MAY 23—The Memorial meeting for Miss Victoria Bradley took place the 19th. It opened with Scripture reading and prayer by the W. C. T. U. president. Mrs. Hetty Morrison sang "Going Down the Valley." A letter was read from Miss Gertrude Flanders of Towksbury, Mass., a former principal of Select School. All this talk about the comet reminds us of a school boy who said that "talk in their family was getting stale, and he hoped some one of his relatives, aunts, uncles or cousins, would get married so they could have something exciting to talk about." We ought to thank Halley for his discovery as it gives us an interesting topic for discussion from all points of view.

The W. C. T. U. group meeting, which was held at the church here last Friday was largely attended and especially by the ladies. We notice that there are more temperance women than men, as but few of the male sex were in attendance. We know it is a busy time for the men just now and sometimes we think perhaps they might have rosted had they been there, as certainly some of the women came very near it. So much good fresh air out doors and we could not even have a window up to let the congregation breathe one breath of fresh air. Never mind, we all lived and enjoyed the session very much indeed. The recitations by the different ones and also the singing were highly appreciated. The lunches were served at the homes of Mrs. C. G. Barger and Mrs. S. B. Mead.

Prize Speaking Contest.
On Friday evening, May 27, the interschool prize speaking contest between the Moravia, Dryden, George Junior and Groton High schools will be held in the Groton Opera house. The contest will begin promptly at 8 o'clock and the doors will be closed at that time. Admission is free.
For some time each of these four schools has been holding annual prize speaking contests. The results of the contests have been excellent and there are many good reasons for having the schools compete with each other for the highest honors. A competition of this kind will promote a greater interest in speaking. The speakers will profit by their additional experience. The schools will be brought together in friendly rivalry, thus engendering a better school spirit in each institution. The students will learn more of what is being done in the other schools.
In order to make sure of having these contests every year a league has been formed which is composed of the four schools above mentioned. According to the rules of this league, the contest will be held annually; the first to be held in Groton, the others to be held in rotation in the other schools of the league. Each school will enter two contestants, one boy and one girl. There will be four prizes, a first and second for girls and a first and second for boys. The first prize will be a gold medal and the second prize a silver medal. These will be the permanent property of the winners.
Music will be furnished by the Groton High school orchestra. Each school in the league expects to send a large delegation to the contest. Come early before the seats are all taken.
After the contest a dance is to be given by the Junior class of the High school. Tickets fifty cents.
Grangers at Ithaca.
All the Grangers in seven counties will congregate at Ithaca on Saturday, June 4, when by invitation all members of that organization in the counties of Cayuga, Cortland, Chemung, Tioga, Schuyler and Seneca will be entertained at the Cornell Agricultural by the Tompkins County Pomona Grange and officials and students of the Agricultural college.
There will be a number of short addresses, including talks by State Master Godfrey, State Secretary Giles and State Treasurer Bean. State Lecturer Lowell will also attend.
Some of the professors of the College of Agriculture, headed by President Schurman and Acting Director Webber, will give brief talks and the program will be followed by demonstrations of many kinds which will be of direct value to farmers.
The program is called a "dollar and cents" program because it will be directly to the point in showing how more profit may be made from different lines of agricultural work prominent in Central New York.
Grangers are expected to bring their lunches, but the hosts will provide coffee and lemonade.
All railroads are offering reduced rates and it is expected that Cayuga county will send a delegation of more than a thousand. Special rates over the New York, Auburn and Lansing, will be as follows: Round trip from Auburn, $1.00; Mapleton, 90c; Merrifield, 80c; Venice Center, 70c; Genoa, 60c; North Lansing, 45c; South Lansing, 25c. W. C. T. U. Group Meeting.
The Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Lake Ridge, Ludlowville, North Lansing, Genoa and West Genoa and Five Corners united in a group meeting at Five Corners on Friday last. The meeting was held in the Presbyterian church.
The morning session opened at 11 o'clock. Owing to the absence of the president of the entertaining Union, Mrs. G. W. Shaw of King Ferry presided in her place at both sessions. Rev. Frank Allington of North Lansing conducted the devotional exercises. Mrs. Lillian Osborn of Union Springs gave a map talk on Prohibition, showing the condition, as to license or no license, of all the states in the Union. Nearly all the Southern states are dry and most of those in the Far West are wet. There is a very encouraging advance in favor of Prohibition all through the United States, even though New York, the Empire State, has only one small, dry county, Yates. Worcester, Mass., was pointed out as being the largest saloon-city in the United States.
Mrs. Humphries of Ludlowville made the noonday prayer, and the audience adjourned for luncheon.
The afternoon session was opened by singing "Marching to Victory." Mrs. Beardsley of Genoa recited "The Single Head of Wheat" which was followed by readings by Mrs. Corwin and Mrs. W. E. Smith of Ludlowville, the latter being an exhaustive article on things accomplished by the W. C. T. U. at large.
Sols were sung during the afternoon by Mrs. Jay Shaw of King Ferry, with Miss Cora Goodyear as accompanist. Mrs. W. A. Counsell of Genoa also sang a solo. Six ladies of the Ludlowville Union sang several good selections.
Mrs. Slaughter of the Lake Ridge Union read "Called to Account" and Mrs. Robert Ferris of West Genoa gave an excellent recitation.
Rev. Frank Allington gave a short address, in which he said "There is more power in the mothers' prayers than in all the political conventions. Victory is coming because it is God's will."
Miss Todd of Lake Ridge gave a reading touching upon woman suffrage, divorce, etc.
Mrs. Laird of Auburn read a paper on "Scientific Temperance Instruction." It is twenty-eight years since the first law was passed, making the teaching of the effect of alcohol and narcotics compulsory, and now every state has such a law. The speaker gave a history of the first passing of the law and how Mrs. Hunt, the W. C. T. U. worker who was the originator of the plan, secured the legislation. She closed by exhorting her hearers to see that the law is enforced in every particular. Give the children the truth.
Rev. H. E. Crossley of Ledyard read an excellent paper which was enthusiastic in denouncing the liquor traffic. The speaker said mothers teach temperance in your homes in every way—"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Every church member should be a total abstainer.
Mrs. C. Chaffee of West Genoa gave a fine recitation "How we Raised Ten Thousand Dollars."
Mrs. Humphries gave a very good report of the address of Mrs. Arnold at Ithaca, which she said was a story of great faith.
Mrs. Lillian Osborn gave a short parliamentary drill, after which it was announced that the next meeting would be held at North Lansing in August.

Rough on Cannon.
Speaker Cannon met the Rev. Henry N. Couden, chaplain of the house of representatives, in a corridor one day.

"You are an old hypocrite!" he said roughly. "Why, why, Mr. Speaker!" protested Dr. Couden in great surprise.

"Well, if you are not, I am," said the speaker, "and I have just been hearing about it."

