PROLOGUE.

This story of a young man's honest attempt to "break" the "boss" and the power of the "machine" is an absorbingly intimate portrayal of the working of the "wheels within wheels" in a desperate political struggle of today. The senator, strongly intrenched behind his party "machine," presents an almost invalnerable front, and the conflict between father and son as this young lawyer, single handed, fights for what he honestly believes to be the truth and right holds one with a tremendous sympathetic interest.

CHAPTER X.

IN THE HERBARIUM. HE Westherfords, millionaire mine people and so newly rich that the crisp bank notes fair ly crackled when Mrs. Weatherford spent them, kept their lackeyed and liveried state in a castle-like house in Mess circle, the most expensive if it's only politics," he resumed. "First, "You will take notice that I'm not I wish you'd tell me what I've been asking who this Professor Anners is doing to get myself into your bad or why I should be making him a present of a block of stock, but what you She laughed easily. "Who said you say goes as it lies. Anything else?" had been doing anything?" she asked.

"Yes. Be perfectly frank with Mr. Blount and don't let him put you off. He may pretend to be very angry at peace with you. I want to be put next first, but you won't mind that."

"I won't mind anything if I can bring this business down to the everyday, commonplace earth once more. You and the senator and Gantry and McVickar are playing some sort of game, and you haven't shown me more than the back of the cards. That's all right. I'll play my hand blindfolded, if that's what you want, just so we win the odd trick. When and where can I find Mr. Evan Blount?"

"The day after tomorrow at his office in Temple court. He is out of the city now, but"- we are out for open publicity and a square deal for every man, including the railroad man."

Here Gantry's coming put an end to the private conference, and the president of the Twin Buttes company went his way.

It was not until they had served out their full sentence at Mrs. Weatherford's crush and were back in the private dining room suit at the Inter-Mountain, with Miss Anners safely behind the closed door of her own apartment, that the small conspirator passed the word of good hope on to her husband.

"It is working beautifully," she exulted. "He will go to see Evan day after tomorrow-and after that the delnge.

"All right," was the cordial reply. "I'll be down along some of these days, and if you can show me that McVickar isn't going into politics any further than you have gone here tonight I'll promise you to come back here and tell the boys that the jig is up.'

Five minutes later the branch train pulled out, and the chairman and his fellow committeemen gave the departing joint debater three cheers and another. When the red tail lights of the train had disappeared around the first curve Steuchfield turned to his fellow conspirators.

"Well, boys," he said, with a grin that went from ear to ear, "I guess we did it up all right and according to orders. I don't know what sort of game the Hon. Dave Sagebrush is playing this time, but whatever he says goes, and I reckon we gave the young man a right pleasant time. Anyway, he seemed to think so."

capital until the afternoon of the second day. His first care was to call up the Inter-Mountain, and when the clerk disappointed him by telling him that his father, Mrs. Blount and their guest had gone out to Wartrace Hall he counted it as one more opportunity missed and settled down to business.

First in the memoranda on his desk was a stenographer's note asking him to make an appointment with one S. P. Hathaway, whose address was the Inter-Mountain hotel. Since the note was marked "important" he told the clerk to call up the hotel at once, and in due time the gentleman, who, the stenographer said, had called several times during the day, made his appearance at the door of the private office.

It was a mutual shock. Blount recognized instantly his companion of the Omaha-Aretas Pullman smoking compartment and the man who had doubtless sent the three highbinders after him on the night of mysteries and who had been the prime mover in the series of singular incidents ending in the midnight homecoming to Wartrace Open an Account Hall.

not the most aristocratic no thoroughfare of the capital city.

Weatherford, the father, egged on by Mrs. Weatherford, had political aspirations pointing toward a United States senatorship, the election to which would fall within the duty of the next legislature.

The mine owner himself would willingly have dodged, but the ambitious wife was inexorable. There were two grown daughters and a growing son. and it was for these that Mrs. Weatherford was socially ambitious.

