Feb. 7.—Well, no one saw the bear on Thursday last, nor the bear did not see his shadow. It was as dark and gloomy a day as has been this winter. An early spring is predicted. The sermon last Sunday by Rev. T. J. Searls on "Prison Life and Lessons" was listened to by a large congregation and it was certainly fine. Those who were detained at home missed a rare treat.

The social which was held at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Atwater last week Friday night was largely attended and was one of pleasure with games and music and was a success financially also. It was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Belltown.

The West Genoa society will give an oyster supper and donation visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Atwater next week Wednesday evening, Feb. 15, for the benefit of their pastor, Rev. H. E. Crossley. A very cordial invitation is extended. The supper will be 25 cents.

The family of E. D. Ochsman have nearly all been down sick with the grip. E. D. has had a very severe cough; we learn he is improving.

A letter to Mrs. George Atwater from Mrs. Eugene Shangle reported Mr. Shangle building fence in his shirt sleeves; guess he would have to wear a fur overcoat here.

Jay Swartwood, who has been with E. B. Stewart and family since they moved to Trumansburg, is now spending a few days with his parents, Fred Swartwood and wife.

Norman Atwater met with quite an accident last Friday evening when returning from the social at N. J. Atwater's. He was riding horseback and in some way was thrown to the ground and the horse stepped on his limb, cutting it quite badly.

Mrs. E. B. Stewart and daughter of Trumansburg and Mrs. Erwin Snushall and two daughters, and Nelson Parr and family of Lake Ridge, were last Sunday guests at John Beardsley's.

Mrs. George Lanterman and Master Norman Egbert of South Lansing spent a few days with Robert Ferris and wife last week.

Andrew Chaffee is slowly recovering from his illness.

Mrs. George Curtis and son Leon are convalescent.

Z Alexander is very ill with the grip and threatened with pneumonia.

Harry Ferris returned last Saturday from visiting relatives in New York City, New Jersey, Connecticut, and several other places. He was on the Jersey side at the time of the big dynamite explosion and says it was something terrible. He enjoyed his trip very much and had a fine time all around.

Howard Shaw entertained a few friends at a card party last Saturday night.

Mrs. S. O. French is still in a very critical condition—just a slight improvement at this writing. Her very many friends wish for a speedy recovery.

Henry Barger and daughter Iva of Ludlowville were last Sunday guests of his parents.

Invitations are extended for a large party to be held at E. O. Corwin's this week Wednesday evening.

Chas. Barger spent last Sunday and Monday in Auburn with his sister, Mrs. Jane G. Mosher.

Miss Mattie DeRomer spent last Saturday and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James DeBemer.

The First Free Congregational church of Genoa will hold their annual meeting, Feb. 14 at 2 o'clock, at the church. All are invited.

Nelson Metzgar Dead.

Nelson Metzgar died at his home in the town of Locke on Wednesday morning, Feb. 1, after a lingering illness of a complication of diseases, aged about 67 years. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Miss Abbie, who resides at home.

Funeral services were held at his home Friday, at 1 p. m., Rev. H. E. Springer of the M. E. church of Locke, of which deceased was a consistent member, officiating. Interment was made in the Miller cemetery.

Ludlowville.

Feb. 6.—There are several cases of mumps in the village.

Mrs. Elmer E. Ludlow passed a few days last week with her parents, C. D. Howell and wife.

The State Tuberculosis exhibit by the State Board of Health and Charities aid association, will be held in Odd Fellows hall Feb. 27.

B. M. Halladay has been delivering hay and grain in the village.

Cleveland Grover, who was very badly scalded at the Salt Plant, by slipping into a vat of boiling brine, is improving.

Prof. Maloney and the Misses Isabel Wood and Adelaide Krotts of the High School, spent the week end with John Brown and wife.

The W. O. T. U. met with Mrs. J. F. Humphreys last Thursday.

On Feb. 1, Seward Goodwin commenced carrying the mail between the station and postoffice, taking the place of George Ryan, who resigned.

George Swoazy of Montour Falls, is visiting his mother, Mrs. J. C. VanAuken.

The temperance people will hold a rally in Odd Fellows hall Thursday evening.

Mrs. I. A. Underwood recently entertained at dinner in honor of her birthday, a party of friends from this village and West Groton.

The Ladies' Aid will hold a chicken pie supper and apron sale in Odd Fellows' hall on Feb. 14.

Miss Etta Drake entertained a party of young people on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Florence Washburn has gone to Gasaway, W. Va., where she will remain a year to complete her course in nursing.

It was so dark and cloudy Thursday that the High School was closed in the afternoon.

M. L. Ford, who has been very ill with the mumps for a few weeks, is now able to be in his store.

Mrs. Lyke of Ithaca is staying with Mrs. Margaret Thayer.

On Feb. 23, there will be an entertainment given by a magician and ventriloquist for the High School piano fund.

Wm. Minturn and wife spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in Genoa.

Chas. Campbell and wife, who were called to McLean on account of the illness of E. A. Campbell, have returned home.

The funeral of John Hoyt, formerly of this place, was held on Monday at Lestershire, where the deceased had been working in a shoe factory. Burial was made at Lestershire.

Death was due to heart disease. He was about 30 years old and is survived by his mother, who resides here, and by one brother.

East Genoa.

Feb. 5.—Mrs. David Nettleton has been on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Tift of Ithaca, were over-Sunday guests at John Smith's.

Mr. E. DeHart and son of Auburn called at F. Bothwell's Sunday last.

Miss Ethel Bower spent last Friday with Beattie Younglove at Genoa.

Miss May Sharpsteen was home from Moravia over Sunday.

We understand that Wm. Shaffer has purchased the Upson place in the neighborhood, now occupied by Emmet Kara.

Mrs. Tidd has returned to her home in Seneca Falls.

The social at Arthur Saxton's was well attended. The weight of some was surprising. The gravity of the fair sex made some wake up. A nice supper was served and all reported a very enjoyable time.

R. L. Larmer has been suffering from the grip for the past week but is improving. Dr. Willoughby of Genoa attended him.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Waldo are guests at the home of the latter's aunt, Mrs. Larmer.

Evangelistic services are being held at the M. E. church. These services are conducted by Rev. and Mrs. Grant Christman of Oanastota. Mr. Christman has been in this work about twenty years, and no one can afford to miss this opportunity of hearing him.

Ledyard.

Feb. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Veley were called to Alton, Wayne Co., by an accident which caused the death of their nephew, wife and three-year-old son. They with another son, which constituted the entire family, were in a carriage driving towards their home near Alton station. The accident occurred at a railroad crossing. Mr. Riggs had his carriage top up and the wind was blowing a gale which probably was the cause of his not hearing the approaching train. The horse was killed outright and the wagon demolished. The older son escaped with injuries which are not thought to be fatal. Mr. Riggs was a grandson of the late Alexander and Diantha Thomas and had frequently visited them, and they were well known in this neighborhood.

Many are suffering from the grip which in some cases has been thought to be scarlet fever but proved to be only severe cases of the prevailing malady.

Dr. Willoughby of Genoa is attending Ward Lamkin.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers of Homer are guests of their sister, Mrs. Lisk and family.

The Young People's Society were entertained very pleasantly at the home of Mrs. E. C. Willis on Saturday evening.

Clifton Dixon is under the doctor's care.

Invitations are out for a party to be given by Miss Anna Minard at her home on next Friday evening.

W. J. Haines went to Alton to attend the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Biggs and son, which was held on Monday, Feb. 6.

Elwood Stephenson is boarding at Mr. Gale's during the absence of Mrs. Lyman.

Fred Aikin had the tin roof taken off his house by the high wind Monday of last week. They are repairing it temporarily with tarred paper.

On the Ellis farm the barn door was left open and the wind carried the tin roof away and deposited it in a field.

E. G. Bradley had two horses very sick last week.

Orin Stewart is entertaining the measles.

Lansingville.

Feb. 6.—Misses Julia Krotts, Emily Brown and Belle Howell of Ludlowville have been recent guests of Misses Jessie and Mabel Bole.

Mrs. Oyrone Reynolds is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Raymond Congdon on West Hill, Ithaca, and Mrs. Bert O'Hara at Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whipple very pleasantly entertained about thirty guests at a dinner party at their home last Friday.

Mrs. Louise Mosely recently sustained a severe fall which injured the ligaments of the hip quite severely.

Prayer meeting this week will be held at the home of Edwin Fuller.

Lacey--Bowness.

On Wednesday morning, Feb. 1, at 10:30 o'clock occurred one of the prettiest weddings ever witnessed in St. Bernard's church at Scipio, when Elizabeth Louise, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bowness, was united in marriage to Dennis M. Lacey.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk with train and a large white hat to match. The couple were attended by Rose A. Bowness, sister of the bride, and J. Harry Lacey, brother of the groom. The bridesmaid was gowned in pale green poplin, with large white hat. Irene Bowness, the little sister of the bride, was flower girl and looked lovely all in white. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of a wedding march played by Miss Fegan of Rochester, and was preceded to the altar by the ushers, William Coiley and William Bowness, where a nuptial mass was said by the pastor.

After the ceremony, the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's parents, where a large reception was held, there being 125 invited relatives and friends present. Ample justice was done to a bountiful wedding dinner served by Cateress Brewster. The colors in the large dining room were white and green. The bride received numerous presents, consisting of silverware, furniture, linen, pictures, rugs and cut glass, and $100 in gold, the gift of the groom's father, who was unable to attend the wedding on account of feebleness.

