It is well said that "the rural school of the future is going to be the best school the world has yet known. Its teachings will cooperate with work and life on the farm and in the home. This will make for more efficiency in old as well as young, common sense, happiness, patriotism."

Don't think it a waste of time to rest a little while, now and then. Lie flat on the bed, or even on the floor; stretch out at full length, let go of everything and shut the eyes and rest. Most of us keep keyed up too tight; it wears us out more than the work we do.

There is no family so poor it can not afford to screen its home. Screens will turn away all flies as well as mosquitoes. The unscreened house, in other words, is a dangerous thing, and screens on windows and outside doors are an excellent investment from several points of view. But sprinkle kerosene oil on the fresh horse manure pile twice a week and thus stop their breeding. Do this faithfully and the flies will not be nearly so plentiful.—Farm Journal.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Obituary.

Daniel Peck Kratzer was born near Lansingville in Tompkins county, New York, Jan. 7, 1842, the oldest son of Philip and Susan Kratzer. He enlisted at the age of 19 in the 75th New York Volunteers, and served four years in the war of the Rebellion, most of the time in the Department of the Gulf. He was eight months in a rebel prison, in Shreveport, La., and spent over two months in a dungeon, having been placed there as a penalty for an unsuccessful attempt to escape.

Soon after the war he was married to Abidah Ann Andrews, and to them were born two children, Glenn A., now resident at Springfield, Mass., and Mary, who died in infancy. He spent his early life as a farmer in northern Tompkins and southern Cayuga counties, being for ten years resident in Venice on the Indian Field road.

In 1885, he moved to Cortland, N. Y., in order to give his son opportunity to go through the State Normal school. In 1893, Mrs. Kratzer died, and Mr. Kratzer soon broke up housekeeping. Since that time he has lived for longer or shorter periods in Ohio, North and South Carolina and in Massachusetts. His last two years were spent with his son and daughter in Fitchburg and Springfield, Mass., in which latter place he passed on from chronic endocarditis on June 21, 1909.

In his middle and later life, he was a man of strong religious faith. He was one who did what he could to visit the widows and the fatherless in their affliction and, far more than most people, he kept himself unspotted from the world. "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord," and "the end of that man is peace."

He is survived by one brother, Charles Kratzer at the Forks of the Creek, and by his son, Glenn A. Kratzer. The funeral services were held on Wednesday, June 23, at 3 o'clock at the Presbyterian church of Genoa. The services were conducted by his son, who spoke from the text: "We know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Mrs. Robert Mastin and Miss Ida Mastin sang the hymns, "Nearer my God to Thee" and "Abide with Me." The interment was at East Venice cemetery, where his remains rest beside those of his wife and daughter.

Among those at the funeral from a distance was Cornelius P. Fenner from Orleans Co., N. Y., Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Kratzer from Springfield, Mass.

In sickness, if a certain hidden nerve goes wrong, then the organ that this nerve controls will also surely fail. It may be a Stomach nerve, or it may have given strength and support to the Heart or Kidneys. It was Dr. Shoop that first pointed to this vital truth. Dr. Shoop's Restorative was not made to dose the Stomach nor to temporarily stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That old-fashioned method is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to these failing inside nerves. The remarkable success of this prescription demonstrates the wisdom of treating the actual cause of these failing organs. And it is indeed easy to prove. A simple five or ten days test will surely tell. Try it once, and see! Sold by J. S. Banker, Genoa.

Tell some deserving Rheumatic sufferer, that there is yet one simple way to certain relief. Get Dr. Shoop's book on Rheumatism and a free trial test. This book will make it entirely clear how Rheumatic pains are quickly killed by Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy—liquid or tablets. Send no money. The test is free. Surprise some disheartened sufferer by first getting for him the book from Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. J. S. Banker, Genoa.

The Scrap Book

Perfectly Logical.

A Philadelphia lady one spring determined to turn her lawn into a flower garden and decided to do the planting herself. One evening the lady's husband came home and found her poring over a seed catalogue. She had a long list of seeds written on a sheet of paper.

"This is a list, my dear," she said, "that I want you to buy for me tomorrow at the seedman's."

Her husband looked at the list. Then he laughed loud and long.

"You want these flowers to bloom this summer, don't you?" said he.

"Yes, of course."

"Well, those you have put down here don't bloom till the second summer."

"Oh, that's all right," the lady said easily.

"All right? How is it all right?"

"I am making up my list," she explained, "from a last year's catalogue."

Morality.

We cannot kindle when we will
The fire which in the heart resides.
The spirit bloweth and is still.

In mystery our soul abides.
But tasks in hours of insight willed
Can be through hours of gloom fulfilled.

With aching hands and bleeding feet
We dig and heap, lay stone on stone.
We bear the burden and the heat

Of the long day and wish 'twere done.
Not till the hours of light return
All we have built do we discern.

—Matthew Arnold.

One Button Was In Use.

A school principal was trying to make clear to his class the fundamental doctrines of the Declaration of Independence.

"Now, boys," he said, "I will give you each three ordinary buttons. Here they are. You must think of the first one as representing life, of the second one as representing liberty and the third one as representing the pursuit of happiness. Next Sunday I will ask you each to produce the three buttons and tell me what they represent."

The following Sunday the teacher said to the youngest member, "Now, Johnny, produce your three buttons and tell me what they stand for."

"I ain't got 'em all," he sobbed, holding out two of the buttons. "Here's life, an' here's liberty, but mommer sewed the pursuit of happiness on my pants!"

Letting Him Down Easy.

The manager of the music hall was testing the abilities of a few candidates for stage honors one day last week, and this is how he let down one of the would be funny men.

"Your songs won't do for me. I can't allow any profanity in my theater," said he.

"But I don't use profanity," was the reply.

"No," said the manager, "but the audience would."—Stray Stories.

Witty and Caustic.

Lord Cranworth when lord chancellor used to sit continually with the lords justices, for the purpose, it was said, of enlightening himself on points of which he was ignorant. "I wonder why old Cranney always sits with the lords justices," said some one to Sir Richard Bethell. As usual, he was humorous and at the same time caustic. "I take it to arise," said he, "from a childish indisposition to be left alone in the dark."

When attorney general, Bethell once finished an elaborate address just as the court adjourned at noon. His junior, who expected to follow on the same side after lunch, said to him, "Mr. Attorney General, you have evidently made a strong impression on the court." "I think so, too," replied Bethell. "Don't disturb it."

She Wasn't Selfish.

A little girl of three was having a naughty time of it one evening. The mother undressed her and put her to bed and decided to leave her for a time to the gentle ministrations of her father. He succeeded in quieting her. The mother came to bid her little girl good night and upon asking, "Well, dearie, have you asked God to forgive you?" received the reply:

"Yes, and I asked him to forgive you too!"

Sincerity.

The shortest and surest way to live with honor in the world is to be in reality what we would appear to be, and if we observe we shall find that all human virtues increase and strengthen themselves by the practice and experience of them.—Socrates.

The Judge's Advice.

Some years ago many farmers along the line of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad brought suit against it and engaged a young lawyer named Brown. Judge Gantt, who was presiding, was compelled to throw many of the cases out of court because they were improperly brought.

Brown was mad all over. Swelling with indignation, he arose and said, "Your honor, will you please tell me how it is possible in this court to get justice against a railroad company?"

Judge Gantt quietly ignored the content of court shown by the lawyer and asked, "Do you wish an answer to that question, Mr. Brown?"

"Yes, sir," defiantly replied the indignant lawyer—"yes, sir, and I want to know how a farmer can get his case into this court so that it will be heard."

Judge Gantt smiled and said, "Well, first, Mr. Brown, I'd advise the farmer to hire a lawyer."

Brown smiled.

OUT OF ORDER.

The Man Who Laughed at Sothern as Lord Dunderreary.

Sothern was once playing Lord Dunderreary in a small town whose regular playgoers plumed themselves on their imperturbable demeanor at the theater. A joker who lived in that town had just returned from New York and gravely put in circulation a hint that it was extremely unfashionable to laugh at comedians.

