Mr. and Mrs George W. Atwater entertained about ninety friends by itation last Wednesday evening in honor of their fortieth wedding anniversary. The bride wore her wedding dress of forty years ago, and with a white rose in her hair cer tainly looked like a young bride, and both bide and groom acted like a young couple. As the guests came down the stairs, the groom received them and introduced them to his bride and to Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Hutchings of Interlaken and Jesse Atwater of Auburn. Mrs. Hutchings and Jesse Atwater "stood up" with the bride and groom at the original wedding forty years ago. The evening was a pleasant one and greatly enjoyed by all with games, sociality, etc. The presents were numerous and very handsome. A beautiful kitchen cabinet and chair which were purchased by a large number of their friends were in some way detained and did not reach there until later. Jerome Barger made a few timely remarks, congratulating the bride and groom, and explained that the gifts had not yet arrived at the station, and that it was a great disappointment to the givers. A very elaborate supper was served in four courses. A feature greatly regretted was the absence of two sons of the host and hostess-Asa of Leavenworth, Kanese, and David of Council his wife and two sons of Auburn was in Syracuse. present. As the small hours of morning dawned, the guests departed, happy returns of the day.

Story by a Locomotive Engineer of Civil War Service

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There is one feature of the civil war that has never been written up.

I refer to the railroads. They were the main instruments of transportation and communication. Their possession was therefore usually the most important element in a campaign. And when taken the next problem that arose was how to hold them and the next how to operate them to a purpose. The people living in the south through which they passed were mostly sympathizers with the Confederacy and did all they could or dare do to wreck trains in Federal bands. They would take up a rail, saw the stringers or a bridge, so that the weight of a train would break it: they would interfere with switches. Indeed, there was no element of danger they could devise that they would not throw in the way of the Union opera tion of the road.

Before repeating a story that was told me by an ex-Federal railroad engineer I will mention a parrow escape to which I was a party. I was with a Union general who was riding on a locomotive through a hostile country. The engineer was a young southerner whom the general had impressed for the service, forcing him to run the engine. We were speeding along at night. Suddenly I saw the engineer reverse the wheels, theu, pale as a ghost, wait for something terrible to nappen. I felt a joit, and the engineer at once recovered his courage. He had seen a tie wedged in between the rails with a view to throwing our locomotive off the tracks and down ed. In a few minutes we thought no for nothing. Now for the story.

"One morning at daybreak." said the lot of rolling stock. My captain told that I might not see and be racked me that the general had called for those of the command who had been railway engineers, conductors and trainmen, and I, being an engineer. me to report for duty to Captain Benton, who had been appointed railway superintendent. I was given an engine and hauled troops to the eastern end of the road, which they occupied.

"It was about two weeks after this that the superintendent told me to report in person to the general. I did so.

and he said to me: "'Sergeant, I have just received a telegram from L., at the other end of the road, that the force there has been attacked by a superior force. The colonel commanding has promised not to surrender for at least two hours. You must take a train through to him loaded with troops and ammunition within that period.'

"'But, general,' I expostulated, 'there are three elements against me. I must go in the night, the roadbed will not admit of a safe rate of over thirty miles an hour, and the people along the route will do all they can to wreck the train.

"'You must go the whole ninety miles in two hours. The possession of L. is of vital importance. If you reach there before the surrender it will be saved. Better that you should wreck your train than be a minute late.

"That's what a man's life-not one man's life, but thousands-is worth in war. I walked away from the general feeling that I had been ordered to take nine chances in ten of killing and maining 800 men, including myself. But I'd been in it a year then and knew how little our lives were worth against the possibility of achieving train. success for the nation

"I found that the superintendent had been getting a train ready for me and it was loaded with the probable victims. I sprang on to the cab and with a couple of short toots from the whistle started the machine, the one in hest repair in our possession. I had been over the line nearly every day for a fortnight and knew where I must endeavor to make the best time. hadn't had any time to figure it out mathematically. I must take frightful risks on the straightaway parts and let up on the curves. And even on the curves I must drive far beyond a safe