The happy couple left amid showers of rice and confetti for parts unknown. Mr. and Mrs. Lacey are both very popular young people and the entire community all join in wishing them a long life of happiness.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Chas. Droezer wishes to thank her neighbors and the people of Genoa and King Ferry and Rev. J. E. Doran for their kindness to her in her recent bereavement, and all those who sent flowers.

XVI.—Emergencies In the Home

By EUGENE L. FISK, M. D.
Copyright, 1920, by American Press Association.

NOTWITHSTANDING all that has been written and uttered regarding "man's inhumanity to man," the first impulse of the average man is to help a fellow being in distress. This is well exemplified by the agility with which half a dozen people unasked will chase a hat that has been blown off.

When accident or disease occurs in the household, however, successful assistance is not so easily rendered as in the case of the wind blown hat. The most willing hands and heads may bring injury rather than relief through an excess of zeal and ignorance of how to direct it.

Fainting Spells.
Ordinary fainting spells, excluding cases of unconsciousness, due to heart disease, kidney trouble, apoplexy, etc., may be due to a number of causes—shock, indigestion, eye strain, lack of food, bowel trouble, etc. In such cases the patient should be placed in a reclining position, with the feet higher than the head and the clothing loosened about the neck and chest. Cold water dashed in the face will usually suffice to restore consciousness. Aromatic spirits of ammonia inhaled or if the patient is able to swallow fifteen to thirty drops in a wineglass of water is a good restorative. Strong ammonia should not be applied to the nostrils of an unconscious person, as extreme irritation of the mucous membrane may result before the patient becomes conscious of it.

An impending faint may be prevented by having the patient place his head in his hands and lower it between his knees while sitting down. This strained position tends to retain the blood in the upper portion of the body and prevent the bloodless condition of the brain, which is responsible for the unconsciousness.

The natural impulse is to raise the head and body of a patient who has fainted. This is the worst possible thing to do. Feet high and head low is the rule.

Sunstroke.
The symptoms of sunstroke are very high temperature, ranging from 104 to 112 degrees F., congested countenance, heavy breathing and unconsciousness. This condition may be mistaken for apoplexy if the temperature is not taken.

The remedy is, in a word, cold. If it is not possible to give a full ice cold bath, ice cloths should be applied to the head, neck and chest and the extremities bathed in cold water. The application of cold must be continued until the temperature drops to normal and resumed if it rises.

The symptoms of heat exhaustion are the reverse of those above described. The temperature may be subnormal, the face is pale, and there is a condition analogous to shock, with a bloodless brain.

The treatment must be directed against these conditions. The application of heat to the body and extremities is necessary by means of hot water bags, bottles, etc. Coffee, essence of ginger or other stimulants should be taken internally. The reclining position, as advised for fainting spells is also indicated.

Caution.—It is not unusual for physicians to be called in such cases in hot weather and find the patient's head loyally elevated by anxious friends and cold applications being assiduously applied. Although this condition is due to heat, cold will only aggravate it.

Convulsions, Etc.
In true epilepsy the patient should be made as comfortable as possible during the attack and prevented from injuring himself.

Convulsions in children may be due to comparatively trivial causes—teething, indigestion, worms, etc. Sometimes a convulsion is the first sign of a serious acute disease, as infectious fever, pneumonia, etc.

The child should be put in a hot bath (100 to 104 degrees F.), for about five minutes. This will usually control the spasm, and the patient can be put to bed and other necessary measures taken, especially cleaning out the bowels, which may be most rapidly accomplished by an enema. A physician should, of course, be called.

Surgical Troubles.
Sprains.—In this condition there is laceration of ligaments, blood vessels and other structures surrounding a joint. The first treatment is to place the injured part in hot water and apply hot cloths for half an hour. The joint should then be bandaged, not too tightly, and kept at rest until the acute swelling and tenderness subside. Alternate applications of hot and cold water poured over the joint from a pitcher are often beneficial. It is a mistake to attempt continuous self-treatment of a severe sprain. Months of suffering and crippling may result from neglect to secure early surgical aid. The X ray has demonstrated that supposed simple sprains are often complicated by fractures.

Fractures.
When a limb is fractured the first step is to apply a temporary splint in order to prevent needless injury to soft parts by the ends of the fractured bone. Any stiff material, an umbrella, rolled up newspapers, canes, etc., may be bound to the limb by handkerchiefs, towels or bandages until surgical aid has been procured. In fractures of the leg one leg may be bound to the other. If the skin has been broken the fracture is termed compound, and extreme care is necessary to prevent further laceration or infection of the tissues.

Wounds.
Slight punctured or lacerated wounds are often neglected or improperly treated, owing to the fact that no medical aid is sought. For the reason that blood poison and lockjaw are not uncommon following comparatively trivial injuries all wounds should be cleansed as quickly as possible with peroxide of hydrogen, turpentine or some antiseptic solution. A sterilized gauze pad should then be applied and held in place by rubber adhesive plaster or gauze bandages. The use of strong antiseptic solutions in wounds is no longer customary. When the wound is infected, as evidenced by heat, redness, swelling or discharge of pus, the parts should be cleansed frequently with peroxide of hydrogen and a simple wet dressing applied as follows: A gauze pad is bandaged over the wound and kept moist with a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda in boiled water. Antiseptic solutions kill germs, but they also interfere with the natural reparative work of the body cells.

Dangers of Carbolic Acid.
Carbolic acid should be banished from the household, except in the form of carbolated vaseline. This preparation may be useful to apply to cuts or sores in emergencies. Solutions of carbolic acid constantly applied to the extremities, fingers, toes, etc., have been known to cause gangrene.

Every useful purpose served by carbolic acid as a household remedy can be served by simple nonpoisonous antiseptics, such as a saturated solution of boric acid or the official liquor antisepticus of the United States Pharmacopoeia. Diluted with several parts of water, this latter preparation may be used whenever a cleansing antiseptic wash is required.

Burns.
Probably nothing causes more excitement in the household than burns or scalds, and this explains why first aid is so seldom properly and promptly applied.

The most convenient and perhaps the best remedy to apply is ordinary baking soda. This may be applied in powder and the parts wrapped in clean linen cloths, gauze, etc., and then covered with cotton, or the bandages may be saturated and kept moist with a strong solution of the soda. Blisters should be punctured with a needle that has been sterilized in boiling water, but the skin should not be removed.

When a burn is very extensive immediate proper dressing is difficult, and it is extremely important to reduce the shock and protect the burned area from the air. This may be quickly done by placing the patient in a warm salt bath, keeping the temperature between 94 and 104 degrees F. Such treatment is often continued for a long time, replenishing the water, of course, as it becomes contaminated. Stimulants internally are called for.

Ear Emergencies.
Accumulations of wax or foreign bodies in the ear should be removed by syringing with warm water or saturated solution of boric acid. Insects may be suffocated with a few drops of pure sweet oil and then removed by syringing with warm water. It is a bad practice to use oil in the ear for the removal of wax. If syringing with warm water does not suffice a physician should be consulted.

Earache is usually due to inflammation, which may develop into suppuration and abscess. Heat should be applied by means of hot water bags, hot clay poultice (Catsaplasm kaolin, U. S. P.) or hot fomentations. Hot water may be poured into the ear while the patient reclines on his opposite side and the heat retained by covering the affected ear with cloths saturated with hot water and the whole covered over with a flannel pad.

Bleeding From the Nose.
In old people or those with a tendency to apoplexy a hemorrhage from the nose may prove a relief and should not be too hastily checked. Where it is desirable to check a hemorrhage the application of cold to the nose and back of the neck will often prove efficient. Syringing with peroxide of hydrogen is also an excellent emergency remedy. Syringing with a hot salt solution at a temperature of 125 degrees F. is another efficient measure. If the temperature of the solution is lower than 125 degrees it will only aggravate the hemorrhage.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

We must not expect to go through the world without being misunderstood. Our best friends frequently misunderstand us, and our enemies always do.—Rev. J. W. Brougher, Baptist, Los Angeles, Cal.

Activity Is Essential.
If a man isn't active he is passive. And passivity means infection. Activity sterilizes, immunizes; passivity poisons. The pestilential marsh is made of stagnant waters, but quickening is life, and quickening is action.—Rabbi Harrison, Hebrew, St. Louis.

Heaven Not Place of Rest.
I have no sympathy with the ignoble idea of heaven being a place of rest. How is it possible to think of an eternal soul as an eternal loafer? I believe we will find immortal opportunities for doing good in the next world. God will not tolerate sluggards in his company.—Bishop F. M. Bristol, Methodist, Buenos Aires.

Baptism Not Essential.
There is no superstition in the darkest depths of heathen Africa worse than that which says that a little babe will go to hell if it is not baptized—I don't care whether by immersion or any other method. I've been called up in the middle of the night by people who want me to baptize a little child for fear that somehow or other that little one would go to hell if I didn't get there in time.—Dr. W. C. Bitting, Baptist, St. Louis.

Youth and Purity.
Youth and purity should always go hand in hand. A clean way should always be the young man's way because it is the way of a full and vigorous life. A clean way, or, in other words, a pure life, largely depends upon two things. There must be forethought, plan, preparation, and that according to a given standard. One of the greatest dangers in the lives of young people in this reckless age is thoughtlessness.—Rev. W. G. Boyle, Methodist, Duluth, Minn.

Extravagance.
The extravagance of some weddings is becoming abominable. Houses are furnished not to make beautiful homes, but to spend more money than some one else. In one house we are told there is a nursery with a silver bathtub in it, the other furnishings matching it. Luxury breeds ennui, so that these vulgar people who thus arrange dinners with guests in gondolas, monkeys at table, women creeping out of pies and costly favors have to rush from one excitement to another, so that their lives become simply a chase of wild and extravagant novelties.—Rev. Frederick Lynch, Congregational, New York.