The hint "took." Sothern played the first act in a frigid atmosphere. He could not understand it, but he called the company together before the second act and implored them to "pitch in and wake 'em up." They did their utmost, but without perceptible result. Utterly beaten, the great laughter maker dived into the dressing room.

Presently the manager of the house joined him.

"Shake, Ned, old boy!" he exclaimed. "You're doin' great. Got 'em sure. Never seen a more delighted audience."

"What?" was the dazed response. "Delighted be hanged! They haven't cracked a smile."

"Laughed, sir!" replied the manager. "I should hope not. There was one man that snickered, but we bounced him out afore he knowed what ailed him."

A Mean Revenge.

A mean revenge was taken by a man whose wife had just eloped. He discovered where the missing couple were living and sent this polite note to the man who had robbed him of his partner:

"Dear Sir—Please find under separate cover one full double set of false teeth, which kindly hand to my late wife, requesting her to return my father's, she having taken same by mistake in the hurry of departure."

Respectability of the Stage.

Miss Amelia Blingham used to have a habit of going to the theater early and sitting in the box office for half an hour before the performance began. One evening while she was there two women came up to the window and asked for two seats. The man was just about to hand them over when one of them said:

"Wait a bit, young man. Tell me, is this a funny show? We are pretty particular. I read in the paper that it was or wasn't frisky—I can't remember which—and I'd like to know for certain."

The man was so taken back that he was nonplused for a moment, when the other woman chimed in with:

"Oh, I guess it's all right, Clara. I saw her act in the 'New Magdalen,' and she was quite respectable then."

Kinship.

The source of all pleasure and delight is the feeling of kinship. Even with the sense of beauty it is unquestionably our own species in the animal world, and then again our own race, that appears to us the fairest. So, too, in intercourse with others, every man shows a decided preference for those who resemble him, and a blockhead will find the society of another blockhead incomparably more pleasant than that of any number of great minds put together.—Schopenhauer.

A Costly Cheese.

A Scottish farmer was one day selling some wool to a carrier, and after weighing it in the yard he went into the house to make out an invoice. Coming back, he missed a cheese which had been standing on a shelf behind the outer door, and, glancing at the bag of wool, he observed that it had suddenly increased in size.

"Man," he said to the carrier, "I have clean forgotten the weight o' that bag. Let's pit it on the scales again."

The carrier could not refuse. Being duly weighed, the bag was found to be heavier by the weight of the cheese inside. A new invoice was made out, and the crestfallen carrier went away.

The farmer's wife at once missed the cheese, and, rushing to the yard, told her husband that some thief had stolen the cheese.

"Na, na, Meg," replied the farmer quietly. "I'll just sell the cheese for twa shillin's the pund."

Startling Motto.

A traveling salesman died very suddenly in Pittsburg. His relatives telegraphed to the undertaker to make a wreath. The ribbon should be extra wide, with the inscription "Rest in peace" on both sides and if there is room, "We shall meet in heaven."

The undertaker was out of town, and his new assistant handled the job. It was a startling floral piece which turned up at the funeral.

The ribbon was extra wide and bore the inscription, "Rest in peace on both sides, and if there is room we shall meet in heaven."

Before and After.

One of the Philadelphia "organization" ward leaders who had been notoriously profane became converted and a church attendant. This caused great surprise among the man's friends and acquaintances in politics.

One of the leader's associates was approached by a politician who had known him for many years. "Is it really a fact that S. has joined the church?"

"Yep; that's what he has," replied the associate.

"Well, is he really religious?" continued the inquirer, whereupon this instance was given in proof:

"Well, I met him in the city hall yesterday, an' he said to me, 'Jim, I'm feelin' like hell today.' An' you know how he'd 'a' said that a year ago when he didn't have religion. Oh, he's religious, all right!"

A Thrilling Rescue.

How Eert R. Lean, of Cheney, Wash., was saved from a frightful death is a story to thrill the world. "A hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to California, but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Croup and Whooping Cough it's supreme 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by J. S. Banker, Genoa, and F. T. Weston, Ocean-to-Ocean Walker, Said recently: "When you feel down and out, feel there is no use living, just take your bad thoughts with you and walk them off. Before you have walked a mile things will look rosier. Just try it." Have you noticed the increase in walking of late in every community? Many attribute it to the comfort which Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes, gives to the millions now using it. As Weston has said, "It has real merit."

TRADING AT HOME.

Value of Patronizing Local Merchants and Newspapers.

It causes the heart of every merchant to warm responsively when he notes the words, "Patronize Your Home Merchant," in his local paper, and he feels like flinging the motto athwart the sky in words of colossal size.

He fully concurs with the sentiment when the paper explains that local merchants who are patronized by the citizens respond to this encouraging treatment, and under the cheering stimulus they develop their stores, enlarge and modernize them and carry more varied stocks and better grades of goods.

When the paper states that property values are raised, improvements inaugurated and local prosperity promoted by home trading the merchant's applause amounts to an encore, and the statement could not be repeated too much to please him.

But some merchants, while heartily subscribing to the above policy, wobble most distressingly when it comes to personal application.

They purchase their family supplies and household goods of city wholesalers, they have their printing done in a large town, and they explain that they believe it is a waste of good money to advertise in the pages of the local paper.

The creating of a strong local patriotism is most desirable from the standpoint of the dealer, and he should spare no effort to foster such a praiseworthy frame of mind in as many citizens as possible. But he should begin this commendable work by setting a good example and obtain as many imitators as possible.

He should by all means enlist the active co-operation of his local paper by advertising liberally, and then he should encourage the editor to bear down hard and at frequent intervals on the subject of home dealing. He will find the editor mightily interested to help the merchants if the merchants are interested to help the editor, and he will also find that he can talk with better grace, more forcefully and more successfully if he himself is taking the medicine which he is prescribing for his townspeople.—Implementation Age.

IT PAYS TO BE GRACIOUS.

Isolated Merchant Gains Customers by Practicing Politeness.

"I have often wondered," said a man who rambles all over New York looking for bargains, "how the small merchants in the streets off Broadway and out of the retail districts uptown manage to make their living. I know something about it now.

"About a year ago I went into a little store in Greenwick street to buy an article that cost me 12 cents when I finally got it. The first time I made my want known the merchant said that he had never kept the article, although it was in his line. He thanked me for calling his attention to it. He supposed that would not do me any good, but he would get it, for the chances were that some one else would ask for it.

"I did not call again for several days, and when I did I went out of my way ten blocks. He knew me as soon as I entered his store. He said he ordered the article and expected it any day. He asked me to leave my address, saying that he would send the article as soon as he received it.

"I went into his place several days after, still going out of my way, in doing so. The article was ready.

"What was the result? I have been going out of my way ever since for anything in his line just because the merchant had been so obliging. We became very well acquainted, and one day I told him how I had become one of his customers.

"Why," he replied, 'that is the way I get my trade. If I didn't try to accommodate people who come in here I would have had to close 'up long ago.'

"I suppose that is the key to the success of all the little merchants in and off the streets. It pays to be gracious."

Meaning of the Town Beautiful.

The money and labor being spent so liberally by the most progressive towns to beautify themselves mean something more than a growing aestheticism. It is prompted also by a recognition of the utilitarian advantages. Of course a beautiful town presupposes a clean town, and cleanliness is a measure of economy in several ways. It means, too, that beauty of environment has a moral or social value, since men grow better as they become contented. It means further an appreciation of the fact that the pride of its inhabitants is among the biggest of a town's assets and that by beautifying it shows a self confidence which inspires the stranger. It is because this beautifying movement has these larger and deeper meanings that it may be spoken of as one of the most encouraging marks of our time.

Raising Flowers in Boston.

To encourage the cultivation of flowers in the congested south end of Boston the South End South union, which is a general federation of the various settlement houses of the south end and Roxbury, has renewed its distribution of seeds and window boxes and loam. Seeds, window boxes and loam are offered to families at cost and even for less. As a result of this work last year more than 600 rubbish strewn yards were transformed into bright flower gardens and more than 800 window boxes were erected and planted by persons many of whom theretofore had no interest in flowers. In recognition of the work the union awarded prizes for gardens and window boxes.

TIT FOR TAT.

By CLARA H. HOLMES.
[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The train from the west pulled into the station, puffing breathlessly from its long race, and Ben Hildreth dropped off the rear car and looked about expectantly.