Then, while he linked his arm in that of the chaplain, he told the story: "The other day in the house gallery a lady approached a doorkeeper who was protecting the morning prayer from interruption. She attempted to push past, but was restrained. 'But I must go in,' she said. 'I want to see that man Cannon.'"

"Just wait a moment," said the doorkeeper. "But I must see him. I have heard so much about him," persisted the woman. "To save trouble the man let her in. On the 'AND HIM PRAYING' threshold she stopped a moment and saw Chaplain Couden with his head bowed in prayer. 'Oh, the old hypocrite,' she ejaculated, 'and him praying, too!'"—St. Louis Republic.

What Shall I Do to Be Just?
What shall I do to be just?
What shall I do for the gain
Of the world, for its sadness?
Teach me, O seer that I trust!
Chart me the difficult main
Leading out of my sorrow and madness;
Preach me the purging of pain.

Shall I wrench from my finger the ring
To cast to the winds at my door?
Shall I tear of each lustrous thing
To drop in the palm of the poor?
What shall I do to be just?
Teach me, O ye in the light,
Whom the poor and the rich alike trust.
My heart is aflame to be right.
—Hamlin Garland.

A Witty Reply
Whenever the United States supreme court on hearing the argument of counsel for plaintiff in error is entirely satisfied that he has no case the chief justice is apt to say to counsel for defendant in error that the court does not care to hear further argument. At one time Hon. Matthew Carpenter, from Wisconsin, was counsel for plaintiff in error and opened the case. Before he was through the court was satisfied that there was nothing in it, and so when he had concluded and counsel for defendant in error arose Chief Justice Waite said, "The court does not care to hear any further argument."

Counsel for the other side was a little deaf and, although noticing that the chief justice spoke, did not hear what he had said and, turning to Mr. Carpenter, who sat beside him, asked what had been said.

"Oh, hang it!" replied Carpenter in tones audible to the bench. "The chief justice said he would rather give you the case than hear you talk."

Wanted a Diagram.
A waiter at a western hotel said to one of the guests at the dinner table: "What kind of pie do you wish? We have peach, apple, pumpkin and lemon."

The guest replied, "Give me peach, apple and pumpkin," to which the waiter, with a shrug of his shoulders, a curl of his lips and an appropriate gesture, said, with sarcasm, "What's the matter with the lemon?"

An Englishman sitting at an adjoining table, who overheard the conversation, now said to his neighbor, "I beg your pardon, but what was the matter with the lemon?"

Stung!
Two strangers met at one of the small tables in a dining car, says the New York Sun. They found a common bond in the effort to secure something to eat, and by the time the coffee came they were great friends.

"I wonder if you will do me a favor," remarked the first one as he covered his check with a substantial bill. The other man seemed receptive, and he continued:

"Have you a lower berth for tonight?" The man across the table nodded. "Well, I'm traveling with my mother, who is rather well along in life, and I'm anxious to make her comfortable. Would you be kind enough to give her your berth?"

"I should be delighted," responded the stranger.

They went back to the sleeper, where the accommodating man was presented to the other's mother, a white haired old lady with a charming face. The good Samaritan had exchanged his lower for the upper belonging to the old lady, and he was radiating with a sense of charitable kindness. It led him to remark affably to the other man:

"But, where are you going to sleep?"

"Well, sir," said the other, "I guess I'm going to sleep on the floor."

"LAPPED UP ALL I COULD."

ting drunk at this time of day? Your breakfast has hardly settled, and you're drunk!"

"Well, sir," Pete answered, rising carefully, "my excuse is that, sir, on the way home with a demijohn of whisky for my wife's rheumatism I fell on a cake of ice, sir, and the demijohn busted, and the good liquor all run out. It lay in little pools and puddles between the frozen rats. I got down and lapped up all I could, sir. That's how I got overcome."

"You swinish scoundrel," said the master, "how much did you drink?"

"Well, sir," said Pete, "I guess I'm going to sleep on the floor."

THE PRINCE'S SPEECH.

Canning's Reason For Ignoring the Royal Audacity.

One of the best stories in connection with the history of the king's speech, delivered at the opening of each fresh session of parliament, says Everybody's, is told of George IV. when prince regent.

The prince, it is well known, took his responsibilities lightly and on one occasion is said to have bet Sheridan 100 guineas that either owing to the magnetism of his personality or the flutter which the occupants of the lords' chamber were in so little attention was really paid to the verbal character of the speech he was delivering that he could make any interpolation he liked without it being detected.

The bet was taken, and the prince regent agreed to introduce the words "Baa, baa, black sheep," in the middle of the speech.

"If anybody smiles or looks startled," he said, "I lose my bet."

This exploit actually came off, and at the close of a weighty allusion, composed by Lord Liverpool, to Wellesley's difficulties in Spain the regent cleared his throat, said, "Baa, baa, black sheep," hurriedly and went on without apparently exciting any remark.

Sheridan related the royal audacity to Canning.

"It is perfectly amazing to me," Sheridan said, "that no notice was taken. Didn't you hear him distinctly say, 'Baa, baa, black sheep?'"

"I did," rejoined Canning, "but as his royal highness looked you full in the face at the time I took it as a personal allusion, and my delicacy forbade me to think more about it."

A Delicate Point.
The Comtesse de Noailles, nicknamed Mme. Etiquette, bored Marie Antoinette very much by her particularity on minor points of conduct. One day Marie Antoinette's mocking spirit had its chance. She fell from her donkey and lay on the grass for a while laughing.

"Run as fast as you can," she said to the nearest attendant as soon as she could speak "and ask Mme. Etiquette how the queen of France ought to behave when she tumbles off her donkey."

An Example.
A teacher was endeavoring to explain to her small charges the meaning of the word "congenial."

"Now, children," she said, "two people are congenial who like to do the same kind of things, who do not disagree, and it is a very strong indication of congeniality when two people think the same thing simultaneously. Can any of you, now, give me an example of two people who are congenial?"

"I can, Miss Mary," a little fellow shouted, waving his hand wildly.

"All right, Tommy," Miss Mary smiled, delighted that so prompt an understanding should have been manifested, as there were several visitors present. "Tell us who they are and what proved it."

"It's paw and maw," Tommy replied eagerly. "An' I know it, 'cause they thinks the same thing at the same time. Last night maw said she wondered how anybody with any sense could ever be fool enough to get married, an' paw said, 'I was having the identical thought, my dear.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Sleep.
Now, blessings light on him that first invented this same sleep! It covers a man all over, thoughts and all, like a cloak. It is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold and cold for the hot. It is the current coin that purchases all the pleasures of the world cheap and the balance that sets the king and the shepherd, the fool and the wise man even.—Cervantes.

What He "Saved."
Peter Clay was a coachman. His master found him one winter morning lying on top of a snowdrift in the front garden quite drunk.

"Why, Pete, you scoundrel," the master cried, "what do you mean by getting drunk at this time of day? Your breakfast has hardly settled, and you're drunk!"