Love and Right.
The law of love when applied in practical life necessitates continually the question, What is right? With the asking of the question comes the obligation to answer it in the actual doing of the right. This actual doing of the right is righteousness. But the idea and sense of justice are inseparable from the work of righteousness. Therefore love is the conditioning idea without which justice could not exist. Thus from love spring justice, honesty, fidelity, truth, devotion, self sacrifice, purity and courage. Every king becoming grace of human character is enfolded in its obedient bosom.—Bishop Samuel Fallows, Episcopal, Chicago.

Reasons For Health.
Nothing can be more heinous or unjust to our Heavenly Father than to maintain that he sends disease; that in the culture tubes of his mysterious laboratory he is designedly producing all sorts of infectious germs and scattering them, like the contents of Pandora's box, among a helpless and victimized race. Narcotics and stimulants and gluttony and unchastity and neglect of hygiene and sanitation are prolific sources of disease. In the interest of the conservation of human life every tobacco store and whisky saloon ought to be closed.

The day is coming when funerals of any but aged persons will be a curiosity and when the 8,000,000 persons who are sick each day in the United States will be practically well and sickness will go out of fashion.—Rev. C. E. Locke, Methodist, Los Angeles.

The Curse of Wealth.
As a people we Americans are in danger of being overwhelmed with the vulgarity of wealth. Men and women while growing rich have grown loud and coarse and bloated. They lack culture. They make vulgar display of their money. Their dining rooms are larger than their libraries. They have lengthened their belts and contracted their hat bands. I do not denounce the possession of money. I believe that money honestly and justly earned may be a testimony to capacity and character. Christ never denounced the mere possession of money, but the love of it. He did not condemn the rich for being rich. He said that wealth was a peril. The rich church member is one who joined the church in his poverty. And in most instances the very virtues which religion inculcates produce a character which fits for effective usefulness and fruitfulness. Character and worldly success ought to go hand in hand, and the Bible asserts that "godliness is profitable for the life that now is." A worthy character pushes to the front in all the honest walks of life. It is insatiable greed, not wealth, which blights and withers the soul. A poor man may be as avaricious as a rich man. It is not a question of possession, but temper. When the youth of a nation seek wealth before character, riches rather than righteousness, revolution is not far ahead.—Rev. C. B. Mitchell, Episcopal, Chicago.

STAY HOME AND HELP YOUR TOWN

It Is the Duty of All to Do What We Can.

CITY NO PLACE TO LIVE.

Overcrowded, Unhealthy Metropolitan Centers Have Little Room For Country Youth—Your Own Town Has Larger Prospects.

By JAMES SCHREIBER, JR.
As one who long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick and sewers annoy the air.

—From "Paradise Lost."
It was ever thus and will no doubt ever be so—the city, where houses thick and sewers annoy the air; where the sun's rising and setting are seen by few unless by chance; where the moon is forgotten, being undistinguished from the dull glare of the electric lamps swinging above the street; where people are confined in tenements and small roomed apartments; where souls are huddled together, all striving to beat their neighbors to a phantom goal—riches; where gulleless wanderers come from afar and become lost in the mire of failure.

Or say success is attained—that is, a moderate success, for one in a hundred reaches the topmost rung. Is it worth striving for? Doesn't your own town show more advantages? The city is a fascinating place. The height of ambition of most of the people living outside the big centers of population seems to be to visit New York, Chicago or other large places. Visit them all to your heart's content, but don't make your home in one of them.

A great city is no place for the ambitious youth who wishes to become a power where he lives. A clerk in a country store can do more with his salary than a manager of some of the stores in the city.

The small town has advantages which you can see if you will, but take your eyes off that mirage, the city. The duty of the average youth lies in the town of his birth or adoption. Instead of wanting to quit it yourself, you should try to induce city people to come and live with you. Show them where they can benefit by so doing. Help increase the population of your town in this way. Tell them that you are a big family, not a lot of strangers to one another, as they are. Speak of the good times you indulge in that the city people never enjoy.

There are thousands of people cooped up in the cities who if they are brought face to face with the beauties of the small town will come to you and help you grow.

By the recent census it was proved that in Missouri wherever a town showed a decrease in population it was due to the lack of good roads. This neglect will have a demoralizing effect on any community. People who otherwise would reach your town will avoid it if the roads are in poor condition. Some of your own people will pack up after awhile and leave in disgust.

The same might be said if the town itself presents a slovenly appearance or if it shows a lack of civic pride.

But the place that shines out in civic improvement, whose streets and roads show that the people are up and doing, will be the gainer by its neighbor's neglect.

To Build Beautiful Market.
In Glen Ridge, N. J., a village market, a unique and pretty feature of modern suburban improvement, is to be erected at the corner of Bloomfield avenue and Herman street. It is part of a general plan for the beautification of the borough and protection against the erection of unsightly structures. The main building will have six stores, each 24 by 40 feet, with offices on the second floor, a suit having already been reserved for borough officials and the borough council chamber. The buildings will be of light brick and have a red tile roof. The stores will be in an arcade. The borough of Glen Ridge is now without a single store, not even a drug store being located within the limits of the municipality of over 8,000 inhabitants.

Cities Destroy.
Cities always destroy; they never produce. The city sits like a parasite on the face of the country absorbing its best. The country always contributes to the city, the city never to the country. The cities could not exist but for the country. We have developed the city civilization beyond that of the country.—Professor Bailey.

A Quick Thinking Advertiser.
It happened in Topeka. Three clothing stores are on the same block. One morning the middle proprietor saw to the right of him a big sign, "Bankrupt Sale," and to the left, "Closing Out at Cost." Twenty minutes later there appeared over his own door in large letters, "Main Entrance."—Everybody's Magazine.

One Way to Keep Trade.
There is none who has greater opportunity to make friends than the clerk in the store, and to him friends are valuable. Never consider any one a bore who is a customer of the place. It is quite as easy to be good natured and smiling as to be short, crisp and frowning.

Fencing! Fencing!

For the next ten days I will sell Michigan wire fencing at cost. This fencing is made of a good quality of carbonized steel wire, having a tensile strength, nearly double that of common annealed steel wire. When using this wire you are getting a much heavier fence as it contains about 2 lbs. 7 oz. more wire to the rod; as it is a solid steel wire much stronger.

This is the time of year, Mr. Farmer, you should call and look over the Oliver Sulkey Plow and Superior Grain Drill. You have heard about them. They are the one's you hear your neighbor farmers talking about. Do not wait until you are ready to go to the field. Call and look them over. No trouble to show goods. Sold by

The Salon.

The French academy was originally a junction of the drawing rooms of the Marquise de Rambouillet and her daughter, Julie d'Angennes, Duchesse de Montausier. The salon as a meeting place for conversation and the production of beaux esprits and writers hardly existed before these ladies opened that of the Hotel de Rambouillet. Prior to this social event women of tiptop quality and rich bourgeois received their company in their bedrooms. There was nothing answering to the English parlor or the Italian hall of conversation. The bed, as in the sleeping room of Louis XIV., was surrounded by a balustrade, outside of which gentlemen who had dropped in to visit remained standing. It would have been shockingly unmannerly of them to step over the barrier. The lady of the house, dressed in her best dishabille, sat on the edge of the bed. Ladies calling went within the balustrade and sat on folding stools, or hassocks, according to rank and age. Mme. de Lafayette painted from life in describing in "La Princesse de Cleves" a conversation on love, in which the dauphiness took the lead, reclining on her bed.—London Truth.

Guilty Anyway.

The most striking instance of a vanished man coming again to light to take part in legal proceedings is that which occurred in a case where Daniel O'Connell was defending a man indicted for murder. The case for the prosecution seemed as clear as possible, and O'Connell contented himself with fewer questions than were to have been expected of so eminent a cross examiner. When the case for the crown had closed he announced that he had but one witness to call, but that witness was important to the case. He was the murdered man, very much alive. There was no doubting the man's identity—everybody knew it. The judge therefore turned to the jury and directed them to acquit the prisoner. To his amazement, however, they returned a verdict of guilty. Asked for an explanation, the foreman observed that they had no doubt that the prisoner was innocent of the murder. "But," he added, "we find him guilty of sneaking my old gray mare three weeks ago."

Who He Was.

The "cub" reporter is the greenest reporter on the staff of a newspaper. When anything particularly stupid happens on the paper he is the one first to be accused, and he is usually rightly accused. The only salvation for him is to improve, which he does in nine cases out of a dozen. The Boston Journal told recently of an amusing "break" of a wholly innocent nature which a certain cub made. The reporter had been sent to a suburb to report a sermon. He arrived late, near the close of the service and took a seat near the door. When the last hymn was over he asked his neighbor, an elderly gentleman: "What was the text of the sermon?" "Who art thou?" answered the parishioner. "Boston reporter," replied the other. The man smiled. Subsequently he told the preacher, who next Sunday told the congregation—at the cub's expense.

Jewelry Store Romances.

A wedding ring whose scratched and dulled surface bespoke years of hard service at washtub and dishpan lay on the jeweler's work table. "Why has it been laid up for repairs?" a visitor asked. "Has marriage proved a failure?" "On the contrary, it has turned out a great success, and the ring has been brought back to bear witness," said the jeweler. "See this new inscription, 'Ten years of fidelity and love.' That sounds pretty good, doesn't it? No failure there. Five or ten years from now, if they are both alive, somebody will probably add another postscript, and so on at regular intervals to the end of the chapter. Jewelers meet more of these little romances than the unsentimental person would dream of."—New York Sun.

SHADE TREES PRESERVE ROAD

Their Value in Making Highways Durable.