"Hilda!" he ejaculated joyfully, stooping to kiss the slender young lady who approached him with extended hand.

Her haughty withdrawal and very indignant look surprised him, and her critical glance made him painfully aware of his forty-three years and his dusty and very ordinary dress.

Her glance said plainly, "Mercy, how old he is, and look at his clothes!"

After five years' betrothal their cherished love dream became at once intangible by reason of a misfit coat and a plainly shown girlish contempt for an accumulation of years.

But when Ben clasped hands with Hilda's mother he forgot the bitter tang of disappointment. She was unchanged. Her face wore the same contented look, and the welcome he received might have been a leaf torn from the book of past happenings.

Even the hot biscuit at supper time had the well remembered relish of former days. And the thoughtful manner of saying, "Now go and take your smoke, Ben; I know you are wanting it badly," seemed like the picking up of the raveled threads from the tangled skein of time.

Somewhat of Hilda's aloofness wore off after the first few days—whenever she could forget the humiliation of being kissed in public.

"The very idea! Any one would know he was from the west!" she concluded wrathfully when telling it to her mother.

Mrs. Stevens laughed heartily. "Are people so different in the west? I had supposed that they were merely energetic persons who needed elbow room."

"Oh, you can laugh, but just look at his clothes!"

"Yes; clothing does make a difference in the favor of a kiss."

"Whether it does or not, I am not going out there to live with a man old enough to be my father," was the angry reply.

"Tell him so, npt me. You know where he lived and his age, didn't you, when you gave him your promise?"

"I suppose so, but I didn't have sense enough to know what it meant," she grumbled, "and besides, he's so much older than he was then. Why, it's five years!"

"Yes, he is five years older, and so are you. Excuses are so easy to find if we seek them."

"I don't care; he isn't one bit as he used to be!"

"When people say they don't care they acknowledge that they are in fault and know it. I think that the change is in you, Hilda."

As the days went by Hilda's dislike seemed to increase. She would frequently go out and let her mother entertain Ben for a whole afternoon without the courtesy of an apology.

Ben did not appear to be annoyed in the least. Instead he chatted merrily with Mrs. Stevens and easily fell into the old time habit of calling her Lottie. Occasionally he would regard Hilda so teasingly that she would grow restive under his gaze and fly out of the room, storming to her mother: "I hate him! I hate him!"

"Well, why not tell him so and end the engagement? You are in a happy frame of mind for a prospective bride."

To this Hilda made no reply.

The wedding day drew near. Ben had been out of town one afternoon, and, being delayed by business, it was late when he returned.

"Do you know where Hilda is?" he questioned of her mother. "She's at that she was going over to her cousin Nettie's."

"Oh, she did, did she?" answered Ben so quizzically that Mrs. Stevens said nervously, "What is wrong?"

"There's nothing wrong," he replied with a light laugh and settled himself for a smoke. His laugh was too light to be reassuring. Mrs. Stevens drummed on the table restlessly.

"It's all right, Lottie," he assured her, laying his hand over her fingers to still their restless movement. After a moment he remarked, "How home-like you make every place, Lottie! I have been thinking of the hills all day, and—it makes me homesick. I wish you and I were there," he finished wistfully.

"It would be nice. I'd like to see the mountains. When you and Hilda have been married a year or so, I'll visit you, perhaps," a doubting hesitation in her tone.

He regarded her with wrinkled eyes for a minute. Then he asked with seeming irrelevance, "Do you know Charlie Dupont?"

"Why, yes. Why do you ask that?"

"Just curiosity, I suppose," with another laugh.

"Ben, what is the trouble between you and Hilda?" in a tone of exasperation. "She isn't happy, and you are tormenting. I do not believe she will be at all happy out there. She hates the west," Mrs. Stevens remonstrated rather incoherently.

"She'd hate any place with me. I'm the difficult problem, Lottie," replied Ben calmly.

"You two are laying up an abundance of unhappiness for yourselves," was the grave reply.

"Don't you fret over us little children, Lottie," said he, rubbing his hand significantly over the very apparent bald spot on the top of his head. "Sit down here and let me talk to you," he said, pointing to a chair beside his own.

For fully an hour they conversed in low tones, he persuading, she half remonstrating, occasionally both laughing, until at last she said in a tone of yielding, "I suppose it is all right, but it does look ridiculous for—"

"Sh-sh! Here comes Hilda," cautioned he.

Her mother was sewing busily and Ben was smoking very contentedly when she entered. As neither made a remark of any kind, she seemed to feel the urgent need of an explanation of something within her own mind and commenced in the most voluble manner: "Did you think I was going to stay all night, mother? We had such a lot of things to talk about, Nettie and I—"

"Who?" interrupted Ben. The tone was so derisive that Hilda cried out angrily:

"Perhaps you do not believe me! You are always laughing at me, and I think it's awful mean of you."

Ben smoked placidly and made no reply, which angered Hilda all the more. She looked toward her mother as if craving support, but as she appeared absorbed in her occupation the enraged girl founced out of the room, slamming the door vigorously.

It lacked only a week to the date set for the wedding. The evening was coldly clear, but gusty, and the few remaining leaves were blown from the bushes and scurried down the street like droves of frightened fairies. Hilda stood in the embrasure of the window drumming restlessly on the window pane.

An automobile halted by the curb, but well in the shadow of the trees. She turned, as if tired of her amusement, and sauntered up to her room. It was but a very few minutes until a soft frou-frou through the hall and the cautious opening and closing of the front door betrayed her departure.

Ben came from an adjoining room laughing gleefully. "Hurry up, Lottie! If they get there before us it will spoil all the fun."

"You are sure that it is an elopement, Ben?"

"Certainly. I heard them planning it. Come on, come on," he urged, taking her by the arm. They hurried out by the rear entrance, and before the others were under way they were flying down a side street to the parsonage.

When the elopers arrived they were conducted at once to the study by the parson himself. As they placed themselves in readiness for the marriage ceremony the parson remarked: "You must excuse me, but the law requires two witnesses. I suppose you do not object?" And without waiting for a reply he opened a side door and admitted Hilda's mother and Ben.

"Oh!" breathed Hilda, frightened. But Ben said nothing. The minister went on with the ceremony, and Hilda, having caught sight of Ben's derisive smile, did not lift her eyes again till the final words were spoken.

The ceremony concluded, her mother congratulated her calmly. Ben's eyes twinkled mockingly as he held out his hand to Hilda.

"Receive my hearty congratulations, Mrs. Dupont. You rushed things a bit, and yet we were ahead of you. I came here to marry. I thought you were to be my bride, but you were a little cheat. I overheard you planning with the man who wore a better coat than I, and, listening to your very amusing comments on my personal peculiarities, I acknowledged to myself that the union would not be very satisfactory on either side. But the situation was not as unpleasant as it might have been. I had been mistaken as well as you, and the more I saw of your mother the better satisfied I was with the way things were coming. I really wanted you to be honest enough to speak out, but when you wouldn't, why, we made first inning and were married less than five minutes before your arrival here."

Hilda's look of astonishment changed to one of demure mockery. "I trust, papa, dear, that you enjoyed my summary of your very mature charms," she said.

"It didn't hurt my feelings a little bit, daughter. I knew my age to a day and all about the 'skating rink,' and as to my coat, if Mr. Charlie had worn it you wouldn't have known it from broadcloth."

Hilda laughed saucily and gave her newly made husband an adoring look.

"So, you see, it wasn't the coat; 'twas the man in the coat," philosophized Ben.

"It was just a little game of tit for tat, in which we are all winners," remarked Mrs. Hildreth happily.

Courting in Cordova.
At night Cordova sleeps early. A few central streets are still busy with people, but the rest are all deserted; the houses look empty; there is an almost oppressive silence. Only here and there an one passes heedlessly along a quiet street one comes suddenly upon a cloaked figure with a broad brimmed hat leaning against the bars of a window, and one may catch through the bars a glimpse of a vivid face, dark hair and a rose (an artificial rose) in the hair.

