"Well, it's not true. He's six months behind. I'm his landlord and know."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Come Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Every successful man must have visions of high ideals.--Rev. Clarence A. Barbour, Baptist, Philadelphia.

A Winner.
The man who resolves that if he fails he will yet "die game" is least likely to fail.--Rev. J. E. Price, Methodist, New York City.

Troubles.
Far more troubles are suffered in imagination than in reality. Let us hope for the best instead of dreading the worst.--Rev. J. B. Remensnyder, Lutheran, New York.

Standard of Right.
It should be borne in mind that without some knowledge of the true nature of God there is no standard of right.--Rev. Hiram Vrooman, Presbyterian, Providence, R. I.

What is Needed.
The greatest need today is not more men, but more man--not more women, but more woman. We are rich in deed and in truth is ultimately consciousness.--Rev. James Montgomery, Methodist, Denver.

Good in Life.
There is more in life than any one of us has yet taken out of it. There is no place so bad, no person so despised, but that some good may be found in them.--Rev. Alexander S. Taylor, Episcopalian, Chicago.

Prepared For What May Come.
The serious mind never forgets the hard side of things. It does not live in fear, for it is prepared for whatever may come, nor does it yield to any delirium of pleasure.--Rev. H. N. Brown, Unitarian, Boston.

Living Up to God's Teachings.
We must live up to God's teachings at all times. It is not sufficient for us to walk beside Christ or with him or toward him. We must walk in him all the days of our lives.--Rev. H. G. Furbay, Presbyterian, New York.

Applying God's Laws.
The laws of the state are applications of the law of God or of the law of nature, which is divine, and no human law is just that does not rest on these solid foundations.--Rev. J. L. Belford, Roman Catholic, Brooklyn.

God's Garden.
The earth as the garden of God where man can grow healthy bodies and know something of the joy of living is a dream--yes, but a dream that is coming true.--Rev. Edward F. Sanderson, Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn.

Cultivating Our Higher Nature.
Every man has to some extent a meager life in embryo in his nature, and his constant care should be to suppress and throttle the angry beasts of passion by the cultivation of his higher nature.--Rev. S. H. C. Burgin, Methodist, San Antonio, Tex.

Achieving Power.
There is a sharp, eager, passionate, achieving power in the world which belongs to our civilization, which stirs everything within us to the accomplishment of purpose and has no rest whatever until it abides in the word "achievement."--Rev. Frank W. Gun-saulus, Congregationalist, Chicago.

Marriage a Sacrament.
No matter what men's passions may dictate or society decide, the Christian must remember that marriage is a sacrament, instituted by Christ to confer grace upon the married couple that they may save their souls and bring up their children in the love and fear of God.--Bishop Conaty, Roman Catholic, Los Angeles, Cal.

Saving a Soul.
It may not be so spectacular to save a soul from eternal death as it is to rescue those who are hemmed in by roaring flames of the fire which is destroying the building in which they are, but the consequences of the former are infinitely greater in their reach than the latter.--Rev. J. H. Kerr, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Deepest Satisfaction.
Christ's words of comfort have been the world's deepest satisfaction. Many heads would have been pillowed in comfortless sleep, many hearts would have been shrouded in impenetrable darkness had not Jesus, in calm assurance and quiet confidence, uttered his beautiful messages of hope and cheer and comfort.--Rev. M. L. Burton, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

No Absolute Freedom.
The aspiration to be free is noble, but absolute freedom is not for man. Not only is he limited by the tether of his own faculties, not only must he make terms with nature in order to win the blessing, but as a member of society he must conform to usage and convention if he would be other than a stranger and an outcast there.--Rev. C. E. Nash, Universalist, Los Angeles, Cal.

Why Godliness Pays.
Godliness pays in two worlds. It pays in dollars and cents, in pleasure and happiness. It is the most certain road to prosperity. Not only can a righteous man succeed, but prosperity comes as a reward for right living. There are higher and better rewards than worldly success. The peace of conscience, the consciousness that we are prepared to die, the joy in the Holy Ghost, more exhilarating than any other pleasure, the conscious presence of God, which we may always have, are some of the rewards of righteousness in this life. Among other pleasures, how delightful the communion of saints! A prizefight will attract those who enjoy its brutality. A church attracts those who enjoy spiritual things and thus selects the very best people, whose company is most delightful.--Rev. W. A. Williams, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

SEAEVER'S LAXATIVE TONIC TABLETS.

The Correct Laxative for Women

Mere physical beauty, enticing as it is, will not permanently avail in the absence of a clean, fresh, healthy skin and complexion. A woman may have perfect features, a youthful form and a graceful figure, but without the health and bloom of a clear skin, perfect beauty is impossible.

When the skin is muddy or cloudy or marred by moth spots and pimples, nine times in ten it is due to nature's inability to perform the function essential to perfect health.

Many a Genoa lady could truthfully tell of the remarkable properties of Seaver's Laxative Tonic Tablets as a skin beautifier, and the reason is easy to find. They are purely vegetable extracts known to have a selective action for the skin.

They improve the complexion, clear up the skin, enrich the blood, stimulate the liver, tone up the intestines and cure chronic constipation by encouraging the bowels and assisting nature to do its own perfect work. J. S. Banker recommends them with every confidence and a 25-cent package of Seaver's Laxative Tonic Tablets must do as is claimed of them or you can have your money back.

PROTECTION OF TOWN BLOCKS

Scheme to Beautify Brooklyn by Small Societies.

RESIDENTS BANDED TOGETHER

Community of Interest Idea Promises Good Results—Several Improvements Obtained and Grievances Redressed—Neighborly Feeling Shown.

Organize a block improvement society. In this way sometimes more can be accomplished than through a larger organization. A neighboring block or one in another part of the town may see your good work and profit by your example. Thus the good work will spread from one section to another. The plans of an organization in Brooklyn are herewith given and are well worth considering:

Brooklyn, which has long been known as the city of homes and churches, bids fair to become the city beautiful if an idea which has taken practical shape in one section spreads throughout the borough, as it seems likely to do. The residents of one block in the Bedford section have banded together to bring about certain ideals and to combat everything annoying or objectionable to any or all of the members. The block is now a desirable residential one, and the property owners want to keep it so.

They have formed the Grand Avenue association, elected officers, an executive committee and adopted bylaws. These bylaws state that the object of the organization is "to improve, beautify and protect the block in Grand avenue between Putnam and Gates avenues."

The association was started through the attempt of a builder to erect a large apartment house on the block. The property owners got together, and the project was blocked. They got the consent of the owners of another plot not to sell to anybody without giving them a chance to buy.

While the members stand ready to contribute to a common fund any money necessary to carry out the objects of the association, they pay only $3 a year dues and meet only when called together to act on some proposition that the executive committee does not wish to finally decide.

The intention of the members is to secure the embellishment of the block by planting trees and giving proper care to those now growing, to see that the lawns and gardens are kept in good condition, that unsightly obstructions be removed and that the city officials do not neglect them in the matter of public improvements.

The association is giving a large share of its attention to getting relief from the flood which occurs on the avenue after a heavy rain. They want to get a more adequate sewer in the street.

"This community of interest idea is a fine one," said Mr. Kingman, chairman of the executive committee, "and should be adopted generally by house owners of the borough. Of course we now have taxpayers' and property owners' associations all over the borough, and they are good things, but they are of necessity large and rather unwieldy bodies and represent a more or less large section where interests are not always the same.

"But the interests of the property owners in one block are usually alike, and the members are naturally more intimately associated, so that much more can be accomplished for the general good. We get along without a jar, and there is a much more neighborly feeling among the residents of the block than ever before. I am a firm believer in block organizations and would advise that they be formed in every part of the borough. By united action the taxpayers can accomplish much more than they could as individuals, and in this way they can get improvements which have heretofore been missing and help make the borough beautiful."

While this block organization is a new thing in Brooklyn, there are already several well established organizations of property owners in certain suburban sections. Notable among these is the Prospect Park West association, in a suburb just below Prospect park. Every resident of the suburb is a member, and there are certain rules and regulations laid down which all must abide by. Out of a common fund flower gardens in the streets, lawns, shrubbery and hedges are cared for, and every member is pledged to keep up the tone of the neighborhood. No private garages are allowed, and no fences except those absolutely necessary are permitted. And these must be ornamental and of a prescribed height. One resident who recently erected an ornamental fence near Church avenue had to cut it down because it was too high. The association recently began a crusade for a uniform telephone rate of 5 cents in Greater New York.