"If I may be said to have got on well on any part of the journey it was the first half. For that period my arm was steady and my besin was cool. Nevertheless it was an hour calculated to break the stoutest nerve. Word must have got to some of the people along the line, for I had scarcely got over ten miles when I found an obstruction. Coming to a sherp curve around the base of a hill, I said to myself, 'If they're going to throw me off anywhere they'll do it right here.' Ho I cut my speed down to what would enable me to stop within less than a train's length, it was weit i did so. At the farther end of the curve I pulled up within ten feet of a tree felled

ever of hope I had felt before that this element of danger would not come up before me was crushed out of me. Beyoud the curve I came to the first long straight bit of the road on the line. 1 knew I must do over sixty miles an hour here in order to get through in the limit of time. For twelve miles 1 kept my eyes fixed on the track illuminated by the headlight, tearing along so fast that should an obstruction be on the track I could never slow up in time to avoid it. Every minute of strain on my nerves took just so much strength out of them. I believed that no one would place anything on a straight track to throw me off and took all the chance on this, besides the danger of leaving the rails. The locomotive swayed and groaned and bounced till it seemed that the next bump would surely throw it off. At even the slightest curve I held my breath, and every time I came to a switch which I could not plainly see I was sure the rattling and pumping peneath meant that we were on the ties and in another moment would be rolled up in a universal smash.

"I had an excellent headlight, the reflector of which I had polished myself. Under its glare the shadows before me looked black and heavy as if they had been stone. There were telegraph poles beside the track, and it seemed to me as I approached their shadows that I was about to encounter the trunk of a fallen tree. They faded in rapid succession, but the approach of every shadow was like the falling of a sledgehammer on my

"I had gone seventy miles and was on time when suddenly a big block of solid stone loomed up ahead. I reversed, whistled down the brakes and came to a full stop. But I neither knew when I stopped nor for a few moments after whether I had escaped the peril, for I was so benumbed with fright that my senses refused to act. As soon as I was conscious that the machine was at rest I took another look ahead. There was the block I had seen, but as far distant as it had been when I discovered it. I jumped down and ran ahead. I couldn't see the obstacle, for my own shadow concealed it. Nevertheless I did not reach it. I stepped aside, and there it wasan embankment. The effort had fall- ahead. I ran forward a bit and, not reaching it, returned and examined more about it. The deaths we missed my headlight. There on the glass and were constantly missing counted directly before the light was a tiny moth.

"Summoning all my resolution to disnarrator, "after a forced march we regard these phantom obstacles, I put struck one of the main railroad ar- on full speed, and when I came to a teries in the southwest and captured a straight bit of road i shut my eyes by them. Again the old iron swayed and groaned and wheezed and puffed and spit fire and smoke till I entered upon the last ten miles between me was to report at once at headquarters, and my destination. Then suddenly I did so. The general asked me a few there was a crash, and a bit of splinquestions about my experience and told | tered glass struck me in the face. I supposed that at last the catastrophe had come.

"But. no The cowcatcher had thrown up a chicken or some other object that had broken the lamp of the headlight. The lamp continued to burn, however, though unprotected, since I had reversed as soon as the crash came. However, I knew it would not keep lighted under speed, and I felt that after all I had been blocked. But just as I was about to give up hope I saw a light ahead, and presently a locomotive bore down on us, slowing up as it came. It had been sent out by the commander at L., who was hard pressed to learn if we were nearing him.

"We managed to get this other headlight in position on my locomotive, and again I pushed forward. From this point now and again we could occasionally bear the faint booming of guns and as we drew pearer the rattle of musketry. The moon was at the full. Evidently the Confederate commander was determined to crush his enemy before the arrival of re-enforcements, and the Federal officer was fighting against time.

"I did not know at what moment the latter might give way, and, although the road was as rough and as crooked as any part I had passed over, I drove the machine as rapidly and as recklessly as before. I approached our men from the rear, though they were being flanked, which we were made aware of by a sudden fire into our

"The commander of the troops I had hauled through pulled the bell cord and when I had come to a halt ordered his men out of the train. They drove back the Confederate flankers and joined the main body.

"The arrival of re-enforcements caused the Confederates to withdraw. and the place was saved.

"As soon as my work was over I tumbled over on the cab floor. My fireman picked me up. and I revived very shortly. I know what an important victory I had achieved and wanted to go right back and tell the general all about it. But instead of that went to bed.

"The next morning I was all right and took a train back, passing over Of Kidney and Liver Disordersthe route I had traversed the night before and smiling at the phantom obstructions that bad filled me with borror the night before. As soon as I arrived an aid-de-camp told me to report in person to the general, and 1 went to his tent.

He put out his hand to me, just as if I had as many stars on my shoulder. as he had himself.