The value of shade trees in preserving roads is pointed out by an enthusiast in a letter recently printed in the Manchester (N. H.) Union. The writer deprecates the misdirected activity of the average selectman and advocates the planting of shade trees rather than their removal, asserting that they are a help to the roads. "Perhaps no other agency," he says, "has contributed so much to the desolation of naturally beautiful districts in New England as what is in our country parlance called the selectman. He is a big man in his town and, with his brothers on the board, controls the finances, schools, roads and all matters of town government and improvement.

"His one great achievement while in office is to cut down all the shade trees or whatever might grow to be shade trees along the roads. He, as a rule, knows nothing of road building, and believing that the only way to get rid of water is to dry it up instead of constructing his road of material other than garden loam, crowning it to shed water, grading his ditches to avoid the usual pools left to soak into the road, opening sluices to let the water run away from the side ditches, he simply cuts the trees down and waits for his mud bed to dry up. In the course of time it does dry up, and then, except during or immediately after rains, when it is a mass of mud, it is a bed of dust and all summer is a hot and stifling desert road, an exhibit of ignorance and incompetency.

"The best preserved country roads that have to bear the heavy motor traffic of the present day are those with ample shade. If a road cannot be oiled it needs moisture. The shade, except in very dry periods, will retain sufficient moisture to preserve the elasticity of the road surface. There is no danger of mud if the road is properly constructed.

"If you can't build your roads with asphalt or oil, plant some shade trees. Make your town comfortable for yourself and your family and so attractive by its good roads and shady ways that the stranger will buy the worthless half of your farm for twice what any farmer would pay for your entire property, land, buildings, stock and mortgage.

"Then the rest of your life you can sell the purchaser anything you raise on the fertile part of your farm that you retained and get employment for your teams and your boys helping him to spend his money on the old stony pastures you sold to him. Meantime he will pay the town more taxes in five years than your place previously paid in twenty-five. But you will never catch him in a town that cuts the trees and bushes from the roadsides."

It is said that the most perfect road in the world is the coral rock road of the West Indies, being porous, elastic, dry and never dusty.

To Farm a State's Roads.

Governor Carroll of Iowa has proposed that the width of that state's roads be cut down from sixty to forty feet and that the strips of land thus saved be turned over to the farmers for cultivation. He believes that forty feet is wide enough for a country road, that such a road will be better and more easily cared for than the wider one and that the twenty extra feet now all owed is simply wasted. The title to this land, if the plan is carried out, naturally vests in the owners of land adjoining the roads, as the state's right to it is simply for highway purposes, so the measure will be popular with farmers. It is estimated that 8,500,000 bushels of corn can be added to Iowa's crop and $3 per capita to her wealth if this land is farmed.—Youth's Companion.

Interest Money Built Roads.

The county commissioners of Shawnee county, Kan., have built nearly forty miles of good roads with the money formerly used for paying interest on bonds. As rapidly as the bonded debt was reduced the money which formerly had been used to pay interest was expended on macadam roads. There was no additional burden on the taxpayers. Instead, the tax levy was decreased in most instances and good roads lead into Topeka from nearly every direction as a result.

Scrap Book

An Honest Deal.

In one of our states not many years ago it was a sport and a science in some sections to stuff the ballot boxes so that no matter how the people voted the machine candidates won. In one little town an enthusiast for honest government was named as one of the board of three election judges. His two companions were ready to slip into the ballot box enough votes to elect their man, but they could not get the honest judge to leave the voting booth long enough for them to turn the trick. Finally, after he had refused to leave long enough for lunch, all three went to a neighboring hotel for a hasty meal. The honest judge, who was also very devout, put the ballot box on the floor between his feet and, shutting his eyes, bowed his head for several minutes while he asked the blessing on the meal.

STUFFED THE BOX.

While he was doing this the other two stuffed the box, and the machine candidates had a staggering majority. And to this day the honest judge advertises the fact that for once he made the election judges give the people of his town an honest deal.—St. Louis Republic.

Laugh a Little Bit.

Here's a motto just your fit—
Laugh a little bit.
When you think you're trouble hit
Laugh a little bit.
Look misfortune in the face,
Brave the beldam's rude grimace.
Ten to one 'twill yield its place
If you have the wit and grit
Just to laugh a little bit.
Cherish this as sacred writ—
Laugh a little bit.
Keep it with you, sample it—
Laugh a little bit.
Little ills will soon betide you,
Fortune may not sit beside you,
Men may mock and fame deride you,
But you'll mind them not a whit
If you laugh a little bit.
—Edmund Vance Cooke.

An Obedient Czar.

There is a very pompous foreign nobleman, a baron, who is residing temporarily in Washington. The baron, who, if report speaks true, is somewhat henpecked, invited some men a night or two ago to play cards in his house. The meeting was a convivial one, and all went "merry as a marriage bell." It grew late, and fears were expressed by the party that they were trespassing upon the kindness of the mistress of the house, who, by the way, was not present.

AND ALL ROSE.

"Not at all gentlemen; not at all. Play as long as you please. I am czar here," said the master of the mansion. "Yes, gentlemen, play as long as you please," said a silvery voice, and all rose immediately as the baroness stood before them, "but as it is after 1 o'clock the czar is going to bed." He went.

He Was Sensitive.

The Japanese servant is very sensitive. "A lady friend of mine," says Evelyn Adam in "Behind the Shoji," "possessed a very good manservant, a perfect treasure. She happened to be an artist, and every day when she went to paint in the woods this treasure carried her easel. One afternoon he returned without an important piece of it. Though greatly annoyed, she said nothing, knowing that her 'pearl' was sensitive to criticism, like most of his race. But the effort at self control was entirely wasted, for the man came next day to give formal notice. 'Why do you wish to leave?' the mistress asked. 'Surely you are not upset over the easel. I said nothing about it, did I?' 'No,' the man admitted, 'but you made a difficult face.' And he went before luncheon."

Like His Gun.

A Wyoming cowboy called to see Owen Wister in Philadelphia and was permitted to inspect the author's city outfit. As he casually examined an opera hat it sprang open. "A self-cocking hat," said the cowpuncher admiringly. "Now, don't that beat hell!"—Everybody's.

He Thought of Her.

"It must have been frightful," said Mrs. Bossim to her husband, who was in the earthquake. "Tell me what was your first thought when you awakened in your room at the hotel and heard the alarm." "My first thought was of you," answered Mr. Bossim. "How noble!" "Yes, first thing I knew a vase off the mantel caught me on the ear, then a chair whirled in my direction, and when I jumped to the middle of the room four or five books and a framed picture struck me all at once." Even after saying that he affected to wonder what made her so angry for the remainder of the evening.—National Monthly.

THOUGHT HE WAS DRUNK.

And the Judge Agreed That Jock's Diagnosis Was Correct.

Jock McCraw, a hard headed, non-committal Scotch farmer, was summoned to court, a witness in a case the evidence of which hinged upon the state of sobriety of the defendant. "I dinna think he wis dr-runk," testified Jock. "I think he wis only fu." "Ah," said the judge, with interest, "then you can distinguish between being 'full' and 'drunk?'" "Aye. Mony's th' time I hae been fu, but I wis dr-runk only yince."

"Most interesting. This seems to have a most important bearing on the present case. Just relate your experience." "Well, responded McCraw, "it wis like this: Aye day I wis at th' market. The day's trade wis extra guid. Efter it wis a' over I had a drapple w' a wheen auid frens. Then we had a bit sang an' anither drapple. Efter an' hoor—weel, ye ken hoo it wis, yer honor—I mounted Meg, ma auid mear, tae gang hame. I had often been fu, as I wis tellin' ye, but Meg had aye taken me hame safely. This time I tumbled aff an' fell intae th' burn (brook). When Meg cam' up tae th' door w'oot me, ma wife beguid tae screech, 'Jock's deid—Jock's deid!' Gatherin' a' th' farm haun's, th' hale pack o' them cam' rinnin' doon th' lane. Ma guid wumman saw me lyin' in th' bit burn an' fell over in a feut efter cryin' oot, 'Oh, ma pulr Jock's drooned!' Well, sir, when they cam' up there wis I lyin' in th' edge o' th' burn, th' watter lappin' up about my lugs (ears), an' me shakin' ma held an' sayin': 'Nae mair, thank ye; nae mair, thank ye. I've had enouch.' I think I wis drunk that time."

Theology and the Leech.

There is a waterfall near Coonoor, in India, which some writer christened Leech falls. It abounded in leeches, which had a habit of attaching themselves to the skirts of ladies who passed across the marshy ground. "I remember on one occasion," says an English official, "when I had taken some of my friends to see it, that one impulsive lady, looking round at the beautiful spot, exclaimed, 'Is this heaven, or—after a short pause, during which she became suddenly aware that a leech had attacked her—or the other place?'"

Hard to Please.

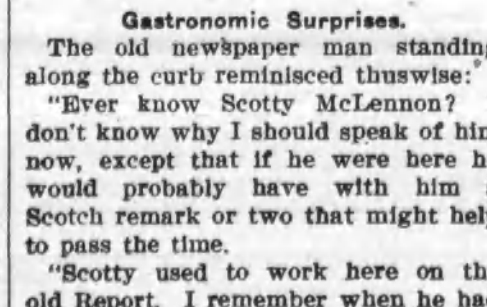

Early in the season a man applied at a farmhouse for board, but the farmer slowly shook his head. "I'd be glad to keep you," he said, "but city people are too hard to please." "I am not at all exacting," the applicant replied. "You will find no difficulty in pleasing me." "That's what the last man who came along here said, but it wasn't so. Fact is nothing pleased him. First he complained about sleeping in a bed with the hired man, and when we gave him a bed to himself in a room with four of the children he was still dissatisfied.

