PROLOGUE.

This story of a young man's honest attempt to "break" the "boss" and the power of the "machine" is an absorbingly intimate portrayal of the working of the "wheels within wheels" in a desperate political struggle of today. The senator, strongly intrenched behind his party "machine," presents an almost invulnerable front, and the conflict between father and son as this young lawyer, single handed, fights for what he honestly believes to be the truth and right holds one with a tremendous sympathetic interest.

"This is Mr. Evan Blount," he said to the railroad magnate, indicating the let that roll the water any more than young man who came up with the bell- it has to, will we?" "Mr. Blount, this is Mr. Hardboy. wick McVickar, first vice president of or apparent surrender the purely filial the Transcontinental Railway com- emotions could do no less than to repany."

There was no trace of the recent bat- "We mustn't let it," was the quick tle in Mr. McVickar's voice or manner | reply, but after that he added: "I feel when he turned and shook hands cordially with the son of the man who tions, though. I've been going about had defied him. "Your father and I were just holding a little conference over your future prospects, Mr. Blount," he said, going tractive to me. Can you spare me a half hour or so?" Evan Blount glanced at his watch. Patricia had told him that she and her father would dine in the cafe at 7 and that there would be room at their table for him and for his father, if the ex-senator would so far honor a poor college professor. There was an hour to spare, and if the vice president of the Transcontinental company were not the king he was at least a great man whose invitation was in some sense a command. It was at the precise moment when the butterfly doors of the lobby entrance were winging to their closing behind Mr. McVickar and his quarry that the house telephone called the registry clerk. A sad faced tourist who was waiting, pen in hand, for his room assignment heard only the answer to the question which came over the wires from one of the upper floors. "No, senator," the clerk was saying: "he has just this moment gone outwith Mr. McVickar! Could I overtake him? I'll try. But I don't know where they were going. I'll send a boy right away, though."

she asked without looking up from the tiny embroidery frame which seemed to be her constant companion at home or elsewhere.

"Not very much. McVickar has fixed things to suit himself. Evan's law office position is to be pretty largely nominal. I guess, and Gantry's crowd is to see to it that he doesn't get to know too much, which means that the bribery is not to be done by the legal department in this campaign."

"But they can't keep him from finding out about it," she protested.

"They are going to try mighty hard anyway. Evan wants to believe that everything is on the high moral plane. and when a man wants to believe a thing it's pretty easy to fool him. It'll be a winning card to them if they can send the boy out to talk convincingly about the cleanliness of the company's campaign. That sort of talk, handed out as Evan can do it, if he is convinced of the truth of what he is saying, will capture the honest ranchman every time."

"We must get him back," she said. Have you thought of any plan?" "No."

She smiled. "I have a plan. He may have to take a regular course of treatment, and it may make him very ill. Would you mind that?"

David Blount leaned back in his chair and regarded her through half closed eyelids.

"I don't want to see the boy suffer any more than he has to," he objected. "Neither do I," was the quick agreement; then, with no apparent relein the evening of the day Mr. Mcvance, "What do you think of Miss Vickar's private car was attached to Anners?"

away to Wartrace Hall and the habitat of the megalosauridae, the newly appointed "social secretary" for the rall road, as Honoria had dubbed him, refused no invitations, never inquiring whether they were extended to his father's son, to the railroad company's legal chief or to Evan Blount in his proper person.

During this social interval he saw little of his father, though he still occupied his share of the private dining room suit at the Inter-Mountain. Part of the time, as he knew, the senator was at Wartrace Hall, looking after his huge landed estate and helping to entertain the visitors from Massachusetts. But now and again the father came and went, and occasionally there was a dinner for two in the hotel cafe, with a little good natured raillery from the senator's side of the table.

"Got you chasing your feet right lively in the social merry-go-round these days, haven't they, son? Like it as far as you've gone?" asked the excattle king one evening.

"It's all in the day's work," laughed the younger man. "I'll need all the 'pull' I can get a little later on, won't 1?"

