Mrs. Frank Main was called to Venice on Saturday by the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Ethel Thorpe.

Douglas Tandy has a fine new automobile.

A Union Memorial service was held at the church here on Sunday evening, Mr. Ivey giving the address. Only three of the old soldiers were able to be present, which shows that the ranks are fast thinning and many have answered to the last roll call since the last service was held here.

We expect a new mail carrier to-morrow; shall miss the familiar face of Mr. Shaw who has so faithfully filled the position since the route was established.

Abbie Main returned to Ithaca on Tuesday, after spending a few days at her home here.

It is thought that little Ruth Holland, who has been seriously ill for some time, is slightly improved at this writing.

Sherwood.

MAY 30—We would like to call the attention of the Five Corners correspondent to the fact that Halley's comet is visible at Sherwood. Nearly all the inhabitants viewed it on Thursday night. If the people at Five Corners will look a little below the western zenith on a clear night they can see "the comet" with the naked eye.

Mrs. M. L. Georgia is treating her guests to home-grown lettuce and radishes and has been for nearly three weeks. C. F. Comstock informs me that he could have been eating same from his garden if his "store teeth" were good and sharp.

Wm. Batty and wife of Rochester were callers in town on Sunday, having made the trip by auto.

Samuel Otis of Philadelphia is home for a short time. He is accompanied by "Jim Jeffreys."

Dr. Susan G. Otis of Auburn was a Sunday guest of Stephen Otis and family.

Miss Louise Fitzpatrick and sister Julia were Saturday guests at James Smart's.

Mrs. Fanny Slocum of Scipioville spent Thursday at M. Ward's.

Fred Slocum, wife and children, are attending Yearly meeting in Union Springs.

M. L. Georgia met with a painful accident last week. While sweeping the barn behind a strange horse, he was kicked by the animal, both hands receiving the blow. The index finger of his left hand was broken and the right hand so badly bruised as to be unable to use it.

Miss Dorothy Darrow will leave in a few days for her home in Bermuda.

There are no scarlet fever cases in Sherwood. All cases outside the town are making fine recoveries.

Mr. Carl Tompson of Hamilton College is visiting his sister, Miss Mary Tompson.

Mrs. Zobia Alleman of Union Springs is a guest at Miss Isabel Howland's.

William Ryan and Miss Atherton, niece of Mrs. John Rafferty, are to be married Wednesday of this week. They will immediately go to the home prepared to receive the bride on the Aikin farm where they will be at home to their friends after June 1.

We were saddened on Memorial day to learn of the death of Mrs. Cornelia Stephenson, who has been ill for several weeks. As we strew flowers over the graves of our fallen heroes let us think of this heroic mother who has been fighting the battle of life the past few years alone and providing a home for her fatherless children, and when the time was near that she could begin to enjoy her success with her family, she has been called to the home and rest prepared for the faithful. We say "their loss is her gain" but oh, what a loss to the dear family when that loving, guiding presence is not with them. But she taught them of a higher power to guide and care for them and her influence will ever be with them.

James O'Connell of Auburn was a guest of his parents the past week.

The impressive ceremony of breaking ground for the Frances Cleveland library will take place at 10:30 a. m., to be followed by the commencement address and the conferring of degrees at 11:30 a. m. The orator will be John Huston Finley, LL. D., of New York. The usual reception will follow the graduation exercises.

Choosing Colors For Houses.

The safe colors for a house besides red are white, gray, yellow and brown, says a writer in Scribner's. Yellow or gray, with white trimmings, suits many a plain pitched roofed or square colonial house. Grays and browns are good for ugly nondescript ones, the grays always being pleasanter on the yellow shades than on cold blue tones. White suggests the formal type again. It is very good color for a country house, showing it up from a distance in fascinating glimpses, for it needs trees about it and flowers to sparkle against its walls. Such a house will be attractive when the leaves are gone from the trees, for the bare boughs will serve to soften the effect.

The Scrap Book

Breaking It Gently.
The somewhat careless major of an English regiment stationed in India returned to London after an absence of several years. His sluggish liver needed touching up, he thought, and so he went to a famous physician for advice and paid his advance charge.

"Major," said the doctor, "you are in a serious condition, but I think we can pull you through. You must purchase a tub four feet wide and two deep. Then you must fill it with tepid water."

"Not boiling, doctor?"
"No; merely tepid. Then you must stand in it and with a sponge moisten your body. Having done this, you must apply some saponaceous matter."

"Will plain yellow soap do?" asked the patient.

"Yes," said the doctor. "Having thoroughly scoured yourself, you must dry off with a rough towel."

"Why, doctor, this is awfully like a bath!" exclaimed the veteran.

"Well, it is open to that objection," replied the famous physician, "but I feel, sir, that you need it."

The Abiding.
Pain and pleasure both decay.
Wealth and poverty depart.
Wisdom makes a longer stay.
Therefore be thou wise, my heart.

Land remains not, nor do they
Who the lands today control.
Kings and princes pass away.
Therefore be thou fixed, my soul.

If by hatred, love or spite
Thou art shaken, thou art wrong.
Only one thing will abide—
Only goodness can be strong.
—Richard Henry Stoddard.

A Regular Soak.
One of the younger of Louisville's business men said that he has recently been entertaining a customer from out in the state. This customer is a good buyer and has many other endearing traits of character admirably combined with a native simplicity equal only to his lack of sophistication. While he was in town he was entertained by the young business man at his own bachelor apartment.

The first evening that he stayed he wished to take a bath, but shortly after he had splashed around for a few minutes there was a period of silence, and then came his voice in tones of genuine alarm.

"Bill, oh, Bill," he called, "come here quick!"

His friend entered the bathroom to find him limply extended in the empty bathtub.

"I du-d-d-unnow what's the mu-mu-matter," he stammered, "b-b-but there's somethin' awful the mu-mu-matter with me. I've soaked up all the wa-wa-water!"

He had inadvertently kicked the stopper out of place and allowed the bathtub to empty itself.—Louisville Times.

Redirected.
The struggling author boldly entered the editorial sanctum.

"I have come with my latest story," he announced.

"Well," ejaculated the busy editor in a resigned voice. "let us hear how it runs."

"Well, this is from the first chapter: 'Casper had been standing as motionless as a block of granite. Suddenly he dropped on his knees before the beautiful girl with the alabaster brow and boldly proposed. It was then that she answered with a stony stare and told him that to him her heart was marble. Then—'

But the busy editor interrupted him. "Young man," he remonstrated, "you have made a mistake. Take that story down to the nearest stone yard. This is an editorial office."

His Exact Condition.
A Dublin cabman drove a "fare" out into the country from Dublin to attend a ball. The "fare" paid him well and told him to look under the seat of the cab.

Cabby found a quart bottle of Irish whisky under the seat, and he proceeded to sample it. He also gave some to the horse. Telling about it in court the next day, cabby said:

"'After I'd been givin' the baste a few drinks, afore I knowed what was the matter I wor in the shafts pullin' the kee an' the horse wor up in the sate lashin' me wid the whip."

"You were drunk," said the court.

"I wor not drunk," he replied.

"Were you entirely sober?" inquired the court.

"I wor not entirely sober," he replied.

"Then what was your condition?"

"I wor on the defensive," he said.

Wanted Only Hustlers.
Stetson, the once well known theatrical manager, more famous if possible for the "breaks" he made than for his many successes, attending the rehearsal of one of his plays, noticed that a man in the orchestra who had to play the trombone was holding the instrument in front of him and doing nothing.