STRIVING FOR PUBLIC GOOD.

Suggestion For Dealing With Gross Violations of Good Taste.

A young man of Freeport, Ill., has a camera and a sense of fitness, a good combination. For some time the young man has been annoyed by the appearance of a building in the business portion of Stephenson street which, besides being ugly through neglect, has recently been covered with circus posters, with all their blare and hideousness. The Freeport young man has ingenuity, too, says the American City. Every day since the posters appeared the owner has been the recipient of a picture postal of his building. The public has been cognizant of the presence of the eyesore. It now knows of the move made by the young man, and there is a general hope that the daily sight of his hideous property may convert the owner to civic decency.

Here is a good suggestion for other places where flagrant violations of good taste occur. The papers could help by publishing such pictures. This has been tried with good results. It was done in Seattle, Wash., small reproductions being used in the first instance. The offenders generally cleaned up. Those who did not were approached by a representative of the paper, to whom they generally said they didn't care. "Well," replied the representative, "if you don't mind that you will not care if we reproduce a half page picture so it will show up better?" To this the usual answer was: "Oh no; I don't want you to do that. I'll clean it up."

GREAT TRADE STIMULATORS.

Importance of Good Roads to Business Men of Towns.

The following is from a letter written by a Missouri farmer to the editor of the Kansas City Star. While it shows the advantage of good roads to the farmer, it suggests how important it is to the trading town that good roads lead to it:

"A citizen living on a dirt road six miles from Sedalia, Mo., paid $1.90 for a freight shipment of 125 miles by rail to Sedalia. He then paid a teamster $2.50 to haul the goods out to his farm. The weather had been bad, and the road was not in good condition. The wagon got stuck in the mud, and it cost another $2.50 and much strain and wear on good teams to get it out, the relative expense being $1.90 for 125 miles by rail and $5 for six miles by wagon roads."

Any saving in money that the farmer may make because of good roads

A BOON TO ANY COMMUNITY.
[From Good Roads Magazine, New York.]

means so much gained for the community, so much more prosperity and more money with which to buy goods from the local merchants. Not alone this, but good roads are a great trade stimulator. Let there be two towns of equal importance with a rich farming country lying intermediate. That town which has the best roads leading to it is sure to get the greater trade, farmers even driving a few miles farther because they can pass over a good road. One Nebraska city of about 10,000 population within the past few years spent more than $50,000 in improving the highways leading to it. It was a splendid investment and brought trade that its merchants never otherwise would have.

LITTLE GUIDEPOSTS ON THE BUSINESS ROAD.

Make your office match your business, and before long your business will outgrow your office.

One of the things that every human being should learn early is that a promise is a promise and not a white lie.

Every man in business should have a hobby for his leisure hours and stable the hobby at some distance from his office.

The man who fixes up his office with all the goods in the stationer's shop needs to see to it that his head is also up to date.

If you make your own mistakes you learn something; if you make other people's mistakes you don't even learn the lesson they did. It is well to remember this when giving advice.

If you are only keeping a peanut stand it is best to do it a little better than anybody else. But the wise man will not keep a peanut stand if he has to pay too much for the concession.

There are two classes of persons in this world—people who do what they have to and people who do what they want to. And it depends on the kind of brains you have whether you are in the one class or the other.—Book-keeper.

What Dry Farming Is.

Comparatively few in the East know what "dry farming" is. The grain is sown in the usual way and then the ground is packed down with a roller until the surface is hard. Thus the moisture that is in the ground from the spring rains or melted snow is retained for a long time. This method was discovered by the merest accident. A man named Campbell in 1883 took up a homestead in South Dakota. His first crop was a failure on account of the lack of rain, but he noticed that in spots where the tracks of his cattle showed the grain came up and grew well. This set him to thinking and he came to the conclusion that where the hoofs of the cattle had packed the soil down firmly the moisture that was in the land was retained a long time. The next spring he ran a heavy roller over his grain field several times and raised an excellent crop. Campbell bought more land and in time became rich, and deserved to, for he made public his discovery and not only helped others to prosperity, but was the means of adding greatly to the food supply of the country.

Holy Name Banquet.

The second annual banquet of the Holy Name societies of St. Bernard's church, Scipio, and Our Lady of the Lake church at King Ferry of both of which churches Rev. J. B. Doran is pastor, was a great success. Bishop Hickey was the guest of honor with Rev. J. T. Dougherty of Canandaigua, Rev. B. W. Gommenginger of Lyons, Rev. C. A. Silke of Moravia, Rev. Dr. Edward Mulheron of Ireland, and other guests. With the clergy at the speakers' table were trustees Florence Sullivan, John Dallahan, Daniel Mullally and Michael Flynn.

About 160 people went to Auburn Monday night by a special train over the New York, Auburn & Lansing, arriving there about 7 o'clock.

The banqueters were seated at eight long tables and did full justice to the tempting banquet served by Caterer R. D. Lanehart.

Much praise was given the women of both parishes who served the men. They were: Mrs. John Bruton, Mrs. James Hartnett, Mrs. Francis Rafferty, Mrs. James Tierney, Mrs. Florence Sullivan and the Misses Nolan, McDona'd, Cooley, Welsh, Grant, Cummings, Donovan, McCormick, Cunningham, Flynn, Conrany, Tyrell, Burton, Fallon, Mary and Lena Sullivan, Lucy and Catherine McDermott.

Following the banquet an informal program of addresses was carried out with Father Gommenginger as toastmaster and the evening passed all too quickly until time for the departure of the special train for home at 11:30.

The Attraction.

He—I'd give up all my millions to have you. She—if you did you would not have me!

"Polly of the Circus."

Miss Florence E. Wilbur will give readings from the play "Polly of the Circus" interspersed with musical selections, at the Ledyard M. E. church on Friday evening, Oct. 28, at 7:45 o'clock. Everybody cordially invited. Admission 15 and 25 cents.

Miss Wilbur is well-known throughout this vicinity for her talent as a dramatic reader. She is connected with the Eastern Lyceum Bureau of Boston and will soon leave to take up her work for the season.

In "Polly of the Circus," Miss Wilbur has a great opportunity to show her versatility, as the story includes characters of many types. It is both humorous and pathetic, and is popular with all audiences.

It has been said of Miss Wilbur that "she possesses a charming presence, a pleasing and attractive manner, and her platform work is both natural and forceful."

A press notice from Saratoga Springs, N. Y., says: "Miss Wilbur possesses an easy manner and her various portrayals showed her to be a reciter of more than ordinary ability and of remarkable versatility. The characters she presents are real."

The church should be filled to its capacity on Friday evening, Oct. 28, to hear Miss Wilbur.

Crime Decreased.

There is considerable food for thought in the Blue Book, just issued by the British Home office, on the liquor licensing business in England during the past fiscal year. It states that as a result of the elimination of 1,700 liquor selling licenses there were 18,285 fewer convictions for drunkenness and other crimes. Women led the way in this improved order of things. Dealing with the growth of British national sobriety, the department for collecting the statistics says that, parallel with the decrease of drunkenness there is a decrease in the crimes that arise from it. Here's a comparative table showing year, convictions and proportion per 1,000 respectively:

Year	Convictions.	Proportion.
1905	207,171	60.66
1906	199,014	57.61
1907	197,064	56.40
1908	187,303	53.14
1909	169,518	47.41

This decrease, says the report, is spread over nearly all parts of the country, including London, where there were 1,821 fewer convictions. In all of this, women were responsible for leading the work of lasting reform; and also in this continually improving state of existing conditions, they were 11 per cent better than in the previous year, men improving 9 per cent. The actual decrease in women's convictions was 4,264 as against 2,109 in 1908 and 1,086 in 1907.

Tuberculosis Germs.

"If a person who has tuberculosis drinks out of a cup and then another person should drink out of the same cup before the cup has been washed, the germ may be transmitted in this way," says James Jenkins, Jr., in Woman's Home Companion for October. "Boiling water kills germs as effectively as any antiseptic, and dishes should never be considered absolutely clean that have not been washed in this way. Two persons should never wipe on the same towel. The plan of individual washstands, which is so commonly used on the continent in Europe, should be more generally adopted in America.

