Be Lighthearted and Gay.

"Our besetting sin is to be too serious and set too high a value upon sobriety," says Margaret E. Sangster in the Woman's Home Companion for August. "I hold a brief for pure fun. Laughter is wholesome; mirth does more good than medicine. Not merely when we are on a holiday, but in mid-current of the daily round we are the better for an interlude of amusement. The person who was born without a sense of humor is intolerable if one can see the fun in it. When I hear or see condemnation of a girl's gaiety, I am forced to the conviction that the grave censor never had a girlhood worth the name or else was born under a baleful star. Immoderate giggling belongs to a transient phase and should not be reproved when children are in their early teens; rather it should be rejoiced in, and their elders look back in tender wistfulness on their own days of such thoughtless delight. Be as frivolous as you please, dear maiden and matron, in the summer days and be assured that in its place frivolity is the sunshine that dances on the wave. Some of the most portentous people one meets, people solemn and severe, and given to frowning, are fools underneath their masks. Some of the lightest-hearted, gayest and most winsome in their capacity for seeing fun and making it are among the great and wise. If one has no native sense of humor, one should endeavor by every legitimate means to acquire it. An evening spent at a play which from the first act to the last scintillates with jests and irresistibly provokes mirth is a boon to tired folks; so, too, is an hour with a novel in which the serious underlying purpose is illuminated by flashes of fun on a summer day or a winter afternoon."

STARS OF TURF RACE AT FAIR.

State Offers $50,000 In Grand Circuit Classes.

LARGE ENTRY FOR STAKES.

Campaigners of Biggest Stables of Country Headed For Syracuse—Horse World Futurity With Rich Purses a Feature—Incentive Offered to Breeders of State.

With a revival of light harness horse racing in the east and the grand circuit again represented by a chain of tracks from the western states to New England, racing of a high standard is promised for the state fair, which has for several years formed one of the strongest links of the chain.

Regardless of any effect of legislation upon betting interests, which some associations have looked to for revenue, there is assurance from the size of the entries the rich stakes and purses have attracted and an unmistakable interest on the part of the public that this will be a season of successful racing in the grand circuit. With an unusually strong program of events and nominations for the fair stakes, promising competition between the best stables from Maine to California and from Canada to the gulf, State Fair Commissioner DeForest Settle, who directs the racing feature, looks for the banner meeting of the year.

Close to $50,000 will be given at the fair in stake and purse races and for special race features. It is the largest amount ever offered and will mean contests of a spirited character between the kings and queens of the turf.

The statement that nearly $50,000 is offered for the racing feature does not mean that it will cost the state anything like that. The track has come to be so important to racing interests that the entry is always large. Some years the entrance money exceeds the amount given in purses. When the receipts from the paddock and grand stand are taken into account it is seen that the races furnish the big revenue producing feature of the fair.

The officers of the fair in planning the grand circuit meetings are not actuated solely by the desire for a strong attraction for the fair. Within the Empire State are horse breeding establishments representing investments of many thousands of dollars, and it is important that the state furnish some incentive to these breeders. Besides, the state must have racing worthy of its magnificent racing plant.

A new feature of the program, and one which will catch the interest of the breeders of the country, is the Horse World Representative Stallion stake for foals of 1907. It will be the first futurity raced at the fair, and it will mean a notable start in this department, for the greatest colts of the year will be seen in the trotting and pacing divisions. Until the last payments are due from the nominators it will be impossible to determine the value of the stake, but it is felt by racing authorities that it will be in the neighborhood of $10,000.

The Empire State stake for $10,000, for the past three years the classic event of the racing program, will bring together the best trotters in the country which were eligible on May 1 to the 2:14 class. The nominations number thirty-two, and they represent the strongest grand circuit stables.

The other early closing events are the Chamber of Commerce 2:09 trot, $2,000; the Syracuse 2:12 pace, $5,000; the Onondaga 2:06 pace, $2,000; the Ka-noo 2:25 trot for three-year-olds, $1,000.

The class races, all for purses of $1,200 or over, will be announced early in August. With a big stake entry support is assured for the class events, as the campaigners are not in the habit of dividing their stables.

There are plans on foot for additional features of a spectacular order. If it appears from the speed of any of the more sensational performers of the year that there is a chance for a new world's record an effort will be made for a special exhibition during the fair.

President Taft Opens State's Greatest Fair.

New Attendance Record Looked For at Annual Exhibition at Syracuse In September. Biggest Attractions Ever Secured. Unprecedented Demand For Exhibitors' Space.

THE thousands who attend the opening of the New York state fair at Syracuse Sept. 12, when President William H. Taft is to speak, will be impressed with what the state has done in the way of providing a permanent home for the institution to which it looks for the promotion of its agricultural, breeding, commercial and other interests.

Representing an investment of over $500,000, the new buildings with their great walls of light gray brick and towering white columns, unquestionably the grandest fair buildings in the world, tell much of a movement to have the Empire State lead in the equipment of its fair plant as it leads in many things.

President Taft will deliver an address in the Empire State court, a broad plaza where it is possible for 60,000 people to assemble. Forming the south side of the court is the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts building, a mammoth structure of rare architectural beauty, erected in 1908 at a cost of $220,000. At the north are the new buildings devoted to the purposes of the state grange, the dairy industry, state institutions and the state press. These buildings, similar in character to the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts building, are connected with colonnades 200 feet long. They were completed barely within time for the last fair and will appear to much better advantage this year because of the improvement of the approaches and surrounding lawns and the general development of the Empire State court. This year for the first time visitors to the fair will see the complete development of a portion of the grounds after the permanent plan adopted in 1908 by the state legislature upon the recommendation of the state fair commission.

When the legislature provides the remainder of the appropriations called for in the $2,000,000 grounds scheme there will be buildings of brick and stone for horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry, adequate judging rings and the most complete racing course in America. The complete transformation of the grounds will, provided the demands upon the state revenue from other directions are not too burdensome, be brought about within five or six years.

Members of the state fair commission, recently appointed by Governor Charles E. Hughes under an amendment to the state fair act, declare that the exhibition in September will in all respects be the greatest ever held under the name of the state, and it must be considered that there has been a state fair annually since 1840, although it is only during the past eleven years that it has been directly in the control of the state. Never before has there been the interest manifested by exhibitors. Months ago all of the space in the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts building was allotted, and an idea of the demand may be gained from the knowledge that the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts building has more floor space than Madison Square Garden, New York city.

Every square foot of space out of doors available for exhibitors will be taken, and the display of farming and other machinery will be the finest ever seen in the state. The classes for horses, cattle, sheep and swine have record entries, and the competition will show a healthy condition of the breeding industry. The plans for the dairy, domestic, fruit and flower features tell important in the chain of grand circuit meetings, extending from the western states to New England and then to Lexington in the south, will attract the leading campaigners of light harness horses in the country, and the races will bring out the greatest trotters and pacers of the year.

One of Glenn H. Curtiss' aeroplanes will be seen in daily flights over the fair grounds. It will be the first appearance of a heavier than air machine at the fair. Daring aviators will give trials and speed and exhibitions of soaring, diving and altitude climbing. The automobile races on Saturday of the fair will bring out the fast away, but its growth did not become rapid until six years ago. It had been possible by that time to put a system of management in smooth working order, and New Yorkers had come to realize what a state fair really meant to them. The gradual increase in attendance, the variety and character of exhibits and the favor with which special attractions were received no longer left any doubt about the future of New York's annual exposition. When this year it would appear the Empire State is to have the greatest fair it is fitting that it should be opened by the president of the United States.

PRESIDENT TAFT AND MANUFACTURERS' AND LIBERAL ARTS BUILDING, STATE FAIR.

of a growing interest in these departments of the fair.

The preparations for special features for the entertainment of the crowds were never on as elaborate a scale. The race meeting, one of the most important motorcars in the country of both American and foreign manufacture. The attractions as a whole surpass anything ever arranged for any state fair in the country, which furnishes a basis for the feeling in the commission that all attendance records will be broken.