"I shouldn't wonder if you did, son; I shouldn't wonder if you did. And reckon you're doing pretty good work. Was it McVickar's idea or your own-this sudden splash into the social water hole?"

"I don't mind telling you that it is a part of the new policy," returned the social splasher, still smiling. "We are out to make friends this time, friends who will know just what we are doing and why we are doing it."

"H'm!" mused the senator. "So publicity's the word, is it?"

"Yes, publicity is the word. The Gordon people say they are going to show us up. There won't be anything to show up when the time comes. We are going to beat them to the billboards."

"You can't do the circus act-ride two horses at once and do the same stunt on both, son," the senator remarked gravely. "If you're really going to put the saddle and bridle on the publicity nag you've got to turn the other one out of the corral."

"It is already turned out," averred the young man, not affecting to misunderstand. "We buy no votes in this campaign."

The stout assertion was good as far as it went. The new division counsel made it and believed it. But a little later he could not help wondering if he had been altogether candid in making it.

The offices in the uptown skyscraper vere not exclusively a railroad social center where the disinterested voter could come and have the facts ladled out to him without fear or favor on the part of the ladler. They had come to be also a rallying point for a heterogeneous crowd of ward workers, wirepullers and small politicians, most of whom were anxious to be employed or matic "Razor Sharpener, The Edison Phonographs and Records. retained as henchmen. #### CHAPTER VIII. THE QUEEN'S GAMBIT.

THEN the news went out to the dwellers in the sagebrush hills that Boss David's son had accepted a place on the railroad's legal staff the first wave of astoundment was follow ed by many guesses as to what young Blount's action portended. The Plainsman, the principal daily and the leading organ of the reformers, was the first to find an ulterior motive in Evan Blount's appointment and its acceptance. The editor took a half column in which to point out in emphatic and vigorous phrase the danger that threatened the commonwealth in this very evident coalition of the railroad and the machine.

The Lost River Miner, on the other hand, was unwilling to believe that the younger Blount was acting altogether | that's the end of it. We won't quarrel in his father's interest in taking the about it." place provided for him by the railway. Hints there were in this editor's comment of a disagreement between father and son, of differences of opinion which might later on lead to a pitched battle.

The Daily Capital, however-the rail road organ-covertly insinuated that nothing for nothing was the accepted rule in politics; that if the railroad had made a place for the son it was only a justifiable deduction that the father was not as inimical to the rallroad interest as the opposition press was willing to have the public believe. Elsewhere in the state press comment was divided as the molders of spond heartily.

Blount was vaguely perturbed. He could not help feeling that his father was keeping something back. "You think there will be more or less political work in my job with the railroad?" he asked, determined to get at the submerged facts, if there were

"Oh, I don't know. McVickar has hired you to do a lawyer's work, and I guess that is what he will expect you to do, isn't it?"

Mr. McVickar had not defined the duties of the new assistant counselship very clearly. But there was a strong inference running through all that was said to the effect that the headship of the legal department would carry with it some political responsibilities.

At the moment Blount had been rather glad that such was the case. The vice president had convinced him very thoroughly of the justice of the railroad company's contention-that the laws of the state, if rigidly administered, amounted to a practical confiscation of the company's property.

While Mr. McVickar was talking Blount had rather hoped that his new position would give him opportunities to place the railroad's point of view fairly before the people of the state. and to do this he knew that he would have to enter the campaign as a political worker. Surely his father must know this, and he went boldly upon the assumption that his father did know it.

"I am to be chief of the legal department on this division, and as such it will, of course, be necessary for me to defend my client in court and out of court," he said finally. "And I mean to do it."

"Of course you do; you've got to be honest with yourself-and with Mc-Vickar. I don't mind telling you, son. that I am squarely on the other side this time, and I had hoped you were going to be. But if you're not, why,

Now, this was not at all the paternal attitude which the young man had prefigured. But before anything more could be said Mrs. Blount came in to remind them both that they had a dinner appointment with Professor Anners and his daughter and that there was barely time to dress for it.

