Mrs. D. E. Singer made her first trip this week Wednesday with her millinery goods at the home of Mrs. C. G. Barger.

Norman Atwater is at Council Bluff visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Atwater. A letter was received from him last week saying he liked it there very much but would like a good drink of water from old Cayuga as the water there from the Missouri river was something terrible, so thick that it could be stirred up with a spoon like mush or buckwheat batter.

After congratulations the company were served to a very sumptuous dinner. The rooms were tastily decorated with autumn leaves, ivy and clematis vines. The presents consisted of silver, table linen, glass ware, a clock, pictures, etc., were all useful as well as ornamental.

The guests from out of town were Mrs. Heeler Smith of Newfield, Mrs. Fred Wheeler of Auburn, and Chas. Butler and family of Spafford.

Gifts were received from Mexico City, Binghamton, Auburn, Newburgh and Ferndale from friends who were unable to be present.

The happy couple departed amid showers of rice and confetti, carrying with them many heartfelt wishes for their future happiness and prosperity as well as regrets that we must lose one of our most estimable young ladies. They went south on the 2:30 train and after a short wedding trip will be at home in Sterling where the groom will preach for the coming year.

Fire At Venice Center.

The building known as the old Murdock store at Venice Center, was completely destroyed by fire about 6:15 o'clock Thursday morning. The building was occupied by Frank Tuttle, who conducted a general store, and by the post office, A. M. Sisson, postmaster. The upper part of the building was used as a public hall. The origin of the fire is not known. It is stated that it began while the proprietor of the store was at breakfast and that no one was in the building. Mr. Tuttle usually slept in the store, and had left there but a short time before. Nothing was saved from the building, as the fire had gained such headway before it was discovered, that it was impossible. The postoffice belongings were destroyed except those kept in the safe.

The destruction of this building is a great loss to the little village and community. It was owned by George Whyte and there was some insurance on the building, and the merchandise also, but we could not learn the amount. The hall was used by the Grange and their furnishings were lost, besides the chairs and hymn books belonging to the church. As the church was undergoing repairs, services were held in the hall last Sunday.

The scale house to the west of the burning building was saved with difficulty, and if that had burned doubtless the elevator nearby would also have been destroyed.

The building, which is now in ruins, was an old landmark and was observable for miles around. The residents of Venice Center say that there wasn't a building in that vicinity of more value to the place from a point of usefulness.

It is a hard blow for the community, as well as the direct losers by the fire, and everybody greatly feels the loss. Genoa can fully sympathize with her sister village in this calamity.

The Scrap Book

Overtalked.

A negro in Mississippi who was to be tried for murder promised the prosecuting attorney to plead guilty. The time came for trial. The prosecuting attorney had no witnesses. He thought none were necessary. While the other business of the court was being cleared up a local lawyer sat down by the negro and asked, "Do you want to get out of this?"

"Yassir; reckon I does."

"Have you got $5?"

"No, sah, but I kin git it."

So the negro raised the five and gave it to the lawyer, who told him to say nothing, but when the judge asked him to plead, to plead not guilty instead of guilty.

The negro was arraigned. He pleaded not guilty.

"Look here, you black scoundrel!" yelled the prosecuting attorney, "what do you mean by that plea? Didn't you promise me a dozen times you would plead guilty?"

"Yassir, I done promised that," replied the negro, "but I reckon I done overtalked myself."

Masks.

Hope, the great pioneer;
Love where none can bind,
Youth that looks before her,
Age that looks behind.
Joy with brow like summer's,
Care with winter's calm;
Masks are and mummers
At life's gate.

Power with narrow forehead,
Wealth with niggard palm;
Wisdom old, whose hoar head
Vainly a barren calm;
Haughty overcomers
In their pomp and state,
Masks all and mummers
At death's gate!

—William Watson.

It Was Quite Appropriate.

A famous divinity professor who was visiting in the north of England had been invited to preside at the church ceremony of the baptism of the last arrived infant in the already crowded house of a local minister. The guest gave out for congregational singing a paraphrase much favored on such occasions.

"Let us," said he, "sing from the fifth paraphrase, beginning at the second verse. As sparks in close succession rise."

To his consternation the congregation giggled.

Afterward, asking the "minister's man" what had been wrong, that functionary replied:

"Ye see, professor, the minister's name is Sparks, and yonder is his tenth bairn!"

Easing His Mind.

Jim McCleary was an old Park row newspaper derrick who hadn't had a job in years. He depended on the largess of friends of better days, his most liberal patron being a prominent writer whom Jim had "broken in" as a cub at police headquarters. Never a week went by that he didn't "slip" Jim quarters, halves and dollars, with no expectation of ever being paid back.

Suddenly Jim disappeared from Park row. He was missing for nearly a year when his old patron walked in on him in a Broadway cafe. Jim was dressed up like a Wall street mining promoter and was "opening wine."

"Why, hello, Bill! How are you?" exclaimed Jim, and, too astonished to refuse, Bill joined him in a drink. As they were about to part Jim gave his friend another cordial handclasp and Bill felt something pressed into his palm.

"What's this for, Jim?" he asked, opening his hand and seeing it was money.

"Bill, that's that dollar I've owed you for so long," said Jim. "I've never forgotten it, and now I'm glad it's off my mind." —New York World.

Dr. Short Was Short.

When the Rev. David Short was pastor of the Penn Avenue Baptist church at Scranton he was zealous in the work of securing new members. One man, with whom he had labored exhaustively, was finally persuaded as to his Christian duty, but could not make up his mind whether to become a Baptist or a Methodist. Finally he hit upon a compromise and wrote to the doctor that he had decided to unite with the Methodists, but would like to be baptized in the Baptist church by immersion. This so exasperated the good doctor that he sent the following reply: "I regret that I cannot accommodate you, but this church does not take in washing."

He Wouldn't Interfere.

An old Scotchman went to stay for a short time, as he said, with friends of his, a young couple with no family. After living with them for some two or three weeks the young couple began to get tired of their visitor, but did not like to tell him the state of their feelings toward him, so they arranged a little plan between them as to how they would get rid of him.

"Tomorrow," said the husband, "when I come home for dinner I shall quarrel about the soup and say it is not good. In the midst of our quarrel we will appeal to our friend, and if he takes your part I will give him notice to leave the house, and if he takes my part you do just the same."

Next day at dinner the "quarrel" arose about the soup, and in the heat of the argument "uncle" was appealed to, but he coolly replied:

"Ye see, ma freens, for a' the time I intend tae be here—just a month or twa—I ha'e made up my mind no tae interfere wi' ye'r house affairs."

THE POINT OF THE JOKE.

It Was Difficult for the Englishman, but He Finally Saw It.