"If you have a telephone in your house, the mouthpiece of the telephone should be cleaned every day, just as we clean the dishes we use on the table, and should be thoroughly disinfected at least twice a week. Germs of pneumonia, bronchitis, tuberculosis and other things may be caught from a telephone.

"A good formula for a disinfectant is a few drops of formaldehyde in a two-ounce bottle of water, adding enough extract of lavender or some other pleasant-smelling extract, so that the odor remaining after the mouthpiece is cleaned will be agreeable. Any druggist could mix such a disinfectant for you very easily and inexpensively."

West Venice.

Oct. 18—Everyone says "Isn't this beautiful weather," and it certainly is the finest weather for all kinds of business, and no one ought to complain about getting their buckwheat, corn and potatoes gathered in good season.

Edwin Barnes, wife and son Floyd, visited Mrs. Barnes sister, Mrs. Carrie Evans, in Auburn from Saturday until Monday.

Mrs. Alice Cook and son spent a few days last week at her old home with Mrs. Davis.

Frank Brill, wife and son of King Ferry visited J. W. Cook and family Sunday.

E. B. Cobb of Auburn spent Saturday and Sunday with his daughter, Mrs. Walter Corey.

Titus VanMarter and wife visited the latter's sister, Mrs. Thomas Tighe, Sunday.

Jesse G. Corey and wife have been entertaining relatives from New Jersey City lately.

John F. King and wife of Webster City, Iowa, are visiting at Poplar Ridge and vicinity.

The voting contest to see what lady gets the dinner set at Mosher's store is making the ladies hustle for votes. We have not heard of any money being paid for votes so far.

Gornell Corn Show.

The College of Agriculture is preparing to hold its annual Corn Show during Farmers' Week which occurs February 20—25 inc. 1911. Any farmer or others who grow corn may make entries. The prizes will consist of banners and certificates.

Any kind or variety of corn may be entered for prizes; flints, dents, popcorn or sweet corn. There will be classes which will include all of these kinds of corn. The very finest of the season's crop should be saved for this show.

Public schools of the State may compete for banners. There will also be a class open to Granges or other agricultural societies.

Those contemplating entering corn at this show should begin to select their corn at once. In making selections at least ten ears should be saved. The corn will be judged on perfection more than on size of ears. All corn should be of this year's crop and thoroughly matured. It is a good plan to select a large number of ears and occasionally go over these discarding all but the ten most perfect ears. This process will familiarize one with the good and the bad points of corn.

It is hoped that the farmers of the State will take as lively interest in this show as in former years, and will plan to be present during Farmers' Week. All inquiries regarding the show should be addressed to Professor C. H. Tuck, College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

Quick Thinking.

Mrs. Younglove—John, are you aware of the fact that you haven't kissed me for a week? Mr. Younglove—Yes, darling. I was just waiting, my dear, to see how long it would take you to notice it.—Boston Transcript.

REFORMATION OF CALLOPE.

Love Conquers When the Power of the Law is Impotent.

By O. HENRY.

(Copyright, 1907, by the McClure Company.)

Callope Catesby was in his humor again. Ennui was upon him. This daily promontory, the earth—particularly that portion of it known as Quicksand—was to him no more than a pestilential congregation of vapors.

Overnight Callope had hung out signals of approaching low spirits. He had kicked his own dog on the porch of the Occidental hotel and refused to apologize. He had become capricious and fault finding in conversation. While strolling about he reached often for twigs of mesquite and chewed the leaves fiercely. That was always an ominous act.

At this stage Callope generally began to drink. Finally, about midnight, he was seen going homeward, saluting those whom he met with exaggerated but ineffective courtesy. Not yet was Callope's melancholy at the danger point.

THAT FEARFUL, BRASSY YELL.

A quiet, amiable man was Callope Catesby at other times—quiet to indolence and amiable to worthlessness.

At 9 the next morning Callope was fit. Inspired by his own barbarous melodies and the contents of his jug, he was ready primed to gather fresh laurels from the diffident brow of Quicksand. Encircled and crisscrossed with cartridge belts, abundantly garnished with revolvers and copiously drunk, he poured forth into Quicksand's main street. Too chivalrous to surprise and capture a town by silent sortie, he paused at the nearest corner and emitted his slogan—that fearful, brassy yell so reminiscent of the steam piano that had gained for him the classic appellation that had superseded his own baptismal name. Following close upon his vociferation came three shots from his 45 by way of limbering up the guns and testing his aim.

Down the street went Callope, shooting right and left. Glass fell like hail; dogs vomited; chickens flew, squawking; feminine voices shrieked concernedly to youngsters at large. But some four squares farther down lively preparations were being made to minister to Mr. Catesby's love for interchange of compliments and repartee. On the previous night numerous messengers had hastened to advise Buck Patterson, the city marshal, of Callope's impending eruption. The patience of that official, often strained in extending leniency toward the disturber's misdeeds, had been overtaxed. Buck Patterson had been expecting and awaiting in his little 10 by 12 frame office that preliminary yell announcing that Callope was feeling blue. When the signal came the city marshal rose to his feet and buckled on his guns. Two deputy sheriffs and three citizens who had proved the edible qualities of fire also stood up, ready to bandy with Callope's leaden jocularities.

"Gather that fellow in," said Buck Patterson, setting forth the lines of the campaign. "Don't have no talk, but shoot as soon as you can get a show. Keep behind cover and bring him down."

The splenetic Callope, unconscious of retributive plots, was steaming down the channel, cannonading on either side, when he suddenly became aware of breakers ahead. The city marshal and one of the deputies rose up behind some dry goods boxes half a square to the front and opened fire. At the same time the rest of the posse, divided, abelled him from two side streets.

The first volley broke the lock of one of Callope's guns, cut a neat underbit in his right ear and exploded a cartridge in his cross-belt, scorching his ribs as it burst. Feeling braced up by this unexpected tonic to his spiritual depression, Callope executed a fortissimo note from his upper register and returned the fire like an echo.

And now Callope met the enemy's tactics in kind. Choosing with a rapid eye the street from which the weakest and least accurate fire had come, he invaded it at a double quick, abandoning the unprotected middle of the street. With rare cunning the opposing force in that direction, one of the deputies and two of the valorous volunteers, waited, concealed by beer barrels, until Callope had passed their retreat and then peppered him from the rear. In another moment they were re-enforced by the marshal and his other men, and then Callope felt that in order to successfully prolong the delights of the controversy he must find some means of reducing the great odds against him.

Not far away was the little railroad station, its building a strong box house 10 by 20 feet resting upon a platform four feet above ground. Windows were in each of its walls.

Callope made a bold and rapid spurt for it, the marshal's crowd "smoking" him as he ran. He reached the haven in safety, the station agent leaving the building by a window.

Patterson and his supporters baited under protection of a pile of lumber and held consultations. In the station was an untried desperado who was an excellent shot and carried an abundance of ammunition. For thirty yards on each side of the besieged was a stretch of bare open ground.

Standing near was a hand truck used in the manipulation of small freight. It stood by a shed full of sacked wool, a consignment from one of the sheep ranches. On this truck the marshal and his men piled three heavy sacks of wool. Stooping low, Buck Patterson started for Callope's fort, slowly pushing this loaded truck before him for protection. The posse, scattering broadly, stood ready to nip the besieged in case he should show himself in an effort to repel the juggernaut of justice that was creeping upon him. Only once did Callope make demonstration. He fired from a window, and some tufts of wool spurted from the marshal's trustworthy bulwark.

The marshal was too deeply engrossed in steering his protected battleship to be aware of the approach of the morning train until he was within a few feet of the platform. The train was coming up on the other side of it. It stopped only one minute at Quicksand. What an opportunity it would offer to Callope! He had only to step out the other door, mount the train and away!

Abandoning his breastworks, Buck, with his gun ready, dashed up the steps and into the room, driving open the closed door with one heave of his weighty shoulder. The members of the posse heard one shot fired inside, and then there was silence.

At length the wounded man opened his eyes. After a blank space he again could see and hear and feel and think. Turning his eyes about, he found himself lying on a wooden bench. A tall man with a perplexed countenance, wearing a big badge with "City Marshal" engraved upon it, stood over him. A little old woman in black, with a wrinkled face and sparkling black eyes, was holding a wet handkerchief against one of his temples. He was trying to get these facts fixed in his mind and connected with past events when the old woman began to talk.