The reception, for which the senator's wife had driven her guest thirty miles through the dust of the sagebrush hills, was one of the moves in Mrs. Weatherford's private campaign. From room to room in the vast house a curiously assorted throng of the hidden ones worked its way as the jam and crush permitted.

It was a mark of the newness of the Weatherford riches that the glass and iron greenhouse, built out as an extension of one of the drawing rooms, was called "the herbarium." It was a reproduction on a generous scale of a tropical garden.

The senator's party of three was fashionably late at the function in Mesa circle, but in the crush filling the spacious drawing rooms the hostess and her long line of receiving assistants were still on duty.

Having successfully passed the line with her husband and Patricia, little Mrs. Blount looked about her, saw Mr. Richard Gantry, signaled to him with her eyes and, with the traffic manager for her center rush to wedge a way through the crowded rooms, was presently lost to sight-at least from Miss Anners' point of view.

Whether she knew it or not, from the moment of her appearance at the hostess' end of the long receiving line the senator's wife had been marked and followed in her slow progress through the crowded rooms by a prosperous looking gentleman, whose hawklike eyes never lost sight of her.

When his quarry stopped, as she did frequently, to chat with one or another of the guests the man with the eager eyes circled nervously and once or twice seemed about to make the opportunity which was so slow in making itself.

But it was not until the little lady in the claret colored party gown had drifted, still with a hand on Gantry's arm, in among the palm and banana trees that the bird of prey person made, his swoop. A moment later Gantry had taken his commands and wag disappearing in the direction of the refreshment tables, and the little lady was saying, "Dear me, Mr. Hathsway, you almost startled me!"

"Did 17" said the lumber king rather grimly, as if he meant the query to be apologetic. "I am sorry. I didn't mean to, but Mrs. Gordon said I would find you here, and so I took the liberty of-er-following you. I'm needing a little straightening out, you know, and-er-would you mind letting me talk business with you for a minute or two, Mrs. Blount?"

"Certainly not, if you can talk business in such a place as this," she said, making room for him on the rustic election."

"You know that, too, Mrs. Blount. It was the swinging of the solid employees' vote of the Twin Buttes Lumber company over to the railroad ticket."

"With whom did you make the contract two years ago?"

"A gentlemen's agreement," she murmured. "You have tried Mr. Mc-Vickar again?"

"Yes. He referred me to Gantry." "And what did Mr. Gantry say?"

"Possibly he meant the senator's son," she ventured, tapping a very pretty cheek with the folded fan. "Have you been leaving Evan Blount out in all of this?"

"I didn't know where to put him in That's what brings me here tonight. The senator or Mr. McVickar or both of them together have set the whole state to running around in circles with this appointment of young Blount. Some say it's a deal between the senator and McVickar, and some say it's a fight. Half of the professional spellbinders are walking in their sleep over it right now. I thought maybe you could tell me, Mrs. Blount."

"I can't tell you anything that would help the people who are walking in their sleep," she returned, "but I might offer a suggestion in your personal affair. Mr. Blount is your man."

Hathaway pursed his thin lips and frowned. "How big a block of Twin Buttes stock shall I offer him?" Her laugh was a silvery peal of derision. "You always figure in dollars and cents, don't you, Mr. Simon Peter Hathaway?" she mocked. "I have always found it the cheapest in the end."

"Listen," she said, with the folded fan held up like a monitory finger. "Mr. Gantry may be back any minute, and I can give you only the tiniest hint. You must go to Mr. Evan Blount and appeal to him frankly as one business man to another."

"But I have heard-they say he' all kinds of a crank."

"Never mind what you have heard Tell him all the facts and ask him to help you, and, for mercy's sake, don't offer him a block of your stock. Put it where it will do the most good. Put it in the name of Professor William J. Anners of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and show Mr. Blount how dreadfully disastrous the loss of the preferential freight rate would be to all the poor people in your list of stockholders, including Professor Anners."