A party of Englishmen were in Chicago sightseeing some years ago. They were entertained at dinner by some Chicago Englishmen who have lived in America long enough to have a keen appreciation of the American idea of a joke. During the evening all the members of the party told stories or sang songs and entertained according to their several abilities.

One of the English visitors could see nothing funny in the stories told by the Chicago Englishmen. Every time one of them would tell a good American story at which most of the party would laugh uproariously this particular Englishman would adjust his monocle to his eye and, looking wonderingly around the table, would remark, "But, I say, I don't see anything in that to laugh at, y' know."

One of the Chicago men finally recited an original poem. The poem told of an Englishman who had come to America and after being in this country only a short time had died and gone to another and much warmer country. Ten years passed, and one day an imp passing that way heard the Englishman laughing uproariously. "Why, what are you laughing at?" inquired the imp.

"Oh, oh, oh, such a funny story as I heard in America. Oh, it was so funny!" laughed the victim, and he held his hands to his sides and almost doubled up with merriment.

"A story you heard? Why, you've heard no story," said the imp. "You've been dead ten years."

"Yes, yes, I know, I know," cried the man. "But I've just seen the joke."

This poem set the table in a roar. Amid all the laughing and shouting the obtuse visitor adjusted his monocle and drawled out, "But, I say, I don't see anything funny in that, y' know."

"No," replied the man who had read the poem, as quick as a flash—"Of course you don't. You haven't been dead ten years." And even the obtuse Englishman saw the point.

Ended the Debate.

The boldest man in congress is Representative Ollie James of Kentucky.

One hot afternoon when he was engaged in a heated colloquy with Mr. Payne of New York he shook his fist and wagged his head with great energy. "Will the gentleman from Kentucky allow me to interrupt him?" queried Mr. Payne politely. "For a question, of course," agreed James.

"Well," retorted Payne, "shake not your gory locks at me." That ended the debate.

Her Brand.

Two Glasgow women were strong supporters of a local co-operative store. But one day as one of them was passing down the street she was surprised to see her friend coming out of a licensed grocer's shop. "I thought,

"I CAN OBLEEGE YOU."

Mrs. Broon, ye wis a member o' the co-operative company?" was her remark.

"So I am; but, dae ye ken this, there's nae shop in Glesca I get sic nice beef ham as is here," was the prompt reply.

Some days later Mrs. Broon's friend went into this shop to buy a sample of the beef ham. On entering the shop she asked the man if he would give her "a pun o' the beef ham Mrs. Broon gets here." A quiet smile stole over the shopman's face. "Oh yes," he said; "I can oblige you. Hiv you brocht a bottle wi' you?"—Glasgow Times.

Not His Bill.

Representative Gilbert M. Hitchcock, who lives at the Connecticut apartment house when he is in Washington, received a letter one morning and read it with great surprise. It was a bill for 128 parasols. Mrs. Hitchcock also read it with surprise, not to say shock.

On looking more closely Mr. Hitchcock made a discovery which led him to look at his wife with an air of triumph and say:

"This is easily explained, my dear. I have not been buying parasols by the hundred. I did not buy these. This bill is made out to Frank H. Hitchcock, the postmaster general, who is a single man."

Then the congressman sent the bill to the cabinet officer with this note:

This was opened by mistake. The enclosure was read with amazement.

GILBERT M. HITCHCOCK.

But the reason the postmaster general had bought the bale of parasols was that he wanted to use them as favors at a collation at which he was host.—Popular Magazine.

Texas Editor's Good Advice to His Subscribers.

AID HOME BY TRADING HERE.

If You Expect Your Own Community to Grow You Must Help It by Keeping Your Money Circulating Where It Belongs—Little Short of Criminal to Do Business Elsewhere.

The Weekly Avalanche of Lubbock, Tex., in the Panhandle country, recently published an article, headed "Trade at Home," that every country newspaper should publish. The Lubbock paper says:

"If the people of this town and surrounding country ever expect the business of this territory to amount to anything they must trade at home. It is little short of criminal on the part of the people to do otherwise, as long as those who are engaged in business here will do the right thing by their customers."

"There has been a lot of complaint lately about the number of people who are ordering their goods by mail. This would not be so bad were it not a fact that one can purchase the best in the market in this city and at prices as cheap as one can obtain anywhere else.

Value of Trading at Home.

"When you send your money away from home it is gone where you can never hope to see it again. If you spend it at home you stand a chance at least to get another shot at it. Trade at home. If you don't you may be surprised to see some of our fine structures go to the bad, for they cannot live without your patronage, and they had enough confidence in you to put thousands of dollars into the various ventures of the city, and it is no more than your duty to show your appreciation by giving them your patronage."

"The business men of Lubbock stand without a peer in the business and social world. They are the cream of their calling, and you discredit them before the eyes of the world by sending your good hard cash out of the town for the very things you can buy at home for less money, all things considered."

"Trade at home. Take a pride in your home town and home merchants.

Tell it to the world at large that you are one of the home builders. Put on your thinking cap the next time you feel inclined to send money out of the county and see if you had not better keep it where it rightly belongs."

THE VALUE OF A KICK.

It Is Good For Your Business to Know People's Opinion of It.

The best time to remedy a mistake is before it happens. And the next best time is as soon after it happens as possible.

No business house can know too much of what the outside world thinks of it. The average man is slow to complain. That is why thousands of concerns are habitually back on their orders. The average man will let the grievance pass, but next time he takes his business somewhere else.

The big department stores in large cities realize the importance of knowing what possible grievances people may have against them. They put the complaint department in the most accessible places, and they make sure that the person with the kick may be able to give it while it is hot.

"Please complain when anything seems wrong," is the constant invitation to the public. "We want to treat you right, but we can't watch everything at once."—Butchers' Advocate.

To Beat Mail Order Houses.

A merchant in a small town who saw a farmer receive goods at a railroad station from a mail order house told him he could have sold the same goods for less money and saved the freight besides. The farmer asked him why he didn't let people know.

Though he had taken the home paper regularly for years, he never saw a line in it that such goods were to be had. The mail order house came after the trade and got it. Merchants and manufacturers who fail to advertise what they have should not expect to compete with those who do.

The very best articles at the lowest prices will be passed by when people are unaware of their existence. Probably if the merchant had advertised and the farmer had bought from him he wouldn't have known that his advertisement had brought the business anyway, and so wouldn't have given it credit.

SEAVER'S LAXATIVE TONIC TABLETS.

The Correct Laxative for Women

Men physical beauty, enticing as it is, will not permanently avail in the absence of a clean, fresh, healthy skin and complexion. A woman may have perfect features, a youthful form and a graceful figure, but without the health and bloom of a clear skin, perfect beauty is impossible.

When the skin is muddy or cloudy or marred by moth spots and pimples, nine times in ten it is due to nature's inability to perform the function essential to perfect health.