"There now, great, big, strong man! That bullet never tetchted you—jest skeeted along the side of your head and sort of paralyzed you for a spell. I've heard of sech things afore. Concussion is what they names it. Abel Wadkins used to kill squirrels that way—barkin' 'em. Abe called it. You jest been barked, sir, and you'll be all right in a little bit. Feel lots better already, don't you? You jest lay still awhile longer and let me bathe your head. You don't know me, I reckon, and 'tain't surprisin' that you shouldn't. I come in on that train from Alabama to see my son. Big son, ain't he? Lands, you wouldn't hardly think he'd ever been a baby, would you? This is my son, sir."

Half turning, the old woman looked up at the standing man, her worn face lighting with a proud and wonderful smile. She reached out one veined and calloused hand and took one of her son's. Then, smiling cheerily down at the prostrate man, she continued to dip the handkerchief in the waiting room tin wash basin and gently apply it to his temple.

"I ain't seen my son before," she continued, "in eight years. One of my nephews, Elikanah Price, he's a conductor on one of them railroads, and he got me a pass to come out here. I can stay a whole week on it, and then it'll take me back ag'in. Jest think, now, that little boy of mine has got to be a officer—a city marshal of a whole town! That's somethin' like a constable, ain't it? I never knowed he was a officer. He didn't say nothin' about it in his letters. I reckon he thought his old mother 'd be skeered about the danger he was in. But, laws, I never was much of a hand to get skeered. 'Tain't no use. I heard them guns a-shootin' while I was gettin' off them cars, and I see smoke a-comin' out of the depot, but I jest walked right along. Then I see son's face lookin' out through the window. I knowed him at once. He met me at the door and squeezed me most to death. And there you was, sir, a-lyin' there jest like you was dead, and I 'lowed we'd see what might be done to help set you up."

"I think I'll sit up now," said the concussion patient. "I'm feelin' pretty fair by this time."

He sat, somewhat weakly yet, leaning against the wall. He was a rugged man, big boned and straight. His eyes, steady and keen, seemed to linger upon the face of the man standing so still above him. His look wandered often from the face he studied to the marshal's badge upon the other's breast.

"Yes, yes; you'll be all right," said the old woman, patting his arm. "if you don't get to cuttin' up ag'in and havin' folks shootin' at you. Son told me about you, sir, while you was layin' senseless on the floor. Dou't you take it as meddlesome for an old woman with a son as big as you to talk about it. And you mustn't hold no grudge ag'in my son for havin' to shoot at you. A officer has got to take up for the law—it's his duty—and them that acts bad and lives wrong has to suffer. Don't blame my son any, sir. 'Tain't his fault. He's always been a good boy—good when he was growin' up and kind and 'bedient and well behaved. Won't you let me advise you, sir, not to do so no more? Be a good man and leave liquor alone and live peaceably and godly."

The black mittened hand of the old pleader gently touched the breast of the man she addressed. Very earnest and candid her old, worn face looked. In her rusty black dress and antique bonnet she sat, near the close of a long life, and epitomized the experience of the world. Still the man to whom she spoke gazed above her head, contemplating the silent son of the old mother.

"What does the marshal say?" he asked. "Does he believe the advice is good? Suppose the marshal speaks up and says if the talk's all right?"

The tall man moved uneasily. He fingered the badge on his breast for a moment, and then he put an arm around the old woman and drew her close to him.

"I says this," he said, looking squarely into the eyes of the other man. "that if I was in your place I'd follow it. If I was a drunken, desp'rate character, without shame or hope, I'd follow it. If I was in your place and you was in mine I'd say: 'Marshal, I'm willin' to swear if you'll give me the chance I'll quit the racket. I'll drop the tangle-foot and the gun play and won't play hoss no more. I'll be a good citizen and go to work and quit my foolishness. So help me God!' That's what I'd say to you if you was marshal and I was in your place."

"Hear my son talkin'," said the old woman softly. "Hear him, sir. You promise to be good and he won't do you no harm. Forty-one year ago his heart first beat ag'in mine, and it's beat true ever since."

The other man rose to his feet, trying his limbs and stretching his muscles.

"Then," said he, "if you was in my place and said that and I was marshal I'd say, 'Go free and do your best to keep your promise.'"

"Lawsy," exclaimed the old woman in a sudden flutter, "ef I didn't clear forget that trunk of mine! I see a man settin' it on the platform jest as I seen son's face in the window, and it went plum out of my head. There's eight jars of homemade quince jam in that trunk that I made myself. I wouldn't have nothin' happen to them jars for a red apple."

Away to the door she trotted, spry and anxious, and then Callope Catesby spoke out to Buck Patterson:

"I just couldn't help it, Buck. I seen her through the widow a-comin' in. She never had heard a word 'bout my tough ways. I didn't have the nerve to let her know I was a worthless cuss bet'n' hunted down by the community. There you was lyin' where my shot laid you, like you was dead. The idea struck me sudden, and I just took your badge off and fastened it on to myself, and I fastened my reputation on to you."

"THIS IS MY SON, SIR."

I told her I was the marshal and you was a holy terror. You can take your badge back now, Buck."

With shaking fingers Callope began to unfasten the disk of metal from his shirt.

"Easy there!" said Buck Patterson. "You keep that badge right where it is, Callope Catesby. Don't you dare to take it off till the day your mother leaves this town. You'll be city marshal of Quicksand as long as she's here to know it. After I stir around town a bit and put 'em on I'll guarantee that nobody won't give the thing away to her. And, say, you leather headed, rip roarin', low down son of a locoed cyclone, you follow that advice she give me! [I'm goin' to take some of it myself too.]"

"Buck," said Callope feelingly, "ef I don't I hope I may!"

"Shut up!" said Buck. "Shes a-comin' back."

GARDENS AND NATURE STUDY.

Value of School Courses in These Subjects.

A CHICAGO FORESTER'S PLEA.

The instruction in Plant Life Would Go Far in Supplementing Other Work—Idea Fast Becoming Popular in America—Cleveland Method an Instructive One.

The school garden is fast becoming popular in communities throughout the country. A plea for its development as a permanent part of the curriculum of schools and educational institutions for the reason that the study would produce a beneficial effect upon the pupils in their other work was made recently by J. H. Frost in an address before the members of the Ella Flagg Young club in Chicago. In the course of his plea Mr. Frost said:

"Environment is a potent factor in the development of good citizens, influencing the character, habits and education of the child, and by providing trees, shrubs and flowers for the embellishment of the school—the most important educational agency—the child is supplied with new and growing interests which will help to broaden its ideas of life and make it richer in happiness.

"Our public school principals are putting forth persistent efforts to decorate the school buildings with flower boxes and the school grounds with trees, shrubs and flowers. I am agreeably surprised to find that this desire to have plant decorations about the school is strongly in evidence everywhere throughout the city. In some cases where the ground has been available the children have carried on gardening work under the direction and encouragement of their teachers.

Cleveland (O.) Schools as an Example. "But, although they are willing, I am sure we are asking too much of our grade teachers when we allow them to devote extra time to the promotion of this work. I hope, however, that the time will come when our school board will appreciate the necessity and educational possibilities of this work and follow the example set by the public school board of Cleveland, O., which employs a number of teachers who have had practical as well as technical training in gardening.

"Their duty is to give advice and practical instruction to the teachers and children of the various schools and make drawings for the ornamentation of the grounds and plan the arrangements for children's gardens. Why cannot we have such teachers here?"

"The school garden furnishes many an interesting concrete subject for written composition, mathematical computation, business exercise, lessons in physical geography or exercise of free hand sketching or mechanical drawing. If brought into proper relation with the other subjects in the school curriculum it becomes an aid in teaching these subjects. By concentrating the attention of the pupils it lessens the time necessary for acquiring knowledge of them and thus results in no further crowding of the courses of study.

"Experience has shown that devoting four or five hours a week or even two hours a day to the study of manual training or domestic art enables the pupils to accomplish more in the remaining time than they formerly accomplished in the whole time spent in school. The same is most certainly true of nature study and gardening properly conducted."

Planning Town and City.