It was late that night, several hours after the informal little dinner for five in the Inter-Mountain cafe, when the senator had himself lifted from the lobby to the fourth floor and made his way to the door of his own apartments. As was her custom, his wife was waiting up for him.

"Did you find out anyth!

"Will you give me carte blanche to do as I please?" asked the small intriguer.

"Why not?" said the senator again. You can always outfigure me two to one when it comes to real politics. You have made a fine art of it, Hono-

"I don't know-any time when you will invite them to make Wartrace Hall their headquarters. I guess." "Then I think it will be tomorrow."

said the confident mistress of policies "It won't do to let Evan see too much of the young woman until after his course of treatment has been begun. Shall we make it tomorrow? And will you telephone Dawkins to bring down the big car? I think Miss Patricia Anners will stand a little impressing. She is very democratic-in theory."

CHAPTER IX.

THE RANK AND FILE. ONSIDERABLY to his surprise and no less to his satisfaction, the newly appointed "division counsel," as his title ran, was not required to take over the old legal department offices in the second story of the station building, where all the other offices of the company were located. Instead he was directed to fit up a suit of rooms in Temple court. the capital's most pretentious uptown skyscraper, and there was something more than a hint that the item of first cost need not be too closely considered. It was the vice president himself. writing from Chicago, who authorized the new departure and loosened the purse strings. He wrote:

A successful legal representative will be a good mixer, as I am sure you are, and will extend the circle of his acquaintance as rapidly and as widely as possible. Your appointment will be fully justified when you shall have made your uptown office a place where the good citizens of the capital and the state can drop in for a cordial word with the company's spokesman and for a better mutual understanding of the facts.

Acting upon this suggestion, Blount opened the Temple court headquarters and threw himself energetically into the indicated field. Ackerton, a technical expert with a needle-like mind and the state code at his fingers' ends. was left in charge of the working offices in the railroad building, with instructions to apply to his chief only when he needed specific advice.

At the uptown headquarters Blount gave himself wholly to the pleasant task of making friends. With a good store of introductions upon which to make a beginning and with the open handed, whole souled camaraderie of the west to help along, the list of acquaintances grew with amazing rapid-

The "Tea Leafer." A good deal of the tea consumed by the working classes in the days when Arthur Young complained of the addiction to this luxury had never seen either India or China. In one of John Ashton's works on England he cites a case in which a boy charged with gambling stated that the money found in his possession had been made by picking tea leaves. This led to the discovery that many persons made a living by picking sloe leaves and whitethorn leaves in the fields near Camberwell and selling them to a local cowkeeper for a penny a pound. One man said he picked from fifty to sixty pounds a day and always found a market for them. The leaves were subse quently sold to a wholesale merchant, who obtained as much as 8 shillings a pound for them under the guise of tea. The merchant was prosecuted and fined, not for adulteration, but for defrauding the revenue. And the "tea leafer" is still the slang name for the petty thief.-London Standard.

Called Strenger and More Convenient Than Rectangular House.

Do dairymen know that a round barn is much stronger and far more convenient than a rectangular barn and that the latter requires 22 per cent more wall and foundation and 34 to 58 per cent more in cost of material to inclose the same space? Professor Wilber J. Fraser of the University of Illinois built a sixty foot round dairy barn on his twenty acre demonstration dairy farm at the university at Urbana two years ago and has found it entirely satisfactory. He took unusual pains to find out the most suitable, convenient and economical construction for a dairy barn and silo (the silo is essential to the business), and he has been helped by the exact figures and experience of a carpenter who makes a specialty of building round barns.

BOW & ROUND BARN LOOKS.

[The round barn has many friends. The accompanying illustration, reproduced from the Orange Judd Farmer, shows barn of this kind owned by Vaulot Chris, who has a farm not far from Freeport Ill. The lower part is used for stabling animals and the upper part for housing grain, hay and farm machinery. The bridge on the left is a drive, and the hay and other stuff are hauled to the barn over this.]