Many a Genoa lady could truthfully tell of the remarkable properties of Seaver's Laxative Tonic Tablets as a skin beautifier, and the reason is easy to find.

They are purely vegetable extracts known to have a selective action for the skin.

They improve the complexion, clear up the skin, enrich the blood, stimulate the liver, tone up the intestines and cure chronic constipation by encouraging the bowels and assisting nature to do its own perfect work. J. S. Banker recommends them with every confidence and a 25-cent package of Seaver's Laxative Tonic Tablets must do as is claimed of them or you can have your money back.

Announcement.

To old customers as well as new, I wish to say that I am prepared to do all kinds of wood work in connection with my blacksmithing. All work quickly and neatly done. Prices reasonable.

Leprosy in England.

Leprosy is said to have been introduced into England by the Normans, but hospitals for lepers were in existence before the battle of Hastings. Leprosy has been practically absent from England since Elizabeth's reign. The leper windows to be seen in ancient churches still attest the grip which the disease once had on England, lepers being severely separated from the rest of the community, a separation which extended even to ecclesiastical matters. Though its ravages were greater among the poorer classes, it was not unknown among the nobility and gentry, and Robert the Bruce, victor of Bannockburn, succumbed to it in 1329.

The business men of Lubbock stand without a peer in the business and social world. They are the cream of their calling, and you discredit them before the eyes of the world by sending your good hard cash out of the town for the very things you can buy at home for less money, all things considered.

Forced to Leave Home.

Every year a large number of poor sufferers whose lungs are sore and racked with coughs are urged to go to another climate. But this is costly and not always sure. There's a better way. Let Dr. King's New Discovery cure you at home. "I cured me of lung trouble," writes W. R. Nelson of Calamine, Ark., "when all else failed and I gained 47 pounds in weight. It's surely the King of all cough and lung cures." Thousands owe their lives and health to it. It's positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, LaGrippe, Asthma, Croup, all Throat and Lung Troubles. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater, King Ferry.

The Thrice-A-Week World

Without a Rival in its Field, the Largest, Cheapest and Best Newspaper

Published at the Price.

Read in every English-Speaking Country

It has invariably been the great effort of the Thrice-a-Week edition of the New York World to publish the news impartially in order that it may be an accurate reporter of what has happened. It tells the truth, irrespective of party, and for that reason it has achieved a position with the public unique among papers of its class.

The subscription season is now at hand and this is the best offer that will be made to you.

If you want the news as really is, subscribe to the Thrice-a-Week edition of the New York World, which comes to you every other day except Sunday, and thus is practically a daily at the price of a weekly.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and THE GENOA TRIBUNE together for one year for $1.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00.

High and Low.

The highest and lowest points in the country, exclusive of Alaska, are in the same state, California, and within 100 miles of each other. They are Mount Whitney, 14,500 feet above the sea level, and Death valley, 450 feet below the sea.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

The greatest blessings that come to us are those that come as beautiful surprises as the free gift of God.—Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D. D., Methodist Episcopal, Omaha, Neb.

Church Work.

Present day church work is to minister to all needs of men every day in the week the year round.—Rev. W. A. Bartlett, Congregationalist, Chicago.

Purpose of the World.

The purpose of this world is that men may know, love and labor and thus come to the likeness of the Creator.—Rev. L. A. Hanley, Baptist, Providence, R. I.

Using God's Money.

We must be careful lest we use for ourselves the money which rightly belongs to the Lord and thereby "rob God."—Rev. L. M. Zimmerman, Lutheran, Baltimore.

Golden Rule Wisdom.

Man has yet to learn the wisdom of the Golden Rule, and when he does a great many valleys will be exalted and some mountains will be brought low.—Rev. Claude H. Priddy, Methodist Episcopal, Brooklyn.

True Leader.

A true leader is a man of ideas, a man who advocates a certain line of action, and he works through the press and public speech that the people may be convinced of the wisdom of his course.—Rev. Dr. Mason, Unitarian, Pittsburgh.

The Simple Truth.

The truth that saves is simple and as sublime as it is simple. Nothing is so different as the telling of important truths over and over until they become the master light of all our seeing.—Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, D. D., Presbyterian, Chicago.

Stumbling Into Heaven.

Some people stumble and fall and get up again and stumble and fall and get up again. It is better for them to keep stumbling on and finally stumble into heaven than not to get there at all.—Rev. E. Vaughan, Methodist, Santa Monica, Cal.

Hatred and Love.

Hatred is a rust on the sword; hatred is the mildew that blights; hatred is a disease that consumes. Love redeems, forgiveness exalts, pity refines, social sympathy and brotherhood nourish mankind.—Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Stamp of Condemnation.

Jesus wished to stamp with condemnation the spirit of the world, which estimates a man's dignity by his wealth and his degradation by his poverty. He chose to be born of humble parentage, in an obscure village, in a wretched stable.—Cardinal Gibbons, Roman Catholic.

Value of Christianity.

Christianity puts a man in the way of realizing the right kind of ambitions instead of the wrong kind. It warns us against seizing the shadow and letting go the substance. It gives us a scale of values which helps us against mistakes of judgment.—Dr. A. T. Hadley, Presbyterian, New Haven, Conn.

Superior Courage.

It requires courage of a superior sort to refuse the servilities which fashion exacts. We shall not be free till we proclaim our personal power of veto. We should judge for ourselves what is right, what is practicable, what suits our circumstances and needs.—Rev. C. E. Nash, Universalist, Los Angeles, Cal.

Warning For Women.

Let every young woman know well that no young man who would interfere with her religious duties is worth the time she wastes on him, because he has not sense enough to value what is best in womankind and will surely wound her mortally some day by a shameful lack of respect.—Rev. Clinton B. Adams, Congregationalist, Philadelphia.

The Love of Christ.

Like some Alpine summit lifting its head above its fellows, supreme in its beauty, its majesty and its snow white purity, so does the love of Jesus rise above all others, capturing our hearts and leading us to exclaim with Paul it is "the love of Christ which passeth knowledge." The love of Christ is of surpassing wonder because of its adaptation to human experience. His love is wonderful in its transforming power. It is a love that changes us. As we live beneath its influence we become changed into his own likeness.—Rev. Thomas Henry Sprague, Baptist, Philadelphia.

Two Ways to Live on Earth.