"Well, sir," Pete answered, rising carefully, "my excuse is that, sir, on the way home with a demijohn of whisky for my wife's rheumatism I fell on a cake of ice, sir, and the demijohn busted, and the good liquor all run out. It lay in little pools and puddles between the frozen rats. I got down and lapped up all I could, sir. That's how I got overcome."

"You swinish scoundrel," said the master, "how much did you drink?"

"Well, sir," said Pete, "I guess I'm going to sleep on the floor."

A WAR DINNER.

By a Confederate Colonel.

A TENNESSEE veteran who served in Forrest's cavalry recently indulged in the following interesting reminiscences:

"A good dinner was as strange to our camp as a five dollar gold piece, and I remember well how eager we were for persimmon time. Then it often happened that we got a good fat possum out of one of those trees. We'd skin him and leave him hung up overnight for the frost to touch him just once. Next day we'd roast him in the ashes with plenty of yellow yams so sugary that the sirup would ooze out of them like resin out of a pitch pine tree.

"Talk about terrapin and canvasbacks! Why, man alive, possum and taters is the thing that makes you truly thank God for the space there is within you! Such sweet meat and so fat and juicy! And when the last morsel has gone down how calm and contented you feel—how much at peace with all mankind!

"I reckon the best dinner we had in our camp was one fall day in '64, when we were hanging on to the flank of Sherman's army as it marched through Georgia. One of our foraging parties brought a cow into camp, and the head fell to my share. I had my man wash and clean it; then I set him to digging a pit in the clay soil about a yard square. In it he built a fire and heaped it way, way up, so that after it had burned for an hour and been cleaned out that pit was pretty near as hot as Tophet. Then it was ready for business. We put the head, skin and all, on the bottom, with plenty of those sugary yams alongside. Over the top we put some oak planks we borrowed from a neighboring farmhouse and covered them over with earth. You can imagine how perfectly everything was cooked in that ready-made oven.

"Meantime I sent out invitations to General Pat Cleburne of Arkansas, General Brown of Tennessee, my own state (he was afterward governor); Colonel Moses Wickes and other army men stationed near us. There's no need to say that all responded, for, let me tell you, the Federals had swept the country almost bare, and it had been 'short commons' with Bragg's army for several weeks. Our table was made of three oak planks held up by crotched tree branches. Our dining room was the scrub oak grove where we had pitched our camp, with the wild birds singing and chirping in the leaves. The fresh smell of the earth was in the air, and what more did we want?

"The cow's head was served on a hot oak plank for a trencher, with the yams cuddled alongside. Our hunger was our sauce; our condiments were plain salt and pepper. But how it made you smack your lips! Our mouths were watering all the time we were skinning that savory, smoking headpiece with our froggickers. Each man stepped up to the table and cut off a slice with the same handy weapon, pared off the hard baked rind of a yam and sat down on a nearby log to chew and chat.

"We would shake our heads at each other and smile in a knowing fashion and then shake our heads and smile again, like schoolboys out for a frolic. Take it altogether, we ate—yes, sir, we really ate—with a relish and gusto Delmonico's or Chamberlain's never saw. Everybody agreed that the melting tongue of that cow was the most responsible eating he had ever enjoyed."

A Monument For the Soldiers.
A monument for the soldiers!
And what will ye build it of?
Can ye build it of marble or brass or bronze.

Outlasting the soldier's love?
Can ye glorify it with legends
As grand as their blood hath writ
From the inmost shrine of this land of thine
To the outmost verge of it?

And the answer came: We would build it
Out of our hopes made sure,
And out of our purest prayers and tears,
And out of our faith secure:
We would build it out of the great white truths
Their death hath sanctified
And the sculptured forms of the men in arms
And their faces are they died.

And what heroic figures
Can the sculptor carve in stone?
Can the marble breast be made to bleed
And the marble lips to moan?
Can the marble brow be fevered
And the marble eyes be grieved
To look their last as the flag floats past
On the country they have saved?

And the answer came: The figures
Shall be all fair and brave
And as befitting, as pure and white
As the stars above their grave.
The marble lips and breast and brow
Whereon the laurel lies
Beneath us right to guard the night
Of the old flag in the skies.

A monument for the soldiers
Built of a people's love
And blazoned and decked and panoplied
With the hearts she built it of!
And see that ye build it stately
In pillar and niche and gate
And high in pose as the souls of those
It would commemorate.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Bloody Struggle For the Colors.
The flag of the Fourth Michigan Infantry was seized at Gettysburg during close hand to hand fighting by a Confederate officer, Colonel Harrison H. Jeffords shot him on the spot, but Jeffords was run through by a Confederate soldier and fell clinging to the standard. This soldier was in turn killed, having been shot by Jarvis W. Hall, then major of the regiment and subsequently its colonel.

HINTS ON GARDENING.

How and When to Plant Vegetable and Flower Seeds.

When the birds come the grass turns green, and for the first time since the long winter the amateur gardener can go coatless; the lust for digging and planting comes. Dig as deep as you can, provided the ground is not wet and soggy. But beware of planting too early. Use manure, lots of it, but be sure it is well rotted. Green manure is poison to plants. No garden ever was dug too often or too deep. Digging makes the garden glad and gives fine crops later on. But when in doubt about its being time to plant do not plant.

It is a mistake to plant seeds or set out plants in a wet, cold soil. With few exceptions they will not grow. At best they will lie dormant. More often the cold and wet will kill the tender germs and the seed and work of planting are both lost. The crop is delayed waiting for the growth which never comes.

No seed should be planted until the ground is reasonably dry, not wet and sticky. When the proper condition prevails put in the first sowing of the hardy seeds—radishes, lettuce, onions, spinach, early round smooth peas (if one must have them, the wrinkled ones are better) and the like in vegetables.

The first flower seeds to sow after the ground is reasonably dry are pansies, daisies, sweet peas and nasturtiums. Really the pansies should have been started some weeks earlier in the house, or better still, good plants may be bought at the florist's and set out at once. It is to be noted that little pansy plants are the best. They will grow better and bloom better and longer than the big ones which have been carried over since last fall.

A week or ten days, after planting the first seed, if the weather holds good, the wrinkled peas, beets and other seeds may be planted. Again, a week after these, a planting of early sweet corn may be tried, although it is a little risky still. By May 20 most seeds can be planted and most bedding plants can be set out. Corn, melons, cucumbers, geraniums, asters, lobelias and all except the most tender things are reasonably safe.

Coleus and very tender plants should not be set out until early June, and, while bush beans may be planted in late May, the limas should not be put in the ground until June 1. For the extreme northern states these dates are too early, while as the Ohio river line is approached the dates are late.

WHEN A TREE BLEEDS.

How to Check the Flow of Sap After a Bough is Cut Off.