The silo is at the center. Feeding commences at the chute and is continued around the circle, ending with the silage cart at the chute again. There is a like saving of steps in feeding hay and grain. The roof is entirely self supporting, and there are no posts or girders to obstruct the haymow. The hay carrier runs on a central track midway between the silo and the outside wall. Each row of boards around the barn forms a hoop that holds the building together. The circular wall

PROTECT YOUR FIREWOOD.

Paying Proposition to Give Attention to Saving of Heat Units. The condition of the farm wood supply is ofttimes not given due consideration. There is a right way in the matter and a wrong way. It is poor economy to burn green or poorly seasoned wood when a good article may just as well be had, says a correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer.

Firewood to contain the maximum heating qualities must be cut while the timber is green and the wood cells dormant, and cured under shelter. However, where one is utilizing the waste timber of the wood lot it is not always possible to cut the timber while in the best condition. There are the windfalls to work up and the young growth to thin, and it is not always convenient or possible to do this work at the proper time. This class of timber should be utilized, however, and will make a very satisfactory article if properly cured and preserved. Firewood exposed to the weather while curing loses much of its heating properties. Not only so, but such timber contains a certain per cent of moisture, and this must be driven off before the wood cells will burn. This process uses up a certain portion of the heat units generated by the burning wood. Scientific investigation has determined just what per cent of the heating properties of firewood may be used or dissipated in this way, but for practical purposes it should be sufficiently convincing that it pays to properly cure and preserve wood just to notice the difference in the manner in which the two kinds burn when placed in the stove. I have had experience in the matter and am fully satisfied that properly curing and preserving the farm firewood supply is a paying proposition. We have no regular building for curing wood, merely protecting it with a board roof, yet this wood is far ahead of that which has had the full benefit of the copious rains and snowstorms.

Keep an account of every hour's time needed to prepare the ground, plant the seed, tend the crop and harvest the grain. To this add a reasonable amount for wear and tear of the machinery and the legal rate of interest upon the money invested in the land.

When the crop is harvested figure the number of bushels at the prevailing market. If the expense account exceeds the other, then set about to increase the productiveness of the land so that it will produce more the

NEWARK PUTS BAN ON POPLARS FOR STREETS.

Roots of These Trees Obstruct City's Sewers.

At a recent meeting of the board of street and water commissioners of the city of Newark, N. J., a motion was passed requesting > the shade tree commission to discontinue their own planting of poplar trees on the city streets and to prohibit the planting of them by private individuals. This action was taken on account of the large and increasing number of obstructions to the city sewers and particularly to the house connections by the TOPPAGE BY POPLAT ROOTS roots of these trees penetrating the joints of the pipes. Out of fifty-six obstructions of all kinds in house connections reported in 1909 fifteen were caused by poplar roots. Up to the 1st of December, 1910, twenty-three out of a total of sixty-four obstructions since Jan. 1 had been from the same cause, and in November, 1910, the roots were responsible for five out of twelve obstructions. The illustration shows two lengths of a six inch house connection split lengthwise to show complete stoppage by popular roots.

After all that has been said about the advantage of a retailers' house organ or catalogue it is surprising that more merchants do not adopt this method of advertising. Of the numerous retail establishments doing advertising of this kind the great majority are enthusiastic about it, many of them saying that it has been the means of doubling their business. ***** and arched roof ward off the wind and present the greatest resistance to a storm.

Much less material is required for the silo in the center of the round barn, but the silo must go outside the rectangular barn. The sixty foot round barn requires $780 for material, while the 36 by 781/2 foot plank frame barn of the same capacity requires. $1,023 and the mortise frame barn of the same size $1,233. The same figures for a ninety foot round barn compared with plank frame and mortise frame barns 36 by 176% feet are respectively

$1,628, $2,008 and $2,498. These figures compare the barns without silos. But a sixty foot round barn and silo require $1,046 worth of material, while the rectangular barn of the same capacity and a silo require $1,424, showing a saving of $379 for the round barn and silo, and if it is compared with a mortise frame rectangular barn the saving is $589. The corresponding figures for a ninety foot round barn and silo are $2,024, $2,718 and $3,208.