There are two ways that lie open before every person to live this earthly life. One is the "self life." A person may make "self" the center and circumference of all his thought and conduct. He may toil and labor, spend his energies, grow old, lie down and die as the beast dieth, "living for self, thinking for self, for self and none besides, as if Jesus never had lived, as if he never had died." The other is the "unselfish life," or the life that glorifies God, the highest possible ideal, and at its end he who lives it will feel he has not lived in vain. Others will say the world is better because he has lived in it and poorer because he has been taken from it and best of all when he stands in the presence of the Master to hear his welcome: "Well done. Thou hast been faithful.  I will make thee ruler.  Enter into the joy of thy Lord." These two ways lie open before every human being, and blessed is he who renounces the former and has a vision of the possibilities of the godlike life.—Rev. William P. Fulton, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

Kill a Murderer.

A merciless murderer is Appendixitis with many victims. But Dr. King's New Life Pills kill it by prevention. They gently stimulate stomach, liver and bowels, preventing that clogging that invites appendixitis, curing Constipation, Headache, Biliousness, Chills. 25c at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry.

Got Him Without a Grip.

A cricket club formed a gymnasium for the use of its members, and an instructor was engaged to teach jiu jitsu. Recently one of the cricketers turned up with a bandaged head and said some youth had inflicted the injury.

"What!" exclaimed the jiu jitsu instructor. "You don't mean to say that a youth knock you about like that? Why didn't you try jiu jitsu?"

"Nonsense! There's no conceivable situation to which jiu jitsu cannot be successfully applied. Show me where he gripped you."

"I'm sorry to say he didn't grip me anywhere. He dropped a brick on my head from a third floor window."—London Telegraph.

It Saves You Money.

The special half-price sale of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia by J. S. Banker means the saving of a few dollars on every family's yearly bill for medicines.

Mr. J. S. Banker has so much faith in the superior merit of this medicine that he says: "If Dr. Howard's specific does not cure you, come back to his store and he will return your money."

This remedy is not an ordinary medicine. It is the favorite formula of a well known physician, and has the endorsement of hundreds of physicians of eminence in their profession, who prescribe it in cases of constipation, dyspepsia or liver trouble, knowing from experience that it will make a complete and lasting cure.

Robbed of Her Happiness.

"You are not looking well, Mrs. Wellington."

"No; I haven't slept well lately."

"What's the trouble? Has the weather affected you?"

"Oh, no, it isn't that."

"I'll tell you what it is. You ought to give up the practice of drinking coffee at night. I know a lot of people who toss awake all night after they have been out to a late dinner and finished with coffee. I had to quit it myself."

"I'm sure that isn't the cause of my trouble."

"Have you seen a doctor?"

"No. A doctor couldn't help me any."

"But how can you tell until you go to one and let him examine you?"

"Well, if you must know, I'm worrying about my husband. He hasn't kicked at the size of the bills lately, and he's been so kind and even temperate right along for a month or two that I feel almost sure he must be leading a double life. Ah, if he would only get to grumbling and making it disagreeable around the house again!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Waiter With Two Cars.

A Cleveland party recently sojourning in a Toronto hotel decided to take an automobile ride about the city. They approached the extremely self-conscious clerk and asked him where they could secure a car.

"Our head waiter has two, don't you know?" he replied.

It took some little time to recover from this shock, but presently one of the party ventured to ask the price.

"Three an hour," was the answer.

That was voted satisfactory, and at luncheon turned to the nearest waiter.

"Who is the chap that owns two automobiles?" he asked.

"I am the chap," the waiter replied, and he threw such a freezing emphasis into the word "chap" that it was fairly frost cracked.

They finished their luncheon before they had enough courage to ask the price.

"Four dollars an hour," the waiter replied with haughty indifference.

Then they went uptown and hired a very good car for $3 an hour.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Gaelic A B C.

Every letter in the Gaelic alphabet is represented by a tree. The alphabet of today consists of eighteen letters—in ancient Gaelic seventeen—and now, as of old, all the letters with the exception of g, t and u, which stand for ivy, furze and heather, are called after trees.

The Gaelic A B C of today runs: Alim, beite, coll, dur, eagh, fearn, gath, huath, iogh, luis, muin, mun, oif, peith, ruis, sull, teine, ur, which is equivalent to saying elm, birch, hazel, oak, aspen, alder, ivy, whitethorn, lew, rowan or quicken, vine, ash, spindle tree, pine, elder, willow, furze, heath.

In the ancient Gaelic alphabet the letter h (the heath or whitethorn) does not exist. The alphabet is called the beth-luis-nuin, because b l n and not a b c are its first three letters.</p

A Reasonable Reason

"What we say we do, we do do," and it's only reasonable that we should do just what we say we do, but at that, it's a lot more than some merchants do. When we say in our advertising that we are doing certain things, that we are selling goods at certain prices and that the quality is just what it should be, you can bet your life that it's just what we said it was. That's the reputation we want.

Loveland—Searing.

The following account of the Loveland—Searing wedding at Poplar Ridge, though somewhat belated, is gladly given space in THE TRIBUNE:

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Searing at Poplar Ridge was the scene of an unusually pretty wedding on Thursday, Sept. 22, when their daughter, Maribelle, was united in marriage to Floyd H. Loveland.

Precisely at 12 o'clock as the well known strains of the Lohengrin Bridal march sounded from an adjoining room, the Rev. Mr. Allen of Syracuse took his place against a background of evergreen and Miss Jane Searing, a cousin of the bride, wearing a clinging gown of Nile green silk and carrying pink roses, entered the large parlor accompanied by the bride's brother as best man.

Next came Miss Dorothy Blair of Skaneateles as ring bearer and following her the bridal pair entered and took their place beneath a taste fully arranged lovers knot of white asters.

The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white pineapple tissue, a fabric made in Porto Rico, exquisitely hand-embroidered by the natives of that island and trimmed in Duchess lace. The veil and orange blossoms were most becomingly adjusted and she carried a bouquet of bride roses.

Immediately after the ceremony which was that of the Episcopal ring service, the happy couple were showered with congratulations following which an elaborate wedding breakfast was enjoyed by the 80 or more present, the tables being attractively decorated in green and white.

The bride is an accomplished musician whose popularity is attested by the many beautiful gifts which she received and the groom a highly respected and well-to-do business man.

Guests were present from Auburn, Skaneateles, Syracuse, Newark, Rochester and Arkansas City.

After a brief tour Mr. and Mrs. Loveland will reside at Merrifield, N. Y., where they will be at home to their friends after November 1.

To Ex-Prisoners of War.

To Whom It May Concern:

The Andersonville Monument Commission is desirous of knowing how many ex-soldiers of the Civil War, who were prisoners of war and confined in Confederate Prisons, are now living.

The Secretary asks that all such in Cayuga county report in person or by letter to Robert L. Drummond, No. 59 Genesee street, Auburn, N. Y., their names, post-office addresses, companies and regiments, when and where captured, where imprisoned, and when and how released.

Special Display and

Sale of Parlor - Furniture.

We have given over the greater part of our main floor to this display, and it makes the biggest and finest showing of parlor suits and furniture of all kinds ever seen in Auburn.