Hathaway drew down his cuff and pencil memorandum

CHAPTER XL THE GAME.

TF Evan Blount had been anticipating an unfriendly reception at the great mining camp in the Carnadine hills he was agreeably disappointed. A committee of prominent citizens, headed by Jasper Steuchfield, the reform chairman for Carnadine county, met him at the train, escorted him to the hotel and during the afternoon, which was at his disposal, gave dom of the camp. The political meeting, which was held in the Carnadine Mining company's electric lighted ore shed, was packed with an enthusiastic audience. and there were prolonged cheers and handclappings when the railroad representative took his seat on the improvised platform as the guest of the committee.

Later, when Judge Crowley, the reform candidate for the state senate had opened the joint debate with a sharp arraignment of the railroad's methods, not only in its dealings with its patrons as a common carrier, but also in the pertinacity with which it invaded the political field, there was tumultuous applause. But it was no heartler than that which greeted Blount when he rose to present the railroad's side of the argument.

During the journey from the capital, which had consumed the night and the greater portion of the forenoon, he had prepared his speech. His argument-the one unanswerable argument, as it seemed to him-was the existence of a law which presumed to limit the earnings of a private or at most a quasi public corporation, without making a corresponding regulation limiting the cost of such a corporation's That being the case, when they vote service. Upon this foundation he was able to build a very fair structure of oratory.

The judge, his opponent, was a rather turgid man, whose speech abounded in flights of spread eagle eloquence and whose appeal was to the emotions and the impulses of his audience.

Blount, on the other hand, made a hypical lawyer's speech, calmly delivered, logical in every syllogism and appealing frankly to the intelligence of his hearers. In every period of it he was greeted with generous applause, and at the close of the meeting he had what the editor of the local paper called in his issue of the following day "an ovation."

Steuchfield and his fellow committeemen escorted him to the midnight train, and no one in the crowd of congratulators was more enthusiastic than the opposition chairman.

"That was a great speech, Mr. Blount," he said at parting. "If you can go all over the state making as good talks as you have made here tonight you'll tie us all up in a hard knot, But McVickar won't let you do it, not by a long shot."

Blount laughed. "There are no strings tied to me, Mr. Steuchfield," he declared. "This is a new deal, and I am the dealer. Come down to the capital and let me convince you that

"Great Scott!" he said. given me half a hint that you were Dave Blount's son, but you didn't, you know, and now I am handicapped just at the time when I oughtn't to be, I today, Mr. Blount, and you've got me going when I ought to be coming. I've been given to understand that you are handling the political end for the railroad company in this campaign, Mr. Blount. Is that right?"

"It is and it isn't," was the quick reply. "The railroad company is not in politics in this campaign-as a political factor, I mean. What we are trying to do-what we mean to do-is to lay the entire matter plainly and fairly before the people with a plea for a square deal."

"H'm, yes," said the trust president. who was evidently suffering from a fresh attack of embarrassment. "But there are certain little business mat ters which have to enter into every rampaign, and your company, like my own, is obliged to take cognizance of them. Two years ago the railroad people found it advisable and profitable to-er-make a little arrangement with us which was to our mutual advantage, and I called to see if it could not be made again."

Blount sat back in his chair, and the conciliatory smile disappeared. "State the facts, if you please, Mr. Hathaway," he said curtly.

"Well, it was like this. As you know, we have a great many sawmills scattered around in different places in the state, and we employ a good many men. While our employees are residents of the state, they are not citizens in the sense that they take any active interest in state politics. They may be here this year and up among the Oregon redwoods next year and somewhere else the year following. at all they naturally ask us how we would like to have them vote." "Go on," said Blount.

"Well, as I say, such being the case, we are able to control at least four and probably five of the legislative districts in this state. The control is worth something to your people, and in the last election that fact was recognized. Since the Twin Buttes Lumber company is practically the only heavy lumber shipper in this region, it was given a preferential rate on its products, not at all as a quid pro quo. you understand, but merely in friendly recognition of our help in the last election. "Really, it was not such a great thing that was done for us, Mr. Blount. If you are familiar with lumber rates in this territory you will know that the special tariff made for us is all that enables us to live. Without it we would go into bankruptcy inside of a year."