Not in any part of Spain have I seen the traditional Spanish lovmaking, the cloak and hat at the barred window, so frankly and so delightfully on view. It brings a touch of genuine romance which it is almost difficult for those who know comic opera better than the countries in which life is still in its way a serious travesty to take quite seriously. Lovers' faces on each side of the bars of a window at night in a narrow street of white houses—that, after all, and not even the miraculous mosque, may perhaps be the most vivid recollection that one brings away with one from Cordova.—London Saturday Review.

JAPANESE HUSBANDS.

In Rising Sun Country Matrimony is Built on Equal Rights Plan.

The recent outburst of race antagonism in a Pacific coast city, directed against an American girl for marrying a Japanese, lends interest to the public assertion that "Japanese husbands are the best in the world," made by Mrs. Yakamine, wife of the eminent Japanese chemist and scientist, for many years a resident of New York city. Mrs. Yakamine was Miss Hitch, daughter of one of the old southern families, before she met the doctor and is a staunch defender of international marriages.

"No woman in the world is more protected and better cared for than the wife of a Japanese," she said. "The Japanese husband is considerate, faithful and patient. It is his philosophy, his religion. He is a home loving man, and naturally he is thoughtful of the little attentions to his home and family. Every woman loves these little attentions. Plenty of women prefer kind words and the thought that they are appreciated to diamond rings. If a Japanese sees some little piece of jewelry, ornament or painting he thinks his wife would like he takes it home to her. It is this sort of thing, the fact that he has thought of her during the day, that makes her happy."

"Contrast the American and the Japanese husband under the same circumstances. An American husband comes home from business tired, nervous and hungry. Something has happened to the oven or the cook has allowed the roast to burn. He is likely to become very impatient over the delay or the spoiled dinner. Under similar circumstances does a Japanese husband lose his temper? Indeed, he does not. He says pleasantly, out of consideration for his wife's feelings, 'Well, perhaps there are eggs in the house, and, after all, they might be better for us to eat.'"

"If there is anything that will increase rather than diminish this consideration for his wife it is the fact that Japanese women are just beginning to go into business like their American sisters. With this change the men will realize, too, that should they not treat their wives well the women can leave them and earn their own livelihood. So far no such threats, I believe, have been put into practice, but it has been unnecessary, for it is born and bred and trained in the Japanese men as part of their religion to treat their wives with respect and courteous, thoughtful attention."

"In Japan matrimony is built on a sort of equal rights plan. Husband and wife have each his and her duties and his and her particular rights and privileges, and neither would think of encroaching on the other's well defined rights."

IN THE NURSERY.

A baby's eyes should be shaded from a strong light, especially from bright sunlight.

Hot cloths applied to the feet and to the stomach will often relieve colic much more quickly than internal doses.

Roll soft linen towels and put them aside for baby's exclusive use. In drying baby after his bath rub him gently to stimulate the skin to healthy action. Dust baby lightly with a good powder.

Violent noises which startle a child should be avoided, and an infant should under no circumstances be tossed in the air or shaken, as this treatment surely develops nervousness.

After washing the baby's mouth give him a drink of boiled water.

The tiny soft brushes so often given as presents to babes are useless, because everything used in the child's mouth should be burned.

A baby should be given pure cold water two or three times a day. Its mouth should be rinsed several times a day with borax water, a teaspoonful to a cup. This will prevent the mouth and gums from becoming sore and keep them sweet and clean.

The Persistent Social Aspirant.
Persistence is ever the hallmark of the woman determined to be recognized socially, and she applies it without stint to the smallest detail of each undertaking, nagging, insisting and pushing until some part is accomplished. So, too, do some women pursue an eligible man, never heeding the thousand and one evidences he gives of indifference, but dodging artfully around each sign of "no intentions" and bobbing up in his path at all turns. It is useless to argue that they do not gain their end and aim, for many times they do. In the long run society yields to the persistency of this type of woman or the man is safely harnessed to her triumphal car.

Charlotte Bonbonniers.
An amusing new bonbonniere is in the shape of a very realistic charlotte russe and about the size of that airy dainty. The top of the charlotte lifts away, disclosing the candy box.

A fun loving hostess bought souvenirs in this form for all the guests at a luncheon. They were filled with goodies and passed by the maid, looking, until closely examined, like a second dessert course. The discovery of their true nature caused much surprise and laughter.

What Money Can't Buy.
There are no admission tickets to a sunset, you wouldn't trade the look in your boy's eyes when he greets you at night for a million dollars of anybody's money, and if you keep a well furnished mind you can go into it any time you like as you would into a child's playground and amuse yourself watching your thoughts play leapfrog with each other.

His Bad Handwriting.

Dean Farrar in his "Reminiscences" says that the first proofs of Dean Stanley's "Sinai and Palestine" informed the reader that from the monastery of Sinai was visible "the horn of the burning bush!" This was a fearfully apocalyptic nightmare of the printer's devil for "the horizon of the burning bush." The original proof sheets also stated that on turning the shoulder of Mount Olivet in the walk from Bethany "there suddenly burst upon the spectator a magnificent view of—Jones!" In this startling sentence "Jones" was a transmutation of "Jerusalem," the dean's abbreviated way of writing "Jerusalem."

Was Cleopatra Beautiful?

Archaeologists have discovered on coins portraits of Cleopatra, and critics have confronted these portraits with the poetic descriptions of Cleopatra given by Roman historians and have found that in these descriptions there was at least much fancy. In the portraits we do not see the countenance of a Venus, delicate, gracious, smiling, nor even the fine and sensuous beauty of a Marquise de Pompadour, but a face fleshy and, as the French would say, "bouffie," with a powerful aquiline nose—the face of a woman on in years, ambitious, imperious, which recalls the face of Maria Theresa. It will be said that judgments on beauty are personal; that Antony, who saw her alive, could judge better than we who see her portraits half faded out by the centuries; that the attractive power of a woman emanates not only from corporeal beauty, but also, and yet more, from her spirit. The taste of Cleopatra, her vivacity, her cleverness, her exquisite art in conversation, are acclaimed by all.—Guglielmo Ferrero in Putnam's.

A Modest Fee Appreciated.

Shortly before Dr. W. T. Bull, New York's famous surgeon, was stricken with his fatal illness a young east side physician called at his office and said that he was attending a poor girl over in his neighborhood who would surely die unless operated on. The family was too poor to pay and the doctor did not feel that he was equal to the operation. Would Dr. Bull give him a little advice as to how to proceed? "Well, I guess we had better go and take a look at the patient," said Dr. Bull, putting on his coat. They found the patient in an east side tenement, and in less time than it takes to tell it Dr. Bull had the room cleared and began the operation. When he was leaving the father of the girl met him in the hall and forced a quarter into his hand. Dr. Bull thanked him and went off feeling happier than if he had received a $1,000 fee. The girl got well.

The Third Way.

The Midland express was slowing up in Derby station. An American traveler, his finger keeping the place in his Baedeker, addressed the carriage: "Can you tell me whether this place is 'Derby' or 'Darby'? I have heard both."

"The original and therefore the correct pronunciation," replied a precise looking passenger, "is 'Darby.' I have seen it spelled 'Darbie' on old maps. It is also the form used in common speech."

"You'll find 'Derby' is right," rejoined a passenger, less precise. "It's spelled like that, and the people up in the north of the county say 'Derby.'"

At this point the train stopped, and a porter bawled loudly into the carriage, "Dawby!"—Manchester Guardian.

Sven Hedin's Experiences.

Dr. Sven Hedin, the famous traveler and explorer, had some terrible experiences during a journey through Tibet. He told how, owing to the high altitude at which he and his party traveled, that to unbutton one's coat meant acute pain and tension to an overwrought heart, which literally was at the point of breaking. His only safety lay in the fact that he never left the saddle for a single moment from morning till evening. Had he done so his heart would have given way. At one time they were nine days without water, and when at last he saw a small pool Dr. Hedin drank five pints without stopping.

The Gift.

"Accused of begging!" exclaimed the magistrate. "Why, you are the very man who was begging at my door yesterday!"

"Yes," assented the vagrant, with a sneer, "and you didn't give me anything."

"Well, I'll give you something now—fourteen days!"

And He Did.

"I believe we are all ready," said the young man who was about to officiate as the bridegroom.