The largest attendance at a New York state fair was that of last year, when during the six days 183,000 people passed the turnstiles. This bettered the best previous mark by 20,000. This year, the prophecy goes out, the figures will climb to over 200,000, which will mean a good sized surplus for the state treasury and speedier action probably by the legislature toward the completion of the permanent plant. In consideration of the remarkable growth and development of the fair in recent years, its history is interesting. Up to eleven years ago, when the legislature went to the assistance of the fair, it had been managed by an agricultural society. Promoted since 1840, it had always been dependent upon the state, to which it looked annually for help. For many years the fair, little more than a country agricultural show, was moved about to different sections of the state until 1889, when Syracuse offered it a permanent home just outside of the corporate limits of the city. Under the system of management the State Agricultural society conducted the exhibition with the help of the state and turned the profits into the improvement of the grounds.

Even after securing an ideal location at Syracuse, the geographical center of the state, where it has the Lackawanna railroad on one side and the West Shore on the other, the growth did not come up to the expectations of those who believed the fair had a right to a place with the fairs of western states which cannot boast of the breeding and agricultural interests of New York, so eleven years ago the state was asked to take over the fair plant, to place the management with a commission and to make it a fair such as the people of the Empire State had a right to expect.

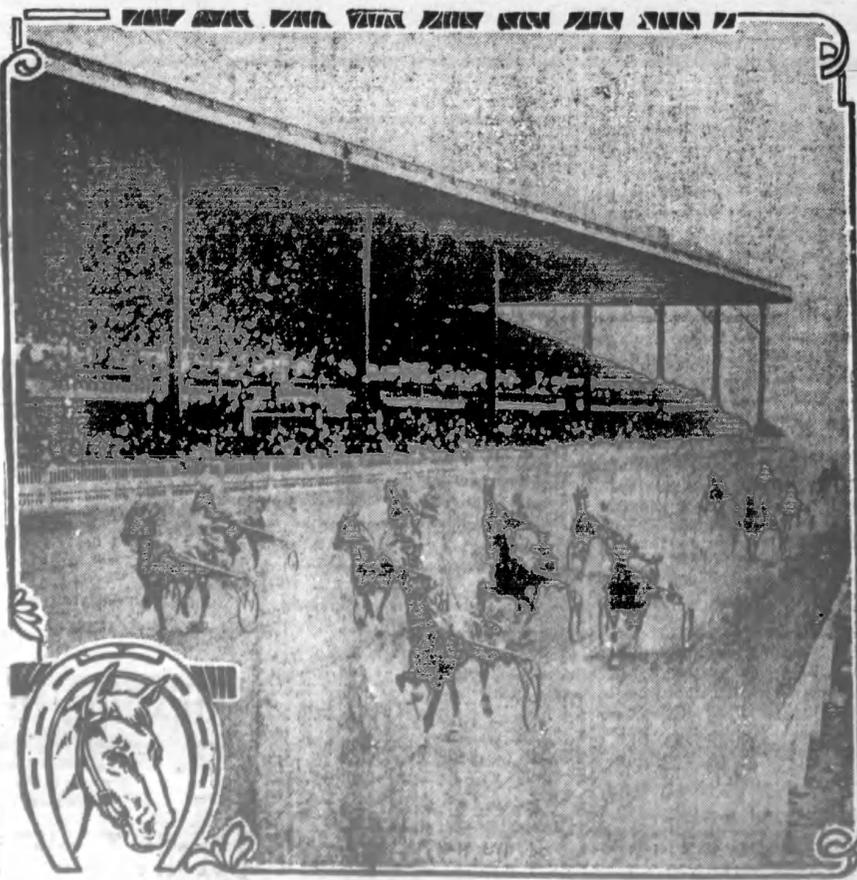

The fair showed new life right

CONCERTS AT THE FAIR.

Arthur Pryor's Famous Company Will Be Heard Daily.

Arthur Pryor and his American band, which have entertained the most critical audiences of all of the large cities of the United States, will contribute a pleasing feature of the New York state fair. Band concerts will be given daily at the Empire State court, the programs opening at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and in the paddock during the races in the afternoon. They promise rare treats for music lovers.

Mr. Pryor is recognized as a leader of exceptional ability, and he has surrounded himself with some of the ablest musicians in the country. The programs will include many of the leader's own compositions, which have delighted audiences at Asbury Park and other seashore resorts this summer. The selections will range from the heavy classical to the extremely popular, and the tastes of all will be satisfied.

A CALL LOAN.

Tale of Chaparral Banking and a Near Train Holdup.

By O. HENRY.

[Copyright, 1907, by the McClure company.]

In those days the cattlemen were the anointed. They were the grandees of the grass, kings of the kine, lords of the lea, barons of beef and bone. They might have ridden in golden chariots had their tastes so inclined. The cattleman was caught in a stampede of dollars. It seemed to him that he had more money than was decent. But when he had bought a watch with precious stones set in the case so large that they hurt his ribs and a California saddle with silver nails and Anglo skin suaderos and ordered every body up to the bar for whisky—what else was there for him to spend money for?

Not so circumscribed in expedient for the reduction of surplus wealth were those lairds of the larlat who had women folk to their name. In the breast of the rib sprung sex the genius of purse lightning may slumber through years of inopportunities, but never, my brothers, does it become extinct.

So out of the chaparral came Long Bill Longley from the Bar Circle branch on the Rio—a wife driven man—to taste the urban joys of success. Something like half a million dollars he had, with an income steadily increasing.

Long Bill was a graduate of the camp and trail. Luck and thrift, a cool head and a telescopic eye for mavericks had raised him from cowboy to be a cowman. Then came the boom in cattle, and Fortune, stepping gingerly among the cactus thorns, came and emptied her cornucopia at the doorstep of the ranch.

In the little frontier city of Chaparrosa Longley built a costly residence. Here he became a captive, bound to the chariot of social existence. He was doomed to become a leading citizen. He struggled for a time like a mustang in his first corral, and then he hung up his quirt and spurs. Time hung heavily on his hands. He organized the First National bank of Chaparrosa and was elected its president.

One day a dyspeptic man, wearing double magnifying glasses, inserted an official looking card between the bars of the cashier's window of the First National bank. Five minutes later the bank force was dancing at the beck and call of a national bank examiner.

This examiner, Mr. J. Edgar Todd, proved to be a thorough one.

At the end of it all the examiner put on his hat and called the president, Mr. William R. Longley, into the private office.

"Well, how do you find things?" asked Longley in his slow, deep tones. "Any brands in the roundup you didn't like the looks of?"

"The bank checks up all right, Mr. Longley," said Todd, "and I find your loans in very good shape, with one exception. You are carrying one very bad bit of paper, one that is so bad that I have been thinking that you surely do not realize the serious position it places you in. I refer to a call loan of $10,000 made to Thomas Merwin. Not only is the amount in excess of the maximum sum the bank can loan any individual legally, but it is absolutely without indorsement or security. Thus you have doubly violated the national banking laws and have laid yourself open to criminal prosecution by the government. A report of the matter to the comptroller of the currency—which I am bound to make—would, I am sure, result in the matter being turned over to the department of justice for action. You see what a serious thing it is."

Bill Longley was leaning his lengthy, slowly moving frame back in his swivel chair. His hands were clasped behind his head, and he turned a little to look the examiner in the face. The examiner was surprised to see a smile creep about the rugged mouth of the banker and a kindly twinkle in his light blue eyes. If he saw the seriousness of the affair it did not show in his countenance.

"Of course you don't know Tom Merwin," said Longley almost genially. "Yes, I know about that loan. It wasn't any security except Tom Merwin's word. Somehow I've always found that when a man's word is good it's the best security there is. Oh, yes, I know the government doesn't think so. I guess I'll see Tom about that note."

Mr. Todd's dyspepsia seemed to grow suddenly worse. He looked at the chaparral banker through his double magnifying glasses in amazement.

"You see," said Longley, easily explaining the thing away, "Tom heard of 2,000 head of two-year-olds down near Rockyford, on the Rio Grande, that could be had for $8 a head. I reckon 'twas one of old Leandro Garcia's outfits that he had snuggled over, and he wanted to make a quick turn on 'em. Those cattle are worth $15 on the hoof in Kansas City. Tom knew it, and I knew it. He had $6,000, and I let him have the $10,000 to make the deal with. His brother Ed took 'em on to market three weeks ago. He ought to be back most any day now with the money. When he comes Tom'll pay that note."

The bank examiner was shocked. It was perhaps his duty to step out to the telegraph office and wire the situation to the comptroller. But he did not. He talked pointedly and effectively to Longley for three minutes. He succeeded in making the banker understand that he stood upon the border of a catastrophe, and then he offered a tiny loophole of escape.