Blount had opened his penknife and was absently sharpening a pencil. "This special rate you speak of, Mr. Hathaway," he said, speaking slowly-"I imagine it is not confined to this state."

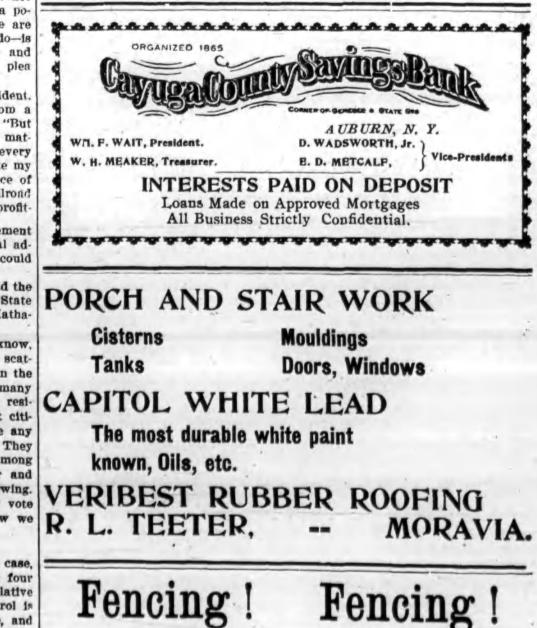

"Well-er-no," was the hesitating

Diana of Philadelphia. At the mint in Philadelphia are a aumber of coins far more precious than any which find their way into circulation. They are a collection of curios, and many of them date from times of great antiquity. Perhaps the most interesting among them is a handsome coin bearing on its face the profile of a woman which has a striking resemblance to the goddess of Liberty of our own currency. Underneath is the single word "Demos," which is the Greek for people. On the reverse of the coin is a beautiful figure of the goddess Diana arching her bow, and the inscription translated into English reads, "Diana, Friend of the Philadelphians." The coin was minted more than 2,000 years ago at the city of Philadelphia, in Asia Minor, where there grew up in later years one of the seven churches of which St. John writes. The prize was discovered some years ago in Europe by a citizen of our own Philadelphia, himself an authority on coins. By him it was appropriately presented to the mint in Philadelphia. -New York Press.

Carlyle's Sneer at Gladstone. E. Boehm, the sculptor, once met Gladstone at a country house and was immensely impressed by the extent and diversity of the statesman's knowledge as revealed in his conversation. Boehm was still full of the subject when the morning arrived for Carlyle's sitting for a bust, and to the philosopher the sculptor poured forth his admiration for Gladstone's intimate acquaintance with subjects so far apart as gardening and Greek. Carlyle listened for a time in scornful silence; then he said, "And what did he say about your work?" "Oh, nothing." said Boehm. "He doesn't know anything about sculpture." "Of course," growled Carlyle, "of course, and he showed his knowledge about things that you didn't understand. No doubt if you asked Blackle be'd say that Gladstone knew nothing about Greek, and the gardener would tell you that he knew nothing whatever of gardening."

How Sheridan Paid a Debt. No one knew better the power possessed by a really polished compliment than Sheridan, and on innumerable occasions during that rather stormy theatrical management of his did he extricate himself from a difficulty by means of one. A good instance is the following: An English nobleman who had married a beautiful actress once

A Helpful Suggestion.

"I tried to get a chance to speak to you at church Sunday," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "but the crush was so great that couldn't push through to where you were."

"Yes, wasn't it awful?" replied her hostess as she flicked a bit of dust from the Gobelin tapestry. "All the common folks in town seem to want to crowd into our church lately. It's where they belong. How did you like the sermon?"