Mr. Stetson at once called him to account.

"Say," said he, "what do you mean by not working along with the other fellows?"

"Why, Mr. Stetson," said the musician, "I can't play. I have nineteen bars rest."

"Not on your life!" replied the angry manager. "I don't pay any one for resting. Either you play when the other fellows do or you clear out, see!"

AN EASY WINNER.

His Rival Was Prompt In Handing Him the Medal.

Assemblyman John C. Hackett of New York recently told this story in a speech: "I was in Rockland county last summer, and there was a banquet at a country hotel. All the farmers were there and all the village characters. I was asked to make a speech. 'Now,' said I, with the usual apologetic manner, 'it is not fair to you for the toastmaster to ask me to speak. I am notorious as the worst public speaker in the state of New York. My reputation extends from one end of the state to the other. I have no rival whatever when it comes—'

"I was interrupted by a lanky, ill clad individual who had stuck too close to the beer pitcher. 'Gentlemen,' said he, 'I take 'ception to what this here man says. He ain't the worst public speaker in the state—I am. You all know it, an' I want it made a matter of record that I took 'ception.'

"I HADN'T GONE FAR WHEN HE GOT UP AGAIN."

"Well, my friend," said I, 'suppose we leave it to the guests. You sit down while I say my piece, and then I'll sit down and let you give a demonstration.'

"The fellow agreed, and I went on. I hadn't gone far when he got up again. 'S all right,' said he—'you win; needn't go no further.'"

The Waiter's Mistake.

A rather fastidious man, hurrying to catch a train, found when he reached the station that he had time to get a bite to eat. So he entered a nearby restaurant and gave his order. Then he looked at the napkin beside his plate and to his horror discovered a number of yellow egg stains on it.

"Waiter," he said in a shocked voice, "look at these egg stains on my napkin!"

"Beg pardon, sir," the waiter answered, turning the napkin over. "I folded it the wrong way, sir."

Do It Now.

If there be lying before you any bit of work from which you shrink go straight up to it. The only way to get rid of it is to do it. In every piece of honest work, however irksome, laborious and commonplace, we are fellow workers with God.—F. B. Meyer.

A Sailor's Compliment.

As Miss Margot Tennant, Mrs. Aquith electrified London with her beauty, her wit and her high spirits. Mr. Gladstone admired her, and the novelist Benson owed his success to the portrait that he drew of her in "Dodo."

Gladstone, Tennyson and other distinguished persons made a cruise to Norway one summer in Sir Daniel Currie's yacht. Miss Margot Tennant was among the party, and her gayety and beauty enchanted all on board. From Tennyson and Gladstone down to the cabin boy.

Mr. Gladstone and Miss Tennant, promenading the deck one morning, paused and talked awhile with a sailor.

"Are you married?" Miss Tennant asked him.

The sailor touched his cap and answered:

"Yes, ma'am; I'm sorry to say I am."

The Rib.

The following quotation was taken from a Connecticut woman's diary, dated 1790: "We had roast pork for dinner, and Dr. S., who carved, held up a rib on his fork and said, 'Here, ladies, is what Mother Eve was made of.'"

"Yes," said Sister Patty, "and it's from very much the same kind of critter."

Buying an Ancestor.

The famous quarterly reviewer, Mr. Abraham Hayward of London, once thought that he should like to have some ancestors. So he walked to Wardour street, where one can generally pick up an ancestor or two of the Cromwellian, Queen Anne or early Georgian period. Selecting a portrait of a cavalier in half armor, with features not quite unlike his own, Mr. Hayward made a bid for it, but, deeming the price asked too high, he went his way.

A fortnight after, the ancestral fever coming strongly upon him, he went again to Wardour street, prepared to pay the dealer his price. The picture was sold. A few days later Mr. Hayward went to dine with Lord Houghton and was astonished to see the picture in the dining room. Seeing that it attracted his guest's attention, Lord Houghton said:

"Very good picture, that; came into my hands in a curious way; portrait of a Milnes of the commonwealth period—an ancestor of mine."

"Indeed!" said Mr. Hayward. "He was very near being an ancestor of mine."

PROPER CARE OF EGGS.

Mistake to Hold Them For Higher Prices, Says Philadelphia Writer.

Where can the blame be properly placed for the presence of bad eggs in the markets? What are the causes? The Kansas State Agricultural college places the blame, at least in part, with the farmer for the following two reasons: First, some few farmers deliberately take eggs to market which they know are not fresh, because they reason that the merchant is compelled to take them or lose their trade; second, and by far the greatest reason, is because of ignorance on the part of the farmer as to how to sell eggs, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record.

It is indeed a bad practice to trade off the eggs at the village store. Some merchants even offer 2 cents a dozen more for eggs sold for trade than they do those sold for cash. The price of goods is raised to meet the deficiency in the profit from the eggs. The farmer makes almost nothing by the competition.

As these merchants take the eggs as they come, it is an incentive for some farmers to make an extra effort to supply the merchants with all the eggs they can get, and all the weeds, orchards, barn lofts, etc., are forced to give up their sometimes rather ancient supply of eggs.

When the clean, fresh eggs are gathered they must be kept in a clean, dry, cool place until marketed. Good egg cases in such a place, kept up off the floor, make excellent receptacles for keeping eggs.

Holding eggs for better prices might look like a shrewd business move, but it is not. There is nothing that counts so strongly in a man's success as reputation, and the farmer upon whom great confidence is placed for marketing nothing but prime stock is the man that is sure to win out.

During hot weather eggs stale very quickly. Therefore it is advisable to collect several times a day. In fact, that rule is enforced the entire year on the farm of the writer—in winter to prevent their being chilled or cracked, in summer to avoid their being staled by heat.

The life of a fresh egg is generally computed at three days. Therefore to guarantee freshness they should be marketed two or three times a week.

Grading eggs according to size and color, endeavoring to have uniformity in each shipment, is a good business move, especially when a retail trade is being supplied.

If before marketing the farmer will candle his eggs he will not only feel doubly sure of their condition, but he can safely guarantee them. An egg tester can be purchased at any poultry supply house for about 35 cents. This will fit over an ordinary house lamp. With this tester in a dark room the eggs can be easily candled.

An absolutely fresh egg when held up before the egg candle should be very clear and only the dim outline of the yolk be visible. There should be no air cell visible. Any other than that is not absolutely fresh. At the large end a clear space known as the air cell becomes larger as the egg grows older, caused by the evaporation of the water content of the egg. If a dark spot is noticed it is either a rot or a developing germ. A red blood ring is caused by a dead germ. Whiter streaks in the shell show that it is cracked. Thus eggs may be graded by candling into fresh, stale, cracked and rotten classes.

Instead of letting the hens run around anywhere in the woods and lay their eggs, the farmer should provide proper nests for them. The trap nest is an excellent idea, and when Mrs. Hen gets used to this kind she will have no other. This care would improve the quality of the eggs, because the "outlay," so to speak, would always be discovered early.

Another source of profit which too many farm people ignore is the preparing of capons for the market. Gelding a male chicken always improves his flesh for the table, and it is well to put caponized fowls in a pen by themselves for fattening.

IRRIGATION IN WINTER.

Results Very Satisfactory Where Tried In Western States.

When water is applied either to bare soil or to crops outside the regular irrigation season it is termed winter irrigation. The practice thus far has been confined largely to the warmer parts of the arid region. It has become well established in Arizona and California and is being quite rapidly extended to parts of Oregon, Kansas and the Rocky mountain states.