****

Let us hope that the time is not far distant when advertisements will not be found upon barns. The barn should advertise the farm, the live stock and the marketable products from the farm rather than the goods of others. Let the name of the farm be the only sign found upon your barn.

Is Job of This Potato Sorter.

The tedious labor involved in sorting many bushels of potatoes can be relieved with the device shown in the illustration and the amount of work done in half or a third of the time possible under the hand method. A frame is built to go over a large box or bin. This is covered with one inch mesh chicken wire and set so that it slants upon the box or bin. The potatoes are placed upon this screen, and the small ones pass through the meshes into the box or bin below.

The larger potatoes roll down toward the lowest end of screen. Two men standing on each side of the device can pick out all the damaged potatoes as they roll down over same, thus securing perfectly sorted potatoes with but a fraction of the time, labor and expense required to sort them by handling each one. If the device is placed on a bin that is several feet from the ground an inclined surface should be placed at the foot of the screen so the tubers will not be bruised by dropping directly to the floor or interest for 100 years and the proceeds then devoted to the needs of the town and the church. In his day the town and the church were one, but of course conditions are different now. However, the townspeople straightened this out amicably, and one of the things decided upon was that $3,000 of the fund should constitute a nucleus for building a new town house.

Through public spirited individuals the fine building shown here is the rethe loyality of a former citizen. The ground dimensions of the building are sixty by forty feet. The first floor is given over to a large hall, with a good sized stage. The upper floor has a social room twenty-four feet. The first floor is given over to a kitchen. A Society For Tree Planting. The organization of the American Association For the Planting and Preservation of City Trees has been announced. Its purpose is stated to be the establishment of "a movement for the planting and care of trees and shrubbery in city streets and in the yards and about the homes of the citizens by arousing locality interest and pride and inducing local action." The headquarters are in Brooklyn, and apparently the association's present operations are to be confined to Greater New York. The list of officers suggests, however, a later branching out, for the vice presidents include Professor Graves, chief forester of the United States forest service; Dr. Merrill, assistant director of the New York Botanical garden, and Miss Rogers, director of the Nature club.

A West Philadelphia woman who spent last summer in England tells the following story:

"We were taking a ride on one of those 'seeing London' automobiles," she said, "and there was a party of tourists aboard. They were Americans, of course, and they were taking the greatest interest in everything they saw from the top of the big motor bus.

"As the automobile rolled out of Hyde park and started in the direction of Piccadilly the guide pointed to a big old house surrounded by a high brick wall and shouted through his megaphone:

"That is,' he said, 'the town residence of the Duke of C., one of our largest landed proprietors.

"A pretty girl on the second seatane was about seventeen, and it was obviously her first trip abroad-looked up in sudden enthusiasm.

Jean Havez was once Dockstader's press agent and general manager. One evening as the two alighted from a train in a middle sized town in the west Dockstader reproached Havez with this:

"Jean. I'd like to know what you have ever done for me. Here I am paying you a princely salary, and you don't give me any returns for it."

"Why, Lew," objected Havez, great ly grieved, "how can you say that after all I've done for you?"

Some folks said Hendrick was the homeliest man in Kentucky; others said 1 was. In those days 1 wore a beard, as did Hendrick. "'I just shot a man down street." said Hendrick calmly.

"'What for?' I demanded. "'He said I looked like you.' answered Hendrick, 'and I could not stand for that.'

"You shall have the pardon at once." I announced. 'If you hadn't shot the cuss I would have done so on sight.""

JULIA MARLOWE AS LADY MACBETH.