The following has been found an effectual method of dealing with "bleeding" when necessary to remove branches of trees that are given to bleed profusely. This is to procure or borrow a spirit or blow lamp, such as painters and plumbers generally employ for burning off old paint and soldering joints of lead pipes in inconvenient places, and with its aid to carbonize the wound until the whole surface is thoroughly charred. Follow this up with an immediate application of painter's knotting or Stockholm tar, the former for preference because it hardens more quickly than the latter and when once thoroughly hard the sap cannot penetrate or ooze through it.

The chief thing is to well char or carbonize the wood of and the bark surrounding the wound also. This takes some little time to accomplish if the sap is flowing freely, but as the wood becomes more and more charred the bleeding gradually ceases, and when seen to stop altogether the knotting or tar should at once be applied. If unacquainted with the use of a blow lamp obtain the services of a painter or plumber to do the carbonizing.

How to Pack Bottles.
A difficulty hard to overcome is the packing of bottles, especially when so many are needed on the summer or fall vacation. It should be first ascertained that the corks are sound and that the liquid will not be allowed to seep through them. Then cut pieces of small, pliable wire. Draw a piece of the wire around the neck of each bottle and make a loop, drawing tight. Put the other end across the cork, forming another loop around the neck of the bottle. When it is prepared in this way the bottle may be carried in trunk or bag without danger of leakage.

How to Make Almond Sauce.
This is an excellent sauce to serve with any boiled or baked pudding. Blanch and pound eight ounces of sweet almonds with a few spoonfuls of rosewater or lemon juice. Add to a pint of thin cream and four table-spoonfuls sugar. Allow to come to a boil. Pour over the well beaten yolks of three eggs. Stir over hot water until it thickens. Just before serving add the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff snow. It then becomes a delicious foamy sauce and may be served either hot or cold.

How to Cook Lentils.
Pick over a pint of lentils and soak half an hour in cold water. Cook a small knuckle of ham or smoked shoulder or a piece of smoked bacon and skim it; then add the lentils and a good sized onion cut up. Have about three quarts of water and boil together about an hour and a half. Pare and dice six potatoes; then add them to the lentils and salt and pepper to taste. Add half a teaspoonful of marjoram or poultry dressing. This is very palatable.

KEEPING THE DAY.

BILLY and Cherry were playing soldiers in the yard. It made no difference that Cherry was a little girl of ten, she could play soldier just as well as Billy, who was a boy and twelve.

"Oh, dear," exclaimed Billy, "I'm so thirsty I could drink rainwater and call it good."

"Me, too," said Cherry as she wiped her patriotic brow.

At that they rushed into the kitchen, and while Cherry had the first chance at the tumbler always standing by the sink Billy, half giggling, told his mother how they had both declared themselves thirsty enough to drink rainwater.

Mrs. Merritt went on with the cookies she was making as she said:

"Our poor soldiers during the war were often so parched with thirst that they not only would almost have cried for joy to have clean rainwater, but during some of their long marches they gladly lay down and scooped up the muddy water from puddles in the middle of the road."

"Honest, mamma?" questioned Billy, forgetting his thirst.

"Yes, that is really true, Billy. I used to hear Grandma Merritt tell of many of those things that seem almost impossible in these quiet days."

"Oh, my goodness sakes alive!" said the soldier girl, who had just drunk her fill. "I don't know what I should do if I couldn't get nice, clean water when I'm thirsty."

"Did the soldiers use to get hungry when there wasn't anything to eat?" asked Billy eagerly.

Mrs. Merritt had to smile. Billy's appetite was a subject for jokes all through the family.

"Soldiers have to learn to put up with a great deal when in camp or on the march, Billy, boy, that they would never think could be endured were they at home. But, of course, grown men can endure many things that would seem dreadful to children like you and Cherry. But I want you to remember one thing—our soldiers had to pass through a great deal that was hard and extremely uncomfortable, and they did it to make things firm and easy for those who were to come after them. Well, run away to your play now, but when Memorial day comes remember we all owe a debt of great gratitude to the men who go marching by."

Out ran the merry pair, yet it at once became evident that a change had come over the spirit of their dreams. Instead of a brisk march to queer, emphatic orders, they perched on a bench up against the great horse chestnut tree.

"IT'S NEVER SO MUCH NICE!"

"Cherry," said Billy soberly, "it's awful to be thirsty!"

"Yes, if you can't get a drink," said quick-witted Cherry.
"And if soldiers get thirsty marching at war I don't see why they wouldn't on any march," Billy went on, "and I think, seeing the soldiers did so much for us, we ought to get up and do something for them."

"What could we do?" asked Cherry, her eyes big this time.
"We might give them all the water they can stuff when they go by here day after tomorrow."

"Oh, so we might!" Cherry exclaimed. "But I wish we could give them lemonade instead; it's ever so much nicer."

"But it would take a ton, my dear," said Billy, who sometimes addressed Cherry as he heard his father and his mother address her.

"Let's ask mamma about it."
Back clamored the children to the kitchen with their request. Mrs. Merritt thought she saw a chance to teach a lesson in real patriotism and a little endurance.

"You can have a pail of water and several tumblers," she began, "if you will agree to stay all the morning—that means from 9 o'clock until 12—and hand glasses of water to the veterans as they pass by. They go past the house on their march, and a halt is usually called at the corner close by. Remember, if you do this at all you must do it thoroughly. Bridget will fill the pail for you as often as necessary, but a great many men will keep stopping for a drink. No soldier must be denied."

The children promised readily to meet the requirements, which they did faithfully.

"I got good and tired," Billy told his mother at the close of Memorial day, "but I told Cherry it didn't make any difference how tired the soldiers got in the war they had to march right on and fight right on."

"Why, Billy, dear, that is just the very lesson I wanted you and Cherry to learn," said Mrs. Merritt, with a pleased smile.—Christian Work.

Lines Suggested by the Soldiers' Monument at King Ferry.

BY C. W. DENNIS.

Sleep, thou martyrs to a noble cause,
Beneath the marble column sleep,
And at the shrine, shall many pause,
And offer homage, true and deep.
Thy deeds of valor will ever glow,
As pen shall write their history.
Thy sufferings, generations show,
What thou endured for liberty.
The toilsome march, the night bivouac,
The lonely midnight picket post,
The charge, when columns fell intact,
And sank in death, the gallant host.
And in the battle's long, fierce strife,
Where death did garner file and rank,
And thou know well the cost, thy life,
Yet thou from duty never shrank.
Thou brave, illustrious, noble dead,
Who fell with face towards the foe,
Amid the conflict and the strife,
Amid the carnage and the woe.
Or sank in death through fevers slow,
In tents beside Potomac's flow,
Or in the marshes, rank and low,
Succumbed to death's unerring blow.
At Antietam, at Gettysburg,
And in the front of Petersburg,
On many a well contested field,
For country, thou thine arm did wield.
And at her call on land or sea
Thou gave thy life to make her free.
'Tis now thy country's sacred trust,
To guard, protect, thine honored dust.
In hearts of men, engraven bold,
On tablets, marble and on stone—
Thy deeds are carved in letters gold,
To speak to ages, yet unknown.
As laurels on thy tomb are laid,
A tribute to thy worth is paid,
In reverence there our heads will bend,
Departed soldier, patriot, friend.
Brave patriot, rest, thy work is done,
And nobly thou, the victory won,
Thy life-blood saved a nation's life,
And peace abounds where once was strife.
A race oppressed, thou freedom gave,
No longer in our land a slave,
The flag thou once, in triumph bore,
In grandeur waves from shore to shore.