Experience has shown that a deep retentive soil is capable of storing a large quantity of water. On account of the fluctuation of western streams of all kinds, from the small creek to the large river, the greatest flow of water often comes at a season when there is least demand for it. In a few localities adequate storage facilities have been provided to retain the surplus, but as a rule it is allowed to go to waste. The passage of so much waste water led to the introduction of winter irrigation, and in nearly every case the results have been satisfactory. The chief differences between winter and ordinary irrigations are the larger volumes used, the crude manner of conveying and applying the water and the dormant or partially dormant condition of the plants at the time of irrigation.

In Fresno county, Cal., water is turned into the canals in January and February. The large canals of the Modesto and Turlock districts run more than half a head during the latter half of February. This is the rainy period in both these localities, and the soil is usually too wet for plant growth, but water is applied to alfalfa fields to fill up the subsoil so as to provide a surplus for the rainless summer when water is scarce.

Besides furnishing a supply of much needed moisture, winter irrigation, when conditions are favorable, prevents winter killing and improves the mechanical condition of the soil.

UNIQUE WINTER PLOWING.

Snow Plowed Under Is Said to Be "the Poor Man's Manure."

Most farmers unhitch and turn in when snow begins to fall, but here we have a picture of a Vermont man who finished his fall plowing after the ground was well covered with the whiteness.

Snow has been called the poor man's manure because it washes from the atmosphere as it falls some nitrogen in the form of nitrate of ammonia and sometimes nitric acid. The atmosphere contains varying amounts of these substances, but in very minute quantities. Just after an electrical storm the quantity is increased, as the electricity converts some of the free nitrogen of the atmosphere into these available forms. There are more nitrates and ammonia salts in the atmosphere near cities than in the country, as these substances are found in the escaping smoke of factories.

Rains and fogs and even hail wash the atmosphere of nitric acid and ammonia salts. After a dry spell a heavy shower will contain sometimes comparatively large quantities of these substances, and a late snow in the spring of the year, when the weather has been previously dry, will contain probably a larger quantity than even a rain, for the reason that the snow is more finely divided than the raindrops and washes the atmosphere more completely.

There are annually brought down in rains, snows and dews about nine to ten pounds of nitrogen available for plant food to the acre. This, if bought in the form of commercial fertilizers, would cost, say, $1.75. I assume, therefore, says M. A. Scovell of the Kentucky experiment station, that is why snow is called the poor man's manure, as it at least assists in bringing this much available nitrogen to the soil.

Some Bad Farm Conditions.

Two hundred dairy farms in a dozen states were investigated and inspected and rated according to modern standards of dairy sanitation. Out of the 200 places inspected the highest scoring dairy was entitled to 99.8 points out of the possible 100. The lowest scoring dairy was entitled to only 9.56 points. The average score of the 200 inspected was 39.04 out of the possible 100 points. Some of the stables were found to be badly ventilated, badly built and too small for the number of cows kept.

An examination of the milk pails and the strainers used on these 200 farms made clear the fact that these things are often not so clean as they might be and as clean as people using them imagine. Traces of old milk were found in many seams and covers, and in only fifty-eight places could all the milk utensils be pronounced superficially clean—that is, thoroughly washed and scalded and given a full score for that condition. Milk coolers were found in use on forty-eight farms. Not over ten thermometers were found in use on the 200 farms, and in at least 125 instances positive knowledge regarding the temperature of the milk could not be obtained except by the use of the investigator's own thermometer.

Every now and then we hear of men and women returning "conscience" money to officials of railroads for rides stolen in years past, but we have never yet heard of newspaper borrowers sending any money to the newspaper publisher for the many years they have borrowed and read his paper. What is the difference between stealing a ride on a train, and borrowing a newspaper?—Ex.

The value of the output of Western Washington fisheries last season is said to be $13,543,010. Of this amount, $9,113,656 was contributed by the canned salmon industry. In the last census year, 1900, the entire value of the output of all the fish-canning and preserving plants in the United States was $22,253,749, and it is said that the value of the output of Washington canneries has substantially doubled in the 10 year period.

A Woman's Great Idea

is how to make herself attractive. But without health, it is hard for her to be lovely in face, form or temper. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and Kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions, and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys, purify the blood, give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion, good health. Try them. 50c. at J. S. I herd a woman say tuther day that a good housekeeper wuzn't always a good home maker. That's mi idee. A home whar a boy haz to use th' back door haint a home tu mi way uv thinkin'—its a museum er a mausoleum. Why wont th' wimmin lern the difference between a house 'nd a home?—Jedediah, in Newark Union-Gazette.

Contrary to a widespread belief that hard woods give more heat in burning than soft varieties, says Domestic Engineering, the scientists at Washington contend that the greatest heating power is possessed by the wood of the linden tree, which is very soft. Fir stands next to linden, and almost equal to it. Then comes pine, hardly inferior to fir and linden, while hard oak possesses 8 per cent. less heating capacity than linden, and red beech ten per cent. less.

A meddlesome woman in a street car began sneering at a young mother's awkwardness with her baby and said: "I declare a woman ought never to have a baby until she knows how to hold it!"

"Nor a tongue either," quietly responded the young mother.

It is estimated that there are almost a million women in the United States who are either farmers or farm laborers. The United States, however, has not gone so far in this respect as England. In the dairy sections, women have entire control of the herds, not only the butter making, but the milking and feeding. In France nearly 3,000,000 women are engaged in farm work, while in most of the countries of continental Europe the finer breeds of cattle are mainly the result of woman's efforts.

Dying to Order.

Dying to order is one of the most sacred customs of the American Indian. Many years ago Standing Elk went to Major James McLaughlin, the author of "My Friend the Indian," and said, "Father, my wife will die today, and she wants a coffin from you."

The major asked him what the ailment was, and he replied: "Just nothing but that she heard the ghosts calling and must go."

Somebody had told her, it turned out, that she was sick, so she had "painted for death," and all her relatives had gathered about to deman her—and incidentally divide her property as soon as she was dead.

In many cases those "painted for death" are actually bullied into dying. But Mrs. Standing Elk was still too vigorous. Finally in despair she carried the coffin into the house on her own shoulders, and several years later the major saw it still standing on end in her house.

Improving Americans.

"Nothing is fixed but the certainty of change," said Goethe, and we know that the future American will represent a change. He may be taller or shorter or thinner or fatter than the American of today, but there is nothing in the existing state of society—and we use society in its broad sense—to indicate that he will not be better in many ways.

An Economical Man.

A commercial traveler told of a man who was riding on a train and pretended to become ill after eating a sandwich. The man opened his grip and took out a hot water bag. "He got a sympathetic porter," the commercial man continues, "to fill the water bag with boiling water, and then he opened up his lunch basket, took out a piece of fried steak and warmed it up on the water bag.

Annual Tribute to the Fly.

Remember our little friend, the fly. Kill him. It is easier now than it will be after awhile. For every fly you kill to day you will have 1,728,000 fewer flies to kill in July.

Flies carry typhoid, also cholera, diphtheria, enteric fever, consumption and any other germ diseases that happen to be hanging around.

If you want to make a nice little experiment, expose a bowl of milk to a happy family of flies for twenty-four hours, and then count the germs in it. You will find that there are about 700,000,000 more bacteria to the quart than there ought to be.

Look at a fly under a microscope. After you have got through admiring his beautiful honeycomb eyes, look for bacteria. If you are good at counting you may count about 1,200,000. That's only part of them.