"'You've not only saved this army from a retreat,' he said, 'but have saved the force at L. from capture, besides preventing the loss of all this from the system, the cause of most Ridney, Liver and Blood troubles. No territory we have been months in acoutring. I shall recommend Fou to better remedy. 35 years successful. Write Dr. David Hennedy Co., Rondout, N. Treatment For Torpid Liver In Horses and Cattle.

In case it is a horse with jaundice, a physic of aloes should be given, one ounce being the dose for a thousand pound horse, and two teaspoonfuls of podophylin, writes Dr. C. D. Smead in Orange Judd Farmer. Give this dissolved in water and pour down as a drench, and follow with a bitter tonic for from two to four weeks or until the voidings are normal and all scuri is removed from the tongue. As a tonic for this none is better than a mixture of powdered gentlan root, six ounces; powdered golden seal, two ounces; powdered sulphate of iron. four ounces, well mixed in one pound of common salt. Give in the feed a tablespoonful in ground oats three times a day until improvement takes place, then drop to twice a day and later once a day. In case of the bowels being very loose always give a pint dose of a mixture of easter oil

A Minnesota horse breeder of over forty years' experience says in the Breeder's Gazette: "I noted early in my experience with the Percheron that it contained certain characteristics that would make it the coming heavy general purpose horse or horse of all work in the central and western parts of America. It was a horse powerful enough to do all kinds of heavy farm labor, active enough to strike a good gait before the surrey and with endurance at rapid motion almost equaling the well bred trotter. The majestic movement, the high, lofty neck and head, knee action, clean bone, general good form, fine silky hair, splendid powers to assimilate food, besides being very brainy and being able to endure very hot weather, especially in the gray colors-all of these good qualities emi-nently fit the Percheron for the horse of all work where not bred too heavy. Of course the heavier ones are better adapted to draft."

In the case of sheep, which are by nature constipated animals, nothing equals a ten grain dose of calomel, followed the next day with a four or six ounce dose of epsom salts, and as sheep are rejuctant to eat any tonics in their feed we are compelled to pour their medicine down them. Mix together four ounces each of the tincture of gentian, golden seal, ginger and iron, and give a tablespoonful twice a day in a half pint of water. But always give the calomel, as it will clean out the liver of a sheep as no other known agent will,

Shorthorns Bred For Beef.
Puxley in his "Mcdern Dairy Farmmg." an English work, says this: "It must be said that the comparatively second class position of the Shorthorn as a dairy beast is due to shows. Only those animals are chosen for exhibition which are pre-eminent for beef or fat making qualities, and therefore that man only will get a great name upon whose herd these qualities are stamped. Therefore if a bull is bought from such a herd it will probably be found that it lowers the milking average and increases the mest making qualities."

Silage For Steers.

A feeder of large experience reports that the best ration for fattening steers that he has ever tried is composed of from fifteen to twenty pounds of slinge, two pounds of cottonseed meal and what corn and sifalfa hay they will eat. He thinks red clover may be substiruted for the sifnife w equal results.

Good Hearted Cabbage.

A well known expert in cooking encountered trouble in a suburban community the other afternoon when she prepared to lecture at the Mothers' club. Her subject was "How to Cook." She began by telling how much a man appreciates good cooking and then she proposed to give various recipes.

Among the first was one for coldslaw. "To have this best." began the lecturer, "take a good hearted cabbage and"-

At this point a young matron interrupted. She was eager to get all the information possible. "Tell me, please," she spoke up, "how is one to know the disposition of a cabbage?"—Philadelphia Times.

CHRISTMAS WOOING OF CUPID.

Mystic Love Spells With Apples In Foreign Lands.

Apples enter into many Christmas spelis. In Austria on Christmas eve the apple must be cut in halves in the dark and without being touched by the hand. The left hand half is then placed. in the bosom of the diviner and the right hand half behind the door of the bedchamber. Then at midnight, should the spell have been fully carried out. the spirit or "astral" of the beloved one appears, standing beside the half which was laid behind the door.

Another charm is to cut an apple in two and count the seeds in each half. If the numbers are even marriage will be soon. If a seed is cut in two there will be trouble in the course of love. and should two seeds be cut there will be early widowhood.

A Sicilian maiden throws the fruit from her window into the street and watches. Should it lie long without being picked up she will be widowed soon after marriage. Should it be picked up by a woman marriage will not be within the coming year, but should it be picked up by a man then she will be wedded before the next year is

* MEMORABLE YULETIDES.