Memorial Day Program.

The services arranged by Genoa G. A. R. and citizens, in memory of our soldier dead, will be held in Academy hall, Genoa, Monday, May 30, beginning at 2 o'clock. The program will include music by the Logan Drum Corps of Auburn, selections by the Genoa Male quartet and a large choir, and addresses by Rev. Horace W. Smith of Port Byron and Rev. J. B. Doran of Scipio, both of whom are good speakers.

The citizens of Genoa have spent considerable time in raising funds and completing arrangements for the exercises of the day and for the decorating of the graves of the nineteen soldiers who are buried in Genoa cemetery, a list of whom is given above.

At the close of the services in the hall, a procession will be formed headed by the Drum Corps, the flag boys, the flower girls in decorated wagons and all who desire to drive to the cemetery.

It is requested that all who have flowers which will give for use on this occasion, will please bring or send them to the lower hall in the Academy building Monday, where a committee will receive them.

It hardly seems necessary to urge people to attend exercises of a patriotic character in memory of those who fought and died in their country's service, and we feel sure that a hearty response will be given on the part of the people in this village and vicinity to the invitation to attend these services. It is several years since Genoa has attempted to have services on Memorial day, and we naturally are anxious to have the program a great success. Let every one do his part!

Children's Table Manners.

"After a long illness in the hospital, I returned home to find that my children's table manners had suffered a complete demoralization," says Woman's Home Companion for June. "They 'gobbled,' used knife and fork indiscriminately and always awkwardly, regarded their spoons as shovels and, in short, were perfect little savages.

"In order to remedy this quickly I started a series of 'company luncheons,' at which I was the hostess and the children the guests. I set the table as prettily as possible and made funny little place cards. The children played up delightedly, took grown-up names and even washed their hands without a murmur. We made a set of simple rules: The guests who behaved perfectly received three pieces of candy, the guests who made only one mistake received one piece of candy, while any unfortunate guest who committed three breaches of table etiquette received no candy at all.

"Questions on table manners were in order at any time, to be answered by the hostess.

"I chose dishes for these luncheons which are not always easy to eat elegantly, and I was very happy to see how quickly the children improved in table manners and other manners as well, for our 'company luncheons' seemed to help general courtesy quite wonderfully. The best of it was that there was no nagging nor cross words. It was all good fun, and my four youngsters can now go anywhere and eat anything, and mother has the proud consciousness that they will always appear to good advantage."

The Right Way to Cheat.

An American who was educated at the University of Gottingen was discussing German universities and said: "A great many young American students finish up in Germany. They have quite a reputation there. A great German biologist once said to me: "I think we shall have to exclude your young compatriots from our schools. They no sooner come here than they begin to cheat." "Cheat?" said I, alarmed. "How so?" "Why," said the biologist, "they only pay tuition for one, but they learn enough for three or four."

Gandy and Digestion.

I have often felt that the great craving for sweets in a child meant that it was something which the system required, but my experience with candy-eating children has led me to believe that Nature is not always a safe guide, and notably in this matter of the craving that children have for sweets. The effects of candy upon the digestion of the child should be carefully watched. It should be given after meals, as it will otherwise spoil the appetite. A New York doctor several years ago made a study of a number of cases, and found that certain children, those who inherited rheumatic and gouty conditions, would have a series of troubles if they ate much sweets. He called such "the sugar susceptibles," since whenever they ate substances which had much cane sugar, they were variously afflicted. Sometimes the stomach would be upset, sometimes they would act as if they had caught cold, having a bronchitis or sore throat. They would break out with skin eruptions or have rheumatic attacks. Such children were not allowed sugar on their cereals or in preserved fruits. They soon accustomed themselves to going without sugar. Saccharin was used to sweeten food for the "sugar susceptibles." Many experiments were tried to see how much sugar an ordinary well child could take. It was found that children differed very widely in this respect, but that a child could not take more than three or four ounces a day without showing the signs of sugar poisoning.—The Ladies' World for June.

THE GENOA TRIBUNE and N. Y. World $1.65

Village and Vicinity News.

—Mr. and Mrs. Purdy Main of Ithaca were over-Sunday guests at Mrs. Ida Hand's.

—Round trip fare to Ithaca from Genoa to-day on account of Conway Band concerts, 60 cents.

—Mrs. Emma Newman and son Paul of Ithaca spent a few days recently at Florence Sullivan's.

—Misses Lillian and Leona Warren, with Master Randolph Hagin, spent several days with Auburn friends this week.

—Don't forget to display the Stars and Stripes on Monday next. Every business place and every residence should be decorated with the national colors.

—Miss Lena Gilkey has returned from Sayre and is now at her home in Genoa. She was the nurse in attendance upon the case of Mr. Riley.

—Different sounds travel with different velocity. A call to dinner will run over a ten-acre field in a minute and a half, while a summons to return to work takes from five to eight minutes.

—The stockholders of the Lyons Sugar Refining Company have decided to dismantle the refinery and ship the machinery to some site in California. The average payroll of the plant exceeded $25,000 per annum.

—Mr. and Mrs. Benj. A. Arnold of Seneca Falls have been visiting at A. B. Peck's and Clarence Lewis' and among other relatives in this vicinity during the past week. They expected to return home to-day.

—The death of Rev. W. E. Rippey, a retired Methodist minister, occurred last week at his home at Benton Center, Yates county. Mr. Rippey was at one time pastor of the Ledyard and Belltown churches. He is survived by a wife, formerly Mrs. Chloe Lowe of Lansingville, and one daughter.

—A very fast game of baseball was played at the Genoa fair ground last Saturday, the Genoa Tigers vs. The East Hill Cubs. The game all through was decidedly in favor of the Tigers, the final score being 24 to 13. Their battery, Brogan and Norman (R) did excellent work while the infield Fulmer, Sullivan, Hagin, Dean and Norman (E) were in the game every minute. The outfield Hagin, Ives and Smith got under those high ones whenever they came their way. Fulmer took the lead at the bat and whenever he swung the stick it meant a hit. The Cub's battery, Criscaden and Robinson (W) did fine work, but the field was a little slow from the lack of practice. Manager Sullivan has announced that there will be another game at the same field next Saturday afternoon.

Large stock Ladies' and Gents' Summer Underwear at Smith's.