The three-piece parlor suits start in price at $23.75 which price buys a very pretty mahogany finished suit with panel back and loose cushions.

Then there are several suits at $29, $32 and $33, some with spindle and some with banister backs, all new style and very nice looking.

The better suits start in price at $35 and 43.50 and run up to $71.00. These suits have mahogany frames and are all very handsome. Some have upholstered backs, some banister backs, some spindle backs—all the newest styles are shown.

In the display are two beautiful five-piece suits with very heavy frames, one selling at $2.00 and one at $5.00.

Parlor tables, parlor chairs and rockers and parlor rugs are included in the display.

We deliver all purchases to your town free of charge.

If you need any parlor furniture now or later, do not miss visiting the store during this display.

First Citizen of Oklahoma.

"When the politicians of the now sovereign state of Oklahoma want something done that is really worth the effort," says the Woman's Home Companion for October, "they always make a trip to Guthrie, the capital city, and present themselves at a little office on the top floor of the Senate building. There they shake hands with a graceful little dark-haired young woman, on whose door is the legend 'Commissioner of Charities.' This is Miss Kate Barnard, familiarly known as 'Kate.' She is to Oklahoma what Jane Addams is to Chicago, its First Citizen. The politicians see 'Kate' first, and the governor and the other state officials afterward. Through her —Have you noticed our big combination offer? Two first-class magazines and THE TRIBUNE for $2.75. Look on page 2.

—The cabbage crop is reported as very large. In some localities it is larger than in ten years, and the price has declined to $4 a ton.

—News of the birth of a son to E. E. McKean and wife of Birney, Montana, has been received. Mrs. McKean was formerly Miss Ida Haskell of East Genoa.

—Mrs. Solomon Bradt of King Ferry and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bradt of the George Junior Republic, were guests at the Presbyterian Manse last Sunday.—Dryden Herald.

—David F. Wallace, a well-known resident of Cortland, died on Friday night, at the age of 65 years. Funeral services were held on Monday. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

All the new Fall Hats for men at Smith's.

—Earl Legg has recently purchased Clover Farm of Josiah Letchworth of Buffalo. This purchase includes all stock and tools. This is one of the best known stock farms in southern Cayuga, thorough-bred Jerseys being its specialty.

—The following is the list of the entertainments in the Genoa course, with dates: S. Platt Jones, Nov. 9; Ruby Gray Kelley Co., Dec. 7; The Spaffords, Jan. 12; J. Reed Powell, Feb. 2; Toronto Male Quartette, March 3. Further announcement will be made later.

—The first international humane conference ever held in America was held in the new National Museum at Washington, D. C., this week with Dr. Albert Leffingwell of Aurora, the first vice-president of the American Humane Society, in the chair. Five hundred delegates from the United States and numerous representatives from foreign countries were in attendance.

Big showing of Sweater Coats at Smith's.

—Rev. H. E. Springer has returned from conference and it is with great satisfaction that we note that Rev. Springer has been returned to Locke for another year. * * * Mrs. Genevieve Wilson of Syracuse, was in town last Friday to consult with the Grangers about putting on a play in this village in the near future. While in the town she was a guest at William Harris.—Locke Courier.

—Fred Rundell, well known in this locality, has returned from Ashland, Oregon, and is at present a guest of his cousin, Mrs. Chas. Tupper. Mr. Tupper was called back by the members of Andover Stamping Co. to take charge of that manufactory again. The company were unable to handle the business and allowed it to go into bankruptcy, but he expects to reorganize the company and start up the work again in the near future. His family will remain in Oregon until spring.

—At the recent Christian Endeavor state convention at Rochester, Cayuga county was given credit for being a star county. It reported the largest number of new societies during the past year, having gained 19 new ones. One more society would have made an increase of 100 per cent. A state District Secretaries School will be held in Auburn on Nov. 25-26.

THE FORTUNE TELLER'S MAGIC

Keen Observation More Reliable Than Occult Science.

By HOWARD FIELDING.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

John E. Saintsbury died at his home in Davenport, Ia., two years ago. His will gave his widow a life interest in the estate, which at her death was to pass entire to their daughter Ethel, then seventeen years old. The property consisted of a comfortable house, a business that paid a fair income and an incipient lawsuit against a firm of brokers in New York through which Mr. Saintsbury had secretly gambled in stocks.

The New York firm was apparently evading the payment of a considerable sum. Mr. Saintsbury had been consistently unlucky for a long time, but had come at last to that change of fortune which is not impossible even in a game where the odds against the player are so monstrous as they are in Wall street. His sudden winnings, even on paper, did not equal his protracted losses, but they amounted to many thousands of dollars, and when Mr. Saintsbury perceived that he was likely to be cheated of this money he suffered a nervous shock which had much to do with his death.

This whole matter was a close secret. Nobody in Davenport knew anything about it except Mr. Saintsbury and a lawyer. After Mr. Saintsbury's death the lawyer went to New York and attempted to collect the sum that was due. Failing to get immediate action, he left the matter in charge of a New York lawyer and returned to Davenport.

The New York lawyer played a slow and quiet game, not daring to proceed openly in the courts for fear of wrecking the brokers, in which event their creditors would have got about a cent on the dollar. But in the course of time the condition of the brokers' firm improved, and at last it seemed best that Mrs. Saintsbury should go to New York and that proceedings should be begun in earnest.

Accordingly Mrs. Saintsbury and Ethel set forth for the metropolis. None of their friends knew the real cause of their journey.

Ethel Saintsbury had now passed her nineteenth birthday. She was a girl of superior mental power, a brilliant and diligent student, with a somewhat masculine aptitude for science and mathematics.

When the mother and daughter reached New York they went at once to a small hotel where apartments had been engaged for them. The rooms were at the rear, and the windows looked out upon the backs of houses in the next street.

It was ordained that Ethel Saintsbury should have leisure to contemplate the view that has been mentioned, for in alighting from her carriage at the door she turned her ankle in very painful fashion, so that she was unable to walk for ten days.

For this reason the business which had brought them to New York was transacted chiefly in the ladies' apartment. Thither came the lawyer who was in charge of the case, and thither came also a young gentleman named Dudley Wayne, who used to be known as "Deadly" Wayne when he played football for Harvard some years ago. He is now an assistant district attorney of New York, and he was called into the discussion because certain acts of the brokers' firm aforementioned seemed to have a criminal aspect.

Doubtless there was an handsome and as worthy fellows in Davenport, but Ethel Saintsbury had been blind to their merits. Dudley Wayne took her by surprise. She had not supposed there were any men like him. She was in love with him before she knew it.

Wayne meanwhile had progressed ever further. He knew that he was crazy. He could see Miss Saintsbury sitting in the chairs in his office; she waited for him at every turn of his daily path, and alone in his rooms he talked with her two hours every night before he went to bed.