There has been a revival this season of that powerful, weird and intense Shakespearean play "Macbeth." It is a question which character in this play, Macbeth or Lady Macbeth, requires the greater study. Lady Macbeth has been impersonated by as many eminent women as the other character has been by eminent men. and this season Julia Marlowe and Sothern are having great success with and Clara Morris. But possibly she surpassed the most recent Lady Macbeth seen in New York-Marie Booth Russell, wife of Robert Mantell, who played Macbeth.

Of course in speaking of Lady Macbeth one must always think of the incomparable Siddons. None ever approached her. It will be recalled by ecent playgoers that Mrs. Patrick Campbell was the Lady Macbeth to Forbes-Robertson's Macbeth a few years ago. The last great Lady Macbeth was Charlotte Cushman. The tragedy was given on the occasion of her farewell appearance in this country. There may be some living who saw Charlotte Cushman in the part in New Orleans. She was a mere girl when she played it then.

Physical Limitations.

There was a very stupid play presented early in the New York season, an "adaptation," it was called by the author. Even the best natured critics went away in disgust. One newspaper representative turned to another and said, "If that jumble had been presected on the other side of the water it would have been hissed. As there were a lot of foreign visitors present I wonder that it wasn't."

"It really is a wonder," was the other's response. "I would like to have hissed myself, but-you can't yawn and hiss at the same time."-Metropolitan Magazine.

Asking Too Much.

Uncle Josh worked for Lawyer Dalrymple, and he had worked for Lawyer Dalrymple's father and grandfather. Very old, very kind hearted, very amiable, Uncle Josh had one incurable fault-kleptomania. He stole everything he could lay his hands on. Lawyer Dairympie's stock of patience ran out at last, and when Uncle Josh stole an automobile born his master decided to have him arrested.

Two or three weeks in jail, Lawyer Dairymple thought, was the only cure for the old man's failing.

But Uncle Josh, when he heard of the fate in store for him, pleaded hard. He pleaded his old age, his long years of patient service, his industry, his fidelity, and, since these pleadings had truth in them, Lawyer Dalzympie's beart was touched, and he relented.

"All right, Uncle Josh," he said, "we'll forgive and forget. But two things I insist on. First, you must bring back the automobile horn; second, you must sign a paper never to steal again as long as you live."

Uncle Josh besitated. Then he said reproachfully:

Why Send to Other Communities For Goods Produced Among Ourselves? The steamer Chalmette, from Baltimore, carrying a solid cargo of canned goods, is discharging its freight at Galveston. The state of Texas is one of the largest markets Baltimore has for this kind of goods, as it is the piece de resistance on the ranches. Light Attracts Customers. In the downtown section of a city the theater audiences come and go through two avenues leading to car lines. A haberdasher has a shop in a side street between these two channels of travel at a much more reasonable rent than he would have to pay on the avenues. Study of the conditions convinced him that theater goers took those avenues not because they were especially convenient nor as a matter of habit, but simply because they were light. When he put up an electric sign big enough to light his section of the dark side street he diverted enough travel past his windows every night to increase materially the

HHEYER

Instantly my mind reverted to the pathetic story of a humble artist. In the Galerie des Beaux Arts in Paris a famous statue stands. An at tendant will tell you of a poor, obscure artist who starved in a garret as he modeled this masterpiece from the rough clay into a dream of his heart. One night when the statue was all but completed there came a cold wave, and, fearing lest the water in the pores of the fresh clay should freeze and destroy his handiwork, the young man arose from his rough couch and tenderly draped about the head the only blanket his attic apartment possessed. In the morning neighbors found him chilled and dead.

The artist of Paris so loved this dream head that he died for it. How much, then, should we love the head of the real woman-the mother! And, knowing that motherhood brings lines and wrinkles and scars, why should we not turn from the merely beautiful faces of the boulevard to the absolutely beautiful faces of the home, the faces of our mothers? One can see a score of beautiful visages in a promenade down Fifth avenue in New York or State street in Chicago, but how rare are those faces on which the brushes of time, the brushes of resignation and of love, have been at work, lo, these many years! Beauty as the world sees it is merely the superficial outer covering. We must depart from the plump, lineless cheek to the wrinkled and marked one if we would find the true beauty of character, the beauty that has been burned in the kiln of love and has stood the test. Ah, the dear old faces, the faces that have been a part of us, the faces whose memories are now our holiest heritage! We close our eyes and see them again in our moments of greatest triumph, and when fate sends its chilling frost, when all the world is cold and cruel and unmindful, the benign countenances of other days come back to us like ministering angels, touching their phantom lips to ours, letting their gray locks brush soothingly against our dark ones.