—The Genoa Milling Co. announce that hereafter their mill will be open on Monday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings only, and will be closed Decoration day from 12 to 6 p. m. This is a move in the right direction and we are pleased that the Milling Co. have taken the first step. There seems to be no valid reason why all the business places in town should not be closed three evenings in the week. The subject is one which is receiving attention all through the country and the custom of early closing at least two of three evenings in the week is fast becoming established. We believe that if the business men of Genoa would get together in this matter, it could easily be accomplished and all would be gratified with the result. As soon as the public are informed of the custom, they will plan to do their shopping and milling accordingly. It used to be "competition," but now it is "co-operation" that helps the business of a town.

—The TRIBUNE office will be closed on Monday next until after the exercises.

—Mrs. C. Patchen and daughter of Ledyard were guests of Mrs. Lucy Dodd Tuesday.

—Mrs. Martha Gilkey was quite seriously ill Wednesday night, but is reported better now.

—See announcement of reduced rates over the N. Y., A. and L. for Grange Day, June 4, at Ithaca.

—Miss Sadie Nolan who has been having a three weeks' vacation, will return next week to Auburn.

—A. W. Whitbeck and family of Savannah spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Whitbeck's brother, C. J. Wheeler.

—Will the one who borrowed an axe from the rear of THE TRIBUNE office one day recently kindly return the same?

—Mrs. S. J. Hand was expected to arrive in Auburn yesterday on the return from Riverside, Calif., to her home in Genoa.

—J. H. Smith and little son of Ithaca were Sunday guests at A. T. Smith's. L. M. Smith of Syracuse was at his parents' Wednesday.

—The marriage of L. Goldie Lick and Ross Jesse Bacon will take place at the home of the bride in Summerhill on Wednesday, June 1.

—Four "double holidays" this year. Decoration Day, Fourth of July and Labor Day fall on Monday, while Christmas, falling on Sunday will be observed on Monday.

—Henry R. Manchester, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Manchester of Scipioville and a student in Syracuse University, recently underwent an operation for appendicitis in Auburn City hospital. He is said to be recovering nicely.

—All who believe that the Sabbath should be preserved will rejoice to know that the bill permitting the playing of baseball on Sunday afternoon by amateurs, was defeated in the Senate after having passed the Assembly.

—One student in the Sherwood Select school, Miss Marshall, has scarlet fever and upon the advice of Dr. B. K. Hoxie, health officer, the school was closed last week. Several other schools in that vicinity have also been closed. John Heffernan, who was a census enumerator and lives near Aurora, is also ill with the fever. It is not thought now that there will be a general epidemic.

—George P. Conger was graduated from Union Theological seminary, New York, last week. He stood at the head of his class, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. On a basis of scholarship he was elected to a foreign scholarship and will leave in July for Europe for two years of study and travel. "Perry" was born in Genoa and lived here until 13 years old, and Genoa people are gratified to hear of his success and good fortune.

Dr. J. W. Whitbeck, dentist, Genoa, N. Y., is prepared to do painless extracting of teeth by the use of Sleep Vapor or Somnoform, the latest and safest anesthetic known, which can be had at his office administered by a physician. He also has for extracting the best preparation for hypodermic; and also a local application for extracting children's teeth, perfectly harmless. In fact, everything in the dental line can be found at his office. Charges as reasonable as in the city or elsewhere, consistent with first-class work.

—The death of Clara Strong, wife of Frank E. Young, occurred at her home at East Venice early Thursday morning. Mrs. Young underwent an operation for appendicitis on Saturday, May 14, and although her condition was serious last week, she was thought to be doing well. Embolism was given as the cause of death. She was 54 years of age. Her demise is a great shock, not only to her family, but to other relatives and many friends. She leaves besides her husband, two sisters—Mrs. John Smith of East Genoa and Mrs. Edgar Tiff of Ithaca. The funeral will be held at her late home on Saturday at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. —The Free Bridge road is to be closed June 1 for the building of the state road extension. On that date a ferry will begin running between Cayuga and Bridgeport, which will make the trip in fifteen minutes.

—It seems rather early to give the result of the census, but it has been stated that the 1910 census of the United States will show a population of 91,424,323, an increase since 1900 of more than 15,000,000. New York still remains the Empire State, with an estimated population of 8,865,722, an increase of 1,596,828 since 1900.

—A Sunday school convention of the schools of Locke, Moravia and that vicinity is being held in the Locke Baptist church to-day, with morning, afternoon and evening sessions. Death was due to leakage of the heart. Her age was given as 94 years. She is survived by her husband and two sons, John of Genoa and William of Auburn. The funeral was held at the King Ferry Catholic church on Monday morning.

Frear, whose death occurred very suddenly early Tuesday morning after a few hours' illness. Fitch officiated. Mr. Frear and wife were guests at the home of Mrs. Smith in Genoa on May 15.

Memorial Day.

On the banks of the river of glory
In camp are the soldiers today,
Away from the grum and the gory
That reddens the battle's array.
The bugles and the drums are still,
The sword and gun no longer kill
The blue and gray.

To the camp on the river of glory
We tell in the flowers we lay
On the graves of the brave the old story
Of love that shall live away.
We cheer the heroes dead, and yet
The roses with our tears are wet
For blue and gray.

The steady tramp of martial feet was heard upon the village street. Sweet music filled the fragrant air. So sweet with breath of flowers fair. Beneath the shade of stately trees. Whose green flags nestled in the breeze. Each soldier paused to bow his head. In presence of the soldier dead.

Three little playmates left their play And turned their eager steps that way. Their aprons filled with daisies white And dandelions golden bright. And one dear child was very fair. With azure eyes and golden hair. And one was dark, with glowing eyes, Whose birth had been 'neath southern skies.

A soldier, smiling, turned to see And jest a little with the three: "Why, little Giffie, don't you know That Mudge's father long ago Against your father fought? And here,"

Pointing to Copey, standing near, "Is the whole cause of all the fuss. Der people got us in the muss."

The children lifted wondering eyes, Half fearful in their sore surprise, Then with a mutual impulse turned. The soldier's stately presence urged. And, standing closely side by side And twining loving arms, they cried: "We don't believe a word you say, But if it's true, why, now, sir, they

"Are up in heaven, and God, I know, Forgets what happened long ago. And we don't fight, ah, no, for we— We love each other, don't you see." Then hand in hand they walked away. The girl in blue, the girl in gray. And she for whose downtrodden race The soldiers perished face to face.

—Mary D. Erine.

He Fought His Boys. At the battle of Chickamauga General Willich, who was commanding a brigade, incurred the displeasure of General Rosecrans, the commanding general, by some very slight omission. General Willich was sent for and informed that he must consider himself under arrest for the present.

"General," said Rosecrans sternly, "consider yourself under arrest and leave your sword here until your case is tried."

"Yes, general, I will consider myself under arrest," was the reply, "and about so soon as his fight's over I'll come and fix him up."

"But, sir," said the astonished Rosecrans, "I want you to consider yourself under arrest now."

"Of course I do," responded Willich promptly, "and so soon as I get off his fight I'll be up and settle him."