On a certain forenoon Mrs. Saintsbury went shopping, and in one of the stores she met an old acquaintance. This was a Mrs. Lowell of Davenport, a widow with abundant means and a child's vivid joy in living. She greeted Mrs. Saintsbury with enthusiasm.

"I've been in New York a week," said she. "I came up from Palm Beach to meet my son. He returned from abroad this morning."

Mrs. Saintsbury knew that young Mr. Lowell had been in Italy studying music, for which art he was supposed to have unusual gifts.

"I have invited some people for this evening—mostly musical people, of course," continued Mrs. Lowell. "You and Ethel must come."

As a result of this chance encounter Mrs. Saintsbury and her daughter went out for the first time in the evening since their arrival in New York.

About 9:30 of the evening Ethel Saintsbury and Arthur Lowell sat in a corner of the ornate drawing room.

Lowell, who was a creature of enthusiasm and superlatives, was telling about a wonderful man whom he had met abroad and had had as a companion of the voyage across. This gentleman's name was Redmond, and he possessed miraculous powers of divination.

"I hope he'll come," said Lowell for the tenth time.

"Did he tell your fortune?" asked Miss Saintsbury, whose disbelief in psychic marvels was based upon the firm rock of scientific education.

"Rather!" exclaimed Lowell. "He read me through and through." And he proceeded to give details of the usual sort—such things as may be read at a glance by any shrewd and practical man. In the midst of this recital Redmond arrived.

"Look at him," whispered Lowell. "Wouldn't you know that he was a wonder? See how queerly his black hair is spotted with gray. Somebody on the ship said that an angel had laid her hand on Redmond's head and left the print of her fingers. Doesn't it look so?"

"Yes," said Miss Saintsbury. "But it didn't happen."

"Oh, you're a skeptic. You don't believe in anything."

"I believe in nothing except the scientific method, and only very moderately in that."

"You'll believe in my friend Redmond if you ever give him a chance to convince you."

In view of this situation nobody will be surprised to learn that Redmond got his chance.

It is only just to say that Redmond bore no likeness to the conventional dabbler in wonders. His manner was easy and natural, recognizably British, yet softened by contact with continental society. He did not thrust his special gift upon the attention of others, but he showed no embarrassment about it. When Lowell urged an immediate annihilation of Miss Saintsbury's skepticism Redmond smiled at his friend's impetuosity and agreed to do his best.

They were seated in a large bay window and partly shielded from the observation of the other guests. Redmond took the girl's right hand by the tips of the fingers and looked steadily into her eyes.

"Perhaps," said he, "as we have only a few minutes you would like to ask me some direct test questions."

It was the idea that had been in her mind, but she perversely denied having any such desire.

"I will ask them myself," said Redmond, with a smile. "First, why have you come to New York? Second, what have you done since you came? Third, what is it that you think me least likely to know?"

"My word!" said Lowell under his breath. "That last question is a poser."

"With your permission?" said Redmond, and the girl inclined her head.

"I must be very brief, for I see that we shall be interrupted almost immediately. You have come to New York upon a legal matter which in some of its aspects touches not only the civil but the criminal statutes. Since you came here you have been very quiet, because you sprained your right ankle on the day of your arrival. The matter which you think me least likely to know—Shall I proceed?"

"Yes," said she, but not without excitement.

"It is your interest in a tall young man of the blond type." He glanced over his shoulder and saw that he had but a few moments more in which to speak. "I foresee much happiness for you in the direction I have indicated," he continued. "But I feel bound to warn you that the young man stands in some peril. Let him guard himself carefully against a man about forty years old, of medium height and very heavily built. This man has short, curly, iron-gray hair. He has a scar passing diagonally downward across his right eyebrow and appearing upon the cheek!"

"Mr. Redmond"—it was Mrs. Lowell who spoke—"you will sing for us now?"

"With pleasure," he replied and departed with his hostess.

"What do you think of my friend Redmond now?" said Lowell. "Isn't he marvelous?"

"I have not made up my mind about Mr. Redmond," said she, "but my position in regard to all fortune telling, mind reading and kindred marvels is wholly unchanged. I do not in the least believe in them."

"But did he tell you the truth?"

"In confidence, my friend, he did. Is there a telephone in this suit that I could use privately at once?"

"You mean to warn—" Precisely."

Five minutes later she was in communication with the bachelor apartment house where Dudley Wayne lived. The young man had been out all the evening, but while Miss Saintsbury was leaving a message that he should call her up he came in. To him by telephone she told exactly what had happened. Wayne was amazed.

"I've been in New York a week," said she. "I came up from Palm Beach to meet my son. He returned from abroad this morning."

"Has he got out?"

"I don't know. As I remember, it would be about this time. And it's a fact that he made some threats, but don't worry. He can't hurt me."

"Be careful. Oh Dudley, be careful! Mr. Redmond must have information. This fortune telling is nonsense, of course."

"Well, I don't know," responded Dudley. "It's the best of his kind that ever I heard of. How could he have known our secret, our blessed secret that is not twelve hours old? Have you told your mother?"

"No, not yet. Come to me tomorrow as early as you can, and please, please be careful."

Wayne went up to his apartment, having a strong impression of the miraculous upon his mind. He had spoken his first word of love to Ethel that afternoon.

When he opened the outer door of his little suit he noticed that all was dark. Yet he knew that he had left a small light in the private hall and another in the sitting room, which was at the end of the passage. Under ordinary circumstances he would not have given the matter a second thought, but the words which he had just heard were still in his ears, a dear voice bidding him preserve himself from peril.

Instead of passing through the hall to the sitting room he softly entered the bedroom and crept across it to the curtained doorway. Silently he drew aside the curtain and looked in. A dim figure was crouching by the half door, and something gleamed faintly in its hand.

There was a revolver in a drawer of the dressing table. Wayne turned toward the place, and the floor creaked under his weight. Instantly the man who was lurking in the other room rushed in upon him, but Wayne was ready. He evaded the knife thrusts and struck the assailant down with his cane. The man fell forward, then rolled heavily upon his back and lay still. Wayne sprang to the button that controlled the lights, and the electric lamps flashed. Wayne looked down upon a face that he remembered—the face of a convict, a man about forty years old, with curly gray hair and a scar across his eye.

Perhaps if the affair had taken a less serious turn Mr. Redmond might have veiled his share of it in the mysteries of occult science, but when summoned to the district attorney's office to explain his advance knowledge of an intended homicide he told the truth with exemplary frankness.

Shortly after landing from the steamer he had gone to the apartments of a friend, a young Englishman resident but a few months in this country. A WORD FROM IRELAND.