"Musca domestica" is the scientific name of this household pest. That means "house fly." But the doctors tell us to call him "typhoid fly."

HOW SANE FOURTH HELPS THE TOWN

Children's Lives May Be Saved and Property Protected.

ONE COMMUNITY'S LESSON.

Citizens Arranged Program For Independence Day Which Included Parade, Games, Banquet, School Exercises and Church Services—Fireworks Barred.

A very important question that is being seriously considered in numerous towns and cities throughout the United States is the celebration of Independence day in a safe and sane manner. If those who have not yet become interested in the movement would sit down and consider the enormous amount of good it would do for their fellow citizens and the wonder full benefit their home towns would realize it is almost a sure thing that they would at once become enthusiastic followers in the ranks of the great army that is battling for a "sane Fourth," by which they will undoubtedly save the eyes, hands and, in fact, lives of children, prevent loss of property by fire, save the street trees from serious injury and keep the streets neat and clean.

During the congress of the Playground Association of America in Pittsburg forty-five mayors sent delegates to assist in furthering the move for a rational celebration of the Fourth of July. In summing up the points brought out in the meeting the secretary said in part:

Much valuable constructive work has been done and is being done in the endeavor to find a suitable celebration to substitute for the traditional one. We here would call special attention to the kind of work that has been done in many large and small communities during the past six years along this line. We endorse this work as resulting in celebrations that are safe, appropriate, inspiring and educative, and we believe that such celebrations combine important lessons in civic co-operations and community life.

It is the opinion of the writer that towns and cities would benefit wonderfully by following the example of a certain city in the middle west whose citizens are firm believers in the move for a quiet holiday celebration. The movement in this city was started by a gentleman whose son was injured by the explosion of a lead cannon. About eight weeks before the Fourth this gentleman invited four of his friends whom he knew were "doers" and interested them in the movement that would increase interest in patriotism and make lead pipe cannons unattractive.

They decided to interest all public officials and public spirited citizens in the movement and get them to agree to help organize a central campaign committee. Then they organized a committee with representatives from the wards, churches and social organizations. They arranged an elaborate program, including parades, picnics, games, dinners, school exercises and church services.

The result was that every citizen in that city admitted that the abolition of fireworks from the exercises proved a great boon in making the Independence day a real pleasure holiday and not a destructive one to humanity and property. The program that was distributed broadcast throughout the city was set up something like this:

PLANS FOR THE FOURTH.

Blanktown This Year Will Have a Celebration With More Patriotism and Less Noise.

PART OF THE PROGRAM.

Forenoon Parade, Games, Yacht Races, Rowing Races.

INDEPENDENCE DAY ASSOCIATION.

20 Blank Street.

The thoroughness with which this campaign was carried out made the people feel from the beginning that it would be a grand success. It was optimistic and constructive rather than pessimistic and destructive. But a close observance of this motto tacked up in the press agent's office was one of the main reasons for the grand success achieved in arousing and sustaining public interest:

Count that day lost whose low descending sun sees no "sane Fourth" in last editions run.

May Clean Streets at Night.

An experiment in the way of street cleaning at night will be undertaken by the street department of Chicago shortly as the result of a conference between representatives of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the city in Mayor Busse's office. Those at the meeting agreed that wet sweeping is impracticable.

Memorial Day at Genoa.

Notwithstanding the pouring rain on Memorial day, the services planned by Genoa citizens were carried out in full. Academy hall was well filled at 2 o'clock, and eleven veterans were present.

Logan Drum Corps of ten pieces arrived from Auburn on the morning train and proceeded at once to make their presence known. They marched about town, playing patriotic selections, and went to the home of Cyrus Pratt, a veteran who is ill, where they rendered a piece or two.

The exercises at the hall opened with a medley of national airs, by the Drum Corps, which was followed by "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" sung by a chorus of ten voices. Rev. T. J. Searls offered prayer and the Male Quartet sang in a touching manner, "We Shall Meet but We Shall Miss Him."

Rev. J. B. Doran made a short but stirring address, touching upon politics, and in which he paid a high tribute to Governor Hughes, to the old soldiers and to the American flag. The speaker was loudly applauded.

This speech was followed by a solo, "All Quiet along the Potomac" by Elmer T. Searls of Auburn, after which the chorus sang "America."

Rev. H. W. Smith of Port Byron was then introduced and made an eloquent address. The speaker rehearsed some of the scenes and battles of the civil war, also of the Spanish-American war, and the causes that led to the same. He told of the bravery of the "Boys in Blue" and said "There is no body of men, I so delight to honor as the members of the Grand Army of the Republic." The address was received with liberal applause.

A recitation was given by Merton Jones and the Drum Corps played "Just before the Battle, Mother."

The Male Quartet rendered "Tenting To-night" and the audience was dismissed.

The music by the Drum Corps was very fine and especially enjoyed, and the other music on the program was highly appreciated.

Headed by the Drum Corps, with the veterans, the flag boys and flower girls following, all in wagons, a large number of the citizens made up the procession to the cemetery where flowers were placed upon the graves of the nineteen dead comrades.

Church Notes.

The theme for Sunday morning next at the Presbyterian church will be "A Case in Court." Evening topic "What is Your Hand? The voice of President Taft will be heard and his opinion of missions and missionaries. Sunday school at usual time. O. E. Society at 6:30. All welcome at all services.

Two interesting services of a patriotic nature were held last Sunday, for which the church had been quite elaborately decorated with the national colors, ferns and red and white flowers. The morning service was very impressive and was attended by a large congregation. An excellent sermon, appropriate to the day, was preached by the pastor. The choir was assisted by Walter Smith with the violin and by Elmer T. Searls who sang two fine solos. Several veterans of the G. A. R. were present.

The evening service, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., was not as well attended on account of the rain. The service was conducted by Mr. Herbert Shattuck of Ithaca, who gave a splendid address. Mr. Shattuck is an earnest, enthusiastic and pleasing speaker. He advocated patriotism of the highest form, and presented his arguments against the liquor traffic in a common sense, practical manner. The church should have been filled. The Union were at considerable expense to secure Mr. Shattuck for an address and it is regretted that the rain kept so many at home.

One Who Came

A Memorial Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

She had been looking for him all through the warm spring, and now, late in May, she felt that he must come. Another week would bring the 30th of the month, and Memorial day, with its tender observance of all the beloved dead, would come to crush down her cherished hope of Robert's return.

Esther looked wistfully across the pasture, and tears filled her blue eyes until hillsides and pointed cedars were a dark blur.

When she had wiped them away some one was coming wearily down the narrow path—some one tall and thin, dressed in dark clothing, with a gray felt hat on his drooping head.

The man did not lift his eyes from the ground, but tramped steadily on, with his gaze fixed on the winding path under his feet. When the path ceased at the fence he looked up and saw Esther gazing at him longingly, lovingly, but there was no recollection in his glance, merely undisguised wonderment.

Esther's radiant smile faded as she searched the handsome face for some sign of recognition. It was Robert Webb, paler, thinner and curiously changed in expression, and yet it was Robert. A sudden terror filled her soul.

"Robert," she cried softly, "don't you know me?"

He stared curiously at her while a slow red burned into his thin cheeks. He lifted the gray hat and showed dark hair streaked plentifully with white.

"I am afraid you have made a mistake," he said in a deep, musical voice that was like Robert's own tones. "My name is Robert, but I am sure I would have remembered you if we had met before. I came to see Mr. Lane. I was directed to take the short cut across the lots from the station. Is this his farm?"

Esther shrank back.