"Well, as a sermon it was fairly good, but I do wish Dr. Goodman would quit splitting his infinitives. I try not to let it make me nervous, but can't keep from being shocked every time he does it."

"I never let them kind of things bother me, but that's where the Episcopals have the advantage of us. If our preacher would wear a long robe he could split them and you'd never notice it."-Chicago Record-Herald.

It Couldn't Hit Back.

A man who doesn't care for music went one snowy night at a friend's earnest solicitation to an amateur recital at the home of a mutual acquaintance. The man who didn't like music was not in a particularly happy frame of mind when he, reached the house, and he was even less happy when he left it.

Trudging home through the drifts covering the pavements, he spoke his mind, dwelling with special emphasis upon his opinion of the acquaintance's daughter as a vocal soloist.

But her voice has been excellently trained." defended the friend. "She struck high C."

FELL ON HIS PILLOW.

Then Came a Joyous Time For the Skating Rink Patrons.

When Mr. Homer Davenport was a boy roller skating reached Silverton. In his book, "The Country Boy," he tells of his plan to learn without getting hurt, as he thought falling about the skating rink was no joke. He borrowed a pair of overalls of the stoutest man in the village and a long pillow from his mother's bed and believed the game as good as won when he entered the door of the rink: I lowered the pillow into the seat of the overalls after I had put them on and then got a boy to hold the piltoo bad they ain't satisfied to stay low up against my back while I put my vest over it, and I dived out into the thick of the skaters. An elderly lady, who had had some troubles of her own that afternoon, skated up to me and told me she thought perhaps we went at it too fast. So we were leaning against the wall, talking over the scientific points of it when I gave the audience a rare treat.

While leaning there, talking, all at once my feet, that were close together, started and rolled out toward the middle of the room. I don't think I bent a finger, but I fell exactly like a tree, and lo and behold, the pillow burst. It must have been five minutes before they got through laughing

Graveyard Marriages.

A strange custom prevails among a certain tribe in the Caucasus. When a single young man dies some one calls upon a bereaved parent who has carried to the grave a marriageable daughter in the course of a year and says: "Your son is sure to want a wife. I'll give you my daughter, and you shall deliver to me the marriage portion in return." A friendly offer of this description is never rejected, and the two parties soon come to terms as to the amount of the dowry, which varies according to the advantages possessed by the girl in her lifetime. Cases have been known where the young man's father has given as much as thirty cows to secure a dead wife for his dead son.

Lightning Rods.

There were no lightning rods in ancient times. The first one that the world ever saw was set up by our own Illustrious countryman Benjamin Franklin shortly after the year 1752. He had just had his celebrated experiment with the kite, in which he demonstrated the identity of lightning with electricity, and was therefore prepared for the construction of the rods for which the world had waited so long. It is not generally known that Franklin was as distinguished in science as he was in statesmanship and diplomacy.-Exchange.

He Was Scared.

There used to be a sheriff in a Green Mountain county of Vermont who for forty years had driven his prisonersmurderers, moonshiners and thievesthrough the woods in his buggy to the county jail and yet who had never carried a revolver nor used a pair of handcuffs in his life. He had a strong hand, a brave heart and a stutter. "Weren't you ever afraid ?" some one asked him one day.

"W-well, I 'low once I w-wuz t-t-tol 'rable well skeert," he admitted slowly. ### Anticipation.

The new maid seemed eminently satisfactory, but the mistress of the house thought a few words of advice would be just as well.

"And remember," she concluded. "that I expect you to be very reticent about what you hear when you are waiting at table."

"Certainly, madam, certainly," re olled the treasure. But then her face lit up with an innocent curiosity. "May I ask, madam, if there will be much to be reticent about?"

Thought He Needed Them.

Miss Amelia Austin listened with breathless attention to Mrs. Amasa Hunting's radiant account of the doings of James Hunting, her husband's younger brother, who had left Wobrook-in-the-Hills in his youth and had become a milionaire.

