully audited by the Russian treasury department. The buildings comprising this institution stand in a hollow square round a garden with trim lawn and trees, which forms a playground for the children. Youngsters of all sorts and sizes, from tender nurslings, who in the incubating rooms are just struggling into life, are reared by careful nurses and are as sure of good attention and wholesome food as any baby can need. About fifty babies are received every day, and after four weeks the nurses take them to their own homes in the villages.—New York Tribune.

Opulence.
They numbered four. They absolutely exuded prosperity. The things which they ordered were such as to fill with envy the breast of the man at the next table engaged in consuming the most modest dish disclosed by the bill of fare.

The four were conversing—languid, plutocratic conversation. After awhile it turned to the question of money. Evidently they wanted to do something. How much money had they? One of the four took out his pocket-book and counted up a roll of bills.

"Oh, I have a hundred and forty," he said carelessly.

The second and third members of the party went through their pockets.

"I have two hundred and fifteen," remarked one.

"And I have three hundred," said the other.

The fourth waved his hand grandly.

"Never mind, you fellows," he said. "I'll lend you all you want."

Tenderly waiters bore the man at the next table out into the cold air. He will recover.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Hollyhocks.

The hollyhock resembles a tall, modest maiden. The air of aloofness and aristocratic sufficiency veils beauty and charm. Friends have told me of fragrant hollyhocks, but I have yet to meet one, while knowing full well that with a generous supply of honey and nectar there should be perfume hidden deep in the heart of the flower.—Chicago Post.

A Thrilling Sport.

At Waikiki, the home of surfboating for pleasure, there is no dangerous reef, but in the south Pacific often the reef is two miles from shore and is exposed at low tide. The waves form almost on the edge of the reef and drop down upon the hard coral perpendicularly, covering the reef for the time being with about two feet of rushing water. The canoe that must jump this reef places itself before a wave, every one paddles for dear life, and if the boat does not touch coral, but is held suspended until a cushion of water rushes onward to receive it, the jump is successfully negotiated, the reef is crossed, and there is but a two mile paddle across the quiet lagoon to the sandy beach. If the bow of the canoe does touch the coral on the down leap there is a shattering of the dugout, and its occupants are sent flying in every direction. One might laugh at this at Waikiki, where there are no sharks, but not in the south seas.—Recreation.

Interesting Group Meeting.

A W. C. T. U. group meeting of the societies of Lake Ridge, Ludlowville, Genoa and Five Corners, was held at the Lansingville church Wednesday, Feb. 2. An all day session was held.

Mrs. Estella Bissell, president of the Lake Ridge Union, gave the address of welcome. Mrs. Humphreys responded, Scripture reading by Mrs. W. E. Smith and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Humphreys.

Opportunity was given for the honorary members to speak and the following responded, Nathan Bower, Henry Bower, Frank Drake, J. D. Todd, Joel Corwin, Rev. Mr. Humphreys. They all agreed in saying that men should see their duty in voting the Prohibition ticket and said that the women of the W. C. T. U. were doing a fine work, but could not do justice to it until the men would do their part in voting right so that they could work.

Mrs. Mary B. Wood of Ithaca, the county president, then spoke a few words. One remark was, "If I were a man and called myself a Christian, I should have to vote the National Prohibition ticket. Or if I wore the brass button or even called myself an American citizen, I should have to vote the Prohibition ticket." Adjournment was made for dinner.

The first hour in the afternoon was in charge of the Ludlowville Union. Mrs. Humphreys read a paper on "The Christian Woman." She showed that the Christian woman will care more for the home and church and Christian movements than for those of a worldly nature.

Mrs. C. E. Townsend sang a solo, also one was sung by Mrs. W. E. Smith.

Rev. W. E. Smith gave an address. He said that the secret of the success of the W. C. T. U. is the fact that they are a Christian Union and have the grip upon God and his promises, and that the W. C. T. U. and the Prohibition party have accomplished the most that has been done for the temperance cause. He also said that no one could have Prohibition sentiments and call themselves prohibitionists and not belong to that party which stands for temperance. "Prohibition is not only a local, but a national movement." One will say "My party, right or wrong." One ought to say, "This party if right, if not, then change to the right which must be Prohibition." "The only solution of caring for the tempted is their regeneration and sanctification after the saloons are closed."

Several recitations were given, one by Mrs. Cora Chaffee, one entitled, "No Place for the Boys," by Mrs. O'Hara and "Why I hate the Liquor Traffic," by Mrs. Robert Ferris.

A duet was sung by Mrs. Warren Counsell and Mrs. Wm. Minturn, also one by Mrs. Counsell and Mrs. Jay Atwater.

Mrs. Shaw of Ithaca, the jail chaplain, gave a short talk on her work and told of the misery, sorrow and degradation even to be found in that small city, caused by liquor.

Mrs. Wood was the last speaker. She urged all to greater work and to take for their motto, "Keep On," and to remember to pray, for the enemy could not withstand prayer, though it might other methods.