"I am going to Hilldale's tonight," he told Longley, "to examine a bank there. I will pass through Chaparrosa on my way back. At 12 o'clock tomorrow I shall call at this bank. If this loan has been cleared out of the way by that time it will not be mentioned in my report. If not I will have to do my duty."

With that the examiner bowed and departed.

The president of the First National lounged in his chair half an hour longer, and then he lit a mild cigar and went over to Tom Merwin's house. Merwin, a ranchman in brown duck, with a contemplative eye, sat with his feet upon a table, plaiting a rawhide quirt.

"Tom," said Longley, leaning against the table, "you heard anything from Ed yet?"

"Not yet," said Merwin, continuing his plaiting. "I guess Ed'll be along back now in a few days."

"There was a bank examiner," said Longley, "nosing around our place today, and he backed a sight about that note of yours. You know I know it's all right, but the thing is against the banking laws. I was pretty sure you'd have paid it off before the bank was examined again, but the son of a gun slipped in on us. Tom, I'm short of cash myself just now, or I'd let you have the money to take it up with. I've got till 12 o'clock tomorrow, and then I've got to show the cash in place of that note or—"

"Or what, Bill?" asked Merwin, as Longley hesitated.

"Well, I suppose it means he's jumped on with both of Uncle Sam's feet."

"I'll try to raise the money for you on time," said Merwin, interested in his plaiting.

"All right, Tom," concluded Longley as he turned toward the door. "I knew you would if you could."

Merwin threw down his whip and went to the only other bank in town, a private one run by Cooper & Craig.

"Cooper," he said to the partner by that name, "I've got to have $10,000 today or tomorrow. I've got a house and lot here that's worth about $6,000, and that's all the actual collateral."

HE WAS LIFTED FROM HIS FEET AND THROWN FACE DOWNWARD.

But I've got a cattle deal on that's sure to bring me in more than that much profit within a few days."

Cooper began to cough.

"Now, for God's sake don't say no," said Merwin. "I owe that much money on a call loan. It's been called, and the man that called it is a man I've lain on the same blanket with in cow camps and ranger camps for ten years. He can call anything I've got. He can call the blood out of my veins and it'll come. He's got to have the money. He's in a devil of a—well, he needs the money, and I've got to get it for him. You know my word's good, Cooper."

"No doubt of it," assented Cooper urbanely, "but I've a partner, you know. I'm not free in making loans. And even if you had the best security in your hands, Merwin, we couldn't accommodate you in less than a week.

We're just making a shipment of $15,000 to Myer Bros. in Rockdell, to buy cotton with. It goes down on the narrow gauge tonight. That leaves our cash quite short at present. Sorry we can't arrange it for you."

Merwin went back to his little bare office and plaited at his quirt again. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon he went to the First National and leaned over the railing of Longley's desk.

"I'll try to get that money for you tonight—I mean tomorrow, Bill."

"All right, Tom," said Longley quietly.

At 9 o'clock that night Tom Merwin stepped cautiously out of the small frame house in which he lived. It was near the edge of the little town, and few citizens were in the neighborhood at that hour. Merwin wore two six-shooters in a belt and a slouch hat.

"WHAT'S THE WORD, ED?" GASPED MERWIN.

He moved swiftly down a lonely street and then followed the sandy road that ran parallel to the narrow gauge track until he reached the water tank, two miles below the town. There Tom Merwin stopped, tied a black silk handkerchief about the lower part of his face and pulled his hat down low.

In ten minutes the night train for Rockdell pulled up at the tank, having come from Chaparrosa.

With a gun in each hand Merwin raised himself from behind a clump of chaparral and started for the engine. But before he had taken three steps two long, strong arms clasped him from behind, and he was lifted from his feet and thrown, face downward, upon the grass. There was a heavy knee pressing against his back and an iron hand grasping each of his wrists. He was held thus, like a child, until the engine had taken water and until the train had moved with accelerating speed out of sight. Then he was released and rose to his feet to face Bill Longley.

"The case never needed to be fixed up this way, Tom," said Longley. "I saw Cooper this evening, and he told me what you and him talked about. Then I went down to your house tonight and saw you come out with your guns on, and I followed you. Let's go back, Tom."

"They walked away together side by side."

"'Twas the only chance I saw," said Merwin presently. "You called your loan, and I tried to answer you. Now what'll you do, Bill, if they sock it to you?"

"What would you have done if they'd socked it to you?" was the answer Longley made.

"I never thought I'd lay in a bush to stick up a train," remarked Merwin, "but a call loan's different. A call's a call with me. We've got twelve hours yet, Bill, before this spy jumps on to you. We've got to raise them spondulicks somehow. Maybe we can—Great Sam Houston! Do you hear that?"

Merwin broke into a run, and Longley kept with him, hearing only a rather pleasing whistle somewhere in the night rendering the ingubrious air of "The Cowboy's Lament."

"It's the only tune he knows!" shouted Merwin as he ran. "I'll bet—"

They were at the door of Merwin's house. He kicked it open and fell over an old valise lying in the middle of the floor. A subburned, firm jawed youth, stained by travel, lay upon the bed puffing at a brown cigarette.

"What's the word, Ed?" gasped Merwin.

"So so," drawled that capable youngster. "Just got in on the 9:30. Sold the bunch for fifteen straight. Now, buddy, you want to quit kickin' a valise around that's got $20,000 in greenbacks in its in'ards."

Ironclad Warships.

The idea of the ironclad warship is at least as old as the reign of Napoleon. It was suggested to Napoleon, patented in this country during the war of 1812 and suggested again later to the French government, but in each case failed to receive recognition. At the beginning of the Mexican war successful experiments were made with it under the auspices of the United States government, but again the matter was, strangely enough, allowed to drop. Shortly afterward, however, the French government finally took up the idea, and French ironclads in the Crimean war did good service against the Russian forts. But the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimack was the first real encounter between real ironclad ships.—New York American.

Another Kind of Walk.

Ethel did not rush into his arms and cry "Oh, Cuthbert!" as usual. When he was ushered into the drawing room she gave him the frigid eye, and the gas was kept on at full pressure.

"I've been studying pedomaney, Cuthbert," she announced.

"Pedomaney, pet?"

"Divination by the feet," she explained. "Feet that incline to fatness are a sign of meanness, Cuthbert."

Cuthbert looked down at his No. 10 tans and sighed.

"A hurried yet silent walk," she continued, "is indicative of criminal instincts. Your walk is so hurried, so noiseless, Cuthbert."

"You are speaking of only one of my styles of walking, Ethel," he answered brightly. "I have another. I used it this afternoon to walk into a jeweler's shop and buy a $150 engagement ring that I had hoped"—

"Oh, Cuthbert!" she cried, and the next minute the pedomaney expert and a splay footed youth were crowded into one saddlebag chair, and the gas was turned down into a little blue bubble.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Dumas' Wealth and Poverty.

Alexandre Dumas' rise to wealth and luxury was almost as marvelous as that of his most celebrated hero. He built a magnificent chateau, which he named Monte Christo. There he entertained all comers, friend and stranger alike, with more than oriental magnificence and sometimes with oriental mystery. His purse was open to all who sought it, and the day came when he experienced Timon's fate without acquiring Timon's disposition. He could not become a misanthrope, though his fortune disappeared almost as suddenly as it came, and then he learned the ingratitude of men. His last days were passed not in poverty, but in narrow circumstances. He left Paris in the fall of 1870 just as the German army was closing in to besiege it and when France was feeling its deepest woe. To the last he preserved his gaiety and youthful spirit. "I had but one napoleon in my pocket when I first came here," he said. "I go away with two, and yet they call me a spendthrift!"

Vary Devout.

A new parson was presented to a living in a remote agricultural district and was anxious to make himself at home with his flock as soon as possible. He therefore began his pastoral calls at once. Among the first recipients of these attentions was Farmer Jones, whose family the new parson had noticed to be very regular and apparently very devout attendants at church. Farmer Jones was out, but his wife received the parson, when the following dialogue took place: "I am your new rector, Mrs. Jones. I have noticed with great pleasure your regular attendance at church and have lost a little time as possible, you see, in calling and improving our acquaintance." "Yes, sir," replied Mrs. Jones; "we're 'bliged to be regular at church, for if we didn't go Farmer Smith claims that pew, and we're not goin' to give it up for the likes of him. So my son Peter stands at the door half an hour before service begins to keep 'im out."—Liverpool Mercury.