"All right. I will join you in a moment," replied the clergyman, rising.—Chicago Tribune.

THE CUCKOO.

Curious Superstitions That Are Connected With the Bird.

There is a popular belief that whatever one is doing when first one hears the cuckoo that will be what one will most frequently do during the year.

In many parts of Scotland and in the northern counties of England people turn their money in their pockets on hearing the first call of the cuckoo, as this, they say, insures a lucky year. In the counties bordering in Wales not only do they do this, but they also have a wish at the same time, this wish being kept secret, of course. To have a gold coin in one's pocket when the cuckoo's call is first heard insures good luck for the rest of the year. The German peasants declare that after St. John's day the bird changes into a sparrow hawk.

The Danes have a curious legend regarding this bird. When the village girls hear its first call they kiss their hands and repeat, "Cuckoo, cuckoo, when shall I be married?" As many times as the bird calls "cuckoo" in answer, so many years will the maiden have to wait. The old folk, bent and bowed with rheumatism and age, ask instead, "Cuckoo, cuckoo, when shall I be released from this world's cares?" and the answer comes in the same way. So occupied is the poor bird in answering these questions, say the Danes, that she never has time to build her nest, so is forced to lay her eggs in the nest of another bird.—Planet.

A GREWSOME BEQUEST.

Extraordinary Legacy by the Father of Lord Audley.

Probably the most gruesome bequest ever named in a will was that made by Philip Thicknesse, a disipated Englishman, who died in 1792. Some years before his death he had quarreled bitterly with his son, Lord Audley, and to spite him had placed on the outside of the family mansion a board bearing this inscription in large black letters:

"Boots and shoes mended, carpets beat, etc., etc., by P. Thicknesse, father of Lord Audley."

Finding he was about to die, he sent for his lawyer and drew up a will containing the following extraordinary clause: "I leave my right hand, to be cut off after my death, to my son, Lord Audley. I desire it may be sent to him in hopes that such a sight may remind him of his duty to God after having so long abandoned the duty he owed to a father who once so affectionately loved him."

The dead man's wishes were scrupulously carried out, and his severed hand, inclosed in a hermetically sealed leaden casket, was forwarded to his son. There is no record as to how Lord Audley received his unwelcome legacy or how he disposed of it.—New York Press.

Beggars of Bombay.

The nuisance caused by beggars in Bombay has assumed unbearable proportions. The orientals practice charity as a religious obligation and relieve poverty where they find it. Recitals from Kabit and Marabal never fail to touch the innermost chords of the natives with their innate reverence for spiritualism, and the faker backs up his appeal for alms with profuse quotations from the poets. Then there are lay beggars and religious beggars, the ash besmeared ascetics who practice mendicancy as a hereditary profession. Last and not least are the unfortunate sufferers whom the loss of limbs or eyes or some fell disease disables for work and drives them to beggary as the last resource. These latter have a genuine claim on our charity, but as there are so few asylums in India for the halt, the maim and the blind the streets and byways of towns are flooded with beggars, pitiful types of suffering humanity.—Rash Gaftar.

The Lace Curtain.

Just why there must be lace curtains even where there is no piano or rubber plant or gilt chair has never been explained to the entire satisfaction of man. He only knows that there must and lets it go at that. It often seems to him that if he could have his way, which is out of the question, of course, there wouldn't be lace curtains, at least above the cellar floor. They are in the way when windows are to be lowered or raised; they are apt to blow into the gas and burn down the house, and alarm is constantly sounded for fear the man will soil or tear them. They do not serve to keep out the light when there is too much of it, and the dog can't toast himself in the sun without getting tangled in them. Still, there are lace curtains everywhere, and that is all there is to it.—Providence Tribune.

Suspension Bridges.

There is no doubt that the first idea of a suspension bridge was suggested to primitive man by the interlacing of tree branches and parasitical plants across rivers. Probably monkeys used them before men did. In very mountainous countries, such as Tibet and Peru, they have apparently been used since the dawn of history, possibly earlier.

Who Taught Her Caution?

Isabel, aged four, was talking to an imaginary friend over the telephone, when her mother heard her say: "Wait a minute, Rocky. My brother is right here listening to all you say, and my mother is in the room too. Don't tell me about it now."—Delineator.

Careless.

Visitor—So that's Miss Overton. Don't you think she carries her age remarkably well? Artist—No, I don't. She has dropped several years of it to my personal knowledge.—Illustrated Bits.

A NATION OF SAVERS.

Frenchmen Are Thrifty and Invest in Government Bonds.

If you were a Frenchman with a very small surplus to invest, if even that surplus were but a modest franc, you might become the holder of a French government bond. From the cradle to the grave the French subject is taught to save and to turn his earnings into safe income producing account, says Charles Spears in the Review of Reviews.

The state pays a premium on thrift. It rewards its school children for various good performances with a tiny bank deposit which invariably will have grown into goodly size when the recipient has reached maturity. Having nursed its people through the early stages of economy, it directs their steps in the choice of investments and even assumes paternal power in arbitrarily transforming the savings bank account into government bonds or rentes. Thrift is a national characteristic. France is a nation of little savers, of little incomes and of little farms.

Collectively these exercise a tremendous power on the affairs of Europe. The holder of the one or two franc bond and the possessor of the bank account, so small that bankers of other countries would scorn it, have built up a monetary power that commands the respect of the world and indeed regulates the finances and politics of much more presumptuous nations. Bonds of states and governments, of railroads with a government guarantee, bonds of cities and towns, of mortgage companies, are the Frenchman's choice. It is safe to say that in Paris coupons are cut from the bonds of nearly every government under the sun.

AN INNOCENT VICTIM.

Swinburne and the Grouchy Head Master of Eton.

Once when Algernon Charles Swinburne was traveling back with his father from school at the end of one of the terms they entered a carriage in which the then head master of Eton, who was buried in the Times, was seated.

"Isn't that Dr. —?" the admiral whispered to his son. "I believe it is," stammered young Swinburne reluctantly. After a rebuke at the apparently careless answer the admiral "accosted the awful presence" with "Dr. —, I believe, sir?" The doctor was plainly annoyed at being disturbed by a stranger. "Well, sir," pursued the admiral, "my boy here has just finished his first term at Eton, and I should very much like to know what account you can give of him." As a matter of fact, the doctor had not set eyes on young Swinburne before. "Enraged, however, I suppose," Swinburne afterward related, "at my father's rather unconventional interruption, which he had no doubt considered a slight on his dignity, he glanced down at me with a scarlet face and said deliberately, 'Your boy, sir—your boy is one of the very worst in the school,' and then intrenched himself once more behind the Times."

At Paddington there was a storm. In vain young Swinburne protested that the doctor had said what he had out of pure vexation; but the father declared that he would take the word of the head master, and Swinburne was deprived of all pleasures and privileges for the duration of the holiday.—Dundee Advertiser.

The Lark's Song.

A writer on "The Wonders of the Spring" says that the volume of sound produced by the skylark is most wonderful. "The lark ascends until it appears no larger than a midge and can with difficulty be seen by the unaided eye, and yet every note of its song will be clearly audible to persons who are fully half a mile from the nest over which the bird utters its song. Moreover, it never ceases to sing for a moment, a feat which seems wonderful to us human beings, who find that a song of six or seven minutes in length, though interspersed with rests and pauses, is more than trying. Yet this bird will pour out a continuous song of nearly twenty minutes in length and all the time has to support itself in the air by the constant use of its wings."

Still Held the Grudge.

Medium (at seance)—Is there a Mrs. Kersmith in the audience? Her first husband wishes to converse with her. Mrs. Kersmith—There is, but you can tell him I don't care to have any confabulations with him. Tell him that when I went to collect his life insurance I found he'd let it lapse.—Chicago Tribune.

A Boy's Definition.

A bright schoolboy defined "anodyne" as "something to a sausage pan" and then brought Webster's Unabridged to his skeptical teacher with his finger pointing triumphantly to the words "serving to assuage pain."

Futures.

"There goes a man who has made a great deal of money dealing in futures."

"A wheat speculator?" "No; a fortune teller."—Baltimore American.

Quits a Change.