Odd Coincidence of Queen Victoria's Sorrows at Christmas Time.

One of the most extraordinary Christmas days London ever had was that of 1891. The shops had been, as usual, specially prepared and decorated with the object of attracting the buyers when suddenly, on Dec. 22, a thick fog came on. Not until the evening of Dec. 26 did it lift. This particular fog held the record for being the heaviest London had known. Thirty lives were lost and over 200 accidents recorded.

Christmas, 1860, was the coldest England and Scotland had ever expe rienced. Just three years later Christmas day was marred by news that William Makepeace Thackeray, the great novelist, was dead.

The late Queen Victoria's most mem orable Christmases were the most pathetic. It was in less than a fortnight from Dec. 25, 1861, that her husband, the prince consort, passed away So affected was her majesty that she allowed fifteen years to pass before she celebrated Christmas day in the traditional fashion. Then on Christ mas day in 1872 the Prince of Wales. who became King Edward VII., was so ill that his life was despaired of. But he made a remarkable recovery.

USE MOST CHRISTMAS CANDY.

Several Million Dollars' Worth Sold to New Yorkers.

Three million dollars' worth of Christmas candies is New York city's annual holiday bill.

The amount of money spent by New Yorkers during the holidays for candy alone is so great that it seems out of proportion to the amount donated for charity until it is remembered that perhaps one-third or more of all the candy bought during the last half of December is given away by secular and religious societies, by Sunday schools and churches, and that consequently a large part of the sum belongs in the charity account.

Three or four New York manufacturers get the bulk of this class of orders, and they agree that, even taking the population of the city into account, New York's consumption of candy excels that of any other city.

Famous People

Christmas is an old fashioned English family name, especially in Surrey and Cambridgeshire, and many people bearing it have achieved fame in one direction or another.

For instance, there was Gerard Christmas, the famous carver of statuary, who flourished in the early part of the seventeenth century. He designed Aldersgate and carved with his own hands the richly ornamented portal of Northumberland House, a familiar object to the older generation of living Londoners.

His chief energies, however, were directed toward ornamenting and beautifying the ships of the royal navy, and the highly decorative style he originated was continued right down to the middle of the last century, when iron superseded oak in the construction of battleships.

At his death his two sons, John Christmas and Mathias Christmas, whom he had brought up to his art, succeeded him as official carvers to the lords of the admiralty and worthily carried on the work he had so well

Every one interested in coins and coinage is familiar with the name of Henry Christmas, the eminent numismatist, who died in 1868. Besides being a fellow of the Royal society and of the Society of Antiquaries, he was for many years honorary secrewhose publications he contributed largely. He also wrote and published a large number of religious and historical works.

John William Christmas ("Jean of the Iron Hand") was one of the most famous of the many English adverturers who during the French revolutionary disturbances of 1791 fought on the losing side.

Joining the Chouans or royalist insurgents of Brittany, he soon made his mark and was intrusted with the conduct of a division by George Cadoudal, their supreme commander.

Later on, when Cadoudal, disgusted which no aristocrat was permitted to hold command, Christmas was forced to resign with the rest. He was, however, reinstated on his pointing out that he was not, as had all along been the contrary, the son of a south of England peasant.

Thence onward he acted as Cadoudal's adjutant general and did splendid service against the royalist forces until January, 1793, when he had the misfortune to be taken prisoner. He was shot at daybreak on the morning following his capture.

Noel is, of course, only another form of the word Christmas, and of famous Noels, both living and dead, there is a lengthly list. It is, for instance, the family name of the earls of Gainsborough, whose history has been a distinguished one for generations past.

Noel-Hill, again, is the name of Baron Berwick, a famous member of a fa mous old English family. Then there is Ernest Noel, who has done more to improve the housing of the working classes than has probably any other man living. Vice Admiral Sir Gerard Noel, who has been commander in chief on the China station since 1903, has received many decorations, including the much coveted gold medal of the Royal Unit ed Service Institution. Going farther back, there was that Henry Noel, the famous courtier of the reign of Queen Elizabeth and author of the now familiar phrase "Money was made to spend." His extravagance knew no bounds and very much displeased his royal mistress, herself one of the most extravagant of mon-

Of a very different type was Baptist Wriothesley Noel, the eminent nonconformist divine. He was at first educated for and inducted into the Church of England. But the result of the Gorham case, which drove many high churchmen into the fold of Rome. ment Noel into the ranks of the Baptists.