THE OTHER LEE.

SEATED in the dining room of the Ingletterre hotel, Havana, one evening early in April, 1898, were half a score of Americans, mostly newspaper correspondents, surrounded Consul General Lee, each demanding of him when he would leave Havana and when war would be declared. General Lee was evasive and finally, to check the flood of questions, dropped into reminiscence of the civil war.

"You boys don't seem to realize," he said, "that this is a sad anniversary for me. Yet in view of everything that has happened I don't know why I should call it sad. While I am proud of the struggle we of the south made and while, had we to do it over again, history would repeat itself, I am glad today that God reigns and the government at Washington still lives."

"It is just thirty-three years ago tonight that I led my cavalry in a forlorn hope south from Richmond. It has been said that I left the army with my men without the consent and approval of my uncle, General Robert E. Lee. That is not true, although it is true that he sent for me to return when he learned that General Grant's generous terms depended upon his ability to surrender the entire army."

"The last stand had been made, and we fought the last fight we were capable of entering. For months we had seen the end approach, hoping against hope that a miracle would intervene to save the Confederacy. At last it became apparent that the end could be no longer delayed. When General Lee announced to us his decision to accept the best terms for the surrender of the army that could be obtained from General Grant, I asked and received from him permission to skirt Richmond with my cavalry, or what was left of it, and make my way south, cutting a road through the Union forces if necessary."

"I was a very young man in those days, and hope died hard. My thought was that if I could take my boys out of the trap we might form a nucleus about which the south could once more rally. My uncle expressed the opinion that the adventure was foolhardy, but finally gave a reluctant consent. So it happened that just thirty-three years ago tonight with my men I rode south and by daylight was safely beyond the Union lines."

"As I have said, in those days I was a very young man. I thought I had something of a corner in the knowledge market. Even the rough, hard knocks that had come to me during the war had not been sufficient to drive the conceit out of my head. I received a mental jolt that morning, however, that started me along the right path and soon placed me where I was willing to admit there were others who were at least fully as wise as myself. I had always held my uncle in the very highest respect. I still regard him as the military genius of the war, but at that time I thought I could see mistakes he had made."

"It was just at break of day, while we were riding down a rough country road, the dust of which had been laid by a heavy shower, that we came upon an old southern woman. Perhaps she belonged to the poor white class, but her knowledge of men was profound. She stood in front of a cabin, and I drew up and asked for a drink."

As she handed me the gourd of water she inquired for news from Richmond. "The war is all over, aunty," I responded. "We are going home. General Lee has surrendered."

"No, he hasn't, was the quick response. 'Perhaps that no 'count, shiftless, triflin' general Fitzhugh Lee has surrendered, but not General Robert E. Lee. I know he has not surrendered, and the war is not ended.'

"Even under the coat of tan that had accumulated during my four years of service I could feel my face flush as I heard my companions' fruitless efforts to suppress their merriment."

"We rode on, and we were perhaps four miles south of Richmond when a courier from General Lee overtook us and I received my instructions, which meant the surrender of the last remnant of the army that had so valiantly defended Richmond."—New York Herald.

Under Both Flags. At a Confederate campfire in New York a few years ago an elderly man approached General Wheeler, who was the guest of honor.

"I want to shake hands with you, general," he said, putting out the only one he had.

"Gray or blue?" laughed the general, grasping it promptly.

"Both," was the reply. "I fought with you under the stars and bars, and my two boys fought with you under the stars and stripes."

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

On Alcohol Production.

In the early part of the last century, the problems of transportation constituted a powerful incentive to the production of spirits in Sweden. A principal article of production in the rural districts was potatoes. To ship the surplus crop of tubers two or three hundred miles overland by teams was manifestly impracticable. So the farmers adopted the general policy of distilling their surplus potatoes and shipping the "brandy" to the centers of population for sale. This policy grew until in 1831, there were more than 170,000 stills in rural Sweden. The introduction of railways throughout rural Sweden had much to do with settling this economic problem, though by no means were they the sole influence in the reform.

In the mountainous regions of the South, there exists a breed of men called "moonshiners." They are not inherently "bad men." Many of them are men of standing in their communities, workers in the mountain churches and who have the confidence of the communities in which they live.

The fact that they live far removed from railways or other means of transportation has much to do with their being "moonshiners." They cannot find a market for their surplus corn, owing to the natural difficulties of getting it to the market. So they have fallen into the practice of distilling their little surplus and sending the whisky to the market.

In the Southern States, the refuse of the sugar factories is now pure waste.

In seasons of unusual crops in potatoes, the price often drops far below the cost of production and often they are not dug at all. There is partial or total loss of the crop.

In the far West, the inferior grades of corn find no market and total loss is only averted by using it to feed stock. In the fruit belt, the "culls" and "drops" and "seconds" are marketed at a loss because there is no avenue open to consume such products on a remunerative basis. This portion of the fruit crop is more or less an economic loss.

The removal of the tax from alcohol, after it has been chemically treated under Government supervision so as to make it undrinkable, will solve this problem of waste of these products of the farm by providing an outlet for them for a useful purpose and at a reasonable price. The refuse of the farm at once becomes a valuable asset instead of a troublesome waste. Instead of shipping his surplus corn to the far markets and sending afar for his light and fuel, the farmer can market a considerable proportion of his surplus near to home, where it will be made up into alcohol for light and fuel for his own use.

It will result in a heavy increase in the production of alcohol, of course. This, under the old conditions, would be a cause for alarm. But science has provided methods for the treating of alcohol in such a manner that none but the most confirmed dipsomaniac can drink it or does drink it. This fact is not a theory, because, after sixty years trial with tax free alcohol treated in this way for industrial purposes, the temperance leaders of England unanimously declare that the policy has not been prejudicial to temperance interests in any way whatever. Such distinguished authorities as Lady Henry Somerset, Dr. Dawson Burns, Joseph Mallins, after a lifetime of actual observation, scout at the idea of this offensive tax free denatured alcohol being prejudicial to the temperance cause.

In France, Germany and Switzerland, where the largest use has been made of the tax free denatured alcohol legislation, the temperance leaders are even more enthusiastic over the results than in Britain. The continental temperance men are not only friendly, but to a man are earnest advocates of this legislation on account of the good results for temperance. It was this very law passed in Germany in 1888, that opened the door to advanced temperance legislation in the Fatherland. It did this by stripping the drink traffic of the industrial support and compelling it to stand alone, on its merits, and it had no merits. It removed the opposition of the powerful Agrarians, who were afraid that restriction on the liquor traffic would interfere with potato market, the source of much of the distilled spirits of that country.

In England, where there has been a boom in the use of industrial alcohol, there has been an accompanying radical decrease in the consumption of beverage spirits. This tendency has been continuous for half a dozen years. In Norway, where the statistics are closely and critically kept, the same tendency appears.

Society's Gain.