When anything is said or written of "the city beautiful" or a city "group plan" the comment of the average person is: "Delightfully ideal! A fine thing for big cities like New York, Chicago and Boston. It really ought to be done some time. But the cost is terrific!" The idea that should be kept in mind is that any kind of city improvement is absolutely practical and profitable; that it is not only for big cities, but for the smallest town or village; that it is needed by every suburban real estate development; also that it is not costly, it need not mean a huge debt. Moreover, city improvement in any form is easily inaugurated. A few citizens of any community who have the right standards of life can start on its way movement for city betterment that will eventually bring numberless advantages to all the citizens.

Maple in the Days of Old.

Scarcely any wood was considered more valuable in the "days of old" than maple wood, tables constructed from a mottled variety being particularly favored. Such a table, according to Evelyn, was Cleero's, costing 10,000 esterces—about £22. Another was estimated at 1875, and yet another, belonging to one of the Ptolemies, is said to have been sold for its weight in gold. There was, in fact, such a craze or tables of the rarest maple among the male sex in Rome and so wildly extravagant were they in this respect that when they reproached their wives or lavishness in pearls and other valuables the ladies would remind them of their costly maple hobby, thus "turning the tables on them," hence the phrase. Virgil represents Evander, who was a provincial king, as receiving Aeneas seated on a maple throne. Chaucer speaks of the maple as forming a bower for the fair Rosamond, in Evelyn's time the tree of the maple was much esteemed for all kinds of turnery.—Westminster Gazette.

Gallie's Caustic Humor.

In a biography of Gallie's some stories are told of the caustic humor of that old investigator. Lotario Sarsi, a writer on science, having said that the Babylonians used to cook eggs by whirling them in a sling, Gallie replied: "The cause of such an effect is very remote from that to which it is attributed, and to find the true cause I shall reason thus: If an effect does not follow with us which followed with others at another time it is because in our experiments something is wanting which was the cause of the former success, and if only one thing is wanting to us that one thing is the true cause. Now we have eggs and slings and strong men to whirl them, and yet they will not become cooked; nay, if they were hot at first they more quickly become cold, and since nothing is wanting to us but to be Babylonians it follows that being Babylonians is the true cause why the eggs became cooked and not to the friction of the air, which is what I wish to prove."

She Didn't Mind.

A girl with a Gibson face and a green feather in her hat boarded a Chestnut street car the other afternoon. She carried something in a paper sack under her arm. The car was crowded with passengers, and no one offered to rise.

The girl looked worried, but set her lips and grabbed at a strap. Just then the car lurched, the girl made a wild effort to keep on her feet and threw her bundle straight in a large man's lap. There was a peculiar grinding sound in the sack, and then something seeped out that looked suspiciously like the yellow of an egg.

"What in the thunder is this stuff?" he started to say, when she sweetly remarked as she clung to the strap:

"Oh, never mind making apologies, I can get another dozen of eggs at our grocery."

The conductor removed the sack of eggs, and the man looked so savage that no one dared laugh.—Louisville Times.

A Weekly Birthday.

Dr. Marks, who for many years was head of St. John's college, Rangoon, which the young Burmese princes attended, once granted a day's holiday because it was Queen Victoria's birthday. The king asked Dr. Marks what he meant by it. On hearing the explanation he said graciously: "That's all right, but will you give them a holiday on my birthday?"

Dr. Marks said he certainly would if his majesty would inform him what was the day on which the world was blessed by his birth.

"According to Burmese national custom," said the king, "my birthday is every Tuesday!"

The Pepper Vine.

The most common and widely used of all spices is pepper. It is a native of the East Indies, but is now cultivated in various parts of the tropical belt of this hemisphere. The plant is a climber and has a smooth stem sometimes twelve feet long. The fruit is about the size of a pea and when ripe is of a bright red color. In cultivation the plant is supported by poles. In some localities small trees are used instead of poles, for the best pepper is grown in a certain degree of shade.

The Gentle Art.

"I adore intelligence!" she cried. "So do I," said he. "All the same, though, beauty and intellect never go together."

"And do you think me intellectual?" she faltered.

"No," he confessed frankly.

"With a faint blush she murmured, "Patterer!"—Los Angeles Examiner.

RID THE TOWN OF BILLBOARDS.

Obnoxious Poster Should be Eliminated From Rural Communities.

Did you ever go into a town in city and see every dead wall or vacant space taken up with signboards plastered with colored obnoxious posters advertising the wares of mail order houses? That's the sight that usually confronts the visitor to the average city or town throughout the United States.

Now, the billboard habit is one that should be fought, severely by all towns which look forward to becoming great communities. Just so long as a town allows these obnoxious posters to deface its streets, just so long that town is going to remain unprogressive.

The war on billboards in the past few years has become national wide. Cincinnati, St. Louis and Kansas City are among the cities that are waging a strong fight to eliminate this means of defacement. In St. Louis 50 per cent of the space occupied by offensive and unsightly billboards will be cleared by the building commissioner as a result of a decision recently handed down by the supreme court, which upholds the validity of the billboard ordinance of St. Louis.

One supreme court judge stated that St. Louis has a right to regulate and control billboards and kindred methods of advertising, but that that may be controlled by legislative enactment.

The judge also said that the average billboard is a constant menace to public safety, health and morals by its pictures and constitutes a hiding place and retreat for criminals.

FOR TOWN BEAUTY.

Remission of Taxes is Urged—Parkways Are Beautifiers.

Prizes in return for suggestions for civic beauty—that is the idea that is being carried on in various towns in the United States. The most unique prize so far heard of is one that will be offered by the city of Washington as a result of a real live suggestion made by an officer of the Municipal Art Society of New York.

Following is part of the official suggestion which touches on the possibilities of beautifying Washington's streets: "No one can see the magnificent street (referring to Pennsylvania avenue) without being impressed by its architectural possibilities and similarly disappointed with the architectural hodgepodge with which the beautiful street is lined.

"I would therefore suggest that if it is possible the best results might be obtained by the passage of an act which, while making no compulsory regulations for the construction of buildings on this street, would offer prizes to be given by the municipality for buildings which conformed to certain standards, those standards to deal not only with the character of the design and possibly with the material with which the facade of the building is constructed, but also with the two main heights—that is, the main cornice height and a subsidiary cornice height over the first story or basement; finally that these prizes be given in a remission of taxes on a sliding scale, according to the nearness with which the buildings conform to the standard set up by the act."

Another method of town beautifying that is worthy of a prize is by building a parkway in the middle of the principal streets. It is ornamental and serves to conceal trolley tracks and wires. The trees in the parkway should be high enough to hide the trolley poles and cars and to furnish shade to the business section.

The Rural Town Tonic.

He who has never called a country town his home has missed much, says the Denver Republican. He who had his first look upon the world from some little village which at the dawn of consciousness spelled all the world to him and held in its bounds all the people will always lack something in his sense of his proper adjustment to creation. It is in them that the truest friendships are formed, the closest studies of human nature provided, the most lasting hold given on the eternal truths. Only as a little child can the kingdom of heaven be entered, and that is a truth of the kingdom of earth as of that one of which it was first said. Go closer into the records of these boys of the farms and you will find that it was from the country towns rather than the farms they came; that it was some country village that inspired the dreams, fired the hopes and prepared for that flight to broader fields. And they go back laden with gifts, not to the farms, but to the country towns to which they feel they owe so much.

Teach Children to Protect Property.

Children should be taught to have a proper regard not only for the premises on which they live, but for that of others and all in public spots, as school grounds, parks and parkways. If they are taught a proper appreciation of public trees and plants they will soon come to regard them as a personal possession, and but few children will destroy or injure that in which they have even a small joint ownership. "What is everybody's property is nobody's property" is a large axiom.

—The Genoa Entertainment Course for the season of 1910-1911 has been selected with great care and is an excellent combination of entertainments. The course is presented under the management of the Union Men's club and will cost considerably more than the course of last year. Nevertheless, the price of the course tickets has been placed at $1.00, the same as last year. The proceeds of the enterprise will be devoted to some public benefit for the village, not yet decided upon. The course includes a variety of entertainers as follows: S. Platt Jones, character-study man; Ruby Gray Kelley Concert Co., composed of a reader, vocalist and cellist; The Spaffords, cartoon and landscape drawing, clay modeling, fire pictures, etc.; J. Reed Powell, illustrated travel talk; and the Toronto Male Quartette who need no special commendation from us. All who heard these singers last year will want to hear them again. The committee have the tickets on sale now and hope to sell a larger number than last season. Be ready to purchase your tickets when called upon. The first number comes on Wednesday evening, Nov. 9.