The Finished Part.

A reporter was once sent around to make some inquiries concerning a new play that David Belasco was engaged in writing. "Yes," said David, "I am writing a play. What do you want to know about it?" "Anything you can tell me will be interesting," was the reply. "Well," was Belasco's response, "it is to have four acts and three intermissions, and I've just finished the intermissions."

Gastronomic Surprises.

The old newspaper man standing along the curb reminded thuswise: "Ever know Scotty McLennon? I don't know why I should speak of him now, except that if he were here he would probably have with him a Scotch remark or two that might help to pass the time. "Scotty used to work here on the old Report. I remember when he had his first taste of caviare. He bit into it, spat it out and then said: "Gad, mon, but your blackberry jam is bitter!" "Somewhat similar in viewpoint was his remark about horsradish. He took a mouthful and, with tears rolling down his cheeks, said: "That's hotter outmeal than we have in Scotland!" — San Francisco Chronicle.

Do You Eat Bread?
What do You Eat Bread For,
A Filler or For Nourishment?

Now listen! There are different kinds of bread, one the quick riser, the big in bulk and little in substance. This we call the filler bread. It has been robbed of its best nourishment. The other kind of bread is made from Winter Wheat Flour and the protein and best nutriment were left. This is worth double the quick riser, filler flour. We claim for Silver Spray flour that it contains more nutriment than any other flour on the market.

We Will Prove This to You.

When you are working sixteen hours a day just try a 25 lb. sack of each. Try it and if you do not decide in favor of Silver Spray Flour, we will give you a sack free. Isn't that fair? We leave it to you. You have nothing to lose, and everything to gain. We mean business. We back our talk. Try a sack of Silver Spray Flour to-day.

Sorry He Spoke.

There is a certain West Philadelphia bachelor who is very fond of children. Recently when he was riding on a Chestnut street trolley car a woman sat opposite him with a baby in her arms. Suddenly the baby began to cry. Every one in the car seemed to be annoyed and a general scowl went around—that is, every one except the bachelor. He tried to show by the benign expression of his face that the crying of the baby was sweet music to him. He smiled at the youngster, but the noise only grew louder. Finally he leaned across the car.

"Perhaps there's a pin sticking him," he said in a stage whisper and after the manner of one who understands all the complexities and troubles of baby life. There was a profound silence in the car until the mother answered:

"No, there's no pin sticking him," she said at last in a tone of scorn and with much emphasis on the last word. Then she continued, "He's scared because you're making faces at him."

After that the bachelor lapsed into pensiveness.—Philadelphia Times.

The Starling's Tongue.
It is extraordinary how many persons are under the impression that, in order to enable a bird to talk, it is absolutely necessary to cut or slit its tongue. I have heard that this fallacy had its origin in the following story: A man had a number of starlings in a large cage marked "Fine Young Starlings—Only 1 Shilling Each," and as each would be purchased arrived the man would say, "There's a fine bird there, sir," pointing out one of them, "but I want half a crown for him, because he is the only one with a cut tongue, so he is bound to be a talker." He would then proceed to catch the bird and show the cut tongue and invariably succeeded in effecting a sale. This dodge would be repeated as each new customer arrived and departed rejoicing at his good bargain. The reader perhaps is not aware that all starlings have a very peculiar formation at the extremity of the tongue, which gives the appearance of a little piece having been snipped out of it.—London Strand.

The Crested Screamer.

"I was surprised to run across an old acquaintance up at the zoo the other day. The last time I saw him was in the lower part of Brazil when I was trying to push Yankee notions," said a commercial traveler. "This acquaintance is known as crested screamer. He is one of the best fighters I ever bet my money on. He is about as large as a turkey and as spry as they make 'em when his fighting blood is up. He has four sharp spurs instead of two, and the odd thing is the spurs are on the wings instead of the legs. The birds ran wild, but the natives tamed them and taught them to fight hawks and other enemies of poultry. They are fine poultry protectors. A fight between two of them is the most exciting thing in the way of sport down there and is more popular than a cockfight."—New York Sun.

A Growsome "Charm."

One of the most growsome "charms" is that which was at one time extensively used as a cure for wens. The hand of a dead criminal still hanging had to be rubbed three times over the wen. A correspondent in London Notes and Queries some few years since wrote that many persons were then living who in their younger days had undergone the ceremony, always, they maintained, with complete success. "On execution days at Northampton," he adds, "numbers of sufferers used to congregate around the gallows in order to receive the 'dead stroke,' as it was termed. At the last execution which took place in that town a very few only were operated upon, not so much in consequence of decrease of faith as from the higher fee demanded by the hangman."

Paternal Fortitude.

I was calling, when the little daughter of my hostess came into the room. Knowing that her mother's mother had that morning returned home after a somewhat lengthy visit I said:

"Weren't you sorry to have grandma go away, Pearl?"

"Yes, I was," she answered promptly, "and so was mamma—very sorry. But," and she paused thoughtfully for a moment, "I couldn't see at breakfast but that papa was just as cheerful as ever."

No Right to Live. Beggar—Won't you give me some money, professor? My money is all gone, and I can't live. Professor—How old are you? Beggar—Forty years, sir. Professor—Forty years! Don't you know that according to the latest mortality tables the average age of the male population of Europe reaches only thirty-four years and five months? Statistically you have no right to live any longer anyway!—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Two Faults. "You hunt too much," said Louis XV. to the archbishop of Narbonne. "How can you prohibit your curates from hunting if you pass your life in setting them such an example?" "Sire," said Dillon, "for my curates the chase is a fault; for myself it is the fault of my ancestors."

Always. Agent—This speedometer will enable you to know how fast you are going. Otto Freund—I don't need one. My bank balance tells me just as well.—Life.

Question 1. Selling liquor to be drunk on the premises where sold—Shall any person be authorized to traffic in liquors under the provisions of subdivision one of section eight of the liquor tax law, namely, by selling liquor to be drunk on the premises where sold, in Genoa, N. Y.?

Question 2. Selling liquor not to be drunk on the premises where sold.—Shall any person be authorized to traffic in liquors under the provisions of subdivision two of section eight of the liquor tax law, namely, by selling liquor not to be drunk on the premises where sold, in Genoa, N. Y.?

Question 3. Selling liquor as a pharmacist on a physician's prescription.—Shall any person be authorized to traffic in liquors under the provisions of subdivision three of section eight of the liquor tax law, namely, by selling liquor as a pharmacist on a physician's prescription, in Genoa, N. Y.?

Question 4. Selling liquor by hotel keepers only.—Shall any person be authorized to traffic in liquors under subdivision one of section eight of the liquor tax law, but only in connection with the business of keeping a hotel, in Genoa, N. Y., if the majority of the votes cast on the first question submitted are in the negative?

F. C. Hagin, Town Clerk.

Town Proposition.

WHEREAS, the County Superintendent of Highways has certified that in his opinion the bridge across Salmon Creek in the Main street of Genoa village, is unsafe to carry the statutory requirement of eight tons, and,

WHEREAS, his estimated cost of rebuilding said bridge is $3,000 and WHEREAS, it is desirous of ascertaining the wishes of the voters of the Town of Genoa on the question of whether the bridge shall be at once rebuilt, the following proposition will be submitted at the bi-ennial town meeting to be held Feb. 21, 1911:

"Shall the bridge across the Salmon Creek on Main street in the village of Genoa be rebuilt?"

F. C. HAGIN, Town Clerk.

WIFE GOT TIP TOP ADVICE.

"My wife wanted me to take our boy to the doctor to cure an ugly boil," writes Dr. Frankel, of Stroud, Okla., "I said, 'put Bucklen's Arnica Salve on it.' She did so, and it cured the boil in a short time." Quickest healer of Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Corns, Bruises, Sprains, Swellings. Best Pile cure on earth. Try it. Only 25c at J. S. Banker's Genoa, F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry.

Special Meeting.

There will be a meeting of all who are interested in the establishment of a Catholic church in Genoa on next Saturday evening, Feb. 11, at Academy Hall. The Universalist church has been purchased by Rev. J. B. Doran and formal possession was taken last Tuesday afternoon. The church will be remodeled and improved and will add to the attractiveness and beauty of the village of Genoa.

The meeting on Saturday evening will begin at 8 o'clock and Rev. J. B. Doran will deliver an address. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to the people of Genoa. J. B. D.

FALLS VICTIM TO THIEVES.

S. W. Bends, of Coal City, Ala., has a justifiable grievance. Two thieves stole his health for twelve years. They were a liver and kidney trouble. Then Dr. King's New Life Pills throttled them. He's well now. Unrivaled for Constipation, Malaria, Headache, Dyspepsia. 25c at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, F. T. Atwater's King Ferry.

Details of the Horror.

Just after the wild eyed man with the fierce mustache had left the smoking car of the elevated railway train at one of the stations on the loop he suddenly turned and hurried back. But he was too late. The guard had closed the gate, and the trap was moving.

The man ran along the platform. "Say," he exclaimed in an excited tone to a passenger sitting by an open window, "I've forgotten my valise! That's it on the seat right behind you. Hand it to me, please. Hurry! Handle it carefully!"

The passenger grabbed it and handed it out of the window, but he was a fraction of a second too slow. The car was just passing the end of the platform. The man outside made a frantic attempt to catch the valise, but in vain, and it fell to the street below.

Then followed a loud, terrific detonation. An automobile tire had exploded.—Chicago Tribune.

THE PLACE WITH SATISFIED CUSTOMERS.

To Be Sure of Getting Genuine Sealshipt Oysters Look for This Sealshipticase.