"Yes, this is Mr. Lane's farm. You will find him at the house or barn. Take the path through the orchard."

With a murmured word of thanks the man replaced his hat, leaped the fence and disappeared in the gathering twilight of the orchard.

When Esther went into the house her fair hair was wet with dew, but her eyes were very bright and shining.

In the sitting room they were all gathered about the evening lamp. The light fell on the red table cover and was reflected in the comfortable furnishings of the room. Mr. Lane was turning the almanac with an interest that was unabated by a long winter's pursuit of its closely printed pages. Helen and Agatha were embroidering.

They all glanced up as Esther entered the room, blinking at the light.

"You'll catch your death out in the dampness, child," remonstrated her mother as Esther sat down in a low rocker beside her. "We've been wishing you'd come in and give us a little music."

"You promised to practice that duet with me, Esther," complained Helen. "I don't see why you want to run away every night after supper. You can't guess what's happened since you've been gone," she added teasingly.

The color leaped into Esther's pale cheeks. She struggled for a moment with her quickening breath before her words found utterance. "What has happened, Nell?" she asked, with assumed carelessness.

"Nothing at all," interposed Mrs. Lane, smiling, "except that father's tickled to death because he's got some one to help him all summer."

"Who is it?" asked Esther.

"A man who came here tonight. The station master sent him, knowing your father was put to it for help on the farm. He's young and willing, though he's a little out of health. He's been a soldier, and he wants to have a summer farming it to get back his health again."

"And likewise fill his pocketbook," yawned Farmer Lane, stretching himself luxuriously. "I guess we'll get along as well as may be. He's a fine, pleasant spoken young chap, but he's seen a sight of trouble, I take it. His hair's as white as my own. He's coming tomorrow."

"What is his name?" asked Esther in a muffled voice.

"Robert Munson. Looks like some one I've seen before. Can't think who he is to save my life," said her father, rising and filling his pipe at the mantel-shelf.

With a quick movement Esther arose and was gone from the room.

"Father Lane," exclaimed Agatha in a stage whisper, "it's just come to me who this man looks like! He looks enough like Robert Webb to be his own brother!"

They cast startled glances at one another. "I declare if he doesn't!" gasped Mrs. Lane at last. "I hope Esther won't notice it. It would upset her terribly, pa."

"That may be," returned Mr. Lane decidedly. "Esther's mourned over Rob Webb just two years longer than he was worth. If he'd cared anything for her he'd stayed behind and made a home for her instead of running off and joining the army as if he had no responsibilities at home. Essie better get used to seeing this new chap around. She's got to get cured of this grieving business, by George!"

The large brown fist struck the table with a force that startled the three women. They watched Mr. Lane march from the room with angry strides, and when the door had closed with an echoing slam their heads bent together in whispered consultation.

Memorial day was a holiday, and the Lanes usually spent it with relatives in an adjoining village. This day was no exception, and so it was quite early in the morning that they drove away in the comfortable surrey, leaving Robert Munson standing bareheaded by the wide white gate.

Esther had said nothing about going to the cemetery to place flowers on Robert's grave. She would wait until their return, and when the crowd had left the graveyard she would climb the hill and place her offering there, alone in the sunset.

When the long day was closing they came home again, Esther with her arms full of white blossoms gleaned from her aunt's garden. The new farm hand had taken advantage of the holiday and was nowhere to be seen, so Farmer Lane put up the horses and the others went indoors.

"I'll be back presently, mother," said Esther, tossing her hat on the table and gathering up her flowers. "I'm going to the cemetery now. Lion will come with me."

"Very well, dear," said Mrs. Lane. Esther whistled to the dog and walked through the orchard to the pasture. Robert Munson was leaning on the fence, looking at the reflected lights on the distant hills.

"I am going up on the hill, Robert. Will you come along and carry my flowers?" asked Esther bravely.

"Certainly, Miss Esther," he said pleasantly, and so together they crossed the pasture and climbed the hill to the place where the tall white shaft made a memorial for the fallen soldier boy. All about the base beautiful flowers were strewn, and some one had placed a little flag in the green turf. Robert Munson was looking curiously at the inscription when Esther gently took the flowers from his grasp and dropped them on the ground at his feet. Then she placed her hands on his shoulders and looked into his eyes.

"Robert, Robert!" she cried tragically. "Don't you know me—won't you ever recognize me again?"

Very tenderly Robert Munson took her cold hands in his warm ones, and the firm pressure of his grasp seemed to give her wavering strength more courage.

"Miss Esther," he said gently, "whom do you take me for? Who do you think I am?"

"You are Robert Webb!" she cried eagerly. "See—this stone was erected for you. Your father died of a broken heart when you were killed, and your mother went away to live with her sister. I am here. I have not forgotten. See—I have kept your picture all these years. I have worn it always here." She drew away her hands and pulled a chain from her neck and opened a round locket. The picture therein was that of a young man, much younger than Robert Munson, and while there was a resemblance, it might have been more in expression than in actual features.

"You have made a great mistake, Miss Esther," said Munson at last. "I am so sorry. I wish I knew what to say to you. I suppose you think the report of Webb's death was an error and that I am he, but it is not so." He stretched out a hand to support her wavering figure, but she leaned for support against the white marble.

"I have seen service in the Philippines, and I did know Bob Webb for a short time, and I know he was killed. I am sorry to have to tell you this. As for myself, I wanted a season in the country at hard work to recover my health. It is sheer chance that I came to Little River and was directed to your father's farm. I have parents and brothers and sisters in Boston—in fact, I am afraid I can prove only too well that I am not Robert Webb." He looked down at her with infinite pity in his fine eyes—a pity that was so akin to something warmer that she seemed to feel it unfold her like a comforting garment.

"What am so sorry I have annoyed you. What must you think of me? You see—" Esther broke down and sobbed bitterly, and Robert Munson stood beside her with a friendly hand pressing her shoulder. It was with his handkerchief that Esther wiped away her tears, while he knelt down and deftly strewed the flowers she had brought about the foot of the shaft. Then he rose to his tall height and held out his hand.

"Come, Miss Esther; let us go back home again. There are light and life beyond as well as here. We who are left behind have our work to do in the world. I'm a clumsy fellow at expressing myself, but try to look on the bright side of things."

It was a quiet walk home again across the pasture and through the orchard, and it proved to be many a long day before Esther took the same route again. There seemed to be a veil lifted after that day. Life was brighter, better, and love seemed not to be the hopeless thing she had one time believed.

When another later day came and another Robert told his love by the orchard fence the swallows dipped in the pale light, and the bats darted from the shadows, and the song that the whippoorwill sang seemed a psalm of joy, and the whole world was bathed in a rosy light that was not the reflection from the sunset.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

Truthful Facts in History.

In a leading magazine is printed an article in championship of the use of alcohol as a beverage in which the following extract appears:

"Now, as ever, it is the drinking peoples that lead the progress of humanity. The Jews drank and gave us monotheism. The Greeks drank and gave us art and literature. The Romans drank and gave us law. The Teutons drank and gave us liberty. Britain has drunk (not always wisely) and established commerce. What have the teetotal races done for the betterment of the world?"

The article is taken and analyzed by the New Voice which says: The Jews drank, of course; but where are the Jews now? They are scattered all over the earth without any national home. Total abstinents are now taking up subscriptions everywhere to provide a place for the Jew where he won't be killed.

The Greeks drank, of course; but where are the Greeks now? The Greek civilization is a matter of history, and their descendants are now peddling peanuts to abstainers on the street corners of American cities.