Our friend and subscriber, Mr. Henry M. Hall of Pittsburg, Pa., sends us, says the Temperance Advocate, the following article from the Irish Independent of Dublin, Ireland, which shows that our friends in that country are fighting the common enemy alcohol:

Sight to Make Angels Weep.—Sir—Last evening on my way home from business a sad sight arrested my attention; it was a woman helplessly drunk, dragged along between two constables through Grafton street (the leading thoroughfare of the city) on her way to the police cell. The crowd that followed seemed careless and indifferent, but my heart was filled with shame and sorrow as I reflected that this poor creature may be "somebody's mother" overcome by our "nation's destroyer," alcohol. The memorable words uttered by Mr. Lloyd-George came then forcibly to my mind that "a nation nursed on alcohol is doomed." Surely you will not only pray, but labor to avoid such a calamity!

Heartily I endorse the words uttered by the late Cardinal Manning. "That no man should enrich himself by impoverishing his fellow," but, alas! very many of my countrymen don't or won't think! Love of money seems to be the god of this nation, gold dust blinds our eyes, and hardens our hearts, and so, as a result, who cares for the value of a child? At all costs make money! though it may be obtained by enfeebling the body and mind, by impoverishing the home, by degrading manhood and defrauding womanhood.

Even a dozen years ago the thought of speaking of a typewriter and a princess all in one breath would have seemed shockingly incongruous. But not so now. Princesses are very much up to date.

They would every bit as soon bang away on a typewriter as to laboriously dip a gold tipped quill into a bottle of ink and indite their thoughts with laborious dignity.

No less a personage than Princess Mary, the only daughter of the king and queen of Great Britain, has recently learned to use a typewriter and will assist in typing some of her father's more private correspondence. The princess intends to learn stenography also and is keenly looking forward to helping her mother.

Bridge Prizes.

Silver sets for running ribbons of various widths through lingerie make excellent simple prizes for bridge or euchre. There are usually four "leaders," as the bodkins are called in each set, and in little brocaded covers, as they are, become attractive as well as useful. Another pretty trifle that every girl likes to have is a small housewife for her sewing bag. A tiny fancy emery cushion, a small pair of scissors, a needlecase and sometimes a gay bit of wax—all mounted and joined together—are desirable and not expensive.

So great is the fad for bridge scores of various kinds that they are always excellent prizes for men as well as women. Most elaborate are some of the newest pads and books, being bound in the gayest fashion and having small reminders of the trump so arranged as to change it after each hand. Pencils accompany them, and the cases may be used again when the original scores have been exhausted.

Smart School Blouse.

For school wear a plaid blouse is always good style worn with a dark skirt. The material may be either silk or one of the new worsted plaids that are as soft and silky as the latter fabric. These woolen plaids come with the name on them of the clan to which

"Not a Local Question."

State Chairman Wilson, of Illinois, has just issued a pamphlet on "National Aspects of the Drink Traffic," in which he points out that the saloon is not the liquor traffic, but only a small part of it. "He who thinks this is a local question," says Mr. Wilson, "should open his eyes and see the nations of the civilized world grappling with this deadly foe."

In conclusion Mr. Wilson says:

"For forty years thousands of Christian citizens have been voting against it but in the fall they give Uncle Sam permission to license blind pig keepers in their town or saloon keepers in the next town. How can we escape individual responsibility unless at every opportunity we protest against our country's manufacturing drunkards and gathering blood money from the curse? It can never be legalized without sin. Is it not sin to vote for license or a party that sustains license and continues the life of the rum business?"

The Battle in Great Britain.