Like every good thing, Sealshipt Oysters are imitated. But the imitators fall far short of the original. We are registered Agents for genuine Sealshipt Oysters in King Ferry. If you buy from us, you are sure of getting oysters just as they come from the sea.

Oysters served you right at the shore could not be fresher or more delicious than the genuine Sealshipt Oysters we have.

We get Sealshipt Oysters directly from the oyster beds. The same day as they are dredged they are packed in clean, air-tight steel containers and sealed. In this way we seal the flavor as well as the oysters.

These air-tight containers are packed in a patented package the Sealshiptor, with the ice around the containers. This keeps the oysters at a uniform degree of coldness in transit.

Sealshipt Oysters Richest in Food Value

Sealshipt Oysters give you all the delicious qualities and splendid nourishment of Nature's choicest sea food. There is nothing more satisfying or more appetizing. They are also economical, because a pint is enough for an ordinary family.

GEORGE S. AIKIN, King Ferry, N. Y.

Horses at Auction.

The undersigned will sell at his stables on Central street, Moravia, Saturday, Feb. 11, at 12 o'clock, sharp: 12 horses, consisting of heavy draft and road horses, a good lot of state horses, ready for work, weight 1100 to 1400 pounds; also wide tire lumber wagon, narrow tire lumber wagon, democrat wagon, nearly new, set of heavy bobs, set of three seat bobs, Osborne mower, rake, hay tedder, spring-tooth harrow, cultivator, horse hoe, 2 hay racks, stone boat, heavy brass trimmed double harness, heavy single harness, light double harness, light single harness, set three horse thills, grind stone, oil stove. Household goods, consisting of bedsteads, springs, chairs, couch, stands, tables and crockery. Terms as usual. W. P. PARKER, Moravia. Stephen Myers, Auctioneer.

Matter of Diet.

Very many people believe that a purely vegetable diet is much the best for human beings, and that meat induces diseases, both of the mind and the body. Man has been provided with all the kinds of teeth used in the mastication of all kinds of food, from which one might reason that he is intended by Nature to subsist upon a varied diet and not upon vegetables alone. The experiment of vegetarian diet has been tried on a large scale by the Chinese and Japanese, whose poorer classes subsist upon rice, and by the people in the South of Europe, who live upon macaroni. The English and the Germans live on a mixed diet, and they are much larger and much more strongly developed. These people also indulge in a liberal diet and have a greater number of meals a day. Nowhere will you find finer physiques than in England. A glow of health is seen in the face, and their stature is far greater than the people of the south of Europe and of the East. Dr. Fletcher has done much for some who have suffered indigestion from hasty eating and "bolting" food. If you would have a good complexion you must "chew your food fine." In fact the matter of food is a question which must be settled by the individual. The amount and kind of food, and the frequency with which it should be taken, one can find out best for oneself.—The Ladies' World for February.

Something About Sweet Corn.

Considerable space has been used by agricultural papers in discussing the merits of various Sweet Corns. Of course, every writer has his favorite variety, and argues strongly in favor of his selection. One thing is noticeable, however, and that is the almost unanimous agreements on the merits of the medium early varieties. Crosby's and Perry's Sugar are always prime favorites, but a few years ago a new variety was introduced that has already put these two in the "has been" list. We refer to the "Golden Nugget," a variety that produces ears fully seven inches long, that are filled with sweet and milky kernels, while the flavor is fit for the palate of an epicure.

Vick's Garden and Floral Guide for 1911 describes this corn, as well as two new field corns, and many other valuable vegetable and floral novelties. A free copy will be mailed to anyone who sends their name and address on a postal to JAMES VICK'S SONS, 143 Main street, Rochester, N. Y.

TORTURED FOR 15 YEARS

by a cure-defying stomach trouble that baffled doctors and resisted all remedies he tried, John W. Modders, of Moddersville, Mich., seemed doomed. He had to sell his farm and give up work. His neighbors said, "he can't live much longer." "Whatever I ate distressed me," he wrote, "till I tried Electric Bitters, which worked such wonders for me that I can now eat things I could not take for years. It's surely a grand remedy for stomach trouble." Just as good for the liver and kidneys. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50c at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry.

LIFE SAVED AT DEATH'S DOOR.

"I never felt so near my grave," writes W. R. Patterson, of Wellington, Tex., as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 100 pounds, in spite of doctor's treatment for two years. My father, mother and two sisters died of consumption, and that I am alive to-day is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I weigh 187 pounds and have been well and strong for years." Quick, safe, sure, it's the best remedy on earth for coughs, colds, lagrippe, asthma, croup, and all throat and lung troubles. 50c & $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by J. S. Banker, Genoa, F. T. Atwater, King Ferry.

WANTED: 50 MEN AND WOMEN

To Take Advantage of Special Offer Made by J. S. Banker
J. S. Banker, the enterprising druggist, is advertising to-day for fifty men and women to take advantage of the special half price offer he is making on Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia and get a fifty cent package at half price, 25 cents.

So positive he is of the remarkable power of this specific to cure these diseases, as well as sick headaches and liver troubles, that he agrees to refund the money to any customer whom this medicine does not quickly relieve and cure.

With Dr. Howard's specific at hand, you can eat what you want and have no fear of ill consequences. It strengthens the stomach, gives perfect digestion, regulates the bowels, creates an appetite, and makes life worth the living.

This is an unusual opportunity to obtain 60 doses of the best medicine made for half its regular price, with the personal guarantee of a well known man to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

If you cannot call at J. S. Banker's store to-day, send him 25 cents by mail and he will send you a package, promptly, charges paid.

J. S. Banker has been able to secure only a limited supply of the specific, so great is the demand, and you should not delay taking advantage of the liberal offer he is making this week.

—Miss Cassie Helen Dodd, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dodd, and Edward O'Donnell, both of Syracuse, were married Wednesday evening, Feb. 1. The couple returned from a trip Saturday evening and will make their home in Syracuse. The friends of the bride in Genoa will extend their best wishes.

—Word has been received from Miss Helen Ives, who sailed from New York for Florida last week. Miss Ives lost her voice about a year ago, and has spoken only in whispers since then. She writes that just before they reached Charleston, So. Caro., her voice suddenly came back, as natural and strong as ever. Her friends and relatives here are rejoicing over the good news and hope that her sojourn in sunny Florida will be a permanent benefit to her.

—Mrs. Mary Westmiller suffered a shock of apoplexy on Sunday and death resulted Monday morning. Funeral services were held at the M. E. church at East Genoa where the family lived for many years, on Thursday at 2 o'clock and burial was made at North Lansing. Rev. F. J. Allington officiated. The deceased was 82 years old. Surviving are one son, Warren Westmiller, with whom she lived, and three daughters, all living some distance away.

—The net receipts of the firemen's dance last Friday evening were $75. The demonstration of the chemical engines took place as advertised, except that it was necessary to move the huge pile of pine stumps, boxes, etc., to the north of the rink, on account of the high wind which was blowing from the south. Five gallons of kerosene were thrown on the mass of material to be ignited, and when the fire was burning fiercely, the engines were put into use. In less than five minutes the blaze was extinguished. Everybody was well satisfied with the work of the chemicals.

—Al Lanterman is improving, being able to sit up every day.

—Miss Charlotte Bush has been quite sick with measles this week.

—Arthur Mead has been suffering from rheumatism for a week or more.

—The young people's society will have a social at the home of Miss Blanche Norman on Monday evening next.

—Geo. Phillips, who has been very ill for a week past, was moved from the Sill residence to the home of D. W. Gower on Wednesday.

—W. P. Parker of Moravia will have a sale of personal property at the farm known as the Nettleton place in Venice, on Feb. 23. See notice next week.

—Mrs. Glenn J. Bowker, who has been ill the past month, is now at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Andrews at King Ferry and is improving slowly.

—St. Valentine's day next Tuesday, Feb. 14. This is a most interesting date for the young people, and the gay missives to be sent on that day are everywhere in evidence.

—Mr. and Mrs. Raymond M. Waldo were guests at Mrs. E. P. Waldo's on Tuesday. They expect to settle on their farm, east of Locke, about the middle of this month.

—J. Reed Powell gave his lecture, "A Trip through Europe" in the Presbyterian church, Feb. 2. The lecture was illustrated with many very fine views and was enjoyed by a good-sized audience.

—The death of Rev. Clarence H. Beebe occurred at his home in Vernon on Thursday, Feb. 2. He was 75 years of age and died of pneumonia. For twenty years he was pastor of the Presbyterian church in Port Byron.

—John O'Hara has been home from Spencer this week. On Tuesday evening John, Ralph and Edgar O'Hara gave a party, about thirty young people being invited. Refreshments were served and all had a merry time.

—Genoa friends of Miss Elizabeth Leonard are pleased to note her success in her work as landscape gardener. She is at present in London, England, where she was sent by the New York firm by whom she is employed, and is designing the grounds of a large estate of a nobleman.

—The sudden death of Mrs. Allen, wife of Dr. Allen, of Ludlowville, occurred on Wednesday morning. Dr. Allen left the house about 9 o'clock, leaving his wife in usual health, he supposed. Coming back at 11 o'clock, he found her on the floor dead. She was about 40 years old and besides her husband, leaves a daughter aged about 10 years.

—A. A. Miller of Kingston, Tenn., arrived in town last night. His many friends are pleased to meet him. * * * Frank Erb, who has been with the Begent Lumber Co., at Kingston, Tenn., has a position as assistant filer in a large sawmill in Connecticut. * * * Frank Bryant and daughter Nina, of New York City, were in this village Friday and Saturday, of last week. They were in attendance at the Masonic party, Friday evening, meeting many friends.—Groton Journal.