George H. Mills Dead.

George H. Mills of No. 56 East Genesee street, Auburn, died Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

He was born April 7, 1837, in the town of Venice and was a son of Luke H. Mills and Nancy A. Geer. He is survived by three sisters, Miss Laura E. Mills, Mrs. Jane C. Miller and Mrs. Anna M. Downing, all of Venice. He was married to Harriet B. Mosher, December 29, 1857, who died in February, 1897.

Prior to coming to Auburn he was engaged in farming and later in mercantile pursuits at Poplar Ridge.

About 1874 he came to Auburn and was employed by the dry goods firm of Payne & Hughitt. Following his employment by that firm he purchased the interests of Henry C. Mosher in the firm of Mosher & Race and the firm name was changed to Mills & Race.

After the death of Mr. Race, Emmett G. Lathrop then became a member of the firm and for several years the boot and shoe business was carried on under the firm name of Mills & Lathrop. About 10 years ago Mr. Mills retired from the firm and gave his attention mostly to his real estate holdings.

He was a great admirer of horses of high quality and was considered during his activities one of the best judges in central New York so that he was known among men engaged in that business very widely.

He was a member of Auburn Lodge 474, B. P. O. Elks and was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was a regular attendant of one of the private clubs of this city where he will be sadly missed.

Funeral services will be held at his late residence Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Burial will be made at Fort Hill.—Citizen.

Teachers' Association.

The Interlake Teachers' Association will meet in the town hall at Sherwood on Saturday, Oct. 23, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. The afternoon session will begin at 1:30 o'clock. Teams will meet trains from the north and south at Merrifield. Rev. J. E. Doran will give an address at the morning session, and Principal Gay of Moravia and Prof. Bigelow, formerly of the same town, are on the program for addresses in the afternoon. Commissioner Anna M. Kent will lead a discussion, and there will be papers by Mrs. Lena Coomber and Miss Gifford, a class exercise by Miss Peckham and selections by Miss Cook. Refreshments will be served at noon. The program is an excellent one, and there should be a full attendance of teachers.

Postmaster's Convention.

Going to a National Convention of Postmasters would seem, at first thought, to be a pretty nice pleasure trip. Well, it was, and if ever two souls enjoyed themselves, it was Mr. and Mrs. Postmaster on their trip last week.

The convention being held at Chattanooga, Tenn., gave us an opportunity to visit Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Chickamauga Park and many other points of historical interest in the southland, but pleasure alone was not the object of the trip.

A convention of postmasters is of an educational nature; matters pertaining to the different departments of the Postal Service are discussed; representatives of the Post Office department at Washington address the convention and instruct you regarding changes in methods of transacting the departments' business, and many important matters are brought before the convention.

I believe in the law of mutual benefit; that he who serves best profits most, and I shall do my best to serve you well.

Respectfully,
YOUR POSTMASTER.

A Quiet Wedding.

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 12, a quiet wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Conso near King Ferry, when the marriage of Miss Carrie Hess to John Keipp was consummated. A beautiful ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robt. Ivey of King Ferry, which was witnessed by a few immediate friends of the family. The bride was beautifully attired in white silk trimmed profusely with point lace, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. They were attended to the altar by Mrs. Conso, sister of the groom, and Mr. Frank York, a friend of the bride and groom.

The home was tastefully decorated with carnations, dahlias, anemones, ferns, etc. After congratulations were offered, an elegant supper was served which was furnished by a caterer from Auburn.

Some beautiful presents were in evidence composed of gold, silver, cut glass, pearls, etc.

The happy couple started Thursday morning to visit friends on the Hudson river where the bride had resided before her marriage. On Nov. 1st they will bid adieu to the friends and relatives and begin their journey to the Philippines where they will reside.

Notice.

We, the undersigned committee, will receive sealed bids for the maintenance of thirteen gasoline lamps, located in the lighting district in Genoa village, bids to be based on the cost per night, for lighting and furnishing gasoline, etc. All bids to be at office of town clerk on or before Saturday, Oct. 29, at 7 p. m., 1910. The committee reserve the right to reject any and all bids not for the best interest of the taxpayers.

A Good Position.

Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8-hour law became effective, and since the Wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of U. S. R. and Wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, O., or Philadelphia, Pa.

Or unsigned paintings the Dusseldorf Zettung tells an amusing story, which may interest picture buyers. Achenbach, the German artist, enjoyed a vogue some years ago. A certain collector had bought from an art dealer a seascape represented as a genuine Achenbach. Afterward it was pronounced to be a copy. The buyer brought an action against the dealer, who turned the tables by declaring that his picture was genuine and the other was a copy. Achenbach himself was summoned by the courts to tell which was which. Amazed at the absolute similarity of the two paintings, he gazed at them for a long time, inspected them closely, front and back, sniffed them and then frankly admitted he could not tell which was the original and which the copy.

A Town in the Philippines.
Santo Domingo has a population of about 2,000 and is entirely different from any other town in the Philippines. In the first place, all the buildings are of stone, whitewashed. The roofs are made of cogon grass, closely trimmed so as to afford no purchase to the severe typhoons which sweep over the islands. The streets are about twelve feet wide, many of them paved with stone. Some walls extend along both sides of the streets their full length, giving them the appearance of lanes. The walls are about three to five feet in height, broken at intervals for entrance to the yards, which in turn are separated from each other by stone walls. Most of the yards are clean and exceptionally neat and attractive.—Manila Times.

The White of an Egg.
The white of an egg is made up of little cells filled with albumen. By beating the white these cells are ruptured and oxygen from the air is inhaled, which gives the white and light appearance to beaten eggs. The white of a stale egg will not inclose as much oxygen, will not be as light and as easily digested as that of the fresh egg and, of course, less valuable. The importance of beating the egg in cold, moist air is readily seen.

It Saves You Money.
The special half-price sale of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia by J. S. Banker means the saving of a few dollars on every family's yearly bill for medicines. Mr. J. S. Banker has so much faith in the superior merit of this medicine that he says: "If Dr. Howard's specific does not cure you, come back to his store and he will return your money."
This remedy is not an ordinary medicine. It is the favorite formula of a well known physician, and has the endorsement of hundreds of physicians of eminence in their profession, who prescribe it in cases of constipation, dyspepsia or liver trouble, knowing from experience that it will make a complete and lasting cure.

Complete Lives.
We should all strive to make our lives complete. Many people only half live. Health without usefulness, intellect without usefulness, pleasure without duty—these are incomplete and unsatisfying elements of living.

BE PATIENT WITH YOUR RETAILER

He Is Doing His Level Best to Serve You Properly.

HIS JOB IS NOT A CINCH.

Customers Often Fail to Understand the Obstacles in the Way of the Man From Whom They Obtain Their Household Supplies.

It is comparatively easy for the small merchant to get in disfavor in his particular community, often through no fault of his own. He frequently finds himself righteously on the defensive against some of his best customers. In the present time of high prices explanations are demanded of him that he isn't able to clear up, at least to the satisfaction of the aggressive customer.

More than this, in these times of sharp trading in so many sections of the country the merchant in dealing with the jobber gets a hard knock in an unexpected manner. One of these devices of the "crooked" jobber is presented by the salesman from the improper house he represents, says Irwin Ellis in an article in the Chicago Tribune.

This salesman pushes his sales hard. The retailer in the provincial town expresses his fears that such purchases will not be justified by his trade. The salesman is voluble, cheerful and full of promises. He will let the customer lay in his certain lines and if they don't "go" the manufacturing or jobbing house that he represents will agree to "exchange" to full purchase cost of the goods.

Later the wisdom of the retailer is proved. He has his contract and returns these certain lines of goods which he has reason to believe were covered to indemnify him. But the "exchanged" goods when unpacked are discovered to be far below the quality of the goods of first shipment. But such a merchant can do nothing. His contract has left out the whole question of quality. The emphasis has been laid upon the ready exchange.

Among the small business men, whether in towns, villages or neighborhoods in the cities, the small business man has a burden upon him of pleasing which may become a burden indeed. Many of his customers grow to know him by sight and name. He may be Bill or Jack or John to a whole neighborhood.