There are no portraits like those we ourselves have traced upon the canvas of memory. In this we are all masters. Each man or woman is his or her own artist, fashioning the picture most loved with ideal hands from the rarest colors of affection. And none but ourselves can make each individual picture.

And so it is with the portraits of the dear old faces. Each must be his own painter, each his own interpreter. All else is but poor imitation and puerile groping after art. And the great est pictures we can feel are those of The sooner you start the Bank Account habit and let thrift and economy get a good solid grip the better for you and the larger your accumulations will grow.

A Native of Genoa.

The following from the New York Evening Post will be of especial interest to people of this vicinity as the subject of the sketch was born in this town:

"Warren Higley died yesterday at his home, No. 68 West Fortieth street. He was born at Genoa, N. Y., 78 years ago, and was graduated from Hamilton colk ge in 1862. For several years following his graduation Mr. Higley was engaged in educational work. He was school commissioner for the Second district of Cayuga county, principal of the Cayuga Lake academy at Aurora, N. Y., principal of the High school at Auburn, and principal of the West Side High school in Cleveland. Later he was appointed superintendent of public instruction at Dayton, Ohio.

Empire State Society, the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity, the Patria Club, the Ohio Society, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"Mr. Higley had much to do with arousing the early interest in trees and conservation 30 years or more ago in Ohio. In telling about it recently he spoke of a hack that he took in Cincinnati with his guest, Baron Steuben, who was then chief forester of Germany.

"That day,' he said, "we started on its way the popular movement for the preservation of the forests which is being fought for in Washington today. I believe that I can trace the pedigree of the present conservation movement directly back to that ride. Baron Steuben interested me in the subject. I intesested others in Cincinnati. They interested others in the State. We secured State aid, and had a date in May set apart as Arbor Day. We had set a ball rolling, and it gathered speed and size as it rolled. Delighted with our success in Ohio, we formed a national association, which is today the American Forestry Association. We began the propaganda in New York, where Bernard E. Fernow -a scientific forester-was trying to interest men of science. We induced him to give his aid to the popular movement. Fernow and myself visited Theodore Roosevelt, then a member of the New ready attracted attention as a young and the Arbor day celebration, which is now official in every State, I believe. Our aim was to set on foot a movement which should teach the rising generation tree values, and we succeeded. As the children of a generation ago became voters, they very largely aided the forest conservation movement by their ballots and intelligent interest. I think we old fellows of Cincinnati may rightfully be proud of the part we played in this tremendously important movement.""

To Freshen the House.

"When spring comes around each year and nature begins to put on her gay clothes we naturally feel that it is time to brighten and freshen the house. It It is not so much that things are shabby "He was admitted to the Ohio bar in and stuffy from the winter's use as that 1874 and remained in active practice we want our surroundings to express the until he was elected judge of the police general renewal, the clean and airy courts of Cincinnati in 1881. He came freshness of the spring." says WOMAN'S to this city three years later and began HOME COMPANION for April. "Our his law practice. Mr. Higley was a grandmothers made life a burden at this member of the Republican Club, the time with the nightmare called house-Sons of the American Revolution, the cleaning. Everything was torn up and for one frantic week, at least, there was n + comfort to be had. Now house-cleaning is managed with more ease, for there have been countless inventions to simplify it, and also the modern housekeeper uses the simple expedient of having one room at a time cleaned, so that the whole is accomplished without wear and tear, and the family is allowed to > feel that home is still home. "If some of the rooms need papering and painting, choose a color-scheme that is not too dark and will harmonize with the furniture so that the rooms may reach their highest possibility of attractiveness. The curtains, if new, may be either muslin or net or scrim or one of the many dainty fabrics that are offered in the shops. The fancy scrims, both in natural color and those printed in colored designs, are charming and range in price from twenty-five cents to about one dollar and a half a yard. Shades should . also be renewed if necessary. They can often be given a new lease of life by turning them upside down. This brings the less worn part at the bottom. Such work must be done accurately and neatly and if you can have help in handling the shades it will make it much easier for they are unhandy things.