"Where is Jim this summer?" Miss Amelia inquired at the end of the re cital.

"He has gone abroad for baths," replied Mrs. Hunting. "I ain't one mite surprised to hear that," Miss Amelia said. "His mother never could make him wash his neck."

A Generous Jury.

A certain sergeant charged with killing a man was tried for murder. After the evidence was in and the speeches made the jury retired to deliberate. Presently word came that the jury had agreed and had framed a verdict. The judge ordered the jury into the courtroom and asked for the verdict. "We find." read the foreman, "that the defendant is guilty of murder and assess his punishment at ninety-nine years and life imprisonment."

"Go back and write another ver dict," ordered the judge. Presently the jury returned with the verdict of life imprisonment. The sergeant shook hands with al the jurors.

"He seems pleased," said a bystander to the bailiff. "Why is he shaking hands with the men who convicted him?

"Why," was the reply, "Le is thanking them for taking ninety-nine years off his sentence."-Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

An Irish Duel. The annals of the Emerald Isle bristle with incidents of dueling in which Irish humor, if not at all times Irish bravery, is conspicuous. On one occasion Sir Jonah Barrington fought a duel with a barrister named McNally. The latter had one leg shorter than the other and because it was his habit when in a hurry to take two thumping steps with the short leg to bring up the space made by the long one he was nicknamed "One Pound Two." McNally could get no one of his bar to fight him, so he challenged Bartington, who good naturedly exchanged shots in Phoenix park.

The baroaet hit his opponent in the braces, then called the "gallows," and feared he had killed him. When the result was made known one of the seconds shouted, "Mac, you are the what a glory a foreign label can cast upon a commonplace article. The fact of a commodity having crossed the water, however, is not taken quite so seriously today as it was some fifty or sixty years ago. M. C. D. Silsbee gives an instance in her "A Half Centwo milliners. She had a large collection of finery, shelves full of handsome ribbons and glass showcases of rich embroideries, besides the inevitable bonnets. Once she imported a quantity of exquisite French caps. The strings were somewhat crushed in the cording to the author of "The Land of transit across the ocean. The caps were quickly disposed of. An aunt bought one, and Miss Rust innocently observed that a "warm iron would make the creases all right."

Charles W. Dennis.

On Saturday, April 15, 1911, there ntered into rest one of King Ferry's most respected and warmest loved citizens, Mr. Charles W. Dennis. He was born in Norwich, Conn., August 24, 1839. In 1868 he was married, at New Haven, Conn., by Rev. Dr Cleveland to Miss Cornelia Dudley, sister of Hon. Frederick Dudley, M. D, who is so well known in this community.

Mr. Dennis was engaged in busi ness during the war of 61-65 at Hilton, N. C. Later he moved to Toron to, Ontario, remaining there actively engaged in business, until 1894, when he returned to the United States and until three years ago was engaged in traveling, placing upon the market a telephone attachment of his own creation Since 1908 he has retired from active business living quietly at his own home. During the last two years, he has been a great sufferer from an incurable disease, and yet withal was ever cheerful, taking the greatest interest in matters of the day. He was a poet of no mean order, his poems often appearing in public print. He was loyal always to country, standing staunch and true for her welfare. He was true to his God, with most simple, yet the strongest faith. While with Mrs. Dennis, he retained membership with the Second Baptist church of Rochester, N Y., he was always a warm supporter and regular attendant of the Presbyterian church of his home village, from which he will be sadly missed.

The children of the community loved him, as he always had a cheery word and sunny smile for them, and anon giving them presents, which were always of a kind to enhance their moral welfare. The little ones exhibited their love for their departed friend as each tenderly cast upon the lowered casket a tiny bunch of flow. ers. Everybody loved him and will miss him sorely, and in their sense of personal loss, sincerely tender to Mrs. Dennis in her bereavement, their heartfelt sympathy.