But, whatever the relationship on a personal basis, he has his customer banking upon that relationship to the advantage of every other house in the neighborhood. He may be a grocer and marketman. He gets his fruits, vegetables and kindred daily supplies in order at 8 o'clock, 9 o'clock or later, as the distance increases from the supply center. These everyday supplies are displayed for sale to the best advantage for the early personal shopper. Most of his telephone orders come later in the day, when his scores of personal buyers, seeing to what they get, have handled the stock more or less.

Nothing is more simple than a statement of truth—that fruits and vegetables, even meats and many other kinds of market supplies, cannot be as desirable and fresh and tempting at 4 o'clock in the afternoon as they were at 8 o'clock that morning. Among these fruits and vegetable supplies the shopper, coming in person, has tilted boxes, gouged into them, perhaps, peeped into bottom layers and made like inquisitions, all to the detriment of perishable goods. Can the Smith household, which telephones at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, expect to receive such goods as those which Mrs. Jones in person chose at 9 o'clock in the morning and the exhibition of which caused Mrs. Smith to telephone for the goods? Yet if Mrs. Smith gets a chance in the next few days she'll "jump all over the grocer" about the matter, which has been impossible for the grocer to prevent.

Occasionally the honest grocer tells Mrs. Smith over the telephone that really he hasn't just the kind and quality of goods that she wants. This is not enough, often, for the reason that Mrs. Smith is expecting a friend or two in to dinner and must have something. The grocer may do his best choosing for her and Mrs. Smith be just as disappointed and sore as she can be.

I should say emphatically that Mrs. Jones, who walks over to the market early and observes the decencies of shopping in not pawing over perishable stuff to the detriment of the shoppers after her, deserved the best that is in the house; that Mrs. Smith's telephone order late in the afternoon takes a distinctly second choice. But you can't get the Smiths to see it that way.

Good Rule in Trading.
Make those dealing with you feel that whatever you offer them is just as represented—not practically as represented, but exactly, says the Agricultural Southwest. There must be no working around a questionable point. The letter of the law does not answer the purpose. It would be a short lived success, one that stepped on the heels of failure, which you would gain by deceiving patrons through keeping silent when they purchased goods unadventurously.

Home Course In Health Culture

First of a Series of Eighteen Articles
By EUGENE L. FISK, M. D.

I.—Fresh Air In the Home.
Its Low Cost and High Value

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Dr. EUGENE L. FISK,
Author of "Home Course In Health Culture"

THE old Greek philosophers regarded air as a simple and unchangeable element like gold, silver, etc., and the problem of how air sustains life was certainly "Greek" to them.

This ignorance of the composition of air persisted until the latter part of the eighteenth century, when Priestley discovered that air is a mixture of gases, one of which, oxygen, is necessary to life. By experiment on animals he demonstrated that in passing through the lungs air parts with some of its oxygen to the blood and takes from the blood a poisonous gas—carbon dioxide. Priestley, of course, was not aware that air may also bring from the lungs and throat other organic impurities and the microbes of disease. As ignorance of these facts existed for thousands of years it is not strange that our ancestors builded their homes and ordered their lives entirely without regard to the value of fresh air. Even now, however, the old habits persist to some extent, and stuffy, overheated, ill ventilated rooms may be found in every community.

If fresh air were a high priced commodity there would be some excuse for not breathing it. But, except in the case of overcrowded tenement districts, pure air is within the reach of rich and poor alike, and neglect to bon dioxide, while the air of a crowded schoolroom may contain twenty times that amount and be correspondingly vitiated by organic impurities, microbes and what has been well named the "sewage" of the lungs and skin.

Renewing Air In Rooms.

Even where a liberal air space is allotted to each individual it is necessary that the air of a room be completely changed at least once every hour. In schools and factories where there is limited air space per capita arrangements are often made for changing the air from five to seven times per hour.

One gas burner consumes as much oxygen as four and one-half men.

I have considered thus far the air poisons and deleterious matters derived from the human body. Other sources of contamination also exist and are a menace to health. I have mentioned vapor of water as an ingredient of pure air. This vapor is quite necessary to health, and its absence occasions a peculiar dryness of the skin and a stiffness in the head which is often the first stage of a common cold. The cold is directly caused by microbes, but the system is laid open to their attacks by the conditions above described.

The absence of vapor of water is usually the result of faulty heating methods. A hot air furnace or stove will supply unduly dry air unless some device is used for supplying moisture. Such devices are ordinarily attached to furnaces in the form of a small reservoir opening into the air supply. Neglect to keep this reservoir filled with water is a serious mistake and may be responsible for much discomfort and illness. Where no such device is a part of the heating apparatus a vessel of water should be placed upon the stove or at some point where the hot air will pass over it and take up the moisture; otherwise it will take the moisture from the body.

The temperature in the house should not be allowed to rise above 68 degrees. Neglect of this precaution is frequently responsible for undue susceptibility to colds.

Some Ventilation Points.

In considering the practical problem of ventilation the following items are of most importance:

The most efficient means of ventilating, especially in the winter time, is the heating system. The hot air furnace, which insures a constant supply of fresh outside air, is the best system if the air is supplied direct to each room and the precautions taken to keep the air moist which I have already outlined. While this system does not provide for releasing bad air, this usually escapes through the cracks of doors and windows. It is desirable, however, to have open fireplaces wherever possible to insure the rapid escape of vitiated air. Where stoves are employed the air is not changed very rapidly, and the dangers of contamination from coal gas necessitate some special means of ventilation. An excellent measure is to raise the lower sash of a window about four inches and close the opening with an accurately fitting board. This will allow the air to come in between the two sashes without causing a draft. Two holes may be cut in this board and small boxes opening toward the ceiling placed over them.

As frequently as possible living rooms should be thoroughly ventilated by opening all windows and doors and rapidly and completely changing the air.

Where the hot water or steam system is used for heating the above precautions are also advisable, as such systems do not provide any means of ventilation.

Ventilating at Night.

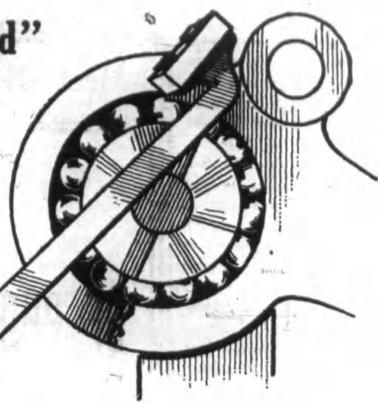

The problem of ventilating at night is much simpler, but in all these matters common sense and caution must be used. In the winter time precautions should be taken against drafts, but a thorough ventilation of the sleeping rooms should be rigidly maintained regardless of the condition of the weather. It is usually possible to have free ventilation without draft by properly placing the bed. The ideal method, however, is to have a sleeping porch or balcony, where one may sleep practically in the open. Such a porch can easily be adjusted for protection from inclement weather.

Another method is the window tent. This is very much like an ordinary window awning, but is placed on the inside of the window, over the upper part of the sleeper's body, completely shutting him off from the air of the room. This method has the advantage of insuring the constant breathing of outside air without drafts and at the same time keeping the temperature of the room fairly warm.

Not more than one person should sleep in a small bedroom. If possible children should sleep alone and each child have a room to itself.

How Would a "Full Jewelled" Typewriter Appeal to You?

Every important bearing in an expensive watch is a small gem of a hardness not susceptible to wear. The purpose of the jewels is to insure by reduction of friction and wear, the accuracy which makes a timepiece valuable.

The first successful use of a ball-bearing typebar in a writing-in-sight machine was by the manufacturers of the New Model L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter.

Ball Bearings not only for the typebars, but at all vital wearing points of the New Model
L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter
ALL THE WRITING ALWAYS IN SIGHT

are made to serve exactly the same purpose as the jewelled bearings of an accurate, expensive watch. They prevent play and false motion, banish friction, and insure to the operator, for every ounce of energy applied, a full equivalent of perfect work. You demand a full jewelled watch. HE WOULDN'T LISTEN.

It Pays Generally to Hear What the Other Fellow Has to Say.

The benevolent looking old gentleman entered the shoe store and, meeting the proprietor near the door, began: "Good morning, sir. I wish to speak to you about a pair of shoes and rubbers I bought here a couple of days ago. They are—"

"You'll have to see the clerk who sold them to you," the merchant answered very snappishly. "I don't know anything about them."