The Romans drank, of course; but where is the Roman Empire to-day? It is a matter of ancient history, and the descendants of these drinking Romans are now prowling around American cities with monkeys and hand organs living off the pennies tossed out to them by abstaining Americans.

The Teutons drank, of course; but what "liberty" did we get from the Teutons? The Teutons for years have been running away from the tyrannical and oppressive of the Teutonic government to find liberty under the Prohibition laws of America.

The Britons drank, of course. But it required 300,000 of these drinking British trained troops to subdue 25,000 abstaining Dutch farmers.

Greece and Rome both died drunk. Wise men are now writing articles on the decay of France, another drinking nation.

Russia has the delirium tremens and will soon die or reform. Japan, a temperance nation, with the oldest dynasty on earth, chased the vodka-soaked Russians all over Eastern Asia.

Teaching Temperance in France. Scientific temperance instruction is getting a strong foothold in France. In the schools, there are now text books covering the question and the Government offers prizes for the best essays on the question, not only by school children, but by mature scholars as well. Temperance restaurants are being promoted in Paris. La Croix Bleue, the gospel temperance propaganda, now has about 4,000 reclaimed drunkards in its ranks. Recently, sixty-eight leading physicians, including officers of the medical department of the army and navy, in the department of Finistere, signed a manifesto to impress on the people the dangers of drink, saying that the ravages of alcohol threaten the very existence of the French Nation. And this is the country where innocent American soothsayers declare there is no drink problem because the people drink "pure, harmless wine."

Grave Danger. The first and most seductive peril, and destroyer of young men, says Mr. Carnegie in the Empire of Business. I am no temperance lecturer in disguise, but a man who knows and tells you what observation has proved to him; and I say to you that you are more likely to fall in your career from acquiring the habit of drinking liquor than from any or all the other temptations likely to assail you. You may yield to almost any other temptation and reform—may brace up, and, if not recover lost ground, at least remain in the race, and secure and maintain a respectable position. But from the insane thirst for liquor escape is almost impossible. I have known but few exceptions to the rule.

Restricting Opium Importation. The Australian Government has prohibited the importation of opium, except for medicinal purposes. Some time ago, several of the States agreed to forbid the sale and growth of the drug, and this action of the Government forbidding its importation, save for proper purposes, completes a great victory for good government in the commonwealth. The traffic had assumed considerable proportions in the country. Considerable quantities were grown, and, in addition to this, twenty-eight tons were imported in 1905. The action of the Government involves the loss of about $50,000 per year in duties.

Effects of Alcohol. The most fearful effect of strong drink is the weakening of the will. An habitual drunkard finds decision impossible. A man without decision can never belong to himself—he belongs to whatever can seize him.

The Most Disconsolate Woman. About the most disconsolate looking woman we know anything about is the woman who holds the team while her husband does the "trading in a saloon."—Kenton Press.

Do not think that it is only the weak-brained that become drunkards. Some of the mightiest intellects the world has ever known were destroyed by alcohol.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Might Be Worse. Of the members of a certain Chicago club there is one, a good fellow, but a hypochondriac, who is a great trial to his friends by reason of his tendency to dilate tediously upon his bodily ailments.

"How's everything, Tom?" asked a friend in the billiard room one evening as he slapped the hypochondriac on the back.

"Oh, awful!" replied the unfortunate one gloomily. "I suffer dreadfully with my hands and feet."

"Pretty tough, old man," was the sympathetic response. "But cheer up! Think how much inconvenience you would suffer without them!"—Detroit Free Press.

Andy's Widda

Allus fir his grave up good.
Car'line an' me—at least she doeb.

Poor Hady! When he fell I stood
Right by him—so—as if it wuz
Me here, him there. I broke his fall
With a quich grab, but—that wuz all.
He left his wife a widda.

An' that wuz what he dreaded, too,
From fire' to las'. He used to say:
"Oh, you're all right! If I wuz you
I wouldn't car' much either way."
It's different when you're goin' to leave
Some one behind to fret an' grieve
An' live a lonely widda!

"I BROKE HIS FALL."

He had her pictur'—jest a girl,
A pleasant young thing, well enough.
But Hady 'lowed she were the pearl.
The best, t'iptooest kind of stuff.
He used to look an' look an' smile
An' say, "Old boy, she ain't the style.
Now, is she, fer a widda?"

An' my! I got that pictur' yet.
I hep' it hinder fer his sake
When I fetched home his things an' met
His folks an'—her. I hed to break
The news, an' mighty hard to do.
Secin' I'd brung poor Hady, too.
Home to his little widda.

Hard work, I tell you, boys, that's so!
An', sakes, ye'd ougter heard her cry!
Be good an' glad you didn't, though.
But—well, she ca'med down by 'an by.
An' then I hed to tell about
Jest how the whole blame scrape came out
Co that inquirin' widda.

WATCHES AND Cream Separators

There are some sensible dairy farmers who buy $1.-, $5.- and $10.- watches, because they serve the purpose of a watch and waste nothing while they last.

But would any of these sensible dairy farmers put their money into and carry a $1.-, $5.- or $10.- watch if it cost them from 25 cents to $1.- that they might otherwise save EVERY DAY to do so?

Most assuredly they would not.

Then why should any dairy farmer buy a cream separator of the $1.-, $5.- or $10.- watch kind where its use DOES mean a WASTE of from 25 cents to $1.- every day, in quantity and quality of product, that a DE LAVAL cream separator would SAVE?

THAT'S the all-important DIFFERENCE between POOR SEPARATORS and POOR WATCHES,—one's good enough while it lasts but the other wastes twice a day from the time its use begins.

A De Laval catalogue is a separator education to be had for the asking.

A WAR STORY.
By a Survivor.

HERE is a war story told by a survivor of Magruder's command in northern Virginia: "Magruder's army was not much more than 20,000 strong, I reckon, and it had to do some right sharp work to stand off three well fed, well equipped Federal armies, each of them nearly twice as large. Well, one day Magruder was out reconnoitering with his staff in the Shenandoah valley, and he stumbled across a likely looking plantation.

"He sent his orderly off on the jump to present his compliments to the mistress of the mansion and tell her that he and his officers were powerful hungry—would she be kind enough to give them some dinner? Of course she sent back word she'd do her best. Along comes a yellow haired young soldier right after that, and he tells her the same thing. It seems he was on his way to join his regiment and was covered with dust and looking tired to death.

"My young friend, I'm doing my best to get up a good dinner for General Magruder and his staff. Get down and come in, and if there is anything left after they get through you shall have it," said this hospitable lady.

"The young chap was hardly out of his teens, and it happened that he came from one of the finest families in Virginia. He dismounted and went into the house. Just naturally he knew how affairs were conducted in the old plantation households, and when Magruder and his staff arrived he did some pretty tall scouting around the dining room. As soon as dinner was announced he marched in at the head of the procession and took a seat next to Magruder. The general looked at him pretty savage for a minute and said:

"Sir, do you know with whom you are dining?"

"The young man looked at him just as sharp and answered back:

"No, sir, I don't. Before I joined the army I was mighty careful who I ate a meal of victuals with, but now I make no distinction whatever."

"That settled it. Magruder looked nettled for a minute and then burst out laughing. So did the others, and the dinner went on with everybody in high good humor."

Gave Grant a Job.

George Bissell, a retired business man of Topeka, once gave General U. S. Grant a job at $9 a week in his harness shop at Rockford, Ill. Later both worked in the Grant tannery at Galena, and then Bissell and U. S. Grant went to buying and shipping hogs together.