Big Hats in Colonial Days.

The question of high hats at public places was of some moment, even in colonial days. In 1769 the church at Andover, Mass., put it to vote whether "the parish disapprove of the female sex sitting with their hats on in the meeting house in time of divine service as being indecent." In the town of Abington in 1774 it was voted that it was "an indecent way with the female sex to sit with their hats and bonnets on in worshipping God." Still another town voted that it was the "town's mind" that the women should take their bonnets off in meeting and hang them on the pews.

Too Costly.

King George II. once wished to add the Green park, in London, to his palace grounds, whether the people liked it or not. He inquired of his minister as to the cost.

His lordship, mindful of the general discontent then prevalent, answered: "The cost, sir? Oh, it would be a matter of three crowns!"

The king took the hint. The people kept their park and the sovereign his triple throne.

Merciful.

Mrs. A.—I do love lobsters, but I never have them at home because it seems so inhuman to kill them by putting them in a kettle of boiling water. Mrs. B.—Gracious! I never kill them that way—it would be too horrible. I always put them on in cold water and let them come to a boil.—Boston Transcript.

No Satisfying Her.

"Women are hard to understand." "Think so?" "Yes; I told her she carried her age well, and she was offended." "You don't say?" "Yes, and then I told her she didn't carry it well, and she wouldn't speak."—Philadelphia Record.

HINTS ON SAFE BATHING.

How to Overcome Dangers in Fresh and Salt Water.

The great majority of the accidents in connection with bathing are due to readily preventable causes and are often entirely the result of gross carelessness or gross ignorance.

Take, for example, one of the most dreaded causes of bathing accidents and fatalities—the cramp. Now, cramp, as a rule, is merely the result of indigestion, and it has been brought on in the water owing to the fact that the bather has rushed off almost immediately after a meal, and the violent exercise, combined with the shock of the plunge into cold water, produces the indigestion, which in turn produces cramp.

Even when cramp manifests itself it often happens that it is not cramp which drowns the bather, but his loss of presence of mind. As long as you keep your head above water and do not swallow deep drafts of it you are all right. With regard to cramp, if you are near shore strike out for it boldly, whatever the pain. If the cramp is in the arms turn over on your back and kick yourself ashore with your legs. If, however, the legs are seized with cramp—and this is usually the case, but only one leg is usually affected at a time—then turn on your back, bend your toes upward, kick out the cramped leg as hard as you can and with one hand rub the cramped spot, usually the calf, as hard as ever you can.

Above all, never mind the pain, but work the leg for all you are worth, and do not lose confidence and start drinking pints of water. This cure has often been effected in the water by an expert swimmer.

Another common danger of bathing comes from strong tides or high waves, and in nearly every accident the bather has taken improper risks. It cannot be too strongly impressed on even good swimmers that to swim out on a falling tide is a most risky performance. If you are accompanied by a boat, well and good, but if not the tide has a trick of getting stronger as the water deepens, and the difficulty of returning increases every yard you swim.

As to those who cannot swim or who can swim only a few strokes, an old and expert swimmer's advice is that one should never, even in calm weather, go out up to the armpits and play about at that depth. The slightest motion of the water at that depth will carry you off your legs and as often as not into deeper water. On a shelving shore the weight of the body will be naturally thrown forward into deeper water. Such persons should never wade out deeper than their chests, and then they should immediately turn around, face to the shore and strike out for it.

It is really quite easy to propel yourself toward the shore even if you cannot swim. In many cases the act of throwing your body forward will place you in safety, and if at the same time you scoop the water toward you with hollowed hands you may cover in three seconds some seven or eight feet. If at the same time you give a vigorous kick with your legs—with both legs, if possible—you will move a considerable distance before you suffer your first immersion. But the chief thing to remember is that you should turn toward the shore the moment the water comes up to your chest and in no case go out even to that depth when the water is rough.

Again, you should never bathe, if in the least delicate, upon an empty stomach before breakfast. The ideal time is between two and three hours after that meal, when your food is fairly well digested.

Yet another serious risk which is common to all who bathe in rivers is danger from weeds. If you should find your legs entangled in weeds—a most dangerous situation, which is rendered more dangerous because of its effect on the mind—remember this: The only way to rid yourself of weeds is to stretch your body and legs out quietly as flat as you can, pull the water to you with hollowed hands and at the same time make several very short but rapid strokes with your legs. The combined effect of this action is almost always to free you from the weeds.

Above all, learn at once to float. It will get you out of many a difficulty. Given these precautions, ninety-nine people out of every hundred can bathe in warm weather with safety and benefit.

How to Enamel Pantry Shelves.

An excellent idea for pantry shelves is to give them two coats of ordinary white paint and then a third finishing coat of white enamel. As soon as the enamel dries wash it over with cold water, and then it will harden quickly. Do not cover these shelves with paper, but leave them bare and notice the improvement. As there are no covers under which crumbs, etc., can collect, there is nothing to encourage mice, and the enamel is easily wiped clean with a damp cloth.

How to Keep Kitchen Walls Clean.

The best way to keep the walls of the kitchen white and glossy is to wash their painted surface with bran water instead of soap. Boil one pint of bran in a gallon of water for an hour. The paint will look better and keep clean longer when washed with this than when cleaned with soap or water.

How to Kill Dandelions.

It is said that the following is a sure remedy for killing dandelions, which always grow in the spring and spoil pretty green lawns: Fill a medicine dropper with gasoline and apply a few drops to the center of each plant.

CARE OF THE JEWEL CASE.

How to Clean and Brighten Real and Artificial Stones.

Prepared chalk is the best all round cleanser for jewelry of all descriptions. A small box of the chalk is, as a matter of fact, as important in the dressing case as a clean chamolite leather, with which silver buttons and buckles can be brightened. An excellent method of combining the two is that of enclosing the block of chalk in a leather bag drawn around the neck with a tape, which can be used both to keep it intact and to act as a polisher.

For gold chains there is nothing to equal a paste made of chalk and methylated spirit, while a fine brush must be used after the paste has dried on so as to clear it of powder and give a brilliant polish. Benzine is sometimes employed by jewelers in cleaning precious stones. It should not, of course, be allowed to touch pearls or even turquoises, moonstones, or opals, all of which require the greatest care in their treatment and are the first to show signs of neglect.

In the case of diamonds, sapphires, rubies and emeralds the benzine treatment may be tried, however, provided great care is observed, as benzine fumes are very inflammable.

The rings, if set into claw settings and other small items, should be collected and laid to soak in a little benzine, after which the jewels should be washed in ordinary soap and water, rinsed in cold water and finally placed on a cloth to drain. Experts further dip the jewels in alcohol, so as to evaporate the remaining water, damp of any description being certain to dull the surface of the newly cleaned stone.

To keep jewelry in sawdust is the very best method of obviating the constant cleaning which would otherwise be necessary, and it is an excellent plan to keep a small bag made of chamolite leather in the dressing case, filling it with sawdust and using it to hold all brooches, earrings and rings which are not actually in daily use.

It is not, however, only real jewels which put a tax on time and patience when away from home. The many secondary gems which are used for buckles, earrings and chains, as well as the hatpins, which seem to get more and more ornate every day, require even greater attention. Old paste is best cleaned with dry prepared chalk. The same treatment agrees also with such stones as peridots or marquisite. It is never advisable to allow imitation stones to become wet, while a damp paste, moreover, which in some cases would do no harm to the gem itself, might loosen the setting.

CLEANING OF FURS.

How It Can Be Done by the Use of Simple Remedies.

Ermine and miniver are best cleaned with soft flannel. Rub the fur well against the grain, then dip the flannel into common flour and rub the fur until clean; shake the fur and again rub it with a fresh piece of soft, clean, new flannel till the flour is out. By this process the color of the ermine is preserved, and the lining need not be removed. Sable, chinchilla, squirrel, etc., are cleaned with new bran, which must be warmed very carefully in a pan, but not burnt; therefore while waiting stir it frequently. Rub the warm bran into the fur for some time, shake it and brush until free from bran. The fur will clean better if the stuffing and lining are removed and the article laid as straight and flat as possible on a table or board.