It has been demonstrated by statistics that the average gain to society for every wage-earner is $300 per annum. This average—less than a dollar a day is produced by the lowered earning capacity of the beered, tobacco-poisoned, workingman, demoralized by the fellowship of whisky.

If alcohol and beer will eat off the finger ends of bartenders and eat up their shoes, what will it do to a drinker's stomach. — California Searchlight.

An Amusing Trick to Try on Your Friends.

The picture illustrates an interesting and apparently simple performance. Tell one of your audience to take a pole and place the end in the angle of the wall and the floor and while holding it in that position to bend under it and come up on the opposite side. The operator will usually face the wall and begin a series of frantic efforts that will result in his measuring his length on the floor. After he has made a failure take the pole and place it in position yourself. Then, turning with your back to the wall, slowly bend under the pole, keeping the pole in its first position and pressing hard downward with your hands.

Game of Alphabet.
From a box of cardboard letters twenty are dealt to each player and are turned face down on the table before him. Beginning at the left of the dealer, the first player turns up a letter so that all can see it and calls for a quotation from some well known author or poet, beginning with the letter turned. As soon as the letter is exposed the person appointed to be timekeeper either slowly counts thirty aloud or keeps his eyes on his watch, calling out "Time" when the half minute has elapsed. If in that interval no one has answered the drawer of the letter may then give a quotation himself and keep the letter, or if all fail to respond it is laid aside, to be given to the one who next wins a letter. If some one makes a quotation that is unfamiliar to all present he may be challenged to give the author. If unable to do this the letter is thrown out. The player having the most letters when the game stops is the winner.

Three Smart Girls.
Boys are usually given all the credit for playing practical jokes, but last winter three small girls got a little ahead of anything their brothers had done without being unduly mischievous. They built a snow man in their front yard near the sidewalk, and they built him around an iron pipe, which opened at the man's mouth. The other end was attached to another pipe, which ran under the snow through a basement window of the house, where the girls took up their position. Whenever any person passed along the sidewalk one of the girls would speak into the end of the pipe, and her voice, carried under the snow, had all the appearance of having originated in the snow man's throat. The talking statue became the wonder of the neighborhood, and for a long time no one discovered that his voice came from an ordinary speaking tube similar to those that end in the vestibules of flat buildings.—Chicago News.

A Wise Old Cat.
"My grandmother," writes Miss Lou-down, the owner of several prize cats, in the Strand, "owned a fine cat whose leg got damaged by the wheel of a perambulator. Of course a great fuss was made over the injured limb, and nothing was too good for Richard. Milk with a strong infusion of rich cream was a favorite form of sympathy. Every one noticed that the leg was a long time healing, but at last the surgeon declared it perfectly healed. Of his guard, Richard used to scamper and play, but the moment he saw my grandmother coming with a saucer of milk up would come his paw from the ground, and he would hobble about on three legs, as if in great pain. He never tried the ruse on other members of the family."

The Inventor of the Flouring Mill.
About the year 70 B. C. Mithridates, king of Cappadocia, one of the most ingenious and able princes of the time, invented the first mill driven by water. This triumph of his skill and ingenuity he caused to be erected in the immediate vicinity of the royal palace. In the course of time the Cappadocian bakers became celebrated and were in great demand throughout all parts of the world as then known. These mills were usually placed upon boats on the river, being so elevated and contrived as to be easily driven by the water, and the millers were thus enabled to move from place to place, distributing the meal to their customers.

WATCHES AND Cream Separators

There are some sensible dairy farmers who buy $1., $5.- and $10.- watches, because they serve the purpose of a watch and waste nothing while they last. But would any of these sensible dairy farmers put their money into and carry a $1., $5.- or $10.- watch if it cost them from 25 cents to $1.- that they might otherwise save EVERY DAY to do so? Most assuredly they would not. Then why should any dairy farmer buy a cream separator of the $1., $5.- or $10.- watch kind where its use DOES mean a WASTE of from 25 cents to $1.- every day, in quantity and quality of product, that a DE LAVAL cream separator would SAVE? THAT'S the all-important DIFFERENCE between POOR SEPARATORS and POOR WATCHES,—one's good enough while it lasts but the other wastes twice a day from the time its use begins. A De Laval catalogue is a separator education to be had for the asking.

The Dowager Queen Alexandra.
Alexandra, the widow of Edward VII., is now queen dowager of England, the first dowager which Great Britain has had since the time of Queen Charlotte, widow of William IV. Her position in the kingdom can be, if such is her desire, one of the greatest social and political importance, and the influence which she will be able to wield over certain destinies of the country will be no small one. The fact, however, that she is sixty-six years old and that her life since the death of her son, Prince Albert Victor, in 1891 has been one in which sorrow and suffering have taken a large part may lead the queen dowager to withdraw into a retirement which may be more than welcome to her. The fact that she has recently become very deaf as a result of the catarrh with which she had been burdened may also lead her to withdraw from activity of any political sort. The death of his late majesty would naturally put any social activities out of the question for some years. Queen Alexandra is deeply religious, but in a practical way, which has led her to take the presidency of the royal national fund for nurses and to become actively interested in trained nursing work. She has always been a worker, and this trait, with her other characteristics, has ingrained her deeply into the love of the British people.

Hints for Business Women.

One of the very grandest and most self-sacrificing women of my acquaintance is also one of the most uncleanly in dress and person. Hundreds of poor and aged and prisoners call her blessed, for she works day and night in their behalf; yet her co-workers shrink from her touch, she is so mark-dirty in dress and person. Another worthy woman repeats where she would interest, because she has a high pitched, penetrating voice and scolds and commands, where a drop of the oil of courtesy and diplomacy would win her cause. Any woman must remember how large a part the person and the dress play in working success.—Ladies' World for June

Peach Leaf Curl.

If this disease is on your trees it will soon become evident in the unfolding peach leaves. You should watch the leaves carefully for the next two or three weeks to determine how effective your spraying has been for its control. Remember that the effectiveness of the spray will depend largely upon two factors; first, whether it was applied before the buds began to swell, and second, whether it was thoroughly done. Beslow to lay failure to mixture used. It has been demonstrated beyond a question that Lime sulfur, Bordeaux mixture or Copper Sulphate will effectually control this disease. It is of course, too late to spray for the disease now, but a careful examination of your trees and a study of the disease in the light of your spraying operations of this year, should help you to more satisfactorily handle the proposition next year. Bulletin 276 on Peach Leaf Curl and its Control is now ready for distribution. This bulletin gives a careful description of the disease and the habits of the fungus which causes it, together with the most modern methods of controlling the malady. You will be interested in comparing the data in this bulletin with the results which you have gotten on this disease. Full directions are given for the preparation of Lime Sulfur solutions, Bordeaux mixture, etc., for the control of the Curl. This bulletin is free to growers in the State of New York. Drop a card to us at once asking for a copy of the bulletin. If you do not get it upon first request write again. Your name will go on our list for further bulletins along the line of plant diseases.