—Chas. Dresser died at his home near this village on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 2, of heart disease. He was 34 years old and leaves a wife and five children. The family moved to the Clarence Lewis farm last April from Stewart's Corners, and had formerly lived in Auburn. The remains were taken to Auburn Sunday afternoon to the home of Mr. Dresser's sister, and the funeral was held Monday morning at the Holy Family church, Rev. J. B. Doran conducting the services. Burial was made in St. Joseph's.

—It may perhaps be known to few people that there are two regularly organized Mormon churches in New York state. One is at Greenwood, near Canisteo, and the other at East Pharsalia, Chenango county. A grandson of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, has of late been conducting revival meetings at Greenwood, but with poor success.—Ex.

—Miller Wilcox of Seneca Falls, has sold his house and lot on Keeler avenue in this village to Floyd E. Briggs. The new owner will take possession April first. * * * William Akin of this village, has sold his farm in the town of Scipio to William J. Gray. The place contains ninety-three acres and the price paid was $5,000. The deal was made through the agency of C. G. Parker.—Moravia Republican.

—Rev. T. J. Searls will exchange by invitation, with Rev. Robt. Ivey of King Ferry on Sunday morning, Feb. 19. Mr. Searls will preach his sermon on "Prison Life and Lessons," and the people of King Ferry and vicinity should all be present to hear it. There should also be a large attendance at the Genoa church on that Sunday to hear Mr. Ivey. Note the date, a week from next Sunday, Feb. 19.

Notice.

It would be greatly appreciated if all who are indebted to me would call and settle before Feb. 15, 1911. M. G. SHAPERO, Genoa, Genoa Clothing Store.

Sudden Death in Genoa.

The report of the death of Thomas Sill, Wednesday morning, was received with great surprise and was a shock to the people of this vicinity. Mr. Sill had been ill for several days with pneumonia, but the attending physician and the nurse did not think he was in a dangerous condition. Dr. Skinner was called on Saturday and the patient was able to sit up a little every day until Tuesday. That evening his symptoms were a little better, but the next morning his heart, which was not strong, showed signs of failure. About 9 o'clock, as he raised to take medicine from the nurse, he suddenly expired. Thomas Sill was born in the town of Genoa 65 years ago next June, and was the oldest child of the late John and Catherine Sill. His entire life was spent in this town. Twenty-nine years ago, on Feb. 7, he was married to Kate Avery of Genoa. With the exception of a few months their home has always been in the house where he died. Mr. Sill conducted a meat market here for many years, and up to the present time. Besides the wife, he leaves one son, George T. Sill, a student in the Ithaca High school. He returned to Ithaca Monday morning as his father's condition was not considered critical, but he was summoned home Wednesday morning by his death. There are also surviving three brothers, William, Charles and Oliver all of this town, and four sisters, Mrs. Wm. Starnor and Mrs. Ida Hand of Genoa, Mrs. Frank Tarbell of North Lansing and Mrs. Mary Bartlett of Groton. Funeral services will be held at the Presbyterian church, Saturday at 1 o'clock, and will be in charge of the Masonic lodge of North Lansing, of which the deceased was a member. Rev. T. J. Searls will be the officiating clergyman. Burial in Genoa cemetery.

Calderwood's Successor

Story of a Mystery and Its Shrewd Solution

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

John Girard was an inventor, well known to the patent office and to many good men in his own line of work, poor men for the most part who tolled upon metal.

Besides the good and poor men above referred to as acquainted with John Girard there was a certain Joseph Weyburn who was neither poor nor good. Most of Girard's inventions were in the line of minor improvements in metal working, and some of them could not be protected by patent and others were neglected until too late. There was only one which was of conspicuous pecuniary value, and Joseph Weyburn stole it.

The theft was not easy, even for a shrewd and experienced rascal such as Weyburn, who could command the best legal advice in a matter of this kind. There were loose ends dangling from this piece of dishonesty; there were documents which remained in Girard's hands despite the elaborate trickery by which they were to have been taken from him. These documents formed the basis of a series of lawsuits which dragged through more than ten years and finally resulted in a victory for Girard in the United States supreme court.

Damages by this time had grown to a round million dollars, but of course the supreme court decision did not mean that the gigantic corporation of which Weyburn was the central figure must immediately pay Girard the money. It meant that the chief point of law was in his favor and that he could probably get his money in a year or two by suitable proceedings in the lower courts, and yet the decision was so trenchant in its terms that Weyburn and his associates knew that they were beaten and were willing to settle.

Alfred Calderwood was the lawyer who had represented Girard throughout this litigation. He was upward of seventy and very feeble.

"I began to despair of seeing this day," he said to Girard, "and I fear that what remains to do must pass to other hands. It was chiefly for this reason that I recently took some young blood into the old workshop, and he waved a thin hand toward Melvin Gehring at the end of the long table littered with law books. From the other end of it John Girard bowed gravely to Mr. Gehring.

An oblong box of thin steel lay on the table. Girard drew it toward him, locked it and thrust it under his arm as he rose.

Calderwood extended his hand and held Girard's in a friendly grasp.

"I am near the end of the journey," he said, "and whenever I part from a good man who has held my respect and affection I pause upon it a moment, for we may not meet again. The old order changeth."

Girard was deeply moved.

When he returned to the office of John Girard & Son, makers of inventors' models in metal, it was 5 o'clock. Edgar Girard, the son, had gone to their home in the suburbs. The office was deserted.

John Girard sat down before the safe and opened it. He put away the steel box and leaned back in the chair, but "DON'T TRUST ANYBODY BUT ME," did not rise. Darkness fell; the last of the workmen were gone from the shop. Still Girard sat in the chair.

Lawyer Calderwood remained at home next day. Indeed, he did not leave his bed. In the last part of the afternoon he was informed that Edgar Girard desired to see him, and presently the young man was ushered into the room.

"You need not fear to speak," said Calderwood kindly. "I have been informed of your father's sudden death. It was a great shock to me. Who could have imagined that he would precede me? Well, here I am still and quite at your service, my dear boy. I think you have some serious question to ask. State it straight out."

"The steel box in which my father carried the documents in his suit against Mr. Weyburn cannot be found," said the young man. "It is not in the safe. What ought I to do?"

"You must find it," said the lawyer. "These documents are essential. Do not let it be known that they are missing. Have you consulted Mr. Gehring?"

"He is out of town." "True. I had forgotten. I must advise, though," he added, with a smile. He proceeded to outline the course which Edgar should pursue, and upon this advice the young man acted to the best of his ability during the next two days while Mr. Gehring was still absent from the city, but he failed in both branches of his endeavor. He did not find the steel box, and he did not succeed in concealing the fact of its loss. A reporter got wind of it, and the story of the missing documents was published.

Girard read this article on his way to business next morning, and despair took hold upon him. At the earliest possible moment he went to Calderwood's house, only to learn that the old lawyer passed away.

In the published story of the loss of the documents the facts about John Girard's death were accurately stated. He had died from a rupture of a blood vessel in the brain. His body was discovered by his son, who had returned to the office about 10 in the evening.

John Girard had died or at least fallen into complete unconsciousness about 5 o'clock. There were workmen in the shop for an hour longer.

The reporter who had visited Edgar Girard came to him again on the day of Calderwood's death and questioned him closely about the possibility that a machinist from the shop had stolen the precious papers. Edgar summoned all the men from the shop.

"This gentleman," said Girard, indicating the reporter, "has come to me in the line of his duty to investigate a rumor that my father's documents in the suit against Weyburn were taken from the safe by some one from the shop who happened to come in here after my father's seizure while he sat helpless or dead in that chair. I know how John Girard would have looked upon such a suspicion, and I feel just the same way myself.

The reporter was a tactful fellow, and he managed to extract considerable information from this assemblage without giving offense. He learned that the men who had remained latest on the day of John Girard's death were the very pick of the flock and that the last to leave was the master workman and natural king of them all, a veteran of his craft, Tom Stevenson by name.

The men were dismissed. The reporter departed. Girard was alone, and his meditations were not cheerful. Presently there appeared once more upon the scene the giant form and the face of weathered granite appertaining to old Tom Stevenson. He said that he had been appointed a sort of committee of one to express the sympathy of the men and their appreciation of Mr. Girard's confidence and also to make a suggestion.

"When you come back, sir," said he, observing that Girard wore his hat and had closed his desk, "I'd like to spend perhaps an hour or so with that safe." "Don't wait for me," answered Girard. "Go right ahead. But if you're looking for secret compartments you won't find them."

He was gone about half an hour. When he returned Tom Stevenson sat rigid in the chair where John Girard had died, and upon his knees there lay an oblong box of thin, high tempered steel. The blood rushed into Girard's face and sang in his ears at that sight. Stevenson pointed to the open safe. There had been a bit of carpet on the bottom of the compartment under the private drawers. This was now removed, and Girard saw a rectangular cavity into which the steel box fitted with exactitude when so placed. A concealed spring held it, and the top of the box looked precisely like the natural floor of the safe.

"Have you your father's keys?" asked Stevenson. They were instantly produced. Stevenson picked the right key at a glance and opened the box. It contained a few letters bearing upon the suit, but not of vital importance, and a thin notebook in which was a quaintly concise record of the ten years' litigation, with a tabulation of all expenses. The Weyburn contract and the other essential documents were not there.

This was the real disappointment. The original failure to find the papers had been a trifle compared with it. The theft stood now proved, and the evidence that it had been committed by one of the workmen was enormously strengthened. Only a mechanic of exceptional training could have found the steel box or the spring that released it or any means of opening its lock.

"This is bad, very bad, sir," said old Tom Stevenson. "I must take some action for the good name of the men."

He laid the box on Girard's desk and went heavily out into the shop, but he said nothing to any one. He merely resumed his work.