"Percy is getting used to public speaking, isn't he?" "Oh, yes. I remember when you could hardly get him to stand up, and now you can hardly get him to sit down."

Learn benevolence. It is the only cure of a morbid temper. To be happy you must forget yourself.—Bolwer.

Suggestive S. S. Questions.

Copyright, 1908, by Rev. T. S. Lincoln, D. D.

June 27th, 1909—Temperance Lesson. Rom. xiii:8-14.

Golden Text.—Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ.—Rom. xiii:14.

Verse 8—Is it always sinful to go into debt, when you have no visible means of paying it?

Is it right, or wrong, to go into debt when you have nothing to pay with, if your creditor knows your circumstances?

Is a business man who has honestly failed in business and given up all he has to his creditors, under moral obligation to pay the balance of the debt, if he makes enough money to do so out of future business?

Under modern business conditions, and the law of love and righteousness, when wholesalers sell on time, or give an adequate discount for cash to retailers, why are not the debts of an honest bankrupt retailer, the legitimate loss of his creditors in common with himself?

Wherein consists the folly and sin of a wage earner in constant work, getting into debt?

Is it the duty of everyone to love everybody, the bad and the good, enemies and friends?

What is the advantage of loving everybody, to ourselves, and to those whom we love?

Verses 9-10—Give reasons, outside of the Bible, that will cover all circumstances, why it is always wrong to disobey these five moral prohibitions. (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Must all such acts, as are here forbidden, contravene the law of love to make them sinful; for example, if you had to kill a man who was about to kill one of your loved ones, would that be sinful?

Can an act be wrong that works out for the good of all parties?

Verses 11-12—If you knew you had to die inside of a month, what effect would that have upon your intentions and actions, so far as God is concerned; and if it would change these in the least, does that not prove that you are now living wrong and are in danger?

Most people are morally and spiritually asleep, and many are far into the night; what are the conditions which should suddenly startle such into full consciousness, as to their danger, and their duty?

Verse 13—How is it that the night is the time selected for so many bad deeds?

Should a man ever do a thing which he is ashamed for his best friends and neighbors to know?

Does the popular conscience generally, or always represent God's attitude to a thing; or are there some things God may be pleased with which the community would condemn as wrong, or vice versa?

How is it that bar rooms are generally screened off from the public gaze?

Why is it a crime for a man to get drunk?

Why do most drunkards get drunk in the night, or away from public gaze?

Does the drink habit generally lead to the other four grave evils mentioned in verse thirteen?

Verse 14—What is the sure remedy for the drink habit, and all kindred evils of the flesh?

Does putting on Jesus, always mean putting on strength so we can control all the passions of the body, and the ambitions of the soul?

GAME FOR TRAVELERS.

"By the Way" Will Amuse Grown Folks as Well as Children.

This game is a great deal of fun and can be played by children of all ages when traveling by car, automobile or carriage. The one who first sees an object wins a number of points. The score is kept by one player. The party should be divided into two sections, the left side of the road being assigned to one section and the right side to the other section. The counts are as follows (these may be changed to suit the particular part of the country you are in):

	Count.
A baby in arms	1
A baby in a gocart	2
A white horse	3
A ladder against a house	2
A woman with white apron	1
A butcher's cart	1
A postman	4
A bridge	2
A red headed girl or man	3
A messenger boy	2
A man with a camera	3
A black pig	5
A white house	1
A boy on a fence	4
A brook	2

If any of the following are seen the score is to be lessened by its count. Sides try to catch each other on these

	Loss.
A pug dog	2
An open gate	2
A piebald horse	4
A flock of sheep	3
A soldier	10

No matter what the score is, whichever side sees a cat on a window ledge or a pig standing on its hind feet wins the game.

WITH SCISSORS AND CORD.

A Trick That Can Be Easily Performed When One Knows How.

A piece of strong cord is doubled and fastened to a pair of scissors with a slip knot, as shown in Fig. 1. After passing the ends of the cord through the thumb hole of the scissors they are tied fast to a chair, doorknob or any other object that may be of sufficient size to make the ends secure.

HOW THE SCISSORS ARE REMOVED.

The trick is to release the scissors without cutting the cord.

Take hold of the loop end of the cord in the lower handle and draw it first through the upper handle and then completely over the blades of the scissors, as shown in Fig. 2. This is very simple when you know how, but puzzling when the trick is first seen.—Popular Mechanics.

What is My Thought Like?

One of the players in this game thinks of some object—it may be a person, an animal or a thing—and each player is questioned by the "thinker." "What is my thought like?" and must make an answer, "Like a monkey," "Like a table," "Like a fish," "Like a mischievous boy," and so on. When all have answered the "thinker" tells them the object thought of. Perhaps it was a person present. Each player must then justify his reply or, failing this, pay a forfeit.

For instance, the one who said the object was like a monkey when told the name of a gentleman present as the object would reply, "I said Mr. — was like a monkey because he is fond of nuts." The next would say, "I said Mr. — was like a table because he is rather wooden looking." "He is like a fish because he is fond of the water," and so on.

Game of Neighbors.

In this game half the company are blindfolded and are seated with an empty chair on the right hand of each. At a given signal all the other players occupy these as mysteriously as they can and immediately begin to sing, either all to a tune played on the piano or every one by himself.

The object of the blind players is to find out, entirely by ear, who is seated on their right. Those who guess correctly are unbandaged, and their places are taken by the players whose names they guessed. The others remain blindfolded until they guess rightly. Only one guess is allowed each round.

P's and Q's.

The company forms a circle, and one stands in the center as questioner. No one must name a place beginning with a letter that comes before "Q" in the alphabet.

The leader may begin in this fashion: "Commodore Evans is in the strait of Magellan with the fleet. Where is he going next? But mind your P's and Q's." The unthinking speaker may say "To Chile," for which a forfeit must be paid, as C is before Q in the alphabet, and so the game goes on. Any country or incident may be used in asking the questions.

The Way to June.

It is through the glade that the ice has made
And under the glistening trees
Beyond the snow, where the cold winds blow
Through the cave of the old March breeze,
Then down the lane of the April rain
Under violet scented showers
And off by way of the hills of May
With their apple blossom bowers,
Then on again through a leafy glen still,
With the bird songs all around,
Where you rest awhile, at the rose-hung,
For you've found the way to June.
—St. Nicholas.

A HARASSING QUESTION.

What is the Business Woman to Wear in Hot Weather?

The question of midsummer wearing apparel for the business woman is not an easy one.

In the first place, she wants to be cool in summer, but in any case she must be neat. And if she is neat she will at least look cool, a thing that she would not do were she ever so thinly clad in apparel that was other than neat.

As it grows warmer it is a great temptation for the business woman, especially if she is rather new in the field, to resort to some of the cool, dainty frocks that suggest themselves for July and August wear. But if she has been a business woman long enough to understand the situation she knows that frills and furbelows have no place for her. She also knows that they are not essential to feminine charm and that even in the hottest weather perfect tailoring and immaculate cleanliness will do as much toward making her look and even feel cool as sash ribbons and lacy garnitures.

But just what is the business woman to wear in hot weather?

Must she stick to the cloth skirt and white waist of fall and winter? Not necessarily. There are days when she doesn't want to think of a cloth skirt. In this case if she still wishes to retain the two piece suit arrangement it would pay her to have a coat and skirt of linen or cotton poplin in tan or blue.

But this is not wholly satisfactory, as it necessitates the purchase of a coat which is not entirely suitable for wear with other garments, and the coat must be pressed often to keep it in trim. Besides this, the skirt will require more frequent laundering than the coat, and even with the best material this is sure to make a difference in the appearance of the two garments.

This season affords a peculiarly fortunate solution to the dress problem of the business girl in the smart one piece tailored dress. It is, if strictly tailored, entirely proper for wear on the street without a coat, while the shirt waist and skirt seem to suggest the presence of a coat like the skirt. Then, too, the plainly made one piece dress is perfectly suitable for business wear and can be carried out in almost any material. Even a gingham in shepherd's check of black and white has a smart tailored look, though the more common materials are cotton poplin, racket cloth, rep or linen. The last, however, is only suitable for the woman with an unlimited amount of money for laundry and pressing.