"But I desire to say to you personally that—"

"Now, look here, I can't be bothered over every pair of laces or box of polish my clerks sell. Just see the young man who waited upon you. He's around somewhere."

"Yes, I see him there at the back end of the store, but I really felt that it was my duty to tell you about it. You see—"

"If I stood around listening to everybody who comes into this store to complain that they've bought something they didn't want or that they've been slighted, as they think, by my clerks I wouldn't have time for anything else. You'll please excuse me. The clerk will hear your complaints, and if there is anything we can do you may be sure it will be done. But we can't take back even a pair of rubbers after they have been out of the store two or three days. You can surely see that if we did business in such a way—"

"My dear sir, I don't want you to take back the rubbers, and I haven't any complaint to make. I merely wished to tell you that I found the shoes and rubbers about the best in their line I ever purchased. I believe in the principle of giving praise wherever it may be fairly given, and I stepped in to order some more goods, but I see you're too busy to bother with such a trifle this morning, so I will be going."—Shoe Trade Journal.

The Turkish Doctor's Oath.

In Turkey they have a Hippocratic oath, though they do not call it by that name. It is given in Al-Kulliyeh, the magazine published by the Syrian Protestant college in Beirut. To each of the graduates in medicine the oath was administered by the Turkish head of the medical examining board. We cite a few of the pledges:

"That when I am called at the same time by two different patients, the one rich and the other poor, I will accept the call of the poor without taking into consideration the money offered and will do my best for his treatment, and that I will never decline to answer any call, day or night, during the reign of common diseases or of an epidemic or of contagious diseases.

"That I will not ask extra fees from the patients and will not act against my conscience by exaggerating their sickness in order to get the calling fees.

"That in case of a doubt as to the treatment of a patient I will not leave his life in danger through a failure to consult other doctors on account of my pride."

Dance on the Ceiling.
A student of the Tyrol and Tyroloese people describes a remarkable dance in which the male dancers beat time on the ceiling with their feet.

"In Brandenburg and one or two other Tyroloese valleys which boast of a particular muscular fair sex," says the writer, "the girl at the conclusion of her swain's fantastical jumps catches hold of him by his braces and holds him up in the air. He, of course, helps by jerking himself upward when she lifts, and then, balancing with his hands on her shoulders, he trends the ceiling of the low room to the tune of the music, and she continues to dance around on the floor of the room. Such dances are rapidly falling into disuse."

K. of P. Fair.
 We certainly had the surprise of our life when we looked into plans for the Knights of Pythias fair, to be held in the Opera House, Groton, N. Y., Oct. 20-29. We knew that the boys were going to hold a fair, but this is going to be a fair and then some. We were astonished to find out at what an expense it was going to be put on. They are going to give a brand new $950 four cylinder 20 H. P. Ford touring car for the door prize with tickets at only one dollar, and they admit the bearer to the fair at any and all times beside the chance on the automobile. This staggered us. But when we talked over the fair with the Manager, Mr. E. B. Carpenter, who by the way, has had several years experience in getting up fairs with great success, he went on and told us about the Japanese Village that was going to be used there for the first time as a decoration.

This decoration cost over $2,500 to complete and can hardly be described. It must be seen to be appreciated. The center piece is 25 feet high with 153 electric lights on it, this represents a three story Japanese house all complete, it is surely a work of art. Then there are eight smaller buildings about 12 feet high all of Japanese architecture, all trimmed with electric lights, then the ceiling canopy effect consists of 1000 feet of electric lights, gracefully draped from the ceiling, all encased in Japanese lanterns with the Japanese trimmings. It is certainly going to be worth a long trip just to see this display of the decorator's art. Of course each of the houses will have all sorts of things in them to sell such as candy, groceries, handkerchiefs, popcorn, cut glass, and other things too numerous to mention. It is a case of seeing Japan by electric light without having the expense of a long sea voyage. There will be a lot of Japanese men, women and girls there assisting in the work with several Japanese novelties to sell. It will be something so entirely new and novel that you cannot afford to miss it and it being right here near home our readers can all afford to take it in both in regard to time and money spent. And it is going to assist the enterprising K. of P. boys of Groton to build their home.

There will be something going on all the time to interest both the young and the old.

Chief Clerk L. G. Barger.

The following article is copied from the Railroad Reporter and Marine News of Aug. 27, 1910:

L. G. Barger, the pleasant and courteous Chief Clerk to General Superintendent T. E. Clarke of the Lackawanna Railroad, has won a great many friends in the railroad world through the simple trait of being kind and obliging.

Raised on a farm in New York State he "never knew a harsher tone than a flute note." His entrance into the railroad fraternity was in the capacity of operator at a small country station. He was later appointed agent and served in various responsible positions until reaching that of Chief Clerk to the Superintendent of the New York Central. He came to the Lackawanna about ten years ago as Chief Clerk to Superintendent Ketcham at Hoboken.

When Mr. Poor, who was formerly Chief Clerk for Mr. Clarke at Scranton, was appointed Superintendent of the S. & U. Divisions in 1904, Mr. Barger was brought to Scranton to succeed him. It was no easy task to find a man sufficiently versatile to discharge the various duties of the position, but when Mr. Clarke selected "Lon" he got a man of even temperament and pleasant disposition.

Mr. Barger is never too busy to listen to your troubles and is always anxious to confer a favor. His pleasant smile may be one of the eccentricities of genius, but still the wonder grows why the said smile has not captivated a Mrs. Chief Clerk ere this.

But it is hoped that "Lon" will take the tip of his friends and send out invitations before long. That he would make a good husband, not a "model" one, which is a small limitation of the real thing, goes without saying.

And in closing it would not be amiss to dwell for a moment on what one was heard to say—one whose word means much—regarding Barger. This gentleman said: "Men have risen to higher positions in fact the highest within the gift of a railroad company, who have started with less prospects than Barger, and with not as many opportunities."

A Bright Student.

During a recent examination in the theology of the Old Testament the following question was asked a young clergyman: "What language did Balaam's ass speak?" After a moment of thought a smile flashed across his face, and he wrote his answer. I looked at the paper. He had written, "Assyrian."—Lippincott's.

Meet Me at SAPERSTEIN'S, 56 State St., Auburn. - - - Any Time From Oct. 21-31

A Unique Event
A Money Saver in Every Way
OF PROFIT TO EVERY MAN, YOUTH & BOY WITHIN 25 MILES OF AUBURN
SAPERSTEIN'S CLOTHING
ACQUAINTANCE SALE

Commences Friday, Oct. 21. - - - Continues 10 Days
 A "Get Together"--"Know Me"--"Know You" Sale that will distribute several thousand dollars in profits into the homes of the people. Here's the "How and Why" read every word.

Every man who reads this advertisement will please take it as a personal invitation to come to this store and get acquainted. We believe there are thousands of men in Auburn and its vicinity who would be glad to make all their clothing purchases at this store and save the money which could thus be saved, if they really knew the select stock we carry and the many advantages to be derived from trading here.

So come and get acquainted. We haven't the largest, not the finest store in the city, neither have we the choicest location for doing business yet these seeming disadvantages are all in your favor, and make it possible to give greater value for a fixed price than can be secured where all is glitter and gloss.

No matter where you buy your fall suit, you must help pay the store rent, clerk hire, and the thousand and one expenses that go to make up the running of a business. Don't it stand to reason that when rent is low, when store expenses are modest, that you can get better clothing value than in the store where these items are 5 to 10 times as much or more?

We honestly believe we can give you the best clothing values in the city and that's why we want to become acquainted with you and have you know us and our stock. With everything at the top notch in price a saving of $2 to $5 on a suit or overcoat will be gladly welcomed. We can save you that and perhaps more.

So this is why we have inaugurated this "Acquaintance Sale." We want you to see our store and see our stocks. We want you to know the big values the stock contains. So to make assurance doubly sure that you will come we have taken our regular prices and cut them deep, throwing profits to the winds, making this sale an investment for the future, for once acquainted the benefits will be mutual for a long, long time.

The novel sale will commence on Friday, October 21, and while the "Acquaintance Sale Bargains" will be big every day, it will be profitable to come the opening day and get first choice.

Such famous makes of Clothing as Schloss Bros. & Co. of Baltimore, go in this sale at about cost