He publicly renounced on Dec. 3. 1848, his connection with the Established church and was a little later publicly rebaptized by immersion in John Street chapel, Holborn, a building situated hard by the very church wherein he had ministered during long years prior to his "conversion."

Thomas Noel, the poet, who died in 1861, ought to be well known by his "Paper's Drive," than which no poem has been more widely read, recited and quoted. The verses are, however, almost universally ascribed to Hood, even by people who ought to know better, and the real author's name remains in consequence buried in ob-

Another poet named Noel, who enjoyed considerable reputation in his day, was Roden Berkeley Noel, the author of "Behind the Veil," "Beatrice," "The Red Flag" and other poems. His collected works were published in 1892 among the series of "Canterbury Poets." Roden Noel, who was well known in society and a groom of the privy chamber to Queen Victoria, died very suddenly at Mains on May 20, 1894. the ministry of healing.

REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

Text, "When she heard of Jesus she Named Christmas came and touched his garment."-Matt.

> The world is given as a prize to those of faith. "Nothing venture nothing have." But fine weather's no test. Twilight, dark and storm tell it. "According to your faith," the size of your pitcher determines how much you may carry away. Rub your Aladdin's lamp. Murmur "Sesame." Exercise your faith. Living next door the mint won't make one rich. "Ask and ye shall receive." Out from Matthew's house down to the seashore go the Master and his disciples. The crowds press, the sun is hot, but a cooling breeze blows in from Tiberias. There's a motion of the crowd, a craning of necks. Who comes? The ruler of the synagogue. Tall, broad shouldered, black beard, eyes wet with tears-it is Jairus. Trouble brings him to Jesus. It is a great lodestone for most of us. "My little daughter is dying. Come lay thine hand on her head and she shall live." His prayer is short, intense, to > the point. Crisp thinking makes crisp

"Drowning Men Clutch at Straws." In that crowd, with its flotsam and jetsam, is a pale, bloodless, sick woman. Once comfortable in means the physicians of Damascus and Jerusalem now have her all. Says a neighbor at her home: "Rachael, God be praised! The Man of Nazareth is in Capernaum. He may have power to heal thee." "What will he charge? tary of the Numismatic society, to I've lost all." "Nothing: without money and without price." Her children protest. "Mother, multiply not thy disappointments; this healer may be like the rest." "Restrain me not. I'll try once more." Faith springs eternal in the sick man's breast. That accounts much for many physicians and patent medicines. This woman goes in faith. She elbows through the crowd. "How forward is that woman! Think you not others desire to see the great Teacher?" She pays no attention. When was a woman ever turned from her promise by the jeers of a crowd? Now she's close. There's that great functionary of the synagogue. His with the dissensions of his highborn family sent for Christ. It must be nice generals, organized a new army in to be rich like they. She had money once. Her thoughts are swift; what must be done must be done quickly. She won't speak to the Nazarene, of course; only touch that blue hem of his garment. He will never know it. supposed, of noble lineage, but was, on Out goes the thin trembling arm from under her cloak and into the poor racked body, along the quivering prayer of that outstretched finger, went strength and healing. The most remarkable miracle recorded.

The Power of Helplessness. If you want anything done that requires quiet, persistent faith start a woman at it. The courage and persistence of women in the temperance war is marvelous. Rachael has got by faith what money couldn't buy. The Master turns. "Who touched me?" The disciples smile indulgently. "Scores, Master. How could they help it in such a jostling crowd?" Exquisitely sensitive Christ! The allied armies of hell cannot divert him, but a sick, nerveless finger of human suffering turns him. 'Daughter!" She'll never forget that sound. It's the finest instance of delicacy and tact in the world's literature. How it soothed her distressed modesty when she suddenly became conscious of the crowd's eyes upon her! "Daughter, thy faith, not my robe-thy faith hath made thee well." Say, brother of sorrow, sister of pain, reach out and touch him. No incurable cases puzzle him. Touch him. He'll respond. "According to Your Faith"-The Bible is one constant challenge to us to exercise our faith. Of course I believe in using material things, toobromide of potassium for insomnia, morphine for paroxysm of pain, quinine for fevers, strychnia for touicbut I also believe there is marvelous healing power in the quietness and confidence of the mind touched by Christ. Let the thoughtless jeer, but the message of psychotherapeutics to the twentieth century is that the mind may minister to a body diseased. It may be possible to heal the body by a thought as well as a drug. It is the one doctrine of Christianity which we have persistently ignored.