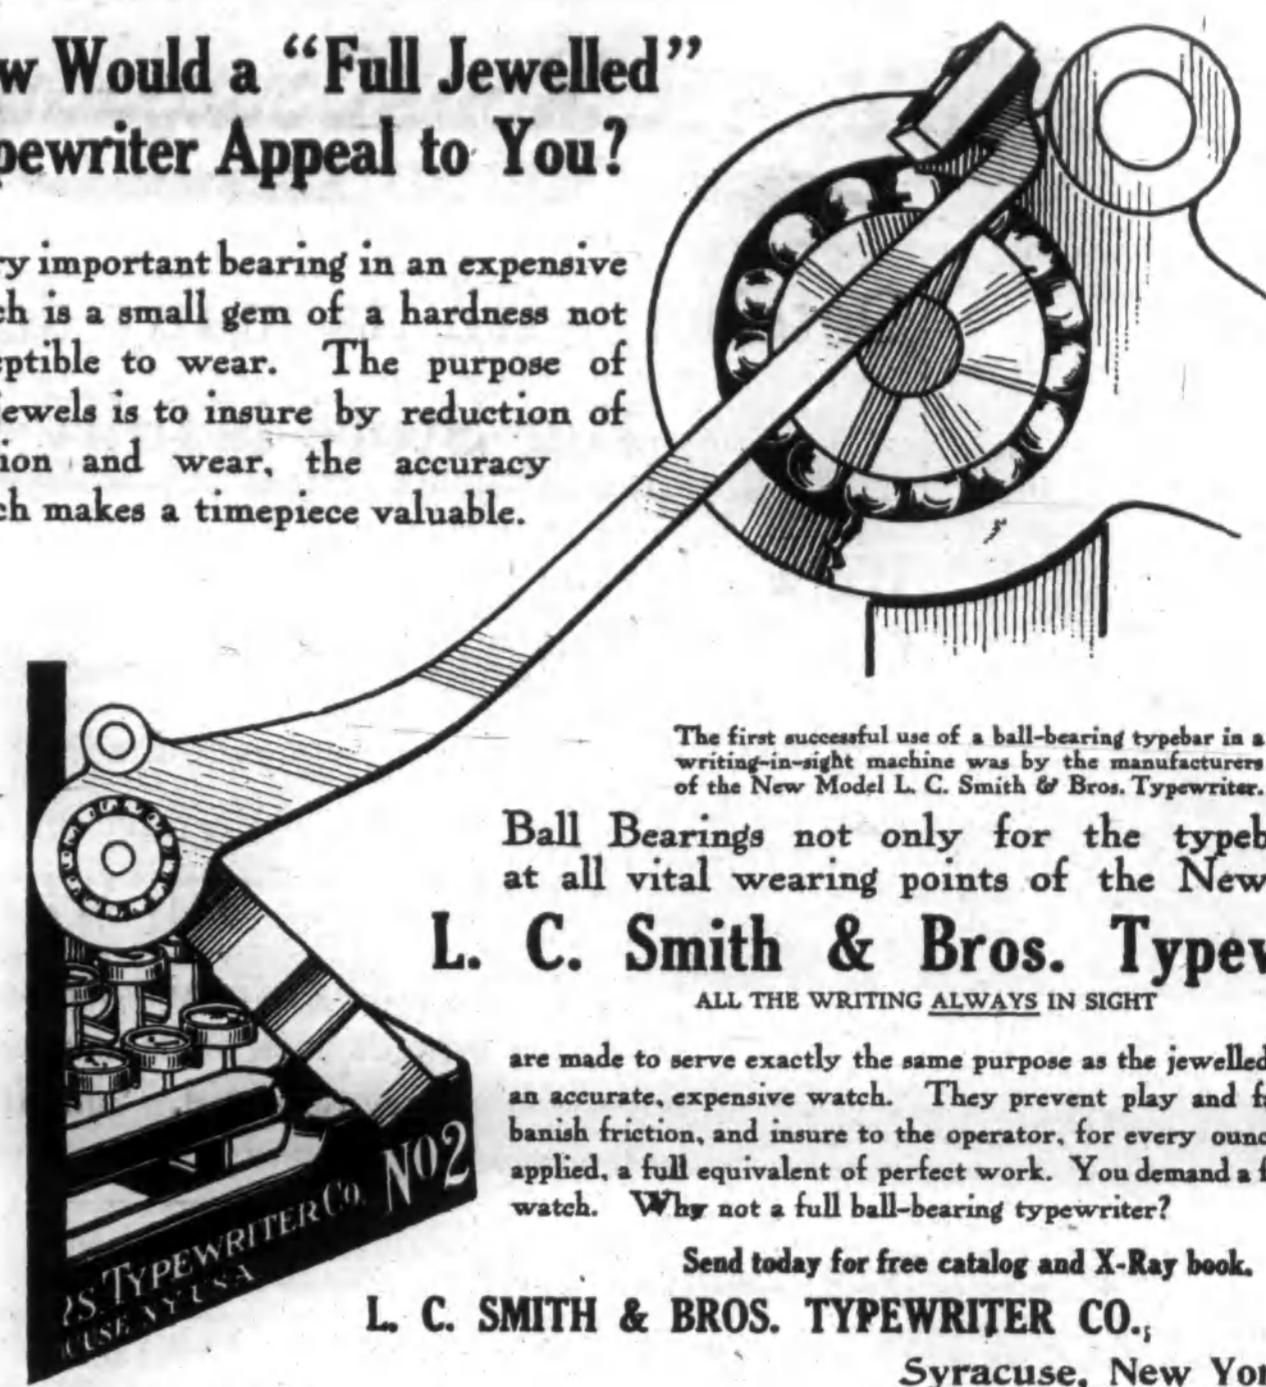

The blouse illustrated has a narrow vest of navy blue taffeta with simulated buttonholes and small buttons covered with the silk which also edges the wide shoulder plait. There is little change in the new shirt waists except that most of them when not of wash stuffs have the long shoulder effect and are often made in one with the bodice portion.

A Mind's All Right, But—

It is all right for a woman to have a mind of her own if she keeps it to herself and lets the man think his is the only mentality in the neighborhood.

How Would a "Full Jewelled" Typewriter Appeal to You?

Every important bearing in an expensive watch is a small gem of a hardness not susceptible to wear. The purpose of the jewels is to insure by reduction of friction and wear, the accuracy which makes a timepiece valuable.

The first successful use of a ball-bearing typebar in writing-in-sight machine was by the manufacturers of the New Model L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter.

ALL THE WRITING ALWAYS IN SIGHT

are made to serve exactly the same purpose as the jewelled bearings of an accurate, expensive watch. They prevent play and false motion, banish friction, and insure to the operator, for every ounce of energy applied, a full equivalent of perfect work. You demand a full jewelled watch. Why not a full ball-bearing typewriter?

CATALOGUE BUYING.

Many Disappointments Resulting From Sending Money Away.

There are limits to the possibilities of making purchases from no better guide than a catalogue picture, and many must be the disappointments resulting from it. Suppose that the trusting woman's eye is taken with the print of a gown described by the optimistic record of such things as Alice blue. It sounds safe. Blue has always been her color, and she fills out the blank. Then comes the business of choosing the hat that is to go with it and supplement its work of electrifying the citizens of the hamlet in which she lives. And of course there is a hat that just suits, and the text promises that it will be furnished in any one of six colors, one of them being providentially Alice blue. Gloves, veil and parasol, all of them are supplied by the merchant in the same lovely shade, and it looks as if a costume of surpassing beauty and completeness were about to be acquired.

Later it arrives, all its several parts intact and "just as advertised." But, oh, shades of Alice, can it be that the daughter of a president lent the sanction of her name to this variety of blues—blues that represent almost the whole gamut of tints and in combination are nothing short of distressing?—New York Herald.

Plan to Enhance Civic Pride.

The Houston (Tex.) Business league has adopted some novel ideas as regards its letterheads. The envelopes and letterheads used for correspondence within the city are replete with a number of quotations estimated to enthuse the people of Houston with a pride in their city. Among these quotations are the following: "Build and Boost," "Use the Ship Channel," "Not For Self, but For All," "What Helps Our City Helps You," "Greater Prosperity Through a Greater Houston," "Build More Factories and Increase the Tin Bucket Brigade." The letterhead used for out of town work is altogether different. It talks of, and not to, Houston. "Where seventeen railroads meet the sea," is the burden of the tale it carries. It tells in statistics of Houston—now and future. Down at the bottom it all ends, "A City of Unlimited Manufacturing Opportunities. Come and Blow Your Whistle With Us."

The Town Knocker.

Bury the knocker out in the woods in the beautiful hole in the ground, where bumblebee burns and the wood-pecker sings and the straddle bugs tumble around. He's no good to the town—he's bumbley and practically dead—but he wants the whole earth, enclosed with a fence, and the stars that shine over his head. Then hustle him off to the boneyard and bury him there good and deep. Let him lie on his back with his toes sticking up and everlasting sleep. He's no good on earth; he's a Jonah, a pest to all decent folks. If he's troubled with living we'll not miss him a bit when he croaks—Boone (Ia.) Independent.

Value of Trees In Streets.

A local instance is known of a man who purchased three lots in a new tract in Los Angeles, the middle one of which was directly behind a huge live oak tree which had been left in the street and neatly curbed. He was asked why he chose those lots, the highest priced on the street (for the first owner also had an appreciation of tree values), and he replied: "On account of that beautiful tree. It will always shut off from view at least two houses on the other side of the street from each one of my lots. We will then always feel more like being out in the country, with less of city life about us."

The Superior Grain Drill

has the features that apply to the farmer—light draft, few parts, positive feed. It is the drill the farmer wants and will have. Read what some of our enterprising farmers say about the Superior. We the undersigned can truthfully say. "The Superior Drill is one of the most simple, most accurate and lightest drill we have ever used. So simple to adjust."