Well brush the fur before it is cleaned, and if there are any moth eaten parts they must be removed and replaced with new pieces. The following method is said to be adopted in Russia: Some rye flour is put into a pan upon the stove and heated, being stirred constantly with the hand as long as the heat can be borne. Then the flour is spread all over the fur and rubbed in well. It is then brushed gently with a very clean brush or beaten softly till all the flour is removed. It is claimed that this method will make the fur appear almost new.

How to Keep Fingers Smooth.

The bane of the average sewer or embroiderer is the roughened first finger. This is particularly trying when one is using embroidery silks which catch and roughen easily. To keep the hands in good condition wash them carefully before beginning work and rub off all roughness with a fine pumice stone. Then wash off with a little acetic acid, which can be bought at any drug store. If this is not at hand a good cider vinegar answers the same purpose and makes the skin soft and smooth.

How to Wash Ruchings.

Put the ruching in a wide mouthed bottle or jar and cover with gasoline. Shake and let it set about two hours. Shake thoroughly and pour off the gasoline, rubbing a little between the hands if necessary. If a little stiffness is desired, rinse in clear water to which a spoonful of sugar has been added and dry without wringing.

How to Clean Net.

To clean delicate net yokes and waists make a thick paste of flour and gasoline. Use the paste with a small stiff brush and rub well. Leave a thick coating of the paste on to dry. When the gasoline has evaporated the flour will brush out, leaving the net clean and white.

How to Can Corn.

To eight pints of corn cut from the cob put one pint of salt. Cover with water, heat thoroughly and can with water to cover corn. Put sugar to it before it goes to the table, as it improves it.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

A good deed for the sake of getting your name in the paper is not Christian charity.—Rev. W. H. Day, Congregationalist, Los Angeles, Cal.

Barrenness.

We shall mend our barrenness only when we get into the thought of God's presence in all our life.—Rev. Dr. B. L. Whitman, Baptist, Seattle, Wash.

Our Business.

Your business is not to make a living, but to live a life. You should do a man's work and build up a manly character.—Rev. C. L. Mead, Methodist, Newark, N. J.

God's Desire.

The thing that God wants us to do is to stand as representatives of him and realize that what he would do we can do by the aid of his power in and through our lives.—Rev. D. W. Bartlett, Baptist, Los Angeles, Cal.

Type of Heaven.

Home is a type of heaven and should be the sweetest, purest and most beautiful place on earth. The cheeriest word, the kindest act and the happiest spirit should ever characterize the home.—Rev. Zed H. Copp, Presbyterian, Washington.

The Way Onward.

The way onward is through inward growth. Deal so manfully and grandly with the place you now hold that men are compelled to see that you are too large for it. Then the world will seek you for its higher work.—Rev. C. E. St. John, Unitarian, Philadelphia.

Character and Destiny.

If God does not change, if human instincts do not fall, if nature's laws are not reversed, then will man because he is man live forever, as he chooses, at the right hand of God or in the regions of despair. His character will determine his destiny.—Rev. Dr. Luce, Methodist Episcopal, Cleveland.

Effort.

Nothing is accomplished without effort in the physical world, and the same holds true in the supernatural world. As we labor to provide the food and drink to nourish our earthly bodies, so we must strive to be worthy of the spiritual food, which is Christ Himself.—Rev. G. F. Seymour, Episcopalian, Chicago.

Most Effective Prayer.

All our prayers and good works should begin with a prayer of thanksgiving to God. A prayer of thanksgiving is the most effective prayer. It is only just, meet, right and proper at all times to give thanks to God. Do not complain, grumble or find fault with things. Be thankful for everything.—Cardinal Gibbons, Roman Catholic, Baltimore.

The Man Who Has a Creed.

The truth is a man's character is no bigger and no better than his creed, for information makes his knowledge, and knowledge makes his experience. As his experience grows his creed grows larger. The dwarf knows no creed and wants none. It is the growing man who has a creed. The best Christian believes most because he has experienced most.—Rev. W. A. Matthews, Baptist, Chicago.

Life at Its Worst is Worth While.

Our pain and sorrow have a redemptive effect, and the end is not yet. The world bows in homage at the feet of the sufferers whom history has crowned. In the midst of it all there rises the shadow of a cross, and beneath that cross of Jesus we learn that, though the battle is sore, victory is sure. We learn there that life at its worst is worth while and feel there the throbs of immortality.—Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, Presbyterian, Chicago.

Men the World Needs.

The man who is to be a leader of his fellow men, who is to make his presence felt for right in this world, must emancipate himself from the bondage of public opinion. The follow-the-leader policy so much in vogue in present day life is unwholesome and harmful and hinders greatly the progress of the world. All of the great reforms of history have been started and frequently completed by noted egotists. Men who have convictions and are willing to stand up for them regardless of public opinion and sayings directed against them by clever people are the kind the world needs.—Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, Congregationalist, Chicago.

Need of Religious Teaching.

The United States census shows that from 1890 to 1906 there has been a most encouraging and healthy growth in the Episcopal church and in all of the older religious sects. Many of the small sects in that time have disappeared, while the increase of our church has been at least 67.50 per cent. I have real regard for the Roman Catholic church body, especially for the wonderful energy shown by it. In the sixteen years covered by the census that body has shown an increase of 6,000,000 members or 93.6 per cent. That is an interesting statement. Do you realize that the parochial schools which are fostered by this church are the biggest factors in this growth? In New York city alone the Roman Catholic church has parochial schools that have an aggregate of 100,000 pupils. There the children are taught the Christian truths as they have been received by the Roman Catholic church. We are forced to realize that the real educational force is the teaching of these truths, and all education must include religious teaching. Our church would do well to establish such schools, and I hope that we may soon see the establishment of parochial schools. The children in the Roman Catholic schools learn loyalty to their religion and affection for their teachers. The public schools are a drawback to religion, as they give no religious teaching.—Bishop Frederick Burgess of Long Island Diocese of Episcopal Church.

THE FAMOUS PREACHER OF THE CITY OF CHURCHES.

Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle---America's Ubiquitous Preacher---His Remarkable Foreign Tour and His Return. Comments of Foreign Journals on His Work.

From the London (England) Christian Globe, May 5, 1910.]

SINCE the days of Henry Ward Beecher and Dr. Talmage no preacher has occupied so prominent a position in the United States of America as Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, New York. He will in addition visit during the next three weeks the principal cities and towns in England, Scotland and Ireland. Like Beecher and Talmage, both of whom he has succeeded, Pastor Russell is an independent teacher, not allied to any particular denomination or organization, giving his time, his

PASTOR RUSSELL SPEAKING IN ROYAL ALBERT HALL.

The Royal Albert hall, London, England, is the largest and finest auditorium in the world. It was here that Pastor Russell delivered his now famous remarks of consolation and comfort to the bereaved royal family of the late King Edward VII. Pastor Russell was the principal speaker in the three Royal Albert hall 1910 Sunday May meetings of the International Bible Students' Association held May 8, 15 and 22 respectively. His opening remarks on the Sunday evening following the death of King Edward VII. were well received by the British public, being carried on and published by the various leading papers in New York city. During his European tour the principal London and New York newspapers made very favorable comments concerning Pastor Russell and his work.

Brooklyn Tabernacle holds today. Now we on this side of the Atlantic are to be privileged to listen to the man the announcement of whose name fills overflowing the largest halls in the United States. Pastor Russell will be the principal proved that on some points it has been misunderstood by both friends and foes. In his search for a basis upon which to build his hope for future bliss he undertook a lengthy investigation of the claims of Confucius, Mohammed, Buddha and other founders of religion. These he found to be unsatisfactory to either heart or head. Almost without hope, he took up the systematic study of the question of the punishment for sin. His findings were such as to restore perfect confidence in the Bible as God's inspired word and revelation.