If Christ said "Thy faith hath made thee well," why should we gaze in amazement at one who takes Christ at his word and maintains that after all faith may be a basis for health? Strange that the spiritual church has had to wait for a material medical science to tell it what its Lord has been telling it for centuries.

The touch of faith will work a mir acle. Thousands thronged the Master that eventful day, but the woman touched him with the finger of faith and quick as an electric flash there thrilled back into her shattered nerves and shrunken veins and exhausted arteries and withered muscles, health. beautiful, rosy, health, God given and complete. Talk of the complexity of creeds! A creed is a glittering icicle before a blazing bearth when in the presence of this mighty truth. Some day when we ministers and our churches become more teachable. when we lay saide our theological differences and our hollow sounding words, maybe the great Physician will once again give to his disciples not only the ministry of preaching, but

A TURKISH SINECURE.

Easy Job of the Man Who Was Appointed Buoy Tender.

Some years ago it was resolved to buoy the shoals in the sea of Marmora, some of which extend to a mile or more from the shore. An English naval officer was lent by the English to the Turkish government in order to carry out this and other measures.

He laid down the buoys and was surprised to find that the Turks thought that thereupon the whole business was concluded. He pointed out, however, that buoys require care, that it is necessary to repaint them from time to time, to pump the water out of them and to see that they remain duly anchored in their right position. To convince the Turks of this took a considerable time; but, being at length convinced, they appointed a man especially to take charge of the buoys.

Some months later, however, the English officer heard shocking reports of these buoys and many complaints of them, and on going out to inspect them he found the paint worn off and most of the buoys waterlogged. Hereupon he wrathfully found the man in charge and demanded an explanation. The man informed him that he had never been supplied with a boat and had therefore never been able to visit the buoys since he had been in charge of them!-London Family Herald.

DEAD RECKONING.

One Way of Determining a Vessel's Course on an Ocean Voyage.

Dead reckoning simply means the computation of a ship's longitude and latitude from her movements as recorded in the log and without having recourse to astronomical observations. The chief elements from which the reckoning is made are these:

The point of departure—that is, the latitude and longitude sailed from or last determined—the course or direction sailed in as ascertained by the compass, the rate of sailing, measured from time to time by the log, and the time elapsed.

The various principles or methods followed in arriving at the reckoning are known among navigators as "plain sailing" and "middle latitude sailing." However, the data thus obtained are always liable to considerable errors by reason of currents, leeway, fluctuations of the wind and changes in the declination of the compass. The results arrived at by dead reckoning, therefore, must of necessity be corrected as often as possible by observation of the heavenly bodies. No navigator would risk relying wholly on this method of determining his position on an ocean voyage.-New York Times.

Pointing the Point.

"I think," remarked Biggs, "one of the funniest signs I ever saw was this: 'Teeth Extracted While You Wait."

Higgs laughed long and loudly at this, and shortly afterward he tried it on Jiggs. "A friend of mine," he said, "told me of a funny sign he had seen-Teeth Extracted While You Wait."

Jiggs reflected. "What is there funny about that?" he asked. "I don't quite catch the

"Oh, yes; I see. Ha, ha. ha!"-New York Mail.

Arm In Arm With a Tigress. It is related of Sir Edward Bradford that he once walked arm in arm, so to speak, with a tigress. He was out shooting and, always a fearless sportsman, had come to close quarters with his quarry. He fired, and either the ball failed to take effect or but slightly wounded the animal. She sprang at him and seized his left arm above the elbow. The pain must have been terrible, but Sir Edward kept cool, and, realizing that it would be death to drag his mangled arm away and allow her to spring afresh at him, he deliberately walked a few agonizing paces until his comrade was able to take aim and kill the brute. Thus his courage saved his life, though the amputation of his arm at the shoulder proved necessary.

Fire Extinguishers. About 1840 a Mr. Thomas Philips of London invented an apparatus for putting out fire, but it was not much of a success. When put in action the steam and carbonic acid which were to extinguish the flames were not generated in sufficient quantity to do the work. A Frenchman named Carlier patented a fairly successful extinguisher in 1862, since which date they have been used more or less all over the world to put out incipient fires, though, of course, they are valueless after the fire has acquired much head way.-New York American.

The Gladiators.