Girard, after some restless pacing of the floor, betook himself to the telephone, by which means he learned that Mr. Gehring had returned to town. To him, therefore, he went.

"You are looking at this matter with your father's eyes," said the young lawyer, "and your father was of the older generation. Now, I'm essentially modern and a bit of a cynic. The world has changed, at least in this part of it. Temptation is no longer specific; it is general. Virtue is not so much weakened in the individual as in the community."

"Now as to this case. The men in your shop are a picked lot, I'll admit, and perhaps there wasn't a rogue among them ten years ago. But they are human. They have ears and eyes. They know the value of money as men didn't know it in your father's time, and I beg to remind you, Mr. Girard, that this is a matter of a fortune. If Mr. Weyburn buys these documents under a million dollars he saves the difference. Will he pay half a million as readily as you'll pay a penny for a newspaper?"

"I don't quite understand your drift, Mr. Gehring," said Girard. "What do you advise?"

"Your friend, Tom Stevenson, found that box while you were out," said Gehring. "Would he have found it if you had been there? Did he open it first in your presence or before you came? A couple of good detectives may be able to find out for you. I will give you the card of a reliable agency."

Girard took the card and stared gloomily at the names which it bore. "I'd rather trust Tom Stevenson than these fellows," he said.

"Don't trust anybody," laughed the lawyer, "except me."

On the second morning thereafter Tom Stevenson came to Girard in his office with a request for the day off. He thought that he might be able to do something in the matter of the missing papers.

"The day is yours," said Girard.

Stevenson went first in quest of legal advice. Girard had spoken to him of Gehring as a man who knew more than was good for him of the crookedness of this generation, and the veteran mechanic had been much impressed. To Gehring, therefore, he presented himself, greatly to the lawyer's surprise.

"Sir," said he, "I want your advice upon this point: Would a man possessed of these documents negotiate with Mr. Weyburn direct or with Mr. Weyburn's lawyer?"

"With the lawyer, of course," said Gehring. "If he went to Weyburn he'd merely be referred to the lawyer, so he might as well go there first."

Stevenson seemed disappointed.

"I happened to learn," said he, "that

THE LAWYER TRIED TO CRY OUT.

Mr. Weyburn, who has been out of town for some time, will return today, and I thought I'd just hang around the door of the Broad street building and see if anybody I knew went in."

"You might try that on at the lawyer's office," said Gehring and gave the address. "It's not a bad idea."

It is true that Mr. Weyburn's offices are in the Broad street building, but those who desire to see him on very private business do not appear on Broad street. They enter the building by a court at the rear and ascend to a corridor, from which a well guarded door opens into Weyburn's den of mysteries.

It was by this route that Melvin Gehring approached the spot about an hour after his interview with Stevenson. A workman in a blue blouse was fixing a steam radiator as Gehring passed along the corridor, and, greatly to the lawyer's surprise, this fellow extended an arm that closed upon Gehring like the coil of a python.

The lawyer tried to cry out, but there was pressure on his windpipe. He tried to draw a revolver which he had thought best to carry in view of Weyburn's fearsome reputation, but the weapon was wrenched from his hand. His strength began to fail and a mist to whirl in his brain. There was an interval, and then he found himself sitting on the floor with his back against the wall not much the worse for the encounter and for an instant glad to be alive.

Full consciousness came to him with a rush. He thrust a hand toward the breast pocket of his coat, and the pocket was inside out. He got to his feet and staggered down the corridor, choking with rage.

Not many minutes later old Tom Stevenson entered the office of John Girard's son and laid some papers upon Edgar's desk. They were the missing documents.

"If these papers were not in that box when I found it," said Stevenson, "they were not there when your father put it away. As he came direct from his lawyer's, the papers must be there. As Mr. Calderwood did not know of their presence, they must have been taken by trickery. As he and your father and Mr. Gehring were alone with those documents, Mr. Gehring must have taken them."

"I went to him this morning and asked him with whom a thief would deal. He said with Mr. Weyburn's lawyer. If he had said with Mr. Weyburn I should have gone to the lawyer's, for it was a certainty that the man would lie."

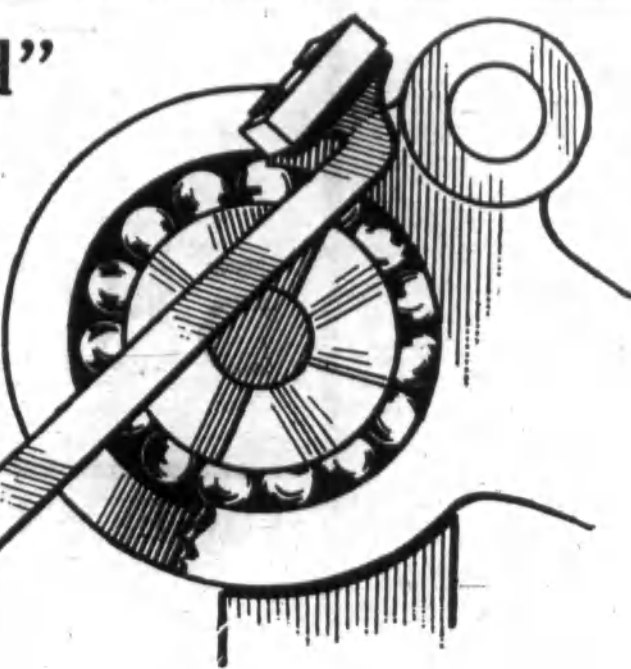

"I waited for the scoundrel and caught him. I did not know that he would have the papers, but I thought it probable, because when I was at his office I noticed that there was a revolver in his pocket. He would not need a weapon unless he intended to exhibit the papers."

"I congratulate you, Mr. Girard, and I am glad to have done this little service for your father's son. I hope you intend to continue the business here, sir."

"I intend that you shall continue it," said Girard. "You're a better man than I am, a better successor of my father. I give it to you."

How Would a "Full Jewelled" Typewriter Appeal to You?

Every important bearing in an expensive watch is a small gem of a hardness not susceptible to wear. The purpose of the jewels is to insure by reduction of friction and wear, the accuracy which makes a timepiece valuable.

The first successful use of a ball-bearing typebar in a writing-in-sight machine was by the manufacturers of the New Model L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriters.

Ball Bearings not only for the typebars, but at all vital wearing points of the New Model L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter are made to serve exactly the same purpose as the jewelled bearings of an accurate, expensive watch. They prevent play and false motion, banish friction, and insure to the operator, for every ounce of energy applied, a full equivalent of perfect work. You demand a full jewelled watch. Why not a full ball-bearing typewriter?

ALL THE WRITING ALWAYS IN SIGHT

J. S. BANKER SUCCESSFUL.

Induced Dr. Howard Company to Make Special Prices.

After a great deal of effort and correspondence J. S. Banker, the popular druggist, has succeeded in getting the Dr. Howard Co. to make a special half-price introductory offer on the regular fifty cent size of their celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia.

This medicine is a recent discovery for the cure of all diseases of the stomach and bowels. It not only gives quick relief, but it makes permanent cures.

Dr. Howard's specific has been so remarkably successful in curing constipation, dyspepsia and all liver troubles that J. S. Banker is willing to return the price paid in every case where it does not give relief.

The old-fashioned idea of dosing with mineral waters, cathartic pills or harsh purgatives will soon be a thing of the past. The best physicians are prescribing Dr. Howard's specific because it really gives the desired results and on account of the small and pleasant dose that is needed.

Headaches, coated tongue, dizziness, gas on stomach, specks before the eyes, constipation, and all forms of liver and stomach trouble are soon cured by this scientific medicine.

So great is the demand for this specific that J. S. Banker has been able to secure only a limited supply, and every one who is troubled with dyspepsia, constipation or liver trouble should call upon him at once, or send 25 cents, and get sixty doses of the best medicine ever made, on this special half price offer with his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Farmers' Week Feb. 20-25.

The program will consist of lectures, discussions and actual judging and handling of different farm products and animals. On each day there will be special features aside from general lectures on various farm subjects.

The Poultry Department will have an educational exhibit running the entire week, with lectures and demonstrations on judging and care of poultry.

Tuesday, the New York State Drainage Convention will convene with an interesting program with many out of town speakers.

Wednesday and Thursday will be the days for the New York State Plant Breeders' Association with many well known plant breeders taking part in the program. A Conference of the rural church will also be held on these days as will the meeting of the Students' Association of the New York State College of Agriculture. An important program pertaining to subjects of the Elementary Schools has been prepared for Wednesday. The vegetable program will include lectures, discussions and demonstrations led by six or eight of the best growers in the State. There will also be lectures by three or four out of town specialists in floriculture.

The Department of Home Economics has prepared an especially interesting program for the entire week.

Each evening will be devoted to special interest with outside speakers. In addition to this there will be a Corn Show running the entire week.

Visit Our Banking Department

when in the store. It offers many advantages that will appeal to you.

Not only does Our Banking Department pay 4 per cent. compound interest, but it also gives you ten days after the first of each month to deposit your money and still draw interest from the first of that month.

The Department is open store hours which means you can get your money Saturday afternoons and evenings, or your check cashed as well.

Our Red Book tells you many other advantages. Don't fail to get one at the dept.

9c Lunch

Between 11:30 and 1:30 we will supply our Patrons with a refreshing lunch for the small price of

9c a Person

Not elaborate but enough to satisfy your hunger. If insufficient, kindly tell the Cashier and money will be cheerfully refunded.

A Rest Room and Parcel Counter

A Rest Room has been installed in Our New Millinery Department, second floor, for your convenience. Meet your friends there or take advantage of its appointments when weary.