The final advantage of the one piece dress is that it is quickly adjusted, no tiresome fussing with belt, collar and cuff links, but on and fastened up in a minute.

To add to this a skirt of some lightweight material, such as mohair or lightweight sutting, will provide an alternate costume for wear with shirt waists.

It takes a little courage, to be sure, but the wise business girl has learned that even in hot weather she must not yield to the temptation of wearing those soft, rumpy feminine looking things. And, too, if she is wise and has a position of any responsibility or importance she will go just a little easy on this "Dutch neck" craze and will not despise the starched collar altogether.

BATHING HINTS.

A little good toilet water or cologne poured into a bath is delightful in its effects.

When you feel exhausted after bathing hunt for the cause. The water may be too hot or too cold. You may be staying in it too long or bathing when too tired. A cup of hot milk is a great pick-me-up after a hot bath.

Don't rush immediately into the cold air after a hot bath, both for the sake of your skin and to prevent colds. Dashing with water as cold as you can stand it will make an early outdoor trip safe after the pores are opened by the hot water.

If we cannot copy the old time women, with their aromatic baths, there are many things which can be used in the water to soften it and make it more refreshing. Among these is a lemon cut in slices and placed in the bath ten minutes before using. A little borax will also soften the water, or a bag about five inches square filled with half bran and half oatmeal.

Excels Mera Man as Linguist.

Ernestine Gregory has won the honor of being the first woman to pass the examination in oriental languages in the University of Berlin. She is a writer on a Berlin newspaper, and a professorship in one of the German universities has been offered her. She is looked upon as one of the first linguists in Europe. She passed in oriental languages with high honors. Three months ago she stood first in an examination in the university in Russian language and literature. She also is proficient in French, English and Spanish.

Nails Must Not Glitter.

A glittering polish on the nails is no longer approved by Mme. Grundy, who requires at the moment a glaze acquired in a most natural and simple manner. Nails to be pretty should always be pink and bright, a condition obtained by rubbing them vigorously against the side of the hand. It has been discovered that the warmth and moisture of the flesh makes an ideal polisher, while the briskness of the rubbing gives the desired pink glow.

The Best Part of the Speech.

Young James had never heard his papa speak in public, and it was thought time to take him to hear his father deliver a lecture. During the evening a stray dog which ventured upon the platform was disposed of as gracefully as possible. On the way home James was asked how he liked his father's lecture and gave the answer, "It was all right, papa, but I liked the part where you put the dog out the best."—Delineator.

When Real Knowledge Comes.

"Mamma," asked a little girl, "how long did you know papa before you married him?"
"My dear," replied the mother, "I was acquainted with your father for several years, but I really didn't know him until after we were married!"

The Boy and the Professor.

"I was mimicking Professor Bore yesterday, and he caught me."
"What did he say?"
"Told me to stop making a fool of myself."

Hope.

"Hope," said Uncle Eben, "is a blessing when you's willin' to back it wif a little hard work 'twid o' lettin' it play itself out on a policy ticket."—Washington Star.

Woman's World

A GIFTED NOVELIST.

Home and Personality of the Author of "Red Horse Hill."

Sidney McCall (Mary McNeill Fenolosa), the author of "Red Horse Hill," etc., when scarcely more than a girl was living in another part of Japan when the late Lafcadio Hearn began his studies of that country. Independently she, too, was absorbing the mystic influences of beauty, and in a different form, that of verse, was shaping her impressions into concrete structure. A modest little volume of poems called "Out of the Nest" is thought by many of her friends to contain some of her finest work. Lafcadio Hearn, who later became one of her valued friends, was delighted with these poems. In her home in Tokyo, with its garden where grew pansies, magnolias and "moon flowers," Mrs. Fenolosa wrote her first novel, "Truth Dexter," a book which had a great success. "The Breath of the Gods" was the outcome of her impressions of the situation in Japan and Russia just before the crisis, but it was written after her return to America in the "big, low workroom of her southern home in Alabama, which looks out upon a garden where the blossoming cherry mingles its petals with those of the rose and the jasmine." "Kobinata, or Little Sunshine Hill, so called after the Japanese home, contains much that is best in beauty both of the east and west. Here also was written Mrs. Fenolosa's latest book, "Red Horse Hill."

Mrs. Fenolosa comes of an artistic family. Both her parents were writers. Her father, William Stoddard McNeill, was a poet of ability and a lover and keen student of nature. Mrs. Fenolosa's home life in Mobile has always been one of the units in a very close knit, large, devoted family group. "Truth Dexter" was in part an outcome of that homesickness which, while absent in Japan, she felt for the dearly loved home circle.

To her husband, the late Professor Ernest F. Fenolosa, well known in art circles as an authority on oriental art, Mrs. Fenolosa feels that she is deeply indebted for criticism, suggestion and constant encouragement, although in the matter of plot and actual writing she always works entirely alone. Their life together, both in Japan and in this country, was characterized by independent but absolutely congenial work and by harmony of interests and tastes.

In her latest book, "Red Horse Hill," Sidney McCall, as she prefers to sign herself, has furnished another American setting, that of a southern mill town. The conflict of human interests, a deep love motive that runs through four related lives among the characters of this story and the power for good or evil held in the hands of the controller of southern mills all bear a vital part in the drama.

Beauty in Dandelions and Milk.
If you want to be beautiful drink lots of dandelion tea and bathe in scented milk. Any one who consents to drink dandelion tea is entitled to immortal beauty as a small reward. Still the stuff may be made palatable by putting things in it. For instance, a dash of brandy may be added, but the tea is better for the skin without that alcoholic addition. Several cups a day must be taken for the first two months of summer and then one cup a day throughout the year. Scented milk for the skin is recommended by those who study beauty scientifically. The milk must be boiled and then a few drops of violet water added. The fluid must be rubbed into face, neck and arms thoroughly and permitted to dry. Then the rubbing must be renewed. To steam the face with hot milk makes it soft and white as an infant's.

For the Tea Table.
A favorite dainty for the tea table is salted wafers or round, thin water crackers covered with beaten white of egg through which have been mixed finely chopped English walnuts. The crackers are baked in a hot oven and served instead of small cakes.

TACTFUL CHAPERONS.

How They Should Dispose of Undesirable Young Men.

The perfect chaperon is born, not made, because to be at her best she must be constantly on guard without the appearance of watching her charges, and that means a poise and self control and an ability for self effacement that the average woman does not possess. And because of this lack of sufficiency chaperons are frequently maligned either by parents or young folk, for if she is too strict the latter are annoyed, and if not sufficiently so parents are displeased.

The most difficult problem that a chaperon has to manage is what to do when men whom she considers undesirable talk to her charges. To place them the cut direct is rude and places her in a most unfortunate position.

To show her displeasure quietly is not apt to be effective, for girls are likely to champion those whom they deem downtrodden, and, if the men have the least charm of manner or know how to make themselves agreeable, to snub only makes them more interesting to the average young girl. While no chaperon is so silly as to think that every man who meets her charge wishes to marry her, the older woman has nevertheless to remember that he may be a possible husband, and it is imperative that the girl should be guarded from undesirable associates. Probably the best way of managing such a situation is for the chaperon to be constantly in the foreground, without the appearance of being so, not giving the man any opportunity to develop the acquaintance beyond most formal lines.

Her greatest tact lies in so managing her charges that she can retain the girl's confidence, for so long as she has it she will know the situation. Once let her lose it, and she works in the dark, not being certain what the day may bring forth. As to how much liberty a girl may be given by her chaperon in summer, one can only say it depends greatly upon the girl and her associates. If they are reliable and she is sensible there is no need of her having a protector all the time, for her own good sense is enough. Girls are always given more freedom in summer than in winter, and with a man whom she has known intimately and is known to be a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word there is no reason why she should not drive, sail and walk unchaperoned.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Art ticking braided in fancy designs is much used for bureau covers.

Among the dainty baby slips are those made with a Dutch neck for summer wear. They are decidedly attractive.

In stitching a pocket on the outside of a garment run the stitching half an inch above the edge of the pocket. This keeps the garment from tearing.