Usually gladiators were matched in pairs. They fought in different waysblindfolded, in charlots, on horseback. in full armor and with the lasso. Nets were used by some, who, after throwing one over the head of an antagonist, dispatched him with a three pointed lance or trident.

CHRISTMAS FOX

HEN the weather is favorable on Christmas day the members of many country clubs throughout the United States engage in a fox hunt. This is the modern survival of the ancient chase that used to furnish game for the great holiday feast.

Long ago in the middle ages before the day of markets, of storage houses or refrigerator cars the lord and vas sals shared the traits of the lion and scorned to eat that which they did not kill. At daybreak on the morning of the boliday the chieftain summoned the men of his clan, and to horse they went in pursuit of the wild boar Across hills and level stretches through swamps and across frozen streams they galloped till they came up with the fierce prey.

In the battle that ensued the privi lege of the most valorous feats, of of finally administering the death stroke was intrusted to the noblest Then the body of the boar was carried back by the vassals, the body roasted and the head garnished and decorated to take the place of honor in the center of some long table laid in the center of a baronial hall.

Far into morning of the next day would the roistering continue, and the poor gentleman who could drink only one bottle was destined to sad experiences in this bout of mighty bibblers.

The boar has passed from the earth. No longer does the lord kill his own Christmas feast, but in small measure he revives the joys of the holiday bunt by his pursuit of sly reynard. There are in the United States seventy first class clubs devoted to the sport of fox hunting. The season begun at Thanksgiving day is at its height by Christmastide, for then the air is crisp with frost, and the last of the crops that hunters might have damaged have been gathered into the barn and safely stored away.

For persons of wealth these are early risers who, at 7 o'clock in the morning, have gathered near the clubhouse. One comrade joins another, and a merry exchange of Christmas greetings recalls the holiday.

Trotting behind the huntsmen and the whippers-in come the hounds, now quiet and businesslike, but at the word of command ready to break into a very babble of dog noise. Horses, superb horses, strain eagerly at their bridles, anxious to bear their red coated riders off in the chase.

The master of the hounds gives his word of command, and across a cornfield the mad Christmas race starts. To the first fence comes the mad cavalcade. It is a high one. Over, under and through the bars scramble the dogs. Grandly on his horse the master takes the fence. Others follow, some not so gracefully. Some one falls, but the race goes on, all eager to reach that place where in front the hound is giving tongue. There comes a ditch whose surface is only partly frozen, the middle having the water free. The leap is a bad one, with the footing covered with ice. but one after another the hunters put their steeds at it. Some slip and scramble, splashing seas of mud on their riders, but none cares. Too great is the joy of getting over without loss of time to worry over a couple of pounds of mud added to the weight of what the gallant horse must carry.

A level stretch is reached. The thoroughbreds are put to it to keep up with the dogs. Then come a wilder outburst of barking and the capture of a fox. The brush is taken and awarded to the lucky rider who was in at the death.

Then the party turns sedately back. the excitement of the day over. The dogs are returned to the kennel, the horses are carefully rubbed down, the participants in the hunt have their shower bath and are ready to dress for dinner after the most exciting and enjoyable start a Christmas day can

Not only members of the clubs have taken part in this chase. The growing good will between farmer and hunter has turned the attention of the man of agriculture to the delights of this holiday ride. He has mounted his best horse and joined in the race. He, too. returns home to a hearty dinner to tell what a good time he had.

In less aristocratic clubs, such as the many organizations of farmers are in various parts of the country, the hunt is less ornate, but it results in more Christmas killings of foxes.

The wild, rough country of Virginia makes directly following behind the bounds a hazardous, if not impossible. performance. This gives rise to the distinctively American style of hunting, which is to let the hounds work much of the time alone, the hunter following only in spirit, catching a glimpse of the flying pack occasionally, or, guided by their musical baying. trying to catch up at the next station.

In Kentucky the Christmas hunt is held at night, on Christmas eve.

The fox hunt is an importation from England, where it still is the favorite sport of the elite at Christmas time. Virginia's early settlers first introduced the custom into the colonies, and General George Washington was one of the most famous of fox hunters. The colonial girl was educated to fox hunting as part of her accomplishments, and hundreds of the belies could take a five rail fence as easily as they cut a graceful figure in a minuet.

ANCIENT DOLLS' HOUSES.