Mr. Bissell was conducting a harness shop in Rockford when Grant, a young man, asked for a job. He was put to work and stayed only a short time. He announced that he was going to Galena and did so. Bissell told Grant to look around and if he found an opportunity to let him know and he would go to Galena also.

In a short time Bissell received a letter telling of a vacancy in the Grant tannery at Galena. Bissell sold his shop and went to Galena and worked for Orville Grant, a brother to the future general, who was the manager of the tannery owned by Jesse Grant, the father of the two boys. Both Bissell and U. S. Grant received $9 a week.

During the winter of 1859 Bissell, who had laid by a little money, began buying hogs and shipping them to Cincinnati. After the first consignment U. S. Grant expressed a desire to quit the tannery and join Bissell in the hog business. This was agreeable, and they did very well financially that winter and the following summer.

Shortly after going to Galena a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Bissell. Grant, at his request, was permitted to suggest a name for the boy, and he offered his own, Ulysses Grant Bissell. But the mother took a hand and changed the name to Edwin Ulysses Bissell.

"When Grant left Galena," said Mr. Bissell, "he begged me to go with him. He was a colonel then.

"George, if you will go with me I will give you the best place I can," he said, "and I will see that we are always together."

"And I would have gone if my wife had not been at the point of death with consumption. When Grant left I said that he would make the best officer in the army. He had the making of an officer—the ability to carry out his plans. Many persons laughed when I made the remark, along with them the colonel's brother, Orville.

"He said that he could not see it that way; that Ulysses had not succeeded in business and he did not think he would succeed in the army. But it was not long before Grant was heard from. As time went on the papers began to have more and more to say about the work of Grant. The home papers were full of it."—New York World.

Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill

Will bring their combined Wild West and Far East exhibition to Geneva June 14, Auburn June 15, Syracuse June 16. An event of unusual interest to people in this vicinity will be the engagement of Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Pawnee Bill's Far East as noted in the above headlines. Varied and wonderful will be the several spectacular scenes and the entire exhibition will take on an educational and historic character, which gives it an interest possessed by no other tented exhibition. An Oriental spectacle of gorgeous splendors will be interpreted by groups and delegations from the Far East, introducing Rossi's Musical Elephants as the particular feature of the Oriental scene. The Battle of Summit Springs, a reproduction of the historic Indian conflict in which Buffalo Bill killed Chief Tall Bull, of the Dog Soldiers, will be the principal Wild West scene, participated in by Col. Wm. F. Cody, the original and only Buffalo Bill, who will re-enact his original part. The Great Train Hold-up by Indians will picture an early epoch in railroad building, and a Holiday at "T-E" Ranch will typify the pleasures and pastimes of the plainsmen. The World's Roughriders, led in person at every performance by Buffalo Bill, who positively appears, no matter what the weather, will embrace equestrian experts from the world's nations. Wild riding Bedouins from the sands of Sahara, and the aborigines from our own rolling prairies will ride side by side; both sides of the earth will be typified and the saddlehip of many nations will be brought into immediate comparison. Every item in the program of the Wild West and Far East is real and authentic. The cavalry charges; artillery drills, war dances, roughriding, and Oriental pageants are real and accurate in every detail. The tepees of the Indians are the real prairie homes of the redmen; the trappings of the ponies, the camp outfits, and every stick and stitch of the equipment is just what it is represented to be. And the feature of features will be the appearance in the saddle, at every performance, of the real and genuine Buffalo Bill, the last of the great scouts. Arrangements have been made with the railroad officials to run special excursions at reduced round-trip rates, so that everybody who so desires may take advantage of their opportunity to visit this world-renowned exhibition.

A Memorial Meeting.

The Sherwood Equal Rights Association jointly with the W. C. T. U., held Thursday, May 19, a memorial meeting for Miss Victoria Bradley who passed to the "great beyond" April 15. She was an active member of both organizations and was the efficient president of the Equal Rights Association, and for a long time was superintendent of the department of Peace and Arbitration in the W. C. T. U. Mary C. Hudson, president of the Union who presided, opened the meeting by reading the 19th Psalm and led in prayer. She spoke a few words of appreciation of the life and character of Miss Bradley and recited a prayer which was a favorite of the deceased. Hettie Morrison sang very sweetly and touchingly "We are Going Down the Valley One by One." On behalf of the Union, R. H. Sieson read a tribute to her intellectual ability and her great gift in recitation, one firm in her convictions, a personality influencing in a marked degree those whose privilege it was to know her. Her brother, Samuel Bradley, gave an interesting account of her life from childhood up, revealing a sweet, strong character—a beautiful tribute from a brother, for a sister. Emily Howland read a letter written for the occasion, from Miss Flanders, a former principal of the Sherwood Select school. She told of her worth as friend, of her intellectual force, her democratic ideas, a person to be honored and loved. Emily Howland herself paying a very appreciative tribute to her as neighbor and friend, spoke of her wonderful grasp of the problems of the day, her great helpfulness because she knew and understood and was ever ready to pass it on when needed, and read that beautiful poem of James Whitcomb Riley's, "There is no Death." Isabel Howland said the best memorial would be to try and carry on the work she has laid down as she would have us do. All these tributes show how a strong character seeking knowledge and the hidden springs of action, can and do have a wonderful power and influence, though physically handicapped as she was and whose sphere of action was limited because of it. Perhaps this very disability, shutting out from much that would call for strenuous effort, gave us a unique, highly intellectual, influential personality, kind and sympathetic. In closing this impressive service Hettie Morrison sang by request that sweetly solemn dirge, "Lay Her Low in the Clover or the Snow." The Equal Rights Association was appointed to meet in two weeks with Fannie Slocum as president.

An Invitation.

Miss June presents her compliments and heartily extends a cordial invitation to her very dearest friends To spend a whole long month with her—thirty happy days—When she will entertain you all, in lots of different ways. She'll give you lovely roses, and daisies by the score. With pansies and forget-me-nots, and ah, so many more; And if you're fond of music—a concert she will plan. Her feathered prima donnas are the finest ever heard—The orioles and robins, each happy singing bird. And if you are artistic, she has pictures large and small. Whose subjects are so varied she can surely please you all. A landscape bathed in sunshine, or moonlight on the sea, Some sleepy cows in pasture, or a shady chestnut tree. Whenever you are hungry she can give you lots to eat—And isn't cream and strawberries a most delicious treat? So write her your acceptance and be sure and send it soon, And then I know we all will spend a lovely month with June. —St. Nicholas.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions on the death of Mrs. Clara Young have been placed on the records of the East Venice Hall Association, the deceased being a member of the organization. Whereas, We have met with a great loss in the death of one of our most valued and faithful members, Mrs. Clara Young, and Whereas, She was a member of our association from its formation to the time of her death, and was never absent from the meetings except when prevented by illness, and Whereas, Her absence will be keenly felt by the association on all occasions of our meeting together, and we shall miss her as friend and associate, therefore it is Resolved, That we express to her bereaved husband, our appreciation of her worth as a friend, of her willing helpfulness at all times, of her faithful attendance at our meetings, and her never-failing interest in this organization. Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the husband in his great sorrow and loneliness. Resolved, That these resolutions be placed on the records of this association, a copy sent to the husband of the deceased, and that they be published in THE GENOA TRIBUNE. COMMITTEE

Attractive Farms.