Over 600 leading American newspapers now publish Pastor Russell's sermons weekly, reaching approximately 10,000,000 homes. He is also author of works entitled "Studies in the Scriptures," over 5,000,000 volumes being in the hands of readers. The sixth million is now in the press. This is a remarkable testimony to the popularity of his writings. Pastor Russell is now on his way to London, having just revisited the pyramids and Palestine. It is expected that his recent investigations will have much to do in still further unsealing the mysteries which for centuries have been kept secret by that "Stone Witness," The Great Pyramid is the subject of an important chapter in one of his books, in which he makes some most interesting applications of the published measurements made by the late Piazzi Smyth, formerly astronomer royal for Scotland. Dr. John Edgar within the last year has verified all of Professor Smyth's measurements, which have been used by Mr. Russell. The return of the Jews to their promised land, as prophesied in the Scriptures, has been elaborately treated by Mr. Russell, and he will now be in position to speak with added knowledge regarding the work of the Zionists.

Will Carry the Gospel to Sailors of New York on Gift Yacht.

[From the New York Evening Journal, June 4, 1910.]

Pastor Russell of the Peoples Pulpit Association today declared that he would use the yacht Angel, presented to him by his association, to carry the gospel to the sailors of New York harbor, and, although complete arrangements have not been made for the work, he said there was no reason for questioning the efficacy of his plan.

"I have in my plans," he said, "one to make a mission boat of the Angel, preaching the gospel every night of the week in a different language, carrying the Word to sailors of all nations."

"A practical plan would be to moor the yacht at different points nightly and advertise meetings for sailors. Sermons could be in English, German, Swedish, Italian and the tongues of other seafaring nations." The Angel is 125 feet over all and uses both sails and naphtha. Seventy persons can find accommodations in her cabin and more on her deck during fair weather. Pastor Russell accepted the Angel, he said, not for himself, but as a trustee for the association.

THE ANGEL, YACHT TO BE USED IN MISSION WORK.

WHAT IS MEANT BY HIGH LICENSE?

Haman offered the king 10,000 talents of silver for the privilege of killing off the Jews. This would be equal to $5,383,000 in our money. That is high license in earnest; but Haman was willing to pay it, and rummies are willing to pay it, if they can be permitted to carry on their work of death undisturbed.

What is high license? The payment of a large sum of money for the privilege of committing a great crime. It implies copartnership with the rogues of the nation, for the purpose of flooding the land with ignorance, misery, poverty and crime.

Haman's high license was the price of blood—and what is a liquor license but the price of blood? It is blood money, and represents heart-aches, hunger, disease, delirium. Why not license other crimes? Why not license theft and forgery? Why not put a tax on castor-oil, and when your friends come to see you invite them to have a drink of oil? Why not license the spread of eczema? Why not have an itch excise board in every school district, and conclude that inasmuch as the children will have the itch anyway, license a few of the best children—those of "good moral character"—for a specific sum, to give the itch to every child they possibly can. Whip the children for scratching. The harder they scratch, the harder the whip.

When the itch spreads too fast put a higher tax on those who peddle it. This is what the license system is doing with something infinitely worse than the itch. We license men to peddle drunkenness and when men get too drunk lock them up. The punishment comes on the wrong man. By one law we make drunkards, by another we imprison them. By one law we send a man into the ditch, and by another send a patrol wagon and policeman after him. If you are going to send policemen after the helpless drunkard, why not send them after the man who made him drunk? He is protected by his license, isn't he. And the drunkard is protected behind prison walls! Why not give saloonists a little of the protection that is so beneficial to the drunkard? But where does the protection for the wife and children come in? License means continued existence; license means life. Prohibition means death. License is personal liberty for crime. Prohibition, civil liberty against crime.

Haman's high license appealed to the cupidity of the king. The whole license system is based on love of gold. Uncle Sam wants revenue, politicians want money and votes, and the drinking places furnish both. Rum-sellers want gold, and gold they will have, though it crushes the life out of its victims, and brings untold suffering upon the women and children.

How Much Should the License Be? "Gentlemen, as business men, when we have anything to sell, we first ascertain its cost to us, and upon that estimate our profit, and the addition of the two will tell us what we should sell for. You, gentlemen, are discussing among other things in this bill the price of a license, and wisdom would dictate that you first ascertain its cost to the commonwealth, and then you can form an intelligent judgment of what you should obtain for the same. Statistics show that there is expended in the United States $900,000,000 yearly, directly for strong drink, and equal sum indirectly to take care of the victims of the traffic, making a total of $180,000,000 a year. Now, if we divide this amount by 180,000, the number of saloons in the country, we have $10,000 as the cost of every saloon and consequently of every license. You can not accept a less sum than that without conducting your business at a loss."—H. Clay Bascom before the Committee at Albany, N. Y., in reference to a License Law.

An Injury to Business. The saloon injures the business prosperity of the country. There was a great cry a few years ago of "over-production"; but the real cause was under-consumption. Men who spend the greater part of their wages for liquor cannot buy clothing, boots, shoes, household goods and luxuries. Hence the more liquor is sold, the less of groceries, dry goods, clothing, furniture, etc. Hence in this way the saloon injures every legitimate business. The prohibition of this traffic would mean a great increase in every business except the saloon business.

Value of Definite Study. Definite study of the relation of saloons to order and to government is about to do more for regulation and temperance than could ever be done by a Prohibition party relying only on abstract moral doctrines.

Loss in Labor. The saloon reduces the wealth of our country by incapacitating men for labor. Drunkards are unable to do much work, and that is a material loss to the country.

PASTOR RUSSELL IN CHARACTERISTIC ATTITUDE.

A MISSIONARY SCHOONER.

One Was Presented to Pastor Russell For Harbor Work.
[From the New York Times, June 4, 1910.]
The Rev. C. T. Russell of Brooklyn received a surprise on his arrival on the Cunard liner Lusitania yesterday. His friends presented to him a two masted schooner for missionary work in and about this port.
They not only gave him the receipt for the craft, but she was waiting alongside the Cunard pier with many flags flying as a welcome to her new owner. From one mast to another was strung a long canvas bearing the inscription "God is Love" and the name of the schooner, the Angel. There were other inscriptions of a religious character waving in the wind.

BACK FROM PALESTINE.

Pastor Russell's Return From Visiting Holy Land and Egypt.
[From N. Y. Herald, Sunday, June 5, 1910.]
Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle has returned from a trip to the Holy Land and Egypt and will address the public today at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Mr. Russell has certain interesting ideas regarding the Great Pyramid and its symbolic teaching and believes the time is at hand for the return of Israel to Palestine. He is a very pronounced believer in the Zionist movement.
The present is the second visit to the Pyramid and to Palestine, the land once Israel's. In one of his works published more than twenty years ago Mr. Russell applied certain measurements of pyramid passages, an inch for a year, as symbolically showing the length of divine favor upon the Jews from the time they became a nation down to the year A. D. 70, when Jerusalem was destroyed and the Jewish polity ended.
In the same work he declared also that certain passages symbolically indicated the length of time during which the nation of Israel would be cut off from any and all special manifestations of divine favor, and when this would end the favor of God would again return to them.

AMERICA'S "SPURGEON."

England's Leading Daily's Opinion of Brooklyn's Great Preacher.
[From the London Daily Mail.]
One of America's most remarkable men, Pastor Russell of Brooklyn tabernacle, who is by common consent the most prominent pulpit orator in the United States, has recently arrived in London. He is the Spurgeon of America and is visiting in England in connection with the May meetings.

GOD'S STONE WITNESS THE GREAT PYRAMID.

The Ancients in recounting the Seven Wonders of the World, placed at the head of the list, the Great Pyramid. Its interior passage ways evidently symbolically represent the Ages and Dispensations in the Divine Government in connection with humanity. Its witness is only beginning to go out to the world of mankind. It is commonly credited to the foolishness of an Egyptian King. Such claims as to the other Pyramids which are inferior to this one, are not questioned, but the great Pyramid evidently was constructed under Divine supervision. In symbolic language the Pyramid interprets itself if figured an inch for a year. The downward passage way from the entrance to the bottomless pit represents the way traversed by the human race to death. The ascending passage way represents an escape from death and corresponds to the giving of the Law to Israel. "If ye do these things ye shall live by them." The intervening years to the end of Jewish favor, A. D. 32, has its exact fulfillment in Pyramid inches, bringing us to the Grand Gallery, which symbolizes the Gospel Age, the period of the High Calling, the Lord coming "that we might have life and that more abundantly." The grand scheme of

THE GREAT PYRAMID WHICH PASTOR RUSSELL BELIEVES HAS SYMBOLIC BIBLICAL SIGNIFICANCE.