"Simplify wherever you can. Change the pictures about a bit and put up some new simple prints in place of some York State Assembly, and who had al- of the old ones for a change. Banish useless bric-a-brac, for a well-chosen and well-placed ornaments are worth more, from an artistic point of view, than a motley array of small jugs and vases. Put away as much as possible, leaving out bowls and vases for flowers, and let them be the chief summer ornaments. It will also make the boresome work of dusting easier."

man who could talk on his feet, who never knew when he was whipped on a legislative proposition, and who was daily finding more ardent support for any proposition he might advance.

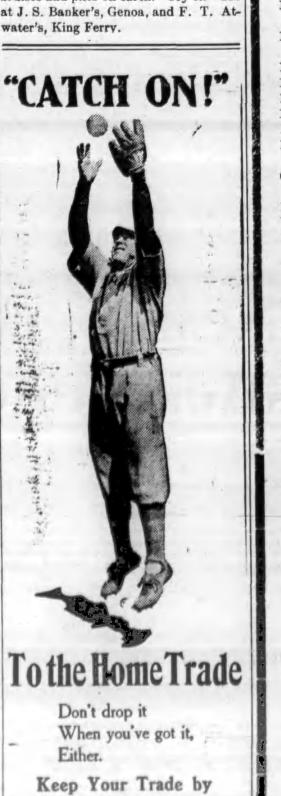

"We want you to help us save the forests of the Adirendacks,"said Fernow to him. And he did. He helped us initiate the first movement to save the forests of the State of New York. He never forgot. He never lost his interest. From the day that we introduced ourselves to him-for neither knew him at Special Notice in THE TRIBUNE. the time-he was a consistent and an inteligent friend of the conservation movement. He became Fernow's warm personal friend. Fernow then-or maybe a little later-conducted a forestry and on his return, Fernow introduced water's, King Ferry. him to Theodore Roosevelt. Thus, through this chain of circumstances, beginning on that hot day in Cincinnati. the same movement carried Pinchot into the office of chief forester, it has saved thousands upon thousands of forests and mountain miles, it has embarrassed an administration, and it has thoroughly informed a nation

"I do not want to claim credit that does not belong to me, but I believe that the first public meeting ever held in the United States, at which the salvation of the forests was discussed, was in my Cincinnati law office in 1882. Some years previous to this the acting Governor of Nebraska, who realized the value of a forest cloak to the wide plains, had by proclamation set apart an Arbor day in that State. Many trees were planted, as may be seen by the Nebraskan traveler today, but the popular interest had not been enlisted. Then, following the Centennial Exposition, the delegation to that exposition sent by Germany went on a tour of the country. As Cincinnati is largely German in population, they were invited to be the city's guests They accepted, and as a judge of the County Court I was ask to ride with Baron von Steuben, head of the delegation, and the chief forester of the German empire.' "A beautiful site," said Baron von Steuben to me, waving his hand, "Beautiful river and beautiful hills. But why are there no trees upon them ?"' Cincinnati's seven hills were then bare of verdure He made that weary ride an interesting one by his description of Germany's system of forest preservation. The day the German delegation left Cincinnati I set the wheels ta motion. The city authorities were is created in a meeting of prominent citizens held in the old Gibson House, and a tree-planting day was fixed on, in a sich the school children were to join. From that beginning the movement spread. Out of it directly grew the mescot national forestry association,