We hear a great deal of the "city beautiful." Corporations and individuals are spending millions of dollars to beautify the cities. In the planning of buildings, both public and private, much consideration is given the aesthetic in architecture. Manufacturers are expending vast sums in making their factories and factory grounds attractive to the eye. Skillful landscape gardeners are converting the parks and school grounds into gardens of beauty. Beauty is given high consideration in all the plans for city improvement. Why not the farm beautiful? This need not necessarily mean large expenditure of money. Nature has been more liberal in her gifts of natural beauty to the farm than to the city. It will be difficult to find a rural landscape anywhere that is not naturally beautiful. Only as man disfigures it with his ungainly structures and slovenly methods of culture is the farm unattractive. Making beautiful the average farm home requires only a small expenditure of money. The ordinary farm house, painted and in good repair, standing in the midst of a green lawn, with large shade trees interspersed here and there, makes an attractive picture. The barns and out-buildings, though very ordinary in their construction, may have a neat appearance. Red and white paint applied by the farmer will aid wonderfully in making them pleasing to the passer-by. The fields may be cleanly cultivated. The orchards trimmed and rubbish removed and burned, fences in repair and yards neat and clean are some of the essentials in making the farm beautiful. They advertise the owner as a thrifty farmer and add many dollars to the selling value of the farm. This has been called "the practical age;" but it is also the golden era of the beautiful.—Rural Life.

SPLIT LOG DRAG VALUABLE DEVICE

Makes Impassable Roads Smooth and Serviceable.

CAN BE MADE AT LOW COST

Invention of D. Ward King, a Good Road Advocate of Missouri, is a Very Simple Contrivance That Any Farmer Can Have For the Price of a Few Pieces of Iron and Some Nails.

The split log drag is one of the devices which refuse to be scouted out of existence in the making of good earth roads. It was devised a number of years ago by D. Ward King of Matfield, Mo. Mr. King is a native of Ohio.

He says that one grave mistake is commonly made in constructing the CONDITION OF A ROADWAY BEFORE USING DRAG.

[From Southern Good Roads Magazine.] drag. That lies in making it too heavy. It should be so light that one man can easily lift it. Besides, a light drag responds more readily to various methods of hitching and to the shifting of the position and weight of the operator, both of which are essential considerations.

A dry red cedar log is the best material for the drag. Red elm and walnut when thoroughly dried are excellent, and box elder, soft maple and even willow are preferred to oak, hickory or ash.

The log should be seven or eight feet long and from ten to twelve inches in diameter and carefully split down the middle. The heaviest and best slab should be selected for the front. The two slabs should be held thirty inches apart by the stakes. A strip of iron about three and a half feet long, three or four inches wide and one-fourth inch thick may be used for the blade. This should be attached to the front slab. A platform of inch boards, held together by three cleats, should be placed on the stakes between the slabs. An ordinary trace chain is strong enough to draw the implement, provided the clevis is not fastened through a link.

The successful operation of a drag involves two principles which, when thoroughly understood and intelligently applied, make road working with this implement simple. The first concerns the length and position of the hitch, while the second deals with the position of the driver on the drag. For ordinary purposes the snatch link or clevis should be fastened far enough toward the blade end of the chain to force the unloaded drag to follow the team at an angle of forty-five degrees. This will cause the earth to move along the face of the drag smoothly and will give comparatively light draft to the team, provided the driver rides in the line of draft.

Usually two horses are enough to pull a drag over an ordinary earth road. The team should be driven with one horse on either side of the right

RESULTS GAINED BY THE DRAG.

[From Southern Good Roads Magazine.] hand wheel track or rut the full length of the portion to be dragged and the return made over the other half of the roadway.

The drag does the best work when the soil is moist, but not sticky.

The advantages to be gained from the persistent use of a road drag may be summarized as follows:

First.—The maintenance of a smooth, serviceable earth road, free from ruts and mudholes.

Second.—Obtaining such a road surface with the expenditure of a little money and labor in comparison with the money and labor required for other methods.

Third.—The reduction of mud in wet weather and of dust in dry weather.

There are also several minor benefits gained from the use of a road drag besides the great advantages which always accrue from the formation of improved highways, of which may be mentioned the banishment of weeds and grass from the dragged portion of the road.

Road Builder Valuable Citizen.

No community can have a more valuable citizen than he who understands the theory of road building and who is at the same time a practical road builder and an enthusiast on the subject.

ROAD BUILDING AS AN ART.

Establishment of Chairs on Subject in Colleges Urged by an Expert.

Samuel Hill, a son-in-law of James J. Hill, the northwest railway magnate and the president of the American Road Builders' association, takes a practical view of the roadmaking art. He asserts it needs trained men and advocates the establishment of road building chairs in all the important colleges of the United States and especially at West Point.

He has succeeded in impressing this view upon some of the institutions of learning of the state of Washington, of which he is a resident, and 200 young men in that state are studying the road building course this year.

Mr. Hill declares that in five years in consequence of the interest taken by the local colleges in this matter and the progressive attitude of the legislature, which devotes one-third of the revenues of the state to road building, Washington will have the best system of roads in the United States.

Whether Washington, one of the youngest states of the Union, will be able in that time to outstrip all her sister states in providing a modern highway system may be open to question, but there is sound sense in the recommendation that a system of education in practical road building shall be established as a prerequisite to the construction of a general system of permanent highways in the United States.

Much of the money heretofore devoted to the construction of roadways that are lanes in dry weather and a succession of quagmires in wet has previously been wasted, partly through the ignorance of the roadmakers as to what constituted a good road.

The first step toward putting an end to this waste and entering upon scientific methods will be the training of a lot of students in the art of making roads.

ROADWAYS OF LEAVES.

Give One the Impression of Carpet, as They Are Noiseless.

Leaves without a doubt would be considered by many a very poor material for making roadways in most parts of the world, but in certain districts in the United States, especially Florida, and in some sections of Europe such a material is used with great success. In these sections are miles and miles of road that would be almost impassable by reason of the deep sand were it not for leaves.

Serviceable for this purpose are the leaves of the long leaf pine. These leaves, which are much like straw in appearance, should be raked over the sandy roadbed once a year, say about October.

The result is a highway that gives one the impression of a carpet, as neither the horses' feet nor the wheels of the vehicles make any noise.

Good Highways Aid Education.

Good roads aid education, and the diffusion of knowledge is followed by increased demand for improved highways. Good roads and good schools go hand in hand.

A Good Roads Movement.

We've had a good roads movement down to Pohnick, on the creek. We valued some ready cash for what we couldn't get on tick. An' bein' a particular job, we thought it would be wise To get some men of probity to come an' supervise. An' as a further guarantee 'gainst chances of neglect We took another set of men an' told 'em to inspect. An' these arrangements didn't seem jes' what they ought to be Till we'd secured some talent competent to oversee.

There arose misunderstandin' 'bout emolument and rank. But the payroll checks kep' comin' very regular to the bank.

Somewhat the highways didn't seem to lose their ruts an' lumps. An' every time we went to town we had to bump the bumps.

We found it hard to comprehend what such delay could mean In work so well inspected, supervised an' overseen.

The only manual labor on this job that seemed so slow Was done with great reluctance by a small boy with a hoe.

The situation naturally shocked our civic pride. We called some meetin's, an' the proper people testified.

We got the overseers to tell exactly what they knew. An' heard from the inspectors an' the supervisors too.

Then we drew up resolutions an' delivered an address To vindicate our efforts to uplift an' to progress.

We have solved the difficulty, an' our hearts are full of joy At seein' discipline maintained. We freed that no 'ount boy.