The Easter service last Sunday morning was largely attended Al though cold and wintry outside, the interior of the church presented a pretty spring-like appearance. There were two large bouquets of carpations, and a quantity of pink hyacinths graced the platform and table. A beautiful Easter lily plant in full bloom, also occupied a prominent place, and white tulips and other plants completed the decorations. The music was appropriate to the day and the sermon by the pastor was excellent.

The young people furnished the decorations for the church and they distributed the cut flowers among the sick in town on Monday.

An appropriate Easter program was the order of the evening service, with ongs and responsive readings.

"The Man of the Hour." Some idea of the character of the olay "The Man of the Hour" may be gained from the brief description given below. We also append some recommends regarding Mr. Roberts' rendition of the play.

The greatest of the present day moral plays is"The Man of the Hour." It is a political drama in four acts, s tale of here and now. Its effect up on the ethics of municipal and na tional life is permanent for good. By it graft and the machinery of its creation have been exposed. The est. workings of political life so accurately portrayed, have disgusted the thinking public who, in multitudes, have welcomed the drams by attending it over and over again, so that its record in patronage is unprecedented in stagedom. Through it all runs a dramatic love story which morally shows that the noblest man in the end wins the truest love.

Mr. Roberts is a thorough student and from an actor's standpoint I consider his rendition of "The Man of the Hour" the most wonderful piece of stagecraft I have ever witnessed Summed up, he is master of the situation.-Clifton Mallory. Mr. Irving T. Roberts' portrayal of 'The Man of the Hour" is a strong, vigorous performance of the great olay, and I am sure will impress his audience in a way as much as a stage performance could. It's a play that

A CURE "FOR" ALL.

Not a Patent Curcall, Nor a Modern', Tiracle, but Simply a Rational Cure for Cosntipation. It is hard to tell just why SEAVER'S LAXATIVE TONIC TABLETS have become so popular with most people, but considering the short time they have been advertised, the demand for them has been cause for wonder. They are no different in appearance from other laxative tablets, but they really must possess unusual merits, for from our own personal observation we know that they always do just what is expected of them. Their action upon the skin and complexion is remarkable, for the principal ingredient in them is extract of dandelion and your own doctor will tell you that dandelion is one of the greatest skin alteratives

Thought It Was Serious.

The burning of the famous Greyfriars church in Edinburgh occurred one Sunday morning, and the young people of a house which backed upon the churchyard were among the first, as they were preparing to start for church, to observe the flames. It was the housemaid's Sunday out, and old Kitty, the cook, was that day responsible for her duties. Hearing unwonted commotion and excited outcries upstairs, she came panting and hobbling up from her basement kitchen, crying anxiously at each stair:

"Oh, what is't? What is't?"

"Oh, Kitty, look here!" cried one of the girls from a window. "Greyfriars church is burning up." Kitty dropped limply on a settee.

"ls that a', miss?" she grumbled betweel gasps. "What a fright ye geed me! I thicht ye said the parlor fire was out."-Youth's Companion.

Matilda Lanterman.

The death of Miss Matilda Lanterman was a great shock to her many friends and relatives, as she had been in fairly good health up to within a few days of her death, which occurred at the home of her sister, Mrs Jane Cutter of East Lansing, N. Y., April 13, 1911. She died on the farm where she was born May 10, 1827 She was one of the family of nine children of George S. and Sallie Hannah Lanterman. Only one brother and one sister survive her-Jane Cutter of East Lansing and Alfred Lau terman of King Ferry, N Y. After the death of her mother in 1878, she purchased a home in Ithaca where she has lived the past 32 years. She was a member of the State St. M. E church and one of its most active members in Christian work and dif ferent societies connected with the church. She took great interest in the W. C. T. U., and had many earnest and loving friends.

Funeral services were held at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jane Cutter, Saturday at 2 p m., Rev. F. Allington, pastor of the M. E. church of North Lansing officiating The floral tributes were beautiful from the many friends and relatives, as were those from the W. O T. U. and State St. church and societies.