Pyramid passage way measurements tells us that the Gospel Age is soon to end and that the time for Divine favor to return to Israel is about due. The measurements seemingly say that by 1915 the Jews should be re-established in their Promised Land.
The Pyramid covers an area of about 13 acres; is 486 feet high, and 764 feet broad at its base. It is estimated to weigh about 6,000,000 tons. It contains stones weighing three or four times as much as one of the obelisks. Some of the stones are thirty feet in length, and fit so closely together that you may run a pen knife over the surface without discovering the breaks between them. There is now no machinery so perfect that it will make two surfaces thirty feet in length which will meet together as these wonderful stones in the Great Pyramid. Its four corner stones are sunk in the earth in fulfillment of Job xxxviii, 3-7. It is supposed to have been built B. C. 2170, at which time the star, Draconis, symbolizing death, looked down the descending passageway, and at which time the Pleiades were in line and looked down the ascending passageway leading to life, the Pleiades representing the throne of Jehovah, the source of all life-giving power.

County Alms House.

The report of the inspection of the County Alms House by the State Board of Charities, has been received by James J. Hosmer, clerk of the Board of Supervisors, the inspection having been made on June 29.

The report commends the administration of the keeper, Charles E. Lawrence, and the Matron, Mrs. Lawrence, and says: "The alms house was found in a creditable condition throughout, the clothing well washed, the store room in order, and an ample supply of new clothing on hand. The food supplies were of good quality, but the meat cooler is defective and meat cannot be stored in it for more than a day or two. A well educated inmate is doing the cooking in an intelligent and satisfactory manner. Two patients in the hospital testified to good care."

The census of the institution shows the number of inmates to be 83, of which 54 are males and 29 females. The capacity is but 80. There are two children, girls, under two years of age, with their mothers. There are 33 persons over 70; two are blind, eight are feeble minded; four are epileptic. There are no insane, idiotic, vagrant, deaf or children under 16 in the institution. Births since the last inspection on February 4, 1910, numbered one, and deaths in the same period numbered nine, eight males and one female. Three inmates died of tuberculosis.

The report also refers to the improvement, the county hospital to be erected to cost $21,000 and to have a capacity of 52.

Seneca and Cayuga Lakes.

Seneca lake extends farther south than Cayuga lake, but does not reach so far north. It has a length of 35 to 36 miles; Cayuga lake is 36 or 37 miles long. Both these occupy long, winding valleys, though that of Cayuga lake is much more winding than the Seneca valley, and both are bounded by smooth valley slopes, steepened near the lower portion. Both the lakes broaden toward the north, where in one section they attain a width of 3 1/4 miles each. Seneca lake and Cayuga lake are very deep, the former having a sounding of 618 feet, while the deepest point known in the latter is 435 feet. The bottom of Seneca lake is 175 feet, and that of Cayuga lake is 54 feet below the level of the sea; but as the valley bottoms have been raised by drift deposits, these figures do not represent the actual depth of the rock floors of the valleys. Both lakes occupy river valleys that have been decidedly enlarged and deepened by ice erosion. These lakes are sufficient size to have an important influence on local climate, making possible the extensive growth of grapes and other fruits along the shores. They are also the seats of many summer homes, which are rendered all the more attractive by the presence of many picturesque gorges and falls.—Watkins Chronicle.

Drowning at Moravia.

The body of Miss Anastasia Christiansen, of Moravia was found in Sylvan lake near that village on Friday last. The lifeless form of the girl was discovered shortly before noon, and was soon taken from the water.

On a close inspection of the scene of the tragedy, the place was found where the girl had mounted the bluff overlooking Sylvan lake and had fallen into the deep channel between Sylvan lake and the mill pond. In the morning Miss Christiansen in company with Ellen and Fanny McAllister and Lucinda Oykendall, went up West hill in search of wintergreens. On account of the rain, they returned home in a short time, and Miss Christiansen soon after disappeared. The deceased was 19 years of age, was the organist of St. Patrick's church and a member of the class of 1911 of Moravia High school. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Christiansen, three sisters, the Misses Catherine, Marie and Margaret Christiansen, all of whom live in Moravia except the sister Marie who resides in New York.

These Pies of Boyhood

How delicious were the pies of boyhood. No pies now ever taste so good, what's changed, the pies? No, it's you. You've lost the strong, healthy stomach, the vigorous liver, the active kidneys, the regular bowels of boyhood. Your digestion is poor and you blame the food. What's needed? A complete toning up by Electric Bitters of all organs of digestion—Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Bowels—Try them. They'll restore your boyhood appetite and appreciation of food and fairly saturate your body with new health, strength and vigor. 50c at J. S. Banker's, Genoa and F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry.

"Story of Five Lost Bibles."

In 1789 the crew of the ship Bounty, set out by the English government with a cargo of breadfruit trees for the West Indies, mutinied when near Tahiti, in the Pacific Ocean, their complaint being the brutality of the captain. The captain and all who took his part were set adrift with a supply of food. A number of the mutineers were landed at Tahiti. Then the remaining eight, after persuading several native men and women to go with them, sailed till they came to Pitcairn Island, whose "rocky and nearly inaccessible sides rise to the uniform height of 1,000 feet above the sea, Point Lookout, the highest peak, being 1,109 feet. It is two and a quarter miles long by one and a half miles wide, and about five miles in circumference at the top, which alone is inhabitable." This island is about four thousand miles from San Francisco.

The company landed, and the ship was burned. Then eleven years were passed in entire forgetfulness of all laws, human and divine. The Tahitian men were killed. One by one the mutineers died, until only one, John Adams, was left. With him were the Tahitian women and twenty-three children.

In 1800 Adams found a Bible which had been brought with other plunder from the Bounty, and had remained hidden for all those years. The reading of its pages aroused him. He decided that from that time his own life and the lives of the other islanders must be different. From the Bible the children were taught. Reforms were set on foot. A church was built. When, a few years later, the first vessel touched at the island after the arrival of the mutineers, regular communication with the world was begun. A few outsiders were welcomed from time to time.—The Ladies' World for August.

Drowned near Aurora.

Clarence Thompson, 14 years old, was drowned at the lake shore at the mouth of Paine's creek in the town of Ledyard, Sunday evening. The place of the drowning is about a mile south of Aurora.

The boy was visiting at the home of his grandfather, Abram Locke, of Dog Corners, three miles east of Aurora. In company with the children of Elwood Smith he went to the lake shore and after wading around in shallow water for a few minutes the party was frightened by the shouts of young Thompson who could not swim and who had stepped off into a hole 10 feet deep.

Mr. Smith could not swim either, and he shouted for help, but no one reached the boy in time to save him.

An Italian section hand secured a rowboat and managed to locate the body after a few minutes, but efforts to resuscitate the body were in vain.

The Scrap Book

Yes, He Knew the Time. A quiet, bashful sort of a young fellow was making a call on a Capitol hill girl one evening not so very long ago when her father came into the parlor with his watch in his hand. It was about half past 9 o'clock. At the moment the young man was standing on a chair, straightening a picture over the piano. The girl had asked him to fix it. As he turned the old gentleman, a gruff, stout fellow, said:

"Do you know what time it is?" "Yes, sir," he replied. "I was just going."

He went into the hall without any delay and took his hat and coat. The girl's father followed him. As the caller reached for the doorknob the old gentleman again asked him if he knew what time it was.

"Yes, sir," was the youth's reply. "Good night!" he said, and he shot from the house without waiting to put his coat on. After the door had closed the old gentleman turned to the girl.

"What's the matter with that fellow?" he asked. "My watch ran down this afternoon, and I wanted him to tell me the time so that I could set it."—Denver Post.

The Chainless Mind.

Brightest in dungeons, liberty thou art, For there thy habitation is the heart. The heart which love of thee alone can bind— And when thy sons to fetters are consigned— To fetters and the damp vault's dayless gloom— Their country conquers with their martyrdom, And freedom's fame finds wings on every wind.—Lord Byron, From "The Prisoner of Chillon."

He Didn't Drop.

The great operatic star Signor Toll (John McCormack) when singing in grand opera in his native city, Cork, had to sing one of his songs from a stage balcony. The arrangements were not very perfect, and the manager, fearing the carpenter had not made the balcony strong enough to sustain the weight of the big man, told off two assistants to hold it up from beneath. The lengthy signor was only half through his song when one man said to the other:

"Be jabbers, Molke, the Oitallian is moighty heavy."