Those of Earlier Centuries Marvels of Completeness. The history of dolls is particularly interesting at this season. Very beautiful wax dolls were made in France undergoing the greatest danger and in that period of reckless extravagance, the seventeenth century. No price was too high to pay then for anything that a little great lady might be pleased to own.

A few of the fine old dolls' houses built and furnished in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries still exist and reflect thorough attention to the smallest detail.

All are furnished and equipped with the same completeness, whether it is the linen cupboard, with its piles of napery; the drawing room, with pretty carpets and tiny china ornaments and pictures, or the nursery, where there is a high fender guard before the fire and a rocking horse for the baby to ride on.

Such details give a human interest to old toys, emphasized by the doll inhabitants which are to be seen in the old houses. The mistress of the house, with stiffly set out brocaded skirts, sits in the salon, her workbasket at her side, in which we find wee reels of cotton and rolls of tape. In the nursery the baby, with lace edged cap, is in the nurse's arms. The cook is suitably dressed in short cotton skirts and white colf.

DOING UP THE PACKAGES.

Vastly Important Detail to Assure Unstinted Appreciation.

To send a package that isn't "Christmasy looking" is bound to detract from the gift. There are stickers of all sizes and shapes, with Santa Claus. holly sprays, red and gold seals, "Merry Christmas" and gayly bedecked trees they are a great help in tying up. especially a bulky parcel like a sofa pillow, which requires several sheets of thement of the said account.

tissue paper Red, bright green or holly baby rib bon is used for doing up most parcels that are not to go through the mail The adhesive red and green paper ribbon is often substituted for the other kinds, or sometimes the outer wrap ping has the pasted ribbon, while the inner tissue paper is tied.

Inside, instead of using a regular calling card, the name of the sender is written on one of the bright Christmas cards that come in packages.

RURAL YULETIDE SPIRIT.

The Mail Carrier Finds a Present at Almost Every Door.

The rural postmen are not less gen erously remembered at Christmas time than are their city brethren. There is scarcely a farmhouse on his route are practical.

and slippers are favorites with feminine donors, whereas the gifts of the farmers usually take the form of pumpkins, bushel baskets of potatoes, barrels of apples and turkeys. Many a rural mail carrier receives on Christmas morning enough eatables to stock his larder for weeks to come.

BERLIN HAS FINE STREET SYSTEM

Its Thoroughfares Broad, Well Paved and Well Kept.

A MODEL TO OTHER CITIES.

Height of Buildings Must Conform to Width of Streets, Which Provides Uniform Sky Line and Admits Air

"Berlin probably is ahead of the other European centers in the matter of pavement and street maintenance." writes Frederic W. Wile. "It has much to teach Chicago, which has still to solve many problems which are nonexistent in Berlin.

"In the first place, Berlin's streets are wider, having been made so by condemning much valuable property. This would be a difficult proceeding in Chicago, where skyscrapers are springing up from day to day, yet unless the car tracks are placed in subways Chicago soon will have to face the problem of widening its business street: no matter what it may cost. Many of the principal business streets in Berlin are free of car tracks, whereas there is hardly a business street in Chicago without them.

"All of Berlin's streets are splendidly lighted throughout the night, which enables the cleaning to be done between midnight and 6 in the morning. All pipes and conduits are buried under the sidewalks, so that the streets seldom are torn up and there are few manholes required. No permit whatever is granted for tearing up streets for at least ten years, and rarely after that. Many pavements are down twenty-five years without disturbance and still are in perfect condition.

"No feature of Berlin strikes the American more favorably than the regulation limiting the beight of buildings to the street width. In no event may the height exceed seventy feet. This insures an attractively uniform sky line and plenty of air and sunshine and gives the trees and grass s

HAS MOST CEMENT WALKS.

Garden City, Mo., 1,100 Inhabitants Boasts Ten Miles of Them.

Garden City, Mo., claims to have more cement walks per capita than any other town in Missourl. There are 1.100 persons in Garden City and ten miles of cement walks, a mile for every hundred inhabitants almost. They began to lay the walks in 1902, and now there are but few places where walks could be put.

But the cement age has its grip or Garden City. A little more than a year ago it was decided that the city bastile was too airy and unsubstantial a struccrete impregnable jail now stands in buy or not as you wish. its place.

Proper Way to Trim Trees. "The proper way to trim a tree," says City Forester J. H. Prost of Chicago. "is to trim the limb off smoothly and then smear the naked part with a coat of tar or some such preparation,"