In pressing a plaited skirt one will gain time and have more satisfactory results if the plaits are basted before the pressing is done. Clean the skirt and brush it on the inside as well as the outside. Next baste the seams, cover with a damp cloth and press on the right side with a medium warm iron. Dampen the cloth when necessary and press until the cloth is dry.

Plain coarse chain stitching that looks much like the kind that children use to decorate their dolls' clothes is the latest freak of fashion, not only for gowns, but for shirt waists. Gowns are worked in the simple stitch in braid patterns and usually in self color. Shirt waists stamped with braid patterns are outlined with the loose chain stitch. Stems with coarse, solid work are also made in this way.

The clever girl who makes laundry books for presents selects a neat rice paper for the leaves and cuts the double cover from red paper of a heavy variety, then ties the leaves together with red baby ribbon. Between the leaves of white paper are blue carbon paper slips, so that a duplicate copy is made when one marks off her laundry. This makes a handy booklet and one that would be appreciated by any woman who must send a list of laundry to her laundress and keep one herself.

Candlesticks Again in Favor.

The woman whose aim is to reveal a touch of the artist in her home just at present is interested in the old-fashioned candlestick. It is a revival as happy in its way as that of the return to favor of Sheffield or pewter ware. The candle held its own against the oil lamp, but lost its popularity when gas came in, and it was practically outlawed when electricity came into general use. Now, however, many women of society are using candles extensively. One society leader, in fact, has gone to the extreme of having electric fixtures removed from several rooms, relying entirely upon candles for lighting. These candles she displays in antique candlesticks of beaten brass. Tall Russian candlesticks now are seen on many library tables, and tall silver colonial sticks are on many dressing tables. New candlesticks are shown in pottery and wrought iron, but antiques are first in favor. The prices of old brass candlesticks have advanced greatly in the last few weeks, and few now are to be found in the antique shops.

To Clean Chamois Skin.

An excellent way to restore chamois skins that have become stiff and soiled is to rub them through a strong solution of cold water and household ammonia, later rinsing thoroughly in clear cold water to soften. Pin to the line to dry in the sun and rub through the hand slightly.

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventic" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head of these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics. Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Locke Bank Robbed.

A most daring robbery was carried out in the village of Locke, six miles east of Genoa, during Monday night, when the Citizens bank of that place was looted and the whole village held up.

It is known that there were several men in the gang of robbers, and that there were either four or five, all of whom made their escape under cover of the darkness, leaving not the slightest clue as to their identity.

The first work of the burglars was to open the tool house of the L. V. R. R. and secure a sledge hammer and iron bar which they used to pry open the front doors of the bank building. While part of the men were working on the inside of the building, the others remained on guard outside. The first charge of nitro glycerine blew open the safe doors, and also aroused the people in the vicinity of the bank. Windows were raised and people looked out to see what had happened. But no sooner did the heads appear than there were requests to close the windows, backed up in a forcible manner by several revolver shots. It is said that the people promptly responded to these requests.

Mr. Slocum, who resides near the bank, started out armed with his revolver, but was soon obliged to beat a retreat. Senator Hewitt, who is president of the bank and lives a short distance away, was aroused by the explosion, and revolver in hand, stepped out on his porch and emptied the contents of the revolver at a man stationed outside of the bank not far from his house. Not being a very good marksman, he said his shots failed to have any effect, and he retired from the conflict.

In the meantime, a second charge of nitro glycerine was being prepared in the bank safe and this blew open the steel compartment containing the money. The men gathered up $2,700, and going up Main St., turned to the east and no trace of them could be found farther. As they left the village, the robbers kept up a fusillade of shots, and they were not hindered in their progress.

It is said that a young man occupied a hammock on an upper porch not far from the scene of the robbery and saw the whole performance.

There is some consolation in the fact that the thieves must have felt somewhat hurried at the last as they left $700 in bills, $800 in gold and $400 in silver in the safe. President Hewitt says the loss is no embarrassment to the bank as it is fully insured against loss by burglary and damage to fixtures. The most serious loss is the nervous shock experienced by the people.

Extinct.

"Bessie," said the teacher of the class which taught all about birds—in the school prospectus it was called the "ornithological division"—"give me the name of one bird which is now extinct."

Bessie wrinkled her brows. "What's extinct, please?" she asked. "No longer existent," explained the teacher. "Can you name one?"

"Yes," piped Bessie readily. "Dick." "Dick—Dick?" repeated the teacher. "And what kind of bird is a 'Dick,' please?"

"Our canary," answered Bessie. "The cat extincted him."

Marquis.

The designation marquis is the second in the five orders of English nobility. The term originally indicated persons who had the care of the marches of a country. The word marches is the plural of mark, which in its political sense signifies boundaries. Such were the lands on the borders of England and Scotland and of England and Wales.

Early Football Players.

Football was for many years the national game of Florence. The season was from January to March, and the ladies and gentlemen of Florence and the populace as well were wont to assemble on the Piazza Santa Gioce to witness the game, which was called "calcio," from the word meaning "to kick." The last game was played in 1780.

MODERN TROGLODYTES.

The Matmata, the Cave Dwellers of Tunisia, Africa.

One of the strangest of capital cities is that of the troglodytes, or Matmata, the cave dwellers of Tunisia, Africa. It contains about 3,000 inhabitants, and the principle of its architecture is to dig into the earth rather than to build upon it. These troglodytes are to be found between the town of Gabes, on the Tunisian coast, and the sand hills of the Sahara. The country is a high, rocky plateau, barren, sun baked and swept by the simoom. When a Matmata wants a new dwelling he chooses his spot, traces a circle and then digs until he has reached the desired depth, which varies according to the number of stories he requires.

The rooms consist of caves hollowed out in the sides of the circular pit, the bottom of which forms a patio, or courtyard, which is the usual feature of a Moorish house. Besides the rooms, a passage is also dug, communicating with the outside world, and a door is made at the outer end.

The soil, which is a kind of malleable clay, is easily cut and lends itself well to excavation, the roof of each room requiring no support as long as it is arched. These underground dwellings are not damp.—Chicago News.

A Sensible Fourth.

"We Rubiconians always prided ourselves on the fact that Rubicon was the most patriotic town in the state," says a citizen in Woman's Home Companion for July. "A hardy individual from Capua once asked for proof. He was snapped up promptly by a leading citizen.

"'Proof, eh?' said he. 'Why, just come out here with me and I'll show you proof that would convince a man from Missouri. See that ruin down there at the corner—just a chimney sticking up into the air? That was Doctor Hawkins' fine residence. Cost ten thousand dollars. The fire started from a fire-cracker last Fourth. Notice the foundation back of that large house over there? Fine barn burned up there the same day—another fire-cracker. See the gap in that row of cottages down across the railroad? Three of them went up two years ago—fire-crackers or something. Look at the Methodist church there on the corner without a steeple. Maybe you'd think the wind blew it off, but you'd be wrong—Fourth o' July got it—and we had hard work to save the school-house. I could show you lots more if I had time. And then walk about and look at our people. Why, man alive, there's fewer eyes and ears and fingers, not to mention arms and legs, in proportion to the population than in any other town you can find—all gone from fire-crackers, or toy pistols, or bursting cannons, or in some such patriotic way. Your town of Capua isn't in it, I tell you. You lion roaring in his den may be all right in his way, but if the old Grecian spirit isn't frozen in your veins you must see that for true patriotism Rubicon leads the world.' The man from Capua shrunk away."

But the Rubiconians have at last evolved a sensible celebration, which includes a parade, a noise-festival for the little boys, athletic games, a luncheon, dancing, and closes with fireworks in the evening. As told about in the Woman's Home Companion it is a very attractive Fourth.

Any lady reader of this paper will receive, on request, a clever "No-Drip" Coffee Strainer Coupon privilege, from Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. It is silver-plated, very pretty, and positively prevents all dripping of tea or coffee. The Doctor sends it, with his new free book on "Health Coffee" simply to introduce this clever substitute for real coffee. Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee is gaining its great popularity because of: first, its exquisite taste and flavor; second, its absolute healthfulness; third, its economy—1 1/2 lb 25c; fourth, its convenience. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says Dr. Shoop. Try it at your grocer's, for a pleasant surprise. F. C. Hagin, Genoa.