"Let's drop him, Pat. He's only an Oitallian, after all!"

Voice from the signor above, "Will ye, ye devils, will ye?"

An Impossible Name.

In the Jefferson Market police court, New York city, several years ago a man and a woman upon being arraigned for disturbing the peace told the magistrate that the commotion between them had started in an argument as to what they should name their baby boy.

"What do you want to call him?" asked the magistrate of the father, who was employed as a waiter at a Broadway restaurant.

"Ludwig," answered the German.

"And you?" he asked the mother.

"Adolph," sighed the latter.

The modern Solomon thought a moment. "I'll tell you what to call him," he said at length. "Call him Adolph Ludwig."

"Nein, nein!" shouted the father. "Ludwig Adolph, yes; Adolph Ludwig, never!"

The magistrate demanded the reason for his stubbornness.

"Der reason is der odder waiters," explained the father. "I am Carl Coblenz, and if we called our little boy Adolph Ludwig Coblenz every waiter at der restaurant would see his initials 'as A. L. C. vich means a la carte, and ve don't serf no a la carte by our restaurant, only table d'hot."

Getting Back at Him. The young man was timid, but he loved the girl so fervently that he mustered up enough courage to wait upon her wealthy father and ask him for her hand.

"So you have the impudence to ask for my daughter's hand, eh?" exclaimed the father crustily. "Why, sir, at your present salary you couldn't more than keep her in gloves."

"Well," stammered the suitor, "wouldn't that be enough?"

"What! Do you mean to insinuate, young man, that my daughter would wear only gloves?"

"Pardon me, sir," replied the young man, with sudden courage; "I asked only for her hand."—Young's Magazine.

LIVER TWIST.

The New Medicine That Mr. Blodgett Did Not Buy.

Mr. Blodgett, who lives out of town, fancies he is afflicted with liver complaint and in consequence tries every new medicine that comes on the market, fondly expecting it to prove effective for his particular malady. Not only that, but he swallows every sample of medicine left at the door by canvassers and anxiously continues his search for something new.

"Did you ever hear of liver twist, Maria?" was Blodgett's first remark to his wife as he came home from business a few evenings since.

"No, I never heard of it, but I suppose I shall have to get you a bottle if you want to try it," was the answer.

"I will find out something more about it tomorrow and see if they have any testimonials before we get it."

"I don't think you need mind about the testimonials, for you will take it anyway," said Mrs. Blodgett wearily.

When Mr. Blodgett came home the next evening his wife said, "Charles, have you got that bottle of liver twist yet?"

"Well—no—er—you see, Maria, there's no such thing."

"No such thing!" exclaimed the astonished Maria.

"No, I saw it advertised in big letters on a barn. It just said liver twist and that was all. This morning I saw it on a fence the other side of the road, and then I looked at the barn to see where the mistake was, and I found that the first board was pulled off, and it was an advertisement for a theater, and the name of the play was 'Liver Twist.'"—New York Press.

W. W. Harnden Announced His Improved Highway Policy.

"If there is one thing I am unqualifiedly for," W. W. Harnden, a new county judge in Missouri, said recently, "it is good roads and plenty of them. I believe it is the most important function of the county court to provide them. It is being realized over all this country—and with the advent of the motorcars more than ever—that good roads are the most important asset of any community."

"So far as I am concerned I shall do all in my power to see to it that the rock road system of Jackson county is a model both in the quantity and the quality of its roads. And I believe that these roads should be built primarily with a view to the convenience and profit of Kansas City, which supplies most of the funds."

"It is my idea that we should first see to it that the roads are kept in first class repair and then build more roads. One thing I hope to accomplish, with the co-operation of Judge Patterson, is greater facility in the annual oiling of the roads. It is my idea that enough men should be put on the job to finish the oiling of the roads, say in a month, so that they would be clean and free from dust during the season when those who drive can enjoy them."

"To clinch the roots," was the reply.

My Warning. A voluble faker was selling bottles of a mixture he called hair grower on a street corner. He said:

"Yes, gents, one bottle of this unrivaled hair grower will raise a rich, luxuriant crop of hair on the balddest head in the crowd. But let me give you this one word of warning."

"Here he paused to pocket a half dollar and hand a bottle of the liquid to a baldhead.

"My warning is: Do not neglect when the full head of hair is grown to take the last dose in the bottle internally, that is, swallow it."

"Swallow it. What for?" the buyer asked.

"To clinch the roots," was the reply.

The Cat's Bed. "It's a bad thing to mix presence of mind and absentmindedness," said an actress. "When 'Mme. Sans-Gene' was the play of the hour I had the part of the blanchisseuse in the laundry scene and was busily engaged in ironing when a cat which had its home somewhere about the theater came walking on to the stage. I thought this would furnish a good opportunity to give a realistic domestic touch to the scene, and so when puss came purring up and rubbed against me I stroked her fur, spoke to her, and then, for fear she might be distracting, I picked her up and put her down on the nearest place at hand, saying, 'There, pussy, go to sleep.'"

"The cat curled up contentedly, and I went on with my lines. Suddenly I was aware of a murmur among the audience, which increased to a ripple of laughter. I realized something was up and turned instinctively to look at puss. There she was, asleep, where I had put her, among the irons on the 'red-hot' range."—Young's Magazine.

Anger. If a man meets with injustice it is not required that he shall not be roused to meet it, but if he is angry after he has had time to think upon it, that is sinful. The flame is not wrong, but the coals are.—Beecher.

How a Juror Was Lost. In a southern county of Missouri years ago, when the form of questioning was slightly different than now, much trouble was experienced in getting a jury in a murder trial. Finally an old fellow answered every question satisfactorily—he had no prejudices,

Land and property, said a speaker at a good roads convention, were valuable in proportion to their accessibility to market or pleasure, and whatever adds to the accessibility enhances values. The history of the country, he stated, bore witness to the most useless and wasteful extravagance in the use of money and labor on its highways, and the lesson to be learned was to build, as did the ancients, for permanency and with the utmost care and thought for the future.

Good Highways Uplifting. There is nothing that contributes more to rural uplift than good roads. For social and economic improvement communication must be easy. Without good roads it is impossible for the people of rural communities to meet and discuss ways and means of improving rural society.

Satisfied with the Inspection. The old man adjusted his spectacles and peered at the prisoner for a full minute. Then, turning to the judge, as though fully satisfied with the inspection, he said:

"Judge, turn me if I don't believe he's guilty."—Kansas City Star.

Make the Roads Beautiful. The National Good Roads association in convention recently recommended that the enlisted men of the army be used in making good roads. How better could they serve the country than by beautifying and making the roadways more serviceable? We remember that wherever Caesar and his legions went good roads followed, and some of those highways are there today to prove that they are the best thoroughfares in Europe. If this order ever went into effect a regiment would consist of about six privates the next morning.

A Unique Improvement Scheme. Says a recent writer: "I know of a local paper whose editor interviews all the mail carriers when the roads are in good condition to drag after each rain and secures the names of all the men who donate work on the drag. These are then published as a roll of honor. Of course a man doesn't drag roads just to have the good he is doing in that way exploited; but, all the same, one likes to know that the good he does is being noticed, and it certainly is by those who travel the dragged roads whether they read the paper or not."

VALUE OF GOOD ROADS.

They Would Tend to Lower the Cost of Living.

The 2,000,000 miles of unimproved roads which the country has to its discredit are as heavy a burden upon the unfortunate "ultimate consumer" as is an excessive tariff. Every pound of produce hauled from the farm to the market bears an inflated price because of the excessive cost of its transportation from the farm to the point of shipment.

For instance, it costs an average of almost 2 cents more to haul a bushel of wheat from the farm to the station nine miles away than it does to ship a bushel of wheat from New York to Liverpool, 3,100 miles away. This excessive transportation cost must be made up by the farmer in charging more for his wheat, by the miller in charging more for the flour, by the baker in charging more for bread and finally, of course, by the "ultimate consumer" in paying more for his bread.

As the farmer and the miller are also consumers, the excessive cost of road transportation really levies a tax upon all. Whatever doubt there may have been about the need for systematic road improvement in the United States facts and figures such as these finally dispelled it.

If there was ever any work calculated to fill the proverbial "long fell want" it was the work of the office of public roads.
